5. metoikizō (μετοικίζω, 3351), "to remove to a new abode, cause to migrate" (meta, implying "change," oikos, "a dwelling place"), is translated "removed" in Acts 7:4; "I will carry . . . away" (v. 43). See CARRYING AWAY, B.

6. apochōrizō (ἀποχωρίζω, 673), "to separate, part asunder," is used in the passive voice in Rev. 6:14, "(the heaven) was removed," RV (KJV, "departed"). See DEPART, No. 14.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 21:21 and Mark 11:23, airō, "to lift, take up," is translated "be thou removed" (RV, "be thou taken up"). (2) In Rev. 2:5, KJV, kineō, "to move" (RV), is translated "will remove." See MOVE.

metathesis (μετάθεσις, 3331), "change of position" (transliterated in Eng., "metathesis," a transposition of the letter of a word), from meta, implying "change," and tithēmi, "to place," is used only in Hebrews and translated "removing" in 12:27; "translation" in 11:5; "change" in 7:12. See CHANGE, A.¶

REND, RENT (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. rhēgnumi (ῥήγνυμι, 4486), "to tear, rend," is translated "to rend" in Matt. 7:6, of swine. See BREAK, A, No. 6.

2. diarrhēssō, or diarēssō (διαρήσσω, 1284), a late form of diarrhēgnumi, "to break asunder, rend" (dia, "through," and No. 1), is used of "rending" one's garments, Matt. 26:65; Mark 14:63; Acts 14:14. See BREAK, A, No. 7.

3. perirrhēgnumi, or perirēgnumi (περιρήγνυμι, 4048), "to tear off all round" (peri, "around"), is said of garments in Acts 16:22.¶

4. schizō (σχίζω, 4977), "to split, rend open," translated "to rend" in Matt. 27:51 (twice); Mark 1:10, RV, "rent asunder" (KJV, "open"); 15:38; Luke 5:36, RV, "rendeth (from)"; the KJV follows the mss. which omit it in the 1st part of this verse; 23:45; John 19:24; 21:11, RV, "rent" (KJV, "broken"), of a net. See BREAK, A, No. 12.

5. diaspaō (διασπάω, 1288), "to tear asunder," is translated "rent asunder" in Mark 5:4, RV (KJV, "plucked asunder"); for Acts 23:10, see TEAR.¶

Note: In Mark 9:26, KJV, sparassō, "to tear" (RV), is rendered "rent." See TEAR.

B. Noun.

schisma (σχίσμα, 4978), "a rent, division" (akin to A, No. 4), signifies a "rent" in wineskins in Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21. See DIVISION, No. 3.

RENDER

1. apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give up or back," is translated "to render," (a) of righteous acts, (1) human, Matt. 21:41; 22:21; Mark 12:17; Luke 16:2, RV (KJV, "give"); Luke 20:25; Rom. 13:7; 1 Cor. 7:3; (2) divine, Matt. 16:27, RV, "shall render" (KJV, "shall reward"), an important RV change; Rom. 2:6; 2 Tim. 4:14, RV (KJV, "reward"); Rev. 18:6 (ditto); 22:12, RV (KJV, "give"); (b) of unrighteous acts, Rom. 12:17, RV (KJV, "recompense"); 1 Thess. 5:15;

1 Pet. 3:9. See DELIVER, A, No. 3, RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2.

2. antapodidōmi (ἀνταποδίδωμι, 467), "to give in return for," is translated "render" in 1 Thess. 3:9. See RECOMPENSE, REPAY.

3. parechō (παρέχω, 3930), "to furnish, provide, supply," is translated "render" in Col. 4:1, RV (KJV, "give"), of what is due from masters to servants. See GIVE, No. 8.

4. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," is translated "rendering" in 2 Thess. 1:8, RV (KJV, "taking"), of the divine execution of vengeance at the revelation of Christ from heaven hereafter. See GIVE, No. 1.

RENEW, RENEWING (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. anakainoō (ἀνακαινόω, 341), "to make new" (ana, "back" or "again," kainos, "new," not recent but different), "to renew," is used in the passive voice in 2 Cor. 4:16, of the daily renewal of "the inward man" (in contrast to the physical frame), i.e., of the "renewal" of spiritual power; in Col. 3:10, of "the new man" (in contrast to the old unregenerate nature), which "is being renewed unto knowledge," RV (cf. No. 3 in Eph. 4:23), i.e., the true knowledge in Christ, as opposed to heretical teachings.¶

Note: This word has not been found elsewhere in Greek writings as yet, though No. 2 is, which would prevent the supposition that the apostle coined a new word.

2. anakainizō (ἀνακαινίζω, 340) is a variant form of No. 1, used in Heb. 6:6, of the impossibility of "renewing" to repentance those Jews who professedly adhered to the Christian faith, if, after their experiences of it (not actual possession of its regenerating effects), they apostatized into their former Judaism.¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 15:8; Ps. 39:2; 103:5; 104:30; Lam. 5:21.¶

3. ananeoō (ἀνανεόω, 365), "to renew, make young" (ana, as in No. 1, and neos, "recent," not different), is used in Eph. 4:23, "be renewed (in the spirit of your mind)." The "renewal" here mentioned is not that of the mind itself in its natural powers of memory, judgment and perception, but "the spirit of the mind," which, under the controlling power of the indwelling Holy Spirit, directs its bent and energies Godward in the enjoyment of "fellowship with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ," and of the fulfillment of the will of God.¶ The word is frequent in inscriptions and in the papyri.

B. Noun.

anakainōsis (ἀνακαίνωσις, 342), akin to A, No. 1, "a renewal," is used in Rom. 12:2, "the renewing (of your mind)," i.e., the adjustment of the moral and spiritual vision and thinking to the mind of God, which is designed to have a transforming effect upon the life; in Titus 3:5, where "the renewing of the Holy Spirit" is not a fresh bestowment of the Spirit, but a revival of His power, developing the Christian life; this passage stresses the continual operation of the indwelling Spirit of God; the Romans passage stresses the willing response on the part of the believer.¶

RENOUNCE

1. apeipon (ἀπεῖπον, 550), lit., "to tell from" (apo, "from," eipon, an aorist form used to supply parts of legō, "to say"), signifies "to renounce," 2 Cor. 4:2 (middle voice), of disowning "the hidden things of shame."¶ In the Sept. of 1 Kings 11:2 it signifies "to forbid," a meaning found in the papyri. The meaning "to renounce" may therefore carry with it the thought of forbidding the approach of the things disowned.

2. apotassō (ἀποτάσσω, 657), "to set apart, to appoint," a meaning found in the papyri (apo, from, tassō, "to arrange"), is used in the middle voice in the sense either of "taking leave of," e.g., Acts 18:18, or "forsaking," Luke 14:33, RV, "renounceth" (KJV "forsaketh"). See FORSAKE, LEAVE.

REPAY

1. apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give back," is translated "I will repay" in Luke 10:35. See DELIVER, A, No. 3, RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2, RENDER, No. 1.

2. antapodidōmi (ἀνταποδίδωμι, 467), "to give in return for," is translated "I will repay" in Rom. 12:19, KJV (RV, "I will recompense"). See RECOMPENSE, B, No. 1, RENDER, No. 2.

3. apotinō or apotiō (ἀποτίνω, 661), signifying "to pay off" (apo, "off," tinō, "to pay a fine"), is used in Philem. 19, of Paul's promise to "repay" whatever Onesimus owed Philemon, or to whatever extent the runaway slave had wronged his master.¶ The verb is very common in the papyri, e.g., in a contract of apprenticeship the father has to pay a forfeit for each day of the son's absence from work. Moulton and Milligan, who draw this and other illustrations in the way of "repayment," point out that "this verb is stronger than apodidōmi (No. 1), and carries with it the idea of "repayment" by way of a fine or punishment, a fact which lends emphasis to its use in Philem. 19."

REPENT, REPENTANCE

A. Verbs.

1. metanoeō (μετανοέω, 3340), lit., "to perceive afterwards" (meta, "after," implying "change," noeō, "to perceive"; nous, "the mind, the seat of moral reflection"), in contrast to pronoeō, "to perceive beforehand," hence signifies "to change one's mind or purpose," always, in the NT, involving a change for the better, an amendment, and always, except in Luke 17:3, 4, of "repentance" from sin. The word is found in the Synoptic Gospels (in Luke, nine times), in Acts five times, in the Apocalypse twelve times, eight in the messages to the churches, 2:5 (twice), 16, 21 (twice), RV, "she willeth not to repent" (2nd part); 3:3, 19 (the only churches in those chapters which contain no exhortation in this respect are those at Smyrna and Philadelphia); elsewhere only in 2 Cor. 12:21. See also the general Note below.

2. metamelomai (μεταμέλομαι, 3338), meta, as in No. 1, and melō, "to care for," is used in the passive voice with middle voice sense, signifying "to regret, to repent oneself," Matt. 21:29, RV, "repented himself"; v. 32, RV, "ye did (not) repent yourselves" (KJV, "ye repented not"); 27:3, "repented himself"; 2 Cor. 7:8 (twice), RV, "regret" in each case; Heb. 7:21, where alone in the NT it is said (negatively) of God.¶

ametamelētos (ἀμεταμέλητος, 278), "not repented of, unregretted" (a, negative, and a verbal adjective of A, No. 2), signifies "without change of purpose"; it is said (a) of God in regard to his "gifts and calling," Rom. 11:29; (b) of man, 2 Cor. 7:10, RV, "[repentance (metanoia, see C)]... which bringeth no regret" (KJV, "not to be repented of"); the difference between metanoia and metamelomai, illustrated here, is briefly expressed in the contrast between "repentance" and "regret."¶

metanoia (μετάνοια, 3341), "afterthought, change of mind, repentance," corresponds in meaning to A, No. 1, and is used of "repentance" from sin or evil, except in Heb. 12:17, where the word "repentance" seems to mean, not simply a change of Isaac's mind, but such a change as would reverse the effects of his own previous state of mind. Esau's birthright-bargain could not be recalled; it involved an irretrievable loss.

As regards "repentance" from sin, (a) the requirement by God on man's part is set forth, e.g., in Matt. 3:8; Luke 3:8; Acts 20:21; 26:20; (b) the mercy of God in giving "repentance" or leading men to it is set forth, e.g., in Acts 5:31; 11:18; Rom. 2:4; 2 Tim. 2:25. The most authentic mss. omit the word in Matt. 9:13 and Mark 2:17, as in the RV.

Note: In the OT, "repentance" with reference to sin is not so prominent as that change of mind or purpose, out of pity for those who have been affected by one's action, or in whom the results of the action have not fulfilled expectations, a "repentance" attributed both to God and to man, e.g., Gen. 6:6; Exod. 32:14 (that this does not imply anything contrary to God's immutability, but that the aspect of His mind is changed toward an object that has itself changed, see under RECONCILE).

In the NT the subject chiefly has reference to "repentance" from sin, and this change of mind involves both a turning from sin and a turning to God. The parable of the Prodigal Son is an outstanding illustration of this. Christ began His ministry with a call to "repentance," Matt. 4:17, but the call is addressed, not as in the OT to the nation, but to the individual. In the Gospel of John, as distinct from the Synoptic Gospels, referred to above, "repentance" is not mentioned, even in connection with John the Baptist's preaching; in John's gospel and 1st epistle the effects are stressed, e.g., in the new birth, and, generally, in the active turning from sin to God by the exercise of faith (John 3:3; 9:38; 1 John 1:9), as in the NT in general.

REPETITIONS (use vain)

battalogeō or battologeō (βαττολογέω, 945), "to repeat idly," is used in Matt. 6:7, "use (not) vain repetitions"; the meaning "to stammer" is scarcely to be associated with this word. The word is probably from an Aramaic phrase and onomatopoeic in character. The rendering of the Sinaitic Syriac is "Do not be saying battalatha, idle things," i.e., meaningless and mechanically repeated phrases, the reference being to pagan (not Jewish) modes of prayer. Battalos, "the Gabbler," was a nickname for Demosthenes, the great orator, assigned to him by his rivals.¶

REPLY

antapokrinomai (ἀνταποκρίνομαι, 470) is translated "repliest against" in Rom. 9:20 (anti, "against," apokrinomai, "to answer"); in Luke 14:6, "answer again." See ANSWER, B, No. 2.¶

REPORT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. akoē (ἀκοή, 189), "a hearing," is translated "report" in John 12:38 and Rom. 10:16, and in the RV of Matt. 4:24; 14:1; Mark 1:28. See HEARING, B, No. 1.

2. euphēmia (εὐφημία, 2162), "a good report, good reputation" (eu, "well," phēmē "a saying or report"), is used in 2 Cor. 6:8. Contrast No. 3.¶

3. dusphēmia (δυσφημία, 1426), "evil-speaking, defamation" (dus-, an inseparable prefix, the opposite to eu, "well," see No. 2), is used in 2 Cor. 6:8.¶

4. logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word," is translated "report," i.e., "a story, narrative"; in Luke 5:15 (KJV, "fame"); 7:17 (KJV, "rumor"); Acts 11:22 (KJV, "tidings"). See WORD.

Note: For marturia, rendered "report" in 1 Tim. 3:7, KJV, see TESTIMONY, WITNESS.

B. Adjective.

euphēmos (εὔφημος, 2613), akin to A, No. 2, primarily, "uttering words or sounds of good omen," then, "avoiding ill-omened words," and hence "fair-sounding," "of good report," is so rendered in Phil. 4:8.¶

C. Verbs.

1. martureō (μαρτυρέω, 3140), "to be a witness, bear witness, testify," signifies, in the passive voice, "to be well testified of, to have a good report," Acts 6:3, "of good (KJV, honest) report," lit., "being well testified of"; 10:22; 16:2; 22:12; 1 Tim. 5:10; in Heb. 11:2, 39, KJV, "obtained a good report" (RV, "had witness borne to them"); in 3 John 12, KJV, "hath good report" (RV, "hath the witness"), lit., "witness hath been borne." See TESTIFY, WITNESS.

2. apangellō (ἀπαγγέλλω, 518), "to report" (apo, "from," angellō, "to give a message"), "announce, declare" (by a messenger, speaker, or writer), is translated "reported" in Acts 4:23; 16:36, RV (KJV, "told"); v. 38 (some mss. have No. 3; KJV, "told"); "report" in 1 Cor. 14:25, KJV (RV, "declaring"); 1 Thess. 1:9, RV, "report" (KJV, "shew"); so Acts 28:21. See DECLARE, No. 2.

3. anangellō (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), "to bring back word," in later Greek came to have the same meaning as No. 2, "to announce, declare"; it is translated "are reported" in 1 Pet. 1:12, KJV (RV, "have been announced"). See DECLARE, No. 1.

4. akouō (ἀκούω, 191), "to hear," is used in the passive voice, impersonally, in 1 Cor. 5:1, lit., "it is heard" or "there is heard," translated "it is reported." See HEAR.

5. blasphēmeō (βλασφημέω, 987), "to speak slanderously, impiously, profanely" (blaptō, "to injure," and phēmē, "a saying"), is translated "we be slanderously reported" in Rom. 3:8 (passive voice). See BLASPHEME, B.

Note: In Matt. 28:15, KJV, diaphēmizō, "to spread abroad" (dia, "throughout," phēmē, "a saying, report"), is translated "is commonly reported" (RV, "was spread abroad"). See BLAZE ABROAD.

REPROACH (Noun and Verb), REPROACHFULLY

A. Nouns.

1. oneidismos (ὀνειδισμός, 3680), "a reproach, defamation," is used in Rom. 15:3; 1 Tim. 3:7; Heb. 10:33; 11:26; 13:13.¶

2. oneidos (ὄνειδος, 3681), akin to No. 1, is used in Luke 1:25 in the concrete sense of "a matter of reproach, a disgrace."¶ To have no children was, in the Jewish mind, more than a misfortune, it might carry the implication that this was a divine punishment for some secret sin. Cf. Gen. 30:1; 1 Sam. 1:6–10.

3. atimia (ἀτιμία, 819), "dishonor," is translated "reproach" in 2 Cor. 11:21, KJV (RV, "disparagement"). See DISHONOR, SHAME, VILE.

Note: In 2 Cor. 12:10, KJV, hubris, "insolence, injury," is translated "reproaches" (RV, "injuries"). See HARM.

B. Verbs.

1. oneidizō (ὀνειδίζω, 3679), akin to A, Nos. 1 and 2, signifies (a), in the active voice, "to reproach, upbraid," Matt. 5:11, RV, "shall reproach" (KJV, "shall revile"); 11:20, "to upbraid"; 27:44, RV, "cast ... reproach" [KJV, "cast ... in (His) teeth"]; Mark 15:32 RV, "reproached" (KJV, "reviled"); 16:14 "upbraided"; Luke 6:22 "shall reproach"; Rom. 15:3; Jas. 1:5, "upbraideth"; (b) in the passive voice, "to suffer reproach, be reproached," 1 Tim. 4:10 (in some mss. in the 2nd part); 1 Pet. 4:14.¶

2. hubrizō (ὑβρίζω, 5195), akin to hubris (see A, Note), used transitively, denotes "to outrage, insult, treat insolently"; it is translated "Thou reproachest" in Luke 11:45. The word is much stronger than "to reproach"; the significance is "Thou insultest (even us)," i.e., who are superior to ordinary Pharisees. The lawyer's imputation was unjust; Christ's rebuke was not hubris, "insult." What He actually said was by way of "reproach" (oneidizō). See DESPITEFULLY.

Notes: (1) For anepilēptos, "without reproach," RV, in 1 Tim. 3:2; 5:7; 6:14, see BLAMELESS, B No. 5. (2) In 1 Tim. 5:14, KJV, loidoria, "reviling" (RV), used in the genitive case with charin, "in respect of," "for," is translated "reproachfully" (RV, "for reviling"). Cf. loidoreō, "to revile." See RAILING.

adokimos (ἀδόκιμος, 96), signifying "not standing the test, rejected" (a, negative, doki- mos, "approved"), was primarily applied to metals (cf. Isa. 1:22); it is used always in the NT in a passive sense, (a) of things, Heb. 6:8, "rejected," of land that bears thorns and thistles; (b) of persons, Rom. 1:28, of a "reprobate mind," a mind of which God cannot approve, and which must be rejected by Him, the effect of refusing "to have God in their knowledge"; in 1 Cor. 9:27 (for which see CAST, REJECTED); 2 Cor. 13:5, 6, 7, where the RV rightly translates the adjective "reprobate" (KJV, "reprobates"), here the reference is to the great test as to whether Christ is in a person; in 2 Tim. 3:8 of those "reprobate concerning the faith," i.e., men whose moral sense is perverted and whose minds are beclouded with their own speculations; in Titus 1:16, of the defiled, who are "unto every good work reprobate," i.e., if they are put to the test in regard to any good work (in contrast to their profession), they can only be rejected.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:4; Isa. 1:22.¶

REPROOF, REPROVE

A. Noun.

elegmos (ἔλεγμός, 1650v), "a reproof" (akin to B), is found in the best texts in 2 Tim. 3:16 (some mss. have elenchos, which denotes "a proof, proving, test," as in Heb. 11:1, "proving," RV marg., "test").¶ Cf. elenxis, "rebuke," 2 Pet. 2:16 (lit., "had rebuke").¶

elenchō (ἐλέγχω, 1651), "to convict, rebuke, reprove," is translated "to reprove" in Luke 3:19; John 3:20, RV marg., "convicted"; the real meaning here is "exposed" (KJV marg., "discovered"); Eph. 5:11, 13, where "to expose" is again the significance; in John 16:8, KJV, "will reprove" (RV, "will convict"); in 1 Cor. 14:24, RV, "reproved" (KJV, "convinced"); in the following the RV has "to reprove," for KJV, "to rebuke," 1 Tim. 5:20; Titus 2:15; Heb. 12:5; Rev. 3:19; for synonymous words see CONVICT and REBUKE.

dokeō (δοκέω, 1380) signifies (a) "to be of opinion" (akin to doxa, "an opinion"), "to suppose," e.g., Luke 12:51; 13:2 (see SUPPOSE); (b) "to seem, to be reputed"; in Gal. 2:2, RV, "who were of repute" (KJV, "which were of reputation"); in 2:6 (twice), and 9, RV, "were reputed" and "were of repute" (KJV, "seemed"); in each case the present participle of the verb with the article is used, lit., "(well) thought of" by them, persons held in consideration; in v. 6, RV, "(those) who were reputed to be somewhat" (KJV, "who seemed to be somewhat"); so v. 9, where there is no irony [cf. the rendering "are accounted" in Mark 10:42 (i.e., not rulers nominally)], Paul recognized that James, Cephas, and John were, as they were "reputed" by the church at Jerusalem, its responsible guides; (c) impersonally, "to think, to seem good." See SEEM and THINK.

The first meaning, "to suppose," implies a subjective opinion based on thought; the second meaning, exemplified in the Galatians passages, expresses, from the standpoint of the observer, his own judgment about a matter (Trench, Syn., §lxxx).

Notes: (1) In Acts 5:34, KJV, timios, "honored, had in honor" (RV), is translated "had in reputation." (2) In Phil. 2:29, KJV, entimos, "honorable," with echō, "to have," i.e., "to hold in honor," is translated "hold . . . in reputation" (RV, "hold . . . in honor"). (3) For kenoō, in Phil. 2:7, KJV, "made (Himself) of no reputation," see EMPTY.

REQUEST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. aitēma (αἴτημα, 155) denotes "that which has been asked for" (akin to aiteō, "to ask"); in Luke 23:24, RV, "what they asked for" (KJV, "as they required"), lit., "their request (should be done, ginomai)"; in Phil. 4:6, "requests"; in 1 John 5:15, "petitions." See PETITION, REQUIRE.¶

2. deēsis (δέησις, 1162), "an asking, entreaty, supplication," is translated "request" in Phil. 1:4, KJV (RV, "supplication"). See PRAYER, SUPPLICATION.

B. Verbs.

1. deomai (δέομαι, 1189), akin to A, No. 2, "to beseech, pray, request," is translated "to make request" in Rom. 1:10. See BESEECH, No. 3.

2. aiteō (αἰτέω, 154), "to ask," is translated "to make request" in Col. 1:9, RV (KJV, "to desire"). See ASK, No. 1.

3. erōtaō (ἐρωτάω, 2065), "to ask," is translated "to make request" in 1 John 5:16. See ASK, No. 2 and remarks on the difference between Nos. 1 and 2.

REQUIRE

1. zēteō (ζητέω, 2212), "to seek, seek after," also signifies "to require, demand," "shall be required," Luke 12:48; in 1 Cor. 4:2, "it is required (in stewards)." See DESIRE, Note (2), ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2) (a), SEEK.

2. ekzēteō (ἐκζητέω, 1567), "to seek out" (ek, "out," and No. 1), also denotes "to demand, require," Luke 11:50, 51, of executing vengeance for the slaughter of the prophets (cf. 2 Sam. 4:11; Ezek. 3:18). See SEEK.

3. apaiteō (ἀπαιτέω, 523), "to ask back, demand back" (apo, "from," or "back," aiteō, "to ask"), is translated "shall be required" in Luke 12:20, lit. "do they require," in the impersonal sense; elsewhere, Luke 6:30, "to ask again."¶ It is used in the papyri frequently in the sense of "demanding, making demands."

4. prassō (πράσσω, 4238), "to do, practice, perform," is used financially in the sense of "exacting" payment, in Luke 19:23. See EXTORT, A.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:23, KJV, aiteō, "to ask" (middle voice) is translated "requiring" (RV, "asking'); so in 1 Cor. 1:22 (active voice), KJV, "require" (RV, "ask"). (2) In Luke 23:24, KJV, the noun aitēma (see REQUEST), "that which is asked for," is translated "as they required" (RV, "what they asked for"). (3) In 1 Cor. 7:36 the rendering "need so requireth" (RV) represents the phrase houtōs ("thus") opheilei ("it ought") genesthai ("to become," i.e., "to be done").

amoibē (ἀμοιβή, 287), "a requital, recompence" (akin to ameibomai, "to repay," not found in the NT), is used with the verb apodidōmi, "to render," in 1 Tim. 5:4, and translated "to requite."¶ This use is illustrated in the papyri by way of making a return, conferring a benefaction in return for something (Moulton and Milligan).

RESCUE

exaireō (ἐξαιρέω, 1807), "to take out" (ek, "from," haireō, "to take"), is used of "delivering" from persons and circumstances, and translated "rescued" in Acts 23:27. See DELIVER, No. 8, PLUCK.

For RESEMBLE, Luke 13:18, KJV, see LIKEN, B, No. 1.

tēreō (τηρέω, 5083), "to guard, keep, preserve, give heed to," is translated "to reserve," (a) with a happy issue, 1 Pet. 1:4; (b) with a retributive issue, 2 Pet. 2:4; v. 9, KJV (RV, "keep"); 2:17; 3:7; Jude 6, KJV (RV, "hath kept"); v. 13; (c) with the possibility either of deliverance or execution, Acts 25:21, KJV (RV, "kept"). See KEEP.

Note: In Rom. 11:4, KJV, kataleipō, "to leave behind, leave remaining," is translated "I have reserved" (RV, "I have left"). See LEAVE.

RESIST

1. anthistēmi (ἀνθίστημι, 436), "to set against" (anti, "against," histēmi, "to cause to stand"), used in the middle (or passive) voice and in the intransitive 2nd aorist and perfect active, signifying "to withstand, oppose, resist," is translated "to resist" in Matt. 5:39; Acts 6:10, KJV (RV, "withstand"); Rom. 9:19, KJV (RV, "withstandeth"); 13:2 (2nd and 3rd parts; for 1st part, see No. 3), KJV (RV, "withstandeth" and "withstand"); Gal. 2:11, RV (KJV, "withstood"); 2 Tim. 3:8 (2nd part), KJV (RV, "withstand"); Jas. 4:7; 1 Pet. 5:9, KJV (RV, "withstand"); "to withstand" in Acts 13:8; Eph. 6:13; 2 Tim. 3:8 (1st part); 4:15.¶

2. antikathistēmi (ἀντικαθίστημι, 478), "to stand firm against" (anti, "against," kathistēmi, "to set down," kata), is translated "ye have (not) resisted" in Heb. 12:4.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 31:21; Josh. 5:7; Mic. 2:8.¶

3. antitassō (ἀντιτάσσω, 498), anti, "against," tassō, "to arrange," originally a military term, "to range in battle against," and frequently so found in the papyri, is used in the middle voice signifying "to set oneself against, resist," (a) of men, Acts 18:6, "opposed themselves"; elsewhere "to resist," of resisting human potentates, Rom. 13:2; (b) of God, Jas. 4:6; 5:6, negatively, of leaving persistent evildoers to pursue their self-determined course, with eventual retribution; 1 Pet. 5:5. See OPPOSE.¶

4. antipiptō (ἀντιπίπτω, 496), lit., and primarily, "to fall against or upon" (anti, "against," piptō, "to fall"), then, "to strive against, resist," is used in Acts 7:51 of "resisting" the Holy Spirit.¶

ginōskō (γινώσκω, 1097), "to come to know, perceive, realize," is used in the 2nd aorist tense in Luke 16:4. "I am resolved," expressing the definiteness of the steward's realization, and his consequent determination of his course of action. See KNOW.

RESORT

1. erchomai (ἔρχομαι, 2064), "to come," is translated "resorted" in Mark 2:13; in John 10:41 (RV, "came"). See COME, No. 1.

2. epiporeuomai (ἐπιπορεύομαι, 1975), "to travel or journey to a place" (epi, "to," poreuomai, "to go"), is translated "resorted" in Luke 8:4, RV (KJV, "were come").¶

3. sunagō (συνάγω, 4863), "to gather or bring together" (sun, "with," agō, "to bring"), in the passive voice, "to be gathered or come together," is translated "resorted" in John 18:2 (the aorist tense expressing repeated action viewed cumulatively). See ASSEMBLE, GATHER, LEAD, Note (1).

Notes: (1) In the KJV of John 18:20 and Acts 16:13, sunerchomai, "to come together" (RV), is translated "to resort." (2) In Mark 10:1, KJV, sumporeuomai, "to come together" (RV), is translated "resort."

RESPECT (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

meros (μέρος, 3313), "a part," has occasionally the meaning of "a class" or "category," and, used in the dative case with en, "in," signifies "in respect of," 2 Cor. 3:10, "in (this) respect"; 9:3, RV, KJV, "in (this) behalf"; Col. 2:16, "in respect of (a feast day)."

B. Verbs.

1. apoblepō (ἀποβλέπω, 578), "to look away from all else at one object" (apo, "from"), hence, "to look steadfastly," is translated "he had respect" in Heb. 11:26, KJV (RV, "looked"). See LOOK.

2. epiblepō (ἐπιβλέπω, 1914), "to look upon" (epi), is translated "have respect" in Jas. 2:3 (RV "regard"); see LOOK, No. 6.

Notes: (1) The following prepositions are translated "in respect of": peri, "concerning," in John 16:8, RV; epi, "upon, over," in Heb. 11:4, RV; marg., "over (his gifts)"; kata, "in regard to," in Phil. 4:11. (2) For "respect of persons" and "respecter of persons" see PERSON.

REST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. anapausis (ἀνάπαυσις, 372), "cessation, refreshment, rest" (ana, "up," pauō, "to make to cease"), the constant word in the Sept. for the Sabbath "rest," is used in Matt. 11:29; here the contrast seems to be to the burdens imposed by the Pharisees. Christ's "rest" is not a "rest" from work, but in work, "not the rest of inactivity but of the harmonious working of all the faculties and affections—of will, heart, imagination, conscience—because each has found in God the ideal sphere for its satisfaction and development" (J. Patrick, in Hastings' Bib. Dic.); it occurs also in Matt. 12:43; Luke 11:24; Rev. 4:8, RV, "(they have no) rest" [KJV, "(they) rest (not)"], where the noun is the object of the verb echō, "to have"; so in 14:11.¶

2. katapausis (κατάπαυσις, 2663), in classical Greek, denotes "a causing to cease" or "putting to rest"; in the NT, "rest, repose"; it is used (a) of God's "rest," Acts 7:49; Heb. 3:11, 18; 4:1, 3 (twice), RV (1st part), "that rest" (the KJV, "rest," is ambiguous), 5, 11; (b) in a general statement, applicable to God and man, 4:10.¶

3. anesis (ἄνεσις, 425), for the significance of which see EASE, B, is translated "rest" in 2 Cor. 2:13, KJV (RV, "relief"); 7:5 (ditto); in 2 Thess. 1:7, the subject is not the "rest" to be granted to the saints, but the divine retribution on their persecutors; hence the phrase "and to you that are afflicted rest with us," is an incidental extension of the idea of recompense, and is to be read parenthetically. The time is not that at which the saints will be relieved of persecution, as in 1 Thess. 4:15–17, when the Parousia of Christ begins, but that at which the persecutors will be punished, namely, at the epiphany (or out-shining) of His Parousia (2 Thess. 2:8). For similar parentheses characteristic of epistolary writings see v. 10; 1 Thess. 1:6; 2:15, 16.

4. sabbatismos (σαββατισμός, 4520), "a Sabbath-keeping," is used in Heb. 4:9, RV, "a sabbath rest," KJV marg., "a keeping of a sabbath" (akin to sabbatizō, "to keep the Sabbath," used, e.g., in Exod. 16:30, not in the NT); here the sabbath-keeping is the perpetual sabbath "rest" to be enjoyed uninterruptedly by believers in their fellowship with the Father and the Son, in contrast to the weekly Sabbath under the Law. Because this sabbath "rest" is the "rest" of God Himself, 4:10, its full fruition is yet future, though believers now enter into it. In whatever way they enter into divine "rest," that which they enjoy is involved in an indissoluble relation with God.¶

5. koimēsis (κοίμησις, 2838), "a resting, reclining" (akin to keimai, "to lie"), is used in John 11:13, of natural sleep, translated "taking rest," RV.¶

Note: In Acts 9:31, KJV, eirēnē, "peace" (RV), is translated "rest."

B. Verbs.

1. anapauō (ἀναπαύω, 373), akin to A, No. 1, in the active voice, signifies "to give intermission from labor, to give rest, to refresh," Matt. 11:28; 1 Cor. 16:18, "have refreshed"; Philem. 20, "refresh"; passive voice, "to be rested, refreshed," 2 Cor. 7:13, "was refreshed"; Philem. 7, "are refreshed"; in the middle voice, "to take or enjoy rest," Matt. 26:45; Mark 6:31; 14:41; Luke 12:19, "take thine ease"; 1 Pet. 4:14; Rev. 6:11; 14:13. See REFRESH.¶ In the papyri it is found as an agricultural term, e.g., of giving land "rest" by sowing light crops upon it. In inscriptions it is found on gravestones of Christians, followed by the date of death (Moulton and Milligan).

2. katapauō (καταπαύω, 2664), akin to A, No. 2, used transitively, signifies "to cause to cease, restrain," Acts 14:18; "to cause to rest," Heb. 4:8; intransitively, "to rest," Heb. 4:4, 10. See CEASE, A, No. 6, RESTRAIN.¶

3. episkēnoō (ἐπισκηνόω, 1981), "to spread a tabernacle over" (epi, "upon," skēnē, "a tent"), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 12:9, "may rest upon (me)," RV, marg., "cover," "spread a tabernacle over."¶

4. kataskēnoō (κατασκηνόω, 2681), "to pitch one's tent, lodge," is translated "shall rest," in Acts 2:26, KJV (RV, "shall dwell"). See LODGE.

5. hēsuchazō (ἡσυχάζω, 2270), "to be still, to rest from labor,'" is translated "they rested" in Luke 23:56. See PEACE (hold one's), No. 3.

6. epanapauō (ἐπαναπαύω, 1879), "to cause to rest," is used in the middle voice, metaphorically, signifying "to rest upon" (epi, "upon," and No. 1), in Luke 10:6 and Rom. 2:17.¶

Note: For "find rest" Rom. 15:32, RV, see REFRESH, No. 2.

REST (the)

1. loipos (λοιπός, 3062), "remaining" (for which see REMNANT), is frequently used to mean "the rest," and is generally so translated in the RV (KJV, "others" in Luke 8:10; Acts 28:9; Eph. 2:3; 1 Thess. 4:13; 5:6; 1 Tim. 5:20; KJV, "other" in Luke 18:11; Acts 17:9; Rom. 1:13; 2 Cor. 12:13; 13:2; Gal. 2:13; Phil. 1:13; 4:3); the neut. plur., lit., "remaining things," is used in Luke 12:26; 1 Cor. 11:34.

2. epiloipos (ἐπίλοιπος, 1954), signifying "still left, left over" (epi, "over," and No. 1), is used in the neuter with the article in 1 Pet. 4:2, "the rest (of your time)."¶

For RESTITUTION see RESTORATION

akatastatos (ἀκατάστατος, 182), "unsettled, unstable, disorderly" (a, negative, kathistēmi, "to set in order"), is translated "unstable" in Jas. 1:8; "restless" in 3:8, RV [in the latter, the KJV "unruly" represents the word akataschetos, signifying "that cannot be restrained" (a, negative, katechō, "to hold down, restrain"). In the Sept., Job 31:11¶]. See UNRULY, UNSTABLE.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 54:11.¶

RESTORATION

apokatastasis (ἀποκατάστασις, 605), from apo, "back, again," kathistēmi, "to set in order," is used in Acts 3:21, RV, "restoration" (KJV, "restitution"). See under REGENERATION, concerning Israel in its regenerated state hereafter. In the papyri it is used of a temple cell of a goddess, a "repair" of a public way, the "restoration" of estates to rightful owners, a "balancing" of accounts. Apart from papyri illustrations the word is found in an Egyptian reference to a consummating agreement of the world's cyclical periods, an idea somewhat similar to that in the Acts passage (Moulton and Milligan).¶

RESTORE

1. apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give back," is translated "I restore" in Luke 19:8. See DELIVER, A, No. 3.

2. apokathistēmi or the alternative form apokathistanō (ἀποκαθίστημι, 600) is used (a) of "restoration" to a former condition of health, Matt. 12:13; Mark 3:5; 8:25; Luke 6:10; (b) of the divine "restoration" of Israel and conditions affected by it, including the renewal of the covenant broken by them, Matt. 17:11; Mark 9:12; Acts 1:6; (c) of "giving" or "bringing" a person back, Heb. 13:19.¶ In the papyri it is used of financial restitution, of making good the breaking of a stone by a workman by his substituting another, of the reclamation of land, etc. (Moulton and Milligan).

3. katartizō (καταρτίζω, 2675), "to mend, to furnish completely," is translated "restore" in Gal. 6:1, metaphorically, of the "restoration," by those who are spiritual, of one overtaken in a trespass, such a one being as a dislocated member of the spiritual body. The tense is the continuous present, suggesting the necessity for patience and perseverance in the process. See FIT, MEND, PERFECT.

RESTRAIN

1. katapauō (καταπαύω, 2664); See REST, B, No. 2.

2. katechō (κατέχω, 2722), "to hold fast or down," is translated "restraineth" in 2 Thess. 2:6 and 7. In v. 6 lawlessness is spoken of as being "restrained" in its development: in v. 7 "one that restraineth" is, lit., "the restrainer" (the article with the present participle, "the restraining one"); this may refer to an individual, as in the similar construction in 1 Thess. 3:5, "the tempter" (cf. 1:10, lit., "the Deliverer"); or to a number of persons presenting the same characteristics, just as "the believer" stands for all believers, e.g., Rom. 9:33; 1 John 5:10. V. 6 speaks of a principle, v. 7 of the principle as embodied in a person or series of persons; cf. what is said of "the power" in Rom. 13:3, 4, a phrase representing all such rulers. Probably such powers, i.e., "constituted governments," are the "restraining" influence here intimated (specifications being designedly withheld). For an extended exposition see Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 254–261.

RESURRECTION

1. anastasis (ἀνάστασις, 386) denotes (I) "a raising up," or "rising" (ana, "up," and histēmi, "to cause to stand"), Luke 2:34, "the rising up"; the KJV "again" obscures the meaning; the Child would be like a stone against which many in Israel would stumble while many others would find in its strength and firmness a means of their salvation and spiritual life; (II) of "resurrection" from the dead, (a) of Christ, Acts 1:22; 2:31; 4:33; Rom. 1:4; 6:5; Phil. 3:10; 1 Pet. 1:3; 3:21; by metonymy, of Christ as the Author of "resurrection," John 11:25; (b) of those who are Christ's at His Parousia (see COMING), Luke 14:14, "the resurrection of the just"; Luke 20:33, 35, 36; John 5:29 (1st part), "the resurrection of life"; 11:24; Acts 23:6; 24:15 (1st part); 1 Cor. 15:21, 42; 2 Tim. 2:18; Heb. 11:35 (2nd part), see RAISE, Note (3); Rev. 20:5, "the first resurrection"; hence the insertion of "is" stands for the completion of this "resurrection," of which Christ was "the firstfruits"; 20:6; (c) of "the rest of the dead," after the Millennium (cf. Rev. 20:5); John 5:29 (2nd part), "the resurrection of judgment"; Acts 24:15 (2nd part), "of the unjust"; (d) of those who were raised in more immediate connection with Christ's "resurrection," and thus had part already in the first "resurrection," Acts 26:23 and Rom. 1:4 (in each of which "dead" is plural; see Matt. 27:52); (e) of the "resurrection" spoken of in general terms, Matt. 22:23; Mark 12:18; Luke 20:27; Acts 4:2; 17:18; 23:8; 24:21; 1 Cor. 15:12, 13; Heb. 6:2; (f) of those who were raised in OT times, to die again, Heb. 11:35 (1st part), lit., "out of resurrection."¶

2. exanastasis (ἐξανάστασις, 1815), ek, "from" or "out of," and No. 1, Phil. 3:11, followed by ek, lit., "the out-resurrection from among the dead." For the significance of this see ATTAIN, No. 1.¶

3. egersis (ἔγερσις, 1454), "a rousing" (akin to egeirō, "to arouse, to raise"), is used of the "resurrection" of Christ, in Matt. 27:53.¶

krateō (κρατέω, 2902), "to be strong, obtain, hold, hold fast," is translated "to retain," of sins, John 20:23 (twice); see on REMIT. See HOLD, KEEP, OBTAIN, TAKE.

Notes: (1) In Philem. 13, KJV, katechō, "to hold fast, hold back, detain," is translated "to retain" (RV, to keep). (2) In Rom. 1:28, KJV, echō, "to have" (RV), is translated "to retain."

RETURN

1. analuō (ἀναλύω, 360), "to depart" in Phil. 1:23, signifies "to return" in Luke 12:36, used in a simile of the "return" of a lord for his servants after a marriage feast (RV). See DEPART, No. 16.¶

2. anastrephō (ἀναστρέφω, 390), "to turn back," is translated "to return" in Acts 5:22 and 15:16. See ABIDE, BEHAVE.

3. epistrephō (ἐπιστρέφω, 1994), "to turn about," or "towards," is translated "to return" in Matt. 12:44; 24:18; Mark 13:16, RV (KJV, "turn back again"); Luke 2:39; 8:55, RV (KJV, "came again"); 17:31; Acts 15:36, RV (KJV, "go again"). See CONVERT, A, No. 2, TURN.

4. hupostrephō (ὑποστρέφω, 5290), "to turn behind," or "back" (hupo, "under"), is translated "to return" (in some texts in Mark 14:40) in Luke 1:56; 2:20, 43; v. 45, RV (KJV, "turned back again"); 4:1, 14; 7:10; 8:37; 10:17; 11:24, KJV (RV, "I will turn back"); 17:18; 19:12; 23:48, 56; Acts 1:12; 12:25; 13:13; 13:34; 20:3; 21:6; 22:17, RV (KJV, "was come again"); 23:32; Gal. 1:17; Heb. 7:1. See TURN (back).

5. anakamptō (ἀνακάμπτω, 344), "to turn or bend back," occurs in Matt. 2:12; Luke 10:6 (i.e., as if it was unsaid); Acts 18:21; Heb. 11:15.¶

6. epanagō (ἐπανάγω, 1877), "to bring up or back" (primarily a nautical term for "putting to sea"; see LAUNCH, PUT), is used intransitively, in Matt. 21:18, "He returned."

Note: In Luke 19:15, KJV, epanerchomai, "to come back again" (RV) is translated "returned." See COME, No. 4.

REVEAL

1. apokaluptō (ἀποκαλύπτω, 601) signifies "to uncover, unveil" (apo, "from," kaluptō, "to cover"); both verbs are used in Matt. 10:26; in Luke 12:2, apokaluptō is set in contrast to sunkaluptō, "to cover up, cover completely." "The NT occurrences of this word fall under two heads, subjective and objective. The subjective use is that in which something is presented to the mind directly, as, (a) the meaning of the acts of God, Matt. 11:25; Luke 10:21; (b) the secret of the Person of the Lord Jesus, Matt. 16:17; John 12:38; (c) the character of God as Father, Matt. 11:27; Luke 10:22; (d) the will of God for the conduct of His children, Phil. 3:15;

(e) the mind of God to the prophets of Israel, 1 Pet. 1:12, and of the Church, 1 Cor. 14:30; Eph. 3:5.

"The objective use is that in which something is presented to the senses, sight or hearing, as, referring to the past, (f) the truth declared to men in the gospel, Rom. 1:17; 1 Cor. 2:10; Gal. 3:23; (g) the Person of Christ to Paul on the way to Damascus, Gal. 1:16; (h) thoughts before hidden in the heart, Luke 2:35; referring to the future, (i) the coming in glory of the Lord Jesus, Luke 17:30; (j) the salvation and glory that await the believer, Rom. 8:18; 1 Pet. 1:5; 5:1; (k) the true value of service, 1 Cor. 3:13; (l) the wrath of God (at the Cross, against sin, and, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus, against the sinner), Rom. 1:18; (m) the Lawless One, 2 Thess. 2:3, 6, 8."*¶

2. chrēmatizō (χρηματίζω, 5537), "to give divine admonition, instruction, revelation," is translated "it had been revealed," in Luke 2:26. See ADMONITION, B, No. 3, CALL.

REVELATION

apokalupsis (ἀποκάλυψις, 602), "an uncovering" (akin to apokaluptō; see above), "is used in the NT of (a) the drawing away by Christ of the veil of darkness covering the Gentiles, Luke 2:32; cf. Isa. 25:7; (b) 'the mystery,' the purpose of God in this age, Rom. 16:25; Eph. 3:3; (c) the communication of the knowledge of God to the soul, Eph. 1:17; (d) an expression of the mind of God for the instruction of the church, 1 Cor. 14:6, 26, for the instruction of the Apostle Paul, 2 Cor. 12:1, 7; Gal. 1:12, and for his guidance, Gal. 2:2; (e) the Lord Jesus Christ, to the saints at His Parousia, 1 Cor. 1:7, RV (KJV, 'coming'); 1 Pet. 1:7, RV (KJV, 'appearing'), 13; 4:13; (f) the Lord Jesus Christ when He comes to dispense the judgments of God, 2 Thess. 1:7; cf. Rom. 2:5; (g) the saints, to the creation, in association with Christ in His glorious reign, Rom. 8:19, RV, 'revealing' (KJV, 'manifestation'); (h) the symbolic forecast of the final judgments of God, Rev. 1:1 (hence the Greek title of the book, transliterated 'Apocalypse' and translated 'Revelation')."* See APPEARING, COMING, LIGHTEN, B, Note, MANIFESTATION.¶

REVEL, REVELING

1. truphē (τρυφή, 5172), "luxuriousness, daintiness, reveling," is translated freely by the verb "to revel" in 2 Pet. 2:13, RV (KJV, "to riot"), lit., "counting reveling in the daytime a pleasure." In Luke 7:25 it is used with en, "in," and translated "delicately." See DELICATELY, RIOT.¶

2. kōmos (κῶμος, 2970), "a revel, carousal," the concomitant and consequence of drunkenness, is used in the plural, Rom. 13:13, translated by the singular, RV, "reveling" (KJV, "rioting"); Gal. 5:21 and 1 Pet. 4:3, "revelings." See RIOT.¶

Note: For entruphaō, 2 Pet. 2:13, RV, "to revel," see SPORTING.

For REVENGE and REVENGER see AVENGE and AVENGER

REVERENCE (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. entrepō (ἐντρέπω, 1788), lit., "to turn in" (i.e., upon oneself), "to put to shame," denotes, when used in the passive voice, "to feel respect for, to show deference to, to reverence," Matt. 21:37; Mark 12:6; Luke 20:13; Heb. 12:9. See ASHAMED, A, No. 4, REGARD.

2. phobeō (φοβέω, 5399), "to fear," is used in the passive voice in the NT; in Eph. 5:33 of reverential fear on the part of a wife for a husband, KJV, "reverence" (RV, "fear"). See FEAR, D, No. 1.

eulabeia (εὐλάβεια, 2124), "caution, reverence," is translated "reverence" in Heb. 12:28 (1st part in the best mss; some have aidōs). See FEAR.

REVERENT

hieroprepēs (ἱεροπρεπής, 2412), "suited to a sacred character, reverend" (hieros, "sacred," prepō, "to be fitting"), is translated "reverent" in Titus 2:3, RV (KJV, "as becometh holiness"). See BECOME, B.¶

REVILE, REVILING, REVILER

A. Verbs.

1. loidoreō (λοιδορέω, 3058) denotes "to abuse, revile," John 9:28; Acts 23:4; 1 Cor. 4:12; 1 Pet. 2:23 (1st clause).¶

2. oneidizō (ὀνειδίζω, 3679), "to reproach, upbraid," is translated "to revile" in Matt. 5:11, KJV, and Mark 15:32 (RV, "reproach"). See REPROACH.

3. blasphēmeō (βλασφημέω, 987), "to speak profanely, rail at," is translated "reviled" in Matt. 27:39, KJV (RV, "railed on"); Luke 22:65, RV, "reviling" (KJV, "blasphemously").

4. antiloidoreō (ἀντιλοιδορέω, 486), "to revile back or again" (anti, and No. 1), is found in 1 Pet. 2:23 (2nd clause).¶

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 41, 42.
* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 228, 229.

Note: For epēreazō, 1 Pet. 3:16, RV, "revile," see ACCUSE, B, No. 3.

B. Adjective.

loidoros (λοίδορος, 3060), akin to A, No. 1, "abusive, railing, reviling," is used as a noun, 1 Cor. 5:11, RV, "a reviler" (KJV "a railer"); 6:10, "revilers."¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:24; 26:21; 27:15.¶

C. Noun.

loidoria (λοιδορία, 3059), akin to A, No. 1, and B, "abuse, railing," is used in 1 Tim. 5:14, RV, "for (charin, 'for the sake of') reviling" (KJV, "to speak reproachfully"—a paraphrase); 1 Pet. 3:9 (twice), RV, "reviling" (KJV, "railing"). See RAIL, B.¶

REVIVE

1. anathallō (ἀναθάλλω, 330), "to flourish anew" (ana, "again, anew," thallō, "to flourish or blossom"), hence, "to revive," is used metaphorically in Phil. 4:10, RV, "ye have revived (your thought for me)," KJV, "(your care of me) hath flourished again."¶ In the Sept., Ps. 28:7; Ezek. 17:24; Hos. 8:9.¶

2. anazaō (ἀναζάω, 326), "to live again" (ana, "and" zaō, "to live"), "to regain life," is used of moral "revival," Luke 15:24, "is alive again"; (b) of sin, Rom. 7:9, "revived," lit., "lived again" i.e., it sprang into activity, manifesting the evil inherent in it; here sin is personified, by way of contrast to the man himself. Some mss. have it in Rom. 14:9, for zaō, as in the RV, which italicizes "again."¶

REWARD (Noun and Verb)

misthos (μισθός, 3408), primarily "wages, hire," and then, generally, "reward," (a) received in this life, Matt. 5:46; 6:2, 5, 16; Rom. 4:4; 1 Cor. 9:17, 18; of evil "rewards," Acts 1:18; see also HIRE; (b) to be received hereafter, Matt. 5:12; 10:41 (twice), 42; Mark 9:41; Luke 6:23, 35; 1 Cor. 3:8, 14; 2 John 8; Rev. 11:18; 22:12. See WAGES.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:41, axios, "worthy, befitting," used in the plur., is rendered "the due reward," lit., "things worthy." (2) For antapodosis, rendered "reward" in Col. 3:24, KJV, see RECOMPENSE. (3) For katabrabeuō, "to rob of a reward," Col. 2:18, see BEGUILE, Note, and ROB.

B. Verb.

apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give back," is nowhere translated "to reward" in the RV; KJV, Matt. 6:4, 6, 18 (see RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2); Matt. 16:27; 2 Tim. 4:14; Rev. 18:6 (see RENDER).

misthapodotēs (μισθαποδότης, 3406), "one who pays wages" (misthos, "wages," apo, "back," didōmi, "to give"), is used by metonymy in Heb. 11:6, of God, as the "Rewarder" of those who "seek after Him" (RV).¶ Cf. misthapodosia, "recompence."

RICH, RICHES, RICHLY, RICH MAN

A. Adjective.

plousios (πλούσιος, 4145), akin to B, C, No. 1, "rich, wealthy," is used (I) literally, (a) adjectivally (with a noun expressed separately) in Matt. 27:57; Luke 12:16; 14:12; 16:1, 19; (without a noun), 18:23; 19:2; (b) as a noun, singular, a "rich" man (the noun not being expressed), Matt. 19:23, 24; Mark 10:25; 12:41; Luke 16:21, 22; 18:25; Jas. 1:10, 11, "the rich," "the rich (man)"; plural, Mark 12:41, lit., "rich (ones)"; Luke 6:24 (ditto); 21:1; 1 Tim. 6:17, "(them that are) rich," lit., "(the) rich"; Jas. 2:6, RV, "the rich"; 5:1, RV, "ye rich"; Rev. 6:15 and 13:16, RV, "the rich"; (II) metaphorically, of God, Eph. 2:4 ("in mercy"); of Christ, 2 Cor. 8:9; of believers, Jas. 2:5, RV, "(to be) rich (in faith)"; Rev. 2:9, of spiritual "enrichment" generally; 3:17, of a false sense of "enrichment."¶

B. Verbs.

1. plouteō (πλουτέω, 4147), "to be rich," in the aorist or point tense, "to become rich," is used (a) literally, Luke 1:53, "the rich," present participle, lit., "(ones or those) being rich"; 1 Tim. 6:9, 18; Rev. 18:3, 15, 19 (all three in the aorist tense); (b) metaphorically, of Christ, Rom. 10:12 (the passage stresses the fact that Christ is Lord; see v. 9, and the RV); of the "enrichment" of believers through His poverty, 2 Cor. 8:9 (the aorist tense expressing completeness, with permanent results); so in Rev. 3:18, where the spiritual "enrichment" is conditional upon righteousness of life and conduct (see GOLD, No. 2); of a false sense of "enrichment," 1 Cor. 4:8 (aorist), RV, "ye are become rich" (KJV, "ye are rich"); Rev. 3:17 (perfect tense, RV, "I... have gotten riches," KJV, "I am... increased with goods"), see GOODS, Note (3); of not being "rich" toward God, Luke 12:21.¶

2. ploutizō (πλουτίζω, 4148), "to make rich, enrich," is rendered "making (many) rich" in 2 Cor. 6:10 (metaphorical of "enriching" spiritually). See ENRICH.

C. Nouns

1. ploutos (πλοῦτος, 4149) is used in the singular (I) of material "riches," used evilly, Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:19; Luke 8:14; 1 Tim. 6:17; Jas. 5:2; Rev. 18:17; (II) of spiritual and moral "riches," (a) possessed by God and exercised towards men, Rom. 2:4, "of His goodness and forbearance and longsuffering"; 9:23 and Eph. 3:16, "of His glory" (i.e., of its manifestation in grace towards believers); Rom. 11:33, of His wisdom and knowledge; Eph. 1:7 and 2:7, "of His grace"; 1:18, "of the glory of His inheritance in the saints"; 3:8, "of Christ"; Phil. 4:19, "in glory in Christ Jesus," RV; Col. 1:27, "of the glory of this mystery... Christ in you, the hope of glory"; (b) to be ascribed to Christ, Rev, 5:12; (c) of the effects of the gospel upon the Gentiles, Rom. 11:12 (twice); (d) of the full assurance of understanding in regard to the mystery of God, even Christ, Col. 2:2, RV; (e) of the liberality of the churches of Macedonia, 2 Cor. 8:2 (where "the riches" stands for the spiritual and moral value of their liberality); (f) of "the reproach of Christ" in contrast to this world's treasures, Heb. 11:26.¶

2. chrēma (χρῆμα, 5536), "what one uses or needs" (chraomai, "to use"), "a matter, business," hence denotes "riches," Mark 10:23, 24; Luke 18:24; see MONEY, No. 2.

plousiōs (πλουσίως, 4146), "richly, abundantly," akin to A, is used in Col. 3:16; 1 Tim. 6:17; Titus 3:6, RV, "richly" (KJV, "abundantly"); 2 Pet. 1:11 (ditto).¶

For RID see CARE, A, No. 1, Note

epibainō (ἐπιβαίνω, 1910), "to go upon" (epi, "upon," bainō, "to go"), is used of Christ's "riding" into Jerusalem, Matt. 21:5, RV, "riding" (KJV, "sitting"). See COME, No. 16.

dexios (δεξιός, 1188), an adjective, used (a) of "the right" as opposite to the left, e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; Rev. 10:5, RV, "right hand"; in connection with armor (figuratively), 2 Cor. 6:7; with en, followed by the dative plural, Mark 16:5; with ek, and the genitive plural, e.g., Matt. 25:33, 34; Luke 1:11; (b) of giving the "right hand" of fellowship, Gal. 2:9, betokening the public expression of approval by leaders at Jerusalem of the course pursued by Paul and Barnabas among the Gentiles; the act was often the sign of a pledge, e.g., 2 Kings 10:15; 1 Chron. 29:24, marg.; Ezra 10:19; Ezek. 17:18; figuratively, Lam. 5:6; it is often so used in the papyri; (c) metaphorically of "power" or "authority," Acts 2:33; with ek, signifying "on," followed by the genitive plural, Matt. 26:64; Mark 14:62; Heb. 1:13; (d) similarly of "a place of honor in the messianic kingdom," Matt. 20:21; Mark 10:37.

RIGHT (not wrong—Noun and Adjective), RIGHTLY

exousia (ἐξουσία, 1849), "authority, power," is translated "right" in the RV, for KJV, "power," in John 1:12; Rom. 9:21; 1 Cor. 9:4, 5, 6, 12 (twice), 18; 2 Thess. 3:9, where the "right" is that of being maintained by those among whom the ministers of the gospel had labored, a "right" possessed in virtue of the "authority" given them by Christ, Heb. 13:10; Rev. 22:14.

Exousia first denotes "freedom to act" and then "authority for the action." This is first true of God, Acts 1:7. It was exercised by the Son of God, as from, and in conjunction with, the Father when the Lord was upon earth, in the days of His flesh, Matt. 9:6; John 10:18, as well as in resurrection, Matt. 28:18; John 17:2. All others hold their freedom to act from God (though some of them have abused it), whether angels, Eph. 1:21, or human potentates, Rom. 13:1. Satan offered to delegate his authority over earthly kingdoms to Christ, Luke 4:6, who, though conscious of His "right" to it, refused, awaiting the divinely appointed time. See AUTHORITY, No. 1, and for various synonyms see DOMINION, No. 1, Note.

B. Adjectives.

1. dikaios (δίκαιος, 1342), "just, righteous, that which is in accordance with" dikē, "rule, right, justice," is translated "right" in Matt. 20:4; v. 7, KJV only (RV omits, according to the most authentic mss., the clause having been inserted from v. 4, to the detriment of the narrative); Luke 12:57; Acts 4:19; Eph. 6:1; Phil. 1:7, RV (KJV, "meet"); 2 Pet. 1:13 (KJV, "meet"). See JUST, RIGHTEOUS.

2. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117), "straight," hence, metaphorically, "right," is so rendered in Acts 8:21, of the heart; 13:10, of the ways of the Lord; 2 Pet. 2:15. See STRAIGHT.

C. Adverb.

orthōs (ὀρθῶς, 3723), "rightly" (akin to orthos, "straight, direct"), is translated "plain" in Mark 7:35; in Luke 7:43 and 20:21, "rightly"; in Luke 10:28, "right."¶

Notes: (1) For "right mind" see MIND, B, No. 5. (2) For the KJV, "rightly" in 2 Tim. 2:15, see DIVIDE, A, No. 8.

RIGHTEOUS, RIGHTEOUSLY

A. Adjective.

dikaios (δίκαιος, 1342) signifies "just," without prejudice or partiality, e.g., of the judgment of God, 2 Thess. 1:5, 6; of His judgments, Rev. 16:7; 19:2; of His character as Judge, 2 Tim. 4:8; Rev. 16:5; of His ways and doings, Rev. 15:3. See further under JUST, A, No. 1, RIGHT, B, No. 1.

In the following the RV substitutes "righteous" for the KJV "just"; Matt. 1:19; 13:49; 27:19, 24; Mark 6:20; Luke 2:25; 15:7; 20:20; 23:50; John 5:30; Acts 3:14; 7:52; 10:22; 22:14; Rom. 1:17; 7:12; Gal. 3:11; Heb. 10:38; Jas. 5:6; 1 Pet. 3:18; 2 Pet. 2:7; 1 John 1:9; Rev. 15:3.

B. Adverb.

dikaiōs (δικαίως, 1346) is translated "righteously" in 1 Cor. 15:34, RV, "(awake up) righteously," KJV, "(awake to) righteousness"; 1 Thess. 2:10, RV (KJV, "justly"); Titus 2:12; 1 Pet. 2:23. See JUSTLY.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 22:11 the best texts have dikaiosunē, "righteousness," with poieō, "to do," RV, "let him do righteousness"; the KJV follows those which have the passive voice of dikaioō and renders it "let him be righteous," lit., "let him be made righteous." (2) Dikaiokrisia, "righteous judgment" (dikaios, and krisis), occurs in Rom. 2:5.¶

RIGHTEOUSNESS

1. dikaiosunē (δικαιοσύνη, 1343) is "the character or quality of being right or just"; it was formerly spelled "rightwiseness," which clearly expresses the meaning. It is used to denote an attribute of God, e.g., Rom. 3:5, the context of which shows that "the righteousness of God" means essentially the same as His faithfulness, or truthfulness, that which is consistent with His own nature and promises; Rom. 3:25, 26 speaks of His "righteousness" as exhibited in the death of Christ, which is sufficient to show men that God is neither indifferent to sin nor regards it lightly. On the contrary, it demonstrates that quality of holiness in Him which must find expression in His condemnation of sin.

"Dikaiosunē is found in the sayings of the Lord Jesus, (a) of whatever is right or just in itself, whatever conforms to the revealed will of God, Matt. 5:6, 10, 20; John 16:8, 10; (b) whatever has been appointed by God to be acknowledged and obeyed by man, Matt. 3:15; 21:32; (c) the sum total of the requirements of God, Matt. 6:33; (d) religious duties, Matt. 6:1 (distinguished as almsgiving, man's duty to his neighbor, vv. 2–4, prayer, his duty to God, vv. 5–15, fasting, the duty of self-control, vv. 16–18).

"In the preaching of the apostles recorded in Acts the word has the same general meaning. So also in Jas. 1:20; 3:18, in both Epp. of Peter, 1st John and the Revelation. In 2 Pet. 1:1, 'the righteousness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ,' is the righteous dealing of God with sin and with sinners on the ground of the death of Christ. 'Word of righteousness,' Heb. 5:13, is probably the gospel, and the Scriptures as containing the gospel, wherein is declared the righteousness of God in all its aspects.

"This meaning of dikaiosunē, right action, is frequent also in Paul's writings, as in all five of its occurrences in Rom. 6; Eph. 6:14, etc. But for the most part he uses it of that gracious gift of God to men whereby all who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ are brought into right relationship with God. This righteousness is unattainable by obedience to any law, or by any merit of man's own, or any other condition than that of faith in Christ.... The man who trusts in Christ becomes 'the righteousness of God in Him,' 2 Cor. 5:21, i.e., becomes in Christ all that God requires a man to be, all that he could never be in himself. Because Abraham accepted the Word of God, making it his own by that act of the mind and spirit which is called faith, and, as the sequel showed, submitting himself to its control, therefore God accepted him as one who fulfilled the whole of His requirements, Rom. 4:3....

"Righteousness is not said to be imputed to the believer save in the sense that faith is imputed ('reckoned' is the better word) for righteousness. It is clear that in Rom. 4:6, 11, 'righteousness reckoned' must be understood in the light of the context, 'faith reckoned for righteousness,' vv. 3, 5, 9, 22. 'For' in these places is eis, which does not mean 'instead of,' but 'with a view to.' The faith thus exercised brings the soul into vital union with God in Christ, and inevitably produces righteousness of life, that is, conformity to the will of God."*

Note: In Heb. 1:8, KJV, euthutēs, "straightness, uprightness" (akin to euthus, "straight, right"), is translated "righteousness" (RV, "uprightness"; KJV, marg., "rightness, or straightness").

RING

daktulios (δακτύλιος, 1146), "a finger ring," occurs in Luke 15:22.¶

Note: Chrusodaktulios, an adjective signifying "with a gold ring," "a gold-ringed (person),"

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 246, 247.

from chrusos, "gold," and daktulos, "a finger," occurs in Jas. 2:2.¶

prōtostatēs (πρωτοστάτης, 4414), "one who stands first" (prōtos, "first," histēmi, "to cause to stand"), was used of soldiers, one who stands in the front rank; hence, metaphorically, "a leader," Acts 24:5.¶

RIOT, RIOTING, RIOTOUS, RIOTOUSLY

A. Nouns.

1. asōtia (ἀσωτία, 810), "prodigality, a wastefulness, profligacy" (a, negative, sōzō, "to save"), is rendered "riot" in Eph. 5:18, RV (KJV, "excess"); Titus 1:6 and 1 Pet. 4:4 (KJV and RV, "riot"). The corresponding verb is found in a papyrus writing, telling of "riotous living" (like the adverb asōtōs, see B).¶ In the Sept., Prov. 28:7.¶ Cf. the synonymous word aselgeia (under LASCIVIOUSNESS).

2. kōmos (κῶμος, 2970), "a revel," is rendered "rioting" in Rom. 13:13, KJV; see REVEL.

3. truphē (τρυφή, 5172), "luxuriousness," is rendered "riot" in 2 Pet. 2:13, KJV; see DELICATELY, REVEL.

4. stasis (στάσις, 4714), primarily "a standing" (akin to histēmi, "to cause to ("stand"), then "an insurrection," is translated "riot" in Acts 19:40 RV (KJV, "uproar"). See DISSENSION, INSURRECTION, SEDITION, UPROAR.

B. Adverb.

asōtōs (ἀσώτως, 811), "wastefully" (akin to A, No. 1), is translated "with riotous living" in Luke 15:13; though the word does not necessarily signify "dissolutely," the parable narrative makes clear that this is the meaning here.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 7:11.¶

Note: The verb ekchunō, a Hellenistic form of ekcheō (though the form actually used is the regular classical aorist passive of ekcheō), "to pour out, shed," is translated "ran riotously" in Jude 11, RV (KJV, "ran greedily"); see POUR, SHED.

RIPE (to be fully)

1. akmazō (ἀκμάζω, 187), "to be at the prime" (akin to akmē, "a point"), "to be ripe," is translated "are fully ripe" in Rev. 14:18.¶

2. xērainō (ξηραίνω, 3583), "to dry up, wither," is used of "ripened" crops in Rev. 14:15, RV, "overripe," KJV, "ripe" (marg., "dried"). See DRY, B, OVERRIPE, WITHER.

3. paradidōmi (παραδίδωμι, 3860), "to give over, commit, deliver," etc., also signifies "to permit"; in Mark 4:29, of the "ripe" condition of corn, RV, and KJV marg., "is ripe"; RV marg., "alloweth" (the nearest rendering); KJV, "is brought forth."

RISE, RISING

Notes: (1) For the various verbs anistēmi, exanistēmi, egeirō, anabainō, anatellō, sunephistēmi, see under ARISE. (2) For the KJV, "should rise" in Acts 26:23, see RESURRECTION. (3) Exanistēmi, transitively, "to raise up" (ek, "out, from, out of"), is used intransitively in Acts 15:5, "there rose up," i.e., from the midst of a gathered company. See RAISE. (4) For the KJV and RV of sunegeirō, "to raise together with," and in the passive voice in Col. 2:12; 3:1, see RAISE. (5) For the word "rising," which is used to translate the verbs anatellō in Mark 16:2, and anistēmi, in Mark 9:10, see under ARISE, Nos. 9 and 1 respectively. (6) For katephis tēmi Acts 18:12, RV, see INSURRECTION, B. (7) Epanistamai, "to rise up against," occurs in Matt. 10:21; Mark 13:12.¶ (8) Anastasis, is rendered "rising up" in Luke 2:34, RV.

RIVER

potamos (ποταμός, 4215) denotes (a) "a stream," Luke 6:48, 49; (b) "a flood or floods," Matt. 7:25, 27; (c) "a river," natural, Matt. 3:6, RV; Mark 1:5; Acts 16:13; 2 Cor. 11:26, RV (KJV, "waters"); Rev. 8:10; 9:14; 16:4, 12; symbolical, Rev. 12:15 (1st part), RV, "river" (KJV, "flood"); so v. 16; 22:1, 2 (cf. Gen. 2:10; Ezek. 47); figuratively, John 7:38, "the effects of the operation of the Holy Spirit in and through the believer." See FLOOD, WATER.¶

Note: For potamophorētos in Rev. 12:15, see FLOOD, B.

ROAR, ROARING

A. Verbs.

1. mukaomai (μυκάομαι, 3455), properly of oxen, an onomatopoeic word, "to low, bellow," is used of a lion, Rev. 10:3.¶

2. ōruomai (ὠρύομαι, 5612), "to howl" or "roar," onomatopoeic, of animals or men, is used of a lion, 1 Pet. 5:8, as a simile of Satan.¶

B. Noun.

ēchos (ἦχος, 2279), "a noise" or "sound" (Eng., "echo"), is used of the "roaring" of the sea in Luke 21:25, in the best mss., "for the roaring (of the sea and the billows)," RV; some mss. have the present participle of ēcheō, "to sound," KJV, "(the sea and the waves) roaring. See RUMOR, SOUND.

ROB

1. sulaō (συλάω, 4813), "to plunder, spoil," is translated "I robbed" in 2 Cor. 11:8.¶ Cf. sulagōgeō, "to make spoil of," Col. 2:8.¶

2. katabrabeuō (καταβραβεύω, 2603), "to give judgment against, to condemn" (kata, "against," and brabeus, "an umpire"; cf. brabeion, "a prize in the games," 1 Cor. 9:24; Phil. 3:14, and brabeuō, "to act as an umpire, arbitrate," Col. 3:15), occurs in Col. 2:18, RV, "let (no man) rob (you) of your prize" (KJV, "... beguile ... of your reward"), said of false teachers who would frustrate the faithful adherence of the believers to the truth, causing them to lose their reward. Another rendering closer to the proper meaning of the word, as given above, is "let no man decide for or against you" (i.e., without any notion of a prize); this suitably follows the word "judge" in v. 16, i.e., "do not give yourselves up to the judgment and decision of any man" (KJV, marg., "judge against").¶

1. lēstēs (λῃστής, 3027), "a robber, brigand" (akin to leia, "booty"), "one who plunders openly and by violence" (in contrast to kleptēs, "a thief," see below), is always translated "robber" or "robbers" in the RV, as the KJV in John 10:1, 8; 18:40; 2 Cor. 11:26; the KJV has "thief" or "thieves" in Matt. 21:13, and parallel passages; 26:55, and parallel passages; 27:38, 44 and Mark 15:27; Luke 10:30, 36; but "thief" is the meaning of kleptēs. See THIEF.

2. hierosulos (ἱερόσυλος, 2417), an adjective signifying "robbing temples" (hieron, "a temple," and sulaō, "to rob"), is found in Acts 19:37.¶ Cf. hierosuleō, "to rob a temple," Rom. 2:22, KJV, "commit sacrilege."¶

For ROBBERY see PRIZE

ROBE

1. stolē (στολή, 4749), for which see CLOTHING, No. 8, is translated "robe" in Mark 16:5, RV (KJV, "garment"); "long robes" in Luke 20:46.

2. chlamus (χλαμύς, 5511), "a cloak," is translated "robe" in Matt. 27:28, 31. See CLOTHING, Note (4).¶

3. himation (ἱμάτιον, 2440) is translated "robe" in the KJV of John 19:2, 5 (RV, "garment"). See APPAREL, No. 2, CLOTHING, No. 2, GARMENT.

4. esthēs (ἐσθής, 2066), "apparel," is translated "robe" in Luke 23:11 (RV, "apparel"). See APPAREL, No. 1.

ROCK

1. petra (πέτρα, 4073) denotes "a mass of rock," as distinct from petros, "a detached stone or boulder," or a stone that might be thrown or easily moved. For the nature of petra, see Matt. 7:24, 25; 27:51, 60; Mark 15:46; Luke 6:48 (twice), a type of a sure foundation (here the true reading is as in the RV, "because it had been well builded"); Rev. 6:15, 16 (cf. Isa. 2:19,ff.; Hos. 10:8); Luke 8:6, 13, used illustratively; 1 Cor. 10:4 (twice), figuratively, of Christ; in Rom. 9:33 and 1 Pet. 2:8, metaphorically, of Christ; in Matt. 16:18, metaphorically, of Christ and the testimony concerning Him; here the distinction between petra, concerning the Lord Himself, and Petros, the apostle, is clear (see above).¶

2. spilas (σπιλάς, 4694), "a rock or reef," over which the sea dashes, is used in Jude 12, "hidden rocks," RV, metaphorical of men whose conduct is a danger to others.¶ A late meaning ascribed to it is that of "spots," (KJV), but that rendering seems to have been influenced by the parallel passage in 2 Pet. 2:13, where spiloi, "spots," occurs.

petrōdēs (πετρώδης, 4075), "rock-like" (petra, "a rock," eidos, "a form, appearance"), is used of "rock" underlying shallow soil, Matt. 13:5, 20, RV, "the rocky places" (KJV, "stony places"); Mark 4:5, RV, "the rocky ground" (KJV, "stony ground"); v. 16, RV, "rocky places" (KJV, "stony ground").¶

Note: In Acts 27:29, KJV, the phrase tracheis topoi, lit., "rough places," is translated "rocks" (RV, "rocky ground").

ROD

A. Noun.

rhabdos (ῥάβδος, 4464), "a staff, rod, scepter," is used (a) of Aaron's "rod," Heb. 9:4; (b) a staff used on a journey, Matt. 10:10, RV, "staff" (KJV, "staves"); so Luke 9:3; Mark 6:8, "staff"; Heb. 11:21, "staff"; (c) a ruler's staff, a "scepter," Heb. 1:8 (twice); elsewhere a "rod," Rev. 2:27; 12:5; 19:15; (d) a "rod" for chastisement (figuratively), 1 Cor. 4:21; (e) a measuring "rod," Rev. 11:1. See STAFF.¶

B. Verb.

rhabdizō (ῥαβδίζω, 4463), "to beat with a rod," is used in Acts 16:22, RV, "to beat ... with rods"; 2 Cor. 11:25. The "rods" were those of the Roman lictors or "sergeants" (rhabdouchoi, lit., "rodbearers"); the Roman beating with "rods" is distinct from the Jewish infliction of stripes.¶ In the Sept., Jud., 6:11; Ruth 2:17.¶

nymy, that which is broken, "a ruin," Luke 6:49.¶

2. katestrammena (κατεστραμμένα, 2690), the neuter plural, perfect participle, passive, of katastrephō, "to overturn," is translated "ruins" in Acts 15:16; cf. DIG, No. 3. See OVERTHROW.

RULE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. archē (ἀρχή, 746), "a beginning," etc., denotes "rule," Luke 20:20, RV, "rule" (KJV, "power"); 1 Cor. 15:24; Eph. 1:21, RV, "rule" (KJV, "principality"). See BEGINNING, B.

2. kanōn (κανών, 2583) is translated "rule" in the KJV of 2 Cor. 10:13, 15; in Gal. 6:16, KJV and RV; in Phil. 3:16, KJV (RV, in italics): see PROVINCE, No. 2.

B. Verbs.

1. archō (ἄρχω, 756), (akin to A, No. 1), in the active voice denotes "to rule," Mark 10:42 and Rom. 15:12, RV, "to rule" (KJV, "to reign"). See BEGIN, A, No. 1.

2. oikodespoteō (οἰκοδεσποτέω, 3616), from oikos, "a house," and despotēs, "a master," signifies "to rule the household"; so the RV in 1 Tim. 5:14 (KJV, "guide the house"). See GUIDE, B, Note (1).¶ Cf. oikodespotēs, "a householder."

3. proistēmi (προΐστημι, 4291), lit., "to stand before," hence, "to lead, attend to" (indicating care and diligence), is translated "to rule" (middle voice), with reference to a local church, in Rom. 12:8; perfect active in 1 Tim. 5:17; with reference to a family, 1 Tim. 3:4 and 12 (middle voice); v. 5 (2nd aorist, active). See MAINTAIN.

4. hēgeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), "to lead," is translated "to rule" in Heb. 13:7, 17, 24 (KJV marg., in the first two, "are the guides" and "guide."

5. poimaino (ποιμαίνω, 4165), "to act as a shepherd, tend flocks," is translated "to rule" in Rev. 2:27; 12:5; 19:15, all indicating that the governing power exercised by the Shepherd is to be of a firm character; in Matt. 2:6, KJV, "shall rule" (RV, "shall be shepherd of"). See FEED.

6. brabeuō (βραβεύω, 1018), properly, "to act as an umpire" (brabeus), hence, generally, "to arbitrate, decide," Col. 3:15, "rule" (RV, marg., "arbitrate"), representing "the peace of Christ" (RV) as deciding all matters in the hearts of believers; some regard the meaning as that of simply directing, controlling, "ruling."¶ Cf. katabrabeuō; see ROB.

RULER

1. archōn (ἄρχων, 758), "a ruler, chief, prince," is translated "rulers," e.g., in 1 Cor. 2:6, 8, RV (KJV, "princes"); "ruler," Rev. 1:5 (KJV, "prince"). See MAGISTRATE, PRINCE, No. 2.

2. archē (ἀρχή, 746), "a rule, sovereignty," is rendered "rulers" in Luke 12:11, RV (KJV, "magistrates"). See BEGINNING.

3. kosmokratōr (κοσμοκράτωρ, 2888) denotes "a ruler of this world" (contrast pantokratōr, "almighty"). In Greek literature, in Orphic hymns, etc., and in rabbinic writings, it signifies a "ruler" of the whole world, a world lord. In the NT it is used in Eph. 6:12, "the world rulers (of this darkness)," RV, KJV, "the rulers (of the darkness) of this world." The context ("not against flesh and blood") shows that not earthly potentates are indicated, but spirit powers, who, under the permissive will of God, and in consequence of human sin, exercise satanic and therefore antagonistic authority over the world in its present condition of spiritual darkness and alienation from God. The suggested rendering "the rulers of this dark world" is ambiguous and not phraseologically requisite. Cf. John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4.¶

4. politarchēs (πολιτάρχης, 4173), "a ruler of a city" (polis, "a city," archō, "to rule"), "a politarch," is used in Acts 17:6, 8, of the magistrates in Thessalonica, before whom the Jews, with a mob of market idlers, dragged Jason and other converts, under the charge of showing hospitality to Paul and Silas, and of treasonable designs against the emperor. Thessalonica was a "free" city and the citizens could choose their own politarchs. The accuracy of Luke has been vindicated by the use of the term, for while classical authors use the terms poliarchos and politarchos of similar "rulers," the form used by Luke is supported by inscriptions discovered at Thessalonica, one of which mentions Sosipater, Secundus, and Gaius among the politarchs, names occurring as those of Paul's companions. Prof. Burton of Chicago, in a paper on "The Politarchs," has recorded 17 inscriptions which attest their existence, thirteen of which belong to Macedonia and five presumably to Thessalonica itself, illustrating the influence of Rome in the municipal organization of the place.¶

5. architriklinos (ἀρχιτρίκλινος, 755) denotes "the superintendent of a banquet," whose duty lay in arranging the tables and food (archē, "ruler," triklinos, lit., "a room with three couches"), John 2:8, 9.¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 13:9 and Luke 21:12, KJV, hēgemōn, "a leader, a governor of a province," is translated "ruler" (RV, "governor"). See GOV-ERNOR, PRINCE, No. 3. (2) For "ruler" of the synagogue, see SYNAGOGUE. (3) In Matt. 24:45, KJV, kathistēmi, "to appoint," is translated "hath made ruler" (RV, "hath set"); so in v. 47; 25:21, 23; Luke 12:42, 44.

RUMOR

1. akoē (ἀκοή, 189), "a hearing," is translated "rumor" in Matt. 24:6; Mark 13:7. See HEARING, B, No. 1.

2. ēchos (ἦχος, 2279), "a noise, sound," is translated "rumor" in Luke 4:37, RV (KJV, "fame"). See ROAR, SOUND.

Note: In Luke 7:17, KJV, logos, "a word," is translated "rumor" (RV, "report").

RUN, RAN

1. trechō (τρέχω, 5143), "to run," is used (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 27:48 (dramōn, an aorist participle, from an obsolete verb dramō, but supplying certain forms absent from trechō, lit., "having run, running," expressive of the decisiveness of the act); the same form in the indicative mood is used, e.g., in Matt. 28:8; in the Gospels the literal meaning alone is used; elsewhere in 1 Cor. 9:24 (twice in 1st part); Rev. 9:9, KJV, "running" (RV, "rushing"); (b) metaphorically, from the illustration of "runners" in a race, of either swiftness or effort to attain an end, Rom. 9:16, indicating that salvation is not due to human effort, but to God's sovereign right to exercise mercy; 1 Cor. 9:24 (2nd part), and v. 26, of persevering activity in the Christian course with a view to obtaining the reward; so Heb. 12:1; in Gal. 2:2 (1st part), RV, "(lest) I should be running," continuous present tense, referring to the activity of the special service of his mission to Jerusalem; (2nd part), "had run," aorist tense, expressive of the continuous past, referring to the activity of his antagonism to the Judaizing teachers at Antioch, and his consent to submit the case to the judgment of the church in Jerusalem; in 5:7 of the erstwhile faithful course doctrinally of the Galatian believers; in Phil. 2:16, of the apostle's manner of life among the Philippian believers; in 2 Thess. 3:1, of the free and rapid progress of "the word of the Lord."

2. prostrechō (προστρέχω, 4370), "to run to" (pros, "to," and No. 1), is used in Mark 9:15; 10:17; Acts 8:30.¶

3. peritrechō (περιτρέχω, 4063), "to run about" (peri "around," and No. 1), is used in Mark 6:55, RV, "ran round about" (KJV, "ran through).¶

4. suntrechō (συντρέχω, 4936), "to run together with" (sun, "with"), is used (a) literally, Mark 6:33; Acts 3:11; (b) metaphorically, 1 Pet. 4:4, of "running" a course of evil with others.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 50:18.¶

5. protrechō (προτρέχω, 4390), "to run before," Luke 19:4: see OUTRUN.

6. eistrechō (εἰστρέχω, 1532), "to run in" (eis, "in"), occurs in Acts 12:14.¶

7. hupotrechō (ὑποτρέχω, 5295), "to run under" (hupo, "under"), is used nautically in Acts 27:16.¶

8. episuntrechō (ἐπισυντρέχω, 1998), "to run together again" (epi, "upon, or again," and No. 4), occurs in Mark 9:25.¶

9. ekchunnō or ekchunō (ἐκχύννω, 1632), "to shed," is translated "ran riotously" in Jude 11, RV (KJV, "ran greedily"). See RIOTOUSLY, Note. See SHED, SPILL.

10. huperekchunnō (ὑπερεκχύννω, 5240), a late form of huperekcheō, "to overflow," is rendered "running over" in Luke 6:38.¶

11. epikellō or epokellō (ἐπικέλλω, 2207), "to drive upon," is used in Acts 27:41 of "running" a ship ashore.¶

Notes: (1) Hormaō, "to set in motion, urge on," but intransitively, "to hasten on, rush," is always translated "to rush" in the RV; KJV, "ran violently," Matt. 8:32; Mark 5:13; Luke 8:33; "ran," Acts 7:57; "rushed", 19:29. See RUSH.¶ (2) In Acts 21:30, sundromē, "a running together," with ginomai, "to become, take place," is translated "ran together," lit., "a running together took place." (3) In Matt. 9:17, KJV, ekcheō, "to pour out," used in the passive voice (RV, "is spilled"), is translated "runneth out." (4) In Acts 14:14, RV, ekpēdaō, "to spring forth," is translated "sprang forth" (this verb is found in the papyri); the KJV, "ran in" translates the mss. which have eispēdaō, "to spring in." (5) Katatrechō, "to run down," occurs in Acts 21:32.¶

RUSH, RUSHING

1. hormaō (ὁρμάω, 3729), for which see RUN, Note (1), with refs., is akin to hormē (see ASSAULT) and hormēma, "a rushing" (see VIOLENCE).

2. pherō (φέρω, 5342), "to bear," is used in the present participle, passive voice, in Acts 2:2, and translated "rushing," RV, "the rushing (of a mighty wind)," KJV "a rushing (mighty wind)" lit "a violent wind borne (along)."

3. trechō (τρέχω, 5143), "to run," is translated "rushing (to war)" in Rev. 9:9, RV, KJV, "running (to battle)."

RUST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. brōsis (βρῶσις, 1035), "an eating" (akin to bibrōskō, "to eat"), is used metaphorically to denote "rust" in Matt. 6:19, 20. See EAT, B, No. 1, FOOD, MEAT, MORSEL.

2. ios (ἰός, 2447), "poison," denotes "rust" in Jas. 5:3. See POISON.

B. Verb.

katioō (κατιόω, 2728), an intensive form of ioō, "to poison" (akin to A, No. 2), strengthened by kata, "down," "to rust over," and in the passive voice, "to become rusted over," occurs in Jas. 5:3, RV, "are rusted" (KJV, "are cankered").¶ Cf. gangraina, "a gangrene," 2 Tim. 2:17, RV.¶

sabachthanei (σαβαχθανεί, 4518), an Aramaic word signifying "Thou hast forsaken Me," is recorded as part of the utterance of Christ on the cross, Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34, a quotation from Ps. 22:1. Recently proposed renderings which differ from those of the KJV and RV have not been sufficiently established to require acceptance.

sabaōth (σαβαώθ, 4519) is the transliteration of a Hebrew word which denotes "hosts" or "armies," Rom. 9:29; Jas. 5:4.¶ While the word "hosts" probably had special reference to angels, the title "the LORD of hosts" became used to designate Him as the One who is supreme over all the innumerable hosts of spiritual agencies, or of what are described as "the armies of heaven." Eventually it was used as equivalent to "the LORD all-sovereign." In the prophetical books of the OT the Sept. sometimes has Kurios Sabaōth as the equivalent of "the LORD of hosts," sometimes Kurios Pantokratōr, in Job, it uses Pantokratōr to render the Hebrew divine title Shadday (see ALMIGHTY).

SABBATH

1. sabbaton (σάββατον, 4521) or sabbata: the latter, the plural form, was transliterated from the Aramaic word, which was mistaken for a plural; hence the singular, sabbaton, was formed from it. The root means "to cease, desist" (Heb., shābath; cf. Arab., sabata, "to intercept, interrupt"); the doubled b has an intensive force, implying a complete cessation or a making to cease, probably the former. The idea is not that of relaxation or refreshment, but cessation from activity.

The observation of the seventh day of the week, enjoined upon Israel, was a sign between God and His earthly people, based upon the fact that after the six days of creative operations He rested, Exod. 31:16, 17, with 20:8–11. The OT regulations were developed and systematized to such an extent that they became a burden upon the people (who otherwise rejoiced in the rest provided) and a byword for absurd extravagance. Two treatises of the Mishna (the Shabbāth and Ērūbin) are entirely occupied with regulations for the observance; so with the discussions in the Gemara, on rabbinical opinions. The effect upon current opinion explains the antagonism roused by the Lord's cures wrought on the "Sabbath," e.g., Matt. 12:9–13; John 5:5–16, and explains the fact that on a "Sabbath" the sick were brought to be healed after sunset, e.g., Mark 1:32. According to rabbinical ideas, the disciples, by plucking ears of corn (Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23), and rubbing them (Luke 6:1), broke the "sabbath" in two respects; for to pluck was to reap, and to rub was to thresh. The Lord's attitude towards the "sabbath" was by way of freeing it from these vexatious traditional accretions by which it was made an end in itself, instead of a means to an end (Mark 2:27).

In the Epistles the only direct mentions are in Col. 2:16, "a sabbath day," RV (which rightly has the singular, see 1st parag., above), where it is listed among things that were "a shadow of the things to come" (i.e., of the age introduced at Pentecost), and in Heb. 4:4–11, where the perpetual sabbatismos is appointed for believers (see REST); inferential references are in Rom. 14:5 and Gal. 4:9–11. For the first three centuries of the Christian era the first day of the week was never confounded with the "sabbath"; the confusion of the Jewish and Christian institutions was due to declension from apostolic teaching.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 12:1 and 11, where the plural is used, the KJV (as the RV) rightly has the singular, "the sabbath day"; in v. 5 the KJV has the plural (see above). Where the singular is used the RV omits the word "day," v. 2; 24:20; Mark 6:2; Luke 6:1 ("on a sabbath"); 14:3; John 9:14 ("it was the sabbath on the day when . . . "). As to the use or omission of the article the omission does not always require the rendering "a sabbath"; it is absent, e.g., in Matt. 12:2. (2) In Acts 16:13, "on the sabbath day," is, lit., "on the day of the sabbath" (plural). (3) For Matt. 28:1, see LATE. (4) For "the first day of the week" see ONE, A, (5).

2. prosabbaton (προσάββατον, 4315) signifies "the day before the sabbath" (pro, "before," and No. 1), Mark 15:42; some mss. have prin, "before," with sabbaton separately).¶

sakkos (σάκκος, 4526), "a warm material woven from goat's or camel's hair," and hence of a dark color, Rev. 6:12; Jerome renders it saccus cilicinus (being made from the hair of the black goat of Cilicia; the Romans called it cilicium); cf. Isa. 50:3; it was also used for saddlecloths, Josh. 9:4; also for making sacks, e.g., Gen. 42:25, and for garments worn as expressing mourning or penitence, Matt. 11:21; Luke 10:13, or for purposes of prophetic testimony, Rev. 11:3.¶

hieros (ἱερός, 2413) denotes "consecrated to God," e.g., the Scriptures, 2 Tim. 3:15, RV, "sacred" (KJV "holy"); it is used as a noun in the neuter plural in 1 Cor. 9:13, RV, "sacred things" (KJV, "holy things").¶ The neuter singular, hieron, denotes "a temple." See TEMPLE. For a comparison of this and synonymous terms see HOLY, B, No. 1 (b) and Note (2).

SACRIFICE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

thusia (θυσία, 2378) primarily denotes "the act of offering"; then, objectively, "that which is offered" (a) of idolatrous "sacrifice," Acts 7:41; (b) of animal or other "sacrifices," as offered under the Law, Matt. 9:13; 12:7; Mark 9:49; 12:33; Luke 2:24; 13:1; Acts 7:42; 1 Cor. 10:18; Heb. 5:1; 7:27 (RV, plural); 8:3; 9:9; 10:1, 5, 8 (RV, plural), 11; 11:4; (c) of Christ, in His "sacrifice" on the cross, Eph. 5:2; Heb. 9:23, where the plural antitypically comprehends the various forms of Levitical "sacrifices" in their typical character; 9:26; 10:12, 26; (d) metaphorically, (1) of the body of the believer, presented to God as a living "sacrifice," Rom. 12:1; (2) of faith, Phil. 2:17; (3) of material assistance rendered to servants of God, Phil. 4:18; (4) of praise, Heb. 13:15; (5) of doing good to others and communicating with their needs, Heb. 13:16; (6) of spiritual "sacrifices" in general, offered by believers as a holy priesthood, 1 Pet. 2:5.¶

B. Verb.

thuō (θύω, 2380) is used of "sacrificing by slaying a victim," (a) of the "sacrifice" of Christ, 1 Cor. 5:7, RV, "hath been sacrificed" (KJV, "is sacrificed"); (b) of the Passover "sacrifice," Mark 14:12, RV, "they sacrificed" (KJV, "they killed"); Luke 22:7, RV, "(must) be sacrificed," KJV, "(must) be killed"; (c) of idolatrous "sacrifices," Acts 14:13, 18; 1 Cor. 10:20 (twice). See KILL, No. 3.

SAFE, SAFELY, SAFETY

A. Adjective.

asphalēs (ἀσφαλής, 804), "certain, secure, safe" (from a, negative, and sphallō, "to trip up"), is translated "safe" in Phil. 3:1. See CERTAIN, B.

B. Nouns.

1. asphaleia (ἀσφάλεια, 803), "certainty, safety" (akin to A), is translated "safety" in Acts 5:23; 1 Thess. 5:3. See CERTAIN, A.

2. sōtēria (σωτηρία, 4991), "salvation," is translated "safety" in Acts 27:34, RV (KJV, "health"). See HEALTH, Note.

C. Adverb.

asphalōs (ἀσφαλῶς, 806), "safely" (akin to A, and B, No. 1), is so rendered in Mark 14:44 and Acts 16:23. See ASSURANCE, C. In the Sept., Gen. 34:25.¶

D. Verbs.

1. diasōzō (διασώζω, 1295), "to bring safely through danger," and, in the passive voice, "to come safe through" (dia, "through," sōzō, "to save"), is translated "bring safe" in Acts 23:24; "escaped safe" in 27:44. See ESCAPE, HEAL, SAVE, WHOLE.

2. hugiainō (ὑγιαίνω, 5198), "to be sound, healthy" (Eng., "hygiene," etc.), is translated "safe and sound" in Luke 15:27, lit., "being healthy." See HEALTH, SOUND, WHOLE.

For SAIL (Noun, Acts 27:17, KJV) see GEAR

SAIL (Verb)

1. pleō (πλέω, 4126), "to sail," occurs in Luke 8:23; Acts 21:3; 27:2, 6, 24; Rev. 18:17, RV, "saileth" (for the KJV see COMPANY, A, No. 7).¶

2. apopleō (ἀποπλέω, 636), "to sail away" (apo, "from," and No. 1), occurs in Acts 13:4; 14:26; 20:15; 27:1.¶

3. ekpleō (ἐκπλέω, 1602), "to sail from or thence" (ek, "from"), occurs in Acts 15:39; 18:18; 20:6.¶

4. parapleō (παραπλέω, 3896), "to sail by" (para), occurs in Acts 20:16.¶

5. diapleō (διαπλέω, 1277), "to sail across" (dia, "through"), occurs in Acts 27:5.¶

6. hupopleō (ὑποπλέω, 5284), "to sail under" (hupo), i.e., "under the lee of," occurs in Acts 27:4, 7.¶

7. anagō (ἀνάγω, 321), "to lead up," is used of "putting to sea," Acts 13:13; 16:11; 18:21; 20:3, 13; 21:1; 27:21; 28:10, 11; see LAUNCH.

8. paralegō (παραλέγω, 3881), "to lay beside" (para), is used in the middle voice, of "sailing past" in Acts 27:8, RV, "coasting along" (KJV, "passing"); v. 13, RV, "sailed along" (KJV, "sailed").¶

9. diaperaō (διαπεράω, 1276), "to cross over," is translated "sailing over" in Acts 21:2, KJV (RV, "crossing over"). See PASS.

10. braduploeō (βραδυπλοέω, 1020), "to sail slowly" (bradus, "slow," plous, "a voyage"), occurs in Acts 27:7.¶

hagios (ἅγιος, 40), for the meaning and use of which see HOLY, B, No. 1, is used as a noun in the singular in Phil. 4:21, where pas, "every," is used with it. In the plural, as used of believers, it designates all such and is not applied merely to persons of exceptional holiness, or to those who, having died, were characterized by exceptional acts of "saintliness." See especially 2 Thess. 1:10, where "His saints" are also described as "them that believed," i.e., the whole number of the redeemed. They are called "holy ones" in Jude 14, RV. For the term as applied to the Holy Spirit see HOLY SPIRIT. See also SANCTIFY.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 15:3 the RV follows those texts which have aiōnōn, "ages," and assigns the reading ethnōn, "nations," to the margin; the KJV translates those which have the inferior reading hagiōn, "saints," and puts "nations" and "ages" in the margin. (2) In Rev. 18:20, the best texts have hagioi and apostoloi, each with the article, each being preceeded by kai, "and," RV, "and ye saints, and ye apostles"; the KJV, "and ye holy apostles" follows those mss. from which the 2nd kai and the article are absent. (3) In Rev. 22:21, the RV follows those mss. which have hagiōn, with the article,"(with) the saints"; the KJV those which simply have pantōn, "all," but adds "you" (RV, marg., "with all").

SALT (Noun, Adjective and Verb), SALTNESS

halas (ἅλας, 251), a late form of hals (found in some mss. in Mark 9:49), is used (a) literally in Matt. 5:13 (2nd part); Mark 9:50 (1st part, twice); Luke 14:34 (twice); (b) metaphorically, of "believers," Matt. 5:13 (1st part); of their "character and condition," Mark 9:50 (2nd part); of "wisdom" exhibited in their speech, Col. 4:6.¶

Being possessed of purifying, perpetuating and antiseptic qualities, "salt" became emblematic of fidelity and friendship among eastern nations. To eat of a person's "salt" and so to share his hospitality is still regarded thus among the Arabs. So in Scripture, it is an emblem of the covenant between God and His people, Num. 18:19; 2 Chron. 13:5; so again when the Lord says "Have salt in yourselves, and be at peace one with another" (Mark 9:50). In the Lord's teaching it is also symbolic of that spiritual health and vigor essential to Christian virtue and counteractive of the corruption that is in the world, e.g., Matt. 5:13, see (b) above. Food is seasoned with "salt" (see B); every meal offering was to contain it, and it was to be offered with all offerings presented by Israelites, as emblematic of the holiness of Christ, and as betokening the reconciliation provided for man by God on the ground of the death of Christ, Lev. 2:13. To refuse God's provision in Christ and the efficacy of His expiatory sacrifice is to expose oneself to the doom of being "salted with fire," Mark 9:49.

While "salt" is used to fertilize soil, excess of it on the ground produces sterility (e.g., Deut. 29:23; Judg. 9:45; Jer. 17:6; Zeph. 2:9).

B. Verb.

halizō (ἁλίζω, 233), akin to A, signifies "to sprinkle" or "to season with salt," Matt. 5:13; Mark 9:49 (see under A).¶ Cf. SAVOR, B.

C. Adjectives.

1. halukos (ἁλυκός, 252) occurs in Jas. 3:12, "salt (water)."¶

2. analos (ἄναλος, 358) denotes "saltless" (a, negative, n, euphonic, and A), insipid, Mark 9:50, "have lost its saltness," lit., "have become (ginomai) saltless (analos)"; cf. mōrainō in Luke 14:34 (see SAVOR, B).

For SALUTATION and SALUTE see GREET

SALVATION

A. Nouns.

1. sōtēria (σωτηρία, 4991) denotes "deliverance, preservation, salvation." "Salvation" is used in the NT (a) of material and temporal deliverance from danger and apprehension, (1) national, Luke 1:69, 71; Acts 7:25, RV marg., "salvation" (text, "deliverance"); (2) personal, as from the sea, Acts 27:34; RV, "safety" (KJV, "health"); prison, Phil. 1:19; the flood, Heb. 11:7; (b) of the spiritual and eternal deliverance granted immediately by God to those who accept His conditions of repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus, in whom alone it is to be obtained, Acts 4:12, and upon confession of Him as Lord, Rom. 10:10; for this purpose the gospel is the saving instrument, Rom. 1:16; Eph. 1:13 (see further under SAVE); (c) of the present experience of God's power to deliver from the bondage of sin, e.g., Phil. 2:12, where the special, though not the entire, reference is to the maintenance of peace and harmony; 1 Pet. 1:9; this present experience on the part of believers is virtually equivalent to sanctification; for this purpose, God is able to make them wise, 2 Tim. 3:15; they are not to neglect it, Heb. 2:3; (d) of the future deliverance of believers at the Parousia of Christ for His saints, a salvation which is the object of their confident hope, e.g., Rom. 13:11; 1 Thess. 5:8, and v. 9, where "salvation" is assured to them, as being deliverance from the wrath of God destined to be executed upon the ungodly at the end of this age (see 1 Thess. 1:10); 2 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 1:14; 9:28; 1 Pet. 1:5; 2 Pet. 3:15; (e) of the deliverance of the nation of Israel at the second advent of Christ at the time of "the epiphany (or shining forth) of His Parousia" (2 Thess. 2:8); Luke 1:71; Rev. 12:10; (f) inclusively, to sum up all the blessings bestowed by God on men in Christ through the Holy Spirit, e.g., 2 Cor. 6:2; Heb. 5:9; 1 Pet. 1:9, 10; Jude 3; (g) occasionally, as standing virtually for the Savior, e.g., Luke 19:9; cf. John 4:22 (see SAVIOR); (h) in ascriptions of praise to God, Rev. 7:10, and as that which it is His prerogative to bestow, 19:1 (RV).

2. sōtērion (σωτήριον, 4992), the neuter of the adjective (see B), is used as a noun in Luke 2:30; 3:6, in each of which it virtually stands for the Savior, as in No. 1 (g); in Acts 28:28, as in No. 1 (b); in Eph. 6:17, where the hope of "salvation" [see No. 1 (d)] is metaphorically described as "a helmet."¶

sōtērios (σωτήριος, 4992), "saving, bringing salvation," describes the grace of God, in Titus 2:11.¶

SAME

1. autos (αὐτός, 846) denotes "the same" when preceded by the article, and either with a noun following, e.g., Mark 14:39; Phil 1:30; 1 Cor. 12:4, or without, e.g., Matt. 5:46, 47; Rom. 2:1; Phil. 2:2; 3:1; Heb. 1:12; 13:8. It is thus to be distinguished from uses as a personal and a reflexive pronoun.

2. houtos (οὗτος, 3778), "this" (person or thing), or "he" (and the feminine and neuter forms), is sometimes translated "the same," e.g., John 3:2, 26; 7:18; Jas. 3:2; sometimes the RV translates it by "this" or "these," e.g., John 12:21, "these" (KJV, "the same"); 2 Cor. 8:6, "this" (KJV, "the same").

SANCTIFICATION, SANCTIFY

hagiasmos (ἁγιασμός, 38), "sanctification," is used of (a) separation to God, 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2; (b) the course of life befitting those so separated, 1 Thess. 4:3, 4, 7; Rom. 6:19, 22; 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 12:14.¶ "Sanctification is that relationship with God into which men enter by faith in Christ, Acts 26:18; 1 Cor. 6:11, and to which their sole title is the death of Christ, Eph. 5:25, 26; Col. 1:22; Heb. 10:10, 29; 13:12.

"Sanctification is also used in NT of the separation of the believer from evil things and ways. This sanctification is God's will for the believer, 1 Thess. 4:3, and His purpose in calling him by the gospel, v. 7; it must be learned from God, v. 4, as He teaches it by His Word, John 17:17, 19; cf. Ps. 17:4; 119:9, and it must be pursued by the believer, earnestly and undeviatingly, 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 12:14. For the holy character, hagiōsunē, 1 Thess. 3:13, is not vicarious, i.e., it cannot be transferred or imputed, it is an individual possession, built up, little by little, as the result of obedience to the Word of God, and of following the example of Christ, Matt. 11:29; John 13:15; Eph. 4:20; Phil. 2:5, in the power of the Holy Spirit, Rom. 8:13; Eph. 3:16.

"The Holy Spirit is the Agent in sanctification, Rom. 15:16; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2; cf. 1 Cor. 6:11.... The sanctification of the Spirit is associated with the choice, or election, of God; it is a Divine act preceding the acceptance of the Gospel by the individual."*

For synonymous words see HOLINESS.

B. Verb.

hagiazō (ἁγιάζω, 37), "to sanctify," "is used of (a) the gold adorning the Temple and of the gift laid on the altar, Matt. 23:17, 19; (b) food, 1 Tim. 4:5; (c) the unbelieving spouse of a believer, 1 Cor. 7:14; (d) the ceremonial cleansing of the Israelites, Heb. 9:13; (e) the Father's Name, Luke 11:2; (f) the consecration of the Son by the Father, John 10:36; (g) the Lord Jesus devoting Himself to the redemption of His people, John 17:19; (h) the setting apart of the believer for God, Acts 20:32; cf. Rom. 15:16; (i) the effect on the believer of the Death of Christ, Heb. 10:10, said of God, and 2:11; 13:12, said of the Lord Jesus; (j) the separation of the believer from the world in his behavior—by the Father through the Word, John 17:17, 19; (k) the believer who turns away from such things as dishonor God and His gospel, 2 Tim. 2:21; (1) the acknowledgment of the Lordship of Christ, 1 Pet. 3:15.

"Since every believer is sanctified in Christ Jesus, 1 Cor. 1:2, cf. Heb. 10:10, a common NT designation of all believers is 'saints,' hagioi, i.e., 'sanctified' or 'holy ones.' Thus sainthood, or sanctification, is not an attainment, it is the state into which God, in grace, calls sinful men, and in which they begin their course as Christians, Col. 3:12; Heb. 3:1."† hagion (ἅγιον, 39), the neuter of the adjective hagios, "holy," is used of those structures which are set apart to God, (a) of "the tabernacle" in the wilderness, Heb. 9:1, RV, "its sanctuary, a sanctuary of this world" (KJV, "a worldly sanctuary"); in v. 2 the outer part is called "the Holy place," RV (KJV, "the sanctuary"); here the neuter plural hagia is used, as in v. 3.

Speaking of the absence of the article, Westcott says "The anarthrous form Ἅγια (literally Holies) in this sense appears to be unique, as also ἅγια ἁγίων below, if indeed the reading is correct. Perhaps it is chosen to fix attention on the character of the sanctuary as in other cases. The plural suggests the idea of the sanctuary with all its parts: cf. Moulton-Winer, p. 220." In their margin, Westcott and Hort prefix the article ta to hagia in vv. 2 and 3. In v. 3 the inner part is called "the Holy of holies," RV (KJV, "the holiest of all"); in v. 8, "the holy place" (KJV, "the holiest of all"), lit., "(the way) of the holiest"; in v. 24 "a holy place," RV (KJV, "the holy places"), neuter plural; so in v. 25, "the holy place" (KJV and RV), and in 13:11, RV, "the holy place" (KJV, "the sanctuary"); in all these there is no separate word topos, "place," as of the Temple in Matt. 24:15; (b) of "Heaven itself," i.e., the immediate presence of God and His throne, Heb. 8:2, "the sanctuary" (RV, marg., "holy things"); the neut. plur. with the article points to the text as being right, in view of 9:24, 25 and 13:11 (see above), exegetically designated "the true tabernacle"; neut. plur. in 9:12, "the holy place"; so 10:19, RV (KJV, "the holiest"; there are no separate compartments in the antitypical and heavenly sanctuary), into which believers have "boldness to enter" by faith.¶

2. naos (ναός, 3485) is used of the inner part of the Temple in Jerusalem, in Matt. 23:35, RV, "sanctuary." See TEMPLE.

ammos (ἄμμος, 285), "sand" or "sandy ground," describes (a) an insecure foundation, Matt. 7:26; (b) numberlessness, vastness, Rom. 9:27; Heb. 11:12; Rev. 20:8; (c) symbolically in Rev. 13:1, RV, the position taken up by the Dragon (not, as in the KJV, by John), in view of the rising of the Beast out of the sea (emblematic of the restless condition of nations; see SEA).¶

sandalion (σανδάλιον, 4547), a diminutive of sandalon, probably a Persian word, Mark 6:9; Acts 12:8. The "sandal" usually had a wooden sole bound on by straps round the instep and ankle.¶

sappheiros (σάπφειρος, 4552) is mentioned in Rev. 21:19 (RV, marg., "lapis lazuli") as the second of the foundations of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem (cf. Isa. 54:11).¶ It was one of the stones in the high priest's breastplate, Exod. 28:18; 39:11; as an intimation of its value see Job 28:16; Ezek. 28:13. See also Exod. 24:10; Ezek. 1:26; 10:1. The "sapphire" has various shades of blue and ranks next in hardness to the diamond.

sardion or sardinos (σάρδιον, 4555) denotes "the sardian stone." Sardius is the word in the best texts in Rev. 4:3 (RV, "a sardius"), where it formed part of the symbolic appearance of the Lord on His throne, setting forth His glory and majesty in view of the judgment to follow. There are two special varieties, one a yellowish brown, the other a transparent red (like a cornelian). The beauty of the stone, its transparent brilliance, the high polish of which it is susceptible, made it a favorite among the ancients. It forms the sixth foundation of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.¶

sardonux (σαρδόνυξ, 4557), a name which indicates the formation of the gem, a layer of sard, and a layer of onyx, marked by the red of the sard and the white of the onyx. It was used among the Romans both for cameos and for signets. It forms the fifth foundation of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.¶

satanas (Σατανᾶς, 4567), a Greek form derived from the Aramaic (Heb., Sātān), "an adversary," is used (a) of an angel of Jehovah in Num. 22:22 (the first occurrence of the Word in the OT); (b) of men, e.g., 1 Sam. 29:4; Ps. 38:20; 71:13; four in Ps. 109; (c) of "Satan," the Devil, some seventeen or eighteen times in the OT; in Zech. 3:1, where the name receives its interpretation, "to be (his) adversary," RV (see marg.; KJV, "to resist him").

In the NT the word is always used of "Satan," the adversary (a) of God and Christ, e.g., Matt. 4:10; 12:26; Mark 1:13; 3:23, 26; 4:15; Luke 4:8 (in some mss.); 11:18; 22:3; John 13:27; (b) of His people, e.g., Luke 22:31; Acts 5:3; Rom. 16:20; 1 Cor. 5:5; 7:5; 2 Cor. 2:11; 11:14; 12:7; 1 Thess. 2:18; 1 Tim. 1:20; 5:15; Rev. 2:9, 13 (twice), 24; 3:9; (c) of mankind, Luke 13:16; Acts 26:18; 2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 12:9; 20:7.

His doom, sealed at the Cross, is foretold in its stages in Luke 10:18; Rev. 20:2, 10. Believers are assured of victory over him, Rom. 16:20.

The appellation was given by the Lord to Peter, as a "Satan-like" man, on the occasion when he endeavored to dissuade Him from death, Matt. 16:23; Mark 8:33.¶

"Satan" is not simply the personification of evil influences in the heart, for he tempted Christ, in whose heart no evil thought could ever have arisen (John 14:30; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15); moreover his personality is asserted in both the OT and the NT, and especially in the latter, whereas if the OT language was intended to be figurative, the NT would have made this evident. See DEVIL.

SATISFY

1. chortazō (χορτάζω, 5526), "to fill or satisfy with food," is translated "satisfy" in Mark 8:4, KJV (RV, "to fill"). See FILL, No. 8.

2. empiplēmi or emplēthō (ἐμπίπλημι, 1705), "to fill up, fill full, satisfy" (en, "in," pimplēmi or plēthō, "to fill"), is used metaphorically in Rom. 15:24, of taking one's fill of the company of others, RV, "I shall have been satisfied" (KJV, "I be . . . filled"). See FILL, No. 6.

For SATISFYING, Col. 2:23, KJV, see INDULGENCE

A. Verbs.

1. sōzō (σώζω, 4982), "to save," is used (as with the noun sōtēria, "salvation") (a) of material and temporal deliverance from danger, suffering, etc., e.g., Matt. 8:25; Mark 13:20; Luke 23:35; John 12:27; 1 Tim. 2:15; 2 Tim. 4:18 (KJV, "preserve"); Jude 5; from sickness, Matt. 9:22, "made . . . whole" (RV, marg., "saved"); so Mark 5:34; Luke 8:48; Jas. 5:15; (b) of the spiritual and eternal salvation granted immediately by God to those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, e.g., Acts 2:47, RV "(those that) were being saved"; 16:31; Rom. 8:24, RV, "were we saved"; Eph. 2:5, 8; 1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 3:5; of human agency in this, Rom. 11:14; 1 Cor. 7:16; 9:22; (c) of the present experiences of God's power to deliver from the bondage of sin, e.g., Matt. 1:21; Rom. 5:10; 1 Cor. 15:2; Heb. 7:25; Jas. 1:21; 1 Pet. 3:21; of human agency in this, 1 Tim. 4:16; (d) of the future deliverance of believers at the second coming of Christ for His saints, being deliverance from the wrath of God to be executed upon the ungodly at the close of this age and from eternal doom, e.g., Rom. 5:9; (e) of the deliverance of the nation of Israel at the second advent of Christ, e.g., Rom. 11:26; (f) inclusively for all the blessings bestowed by God on men in Christ, e.g., Luke 19:10; John 10:9; 1 Cor. 10:33; 1 Tim. 1:15; (g) of those who endure to the end of the time of the Great Tribulation, Matt. 10:22; Mark 13:13; (h) of the individual believer, who, though losing his reward at the judgment seat of Christ hereafter, will not lose his salvation, 1 Cor. 3:15; 5:5; (i) of the deliverance of the nations at the Millennium, Rev. 21:24 (in some mss.). See SALVATION.

2. diasōzō (διασώζω 1295), "to bring safely through" (dia, "through," and No. 1), is used (a) of the healing of the sick by the Lord, Matt. 14:36, RV, "were made whole" (KJV adds "perfectly"); Luke 7:3; (b) of bringing "safe" to a destination, Acts 23:24; (c) of keeping a person "safe," 27:43; (d) of escaping through the perils of shipwreck, 27:44; 28:1, 4, passive voice; (e) through the Flood, 1 Pet. 3:20. See ESCAPE, WHOLE.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:5, KJV, phulassō, "to guard, keep, preserve," is translated "saved" (RV, "preserved"). In Luke 17:33 some mss. have sōzō (KJV, "save"), for the RV: see GAIN, B, No. 3. For "save alive," Luke 17:33, RV, see LIVE, No. 6.

B. Noun.

peripoiēsis (περιποίησις, 4047), (a) "preservation," (b) "acquiring or gaining something," is used in this latter sense in Heb. 10:39, translated "saving" (RV marg., "gaining"); the reference here is to salvation in its completeness. See OBTAIN, POSSESSION.

Note: In Heb. 11:7 sōtēria is rendered saving. See SALVATION.

SAVING (Preposition)

parektos (παρεκτός, 3924), used as a preposition, denotes "saving," Matt. 5:32 (in some mss., 19:9). See EXCEPT.¶

Note: In Luke 4:27 and Rev. 2:17, KJV, ei mē (lit., "if not"), is translated "saving" (RV, "but only" and "but").

sōtēr (σωτήρ, 4990), "a savior, deliverer, preserver," is used (a) of God, Luke 1:47; 1 Tim. 1:1; 2:3; 4:10 (in the sense of "preserver," since He gives "to all life and breath and all things"); Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4; Jude 25; (b) of Christ, Luke 2:11; John 4:42; Acts 5:31; 13:23 (of Israel); Eph. 5:23 (the sustainer and preserver of the church, His "body"); Phil. 3:20 (at His return to receive the Church to Himself); 2 Tim. 1:10 (with reference to His incarnation, "the days of His flesh"); Titus 1:4 (a title shared, in the context, with God the Father); 2:13, RV, "our great God and Savior Jesus Christ," the pronoun "our," at the beginning of the whole clause, includes all the titles; Titus 3:6; 2 Pet. 1:1, "our God and Savior Jesus Christ; RV, where the pronoun "our," coming immediately in connection with "God," involves the inclusion of both titles as referring to Christ, just as in the parallel in v. 11, "our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (KJV and RV); these passages are therefore a testimony to His deity; 2 Pet. 2:20; 3:2, 18; 1 John 4:14.¶

SAVOR (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. euōdia (εὐωδία, 2175), "fragrance" (eu, "well," ozō, "to smell"), is used metaphorically (a) of those who in the testimony of the gospel are to God "a sweet savor of Christ," 2 Cor. 2:15; (b) of the giving up of His life by Christ for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for an odor (osmē, see No. 2) of "a sweet smell," Eph. 5:2, RV [KJV, "a sweet smelling (savor)"]; (c) of material assistance sent to Paul from the church at Philippi "(an odor) of a sweet smell," Phil. 4:18. In all three instances the fragrance is that which ascends to God through the person, and as a result of the sacrifice, of Christ.¶

2. osmē (ὀσμή, 3744), "a smell, odor" (from ozō, "to smell"; Eng., "ozone"), is translated "odor" in John 12:3; it is used elsewhere in connection with No. 1, in the three passages mentioned, as of an odor accompanying an acceptable sacrifice; in 2 Cor. 2:14, 16 (twice), of the "savor" of the knowledge of Christ through Gospel testimony, in the case of the perishing "a savor from death unto death," as of that which arises from what is dead (the spiritual condition of the unregenerate); in the case of the saved "a savor from life unto life," as from that which arises from what is instinct with life (the spiritual condition of the regenerate); in Eph. 5:2, "a (sweetsmelling) savor"; in Phil. 4:18, "an odor (of a sweet smell)"; cf. No. 1. See ODOR.¶

B. Verb.

mōrainō (μωραίνω, 3471), primarily, "to be foolish," is used of salt that has lost its "savor," Matt. 5:13; Luke 14:34. See FOOLISH, B, No. 1.

Note: In the KJV of Matt. 16:23 and Mark 8:33, phroneō, "to think, to mind," is translated "thou savorest" (RV, "thou mindest").

SAW ASUNDER

prizō or priō (πρίζω, 4249), "to saw asunder," occurs in Heb. 11:37. Some have seen here a reference to the tradition of Isaiah's martyrdom under Manasseh.¶ In the Sept., Amos 1:3.¶ Cf. diapriō, "to cut to the heart," Acts 5:33; 7:54.¶

SAY

1. legō (λέγω, 3004), primarily, "to pick out, gather," chiefly denotes "to say, speak, affirm," whether of actual speech, e.g., Matt. 11:17, or of unspoken thought, e.g., Matt. 3:9, or of a message in writing, e.g., 2 Cor. 8:8. The 2nd aorist form eipon is used to supply that tense, which is lacking in legō.

Concerning the phrase "he answered and said," it is a well known peculiarity of Hebrew narrative style that a speech is introduced, not simply by "and he said," but by prefixing "and he answered" (apokrinomai, with eipon). In Matt. 14:27, "saying," and Mark 6:50, "and saith," emphasis is perhaps laid on the fact that the Lord, hitherto silent as He moved over the lake, then addressed His disciples. That the phrase sometimes occurs where no explicit question has preceded (e.g., Matt. 11:25; 17:4; 28:5; Mark 11:14; 12:35; Luke 13:15; 14:3; John 5:17, 19), illustrates the use of the Hebrew idiom.

Note: A characteristic of legō is that it refers to the purport or sentiment of what is said as well as the connection of the words; this is illustrated in Heb. 8:1, RV, "(in the things which) we are saying," KJV, "(which) we have spoken." In comparison with laleō (No. 2), legō refers especially to the substance of what is "said," laleō, to the words conveying the utterance; see, e.g., John 12:49, "what I should say (legō, in the 2nd aorist subjunctive form eipō), and what I should speak (laleō)"; v. 50, "even as the Father hath said (legō, in the perfect form eirēke) unto Me, so I speak" (laleō); cf. 1 Cor. 14:34, "saith (legō) the law"; v. 35, "to speak" (laleō). Sometimes laleō signifies the utterance, as opposed to silence, legō declares what is "said"; e.g., Rom. 3:19, "what things soever the law saith (legō), it speaketh (laleō) to them that are under the law"; see also Mark 6:50; Luke 24:6. In the NT laleō never has the meaning "to chatter."

2. laleō (λαλέω, 2980), "to speak," is sometimes translated "to say"; in the following where the KJV renders it thus, the RV alters it to the verb "to speak," e.g., John 8:25 (3rd part), 26; 16:6; 18:20 (2nd part), 21 (1st part); Acts 3:22 (2nd part); 1 Cor. 9:8 (1st part); Heb. 5:5; in the following the RV uses the verb "to say," John 16:18; Acts 23:18 (2nd part); 26:22 (2nd part); Heb. 11:18. See Note above, and SPEAK, TALK, TELL, UTTER.

3. phēmi (φημί, 5346), "to declare, say," (a) is frequently used in quoting the words of another, e.g., Matt. 13:29; 26:61; (b) is interjected into the recorded words, e.g., Acts 23:35; (c) is used impersonally, 2 Cor. 10:10.

4. eirō (εἴρω, Fut. of 3004), an obsolete verb, has the future tense ereō, used, e.g., in Matt. 7:4; Luke 4:23 (2nd part); 13:25 (last part); Rom. 3:5; 4:1; 6:1; 7:7 (1st part); 8:31; 9:14, 19, 20, 30; 11:19; 1 Cor. 15:35; 2 Cor. 12:6; Jas. 2:18. The perfect is used, e.g., in John 12:50; see No. 1, Note. The 1st aorist passive, "it was said," is used in Rom. 9:12, 26; Rev. 6:11. See SPEAK, No. 13.

5. proeipon (προεῖπον, 4302) and proereō, "to say before," used as aorist and future respectively of prolegō (pro, "before," and No. 1), is used (a) of prophecy, e.g., Rom. 9:29; "to tell before," Matt. 24:25; Mark 13:23; "were spoken before," 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17; (b) of "saying" before, 2 Cor. 7:3; 13:2, RV (KJV, "to tell before" and "foretell"); Gal. 1:9; 5:21; in 1 Thess. 4:6, "we forewarned," RV. See FORETELL, FOREWARN, TELL.

6. anteipon (ἀντεῖπον, 473 and Aor. of 3004), "to say against" (anti, "against," and No. 1), is so rendered in Acts 4:14. See GAINSAY.

Notes: (1) Phaskō, "to affirm, assert," is translated "saying" in Acts 24:9, KJV (RV, "affirming"), and Rev. 2:2 in some mss. (KJV). See AFFIRM, No. 3. (2) In Acts 2:14, KJV, apophthengomai, "to speak forth" (RV), is rendered "said." (3) The phrase tout' esti (i.e., touto esti), "that is," is so translated in Matt. 27:46, RV (KJV, "that is to say"); so Acts 1:19; in Heb. 9:11 and 10:20, KJV and RV, "that is to say"; in Mark 7:11 the phrase is ho esti, lit., "which is"; the phrase ho legetai, lit., "which is said," John 1:38 and 20:16, is rendered "which is to say." (4) In Luke 7:40 and Acts 13:15, the imperative mood of eipon and legō, respectively, is rendered "say on." (5) In Mark 6:22, KJV, autēs, "herself," RV, is rendered "the said." (6) In Heb. 5:11, "we have many things to say" is, lit., "much (polus) is the word (or discourse, logos) for us."

SAYING

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word," as embodying a conception or idea, denotes among its various meanings, "a saying, statement or declaration," uttered (a) by God; RV, "word" or "words" (KJV, "saying"), e.g., in John 8:55; Rom. 3:4; Rev. 19:9; 22:6, 7, 9, 10; (b) by Christ, e.g., Mark 8:32; 9:10; 10:22; Luke 9:28; John 6:60; 21:23; the RV appropriately substitutes "word" or "words" for KJV, "saying" or "sayings," especially in John's gospel e.g. 7:36, 40; 8:51, 52; 10:19; 14:24; 15:20; 18:9, 32; 19:13; (c) by an angel, Luke 1:29; (d) by OT prophets, John 12:38 (RV, "word") Rom. 13:9 (ditto); 1 Cor. 15:54; (e) by the apostle Paul in the Pastoral Epp., 1 Tim. 1:15; 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 3:8; (f) by other men, Mark 7:29; Acts 7:29; John 4:37 (in general). See ACCOUNT, and especially WORD.

2. rhēma (ῥῆμα, 4487), "that which is said, a word," is rendered "saying" or "sayings" in Mark 9:32; Luke 1:65; 2:17, 50, 51; 7:1; 9:45 (twice); 18:34. See WORD.

Note: In Acts 14:18, "with these sayings" is, lit., "saying (legō) these things." For lalia, "saying," John 4:42, KJV, see SPEECH, No. 2.

SCALE

lepis (λεπίς, 3013), from lepō, "to peel," occurs in Acts 9:18.¶

For SCARCE, SCARCELY see DIFFICULTY

SCARLET

kokkinos (κόκκινος, 2847) is derived from kokkos, used of the "berries" (clusters of the eggs of an insect) collected from the ilex coccifera; the color, however, is obtained from the cochineal insect, which attaches itself to the leaves and twigs of the coccifera oak; another species is raised on the leaves of the cactus ficus. The Arabic name for this insect is qírmíz, whence the word "crimson." It is used (a) of "scarlet" wool, Heb. 9:19; cf., in connection with the cleansing of a leper, Lev. 14:4, 6, "scarlet"; with the offering of the red heifer, Num. 19:6; (b) of the robe put on Christ by the soldiers, Matt. 27:28; (c) of the "beast" seen in symbolic vision in Rev. 17:3, "scarlet-colored"; (d) of the clothing of the "woman" as seen sitting on the "beast," 17:4; (e) of part of the merchandise of Babylon, 18:12; (f) figuratively, of the glory of the city itself, 18:16; the neuter is used in the last three instances.¶

SCATTER

A. Verbs.

1. skorpizō (σκορπίζω, 4650) is used in Matt. 12:30; Luke 11:23; John 10:12; 16:32; 2 Cor. 9:9, RV. See DISPERSE, No. 2.¶

2. diaskorpizō (διασκορπίζω, 1287), "to scatter abroad," is rendered "to scatter" in Matt. 25:24, 26, RV (KJV, "strawed"); 26:31; Mark 14:27; Luke 1:51; John 11:52; Acts 5:37, RV. See DISPERSE, No. 3.

3. diaspeirō (διασπείρω, 1289), "to scatter abroad" (dia, "throughout," speirō, "to sow seed"), is used in Acts 8:1, 4; 11:19, all of the church in Jerusalem "scattered" through persecution; the word in general is suggestive of the effects of the "scattering" in the sowing of the spiritual seed of the Word of life. See DISPERSE, No. 4.¶

4. rhiptō (ῥίπτω, 4496), "to throw, cast, hurl, to be cast down, prostrate," is used in Matt. 9:36 of people who were "scattered" as sheep without a shepherd. See CAST, No. 2, THROW.

5. likmaō (λικμάω, 3039), "to winnow" (likmos, "a winnowing fan"), is rendered "will scatter... as dust" in Matt. 21:44 and Luke 20:18, RV (KJV, "will grind... to powder"). See GRIND, Note.¶

6. dialuō (διαλύω, 1262), "to dissolve," is translated "scattered" in Acts 5:36, KJV; see DISPERSE, No. 1.¶

B. Noun.

diaspora (διασπορά, 1290), "a dispersion," is rendered "scattered abroad" in Jas. 1:1, KJV; "scattered" in 1 Pet. 1:1, KJV; see DISPERSION, B.

For SCEPTRE see ROD

schisma (σχίσμα, 4978), "a rent, division," is translated "schism" in 1 Cor. 12:25, metaphorically of the contrary condition to that which God has designed for a local church in "tempering the body together" (v. 24), the members having "the same care one for another" ("the same" being emphatic). See DIVISION, No. 3, RENT.

scholē (σχολή, 4981) (whence Eng., "school") primarily denotes "leisure," then, "that for which leisure was employed, a disputation, lecture"; hence, by metonymy, "the place where lectures are delivered, a school," Acts 19:9.¶

For SCHOOLMASTER, Gal. 3:24, 25, see INSTRUCTOR, B, No. 1

gnōsis (γνῶσις, 1108) is translated "science" in the KJV of 1 Tim. 6:20; the word simply means "knowledge" (RV), where the reference is to the teaching of the Gnostics (lit., "the knowers") "falsely called knowledge." Science in the modern sense of the word, viz., the investigation, discovery, and classification of secondary laws, is unknown in Scripture. See KNOW, C, No. 1.

SCOFF

ekmuktērizō (ἐκμυκτηρίζω, 1592), "to hold up the nose in derision at" (ek, "from," used intensively, muktērizō, "to mock"; from muktēr, "the nose"), is translated "scoffed at" in Luke 16:14, RV (KJV, "derided"), of the Pharisees in their derision of Christ on account of His teaching; in 23:35 (ditto), of the mockery of Christ on the cross by the rulers of the people.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 2:4; 22:7; 35:16.¶

For SCOFFERS, 2 Pet. 3:3, KJV, see MOCKERS

SCORCH, SCORCHING

A. Verb.

kaumatizō (καυματίζω, 2739), "to scorch" (from kauma, "heat"), is used (a) of seed that had not much earth, Matt. 13:6; Mark 4:6; (b) of men, stricken retributively by the sun's heat, Rev. 16:8, 9.¶

B. Noun.

kausōn (καύσων, 2742), "burning heat" (akin to kaiō, "to burn"), is translated "scorching heat" in Matt. 20:12 (KJV, "heat"); Luke 12:55 (ditto); in Jas. 1:11, RV, "scorching wind" (KJV,"burning heat"), here the reference is to a hot wind from the east (cf. Job 1:19). See HEAT.¶ In the Sept., Job 27:21; Jer. 18:17; 51:1; Ezek. 17:10; 19:12; Hos. 12:1; 13:15; Jonah 4:8.¶

For SCORN see LAUGH

skorpios (σκορπίος, 4651), akin to skorpizō, "to scatter" (which see), is a small animal (the largest of the several species is 6 in. long) like a lobster, but with a long tail, at the end of which is its venomous sting; the pain, the position of the sting, and the effect are mentioned in Rev. 9:3, 5, 10. The Lord's rhetorical question as to the provision of a "scorpion" instead of an egg, Luke 11:12, is, firstly, an allusion to the egg-like shape of the creature when at rest; secondly, an indication of the abhorrence with which it is regarded. In Luke 10:19, the Lord's assurance to the disciples of the authority given them by Him to tread upon serpents and scorpions conveys the thought of victory over spiritually antagonistic forces, the powers of darkness, as is shown by His reference to the "power of the enemy" and by the context in vv. 17, 20.¶

SCOURGE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

phragellion (φραγέλλιον, 5416), "a whip" (from Latin, flagellum), is used of the "scourge" of small cords which the Lord made and employed before cleansing the Temple, John 2:15. However He actually used it, the whip was in itself a sign of authority and judgment.¶

B. Verbs.

1. phragelloō (φραγελλόω, 5417) (akin to A: Latin, flagello; Eng., "flagellate"), is the word used in Matt. 27:26, and Mark 15:15, of the "scourging" endured by Christ and administered by the order of Pilate. Under the Roman method of "scourging," the person was stripped and tied in a bending posture to a pillar, or stretched on a frame. The "scourge" was made of leather thongs, weighted with sharp pieces of bone or lead, which tore the flesh of both the back and the breast (cf. Ps. 22:17). Eusebius (Chron.) records his having witnessed the suffering of martyrs who died under this treatment.¶

Note: In John 19:1 the "scourging" of Christ is described by Verb No. 2, as also in His prophecy of His sufferings, Matt. 20:19; Mark 10:34; Luke 18:33. In Acts 22:25 the similar punishment about to be administered to Paul is described by Verb No. 3 (the "scourging" of Roman citizens was prohibited by the Porcian law of 197, B.C.).

2. mastigoō (μαστιγόω, 3146), akin to mastix (see below), is used (a) as mentioned under No. 1; (b) of Jewish "scourgings," Matt. 10:17 and 23:34; (c) metaphorically, in Heb. 12:6, of the "chastening" by the Lord administered in love to His spiritual sons.¶

Note: The Jewish method of "scourging," as described in the Mishna, was by the use of three thongs of leather, the offender receiving thirteen stripes on the bare breast and thirteen on each shoulder, the "forty stripes save one," as administered to Paul five times (2 Cor. 11:24). See also SCOURGINGS (below).

3. mastizō (μαστίζω, 3147), akin to No. 2, occurs in Acts 22:25 (see No. 1, above).¶ In the Sept., Num. 22:25.¶

mastix (μάστιξ, 3148), "a whip, scourge," is used (a) with the meaning "scourging," in Acts 22:24, of the Roman method (see above, B, No. 1, Note); (b) in Heb. 11:36, of the "sufferings" of saints in the OT times. Among the Hebrews the usual mode, legal and domestic, was that of beating with a rod (see 2 Cor. 11:25); (c) metaphorically, of "disease" or "suffering": see PLAGUE, No. 1.

SCRIBE (-S)

grammateus (γραμματεύς, 1122), from gramma, "a writing," denotes "a scribe, a man of letters, a teacher of the law"; the "scribes" are mentioned frequently in the Synoptists, especially in connection with the Pharisees, with whom they virtually formed one party (see Luke 5:21), sometimes with the chief priests, e.g., Matt. 2:4; Mark 8:31; 10:33; 11:18, 27; Luke 9:22. They are mentioned only once in John's gospel, 8:3, three times in the Acts, 4:5; 6:12; 23:9; elsewhere only in 1 Cor. 1:20, in the singular. They were considered naturally qualified to teach in the synagogues, Mark 1:22.

They were ambitious of honor, e.g., Matt. 23:5–11, which they demanded especially from their pupils, and which was readily granted them, as well as by the people generally. Like Ezra (Ezra 7:12), the "scribes" were found originally among the priests and Levites. The priests being the official interpreters of the Law, the "scribes" ere long became an independent company; though they never held political power, they became leaders of the people.

Their functions regarding the Law were to teach it, develop it, and use it in connection with the Sanhedrin and various local courts. They also occupied themselves with the sacred writings both historical and didactic. They attached the utmost importance to ascetic elements, by which the nation was especially separated from the Gentiles. In their regime piety was reduced to external formalism. Only that was of value which was governed by external precept. Life under them became a burden; they themselves sought to evade certain of their own precepts, Matt. 23:16,ff.; Luke 11:46; by their traditions the Law, instead of being a help in moral and spiritual life, became an instrument for preventing true access to God, Luke 11:52. Hence the Lord's stern denunciations of them and the Pharisees (see PHARISEES).

Note: The word grammateus is used of the town "clerk" in Ephesus, Acts 19:35.

For SCRIP see WALLET

SCRIPTURE

1. graphē (γραφή, 1124), akin to graphō, "to write" (Eng., "graph," "graphic," etc.), primarily denotes "a drawing, painting"; then "a writing," (a) of the OT Scriptures, (1) in the plural, the whole, e.g., Matt. 21:42; 22:29; John 5:39; Acts 17:11; 18:24; Rom. 1:2, where "the prophets" comprises the OT writers in general; 15:4; 16:26, lit., "prophetic writings," expressing the character of all the Scriptures; (2) in the singular in reference to a particular passage, e.g., Mark 12:10; Luke 4:21; John 2:22; 10:35 (though applicable to all); 19:24, 28, 36, 37; 20:9; Acts 1:16; 8:32, 35; Rom. 4:3; 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; Gal. 3:8, 22; 4:30; 1 Tim. 5:18, where the 2nd quotation is from Luke 10:7, from which it may be inferred that the apostle included Luke's gospel as "Scripture" alike with Deuteronomy, from which the first quotation is taken; in reference to the whole, e.g. Jas. 4:5 (see RV, a separate rhetorical question from the one which follows); in 2 Pet. 1:20, "no prophecy of Scripture," a description of all, with special application to the OT in the next verse; (b) of the OT Scriptures (those accepted by the Jews as canonical) and all those of the NT which were to be accepted by Christians as authoritative, 2 Tim. 3:16; these latter were to be discriminated from the many forged epistles and other religious "writings" already produced and circulated in Timothy's time. Such discrimination would be directed by the fact that "every Scripture," characterized by inspiration of God, would be profitable for the purposes mentioned; so the RV. The KJV states truth concerning the completed canon of Scripture, but that was not complete when the apostle wrote to Timothy.

The Scriptures are frequently personified by the NT writers (as by the Jews, John 7:42), (a) as speaking with divine authority, e.g., John 19:37; Rom. 4:3; 9:17, where the Scripture is said to speak to Pharaoh, giving the message actually sent previously by God to him through Moses; Jas. 4:5 (see above); (b) as possessed of the sentient quality of foresight, and the active power of preaching, Gal. 3:8, where the Scripture mentioned was written more than four centuries after the words were spoken. The Scripture, in such a case, stands for its divine Author with an intimation that it remains perpetually characterized as the living voice of God. This divine agency is again illustrated in Gal. 3:22 (cf. v. 10 and Matt. 11:13).

2. gramma (γράμμα, 1121), "a letter of the alphabet," etc. is used of the Holy Scriptures in 2 Tim. 3:15. For the various uses of this word see LETTER.

biblion (βιβλίον, 975), the diminutive of biblos, "a book," is used in Rev. 6:14, of "a scroll," the rolling up of which illustrates the removal of the heaven. See BOOK, No. 2.

SEA

A. Nouns.

1. thalassa (θάλασσα, 2281) is used (a) chiefly literally, e.g., "the Red Sea," Acts 7:36; 1 Cor. 10:1; Heb. 11:29; the "sea" of Galilee or Tiberias, Matt. 4:18; 15:29; Mark 6:48, 49, where the acts of Christ testified to His deity; John 6:1; 21:1; in general, e.g., Luke 17:2; Acts 4:24; Rom. 9:27; Rev. 16:3; 18:17; 20:8, 13; 21:1; in combination with No. 2, Matt. 18:6; (b) metaphorically, of "the ungodly men" described in Jude 13 (cf. Isa. 57:20); (c) symbolically, in the apocalyptic vision of "a glassy sea like unto crystal,'" Rev. 4:6, emblematic of the fixed purity and holiness of all that appertains to the authority and judicial dealings of God; in 15:2, the same, "mingled with fire," and, standing by it (RV) or on it (KJV and RV marg.), those who had "come victorious from the beast" (ch. 13); of the wild and restless condition of nations, Rev. 13:1 (see 17:1, 15), where "he stood" (RV) refers to the dragon, not John (KJV); from the midst of this state arises the beast, symbolic of the final gentile power dominating the federated nations of the Roman world (see Dan., chs. 2, 7, etc.).

Note: For the change from "the sea" in Deut. 30:13, to "the abyss" in Rom. 10:7, see BOTTOM, B.

2. pelagos (πέλαγος, 3989), "the deep sea, the deep," is translated "the depth" in Matt. 18:6, and is used of the "Sea of Cilicia" in Acts 27:5. See DEPTH, No. 2.¶ Pelagos signifies "the vast expanse of open water," thalassa, "the sea as contrasted with the land" (Trench, Syn., §xiii).

B. Adjectives.

1. enalios (ἐνάλιος, 1724), "in the sea," lit., "of, or belonging to, the salt water" (from hals, "salt"), occurs in Jas. 3:7.¶

2. paralios (παράλιος, 3882), "by the sea," Luke 6:17: see COAST.¶

3. parathalassios (παραθαλάσσιος, 3864), "by the sea," Matt. 4:13, see COAST, Note 2.¶

4. dithalassos (διθάλασσος, 1337) primarily signifies "divided into two seas" (dis, "twice," and thalassa); then, "dividing the sea," as of a reef or rocky projection running out into the "sea," Acts 27:41.¶

SEAL (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

sphragis (σφραγίς, 4973) denotes (a) "a seal" or "signet," Rev. 7:2, "the seal of the living God," an emblem of ownership and security, here combined with that of destination (as in Ezek. 9:4), the persons to be "sealed" being secured from destruction and marked for reward; (b) "the impression" of a "seal" or signet, (1) literal, a "seal" on a book or roll, combining with the ideas of security and destination those of secrecy and postponement of disclosures, Rev. 5:1, 2, 5, 9; 6:1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 12; 8:1; (2) metaphorical, Rom. 4:11, said of "circumcision," as an authentication of the righteousness of Abraham's faith, and an external attestation of the covenant made with him by God; the rabbis called circumcision "the seal of Abraham"; in 1 Cor. 9:2, of converts as a "seal" or authentication of Paul's apostleship; in 2 Tim. 2:19, "the firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are His," RV, indicating ownership, authentication, security and destination, "and, Let every one that nameth the Name of the Lord depart from unrighteousness," indicating a ratification on the part of the believer of the determining counsel of God concerning him; Rev. 9:4 distinguishes those who will be found without the "seal" of God on their foreheads [see (a) above and B, No. 1].¶

B. Verbs.

1. sphragizō (σφραγίζω, 4972), "to seal" (akin to A), is used to indicate (a) security and permanency (attempted but impossible), Matt. 27:66; on the contrary, of the doom of Satan, fixed and certain, Rev. 20:3, RV, "sealed it over"; (b) in Rom. 15:28, "when ... I have ... sealed to them this fruit," the formal ratification of the ministry of the churches of the Gentiles in Greece and Galatia to needy saints in Judea, by Paul's faithful delivery of the gifts to them; this material help was the fruit of his spiritual ministry to the Gentiles, who on their part were bringing forth the fruit of their having shared with them in spiritual things; the metaphor stresses the sacred formalities of the transaction (Deissmann illustrates this from the papyri of Fayyum, in which the "sealing" of sacks guarantees the full complement of the contents); (c) secrecy and security and the postponement of disclosure, Rev. 10:4; in a negative command, 22:10; (d) ownership and security, together with destination, Rev. 7:3, 4, 5 (as with the noun in v. 2; see A); the same three indications are conveyed in Eph. 1:13, in the metaphor of the "sealing" of believers by the gift of the Holy Spirit, upon believing (i.e., at the time of their regeneration, not after a lapse of time in their spiritual life, "having also believed"—not as KJV, "after that ye believed"—; the aorist participle marks the definiteness and completeness of the act of faith); the idea of destination is stressed by the phrase "the Holy Spirit of promise" (see also v. 14); so 4:30, "ye were sealed unto the day of redemption"; so in 2 Cor. 1:22, where the middle voice intimates the special interest of the Sealer in His act; (e) authentication by the believer (by receiving the witness of the Son) of the fact that "God is true," John 3:33; authentication by God in sealing the Son as the Giver of eternal life (with perhaps a figurative allusion to the impress of a mark upon loaves), 6:27.¶

Note: In Rev. 7, after the 5th verse (first part) the original does not repeat the mention of the "sealing" except in v. 8 (last part) (hence the omission in the RV).

2. katasphragizō (κατασφραγίζω, 2696), No. 1, strengthened by kata, intensive, is used of the "book" seen in the vision in Rev. 5:1, RV, "close sealed (with seven seals)," the successive opening of which discloses the events destined to take place throughout the period covered by chapters 6 to 19.¶ In the Sept., Job 9:7; 37:7.¶

araphos or arrhaphos (ἄραφος, 729) denotes "without seam" (a, negative, and rhaptō, "to sew"), John 19:23.¶

SEARCH

1. eraunaō or ereunaō, an earlier form, (ἐραυνάω, 2045), "to search, examine," is used (a) of God, as "searching" the heart, Rom. 8:27; (b) of Christ, similarly, Rev. 2:23; (c) of the Holy Spirit, as "searching" all things, 1 Cor. 2:10, acting in the spirit of the believer; (d) of the OT prophets, as "searching" their own writings concerning matters foretold of Christ, testified by the Spirit of Christ in them, 1 Pet. 1:11 (cf. No. 2); (e) of the Jews, as commanded by the Lord to "search" the Scriptures, John 5:39, KJV, and RV marg., "search," RV text, "ye search," either is possible grammatically; (f) of Nicodemus as commanded similarly by the chief priests and Pharisees, John 7:52.¶

2. exeraunaō (ἐξεραυνάω, 1830), a strengthened form of No. 1 (ek, or ex, "out"), "to search out," is used in 1 Pet. 1:10, "searched diligently"; cf. No. 1 (d).¶

3. exetazō (ἐξετάζω, 1833), "to examine closely, inquire carefully" (from etazō, "to examine"), occurs in Matt. 2:8, RV, "search out"; so Matt. 10:11, RV: see INQUIRE, No. 4.

Note: For anakrinō, rendered "searched" in Acts 17:11, KJV, see EXAMINE.

For SEARED see BRANDED

SEASON (Noun)

A. Nouns.

1. kairos (καιρός, 2540), primarily, "due measure, fitness, proportion," is used in the NT to signify "a season, a time, a period" possessed of certain characteristics, frequently rendered "time" or "times"; in the following the RV substitutes "season" for the KJV "time," thus distinguishing the meaning from chronos (see No. 2): Matt. 11:25; 12:1; 14:1; 21:34; Mark 11:13; Acts 3:19; 7:20; 17:26; Rom. 3:26; 5:6; 9:9; 13:11; 1 Cor. 7:5; Gal. 4:10; 1 Thess. 2:17, lit., "for a season (of an hour)"; 2 Thess. 2:6; in Eph. 6:18, "at all seasons" (KJV, "always"); in Titus 1:3, "His own seasons" (marg., "its"; KJV, "in due times"); in the preceding clause chronos is used.

The characteristics of a period are exemplified in the use of the term with regard, e.g., to harvest, Matt. 13:30; reaping, Gal. 6:9; punishment, Matt. 8:29; discharging duties, Luke 12:42; opportunity for doing anything, whether good, e.g., Matt. 26:18; Gal. 6:10 ("opportunity"); Eph. 5:16; or evil, e.g., Rev. 12:12; the fulfillment of prophecy, Luke 1:20; Acts 3:19; 1 Pet. 1:11; a time suitable for a purpose, Luke 4:13, lit., "until a season"; 2 Cor. 6:2; see further under No. 2. See ALWAYS, Note, OPPORTUNITY, TIME, WHILE.

2. chronos (χρόνος, 5550), whence Eng. words beginning with "chron"—, denotes "a space of time," whether long or short: (a) it implies duration, whether longer, e.g., Acts 1:21, "(all the) time"; Acts 13:18; 20:18, RV, "(all the) time" (KJV, "at all seasons"); or shorter, e.g., Luke 4:5; (b) it sometimes refers to the date of an occurrence, whether past, e.g., Matt. 2:7, or future, e.g., Acts 3:21; 7:17.

Broadly speaking, chronos expresses the duration of a period, kairos stresses it as marked by certain features; thus in Acts 1:7, "the Father has set within His own authority" both the times (chronos), the lengths of the periods, and the "seasons" (kairos), epochs characterized by certain events; in 1 Thess. 5:1, "times" refers to the length of the interval before the Parousia takes place (the presence of Christ with the saints when He comes to receive them to Himself at the Rapture), and to the length of time the Parousia will occupy; "seasons" refers to the special features of the period before, during, and after the Parousia.

Chronos marks quantity, kairos, quality. Sometimes the distinction between the two words is not sharply defined as, e.g., in 2 Tim. 4:6, though even here the apostle's "departure" signalizes the time (kairos). The words occur together in the Sept. only in Dan. 2:21 and Eccl. 3:1. Chronos is rendered "season" in Acts 19:22, KJV (RV, "a while"); 20:18 (RV, "all the time," see above); Rev. 6:11, KJV (RV, "time"); so 20:3. In Luke 23:8 it is used with hikanos in the plural, RV, "(of a long) time," more lit., "(for a sufficient number) of times."

In Rev. 10:6 chronos has the meaning "delay" (RV, marg.), an important rendering for the understanding of the passage (the word being akin to chronizō, "to take time, to linger, delay," Matt. 24:48; Luke 12:45). See DELAY, B, Note, SPACE, TIME, WHILE.

3. hōra (ὥρα, 5610), "an hour," is translated "season" in John 5:35; 2 Cor. 7:8; Philem. 15: see HOUR.

B. Adjective.

proskairos (πρόσκαιρος, 4340), "temporary, transient," is rendered "for a season" in Heb. 11:25. See TEMPORAL, TIME, WHILE.

C. Adverbs.

1. akairōs (ἀκαίρως, 171) denotes "out of season, unseasonably" (akin to akairos, "unseasonable," a, negative, and A, No. 1), 2 Tim. 4:2.¶

2. eukairōs (εὐκαίρως, 2122), "in season" (eu, "well"), 2 Tim. 4:2; it occurs also in Mark 14:11, "conveniently."¶

Note: For oligon, 1 Pet. 1:6, KJV, "for a season," see WHILE.

SEASON (Verb)

artuō (ἀρτύω, 741), "to arrange, make ready" (cf. artios, "fitted"), is used of "seasoning," Mark 9:50; Luke 14:34; Col. 4:6.¶

SEAT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. kathedra (καθέδρα, 2515), from kata, "down," and hedra, "a seat," denotes "a seat" (Eng., "cathedral"), "a chair," Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; of teachers, Matt. 23:2.¶

2. prōtokathedria (πρωτοκαθεδρία, 4410), "the first seat," Matt. 23:6; Mark 12:39; Luke 11:43; 20:46; see CHIEF, No. 6. Cf. ROOM.¶

Note: For thronos, sometimes translated "seat" in the KJV, see THRONE.

B. Verb.

kathēmai (κάθημαι, 2521), "to sit, be seated," is translated "shall... be seated" in Luke 22:69, RV; "is seated," Col. 3:1, RV (KJV, "shall... sit" and "sitteth"). See SIT.

SECOND, SECONDARILY, SECONDLY

1. deuteros (δεύτερος, 1208) denotes "second in order" with or without the idea of time, e.g., Matt. 22:26, 39; 2 Cor. 1:15; Rev. 2:11; in Rev. 14:8, RV only ("a second angel"); it is used in the neuter, deuteron, adverbially, signifying a "second" time, e.g., John 3:4; 21:16; Acts 7:13; Rev. 19:3, RV (KJV, "again"); Jude 5, "afterward" (RV, marg., "the second time"); used with ek ("of") idiomatically, the preposition signifying "for (the second time)," Mark 14:72; John 9:24 and Acts 11:9, RV (KJV, "again"); Heb. 9:28; in 1 Cor. 12:28, KJV, "secondarily," RV, "secondly."

Note: In Acts 13:33 some mss. have prōtos, "(in the) first (psalm)"; the 1st and 2nd Psalms were originally one, forming a prologue to the whole book; hence the numbering in the Sept.

2. deuteraios (δευτεραῖος, 1206), an adjective with an adverbial sense (from No. 1), is used in Acts 28:13, RV, "on the second day" (KJV, "the next day"), lit., "second day (persons we came)."¶

Note: In Luke 6:1, the KJV translates those mss. which have deuteroprōtos, lit., "second-first," said of a sabbath (see RV marg.).¶

SECRET, SECRETLY

A. Adjectives.

1. kruptos (κρυπτός, 2927), "secret, hidden" (akin to kruptō, "to hide"), Eng., "crypt," "cryptic," etc., is used as an adjective and rendered "secret" in Luke 8:17, KJV (RV, "hid"); in the neuter, with en, "in," as an adverbial phrase, "in secret," with the article, Matt. 6:4, 6 (twice in each v.); without the article, John 7:4, 10; 18:20; in the neuter plural, with the article, "the secrets (of men)," Rom. 2:16; of the heart, 1 Cor. 14:25; in Luke 11:33, KJV, "a secret place" (RV, "cellar"). See CELLAR, HIDDEN, INWARDLY.

2. apokruphos (ἀπόκρυφος, 614) (whence "Apocrypha"), "hidden," is translated "kept secret" in Mark 4:22, KJV (RV, "made secret"); "secret" in Luke 8:17, RV (KJV, "hid"). See HIDE, B, No. 2.

3. kruphaios (κρυφαῖος, 2928d) occurs in the best mss. in Matt. 6:18 (twice; some have No. 1).¶

B. Adverbs.

1. kruphē (κρυφῇ, 2931), akin to A, No. 1, "secretly, in secret," is used in Eph. 5:12.¶

2. lathrą (λάθρᾳ, 2977), akin to lanthanō, "to escape notice, be hidden," is translated "secretly" in John 11:28. See PRIVILY.

C. Verb.

kruptō (κρύπτω, 2928), "to hide," is translated "secretly" in John 19:38 [perfect participle, passive voice, lit., "(but) having been hidden"], referring to Nicodemus as having been a "secret" disciple of Christ; in Matt. 13:35, KJV, it is translated "kept secret" (RV, "hidden").

Notes: (1) For tameion, translated "secret chambers" in Matt. 24:26, see CHAMBER, No. 1. (2) For the KJV rendering of sigaō, in Rom. 16:25, "kept secret," see PEACE (hold one's), No. 2, and SILENCE. (3) For "I have learned the secret," see LEARN, No. 4.

hairesis (αἵρεσις, 139), "a choosing," is translated "sect" throughout the Acts, except in 24:14, KJV, "heresy" (RV, "sect"); it properly denotes a predilection either for a particular truth, or for a perversion of one, generally with the expectation of personal advantage; hence, a division and the formation of a party or "sect" in contrast to the uniting power of "the truth," held in toto; "a sect" is a division developed and brought to an issue; the order "divisions, heresies" (marg. "parties") in "the works of the flesh" in Gal. 5:19–21 is suggestive of this. See HERESY.

SECURE (Verb)

perikratēs (περικρατής, 4031), an adjective, signifies "having full command of" (peri, "around, about," krateō, "to be strong, to rule"); it is used with ginomai, "to become," in Acts 27:16, RV, "to secure (the boat)," KJV, "to come by."¶

Note: In Matt. 28:14, KJV, amerimnos, "without anxiety," with poieō, "to make," is translated "we will... secure (you)," RV, "we will... rid (you) of care." The Eng. "secure" is derived from the Latin se, "free from," and cura, "care." See CARE.

SECURITY

hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), "sufficient," is used in its neuter form with the article, as a noun, in Acts 17:9, "(when they had taken) security," i.e., satisfaction, lit., "the sufficient." The use of hikanos in this construction is a Latinism in Greek. See Moulton, Proleg., p. 20. Probably the bond given to the authorities by Jason and his friends included an undertaking that Paul would not return to Thessalonica. Any efforts to have the bond cancelled were unsuccessful; hence the reference to the hindrance by Satan (1 Thess. 2:18). See ABLE, C, No. 2.

SEDITION

A. Nouns.

1. stasis (στάσις, 4714), "a dissension, an insurrection," is translated "sedition" in Acts 24:5, KJV (RV, "insurrections"). See DISSENSION, INSURRECTION.

2. dichostasia (διχοστασία, 1370), lit., "a standing apart" (dicha, "asunder, apart," stasis, "a standing"), hence "a dissension, division," is translated "seditions" in Gal. 5:20, KJV. See DIVISION, No. 2.

B. Verb.

anastatoō (ἀναστατόω, 387), "to excite, unsettle," or "to stir up to sedition," is so translated in Acts 21:38, RV (KJV, "madest an uproar"); in 17:6, "have turned (the world) upside down," i.e., "causing tumults"; in Gal. 5:12, RV, "unsettle" (KJV, "trouble"), i.e., by false teaching (here in the continuous present tense, lit., "those who are unsettling you"). The word was supposed not to have been used in profane authors. It has been found, however, in several of the papyri writings. See TURN, UNSETTLE.¶

SEDUCE, SEDUCING

A. Verbs.

1. planaō (πλανάω, 4105), "to cause to wander, lead astray," is translated "to seduce" in 1 John 2:26, KJV (RV, "lead... astray"); in Rev. 2:20, "to seduce." See DECEIT, C, No. 6.

2. apoplanaō (ἀποπλανάω, 635) is translated "seduce" in Mark 13:22 (RV, "lead astray"); see LEAD, No. 13.

B. Adjective.

planos (πλάνος, 4108), akin to A, lit., "wandering," then, "deceiving," is translated "seducing" in 1 Tim. 4:1. See DECEIVER, No. 1.

For SEDUCERS see IMPOSTORS

SEE, SEEING

A. Verbs.

1. blepō (βλέπω, 991), "to have sight," is used of bodily vision, e.g., Matt. 11:4; and mental, e.g., Matt. 13:13, 14; it is said of God the Father in Matt. 6:4, 6, 18; of Christ as "seeing" what the Father doeth, John 5:19. It especially stresses the thought of the person who "sees." For the various uses see BEHOLD, No. 2; see Note below.

2. horaō (ὁράω, 3708), with the form eidon, serving for its aorist tense, and opsomai, for its future tense (middle voice), denotes "to see," of bodily vision, e.g., John 6:36; and mental, e.g., Matt. 8:4; it is said of Christ as "seeing" the Father, John 6:46, and of what He had "seen" with the Father, 8:38. It especially indicates the direction of the thought to the object "seen." See BEHOLD, No. 1.

Note: "Horaō and blepō both denote the physical act: horaō, in general, blepō, the single look; horaō gives prominence to the discerning mind, blepō to the particular mood or point. When the physical side recedes, horaō denotes perception in general (as resulting principally from vision)... Blepō, on the other hand, when its physical side recedes, gets a purely outward sense, look (open, incline) towards [as of a situation]" (Schmidt, Grimm-Thayer).

3. aphoraō (ἀφοράω, 872), with apeidon serving as the aorist tense, "to look away from one thing so as to see another" (apo, "from," and No. 2), as in Heb. 12:2, simply means "to see" in Phil. 2:23.¶

4. kathoraō (καθοράω, 2529), lit., "to look down" (kata, and No. 2), denotes "to discern clearly," Rom. 1:20, "are clearly seen."¶ In the Sept., Num. 24:2; Job 10:4; 39:26.¶

5. diablepō (διαβλέπω, 1227), "to see clearly" (dia, "through," and No. 1), is used in Matt. 7:5; Luke 6:42; in Mark 8:25, RV, "he looked steadfastly" (No. 6 is used in the next clause; No. 1 in v. 24, and No. 2 in the last part).¶

6. emblepō (ἐμβλέπω, 1689), "to look at" (en, "in," and No. 1), used of earnestly looking, is translated "saw" in Mark 8:25 (last part); "could (not) see" in Acts 22:11. See BEHOLD, No. 3.

7. anablepō (ἀναβλέπω, 308), "to look up," is translated "see," of the blind, in Luke 7:22, KJV (RV, "receive their sight"). See SIGHT.

8. theaomai (θεάομαι, 2300), "to view attentively, to see with admiration, desire, or regard," stresses more especially the action of the person beholding, as with No. 1, in contrast to No. 2; it is used in Matt. 11:7 (RV, "to behold"), while idein, the infinitive of eidon (see under No. 2), is used in the questions in the next two verses; in verse 7 the interest in the onlooker is stressed, in vv. 8, 9, the attention is especially directed to the object "seen." The verb is translated "to see" in the KJV and RV of Matt. 6:1; Mark 16:11, 14; John 6:5; Acts 8:18 (in some mss.); 21:27; Rom. 15:24; elsewhere, for the KJV, "to see," the RV uses the verb "to behold," bringing out its force more suitably. See BEHOLD, No. 8.

9. theōreō (θεωρέω, 2334) denotes "to be a spectator of," indicating the careful perusal of details in the object; it points especially, as in No. 1, to the action of the person beholding, e.g., Matt. 28:1; the RV frequently renders it by "to behold," for the KJV, "to see," e.g., John 14:17, 19; 16:10, 16, 17, 19. The difference between this verb and Nos. 1 and 2 is brought out in John 20:5, 6, 8; in v. 5 blepō is used of John's sight of the linen cloths in the tomb, without his entering in; he "saw" at a glance the Lord was not there; in v. 6 the closer contemplation by Peter is expressed in the verb theōreō. But in v. 8 the grasping by John of the significance of the undisturbed cloths is denoted by eidon (see No. 2, and see WRAP).

10. muōpazō (μυωπάζω, 3467), "to be short-sighted" (muō, "to shut," ōps, "the eye"; cf. Eng., "myopy," "myopic": the root mu signifies a sound made with closed lips, e.g., in the words "mutter," "mute"), occurs in 2 Pet. 1:9, RV, "seeing only what is near" (KJV, "and cannot see afar off"); this does not contradict the preceding word "blind," it qualifies it; he of whom it is true is blind in that he cannot discern spiritual things, he is near-sighted in that he is occupied in regarding worldly affairs.¶

11. phainō (φαίνω, 5316), "to cause to appear," and in the passive voice, "to appear, be manifest," is rendered "(that) they may be seen" in Matt. 6:5; "it was (never so) seen," 9:33. See APPEAR.

Notes: (1) For ide and idou, regularly rendered "behold" in the RV, see BEHOLD, No. 4. (2) For optanō, in Acts 1:3, KJV, "being seen," see APPEAR, A, No. 7. (3) For historeō, in Gal. 1:18, KJV, "to see," see VISIT. (4) For prooraō, and proeidon, "to see before," see FORESEE. (5) For "make . . . see" see ENLIGHTEN.

B. Noun.

blemma (βλέμμα, 990), primarily, "a look, a glance" (akin to A, No. 1), denotes "sight," 2 Pet. 2:8, rendered "seeing"; some interpret it as meaning "look"; Moulton and Milligan illustrate it thus from the papyri; it seems difficult, however to take the next word "hearing" (in the similar construction) in this way.¶

SEED

1. sperma (σπέρμα, 4690), akin to speirō, "to sow" (Eng., "sperm," "spermatic," etc.), has the following usages, (a) agricultural and botanical, e.g., Matt. 13:24, 27, 32 (for the KJV of vv. 19, 20, 22, 23, see SOW, as in the RV); 1 Cor. 15:38; 2 Cor. 9:10; (b) physiological, Heb. 11:11; (c) metaphorical and by metonymy for "offspring, posterity," (1) of natural offspring, e.g., Matt. 22:24, 25, RV, "seed" (KJV, "issue"); John 7:42; 8:33, 37; Acts 3:25; Rom. 1:3; 4:13, 16, 18; 9:7 (twice), 8, 29; 11:1; 2 Cor. 11:22; Heb. 2:16; 11:18; Rev. 12:17; Gal. 3:16, 19, 29; in the 16th v., "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ," quoted from the Sept. of Gen. 13:15 and 17:7, 8, there is especial stress on the word "seed," as referring to an individual (here, Christ) in fulfillment of the promises to Abraham—a unique use of the singular. While the plural form "seeds," neither in Hebrew nor in Greek, would have been natural any more than in English (it is not so used in Scripture of human offspring; its plural occurrence is in 1 Sam. 8:15, of crops), yet if the divine intention had been to refer to Abraham's natural descendants, another word could have been chosen in the plural, such as "children"; all such words were, however, set aside, "seed" being selected as one that could be used in the singular, with the purpose of showing that the "seed" was Messiah. Some of the rabbis had even regarded "seed," e.g., in Gen. 4:25 and Isa. 53:10, as referring to the Coming One. Descendants were given to Abraham by other than natural means, so that through him Messiah might come, and the point of the apostle's argument is that since the fulfillment of the promises of God is secured alone by Christ, they only who are "in Christ" can receive them; (2) of spiritual offspring, Rom. 4:16, 18; 9:8; here "the children of the promise are reckoned for a seed" points, firstly, to Isaac's birth as being not according to the ordinary course of nature but by divine promise, and, secondly, by analogy, to the fact that all believers are children of God by spiritual birth; Gal. 3:29.

As to 1 John 3:9, "his seed abideth in him," it is possible to understand this as meaning that children of God (His "seed") abide in Him, and do not go on doing (practicing) sin (the verb "to commit" does not represent the original in this passage). Alternatively, the "seed" signifies the principle of spiritual life as imparted to the believer, which abides in him without possibility of removal or extinction; the child of God remains eternally related to Christ, he who lives in sin has never become so related, he has not the principle of life in him. This meaning suits the context and the general tenor of the Epistle.

2. sporos (σπόρος, 4703), akin to No. 1, properly "a sowing," denotes "seed sown," (a) natural, Mark 4:26, 27; Luke 8:5, 11 (the natural being figuratively applied to the Word of God); 2 Cor. 9:10 (1st part); (b) metaphorically of material help to the needy, 2 Cor. 9:10 (2nd part), RV, "(your) seed for sowing" (KJV, "seed sown").¶

3. spora (σπορά, 4701), akin to No. 1, and like No. 2, "a sowing, seedtime," denotes "seed sown," 1 Pet. 1:23, of human offspring.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 19:29.¶

For SEEING, SEEING THAT (conjunction), see †, p. 1

1. zēteō (ζητέω, 2212) signifies (a) "to seek, to seek for," e.g., Matt. 7:7, 8; 13:45; Luke 24:5; John 6:24; of plotting against a person's life, Matt. 2:20; Acts 21:31; Rom. 11:3; metaphorically, to "seek" by thinking, to "seek" how to do something, or what to obtain, e.g., Mark 11:18; Luke 12:29; to "seek" to ascertain a meaning, John 16:19, "do ye inquire"; to "seek" God, Acts 17:27, RV; Rom. 10:20; (b) "to seek or strive after, endeavor, to desire," e.g., Matt. 12:46, 47, RV, "seeking" (KJV, "desiring"); Luke 9:9, RV, "sought" (KJV, "desired"); John 7:19, RV, "seek ye" (KJV, "go ye about"); so v. 20; Rom. 10:3, RV, "seeking" (KJV, "going about"); of "seeking" the kingdom of God and His righteousness, in the sense of coveting earnestly, striving after, Matt. 6:33; "the things that are above," Col. 3:1; peace, 1 Pet. 3:11; (c) "to require or demand," e.g., Mark 8:12; Luke 11:29 (some mss. have No. 4); 1 Cor. 4:2, "it is required"; 2 Cor. 13:3, "ye seek." See ABOUT, B, Note, DESIRE, B, Note (2), ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2) (a), INQUIRE, REQUIRE.

2. anazēteō (ἀναζητέω, 327), "to seek carefully" (ana, "up," used intensively, and No. 1), is used of searching for human beings, difficulty in the effort being implied Luke 2:44, 45 (some mss. have No. 1 in the latter v.); Acts 11:25; numerous illustrations of this particular meaning in the papyri are given by Moulton and Milligan.¶ In the Sept., Job 3:4; 10:6.¶

3. ekzēteō (ἐκζητέω, 1567) signifies (a) "to seek out (ek) or after, to search for"; e.g., God, Rom. 3:11; the Lord, Acts 15:17; in Heb. 11:6, RV, "seek after" (KJV, "diligently seek"); 12:17, RV, "sought diligently" (KJV, "sought carefully"); 1 Pet. 1:10, RV, "sought" (KJV, "have inquired"), followed by exeraunaō, "to search diligently"; (b) "to require or demand," Luke 11:50, 51. See INQUIRE, Note (3), REQUIRE.¶

4. epizēteō (ἐπιζητέω, 1934), "to seek after" (directive, epi, "towards") is always rendered in the RV, by some form of the verb "to seek," Acts 13:7, "sought" (KJV, "desired"); 19:39, "seek" (KJV, "inquire"); Phil. 4:17, "seek for" (KJV, "desire"), twice; elsewhere, Matt. 6:32; 12:39; 16:4; Mark 8:12 (in some texts); Luke 12:30; Acts 12:19; Rom. 11:7; Heb. 11:14; 13:14. See DESIRE, INQUIRE.¶

5. oregō (ὀρέγω, 3713), "to reach out, or after," used in the middle voice is translated "seeketh" in 1 Tim. 3:1, RV, of "seeking overseership" (KJV, "desireth"). See DESIRE, No. 5.

Note: For the RV renderings of zēloō, in Gal. 4:17, 18, "they zealously seek," "ye may seek," "to be zealously sought," see AFFECT, Note, and ZEALOUS.

dokeō (δοκέω, 1380) denotes (a) "to be of opinion" (akin to doxa, "opinion"), e.g., Luke 8:18, RV, "thinketh" (KJV, "seemeth"); so 1 Cor. 3:18; to think, suppose, Jas. 1:26, RV, "thinketh himself" (KJV, "seem"); see SUPPOSE, THINK; (b) "to seem, to be reputed," e.g., Acts 17:18; 1 Cor. 11:16; 12:22; 2 Cor. 10:9; Heb. 4:1; 12:11; for Gal. 2:2, 6, 9, see REPUTE; (c) impersonally (1) to think (see THINK), (2) to "seem" good, Luke 1:3; Acts 15:22, RV, "it seemed good" (KJV, "it pleased"); 15:25, 28 (v. 34 in some mss.); in Heb. 12:10, the neuter of the present participle is used with the article, lit., "the (thing) seeming good," RV, "(as) seemed good," KJV, "after (their own) pleasure." See ACCOUNT, No. 1.

Notes: In Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21, eudokia, "good pleasure, satisfaction" (eu, "well," and dokeō), is used with ginomai, "to become," and translated "it seemed good," KJV (RV, "it was well-pleasing"). (2) In Luke 24:11, KJV, phainō, "to appear" (passive voice), is translated "seemed" (RV, "appeared").

For SEEMLY, RV, see COMELY, B, and Note (2)

Note: In 1 Pet. 2:12, RV, kalos, "good, fair," is rendered "seemly."

SEIZE

1. sullambanō (συλλαμβάνω, 4815), lit., "to take together" (sun, "with," lambanō, "to take or lay hold of"), chiefly signifies "to seize as a prisoner"; in the following the RV substitutes the more suitable and forceful verb, "to seize," for KJV, "to take": Matt. 26:55; Mark 14:48; Luke 22:54; John 18:12; Acts 12:3; 23:27; 26:21; in Acts 1:16, RV and KJV, "took." See CATCH, No. 8, CONCEIVE, HELP.

2. sunarpazō (συναρπάζω, 4884) is translated "seized" in the RV of Luke 8:29; Acts 6:12; 19:29; see CATCH, No. 7.

Note: In Matt. 21:38, the best texts have echō, "to have" ("to take," RV); some have katechō, "to lay hold of" (KJV, "seize on").

SELF, SELVES

1. automatos (αὐτόματος, 844), "of oneself" (Eng., "automatic," "automaton," etc.), is used in Mark 4:28; Acts 12:10. See ACCORD, B, No. 2.¶

2. autos (αὐτός, 846), "he," also means "self," in the reflexive pronouns "myself, thyself, himself," etc. (see, e.g., HE), expressing distinction, exclusion, etc.; it is usually emphatic in the nominative case, e.g., Luke 6:42; 11:4; John 18:28; Rom. 8:16, RV, "Himself."

Note: In John 16:27, "the Father Himself (autos)," Field (Notes on the Translation of the NT) remarks that autos stands for automatos.

For SELF-CONDEMNED see CONDEMN, C, No. 1

SELF-CONTROL (without)

akratēs (ἀκρατής, 193), "powerless" (a, negative, kratos, "strength"), is rendered "without self-control," in 2 Tim. 3:3, RV; see INCONTINENT.¶

SELFSAME

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 5:5, KJV, auto touto, "this thing itself," "this very thing," RV, is rendered "the selfsame"; in 2 Cor. 7:11, RV and KJV, "this selfsame thing." (2) In Matt. 8:13, KJV, ekeinos, with the article, "that," RV, is rendered "that selfsame." (3) In 1 Cor. 12:11, KJV, the article with autos, "the same," RV, is rendered "the selfsame."

SELF-WILLED

authadēs (αὐθάδης, 829), "self-pleasing" (autos, "self," hēdomai, "to please"), denotes one who, dominated by self-interest, and inconsiderate of others, arrogantly asserts his own will, "self-willed," Titus 1:7; 2 Pet. 2:10 (the opposite of epieikēs, "gentle," e.g., 1 Tim. 3:3), "one so far overvaluing any determination at which he has himself once arrived that he will not be removed from it" (Trench, who compares and contrasts philautos, "loving self, selfish"; Syn. §xciii).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:3, 7; Prov. 21:24.¶

SELL

1. pōleō (πωλέω, 4453), "to exchange or barter, to sell," is used in the latter sense in the NT, six times in Matthew, three in Mark, six in Luke; in John only in connection with the cleansing of the Temple by the Lord, 2:14, 16; in Acts only in connection with the disposing of property for distribution among the community of believers, 4:34, 37; 5:1; elsewhere, 1 Cor. 10:25; Rev. 13:17.

2. pipraskō (πιπράσκω, 4097), from an earlier form, peraō, "to carry across the sea for the purpose of selling or to export," is used (a) literally, Matt. 13:46; 18:25; 26:9; Mark 14:5; John 12:5; Acts 2:45; 4:34; 5:4; (b) metaphorically, Rom. 7:14, "sold under sin," i.e., as fully under the domination of sin as a slave is under his master; the statement evinces an utter dissatisfaction with such a condition; it expresses, not the condemnation of the unregenerate state, but the evil of bondage to a corrupt nature, involving the futility of making use of the Law as a means of deliverance.¶

3. apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give up or back," also means, in the middle voice, "to give up of one's own will"; hence, "to sell"; it is so used in Peter's question to Sapphira as to "selling" the land, Acts 5:8; of the act of Joseph's brothers, 7:9; of Esau's act in "selling" his birthright, Heb. 12:16.

Note: In Jas. 4:13, KJV, emporeuomai, "to trade" (RV), is rendered "buy and sell."

For SELLER see PURPLE

gerousia (γερουσία, 1087), "a council of elders" (from gerōn, "an old man," a term which early assumed a political sense among the Greeks, the notion of age being merged in that of dignity), is used in Acts 5:21, apparently epexegetically of the preceding word sunedrion, "council," the Sanhedrin.¶

SEND

1. apostellō (ἀποστέλλω, 649), lit., "to send forth" (apo, "from"), akin to apostolos, "an apostle," denotes (a) "to send on service, or with a commission." (1) of persons; Christ, sent by the Father, Matt. 10:40; 15:24; 21:37; Mark 9:37; 12:6; Luke 4:18, 43; 9:48; 10:16; John 3:17; 5:36, 38; 6:29, 57; 7:29; 8:42; 10:36; 11:42; 17:3, 8, 18 (1st part), 21, 23, 25; 20:21; Acts 3:20 (future); 3:26; 1 John 4:9, 10, 14; the Holy Spirit, Luke 24:49 (in some texts; see No. 3); 1 Pet. 1:12; Rev. 5:6; Moses, Acts 7:35; John the Baptist, John 1:6; 3:28; disciples and apostles, e.g., Matt. 10:16; Mark 11:1; Luke 22:8; John 4:38; 17:18 (2nd part); Acts 26:17; servants, e.g., Matt. 21:34; Luke 20:10; officers and officials, Mark 6:27; John 7:32; Acts 16:35; messengers, e.g., Acts 10:8, 17, 20; 15:27; evangelists, Rom. 10:15; angels, e.g., Matt. 24:31; Mark 13:27; Luke 1:19, 26; Heb. 1:14; Rev. 1:1; 22:6; demons, Mark 5:10; (2) of things, e.g., Matt. 21:3; Mark 4:29, RV, marg., "sendeth forth," text, "putteth forth" (KJV, "... in"); Acts 10:36; 11:30; 28:28; (b) "to send away, dismiss," e.g., Mark 8:26; 12:3; Luke 4:18, "to set (at liberty)." See Note below, No. 2.

Notes: (1) Pempō is a more general term than apostellō; apostellō usually "suggests official or authoritative sending" (Thayer). A comparison of the usages mentioned above shows how nearly (in some cases practically quite) interchangeably they are used, and yet on close consideration the distinction just mentioned is discernible; in the Gospel of John, cf. pempō in 5:23, 24, 30, 37, apostellō in 5:33, 36, 38; pempō in 6:38, 39, 44, apostellō in 6:29, 57; the two are not used simply for the sake of variety of expression. Pempō is not used in the Lord's prayer in ch. 17, whereas apostellō is used six times.

(2) The "sending" of the Son by the Father was from the glory which He had with the Father into the world, by way of the Incarnation, not a "sending" out into the world after His birth, as if denoting His mission among and His manifestation to the people. "Hofmann, in support of his view that Jesus is called the Son of God only in virtue of His being born of man, vainly urges that the simple accusative after apostellō also denotes what the Person is or becomes by being sent. What he states is true but only when the name of the object spoken of is chosen to correspond with the purposed mission, as e.g., in Mark 1:2; Luke 14:32; 19:14. We can no more say, 'God sent Jesus that He should be His Son' than we can render 'he sent his servants,' Matt. 21:34, in this manner. That the Sonship of Christ is anterior to His mission to the world ... is clear from John 16:28; cf. especially also the double accusative in 1 John 4:14, 'the Father sent the Son the Savior of the world.' The expression that Jesus is sent by God denotes the mission which He has to fulfill and the authority which backs Him" (Cremer, Lexicon of NT Greek).

3. exapostellō (ἐξαποστέλλω, 1821) denotes (a) "to send forth": of the Son by God the Father, Gal. 4:4; of the Holy Spirit, 4:6; Luke 24:49 in the best texts (some have No. 1); an angel, Acts 12:11; the ancestors of Israel, Acts 7:12; Paul to the Gentiles, 22:21; of the word of salvation, 13:26 (some mss. have No. 1); (b) "to send away," Luke 1:53; 20:10, 11; Acts 9:30; 11:22; 17:14.¶

4. anapempō (ἀναπέμπω, 375) denotes (a) "to send up" (ana, "up," and No. 2), to a higher authority, Luke 23:7, 15; Acts 25:21 (in the best texts; some have No. 2); this meaning is confirmed by examples from the papyri (Moulton and Milligan), by Deissmann (Bible Studies, p. 229); see also Field, Notes on the Trans. of the NT; (b) "to send back," Luke 23:11; Philem. 12.¶

5. ekpempō (ἐκπέμπω, 1599) denotes "to send forth" (ek, "out of"), Acts 13:4, "being sent forth"; 17:10, "sent away."¶

6. ballō (βάλλω, 906), "to cast, throw," is translated "to send (peace)" in Matt. 10:34 (twice), (RV, marg., "cast"). See CAST.

7. ekballō (ἐκβάλλω, 1544), "to cast out," or "send out," is translated "sent out" in Mark 1:43, RV (KJV, "sent away"), and in KJV and RV in Jas. 2:25. See CAST, No. 5.

8. apoluō (ἀπολύω, 630), "to set free, to let go," is translated "to send away" in Matt. 14:15, 22, 23; Mark 6:36, 45; 8:3, 9; Luke 8:38; Acts

13:3, where the "sending" is not that of commissioning, but of letting go, intimating that they would gladly have retained them (contrast ekpempō, the act of commissioning by the Holy Spirit in v. 4).

9. metapempō (μεταπέμπω, 3343), "to send after or for, fetch" (meta, "after"), is used only in the Acts; in the middle voice, translated "to send for" in 10:22, 29 (2nd part: passive voice in the 1st part); 20:1, RV only (some texts have proskaleō); 24:24, 26; 25:3; in 10:5 and 11:13, RV, "fetch." See FETCH.¶

10. bruō (βρύω, 1032), "to be full to bursting," was used of the earth in producing vegetation, of plants in putting forth buds; in Jas. 3:11 it is said of springs gushing with water, "(doth the fountain) send forth . . . ?"¶

11. sunapostellō (συναποστέλλω, 4882), "to send along with," is used in 2 Cor. 12:18.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 33:2, 12.¶

12. sunpempō (συνπέμπω, 4842), "to send along with," is used in 2 Cor. 8:18, 22.¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 13:36, KJV, aphiēmi, "to leave," is translated "He sent . . . away" (RV, "He left"); so in Mark 4:36, KJV, "they had sent away," RV, "leaving." (2) In Mark 6:46, apotassomai, "to take leave of" (RV) is translated "He had sent . . . away." (3) In John 13:16 apostolos is rendered "one (KJV, he) that is sent," RV marg., "an apostle." (4) Paristēmi is rendered "send" in Matt. 26:53, RV

aisthētērion (αἰσθητήριον, 145), "sense, the faculty of perception, the organ of sense" (akin to aisthanomai, "to perceive"), is used in Heb. 5:14, "senses," the capacities for spiritual apprehension.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 4:19, "(I am pained . . . in the) sensitive powers (of my heart)."¶

For SENSUAL see NATURAL, A, No. 2

SENTENCE

A. Nouns.

1. krima (κρίμα, 2917), "a judgment," a decision passed on the faults of others, is used especially of God's judgment upon men, and translated "sentence" in 2 Pet. 2:3, RV (KJV, "judgment"). See JUDGMENT, No. 2.

2. katadikē (κατάδικη, 2613d), "a judicial sentence, condemnation," is translated "sentence" in Acts 25:15, RV (KJV, "judgment"); some mss. have dikē.¶

3. apokrima (ἀπόκριμα, 610) is translated "sentence" in 2 Cor. 1:9, KJV (RV, "answer"). See ANSWER, No. 2.¶

B. Verbs.

1. krinō (κρίνω, 2919), "to judge, to adjudge," is translated "(my) sentence is" in Acts 15:19, KJV, RV, "(my) judgment is," lit., "I (egō, emphatic) judge," introducing the substance or draft of a resolution. See JUDGE, B, No. 1.

2. epikrinō (ἐπικρινω, 1948), "to give sentence," is used in Luke 23:24.¶

SEPARATE

A. Verbs.

1. aphorizō (ἀφορίζω, 873), "to mark off by bounds" (apo, "from," horizō, "to determine"; horos, "a limit"), "to separate," is used of "(a) the Divine action in setting men apart for the work of the gospel, Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:15; (b) the Divine judgment upon men, Matt. 13:49; 25:32; (c) the separation of Christians from unbelievers, Acts 19:9; 2 Cor. 6:17; (d) the separation of believers by unbelievers, Luke 6:22; (e) the withdrawal of Christians from their brethren, Gal. 2:12. In (c) is described what the Christian must do, in (d) what he must be prepared to suffer, and in (e) what he must avoid."¶*

2. chōrizō (χωρίζω, 5563), "to put asunder, separate," is translated "to separate" in Rom. 8:35, 39; in the middle voice, "to separate oneself, depart" (see DEPART); in the passive voice in Heb. 7:26, RV, "separated" (KJV, "separate"), the verb here relates to the resurrection of Christ, not, as KJV indicates, to the fact of His holiness in the days of His flesh; the list is progressive in this respect that the first three qualities apply to His sinlessness, the next to His resurrection, the last to His ascension. See PUT, No. 14.

3. apodiorizō (ἀποδιορίζω, 592), "to mark off" (apo, "from," dia, "asunder," horizō, "to limit"), hence denotes metaphorically to make "separations," Jude 19, RV (KJV, "separate themselves"), of persons who make divisions (in contrast with v. 20); there is no pronoun in the original representing "themselves."¶

chōris (χωρίς, 5565), "apart from, without" (cf. aneu, "without," a rarer word than this), is translated "separate from" in Eph. 2:12 (KJV, "without"). See APART, BESIDE, WITHOUT.

For SEPARATIONS see No. 3, above

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 83.

SEPULCHRE

1. taphos (τάφος, 5028), akin to thaptō, "to bury," originally "a burial," then, "a place for burial, a tomb," occurs in Matt. 23:27; v. 29, RV (KJV, "tombs"); 27:61, 64, 66; 28:1; metaphorically, Rom. 3:13.¶

2 and 3. mnēma (μνῆμα) and mnēmeion (μνημεῖον): see GRAVE.

SERGEANT (-S)

rhabdouchos (ῥαβδοῦχος, 4465), "a rod bearer" (rhabdos, "a rod," echō, "to hold"), one who carries a staff of office, was, firstly, an umpire or judge, later, a Roman lictor, Acts 16:35, 38. The duty of these officials was to attend Roman magistrates to execute their orders, especially administering punishment by scourging or beheading; they carried as their sign of office the fasces (whence "Fascist"), a bundle of rods with an axe inserted. At Philippi they acted under the stratēgoi or pretors (see MAGISTRATE, No. 1.)¶

SERPENT

1. ophis (ὄφις, 3789): the characteristics of the "serpent" as alluded to in Scripture are mostly evil (though Matt. 10:16 refers to its caution in avoiding danger); its treachery, Gen. 49:17; 2 Cor. 11:3; its venom, Ps. 58:4; 1 Cor. 10:9; Rev. 9:19; its skulking, Job 26:13; its murderous proclivities, e.g., Ps. 58:4; Prov. 23:32; Eccl. 10:8, 11; Amos 5:19; Mark 16:18; Luke 10:19; the Lord used the word metaphorically of the scribes and Pharisees, Matt. 23:33 (cf. echidna, "viper," in Matt. 3:7; 12:34). The general aspects of its evil character are intimated in the Lord's rhetorical question in Matt. 7:10 and Luke 11:11. Its characteristics are concentrated in the archadversary of God and man, the Devil, metaphorically described as the serpent, 2 Cor. 11:3; Rev. 12:9, 14, 15; 20:2. The brazen "serpent" lifted up by Moses was symbolical of the means of salvation provided by God, in Christ and His vicarious death under the divine judgment upon sin, John 3:14. While the living "serpent" symbolizes sin in its origin, hatefulness, and deadly effect, the brazen "serpent" symbolized the bearing away of the curse and the judgment of sin; the metal was itself figurative of the righteousness of God's judgment.¶

2. herpeton (ἑρπετόν, 2062), "a creeping thing" (from herpō, "to creep"), "a reptile," is rendered "serpents" in Jas. 3:7, KJV (RV, "creeping things," as elsewhere). See CREEP, B.

SERVANT

A. Nouns.

1. doulos (δοῦλος, 1401), an adjective, signifying "in bondage," Rom. 6:19 (neuter plural, agreeing with melē, "members"), is used as a noun, and as the most common and general word for "servant," frequently indicating subjection without the idea of bondage; it is used (a) of natural conditions, e.g., Matt. 8:9; 1 Cor. 7:21, 22 (1st part); Eph. 6:5; Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:1; frequently in the four Gospels; (b) metaphorically of spiritual, moral and ethical conditions: "servants" (1) of God, e.g., Acts 16:17; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 2:16; Rev. 7:3; 15:3; the perfect example being Christ Himself, Phil. 2:7; (2) of Christ, e.g., Rom. 1:1; 1 Cor. 7:22 (2nd part); Gal. 1:10; Eph. 6:6; Phil. 1:1; Col. 4:12; Jas. 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:1; Jude 1; (3) of sin, John 8:34 (RV, "bondservants"); Rom. 6:17, 20; (4) of corruption, 2 Pet. 2:19 (RV, "bondservants"); cf. the verb douloō (see B). See BONDMAN.

2. diakonos (διάκονος, 1249), for which see DEACON and Note there on synonymous words, is translated "servant" or "servants" in Matt. 22:13 (RV marg., "ministers"); 23:11 (RV marg., ditto); Mark 9:35, KJV (RV, "minister"); John 2:5, 9; 12:26; Rom. 16:1.

3. pais (παῖς, 3816), for which see CHILD, No. 4, also denotes "an attendant"; it is translated "servant" (a) of natural conditions, in Matt. 8:6, 8, 13; 14:2; Luke 7:7 ("menservants" in 12:45); 15:26; (b) of spiritual relation to God, (1) of Israel, Luke 1:54; (2) of David, Luke 1:69; Acts 4:25; (3) of Christ, so declared by God the Father, Matt. 12:18; spoken of in prayer, Acts 4:27, 30, RV (KJV, "child"); the argument advanced by Dalman for the rendering "Child" in these passages, is not sufficiently valid as against the RV, "Servant" in Acts 4, and the KJV and RV in Matt. 12 (cf., e.g., the use of pais in the Sept. of Gen. 41:38; Jer. 36:24). The Matt. 12 passage by direct quotation, and the Acts 4 passages by implication, refer to the ideal "Servant of Jehovah" (Sept., pais Kuriou), of Isa. 42:1 and following passages, thus identifying the Servant with the Lord Jesus; for the same identification, cf. Acts 8:35.

4. oiketēs (οἰκέτης, 3610), "a house servant" (oikeō, "to dwell," oikos, "a house"), is translated "servant" in Luke 16:13 (RV marg., "household servant"); so Rom. 14:4 and 1 Pet. 2:18; in Acts 10:7, KJV and RV, "household servants." ¶

5. hupēretēs (ὑπηρέτης, 5257), for which see MINISTER, No. 3, and OFFICER, is translated "servants" in the KJV of Matt. 26:58; Mark 14:65

(RV, "officers"); in John 18:36, KJV and RV (RV, marg., "officers").

6. therapōn (θεράπων, 2324), akin to therapeuō, "to serve, to heal, an attendant, servant," is a term of dignity and freedom, used of Moses in Heb. 3:5.¶

7. sundoulos (σύνδουλος, 4889), "a fellow servant," is used (a) of natural conditions, Matt. 18:28, 29, 31, 33; 24:49; (b) of "servants" of the same divine Lord, Col. 1:7; 4:7; Rev. 6:11; of angels, Rev. 19:10; 22:9.¶

Note: For misthios and misthōtos, see HIRED SERVANT.

B. Verb.

douloō (δουλόω, 1402), "to enslave, to bring into bondage" (akin to A, No. 1), e.g., 1 Cor. 9:19, RV, "I brought (myself) under bondage (to all)," KJV, "I made myself servant," denotes in the passive voice, "to be brought into bondage, to become a slave or servant," rendered "ye became servants (of righteousness)" in Rom. 6:18; "being . . . become servants (to God)," v. 22. See BONDAGE, B, No. 2.

SERVE

1. diakoneō (διακονέω, 1247), "to minister" (akin to diakonos, No. 2, above), "to render any kind of service," is translated "to serve," e.g., in Luke 10:40; 12:37; 17:8; 22:26, 27 (twice); see MINISTER, B, No. 1.

2. douleuō (δουλεύω, 1398), "to serve as a doulos" (No. 1, above), is used (a) of serving God (and the impossibility of serving mammon also), Matt. 6:24 and Luke 16:13; Rom. 7:6; in the gospel, Phil. 2:22; (b) Christ, Acts 20:19; Rom. 12:11; 14:18; 16:18; Eph. 6:7; Col. 3:24; (c) the law of God, Rom. 7:25; (d) one another, Gal. 5:13, RV, "be servants to" (KJV, "serve"); (e) a father, Luke 15:29 (with a suggestion of acting as a slave); (f) earthly masters, Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; 1 Tim. 6:2, RV, "serve"; (g) the younger by the elder, Rom. 9:12; (h) of being in bondage to a nation, Acts 7:7; Gal. 4:25, to the Romans, actually, though also spiritually to Judaizers; (i) to idols, Gal. 4:8, RV, "were in bondage" (KJV, "did service"); (j) to "the weak and beggarly rudiments," v. 9 (RV), "to be in bondage" (aorist tense in the best texts, suggesting "to enter into bondage"), i.e., to the religion of the Gentiles ("rudiments" being used in v. 3 of the religion of the Jews); (k) sin, Rom. 6:6, RV, "be in bondage" (KJV, "serve"); (l) "divers lusts and pleasures," Titus 3:3; (m) negatively, to any man—a proud and thoughtless denial by the Jews, John 8:33.¶

3. latreuō (λατρεύω, 3000), primarily "to work for hire" (akin to latris, "a hired servant"), signifies (1) to worship, (2) to "serve"; in the latter sense it is used of service (a) to God, Matt. 4:10; Luke 1:74 ("without fear"); 4:8; Acts 7:7; 24:14, RV, "serve" (KJV, "worship"); 26:7; 27:23; Rom. 1:9 ("with my spirit"); 2 Tim. 1:3; Heb. 9:14; 12:28, KJV, "we may serve," RV, "we may offer service"; Rev. 7:15; (b) to God and Christ ("the Lamb"), Rev. 22:3; (c) in the tabernacle, Heb. 8:5, RV; 13:10; (d) to "the host of heaven," Acts 7:42, RV, "to serve" (KJV, "to worship"); (e) to "the creature," instead of the Creator, Rom. 1:25, of idolatry: see WORSHIP.

Note: In Luke 2:37 the RV has "worshiping," for KJV, "served"; in Heb. 9:9, "the worshiper," for KJV, "that did the service."

4. hupēreteō (ὑπηρετέω, 5256), for which see MINISTER, B, No. 3, is translated "to serve" in Acts 13:36; there is a contrast intimated between the service of David, lasting for only a generation, and the eternal character of Christ's ministry as the One who not having seen corruption was raised from the dead.

SERVICE, SERVING

1. diakonia (διακονία, 1248) is rendered "service" in Rom. 15:31, KJV; "serving" in Luke 10:40. See MINISTRY, A, No. 1.

2. leitourgia (λειτουργία, 3009) is rendered "service" in 2 Cor. 9:12; Phil. 2:17, 30. See MINISTRY, A, No. 2.

3. latreia (λατρεία, 2999), akin to latreuō (see No. 3, above), primarily "hired service," is used (a) of the "service" of God in connection with the tabernacle, Rom. 9:4; Heb. 9:1, "divine service"; v. 6, plural, RV, "services" (KJV, "service", and, in italics, "of God"); (b) of the intelligent "service" of believers in presenting their bodies to God, a living sacrifice, Rom. 12:1, RV marg., "worship"; (c) of imagined "service" to God by persecutors of Christ's followers, John 16:2.¶

Note: For "soldier on service," 2 Tim. 2:3, RV, see SOLDIER, B.

SET

A. Verbs.

1. histēmi (ἵστημι, 2476), "to cause to stand," is translated "to set" in Matt. 4:5 (aorist tense in the best texts; some have the present, as in KJV); 18:2; 25:33; Mark 9:36; Luke 4:9; 9:47; John 8:3; Acts 4:7; 5:27; 6:6; v. 13, "set up"; 22:30; in Jude 24, RV, "to set" (KJV, "to present"). See ABIDE, No. 10.

2. kathistēmi (καθίστημι, 2525), lit., "to set down" (kata, "down," and No. 1), "to appoint, constitute," is translated "to set" in Matt. 24:45, 47; 25:21, 23, RV (KJV, "made"); so Luke 12:42, 44; it is found in some mss. in Heb. 2:7, and translated "set over" (KJV). See APPOINT, No. 2.

3. tithēmi (τίθημι, 5087), "to put, to place," is translated "to set" in Acts 1:7, of times and seasons (KJV, "put"); Acts 13:47; Rev. 10:2; "setteth on" (of wine) in John 2:10, RV (KJV, "doth set forth"); in the KJV of Mark 4:21 (2nd part) and in Luke 8:16 it is rendered "set" (RV, "put"), of a lamp (some texts have No. 6 in both). In Mark 4:30 it is used of "setting" forth by parable the teaching concerning the kingdom of God, RV, "shall we set (it) forth" (KJV, "compare"). See APPOINT, No. 3.

4. paratithēmi (παρατίθημι, 3908), "to place beside" (para, "beside," and No. 3), "to set forth," of a parable, Matt. 13:24, RV (KJV, "put forth"); "to set before," of food, Mark 6:41; 8:6 (twice), 7; Luke 9:16; 10:8; 11:6; Acts 16:34; 1 Cor. 10:27. See ALLEGE, No. 1, PUT, No. 3.

5. peritithēmi (περιτίθημι, 4060), "to place or put around" (peri, "around," and No. 3), is translated "to set about" (of a hedge) in Mark 12:1. See BESTOW, No. 5, PUT.

6. epitithēmi (ἐπιτίθημι, 2007), "to put, set or lay upon," is used of the placing over the head of Christ on the cross "His accusation," Matt. 27:37, "set up"; of attacking a person, Acts 18:10, "shall set on." See ADD, No. 1.

7. protithēmi (προτίθημι, 4388), "to set before" (pro, "before," and No. 3), is used in the middle voice, translated "set forth," of Christ, in Rom. 3:25 (RV marg., "purposed"). See PURPOSE, B, No. 3.

8. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," is translated "I have set before" in Rev. 3:8 (RV marg., "given"). See GIVE.

9. kathizō (καθίζω, 2523), used transitively, signifies "to cause to sit down, set, appoint," translated "to set" in Acts 2:30, RV (KJV, incorrectly, "to sit"); in 1 Cor. 6:4, of appointing, i.e., obtaining the services of, judges in lawcourts; in Eph. 1:20, RV, "made (Him) to sit" (KJV, "set").

Note: In Heb. 8:1, kathizō is used intransitively, RV, "sat down" (KJV, "is set"); so in 12:2, RV, "hath sat down" (KJV, "is set down"); Rev. 3:21, RV, "I . . . sat down" (KJV, "am set down"). So epikathizō in Matt. 21:7 (last part), RV, "He sat" [some mss. have the plural in a transitive sense, KJV, "they set (Him)]." See SIT, No. 8.

10. tassō (τάσσω, 5021), "to arrange, assign, order," is translated "set (under authority)" in Luke 7:8. In 1 Cor. 16:15, RV, "have set (themselves)," KJV, "addicted." See APPOINT, No. 5.

11. anatassomai (ἀνατάσσομαι, 392), "to arrange in order, draw up in order" (ana, "up," and the middle voice of No. 10), occurs in Luke 1:1, KJV, "to set forth in order," RV, "to draw up." See DRAW, No. 9.¶

12. dunō (δύνω, 1416), "to sink into," is used of the "setting" of the sun, Mark 1:32, "did set"; Luke 4:40, "was setting." The sun, moon and stars were conceived of as sinking into the sea when they set.¶

13. sunallassō (συναλλάσσω, 4862, 236), "to reconcile" (sun, "together," allassō, "to change or exchange"), is translated "he . . . would have set (them at one, lit., 'into peace') again" in Acts 7:26 (the imperfect tense being conative, expressing an attempt); some mss. have sunelaunō, "to drive together, force together."¶

14. katangellō (καταγγέλλω, 2605), "to declare, proclaim," is translated "set forth" in Acts 16:21, RV (KJV, "teach"); "set I forth" in Acts 17:23, RV (KJV, "declare I"). See DECLARE, No. 4.

15. enechō (ἐνέχω, 1758), "to hold in," has a secondary significance of "setting oneself against a person," "being urgent against," Mark 6:19; Luke 11:53 (RV, marg.). See ENTANGLE, No. 3, QUARREL, URGE.

16. propempō (προπέμπω, 4311), lit., "to send forward" (pro, "forward," pempō, "to send"), is translated "set forward" in Titus 3:13, RV (KJV, "bring") and in 3 John 6, RV (KJV, "bring forward"), of practical assistance to servants of God in their journeys. See ACCOMPANY, No. 4.

17. apodeiknumi (ἀποδείκνυμι, 584), "to show forth, declare," is translated "set forth" in 1 Cor. 4:9, here, a technical term, used for exhibiting gladiators in an arena, "last of all" referring to the grand finale, to make the most thrilling sport for the spectators (cf. 15:32); prophets and others had preceded the apostles in the spectacle; in 2 Thess. 2:4 it is used of the man of sin, who will "set (himself) forth (as God)," KJV, "showing." Elsewhere Acts 2:22; 25:7. See APPROVE, PROVE.¶ The word is frequently used in the papyri of the proclamation of the accession of a king or the appointment of an official. Cf. apodeixis, "demonstration," 1 Cor. 2:4.¶

18. epibibazō (ἐπιβιβάζω, 1913), "to place upon," is used of causing persons to mount animals for riding, Luke 10:34; 19:35; Acts 23:24.¶

19. stērizō (στηρίζω, 4741), "to fix, establish," is rendered "He steadfastly set (His face)" in Luke 9:51. See ESTABLISH, No. 1.

20. anorthoō (ἀνορθόω, 461), "to set straight, set up" (ana, "up," orthos, "straight"), is used in Acts 15:16 in God's promise to "set" up the fallen tabernacle (skēnē, "tent") of David. The word is used in the papyri of rearing buildings again. See LIFT, No. 6, STRAIGHT.

21. keimai (κεῖμαι, 2749), "to lie, to be laid" (used as the passive voice of tithēmi, No. 3), is translated "to be set," e.g., in Matt. 5:14 (of a city); Luke 2:34 (of Christ); John 2:6 (of waterpots); 19:29 (of a vessel of vinegar); Phil. 1:16, RV (v. 17, KJV) (of the apostle Paul); Rev. 4:2 (of the throne in heaven). See APPOINT, LAY, LIE.

22. anakeimai (ἀνάκειμαι, 345), "to be laid up" (ana "up"), "to recline at a meal," is so used in John 6:11, "(to them) that were set down." See LEAN, LIE, Note (1) SIT, No. 3.

23. prokeimai (πρόκειμαι, 4295) signifies (a) "to be set before" (pro, "before," and No. 21), and is so rendered in Heb. 6:18 of the hope of the believer; 12:1, of the Christian race; v. 2, of the joy "set" before Christ in the days of His flesh and at His death; (b) "to be set forth," said of Sodom and Gomorrah, in Jude 7. It is used elsewhere in 2 Cor. 8:12, for which see FIRST, D, Note (2).¶

24. prographō (προγράφω, 4270), "to write before," is translated "were set forth (unto this condemnation)" in Jude 4, RV (KJV, "ordained"); the evil teachers were "designated of old for this judgment" (cf. 2 Pet. 2:3). For the meaning of this verb in Gal. 3:1, RV, "openly set forth," see OPENLY, No. 2, Note. See WRITE.

B. Adjective.

taktos (τακτός, 5002), an adjective (from tassō, A, No. 10), "ordered, fixed, set," is said of an appointed day, in Acts 12:21.¶ In the Sept., Job 12:5.¶

Notes: (1) For "to set at liberty" (apoluō and apostellō), see LIBERTY. (2) In Acts 21:2, KJV, anagō, "to set sail" (RV), is translated "set forth"; see LAUNCH. (3) In Luke 22:55, KJV, sunkathizō, "to sit down together" (RV), is translated "were set down together." See SIT, No. 10. (4) For Acts 7:5, "to set his foot on," see FOOT, A, No. 1, Note. (5) In Acts 13:9, KJV, atenizō, "to look fixedly, gaze," is rendered "set his eyes on" (RV, "fastened his eyes on"). See FASTEN, No. 1. (6) In Matt. 27:19, KJV, kathēmai, "to sit," is rendered "he was set down" (RV, "he was sitting"). See SIT, No. 1. (7) In John 13:12, (KJV, anapiptō, "to recline at table," is translated "was set down" (RV, "sat down"; marg., "reclined"). See RECLINE. (8) In Matt. 27:66 there is no word in the Greek representing the KJV "setting"; the RV has "the guard being with them," lit., "with (meta) the guard." (9) The verb is combined with other words, e.g., AFFECTION, FIRE, MIND, NOUGHT, ORDER, SEAL, UPROAR, VARIANCE.

SETTER FORTH

katangeleus (καταγγελεύς, 2604), "a proclaimer, herald" (akin to katangellō, "to proclaim"), is used in Acts 17:18, "a setter forth (of strange gods)." It is found in inscriptions in connection with proclamations made in public places.¶

tithēmi (τίθημι, 5087), "to put, place," is translated "settle (it therefore in your hearts)" in Luke 21:14, active voice in the best texts (some have the middle), the aorist tense signifying complete decision, i.e., "resolve" (not "consider"); cf. Acts 5:4, "to conceive in the heart," and contrast Luke 1:66, "to lay up" (both have aorist tense, middle voice). See APPOINT, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In 1 Pet. 5:10, some texts have themelioō, "to lay a foundation," used metaphorically, and translated "settle," KJV. (2) In Col. 1:23, KJV, hedraios, lit., "seated" (hedra, "a seat"), is translated "settled" (RV, "steadfast"). (3) For epiluō see DETERMINE, No. 4.

SEVEN

hepta (ἑπτά, 2033), whence Eng. words beginning with "hept"—, corresponds to the Heb. sheba' (which is akin to sāba', signifying "to be full, abundant"), sometimes used as an expression of fullness, e.g., Ruth 4:15: it generally expresses completeness, and is used most frequently in the Apocalypse; it is not found in the Gospel of John, nor between the Acts and the Apocalypse, except in Heb. 11:30 (in Rom. 11:4 the numeral is heptakischilioi, "seven thousand"); in Matt. 22:26 it is translated "seventh" (marg., "seven").

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:5, RV, "Noah with seven others" is a translation into idiomatic English of the Greek idiom "Noah the eighth person" (so KJV, translating literally). See EIGHTH.

SEVENTH

hebdomos (ἕβδομος, 1442) occurs in John 4:52; Heb. 4:4 (twice); Jude 14; Rev. 8:1; 10:7; 11:15; 16:17; 21:20.¶

SEVEN TIMES

heptakis (ἑπτάκις, 2034) occurs in Matt. 18:21, 22; Luke 17:4 (twice).¶

SEVENTY

hebdomēkonta (ἑβδομήκοντα, 1440) occurs in Luke 10:1, 17; in Acts 7:14 it precedes pente, "five," lit., "seventy-five," rendered "threescore and fifteen"; for the details see FIFTEEN, Note

(1); in 23:23 it is translated "threescore and ten"; in 27:37 it precedes hex, "six," lit., "seventy-six," rendered "threescore and sixteen."¶

hebdomēkontakis (ἑβδομηκοντάκις, 1441) occurs in Matt. 18:22, where it is followed by hepta, "seven," "seventy times seven"; RV marg. has "seventy times and seven," which many have regarded as the meaning; cf. Gen. 4:24 (Winer, in Winer-Moulton, Gram., p. 314, remarks that while this would be the strict meaning, it "would not suit the passage"; his translator, W. F. Moulton, in a footnote, expresses the opinion that it would. So also J. H. Moulton, Prol., p. 98, says: "A definite allusion to the Genesis story is highly probable: Jesus pointedly sets against the natural man's craving for seventy-sevenfold revenge the spiritual man's ambition to exercise the privilege of seventy-sevenfold forgiveness").

The Lord's reply "until seventy times seven" was indicative of completeness, the absence of any limit, and was designed to turn away Peter's mind from a merely numerical standard. God's forgiveness is limitless; so should man's be.¶

SEVER

1. katargeō (καταργέω, 2673), lit., "to reduce to inactivity" (see ABOLISH, where all the occurrences are given), is rendered "ye are severed (from Christ)" in Gal. 5:4, RV; the aorist tense indicates that point of time at which there was an acceptance of the Judaistic doctrines; to those who accepted these Christ would be of no profit, they were as branches severed from the tree.

2. aphorizō (ἀφορίζω, 873), "to separate from," is used of the work of the angels at the end of this age, in "severing" the wicked from among the righteous, Matt. 13:49, a premillennial act quite distinct from the rapture of the Church as set forth in 1 Thess. 4. See DIVIDE, No. 1.

idios (ἴδιος, 2398), "one's own," is translated "several (ability)," in Matt. 25:15.

Note: For Rev. 21:21, "the several gates," RV, see EVERY, No. 3.

idiᾳ (ἰδίᾳ, 2398), the dative case, feminine, of idios (see above), is used adverbially, signifying "severally," in 1 Cor. 12:11.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 12:5, kata (kath') followed by the numeral heis, "one," and preceded by the article, signifies "severally," RV (KJV, "every one"). Cf. EVERY, Note (1). (2) In 1 Cor. 12:27, RV, the phrase ek merous, lit., "out of a part" (meros), is rendered "severally" (KJV, "in particular"). (3) In Heb. 9:5, RV, the phrase kata meros, lit., "according to a part," is rendered "severally." (4) For Eph. 5:33, RV, "severally," see EVERY, No. 3.

SEVERITY

1. apotomia (ἀποτομία, 663), "steepness, sharpness" (apo, "off," temnō, "to cut"; tomē, "a cutting"), is used metaphorically in Rom. 11:22 (twice) of "the severity of God," which lies in His temporary retributive dealings with Israel.¶ In the papyri it is used of exacting to the full the provisions of a statute. Cf. the adverb apotomōs, "sharply" (which see).

2. apheidia (ἀφειδία, 857), primarily "extravagance" (a, negative, pheidomai, "to spare"), hence, "unsparing treatment, severity," is used in Col. 2:23, RV, "severity (to the body)," KJV, "neglecting of" (marg., "punishing, not sparing"); here it refers to ascetic discipline; it was often used among the Greeks of courageous exposure to hardship and danger.¶

epiraptō or epirrhaptō (ἐπιράπτω, 1976) (epi, "upon," rhaptō, "to sew or stitch"), is used in Mark 2:21.¶

SHADOW (Noun)

1. skia (σκιά, 4639) is used (a) of "a shadow," caused by the interception of light, Mark 4:32, Acts 5:15; metaphorically of the darkness and spiritual death of ignorance, Matt. 4:16; Luke 1:79; (b) of "the image" or "outline" cast by an object, Col. 2:17, of ceremonies under the Law; of the tabernacle and its appurtenances and offerings, Heb. 8:5; of these as appointed under the Law, Heb. 10:1.¶

2. aposkiasma (ἀποσκίασμα, 644), "a shadow," is rendered "shadow that is cast" in Jas. 1:17, RV; the KJV makes no distinction between this and No. 1. The probable significance of this word is "overshadowing" or "shadowing-over" (which apo may indicate), and this with the genitive case of tropē, "turning," yields the meaning "shadowing-over of mutability" implying an alternation of "shadow" and light; of this there are two alternative explanations, namely, "overshadowing" (1) not caused by mutability in God, or (2) caused by change in others, i.e., "no changes in this lower world can cast a shadow on the unchanging Fount of light" [Mayor, who further remarks, "The meaning of the passage will then be, 'God is alike incapable of change (parallagē) and incapable of being changed by the action of others'"].

For SHADOWING, Heb. 9:5, KJV, see OVERSHADOW

SHAKE

1. saleuō (σαλεύω, 4531), "to agitate, shake," primarily of the action of stormy winds, waves, etc., is used (a) literally, of a reed, Matt. 11:7; Luke 7:24; a vessel, "shaken" in filling, Luke 6:38; a building, Luke 6:48; Acts 4:31; 16:26; the natural forces of the heavens and heavenly bodies, Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:25; Luke 21:26; the earth, Heb. 12:26, "shook"; (b) metaphorically, (1) of "shaking" so as to make insecure, Heb. 12:27 (twice); (2) of casting down from a sense of security, Acts 2:25, "I should (not) be moved"; (3) to stir up (a crowd), Acts 17:13; (4) to unsettle, 2 Thess. 2:2, "(to the end that) ye be not (quickly) shaken (from your mind)," i.e., from their settled conviction and the purpose of heart begotten by it, as to the return of Christ before the Day of the Lord begins; the metaphor may be taken from the loosening of a ship from its moorings by a storm. See MOVE, STIR.¶

2. seiō (σείω, 4579), "to shake to and fro," is rendered "to shake" in Matt. 28:4, KJV; Heb. 12:26, KJV; Rev. 6:13, KJV and RV; see MOVE, No. 3.

3. apotinassō (ἀποτινάσσω, 660), "to shake off" (apo, "from," tinassō, "to shake"), is used in Luke 9:5, of dust from the feet; Acts 28:5, of a viper from the hand.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 16:20; 1 Sam 10:2; Lam. 2:7.¶

4. ektinassō (ἐκτινάσσω, 1621), "to shake out," is used of "shaking off" the dust from the feet, Matt. 10:14; Mark 6:11; Acts 13:51; of "shaking out" one's raiment, Acts 18:6.¶

mellō (μέλλω, 3195), "to be about (to be or do)," is used of purpose, certainty, compulsion or necessity. It is rendered simply by "shall" or "should" (which frequently represent elsewhere part of the future tense of the verb) in the following (the RV sometimes translates differently, as noted): Matt. 16:27 (1st part), lit., "is about to come"; 17:12, 22; 20:22, RV, "am about"; 24:6; Mark 13:4 (2nd part), RV,"are about"; Luke 9:44; 21:7 (2nd part), RV, "are about"; v. 36; Acts 23:3; 24:15; 26:2, RV, "I am (to)"; Rom. 4:24; 8:13 (1st part), RV, "must"; v. 18; 2 Tim. 4:1; Heb. 1:14; 10:27; Jas. 2:12, RV, "are to"; 1 Pet. 5:1; Rev. 1:19; 2:10 (1st and 2nd parts), RV, "art about," "is about"; 3:10, RV, "is (to)"; 17:8 (1st part), RV, "is about." See ABOUT, B.

Notes: (1) The use of "shall, shalt," is frequently part of the rendering of a future tense of a verb. (2) The phrase "it shall come to pass" is the rendering of the future tense of eimi, "to be," in Acts 2:17, 21; 3:23; Rom. 9:26.

makellon (μάκελλον, 3111), a term of late Greek borrowed from the Latin macellum, denotes a "meat market," translated "shambles" in 1 Cor. 10:25. The word is found in the koinē, or vernacular Greek covering the time of the NT, illustrating this passage (see Deissmann, Light from the Ancient East, 274). A plan, drawn by Lietzmann, of a forum in Pompeii, shows both the slaughterhouse and the meat shop next to the chapel of Caesar. Some of the meat which had been used for sacrificial purposes was afterwards sold in the markets. The apostle enjoins upon the believer to enter into no inquiry, so as to avoid the troubling of conscience (contrast v. 28).¶

SHAME (Noun, and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. atimia (ἀτιμία, 819) signifies (a) "shame, disgrace," Rom 1:26, "vile (passions)," RV, lit., "(passions) of shame"; 1 Cor. 11:14; (b) "dishonor," e.g., 2 Tim. 2:20, where the idea of disgrace or "shame" does not attach to the use of the word; the meaning is that while in a great house some vessels are designed for purposes of honor, others have no particular honor (timē) attached to their use (the prefix a simply negatives the idea of honor). See DISHONOR.

2. aischunē (αἰσχύνη, 152): See ASHAMED, B, No. 1.

3. entropē (ἐντροπή, 1791), 1 Cor. 6:5 and 15:34. See ASHAMED, B, No. 2.¶

4. aschēmosunē (ἀσχημοσύνη, 808) denotes (a) "unseemliness," Rom. 1:27, RV (KJV, "that which is unseemly"); (b) "shame, nakedness," Rev. 16:15, a euphemism for No. 2.¶

B. Adjective.

aischros (αἰσχρός, 150), "base, shameful" (akin to aischos, "shame"), of that which is opposed to modesty or purity, is translated as a noun in 1 Cor. 11:6; 14:35, KJV (RV, "shameful"); Eph. 5:12; in Titus 1:11, "filthy (lucre)," lit., "shameful (gain)." See FILTHY.¶

C. Verbs.

1. atimazō (ἀτιμάζω, 818), "to dishonor, put to shame" (akin to A, No. 1): see DISHONOR, C, No. 1.

2. entrepō (ἐντρέπω, 1788), lit., "to turn in upon, to put to shame" (akin to A, No. 3), is translated "to shame (you)" in 1 Cor. 4:14. See ASHAMED, A, No. 4.

3. kataischunō (καταισχύνω, 2617), "to put to shame" (kata, perhaps signifying "utterly"), is translated "ye... shame (them)" in 1 Cor. 11:22, KJV, RV, "ye... put (them) to shame." See ASHAMED, A, No. 3.

4. paradeigmatizō (παραδειγματίζω, 3856) signifies "to set forth as an example" (para, "beside," deiknumi, "to show"), and is used in Heb. 6:6 of those Jews, who, though attracted to, and closely associated with, the Christian faith, without having experienced more than a tasting of the heavenly gift and partaking of the Holy Ghost (not actually receiving Him), were tempted to apostatize to Judaism, and, thereby crucifying the Son of God a second time, would "put Him to an open shame." So were criminals exposed.¶ In the Sept., Num. 25:4; Jer. 13:22; Ezek. 28:17.¶

SHAMEFASTNESS (KJV, SHAMEFACEDNESS)

aidōs (αἰδώς, 127), "a sense of shame, modesty," is used regarding the demeanor of women in the church, 1 Tim. 2:9 (some mss. have it in Heb. 12:28 for deos, "awe": here only in NT). "Shamefastness is that modesty which is 'fast' or rooted in the character... The change to 'shamefacedness' is the more to be regretted because shamefacedness... has come rather to describe an awkward diffidence, such as we sometimes call sheepishness" (Davies; Bible English, p. 12).

As to aidōs and aischunē (see ASHAMED, B, No. 1), aidōs is more objective, having regard to others; it is the stronger word. "Aidōs would always restrain a good man from an unworthy act, aischunē would sometimes restrain a bad one" (Trench, Syn. §xix, xx).

SHAMEFULLY (ENTREAT)

Note: This forms part of the rendering of (a) atimazō, Mark 12:4, Luke 20:11, see DISHONOR, C, No. 1, ENTREAT, Note, HANDLE, No. 4; (b) hubrizō, "to insult," Acts 14:5, RV; 1 Thess. 2:2, "were (RV, having been) shamefully entreated." See SPITEFULLY.

SHAPE

1. eidos (εἶδος, 1491), rendered "shape" in the KJV of Luke 3:22 and John 5:37: see FORM, No. 4.

2. homoiōma (ὁμοίωμα, 3667), rendered "shapes" in Rev. 9:7: see LIKENESS, No. 1.

For SHARERS (Heb. 2:14) see PARTAKE, B, No. 1.

SHARP, SHARPER, SHARPLY, SHARPNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. oxus (ὀξύς, 3691) denotes (a) "sharp" (Eng., "oxy—)," said of a sword, Rev. 1:16; 2:12; 19:15; of a sickle, 14:14, 17, 18 (twice); (b) of motion, "swift," Rom. 3:15. See SWIFT.¶

2. tomos (τομός, 5114*), akin to temnō, "to cut" [Eng., "(ana)tomy," etc.], is used metaphorically in the comparative degree, tomōteros, in Heb. 4:12, of the Word of God.¶

B. Adverb.

apotomōs (ἀποτόμως, 664) signifies "abruptly, curtly," lit., "in a manner that cuts" (apo, "from," temnō, "to cut," hence "sharply, severely," 2 Cor. 13:10, RV, "(that I may not... deal) sharply," KJV, "(use) sharpness"; the pronoun "you" is to be understood, i.e., "that I may not use (or deal with)... sharply"; Titus 1:13, of rebuking.¶ Cf. apotomia, "severity."

SHAVE

xuraō (ξυράω, 3587), a late form of xureō, or xurō, from xuron, "a razor," occurs in Acts 21:24 (middle voice), in connection with a vow (Num. 6:2–18; cf. Acts 18:18: see SHEAR); 1 Cor. 11:5, 6 (2nd part in each).¶

SHE

Note: The words under HE in their feminine forms are used for this pronoun.

SHEAR, SHEARER, SHORN

keirō (κείρω, 2751) is used (a) of "shearing sheep," Acts 8:32, "shearer," lit., "the (one) shearing": (b) in the middle voice, "to have one's hair cut off, be shorn," Acts 18:18; 1 Cor. 11:6 (twice; cf. xuraō, "to shave"; see above).¶

thēkē (θήκη, 2336), "a place to put something in" (akin to tithēmi, "to put"), "a receptacle, chest, case," is used of the "sheath" of a sword, John 18:11.¶

SHED

1. ekcheō (ἐκχέω, 1632), "to pour out," is translated "to shed" or "to shed forth" in Acts 2:33; Titus 3:6, KJV; of "shedding" blood in murder, Rom. 3:15. See POUR, No. 3.

2. ekchunō, or ekchunnō (ἐκχύνω, 1632), a later form of No. 1, is used of the voluntary giving up of His life by Christ through the "shedding" of His blood in crucifixion as an atoning sacrifice, Matt. 26:28; Mark 14:24; Luke 22:20, KJV, "is shed," RV, "is poured out"; these passages do not refer to the effect of the piercing of His side (which took place after His death); of the murder of servants of God, Matt. 23:35; Luke 11:50; Acts 22:20 (in the best texts; others have No. 1); of the love of God in the hearts of believers through the Holy Spirit, Rom. 5:5. For the "pouring out" of the Holy Spirit, Acts 10:45, see POUR, No. 4. (The form in the last two passages might equally well come from No. 1, above.) See GUSH OUT, RUN, SPILL.

SHEEP

1. probaton(προβατον, 4263), from probainō, "to go forward," i.e., of the movement of quadrupeds, was used among the Greeks of small cattle, sheep and goats; in the NT, of "sheep" only (a) naturally, e.g., Matt. 12:11, 12; (b) metaphorically, of those who belong to the Lord, the lost ones of the house of Israel, Matt. 10:6; of those who are under the care of the Good Shepherd, e.g., Matt. 26:31; John 10:1, lit., "the fold of the sheep," and vv. 2–27; 21:16, 17 in some texts; Heb. 13:20; of those who in a future day, at the introduction of the millennial kingdom, have shown kindness to His persecuted earthly people in their great tribulation, Matt. 25:33; of the clothing of false shepherds, Matt. 7:15; (c) figuratively, by way of simile, of Christ, Acts 8:32; of the disciples, e.g., Matt. 10:16; of true followers of Christ in general, Rom. 8:36; of the former wayward condition of those who had come under His Shepherd care, 1 Pet. 2:25; of the multitudes who sought the help of Christ in the days of His flesh, Matt. 9:36; Mark 6:34.

2. probation (προβάτιον, 4263*), a diminutive of No. 1, "a little sheep," is found in the best texts in John 21:16, 17 (some have No. 1); distinct from arnia, "lambs" (v. 15), but used as a term of endearment.¶

Note: For "keeping sheep," Luke 17:7, RV, see CATTLE.

For SHEEPFOLD see FOLD

SHEEP GATE, SHEEP MARKET

probatikos (προβατικος, 4262), an adjective, used in the grammatically feminine form, in John 5:2, to agree with pulē, "a gate," understood, RV, "sheep gate" (not with agora, "a market," KJV, "sheep market").¶ In the Sept., Neh. 3:1, 32; 12:39.¶ This "sheep gate" was near the Temple; the sacrifices for the Temple probably entered by it.

SHEEPSKIN

mēlōtē (μηλωτή, 3374), from mēlon, "a sheep or goat," occurs in Heb. 11:37.¶ In the Sept., 1 Kings 19:13, 19; 2 Kings 2:8, 13, 14.¶

SHEET

othonē (ὀθόνη, 3607) primarily denoted "fine linen," later, "a sheet," Acts 10:11; 11:5.¶ Cf. othonion, "linen."

SHEKEL, HALF SHEKEL

1. statēr (στατήρ, 4715), a tetradrachmon or four drachmae, originally 224 grains, in Tyrian currency, but reduced in weight somewhat by the time recorded in Matt. 17:24; the value was about three shillings, and would pay the Temple tax for two persons, Matt. 17:27, RV, "shekel" (KJV, "a piece of money"); in some mss., 26:16; see MONEY, Note.¶

2. didrachmon (δίδραχμον, 1323), "a half-shekel" (i.e., dis, "twice," drachmē, "a drachma," the coin mentioned in Luke 15:8, 9), was the amount of the tribute in the 1st cent., A.D., due from every adult Jew for the maintenance of the Temple services, Matt. 17:24 (twice).¶ This was based on Exod. 30:13, 24 (see also 38:24–26; Lev. 5:15; 27:3, 25; Num. 3:47, 50; 7:13ff.; 18:16).

poimēn (ποιμήν, 4166) is used (a) in its natural significance, Matt. 9:36; 25:32; Mark 6:34; Luke 2:8, 15, 18, 20; John 10:2, 12; (b) metaphorically of Christ, Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27; John 10:11, 14, 16; Heb. 13:20; 1 Pet. 2:25; (c) metaphorically of those who act as pastors in the churches, Eph. 4:11.¶ See PASTOR.

For CHIEF SHEPHERD see CHIEF, B, No. 3

SHEW (SHOW)

1. deiknumi, or deiknuō, (δείκνυμι, 1166) denotes (a) "to show, exhibit," e.g., Matt. 4:8; 8:4; John 5:20; 20:20; 1 Tim. 6:15; (b) "to show by making known," Matt. 16:21; Luke 24:40; John 14:8, 9; Acts 10:28; 1 Cor. 12:31; Rev. 1:1; 4:1; 22:6; (c) "to show by way of proving," Jas. 2:18; 3:13.

2. anadeiknumi (ἀναδείκνυμι, 322) signifies (a) "to lift up and show, show forth, declare" (ana, "up," and No. 1), Acts 1:24; (b) to "appoint," Luke 10:1. See APPOINT, No. 14.¶

3. endeiknumi (ἐνδείκνυμι, 1731) signifies (1) "to show forth, prove" (middle voice), said (a) of God as to His power, Rom. 9:17; His wrath, 9:22; the exceeding riches of His grace, Eph. 2:7; (b) of Christ, as to His longsuffering, 1 Tim. 1:16; (c) of Gentiles, as to "the work of the Law written in their hearts," Rom. 2:15; (d) of believers, as to the proof of their love, 2 Cor. 8:24; all good fidelity, Titus 2:10; meekness, 3:2; love toward God's Name, Heb. 6:10; diligence in ministering to the saints, v. 11; (2) "to manifest by evil acts," 2 Tim. 4:14, "did (me much evil)," marg., "showed."¶

4. epideiknumi (ἐπιδείκνυμι, 1925), epi, "upon," intensive, and No. 1, signifies (a) "to exhibit, display," Matt. 16:1; 22:19; 24:1; Luke 17:14 (in some mss. 24:40; No. 1 in the best texts); in the middle voice, "to display," with a special interest in one's own action, Acts 9:39; (b) "to point out, prove, demonstrate," Acts 18:28; Heb. 6:17.¶

5. hupodeiknumi (ὑποδείκνυμι, 5263), primarily, "to show secretly (hupo, 'under'), or by tracing out," hence, "to make known, warn," is translated "to show" in Luke 6:47; Acts 9:16; in 20:35, KJV (RV, "I gave . . . an example"). See EXAMPLE, WARN.

6. poieō (ποιέω, 4160), "to make, to do," is translated, "He hath showed" in Luke 1:51; "to show (mercy)," v. 72, RV (KJV, "perform"); "showed (mercy)," 10:37; John 6:30, KJV, "showest Thou," RV, "doest Thou (for a sign)"; Acts 7:36, KJV, "showed," RV, "wrought"; Jas. 2:13, "showed (no mercy)"; in Mark 13:22 in the best texts (some have didōmi), "shall show (signs)." See DO, No. 1.

7. mēnuō (μηνύω, 3377), "to disclose, make known" (what was secret), is rendered "to show" in Luke 20:37; 1 Cor. 10:28; in a forensic sense, John 11:57; Acts 23:30, RV (KJV, "it was told"). See TELL.¶

8. paristēmi (παρίστημι, 3936), "to show," in Acts 1:3; 2 Tim. 2:15 (KJV): see PRESENT, No. 1.

9. parechō (παρέχω, 3930), "to afford, give, show," etc., in the active voice, is translated "showed" in Acts 28:2; in the middle voice, "showing" in Titus 2:7 (1st part). See BRING, No. 21.

10. exangellō (ἐξαγγέλλω, 1804), "to tell out, proclaim abroad, to publish completely" (ek, or ex, "out," angellō, "to proclaim"), is rendered "show forth" in 1 Pet. 2:9; it indicates a complete proclamation (verbs compounded with ek often suggest what is to be done fully).¶

11. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," is rendered "to show" in Matt. 24:24. See also No. 6.

Notes: The KJV translates the following words by the verb "to show" in the passages indicated. The RV gives the better renderings: (1) apodeiknumi ("to demonstrate"), 2 Thess. 2:4, "setting (himself) forth," see SET, No. 17; (2) anangellō ("to declare"), Matt. 11:4, "tell"; John 16:13–15, "declare"; 16:25, "shall tell"; Acts 19:18 and 20:20, "declaring"; (3) katangellō, Acts 16:17; 26:23; 1 Cor. 11:26, "proclaim"; in the last passage the partaking of the elements at the Lord's Supper is not a "showing forth" of His death, but a proclamation of it; (4) phaneroō, John 7:4; 21:1 (twice), 14; Rom. 1:19, "to manifest"; (5) dēloō, ("to make plain"), 2 Pet. 1:14, "signify"; (6) diēgeomai ("to recount"), Luke 8:39, "declare"; (7) emphanizō ("to manifest"), Acts 23:22, "hast signified"; (8) euangelizō, Luke 1:19, "to bring glad tidings"; (9) katatithēmi ("to lay up"), Acts 24:27, "to gain"; (10) legō ("to tell"), 1 Cor. 15:51, "I tell"; (11) energeō, Matt. 14:2 and Mark 6:14, "work"; (12) ōphthē (lit., "was seen"), Acts 7:26, "He appeared"; (13) ginomai ("to become"), Acts 4:22, "was wrought"; (14) in Acts 10:40, emphanēs, "manifest," with didōmi, "to give," and ginomai, "to become," gave . . . to be made manifest" (KJV "showed . . . openly"); (15) apangellō ("to announce"), Matt. 11:4, "tell"; 12:18, "declare"; 28:11, "told"; Luke 14:21, "told"; Acts 26:20, "declared"; 28:21, "report"; 1 Thess. 1:9, "report"; 1 John 1:2, "declare"; (16) In Luke 1:58, KJV, megalunō, to magnify (RV), is rendered "shewed great." (17) See also SHEWING.

For SHEW BEFORE see FORESHEW

SHEWBREAD

Note: The phrase rendered "the shewbread" is formed by the combination of the nouns prothesis, "a setting forth" (pro, "before," tithēmi, "to place") and artos, "a loaf" (in the plural), each with the article, Matt. 12:4; Mark 2:26 and Luke 6:4, lit., "the loaves of the setting forth"; in Heb. 9:2, lit., "the setting forth of the loaves."¶ The corresponding OT phrases are lit., "bread of the face," Exod. 25:30, i.e., the presence, referring to the Presence of God (cf. Isa. 63:9 with Exod. 33:14, 15); "the bread of ordering," 1 Chron. 9:32, marg. In Num. 4:7 it is called "the continual bread"; in 1 Sam. 21:4, 6, "holy bread" (KJV, "hallowed"). In the Sept. of 1 Kings 7:48, it is called "the bread of the offering" (prosphora, "a bearing towards"). The twelve loaves, representing the tribes of Israel, were set in order every Sabbath day before the Lord, "on the behalf of the children," Lev. 24:8, RV (marg., and KJV, "from"), "an everlasting covenant." The loaves symbolized the fact that on the basis of the sacrificial atonement of the Cross, believers are accepted before God, and nourished by Him in the person of Christ. The showbread was partaken of by the priests, as representatives of the nation. Priesthood now being coextensive with all who belong to Christ, 1 Pet. 2:5, 9, He, the Living Bread, is the nourishment of all, and where He is, there, representatively, they are.

anadeixis (ἀνάδειξις, 323), "a shewing forth" (ana, "up or forth," and deiknumi, "to show"), is translated "showing" in Luke 1:80.¶

Note: For "showing," Rom. 3:25, 26, RV, see DECLARE, B.

SHIELD

thureos (θυρεός, 2375) formerly meant "a stone for closing the entrance of a cave"; then, "a shield," large and oblong, protecting every part of the soldier; the word is used metaphorically of faith, Eph. 6:16, which the believer is to take up "in (en in the original) all" (all that has just been mentioned), i.e., as affecting the whole of his activities.¶

SHINE, SHINING

A. Verbs.

1. phainō (φαίνω, 5316), "to cause to appear," denotes, in the active voice, "to give light, shine," John 1:5; 5:35; in Matt. 24:27, passive voice; so Phil. 2:15, RV, "ye are seen" (for KJV, "ye shine"); 2 Pet. 1:19 (active); so 1 John 2:8; Rev. 1:16; in 8:12 and 18:23 (passive); 21:23 (active). See APPEAR.

2. epiphainō (ἐπιφαίνω, 2014), "to shine upon" (epi, "upon," and No. 1), is so translated in Luke 1:79, RV (KJV, "to give light"). See APPEAR, No. 2.

3. lampō (λάμπω, 2989), "to shine as a torch," occurs in Matt. 5:15, 16; 17:2; Luke 17:24; Acts 12:7; 2 Cor. 4:6 (twice).¶: see LIGHT, B, No. 3.

4. stilbō (στίλβω, 4744), "to shine, glisten," is used in Mark 9:3 of the garments of Christ at His transfiguration, RV, "glistering," KJV, "shining."¶ Cf. exastraptō, "dazzling," in Luke 9:29, RV.

5. eklampō (ἐκλάμπω, 1584), "to shine forth" (ek, "out" and No. 3), is used in Matt. 13:43, of the future shining "forth" of the righteous "in the Kingdom of their Father."¶

6. perilampō (περιλάμπω, 4034), "to shine around" (peri, "around," and No. 3), is used in Luke 2:9, "shone round about," of the glory of the Lord; so in Acts 26:13, of the light from Heaven upon Saul of Tarsus.¶

7. periastraptō (περιαστράπτω, 4015), "to flash around, shine round about" (peri, and astrapē, "shining brightness"), is used in Acts 9:3 and 22:6 of the same circumstance as in 26:13 (No. 6).¶

8. epiphauskō or epiphauō (ἐπιφαύσκω, 2017), "to shine forth," is used figuratively of Christ upon the slumbering believer who awakes and arises from among the dead, Eph. 5:14, RV, "shall shine upon thee" (KJV, "shall give thee light").¶

B. Noun.

astrapē (ἀστραπή, 796) denotes (a) "lightning," (b) "bright shining," of a lamp, Luke 11:36. See LIGHTNING. Cf. No. 7, above, and Note (1) below.

Notes: (1) In Luke 24:4, KJV, astraptō, "to lighten," is translated "shining" (RV, "dazzling"). (2) In 2 Cor. 4:4, KJV, augazō, "to shine forth," is translated "shine" (RV, "dawn").¶

SHIP, SHIPPING

1. ploion (πλοῖον, 4143), akin to pleō, "to sail," a boat or a ship, always rendered appropriately "boat" in the RV in the Gospels; "ship" in the Acts; elsewhere, Jas. 3:4; Rev. 8:9; 18:17 (in some mss.), 19. See BOAT, No. 2.

2. ploiarion (πλοιάριον, 4142), a diminutive form of No. 1, is translated "ship" in the KJV of Mark 3:9; 4:36 and John 21:8; "(took) shipping" in John 6:24, KJV, RV "(got into the) boats." See BOAT, No. 1.

3. naus (ναῦς, 3491) denotes "a ship" (Lat. navis, Eng. "nautical," "naval," etc.), Acts 27:41.¶ Naus, in classical Greek the ordinary word for a "ship," survived in Hellenistic Greek only as a literary word, but disappeared from popular speech (Moulton, Proleg., p. 25). Blass (Philology of the Gospels, p. 186) thinks the solitary Lucan use of naus was due to a reminiscence of the Homeric phrase for beaching a "ship."

Note: For epibainō, Acts 21:6, "we took ship," see TAKE, Note (16).

For OWNER OF THE SHIP see OWNER, No. 2

For SHIPMEN see MARINERS

For SHIPMASTER see MASTER, A, No. 7

SHIPWRECK

nauageō (ναυαγέω, 3489) signifies (a) literally, "to suffer shipwreck" (naus, "a ship," agnumi, "to break"), 2 Cor. 11:25; (b) metaphorically, "to make shipwreck," 1 Tim.

1:19, "concerning the faith," as the result of thrusting away a good conscience (both verbs in this v. are in the aorist tense, signifying the definiteness of the acts).¶

For SHIVERS (Rev. 2:27) see BREAK, A, No. 5

For SHOD see BIND, No. 3

SHOE

hupodēma (ὑπόδημα, 5266) denotes "a sole bound under the foot" (hupo, "under," deō, "to bind"; cf. hupodeō, "to bind under"), "a sandal," always translated "shoes," e.g., Matt. 3:11; 10:10; Mark 1:7.

SHOOT FORTH

proballō (προβάλλω, 4261), lit., "to throw before," is used of "the putting forth of leaves, blossom, fruit," said of trees in general, Luke 21:30, "shoot forth." See PUT (forward), Acts 19:33.¶

Note: In Mark 4:32, KJV, poieō, "to do, make," is rendered "shooteth out," RV, "putteth out."

For SHORE see BEACH and LIP

For SHORT (Adjective and Adverb) see LITTLE, A, No 2 and B, No. 2

Note: In 1 Thess. 2:17, "a short season," is lit., "a season of an hour" (hōra; see HOUR, SEASON, No. 1.

SHORT (come, cut), SHORTEN

1. koloboō (κολοβόω, 2856) denotes "to cut off, amputate" (kolobos, "docked"); hence, "to curtail, shorten," said of the "shortening" by God of the time of the great tribulation, Matt. 24:22 (twice); Mark 13:20 (twice).¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 4:12.¶

2. sustellō (συστέλλω, 4958) denotes (a) "to draw together" (sun, "together," stellō, "to bring, gather"), "to contract, shorten," 1 Cor. 7:29, RV, "(the time) is shortened" (KJV, " . . . is short"); the coming of the Lord is always to be regarded as nigh for the believer, who is to be in constant expectation of His return, and thus is to keep himself from being the slave of earthly conditions and life's relationships; (b) "to wrap up," of enshrouding a body for burial, Acts 5:6, RV, "they wrapped (KJV, wound) . . . up."¶

3. suntemnō (συντέμνω, 4933), primarily, "to cut in pieces" (sun, "together," temnō, "to cut"), then, "to cut down, cut short," is used metaphorically in Rom. 9:28 (twice in some texts), "the Lord will execute His word (logos, not "work," as KJV) upon the earth, finishing it and cutting it short," i.e., in the fullfillment of His judgments pronounced upon Israel, a remnant only being saved; the "cutting short" of His word is suggestive of the summary and decisive character of the divine act.¶

Note: For hustereō, "to come short, fall short," see FALL, No. 10.

SHORTLY

1. eutheōs (εὐθέως, 2112), "straightway, directly," is translated "shortly" in 3 John 14. The general use of the word suggests something sooner than "shortly." See FORTHWITH, STRAIGHTWAY.

2. tacheōs (ταχέως, 5030): see QUICKLY, No. 3.

3. tacheion (τάχειον, 5032): see QUICKLY, No. 2.

4. en tachei (ἐν τάχει): see QUICKLY, No. 4.

Note: In 2 Pet. 1:14, KJV, tachinos, an adjective denoting "swift" (akin to the above), is translated "shortly" (RV, "swiftly"), lit., "the putting off of my tabernacle is swift" (i.e., in its approach). Cf. 2:1.

SHOULD

Note: This is frequently part of the translation of the tense of a verb. Otherwise it translates the following:

1. mellō (μέλλω, 3195), "to be about to" (for the significance of which see SHALL), e.g., Mark 10:32, RV, "were to"; Luke 19:11, RV, "was to"; "should" in 22:23; 24:21; John 6:71; 7:39, RV, "were to"; 11:51; 12:4, 33; 18:32; Acts 11:28; 23:27, RV, "was about (to be slain)"; 1 Thess. 3:4, RV, "are to"; Rev. 6:11. See ABOUT, B.

2. dei (δεῖ, 1163), "it needs, it should," e.g., Matt. 18:33; Acts 27:21: see MUST.

Note: In 1 Cor. 9:10, KJV, opheilō, "to owe," is rendered "should" (RV, "ought to").

ōmos (ὦμος, 5606) occurs in Matt. 23:4 and Luke 15:5, and is suggestive (as in the latter passage) of strength and safety.¶

SHOUT (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

keleusma (κέλευσμα, 2752), "a call, summons, shout of command" (akin to keleuō, "to command"), is used in 1 Thess. 4:16 of the "shout" with which (en, "in," denoting the attendant circumstances) the Lord will descend from heaven at the time of the rapture of the saints (those who have fallen asleep, and the living) to meet Him in the air. The "shout" is not here said to be His actual voice, though this indeed will be so (John 5:28).¶ In the Sept., Prov. 30:27, "(the locusts... at the) word of command (march in rank)."¶ epiphōneō (ἐπιφωνέω, 2019), "to call out" (epi, "upon," phōneō, "to utter a sound"), is translated "shouted" in Acts 12:22, RV (KJV, "gave a shout"). See CRY, B, No. 8.

B. Verb.

SHOW (Noun)

logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word," is sometimes used of mere talk, the talk which one occasions; hence, "repute, reputation"; this seems to be the meaning in Col. 2:23, translated "a show (KJV 'show') of wisdom," i.e., "a reputation for wisdom," rather than "appearance, reason," etc. See WORD.

Note: In Luke 20:47, KJV, prophasis, "a pretense" (RV), is translated "show." See CLOKE (Pretense), No. 2.

SHOW (make a)

1. deigmatizō (δειγματίζω, 1165), "to make a show of, expose," is used in Col. 2:15 of Christ's act regarding the principalities and powers, displaying them "as a victor displays his captives or trophies in a triumphal procession" (Lightfoot). Some regard the meaning as being that He showed the angelic beings in their true inferiority (see under TRIUMPH). For its other occurrence, Matt. 1:19, see EXAMPLE, B, No. 1.¶

2. euprosōpeō (εὐπροσωπέω, 2146) denotes "to look well, make a fair show" (eu, "well," prosōpon, "a face"), and is used in Gal. 6:12, "to make a fair show (in the flesh)," i.e., "to make a display of religious zeal." Deissmann illustrates the metaphorical use of this word from the papyri in Light from the Ancient East, p. 96.¶

Note: For paratērēsis, KJV marg. in Luke 17:20, "outward show," see OBSERVATION.¶

For SHOW (Verb) see SHEW

SHOWER

ombros (ὄμβρος, 3655) denotes a "heavy shower, a storm of rain," Luke 12:54.¶

For SHRANK and SHRINK see DRAW (B), No. 4

SHRINE

naos (ναός, 3485), "the inmost part of a temple, a shrine," is used in the plural in Acts 19:24, of the silver models of the pagan "shrine" in which the image of Diana (Greek Artemis) was preserved. The models were large or small, and were signs of wealth and devotion on the part of purchasers. The variety of forms connected with the embellishment of the image provided "no little business" for the silversmiths. See TEMPLE.

SHUDDER

phrissō (φρίσσω, 5425), primarily, "to be rough, to bristle," then, "to shiver, shudder, tremble," is said of demons, Jas. 2:19, RV, "shudder" (KJV, "tremble").¶ Cf. Matt. 8:29, indicating a cognizance of their appointed doom.

For SHUN see AVOID, No. 4, and DRAW, (B), No. 4

SHUT, SHUT UP

1. kleiō (κλείω, 2808) is used (a) of things material, Matt. 6:6; 25:10; Luke 11:7; John 20:19, 26; Acts 5:23; 21:30; Rev. 20:3; figuratively, 21:25; (b) metaphorically, of the kingdom of heaven, Matt. 23:13; of heaven, with consequences of famine, Luke 4:25; Rev. 11:6; of compassion, 1 John 3:17, RV (KJV, "bowels of compassion"); of the blessings accruing from the promises of God regarding David, Rev. 3:7; of a door for testimony, 3:8.¶

2. apokleiō (ἀποκλείω, 608), "to shut fast" (apo, away from, and No. 1), is used in Luke 13:25, expressing the impossibility of entrance after the closing.¶

3. katakleiō (κατακλείω, 2623), lit., "to shut down" (the kata has, however, an intensive use), signifies "to shut up in confinement," Luke 3:20; Acts 26:10.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 32:3.¶

4. sunkleiō (συγκλείω, 4788): see ENCLOSE.

SICK, SICKLY, SICKNESS

A. Verbs.

1. astheneō (ἀσθενέω, 770), lit., "to be weak, feeble" (a, negative, sthenos, "strength"), is translated "to be sick," e.g., in Matt. 10:8, "(the) sick"; 25:36; v. 39 in the best texts (some have B, No. 1); Mark 6:56; Luke 4:40; 7:10 (RV omits the word); 9:2; John 4:46; 5:3, RV (KJV, "impotent folk"); v. 7; 6:2, RV (KJV, "were diseased"); 11:1–3, 6; Acts 9:37; 19:12; Phil. 2:26, 27; 2 Tim. 4:20; Jas. 5:14. See DISEASED, B, No. 1, IMPOTENT, and, especially, WEAK.

2. kamnō (κάμνω, 2577), primarily, "to work," hence, from the effect of constant work, "to be weary," Heb. 12:3, is rendered "(him) that is sick," in Jas. 5:15, RV, KJV "(the) sick."

The choice of this verb instead of the repetition of No. 1 (v. 14, see above), is suggestive of the common accompaniment of "sickness," weariness of mind (which is the meaning of this verb), which not infrequently hinders physical recovery; hence this special cause is here intimated in the general idea of "sickness." In some mss. it occurs in Rev. 2:3.¶ In the Sept., Job 10:1; 17:2.¶

3. sunechō (συνέχω, 4912), "to hold in, hold fast," is used, in the passive voice, of "being seized or afflicted by ills," Acts 28:8, "sick" (of the father of Publius, cf. Matt. 4:24; Luke 4:38, "taken with"). See CONSTRAIN, No. 3.

Notes: (1) Noseō, "to be sick," is used metaphorically of mental ailment, in 1 Tim. 6:4, "doting" (marg., "sick"). (2) The adverb kakōs, "evilly ill," with echō, "to hold, to have," is rendered "to be sick," in Matt. 4:24, RV, "that were sick"; 8:16; 9:12; 14:35 and Mark 1:32, RV (KJV, "diseased"); 1:34; 2:17; 6:55; Luke 5:31; 7:2. (3) For "sick of the palsy," Luke 5:24; Acts 9:33, see PALSY (sick of).

B. Adjectives.

1. asthenēs (ἀσθενής, 772), lit., "without strength," hence, "feeble, weak," is used of "bodily debility," Matt. 25:43 (for v. 39, see A, No. 1), 44; some texts have it in Luke 9:2 (the best omit it, the meaning being "to heal" in general); 10:9; Acts 5:15, 16; in 4:9 it is rendered "impotent." See FEEBLE, IMPOTENT, WEAK.

2. arrhōstos (ἄρρωστος, 732), "feeble, sickly" (a, negative, rhōnnumi, "to be strong"), is translated "sick" in Matt. 14:14; Mark 16:18; "sick folk" in Mark 6:5; "that were sick" in 6:13; "sickly" in 1 Cor. 11:30, here also of the physical state.¶ In the Sept., 1 Kings 14:5; Mal. 1:8.¶

C. Nouns.

1. astheneia (ἀσθένεια, 769), "weakness, sickness" (akin to A, No. 1 and B, No. 1), is translated "sickness" in John 11:4. See DISEASE, No. 1, INFIRMITY, WEAKNESS.

2. nosos (νόσος, 3554): see DISEASE, No. 3.

SICKLE

drepanon (δρέπανον, 1407), "a pruning hook, a sickle" (akin to drepō, "to pluck"), occurs in Mark 4:29; Rev. 14:14, 15, 16, 17, 18 (twice), 19.¶

SIDE

A. Noun.

pleura (πλευρά, 4125), "a side" (cf. Eng., "pleurisy"), is used of the "side" of Christ, into which the spear was thrust, John 19:34; 20:20, 25, 27 (some mss. have it in Matt. 27:49; see RV marg.); elsewhere, in Acts 12:7.¶

B. Adverb.

peran (πέραν, 4008), an adverb, signifying "beyond, on the other side," is used (a) as a preposition and translated "on the other side of," e.g., in Mark 5:1; Luke 8:22; John 6:1, RV; 6:22, 25; (b) as a noun with the article, e.g., Matt. 8:18, 28; 14:22; 16:5. See BEYOND, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In Luke 9:47, the preposition para, "by the side of," with the dative case of the pronoun heautou, is rendered "by His side," RV (KJV, "by Him"). (2) See also EITHER, EVERYWHERE, No. 3 HIGHWAY, RIGHT.

SIFT

siniazō (σινιάζω, 4617), "to winnow, sift" (sinion, "a sieve"), is used figuratively in Luke 22:31.¶

SIGH

1. stenazō (στενάζω, 4727), "to groan," is translated "He sighed" in Mark 7:34. See GRIEF, GROAN.

2. anastenazō (ἀναστενάζω, 389), "to sigh deeply" (ana, "up," suggesting "deep drawn," and No. 1), occurs in Mark 8:12.¶ In the Sept., Lam. 1:4.¶

SIGHT

A. Nouns.

1. eidos (εἶδος, 1491) is translated. "sight" in 2 Cor. 5:7; see APPEARANCE, No. 1.

2. theōria (θεωρία, 2335) denotes "a spectacle, a sight" (akin to theōreō, to gaze, behold"; see BEHOLD), in Luke 23:48.¶

3. horama (ὅραμα, 3705), "that which is seen" (akin to horaō, "to see"), besides its meaning, "a vision, appearance," denotes "a sight," in Acts 7:31. See VISION.

4. ophthalmos (ὀφθαλμός, 3788) "an eye" (Eng. "ophthalmic," etc.) in Acts 1:9 is translated "sight" (plur. lit., "eyes"). See EYE.

5. anablepsis (ἀνάβλεψις, 309) denotes "recovering of sight" (ana, "again," blepō, "to see"), Luke 4:18.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 61:1.¶

Notes: (1) For horasis (akin to No. 3), translated "in sight" in Rev. 4:3, KJV (RV, "to look upon"), see LOOK, B. (2) In Luke 7:21, the infinitive mood of blepō, "to see," is used as a noun, "(He bestowed, KJV, 'gave') sight." In Acts 9:9 it is used in the present participle with mē, "not," "without sight" (lit., "not seeing"). (3) In Heb. 12:21 phantazomai, "to make visible," is used in the present participle as a noun, with the article, "(the) sight."¶ (4) In Luke 21:11, KJV, phobētron (or phobēthron), plur., is translated "fearful sights" (RV, "terrors").¶

B. Verb.

anablepō (ἀναβλέπω, 308), "to look up," also denotes "to receive or recover sight" (akin to A, No. 5), e.g., Matt. 11:5; 20:34; Mark 10:51, 52; Luke 18:41–43; John 9:11, 15, 18 (twice); Acts 9:12, 17, 18; 22:13.

SIGHT OF (in the)

1. enōpion (ἐνώπιον, 1799), for which see BEFORE, No. 9, is translated "in the sight of" in the RV (for KJV, "before") in Luke 12:6; 15:18; 16:15; Acts 7:46; 10:33; 19:19; 1 Tim. 5:4, 21; 2 Tim. 2:14; 4:1; Rev. 13:12. The RV is more appropriate in most passages, as giving the real significance of the word.

2. katenōpion (κατενώπιον, 2714), see BEFORE, No. 10, is translated "in the sight of" in 2 Cor. 2:17 (in some texts); Col. 1:22, KJV.

3. emprosthen (ἔμπροσθεν, 1715), see BEFORE, No. 4, is translated "in the sight of" in Matt. 11:26; Luke 10:21; 1 Thess. 1:3, KJV.

4. enantion (ἐναντίον, 1726), see BEFORE, No. 5, is translated "in the sight of" in Acts 7:10.

5. enanti (ἔναντι, 1725), see BEFORE, No. 6, is translated "in the sight of" in Acts 8:21, KJV.

6. katenanti (κατέναντι, 2713), see BEFORE, No. 8, is found in the best texts in 2 Cor. 12:19, "in the sight of," RV, and in 2:17.

SIGN

1. sēmeion (σημεῖον, 4592), "a sign, mark, indication, token," is used (a) of that which distinguished a person or thing from others, e.g., Matt. 26:48; Luke 2:12; Rom. 4:11; 2 Cor. 12:12 (1st part); 2 Thess. 3:17, "token," i.e., his autograph attesting the authenticity of his letters; (b) of a "sign" as a warning or admonition, e.g., Matt. 12:39, "the sign of (i.e., consisting of) the prophet Jonas"; 16:4; Luke 2:34; 11:29, 30; (c) of miraculous acts (1) as tokens of divine authority and power, e.g., Matt. 12:38, 39 (1st part); John 2:11, RV, "signs"; 3:2 (ditto); 4:54, "(the second) sign," RV; 10:41 (ditto); 20:30; in 1 Cor. 1:22, "the Jews ask for signs," RV, indicates that the Apostles were met with the same demand from Jews as Christ had been: "signs were vouchsafed in plenty, signs of God's power and love, but these were not the signs which they sought.... They wanted signs of an outward Messianic Kingdom, of temporal triumph, of material greatness for the chosen people.... With such cravings the Gospel of a 'crucified Messiah' was to them a stumblingblock indeed" (Lightfoot); 1 Cor. 14:22; (2) by demons, Rev. 16:14; (3) by false teachers or prophets, indications of assumed authority, e.g., Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22; (4) by Satan through his special agents, 2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 13:13, 14; 19:20; (d) of tokens portending future events, e. g., Matt. 24:3, where "the sign of the Son of Man" signifies, subjectively, that the Son of Man is Himself the "sign" of what He is about to do; Mark 13:4; Luke 21:7, 11, 25; Acts 2:19; Rev. 12:1, RV; 12:3, RV; 15:1.

"Signs" confirmatory of what God had accomplished in the atoning sacrifice of Christ, His resurrection and ascension, and of the sending of the Holy Spirit, were given to the Jews for their recognition, as at Pentecost, and supernatural acts by apostolic ministry, as well as by the supernatural operations in the churches, such as the gift of tongues and prophesyings; there is no record of the continuance of these latter after the circumstances recorded in Acts 19:1–20.

2. parasēmos (παράσημος, 3902), an adjective meaning "marked at the side" (para, "beside," sēma, "a mark"), is used in Acts 28:11 as a noun denoting the figurehead of a vessel.¶

SIGNS (to make)

enneuō (ἐννεύω, 1770), "to nod to" (en, "in," neuō, "to nod"), denotes "to make a sign to" in Luke 1:62.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 6:13; 10:10.¶

Note: For dianeuō, Luke 1:22, RV, see BECKON, No. 2.

For SIGNIFICATION, 1 Cor. 14:10, see DUMB, No. 2

SIGNIFY

1. sēmainō (σημαίνω, 4591), "to give a sign, indicate" (sēma, "a sign": cf. SIGN, No. 1), "to signify," is so translated in John 12:33; 18:32; 21:19; Acts 11:28; 25:27; Rev. 1:1, where perhaps the suggestion is that of expressing by signs.¶

2. dēloō (δηλόω, 1213), "to make plain" (dēlos, "evident"), is translated "to signify" in 1 Cor. 1:11, RV, "it hath been signified" (KJV, "declared"); Heb. 9:8; 12:27; 1 Pet. 1:11, KJV (RV, "point unto"); 2 Pet. 1:14, RV, "signified" (KJV, "hath showed"). See POINT (unto).

3. emphanizō (ἐμφανίζω, 1718), "to manifest, make known," is translated "signify" in Acts 23:15; v. 22, RV (KJV, "hath showed"). See APPEAR, No. 5.

Note: In Acts 21:26, KJV, diangellō, "to announce," is rendered "to signify" (RV, "declaring").

SILENCE

A. Noun.

sigē (σιγή, 4602) occurs in Acts 21:40; Rev. 8:1, where the "silence" is introductory to the judgments following the opening of the seventh seal.¶

Note: For hēsuchia, KJV, "silence," in Acts 22:2 and 1 Tim. 2:11, 12, see QUIETNESS.

B. Verbs.

1. phimoō (φιμόω, 5392), "to muzzle," is rendered "to put to silence" in Matt. 22:34; 1 Pet. 2:15. See MUZZLE, PEACE (hold), SPEECHLESS, STILL.

2. sigaō (σιγάω, 4601), "to be silent": see PEACE (hold), No. 1.

For SILENT, Luke 1:20, RV, see DUMB, B

sērikos or sirikos (σιρικός, 4596), "silken," an adjective derived from the Sēres, a people of India, who seem to have produced "silk" originally as a marketable commodity, is used as a noun with the article, denoting "silken fabric," Rev. 18:12.¶

For SILLY, 2 Tim. 3:6, see WOMAN, No. 2

SILVER

A. Nouns.

1. argurion (ἀργύριον, 694) is rendered "silver" in Acts 3:6; 8:20, RV (KJV, "money"); 20:33; 1 Cor. 3:12 (metaphorical); 1 Pet. 1:18. See MONEY, PIECE.

2. arguros (ἄργυρος, 696), akin to argos, "shining," denotes "silver." In each occurrence in the NT it follows the mention of gold, Matt. 10:9; Acts 17:29; Jas. 5:3; Rev. 18:12.¶

Note: For drachmē, Luke 15:8, see PIECE.

B. Adjective.

argureos (ἀργύρεος, 693) signifies "made of silver," Acts 19:24; 2 Tim. 2:20; Rev. 9:20.¶

argurokopos (ἀργυροκόπος, 695), from arguros (see above) and koptō, "to beat," occurs in Acts 19:24.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 17:4; Jer. 6:29.¶

SIMILITUDE

Note: For homoiōma, rendered "similitude" in Rom. 5:14, KJV, see LIKENESS, No. 1. For homoiotēs, "similitude" in Heb. 7:15 KJV, see LIKE, C, Note (1), and LIKENESS, No. 3. For homoiōsis, "similitude" in Jas. 3:9, KJV, see LIKENESS, No. 2.

For SIMPLE see GUILELESS, No. 2, and HARMLESS

For SIMPLICITY see LIBERALITY

SIN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. hamartia (ἁμαρτία, 266) is, lit., "a missing of the mark," but this etymological meaning is largely lost sight of in the NT. It is the most comprehensive term for moral obliquity. It is used of "sin" as (a) a principle or source of action, or an inward element producing acts, e.g., Rom. 3:9; 5:12, 13, 20; 6:1, 2; 7:7 (abstract for concrete); 7:8 (twice), 9, 11, 13, "sin, that it might be shown to be sin," i.e., "sin became death to me, that it might be exposed in its heinous character": in the last clause, "sin might become exceeding sinful," i.e., through the holiness of the Law, the true nature of sin was designed to be manifested to the conscience;

(c) a generic term (distinct from specific terms such as No. 2 yet sometimes inclusive of concrete wrong doing, e.g., John 8:21, 34, 46; 9:41; 15:22, 24; 19:11); in Rom. 8:3, "God, sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh," lit., "flesh of sin," the flesh stands for the body, the instrument of indwelling "sin" [Christ, preexistently the Son of God, assumed human flesh, "of the substance of the Virgin Mary"; the reality of incarnation was His, without taint of sin (for homoiōma, "likeness," see LIKENESS)], and as an offering for sin," i.e., "a sin offering" (so the Sept., e.g., in Lev. 4:32; 5:6, 7, 8, 9), "condemned sin in the flesh," i.e., Christ, having taken human nature, "sin" apart (Heb. 4:15), and having lived a sinless life, died under the condemnation and judgment due to our "sin"; for the generic sense see further, e.g., Heb. 9:26; 10:6, 8, 18; 13:11; 1 John 1:7, 8; 3:4 (1st part; in the 2nd part, "sin" is defined as "lawlessness," RV), 8, 9; in these verses the KJV use of the verb to commit is misleading; not the committal of an act is in view, but a continuous course of "sin," as indicated by the RV, "doeth." The apostle's use of the present tense of poieō, "to do," virtually expresses the meaning of prassō, "to practice," which John does not use (it is not infrequent in this sense in Paul's Epp., e.g., Rom. 1:32, RV; 2:1; Gal. 5:21; Phil. 4:9);

1 Pet. 4:1 (singular in the best texts), lit., "has been made to cease from sin," i.e., as a result of suffering in the flesh, the mortifying of our members, and of obedience to a Savior who suffered in flesh. Such no longer lives in the flesh, "to the lusts of men, but to the will of God"; sometimes the word is used as virtually equivalent to a condition of "sin," e.g., John 1:29, "the sin (not sins) of the world"; 1 Cor. 15:17; or a course of "sin," characterized by continuous acts, e.g., 1 Thess. 2:16; in 1 John 5:16 (2nd part) the RV marg., is probably to be preferred, "there is sin unto death," not a special act of "sin," but the state or condition producing acts; in v. 17, "all unrighteousness is sin" is not a definition of "sin" (as in 3:4), it gives a specification of the term in its generic sense;

(d) a sinful deed, an act of "sin," e.g., Matt. 12:31; Acts 7:60; Jas. 1:15 (1st part); 2:9; 4:17; 5:15, 20; 1 John 5:16 (1st part).

Notes: (1) Christ is predicated as having been without "sin" in every respect, e.g., (a), (b), (c) above, 2 Cor. 5:21 (1st part); 1 John 3:5; John 14:30; (d) John 8:46; Heb. 4:15; 1 Pet. 2:22. (2) In Heb. 9:28 (2nd part) the reference is to a "sin" offering. (3) In 2 Cor. 5:21, "Him . . . He made to be sin" indicates that God dealt with Him as He must deal with "sin," and that Christ fulfilled what was typified in the guilt offering. (4) For the phrase "man of sin" in 2 Thess. 2:3, see INIQUITY, No. 1.

2. hamartēma (ἁμάρτημα, 265), akin to No. 1, denotes "an act of disobedience to divine law" [as distinct from No. 1 (a), (b), (c)]; plural in Mark 3:28; Rom. 3:25; 2 Pet. 1:9, in some texts; sing. in Mark 3:29 (some mss. have krisis, KJV, "damnation"); 1 Cor. 6:18.¶

Notes: (1) For paraptōma, rendered "sins" in the KJV in Eph. 1:7; 2:5; Col. 2:13 (RV, "trespass"), see TRESPASS. In Jas. 5:16, the best texts have No. 1 (RV, "sins"). (2) For synonymous terms see DISOBEDIENCE, ERROR, FAULT, INIQUITY, TRANSGRESSION, UNGODLINESS.

B. Adjective.

anamartētos (ἀναμάρτητος, 361), "without sin" (a, negative, n, euphonic, and C, No. 1), is found in John 8:7.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 29:19.¶

C. Verbs.

2. proamartanō (προαμαρτάνω, 4258), "to sin previously" (pro, "before," and No. 1), occurs in 2 Cor. 12:21; 13:2, RV in each place, "have sinned heretofore" (so KJV in the 2nd; in the 1st, "have sinned already").¶

SINCERE, SINCERELY, SINCERITY

A. Adjectives.

1. adolos (ἄδολος, 97), "guileless, pure," is translated "sincere" in 1 Pet. 2:2, KJV, "without guile," RV. See GUILELESS, No. 1.

2. gnēsios (γνήσιος, 1103), "true, genuine, sincere," is used in the neuter, as a noun, with the article, signifying "sincerity," 2 Cor. 8:8 (of love). See OWN, TRUE.

3. eilikrinēs (εἰλικρινής, 1506), see PURE, A, No. 3.

B. Adverb.

hagnōs (ἁγνῶς, 55) denotes "with pure motives," akin to words under PURE, A, No. 1, and B, Nos. 1 and 2, and is rendered "sincerely" in Phil. 1:17, RV (v. 16, KJV).¶

C. Noun.

eilikrinia (or —eia) (εἰλικρινία, 1505), akin to A, No. 3 denotes "sincerity, purity"; it is described metaphorically in 1 Cor. 5:8 as "unleavened (bread)"; in 2 Cor. 1:12, "sincerity (of God)," RV, KJV, "(godly) sincerity," it describes a quality possessed by God, as that which is to characterize the conduct of believers; in 2 Cor. 2:17 it is used of the rightful ministry of the Scriptures.¶

Notes: (1) For 2 Cor. 8:8, see A, No. 2. (2) In Eph. 6:24, KJV, aphtharsia, "incorruption," is translated "sincerity" (RV, "uncorruptness," KJV marg., "incorruption"); some inferior mss. have it in Titus 2:7, KJV; the RV follows those in which it is absent.

hamartōlos (ἁμαρτωλός, 268), an adjective, akin to hamartanō, "to sin," is used as an adjective, "sinful" in Mark 8:38; Luke 5:8; 19:7 (lit., "a sinful man"); 24:7; John 9:16, and 24 (lit., "a man sinful"); Rom. 7:13, for which see SIN, A, No. 1 (a). Elsewhere it is used as a noun: see SINNER. The noun is frequently found in a common phrase in sepulchral epitaphs in the S.W. of Asia Minor, with the threat against any desecrator of the tomb, "let him be as a sinner before the subterranean gods" (Moulton and Milligan).

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:3, "sinful flesh" is, lit., "flesh of sin" (RV marg.): see SIN, No. 1 (c). (2) For the RV of Rom. 7:5, "sinful passions," see PASSION, No. 1.

SING, SINGING

1. ądō (ᾄδω, 103) is used always of "praise to God," (a) intransitively, Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16; (b) transitively, Rev. 5:9; 14:3; 15:3.¶

2. psallō (ψάλλω, 5567): see MELODY.

3. humneō (ὑμνέω, 5214): see HYMN, B.

SINGLE

haplous (ἁπλοῦς, 573), "simple, single," is used in a moral sense in Matt. 6:22 and Luke 11:34, said of the eye; "singleness" of purpose keeps us from the snare of having a double treasure and consequently a divided heart.¶ The papyri provide instances of its use in other than the moral sense, e.g., of a marriage dowry, to be repaid pure and simple by a husband (Moulton and Milligan). In the Sept., Prov. 11:25.¶

SINGLENESS

1. aphelotēs (ἁφελότης, 858) denotes "simplicity," Acts 2:46, "singleness," for which Moulton and Milligan, from papyri examples, suggest "unworldly simplicity"; the idea here is that of an unalloyed benevolence expressed in act.¶

2. haplotēs (ἁπλότης, 572): see BOUNTY, No. 2.

SINK

1. buthizō (βυθίζω, 1036) is used literally in Luke 5:7. See DROWN, No. 1.

2. katapontizō (καταποντίζω, 2670) is translated "to sink" in Matt. 14:30 (passive voice). See DROWN, No. 3.

3. tithēmi (τίθημι, 5087), "to put," is rendered "let . . . sink" in Luke 9:44, RV ("let . . . sink down," KJV). See APPOINT, LAY.

Note: In Acts 20:9 (2nd part), KJV, katapherō, "to bear down," is translated "he sunk down" (RV, "being borne down"); in the 1st part it is rendered "being fallen," KJV, "borne down," RV.

hamartōlos (ἁμαρτωλός, 268), lit., "one who misses the mark" (a meaning not to be pressed), is an adjective, most frequently used as a noun (see SINFUL); it is the most usual term to describe the fallen condition of men; it is applicable to all men, Rom. 5:8, 19. In the Synoptic Gospels the word is used not infrequently, by the Pharisees, of publicans (tax collectors) and women of ill repute, e.g., "a woman which was in the city, a sinner," Luke 7:37; "a man that is a sinner," 19:7. In Gal. 2:15, in the clause "not sinners of the Gentiles," the apostle is taking the Judaizers on their own ground, ironically reminding them of their claim to moral superiority over Gentiles; he proceeds to show that the Jews are equally sinners with Gentiles.

Note: In Luke 13:4, KJV, opheiletēs, "a debtor," is translated "sinners" (RV, "offenders"; RV and KJV marg., "debtors").

SIR(-S)

1. kurios (κύριος, 2962): see LORD.

2. anēr (ἀνήρ, 435), "a man," is translated "sirs" in Acts 7:26; 14:15; 19:25; 27:10, 21, 25. See MAN.

Note: In John 21:5 the KJV marg. has "sirs" for paidia, "children."

adelphē (ἀδελφή, 79) is used (a) of natural relationship, e.g., Matt. 19:29; of the "sisters" of Christ, the children of Joseph and Mary after the virgin birth of Christ, e.g., Matt. 13:56; (b) of "spiritual kinship" with Christ, an affinity marked by the fulfillment of the will of the Father, Matt. 12:50; Mark 3:35; of spiritual relationship based upon faith in Christ, Rom. 16:1; 1 Cor. 7:15; 9:5, KJV and RV marg.; Jas. 2:15; Philem. 2, RV.

Note: In Col. 4:10, KJV, anepsios (cf. Lat., nepos, whence Eng., "nephew"), "a cousin" (so, RV), is translated "sister's son." See COUSIN.¶

SIT

1. kathēmai (κάθημαι, 2521) is used (a) of the natural posture, e.g., Matt. 9:9, most frequently in the Apocalypse, some 32 times; frequently in the Gospels and Acts; elsewhere only in 1 Cor. 14:30; Jas. 2:3 (twice); and of Christ's position of authority on the throne of God, Col. 3:1, KJV, "sitteth" (RV, "is, seated"); Heb. 1:13 (cf. Matt. 22:44; 26:64 and parallel passages in Mark and Luke, and Acts 2:34); often as antecedent or successive to, or accompanying, another act (in no case a superfluous expression), e.g., Matt. 15:29; 27:36; Mark 2:14; 4:1; (b) metaphorically in Matt. 4:16 (twice); Luke 1:79; of inhabiting a place (translated "dwell"), Luke 21:35; Rev. 14:6, RV marg., "sit" (in the best texts: some have katoikeō, "to dwell"). See DWELL.

2. sunkathēmai (συγκάθημαι, 4775), "to sit with" (sun, "with," and No. 1), occurs in Mark 14:54; Acts 26:30.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 101:6, "dwell."¶

3. anakeimai (ἀνάκειμαι, 345), "to recline at table" (ana, "up," keimai, "to lie"), is rendered "to sit at meat" in Matt. 9:10 (RV, marg., "reclined"); 26:7; 26:20, RV, "He was sitting at meat" (KJV, "He sat down"); Mark 16:14; in some mss. Luke 7:37 (see No. 5); 22:27 (twice); in Mark 14:18, "sat"; in John 6:11, "were set down"; John 12:2 in the best texts (see No. 4). See GUEST, LEAN, LIE, Note (1), SET, No. 22, TABLE (at the).

4. sunanakeimai (συνανάκειμαι, 4873), "to recline at table with or together" (sun, and No. 3), "to sit at meat or at table with," occurs in Matt. 9:10, "sat down"; 14:9; Mark 2:15, RV, "sat down with" (KJV, "sat ... together with"); 6:22; Luke 7:49; 14:10, 15; John 12:2 (in some texts).¶

5. katakeimai (κατάκειμαι, 2621), "to lie down" (kata, "down," and keimai, cf. No. 3), is used of "reclining at a meal," Mark 2:15; 14:3; Luke 5:29, RV, "were sitting at meat" (KJV, "sat down"); 7:37 (in the best texts); 1 Cor. 8:10. See KEEP, LIE.

6. anaklinō (ἀνακλίνω, 347), "to cause to recline, make to sit down," is used in the active voice, in Luke 12:37 (also in 2:7, of "laying" the infant Christ in the manger); in the passive, Matt. 8:11; 14:19; Mark 6:39 (in the best texts); in some texts, Luke 7:36 and 9:15 (see No. 7); 13:29. See LAY.¶

7. kataklinō (κατακλίνω, 2625) is used only in connection with meals, (a) in the active voice, "to make recline," Luke 9:14, 15 (in the best texts); in the passive voice, "to recline," Luke 7:36 (in the best texts), "sat down to meat"; 14:8; 24:30 (RV, "had sat down ... to meat").¶

8. kathizō (καθίζω, 2523) is used (a) transitively, "to make sit down," Acts 2:30 (see also SET, No. 9); (b) intransitively, "to sit down," e.g., Matt. 5:1, RV, "when (He) had sat down" (KJV, "was set"); 19:28; 20:21, 23; 23:2; 25:31; 26:36; Mark 11:2, 7; 12:41; Luke 14:28, 31; 16:6; John 19:13; Acts 2:3 (of the tongues of fire); 8:31; 1 Cor. 10:7; 2 Thess. 2:4, "he sitteth," aorist tense, i.e., "he takes his seat" (as, e.g., in Mark 16:19); Rev. 3:21 (twice), RV, "to sit down" and "sat down"; 20:4.

9. parakathezomai (παρακαθέζομαι, 3869v), "to sit down beside" (para), in a passive voice form, occurs in the best mss. in Luke 10:39.¶ Some texts have the verb parakathizō, "to set beside," active form in middle sense.

10. sunkathizō (συγκαθίζω, 4776) denotes (a) transitively, "to make to sit together," Eph. 2:6; (b) intransitively, Luke 22:55, RV, "had sat down together" (KJV, "were set down").¶

11. anakathizō (ἀνακαθίζω, 339), "to set up," is used intransitively, "to sit up," of two who were raised from the dead, Luke 7:15; Acts 9:40.¶

12. anapiptō (ἀναπίπτω, 377), "to fall back" (ana, "back," piptō, "to fall"), denotes, in the NT, "to recline for a repast," Matt. 15:35; Mark 6:40; 8:6; Luke 11:37; 14:10; 17:7; 22:14; John 6:10 (twice); 13:12; in John 13:25 and 21:20 it is used of leaning on the bosom of Christ. See LEAN.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:9.¶

13. kathezomai (καθέζομαι, 2516), "to sit (down)," is used in Matt. 26:55; Luke 2:46; John 4:6; 11:20; 20:12; Acts 6:15.¶

Note: For epibainō, "sitting upon," Matt. 21:5, KJV, see RIDE.

SIX

hex (ἕξ, 1803), whence Eng. prefix, "hex"-, is used separately from other numerals in Matt. 17:1; Mark 9:2; Luke 4:25; 13:14; John 2:6; 12:1; Acts 11:12; 18:11; Jas. 5:17; Rev. 4:8. It sometimes suggests incompleteness, in comparison with the perfect number seven.

Notes: (1) In combination with tessarakonta, "forty," it occurs in John 2:20; with hebdomēkonta, "seventy," Acts 27:37, "(two hundred) threescore and sixteen." (2) It forms the first syllable of hexēkonta, "sixty" (see below) and hexakosioi, "six hundred," Rev. 13:18 (see SIXTY, Note); 14:20.

SIXTH

hektos (ἕκτος, 1623) is used (a) of a month, Luke 1:26, 36; (b) an hour, Matt. 20:5; 27:45 and parallel passages; John 4:6; (c) an angel, Rev. 9:13, 14; 16:12; (d) a seal of a roll, in vision, Rev. 6:12; (e) of the "sixth" precious stone, the sardius, in the foundations of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.

hexēkonta (ἑξήκοντα, 1835) occurs in Matt. 13:8, RV (KJV, "sixty-fold"); 13:23; Mark 4:8, where the RV and KJV reverse the translation, as in Matt. 13:8, while in Mark 4:20 the RV has "sixtyfold," KJV, "sixty"; in Rev. 13:18, RV,"sixty" (KJV, "threescore"). It is rendered "threescore" in Luke 24:13; 1 Tim. 5:9; Rev. 11:3; 12:6.¶

Note: In Rev. 13:18, the number of the "Beast," the human potentate destined to rule with satanic power the ten-kingdom league at the end of this age, is given as "six hundred and sixty and six" (RV), and described as "the number of (a) man." The number is suggestive of the acme of the pride of fallen man, the fullest development of man under direct satanic control, and standing in contrast to "seven" as the number of completeness and perfection.

SKIN

askos (ἀσκός, 779), "a leather bottle, wineskin," occurs in Matt. 9:17 (four times); Mark 2:22 (four times); Luke 5:37 (three times), 38; in each place, RV, "wineskins" or "skins," for KJV, "bottles." A whole goatskin, for example, would be used with the apertures bound up, and when filled, tied at the neck. They were tanned with acacia bark and left hairy on the outside. New wines, by fermenting, would rend old skins (cf. Josh. 9:13; Job 32:19). Hung in the smoke to dry, the skin-bottles become shriveled (see Ps. 119:83).¶

Note: For "(a girdle) of a skin," Mark 1:6, see LEATHERN.

SKULL

kranion (κρανίον, 2898), Lat., cranium (akin to kara, "the head"), is used of the scene of the Crucifixion, Matt. 27:33; Mark 15:22; John 19:17; in Luke 23:33, RV, "(the place which is called) The skull," KJV, "Calvary" (from Latin calvaria, "a skull": marg., "the place of a skull"). The locality has been identified by the traces of the resemblance of the hill to a "skull".¶ In the Sept., Judg. 9:53; 2 Kings 9:35.¶

For SKY see HEAVEN

SLACK (Verb), SLACKNESS

A. Verb.

bradunō (βραδύνω, 1019), used intransitively signifies "to be slow, to tarry" (bradus, "slow"), said negatively of God, 2 Pet. 3:9, "is (not) slack"; in 1 Tim. 3:15, translated "(if) I tarry." See TARRY.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 43:10; Deut. 7:10; Isa. 46:13.¶

B. Noun.

bradutēs (βραδυτής, 1022), "slowness" (akin to A), is rendered "slackness" in 2 Pet. 3:9.¶

diabolos (διάβολος, 1228), an adjective, "slanderous, accusing falsely," is used as a noun, translated "slanderers" in 1 Tim. 3:11, where the reference is to those who are given to finding fault with the demeanor and conduct of others, and spreading their innuendos and criticisms in the church; in 2 Tim. 3:3, RV (KJV, "false accusers"); Titus 2:3 (ditto): see ACCUSER, DEVIL.

For SLANDEROUSLY see REPORT, C, No. 5

SLAUGHTER

1. sphagē (σφαγή, 4967) is used in two quotations from the Sept., Acts 8:32 from Isa. 53:7, and Rom. 8:36 from Ps. 44:22; in the latter the quotation is set in a strain of triumph, the passage quoted being an utterance of sorrow. In Jas. 5:5 there is an allusion to Jer. 12:3, the luxurious rich, getting wealth by injustice, spending it on their pleasures, are "fattening themselves like sheep unconscious of their doom."¶

2. kopē (κοπή, 2871), "a stroke" (akin to koptō, "to strike, to cut"), signifies "a smiting in battle," in Heb. 7:1.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 14:17; Deut. 28:25; Josh. 10:20.¶

3. phonos (φόνος, 5408), "a killing, murder," is rendered "slaughter" in Acts 9:1; see MURDER.

SLAVE

sōma (σῶμα, 4983), "a body," is translated "slaves" in Rev. 18:13 (RV and KJV marg., "bodies"), an intimation of the unrighteous control over the bodily activities of "slaves"; the next word "souls" stands for the whole being. See BODY.

SLAY, SLAIN, SLEW

1. apokteinō (ἀποκτείνω, 615), the usual word for "to kill," is so translated in the RV wherever possible (e.g., for KJV, "to slay," in Luke 11:49; Acts 7:52; Rev. 2:13; 9:15; 11:13; 19:21); in the following the verb "to kill" would not be appropriate, Rom. 7:11, "slew," metaphorically of sin, as using the commandment; Eph. 2:16, "having slain," said metaphorically of the enmity between Jew and Gentile. See KILL, No. 1.

Note: Some mss. have it in John 5:16 (KJV, "to slay").

2. anaireō (ἀναιρέω, 337), "to take away, destroy, kill," is rendered "to slay" in Matt. 2:16; Acts 2:23; 5:33, 36; 9:29, KJV (RV, "to kill"); 10:39; 13:28; 22:20; 23:15, RV; in 2 Thess. 2:8 the best texts have this verb (for analiskō, "to consume," KJV and RV marg.); hence the RV, "shall slay," of the destruction of the man of sin. See KILL, No. 2.

3. sphazō or sphattō (σφάττω, 4969), "to slay," especially of victims for sacrifice (akin to sphagē: see SLAUGHTER), is used (a) of taking human life, 1 John 3:12 (twice); Rev. 6:4, RV, "slay" (KJV, "kill"); in 13:3, probably of assassination, RV, "smitten (unto death)," KJV, "wounded (to death)," RV marg., "slain;" 18:24; (b) of Christ, as the Lamb of sacrifice, Rev. 5:6, 9, 12; 6:9; 13:8. See KILL, No. 7.¶

4. katasphazō (κατασφάζω, 2695V), "to kill off" (kata, used intensively, and No. 3), is used in Luke 19:27.¶. In the Sept., Ezek. 16:40; Zech. 11:5.¶

5. diacheirizō (διαχειρίζω, 1315), "to lay hands on, kill," is translated "slew" in Acts 5:30. See KILL, No. 6.

6. phoneuō (φονεύω, 5407), "to kill, to murder," is rendered "ye slew" in Matt. 23:35. See KILL, No. 4.

Note: For thuō, Acts 11:7, KJV, "slay" (RV, "kill"), see KILL, No. 3.

For SLAIN BEASTS see BEAST, No. 5

For SLEEP see ASLEEP

SLEIGHT

kubia (or -eia) (κυβία, 2940) denotes "dice playing" (from kubos, "a cube, a die as used in gaming"); hence, metaphorically, "trickery, sleight," Eph. 4:14. The Eng. word is connected with "sly" ("not with slight").¶

For SLIP see DRIFT

SLOTHFUL

1. nōthros (νωθρός, 3576), "indolent, sluggish," is rendered "slothful" in Heb. 6:12, KJV, See DULL, and synonymous words there, and SLUGGISH.

2. oknēros (ὀκνηρός, 3636), "shrinking, irksome," is translated "slothful" in Matt. 25:26, and Rom. 12:11, where "in diligence not slothful," RV, might be rendered "not flagging in zeal." See GRIEVOUS, Note (2).

bradus (βραδύς, 1021) is used twice in Jas. 1:19, in an exhortation to "be slow to speak" and "slow to wrath"; in Luke 24:25, metaphorically of the understanding.¶

Note: For "slow" (argos) in Titus 1:12, see IDLE.

For SLOWLY (sailed) see SAIL, No. 10

SLUGGISH

nōthros (νωθρός, 3576), for which see SLOTHFUL, is translated "sluggish" in Heb. 6:12, RV; here it is set in contrast to confident and constant hope; in 5:11 ("dull") to vigorous growth in knowledge. See DULL.¶

For SLUMBER (Noun) see STUPOR

SLUMBER (Verb)

nustazō (νυστάζω, 3573) denotes "to nod in sleep" (akin to neuō, "to nod"), "fall asleep," and is used (a) of natural slumber, Matt. 25:5; (b) metaphorically in 2 Pet. 2:3, negatively, of the destruction awaiting false teachers.¶

SMALL

1. mikros (μικρός, 3398), "little, small" (of age, quantity, size, space), is translated "small" in Acts 26:22; Rev. 11:18; 13:16; 19:5, 18; 20:12. See LITTLE.

2. oligos (ὀλίγος, 3641), "little, small" (of amount, number, time), is translated "small" in Acts 12:18; 15:2; 19:23; v. 24; KJV (RV, "little"); 27:20.

Notes: (1) For "very small" and "smallest" see LEAST. (2) For combinations with other words, see CORD, FISH, ISLAND.

For SMELL see SAVOR

SMELLING

osphrēsis (ὄσφρησις, 3750) denotes "the sense of smell," 1 Cor. 12:17, "smelling."¶

SMITE

1. patassō (πατάσσω, 3960), "to strike, smite," is used (I) literally, of giving a blow with the hand, or fist or a weapon, Matt. 26:51, RV, "smote" (KJV, "struck"); Luke 22:49, 50; Acts 7:24; 12:7; (II) metaphorically, (a) of judgment meted out to Christ, Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27; (b) of the infliction of disease, by an angel, Acts 12:23; of plagues to be inflicted upon men by two divinely appointed witnesses, Rev. 11:6; (c) of judgment to be executed by Christ upon the nations, Rev. 19:15, the instrument being His Word, described as a sword.¶

2. tuptō (τύπτω, 5180), "to strike, smite, beat," is rendered "to smite" in Matt. 24:49, KJV (RV, "beat"); 27:30; Mark 15:19; Luke 6:29; 18:13; in some texts in 22:64 (1st part: RV omits; for the 2nd part see No. 3); 23:48; Acts 23:2, 3 (twice). See BEAT, No. 2.

3. paiō (παίω, 3817) signifies "to strike or smite" (a) with the hand or fist, Matt. 26:68; Luke 22:64 (see No. 2); (b) with a sword, Mark 14:47; John 18:10, KJV (RV, "struck"); (c) with a sting, Rev. 9:5, "striketh."¶

4. derō (δέρω, 1194), "to flay, to beat," akin to derma, "skin," is translated "to smite" in Luke 22:63, KJV (RV, "beat"); John 18:23; 2 Cor. 11:20. See BEAT, No. 1.

5. plēssō (πλήσσω, 4141), akin to plēgē, "a plague, stripe, wound," is used figuratively of the effect upon sun, moon and stars, after the sounding of the trumpet by the fourth angel, in the series of divine judgments upon the world hereafter, Rev. 8:12.¶

6. rhapizō (ῥαπίζω, 4474), primarily "to strike with a rod" (rhapis, "a rod"), then, "to strike the face with the palm of the hand or the clenched fist," is used in Matt. 5:39; 26:67, where the marg. of KJV and RV has "with rods." Cf. rhapisma, Note (2), below.¶

7. kataballō (καταβάλλω, 2598), "to cast down," is translated "smitten down" in 2 Cor. 4:9, RV. See CAST, No. 8.

8. proskoptō (προσκόπτω, 4350), "to beat upon," is translated "smote upon" in Matt. 7:27. See BEAT, No. 6.

9. sphazō (σφάζω, 4969), "to slay," is translated "smitten unto death" in Rev. 13:3; see KILL, SLAY.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 26:51, KJV, aphaireō, "to take away, take off," is translated "smote off" (RV, "struck off"). (2) The noun rhapisma, "a blow," in the plural, as the object of didōmi, "to give," in John 19:3 is translated "smote (Him) with their hands" (RV, "struck, etc."), lit., "gave... blows" (RV marg., "with rods"); in 18:22 (where the phrase is used with the singular of the noun) the RV renders it "struck... with his hand" (KJV, "struck... with the palm of his hand"), marg. of both, "with a rod."

The same word is used in Mark 14:65, "(received Him) with blows (of their hands)", RV [KJV, "did strike Him with the palms (of their hands)," RV margin, "strokes of rods"]. See BLOW (Noun).¶ Cf. No. 6, above, Matt. 26:67.

SMOKE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

kapnos (καπνός, 2586), "smoke," occurs in Acts 2:19 and 12 times in the Apocalypse.¶

B. Verb.

tuphō (τύφω, 5188), "to raise a smoke" [akin to tuphos, "smoke" (not in the NT), and tuphoō, "to puff up with pride," see HIGH-MINDED], is used in the passive voice in Matt. 12:20, "smoking (flax)," lit., "caused to smoke," of the wick of a lamp which has ceased to burn clearly, figurative of mere nominal religiousness without the Spirit's power.¶ The Sept. uses the verb kapnizō (akin to A).

leois (λεῖος, 3006), "smooth," occurs in Luke 3:5, figurative of the change in Israel from self-righteousness, pride and other forms of evil, to repentance, humility and submission.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 27:11; 1 Sam. 17:40; Prov. 2:20; 12:13; 26:23; Isa. 40:4.¶

Note: Chrēstologia (chrēstos, "good," legō, "to speak") is rendered "smooth... (speech)," in Rom. 16:18, RV (KJV, "good words").¶

SNARE

1. pagis (παγίς, 3803), "a trap, a snare" (akin to pēgnumi, "to fix," and pagideuō, "to ensnare," which see), is used metaphorically of (a) the allurements to evil by which the Devil "ensnares" one, 1 Tim. 3:7; 2 Tim. 2:26; (b) seductions to evil, which "ensnare" those who "desire to be rich," 1 Tim. 6:9; (c) the evil brought by Israel upon themselves by which the special privileges divinely granted them and centering in Christ, became a "snare" to them, their rejection of Christ and the Gospel being the retributive effect of their apostasy, Rom. 11:9; (d) of the sudden judgments of God to come upon those whose hearts are "overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life," Luke 21:34 (v. 35 in KJV).¶

2. brochos (βρόχος, 1029), "a noose, slipknot, halter," is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 7:35, "a snare" (RV, marg., "constraint," "noose").¶ In the Sept., Prov. 6:5; 7:21; 22:25.¶

harpazō (ἁρπάζω, 726), "to snatch," is translated "to snatch" in the RV only, in Matt. 13:19, KJV, "catcheth away"; John 10:12, KJV, "catcheth"; 10:28, 29, KJV, "pluck"; Jude 23, KJV, "pulling." See CATCH, No. 1.

SNOW

chiōn (χιών, 5510) occurs in Matt. 28:3; Rev. 1:14. Some mss. have it in Mark 9:3 (KJV).¶

SO

Notes: (1) Houtōs or houtō, "thus," is the usual word (see THUS). (2) Some form of houtos, "this," is sometimes rendered "so," e.g., Acts 23:7; Rom. 12:20. (3) It translates homoiōs, "likewise," e.g., in Luke 5:10; oun, "therefore," e.g., John 4:40, 53. (4) For "so many as," see MANY; for "so much as," see MUCH. (5) Sumbainō, when used of events, signifies "to come to pass, happen"; in Acts 21:35 it is rendered "so it was." See BEFALL, HAPPEN. (6) In 1 Pet. 3:17, thelō, "to will," is translated "should so will," lit., "willeth." (7) In 2 Cor. 12:16, the imperative mood, 3rd person singular, of eimi, "to be," is used impersonally, and signifies "be it so." (8) In Heb. 7:9 epos, "a word," is used in a phrase rendered "so to say"; see WORD, Note (1). (9) In 1 Tim. 3:11, hōsautōs, "likewise," is translated "even so." (10) Hōs, as, is rendered "so" in Heb. 3:11 (RV, "as"). For association with other words see †, p. 1.

SOBER, SOBERLY, SOBERMINDED

A. Adjective.

sōphrōn (σώφρων, 4998) denotes "of sound mind" (sōzō, "to save," phrēn, "the mind"); hence, "self-controlled, soberminded," always rendered "sober-minded" in the RV; in 1 Tim. 3:2 and Titus 1:8, KJV, "sober"; in Titus 2:2, KJV, "temperate"; in 2:5, KJV, "discreet."¶

Note: For nēphalios (akin to B, No. 1), translated "sober" in 1 Tim. 3:11; Titus 2:2, see TEMPERATE.

B. Verbs.

2. sōphroneō (σωφρονέω, 4993), akin to A, is rendered "to think soberly," Rom. 12:3; "to be sober," 2 Cor. 5:13; "to be soberminded," Titus 2:6; in 1 Pet. 4:7, KJV "be ye sober" (RV, "of sound mind"); see MIND, B, No. 5.

3. sōphronizō (σωφρονίζω, 4994) denotes "to cause to be of sound mind, to recall to one's senses"; in Titus 2:4, RV, it is rendered "they may train" (KJV, "they may teach ... to be sober," marg., "wise"); "train" expresses the meaning more adequately; the training would involve the cultivation of sound judgment and prudence.¶

C. Adverb.

sōphronōs (σωφρόνως, 4996), akin to A and B, Nos. 2 and 3, "soberly," occurs in Titus 2:12; it suggests the exercise of that self-restraint that governs all passions and desires, enabling the believer to be conformed to the mind of Christ.¶

Note: For the phrase "to think soberly," see B, No. 2.

SOBERNESS, SOBRIETY

sōphrosunē (σωφροσύνη, 4997) denotes "soundness of mind" (see SOBER, A), Acts 26:25, "soberness"; 1 Tim. 2:9, 15, "sobriety"; "sound judgment" practically expresses the meaning; "it is that habitual inner self-government, with its constant rein on all the passions and desires, which would hinder the temptation to these from arising, or at all events from arising in such strength as would overbear the checks and barriers which aidōs (shamefastness) opposed to it" (Trench Syn. §xx, end).¶

For SOFTLY see BLOW (Verb), No. 2

SOJOURN, SOJOURNER, SOJOURNING

A. Verbs.

1. paroikeō (παροικέω, 3939) denotes "to dwell beside, among or by" (para, "beside," oikeō, "to dwell"); then, "to dwell in a place as a paroikos, a stranger" (see below), Luke 24:18, RV, "Dost thou (alone) sojourn ... ?" [marg., "Dost thou sojourn (alone)" is preferable], KJV, "art thou (only) a stranger?" (monos, "alone," is an adjective, not an adverb); in Heb. 11:9, RV, "he became a sojourner" (KJV, "he sojourned"), the RV gives the force of the aorist tense.¶

2. epidēmeō (ἐπιδημέω, 1927) is rendered "to sojourn" in Acts 17:21, RV.

B. Adjectives.

1. paroikos (πάροικος, 3941), an adjective, akin to A, No. 1, lit., "dwelling near" (see above), then, "foreign, alien" (found with this meaning in inscriptions), hence, as a noun, "a sojourner," is used with eimi, "to be," in Acts 7:6, "should sojourn," lit., "should be a sojourner"; in 7:29, RV, "sojourner" (KJV, "stranger"); in Eph. 2:19, RV, "sojourners" (KJV, "foreigners"), the preceding word rendered "strangers" is xenos; in 1 Pet. 2:11, RV, ditto (KJV, "strangers").¶

2. apodēmos (ἀπόδημος, 590), "gone abroad" (apo, "from," dēmos, "people"), signifies "sojourning in another country," Mark 13:34, RV (KJV, "taking a far journey").¶

3. parepidēmos (παρεπίδημος, 3927), "sojourning in a strange place," is used as a noun, denoting "a sojourner, an exile," 1 Pet. 1:1, RV, "sojourners" (KJV, "strangers"). See PILGRIM.¶

C. Noun.

paroikia (παροικία, 3940), "a sojourning" (akin to A and B, Nos. 1), occurs in Acts 13:17, rendered "they sojourned," RV, KJV, "dwelt as strangers," lit., "in the sojourning"; in 1 Pet. 1:17, "sojourning."¶

SOLDIER

A. Nouns.

1. stratiōtēs (στρατιώτης, 4757), "a soldier," is used (a) in the natural sense, e.g., Matt. 8:9; 27:27; 28:12; Mark 15:16; Luke 7:8; 23:36; six times in John; thirteen times in Acts; not again in the NT; (b) metaphorically of one who endures hardship in the cause of Christ, 2 Tim. 2:3.

2. strateuma (στράτευμα, 4753), "an army," is used to denote "a company of soldiers" in Acts 23:10; in v. 27, RV, "the soldiers," KJV, "an army"; in Luke 23:11 (plural), RV, "soldiers," KJV, "men of war." See ARMY.

3. sustratiōtēs (συστρατιώτης, 4961), "a fellow-soldier" (sun, "with," and No. 1), is used metaphorically in Phil. 2:25 and Philem. 2, of fellowship in Christian service.¶

B. Verb.

strateuō (στρατεύω, 4754), always in the middle voice in the NT, is used (a) literally of "serving as a soldier," Luke 3:14, "soldiers" (RV, marg., "soldiers on service," present participle); 1 Cor. 9:7, RV, "(what) soldier . . . serveth," KJV, "(who) goeth a warfare"; 2 Tim. 2:4, RV, "soldier on service," KJV, "man that warreth," lit., "serving as a soldier"; (b) metaphorically, of "spiritual conflict": see WAR.

Notes: (1) For spekoulatōr, Mark 6:27, RV, "soldier of his guard," see GUARD.¶ (2) In 2 Tim. 2:4 stratologeō is rendered "hath chosen (him) to be a soldier," KJV (RV, "enrolled (him) as a soldier").¶

stereos (στερεός, 4731), for which see FIRM, No. 2, has the meaning "solid" in Heb. 5:12, 14, of food (KJV, "strong"). As "solid" food requires more powerful digestive organs than are possessed by a babe, so a fuller knowledge of Christ (especially here with reference to His Melchizedek priesthood) required that exercise of spiritual intelligence which is derived from the practical appropriation of what had already been received.

For SOLITARY, Mark 1:35, KJV, see DESERT, B

SOME, SOMEONE, SOMETHING, SOMEWHAT

Notes: (1) Various forms of the article and certain pronouns, followed by the particles men and de denote "some." These are not enumerated here. (2) The indefinite pronoun tis in its singular or plural forms, frequently means "some," "some one" (translated "some man," in the KJV, e.g., of Acts 8:31; 1 Cor. 15:35), or "somebody," Luke 8:46; the neuter plural denotes "some things" in 2 Pet. 3:16; the singular denotes "something," e.g., Luke 11:54; John 13:29 (2nd part); Acts 3:5; 23:18; Gal. 6:3, where the meaning is "anything," as in 2:6, "somewhat." It is translated "somewhat," in the more indefinite sense, in Luke 7:40; Acts 23:20; 25:26; 2 Cor. 10:8; Heb. 8:3. See also ONE, B, No. 1. (3) Meros, "a part, a measure," preceded by the preposition apo, "from," is translated "in some measure" in Rom. 15:15, RV (KJV, "in some sort"), and v. 24 (KJV, "somewhat"). (4) In the following alloi, "others" ("some" in the KJV), is translated "others" in the RV, Matt. 13:5, 7; Mark 4:7 ("other"); 8:28; Luke 9:19; John 9:9. Followed by a correlative expression it denotes "some," e.g., Acts 19:32; 21:34; see OTHER, No. 1.

For SOMETIMES see TIME

pou (πού, 4225), a particle, signifies "somewhere" in Heb. 2:6 and 4:4, RV (KJV, "in a certain place"); the writer avoids mentioning the place to add stress to his testimony. See HAPLY, No. 5, VERILY.

huios (υἱός, 5207) primarily signifies the relation of offspring to parent (see John 9:18–20; Gal. 4:30). It is often used metaphorically of prominent moral characteristics (see below). "It is used in the NT of (a) male offspring, Gal. 4:30; (b) legitimate, as opposed to illegitimate offspring, Heb. 12:8; (c) descendants, without reference to sex, Rom. 9:27; (d) friends attending a wedding, Matt. 9:15; (e) those who enjoy certain privileges, Acts 3:25; (f) those who act in a certain way, whether evil, Matt. 23:31, or good, Gal. 3:7; (g) those who manifest a certain character, whether evil, Acts 13:10; Eph. 2:2, or good, Luke 6:35; Acts 4:36; Rom. 8:14; (h) the destiny that corresponds with the character, whether evil, Matt. 23:15; John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3, or good, Luke 20:36; (i) the dignity of the relationship with God whereinto men are brought by the Holy Spirit when they believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, Rom. 8:19; Gal. 3:26. . . .

"The Apostle John does not use huios, 'son,' of the believer, he reserves that title for the Lord; but he does use teknon, 'child,' as in his Gospel, 1:12; 1 John 3:1, 2; Rev. 21:7 (huios) is a quotation from 2 Sam. 7:14.

"The Lord Jesus used huios in a very significant way, as in Matt. 5:9, 'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the sons of God,' and vv. 44, 45, 'Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you; that ye may be (become) sons of your Father which is in heaven.' The disciples were to do these things, not in order that they might become children of God, but that, being children (note 'your Father' throughout), they might make the fact manifest in their character, might 'become sons.' See also 2 Cor. 6:17, 18.

"As to moral characteristics, the following phrases are used: (a) sons of God, Matt. 5:9, 45; Luke 6:35; (b) sons of the light, Luke 16:8; John 12:36; (c) sons of the day, 1 Thess. 5:5; (d) sons of peace, Luke 10:6; (e) sons of this world, Luke 16:8; (f) sons of disobedience, Eph. 2:2; (g) sons of the evil one, Matt. 13:38, cf. 'of the Devil,' Acts 13:10; (h) son of perdition, John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3. It is also used to describe characteristics other than moral, as: (i) sons of the resurrection, Luke 20:36; (j) sons of the Kingdom, Matt. 8:12; 13:38; (k) sons of the bridechamber, Mark 2:19; (l) sons of exhortation, Acts 4:36; (m) sons of thunder, Boanerges, Mark 3:17."*

Notes: (1) For the synonyms teknon and teknion see under CHILD. The difference between believers as "children of God" and as "sons of God" is brought out in Rom. 8:14–21. The Spirit bears witness with their spirit that they are "children of God," and, as such, they are His heirs and joint-heirs with Christ. This stresses the fact of their spiritual birth (vv. 16, 17). On the other hand, "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God," i.e., "these and no other." Their conduct gives evidence of the dignity of their relationship and their likeness to His character. (2) Pais is rendered "son" in John 4:51. For Acts 13:13, 26 see below.

The Son of God

In this title the word "Son" is used sometimes (a) of relationship, sometimes (b) of the expression of character. "Thus, e.g., when the disciples so addressed Him, Matt. 14:33; 16:16; John 1:49, when the centurion so spoke of Him, Matt. 27:54, they probably meant that (b) He was a manifestation of God in human form. But in such passages as Luke 1:32, 35; Acts 13:33, which refer to the humanity of the Lord Jesus, . . . the word is used in sense (a).

"The Lord Jesus Himself used the full title on occasion, John 5:25; 9:35 [some mss. have 'the Son of Man'; see RV marg.]; 11:4, and on the more frequent occasions on which He spoke of Himself as 'the Son,' the words are to be understood as an abbreviation of 'the Son of God,' not of 'the Son of Man'; this latter He always expressed in full; see Luke 10:22; John 5:19, etc.

"John uses both the longer and shorter forms of the title in his Gospel, see 3:16–18; 20:31, e.g., and in his Epistles; cf. Rev. 2:18. So does the writer of Hebrews, 1:2; 4:14; 6:6, etc. An eternal relation subsisting between the Son and the Father in the Godhead is to be understood. That is to say, the Son of God, in His eternal relationship with the Father, is not so entitled because He at any time began to derive His being from the Father (in which case He could not be co-eternal with the Father), but because He is and ever has been the expression of what the Father is; cf. John 14:9, 'he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father.' The words of Heb. 1:3, 'Who being the effulgence of His (God's) glory, and the very image of His (God's) substance' are a definition of what is meant by 'Son of God.' Thus absolute Godhead, not Godhead in a secondary or derived sense, is intended in the title."†

Other titles of Christ as the "Son of God" are: "His Son," 1 Thess. 1:10 (in Acts 13:13, 26, RV, pais is rendered "servant"); "His own Son," Rom. 8:32; "My beloved Son," Matt. 3:17; "His Only Begotten Son," John 3:16; "the Son of His love," Col. 1:13.

"The Son is the eternal object of the Father's love, John 17:24, and the sole Revealer of the Father's character, John 1:14; Heb. 1:3. The words, 'Father' and 'Son,' are never in the NT so used as to suggest that the Father existed before the Son; the Prologue to the Gospel according to John distinctly asserts that the Word existed 'in the beginning,' and that this Word is the Son, Who 'became flesh and dwelt among us.'"*

In addressing the Father in His prayer in John 17 He says, "Thou lovedst Me before the foundation of the world." Accordingly in the timeless past the Father and the "Son" existed in that relationship, a relationship of love, as well as of absolute Deity. In this passage the "Son" gives evidence that there was no more powerful plea in the Father's estimation than that coeternal love existing between the Father and Himself.

The declaration "Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee," Ps. 2:7, quoted in Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5; 5:5, refers to the birth of Christ, not to His resurrection. In Acts 13:33 the verb "raise up" is used of the raising up of a person to occupy a special position in the nation, as of David in verse 22 (so of Christ as a Prophet in 3:22 and 7:37). The word "again" in the KJV in v. 33 represents nothing in the original. The RV rightly omits it. In v. 34 the statement as to the resurrection of Christ receives the greater stress in this respect through the emphatic contrast to that in v. 33 as to His being raised up in the nation, a stress imparted by the added words "from the dead." Accordingly v. 33 speaks of His incarnation, v. 34 of His resurrection.

In Heb. 1:5, that the declaration refers to the Birth is confirmed by the contrast in verse 6. Here the word "again" is rightly placed in the RV, "when He again bringeth in the Firstborn into the world." This points on to His second advent, which is set in contrast to His first advent, when God brought His Firstborn into the world the first time (see FIRSTBORN).†

So again in Heb. 5:5, where the High Priesthood of Christ is shown to fulfill all that was foreshadowed in the Levitical priesthood, the passage stresses the facts of His humanity, the days of His flesh, His perfect obedience and His sufferings.

Son of Man

In the NT this is a designation of Christ, almost entirely confined to the Gospels. Elsewhere it is found in Acts 7:56, the only occasion where a disciple applied it to the Lord and in Rev. 1:13; 14:14 (see below).

"Son of Man" is the title Christ used of Himself; John 12:34 is not an exception, for the quotation by the multitude was from His own statement. The title is found especially in the Synoptic Gospels. The occurrences in John's gospel, 1:51; 3:13, 14; 5:27; 6:27, 53, 62; 8:28 (9:35 in some texts); 12:23, 34 (twice); 13:31, are not parallel to those in the Synoptic Gospels. In the latter the use of the title falls into two groups, (a) those in which it refers to Christ's humanity, His earthly work, sufferings and death, e.g., Matt. 8:20; 11:19; 12:40; 26:2, 24; (b) those which refer to His glory in resurrection and to that of His future advent, e.g., Matt. 10:23; 13:41; 16:27, 28; 17:9; 24:27, 30 (twice), 37, 39, 44.

While it is a messianic title it is evident that the Lord applied it to Himself in a distinctive way, for it indicates more than Messiahship, even universal headship on the part of One who is Man. It therefore stresses His manhood, manhood of a unique order in comparison with all other men, for He is declared to be of heaven, 1 Cor. 15:47, and even while here below, was "the Son of Man, which is in Heaven," John 3:13. As the "Son of Man" He must be appropriated spiritually as a condition of possessing eternal life, John 6:53. In His death, as in His life, the glory of His Manhood was displayed in the absolute obedience and submission to the will of the Father (12:23; 13:31), and, in view of this, all judgment has been committed to Him, who will judge in full understanding experimentally of human conditions, sin apart, and will exercise the judgment as sharing the nature of those judged, John 5:22, 27. Not only is He man, but He is "Son of Man," not by human generation but, according to the Semitic usage of the expression, partaking of the characteristics (sin apart) of manhood belonging to the category of mankind. Twice in the Apocalypse, 1:13 and 14:14, He is described as "One like unto a Son of man," RV (KJV, "... the Son of Man"), cf. Dan. 7:13. He who was thus seen was indeed the "Son of Man," but the absence of the article in the original serves to stress what morally characterizes Him as such. Accordingly in these passages He is revealed, not as the Person known by the title, but as the One who is qualified to act as the Judge of all men. He is the same Person as in the days of His flesh, still continuing His humanity with His Deity. The phrase "like unto" serves to distinguish Him as there seen in His glory and majesty in contrast to the days of His humiliation.

SONG

q̄dē (ᾠδή, 5603), "an ode, song," is always used in the NT (as in the Sept.), in praise of God or Christ; in Eph. 5:19 and Col. 3:16 the

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine. pp. 46, 47.

† The Western text of Luke 3:22 reads "Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee," instead of "Thou art My beloved Son, in Thee I am well pleased." There is probably some connection between this and those early heresies which taught that our Lord's deity began at His baptism.

adjective "spiritual" is added, because the word in itself is generic and might be used of songs anything but spiritual; in Rev. 5:9 and 14:3 (1st part) the descriptive word is "new" (kainos, "new," in reference to character and form: see NEW), a "song," the significance of which was confined to those mentioned (v. 3, and 2nd part); in 15:3 (twice), "the song of Moses... and the song of the Lamb," the former as celebrating the deliverance of God's people by His power, the latter as celebrating redemption by atoning sacrifice.¶

manteuomai (μαντεύομαι, 3132), "to divine, practice divination" (from mantis, "a seer, diviner"), occurs in Acts 16:16.¶ The word is allied to mainomai, "to rave," and mania, "fury" displayed by those who were possessed by the evil spirit (represented by the pagan god or goddess) while delivering their oracular messages. Trench (Syn. §vi) draws a distinction between this verb and prophēteuō, not only as to their meanings, but as to the fact of the single occurrence of manteuomai in the NT, contrasted with the frequency of prophēteuō, exemplifying the avoidance by NT writers of words the employment of which "would tend to break down the distinction between heathenism and revealed religion."

SOP

psōmion (ψωμίον, 5596), a diminutive of psōmos, "a morsel," denotes "a fragment, a sop" (akin to psōmizō; see FEED), John 13:26 (twice), 27, 30. It had no connection with the modern meaning of "sop," something given to pacify (as in the classical expression "a sop to Cerberus").¶

SORCERER

1. magos (μάγος, 3097), (a) "one of a Median caste, a magician": see WISE; (b) "a wizard, sorcerer, a pretender to magic powers, a professor of the arts of witchcraft," Acts 13:6, 8, where Bar-Jesus was the Jewish name, Elymas, an Arabic word meaning "wise." Hence the name Magus, "the magician," originally applied to Persian priests. In the Sept., only in Dan. 2:2, 10, of the "enchanters," RV (KJV, "astrologers"), of Babylon. The superior Greek version of Daniel by Theodotion has it also at 1:20; 2:27; 4:7; 5:7, 11, 15.¶

2. pharmakos (φαρμακός, 5333), an adjective signifying "devoted to magical arts," is used as a noun, "a sorcerer," especially one who uses drugs, potions, spells, enchantments, Rev. 21:8, in the best texts (some have pharmakeus), and 22:15.¶

SORCERY

A. Nouns.

1. pharmakia (or -eia) (φαρμακία, 5331) (Eng., "pharmacy," etc.) primarily signified "the use of medicine, drugs, spells"; then, "poisoning"; then, "sorcery," Gal. 5:20, RV, "sorcery" (KJV, "witchcraft"), mentioned as one of "the works of the flesh." See also Rev. 9:21; 18:23.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 7:11, 22; 8:7, 18; Isa. 47:9, 12.¶ In "sorcery," the use of drugs, whether simple or potent, was generally accompanied by incantations and appeals to occult powers, with the provision of various charms, amulets, etc., professedly designed to keep the applicant or patient from the attention and power of demons, but actually to impress the applicant with the mysterious resources and powers of the sorcerer.

2. magia (or -eia) (μαγία, 3095), "the magic art," is used in the plural in Acts 8:11, "sorceries" (see SORCERER, No. 1).¶

B. Verb.

mageuō (μαγεύω, 3096), akin to A, No. 2, "to practice magic," Acts 8:9, "used sorcery," is used as in A, No. 2, of Simon Magnus.¶

SORE (Noun, Adjective, Adverb), SORER

A. Noun.

helkos (ἕλκος, 1668), "a sore" or "ulcer" (primarily a wound), occurs in Luke 16:21; Rev. 16:2, 11.¶

B. Verb.

helkoō (ἑλκόω, 1669), "to wound, to ulcerate," is used in the passive voice, signifying "to suffer from sores," to be "full of sores," Luke 16:20 (perfect participle).¶

C. Adjectives.

1. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), used of things, occasionally denotes "much," translated "sore" in Acts 20:37, lit., "there was much weeping of all." See ABLE, C, No. 2.

2. cheirōn (χείρων, 5501), "worse" (used as a comparative degree of kakos, "evil"), occurs in Heb. 10:29, "sorer." See WORSE.

D. Adverbs.

1. lian (λίαν, 3029), "very, exceedingly," is translated "sore" in Mark 6:51 (of amazement). See EXCEED, B, No. 1.

2. sphodra (σφόδρα, 4970), "very, very much," is translated "sore" in Matt. 17:6 (of fear). See GREATLY, Note (1).

Notes: (1) For the KJV, "sore vexed" in Matt. 17:15, see GRIEVOUSLY, B, No. 2, Note (2). (2) In Luke 2:9 megas, "great," is used with phobos, "fear," as the object of the verb "to fear," "(they were) sore (afraid)," lit., "(they feared) a great (fear)." (3) In Mark 9:26, KJV, polla, "much" (RV), the neuter plur. of polus, used as an adverb, is translated "sore." (4) In Matt. 21:15, aganakteō, "to be moved with indignation" (RV), is translated "they were sore displeased." (5) For the RV, "sore troubled," Matt. 26:37 and Mark 14:33 (KJV, "very heavy"), see TROUBLE, B, No. 12. (6) For KJV, "were sore amazed" in Mark 14:33, see AMAZE, B, No. 4. (7) In Luke 9:39, RV, suntribō, "to break, bruise," is rendered "bruiseth sorely." See BREAK, A, No. 5. (8) In Mark 9:6, ekphobos is rendered "sore afraid."

SORROW (Noun and Verb), SORROWFUL

A. Nouns.

1. lupē (λύπη, 3077), "grief, sorrow," is translated "sorrow" in Luke 22:45; John 16:6, 20–22; Rom. 9:2, RV (KJV, "heaviness"); 2 Cor. 2:1, RV; 2:3, 7; 7:10 (twice); Phil. 2:27 (twice). See GRIEF.

2. odunē (ὀδύνη, 3601), "pain, consuming grief, distress," whether of body or mind, is used of the latter, Rom. 9:2, RV, "pain"; 1 Tim. 6:10.¶

3. ōdin (ὠδίν, 5604), "a birth-pang, travail, pain," "sorrows," Matt. 24:8; Mark 13:8; see PAIN, A, No. 2.

4. penthos (πένθος, 3997), "mourning," "sorrow," Rev. 18:7 (twice); 21:4: see MOURN.

B. Verbs.

1. lupeō (λυπέω, 3076), akin to A, No. 1: see GRIEF, B, No. 1, SORRY, A (below).

2. odunaō (ὀδυνάω, 3600), "to cause pain" (akin to A, No. 2), is used in the middle voice in Luke 2:48; Acts 20:38: see ANGUISH, B, No. 3.

C. Adjectives.

1. perilupos (περίλυπος, 4036), "very sad, deeply grieved" (peri, intensive), is used in Matt. 26:38 and Mark 14:34, "exceeding sorrowful"; Mark 6:26; Luke 18:23 (v. 24 in some mss.).¶

2. alupos (ἄλυπος, 253) denotes "free from grief" (a, negative, lupē, "grief"), comparative degree in Phil. 2:28, "less sorrowful," their joy would mean the removal of a burden from his heart.¶

SORRY

A. Verb.

lupeō (λυπέω, 3076) is rendered "to be sorry" (passive voice) in Matt. 14:9, KJV (RV, "grieved"); 17:23; 18:31; 2 Cor. 2:2 [1st part, active voice, "make sorry" (as in 7:8, twice); 2nd part, passive]; 2:4, RV, "made sorry"; 9:9 and 11, RV, "ye were made sorry." See GRIEVE, B, No. 1.

B. Adjective.

perilupos (περίλυπος, 4036) is translated "exceeding sorry" in Mark 6:26: see SORROWFUL, C, No. 1.

SORT

A. Adjective.

hopoios (ὁποῖος, 3697), "of what sort," is so rendered in 1 Cor. 3:13. See MANNER, SUCH AS, WHAT.

B. Noun.

meros (μέρος, 3313), "a part," is used with apo, "from," in Rom. 15:15 and rendered "(in some) sort," KJV (RV, "... measure"). See BEHALF.

psuchē (ψυχή, 5590) denotes "the breath, the breath of life," then "the soul," in its various meanings. The NT uses "may be analyzed approximately as follows:

(a) the natural life of the body, Matt. 2:20; Luke 12:22; Acts 20:10; Rev. 8:9; 12:11; cf. Lev. 17:11; 2 Sam. 14:7; Esth. 8:11; (b) the immaterial, invisible part of man, Matt. 10:28; Acts 2:27; cf. 1 Kings 17:21; (c) the disembodied (or "unclothed" or "naked," 2 Cor. 5:3, 4) man, Rev. 6:9; (d) the seat of personality, Luke 9:24, explained as = "own self," v. 25; Heb. 6:19; 10:39; cf. Isa. 53:10 with 1 Tim. 2:6; (e) the seat of the sentient element in man, that by which he perceives, reflects, feels, desires, Matt. 11:29; Luke 1:46; 2:35; Acts 14:2, 22; cf. Ps. 107:9; Prov. 6:30; Isa. 5:14 ("desire"); 29:8; (h) persons, individuals, Acts 2:41, 43; Rom. 2:9; Jas. 5:20; 1 Pet. 3:20; 2 Pet. 2:14; cf. Gen. 12:5; 14:21 ("persons"); Lev. 4:2 ('any one'); Ezek.

27:13; of dead bodies, Num. 6:6, lit., "dead soul"; and of animals, Lev. 24:18, lit., "soul for soul"; (i) the equivalent of the personal pronoun, used for emphasis and effect:— 1st person, John 10:24 ("us"); Heb. 10:38; cf. Gen. 12:13; Num. 23:10; Jud. 16:30; Ps. 120:2 ("me"); 2nd person, 2 Cor. 12:15; Heb. 13:17; Jas. 1:21; 1 Pet. 1:9; 2:25; cf. Lev. 17:11; 26:15; 1 Sam. 1:26; 3rd person, 1 Pet. 4:19; 2 Pet. 2:8; cf. Exod. 30:12; Job 32:2, Heb. "soul," Sept. "self"; (j) an animate creature, human or other, 1 Cor. 15:45; Rev. 16:3; cf. Gen. 1:24; 2:7, 19; (k) "the inward man," the seat of the new life, Luke 21:19 (cf. Matt. 10:39); 1 Pet. 2:11; 3 John 2.

"With (j) compare a-psuchos, "soulless, inanimate," 1 Cor. 14:7.¶

"With (f) compare di-psuchos, "two-souled," Jas. 1:8; 4:8;¶ oligo psuchos, "feeble-souled," 1 Thess. 5:14;¶ iso-psuchos, "like-souled," Phil. 2:20;¶ sum-psuchos, "joint-souled" ("with. one accord"), Phil. 2:2.¶

"The language of Heb. 4:12 suggests the extreme difficulty of distinguishing between the soul and the spirit, alike in their nature and in their activities. Generally speaking the spirit is the higher, the soul the lower element. The spirit may be recognized as the life principle bestowed on man by God, the soul as the resulting life constituted in the individual, the body being the material organism animated by soul and spirit. . . .

"Body and soul are the constituents of the man according to Matt. 6:25; 10:28; Luke 12:20; Acts 20:10; body and spirit according to Luke 8:55; 1 Cor. 5:3; 7:34; Jas. 2:26. In Matt. 26:38 the emotions are associated with the soul, in John 13:21 with the spirit; cf. also Ps. 42:11 with 1 Kings 21:5. In Ps. 35:9 the soul rejoices in God, in Luke 1:47 the spirit.

"Apparently, then, the relationships may be thus summed up 'Sōma, body, and pneuma, spirit, may be separated, pneuma and psuchē, soul, can only be distinguished' (Cremer)."*

SOUND (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. phōnē (φωνή, 5456), most frequently "a voice," is translated "sound" in Matt. 24:31 (KJV marg., "voice"); John 3:8, KJV (RV, "voice"); so 1 Cor. 14:7 (1st part), 8; Rev. 1:15; 18:22 (2nd part, RV, "voice"); KJV and RV in 9:9 (twice); in Acts 2:6, RV, "(this) sound (was heard)," KJV, "(this) was noised abroad."

2. ēchos (ἦχος, 2279), "a noise, a sound of any sort" (Eng., "echo"), is translated "sound" in Acts 2:2; Heb. 12:19. See ROARING, B, RUMOR.

3. phthongos (φθόγγος, 5353), akin to phthengomai, "to utter a voice," occurs in Rom. 10:18; 1 Cor. 14:7.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 19:4.¶

B. Verbs.

1. ēcheō (ἠχέω, 2278), akin to A, No. 2, occurs in 1 Cor. 13:1, "sounding (brass)"; in some mss., Luke 21:25. See ROARING.¶

2. exēcheō (ἐξηχέω, 1837), "to sound forth as a trumpet" or "thunder" (ex, "out," and No. 1), is used in 1 Thess. 1:8, "sounded forth," passive voice, lit., "has been sounded out."¶ In the Sept., Joel 3:14.¶

3. salpizō (σαλπίζω, 4537), "to sound a trumpet" (salpinx), occurs in Matt. 6:2; 1 Cor. 15:52, "the trumpet shall sound"; Rev. 8:6–8, 10, 12, 13; 9:1, 13; 10:7; 11:15.¶

4. bolizō (βολίζω, 1001), "to heave the lead" (bolis, "that which is thrown or hurled," akin to ballō, "to throw"; sounding-lead), to take soundings, occurs in Acts 27:28 (twice).¶

Note: In Luke 1:44, KJV, ginomai, "to become," is rendered "sounded" (RV, "came").

SOUND (Adjective), BE SOUND

A. Adjective.

hugiēs (ὑγιής, 5199), "whole, healthy," is used metaphorically of "sound speech," Titus 2:8. See WHOLE.

B. Verb.

hugiainō (ὑγιαίνω, 5198), "to be healthy, sound in health" (Eng., "hygiene," etc.), translated "safe and sound" in Luke 15:27, is used metaphorically of doctrine, 1 Tim. 1:10; 2 Tim. 4:3; Titus 1:9; 2:1; of words, 1 Tim. 6:3, RV (KJV, "wholesome," RV marg., "healthful"); 2 Tim. 1:13; "in the faith," Titus 1:13 (RV marg., "healthy"); "in faith," Titus 2:2 (RV marg., ditto).

Note: For "sound mind" in 2 Tim. 1:7, KJV, see DISCIPLINE; in 1 Pet. 4:7 (KJV, "sober"), see MIND, B, No. 5.

SOUNDNESS

holoklēria (ὁλοκληρία, 3647), "completeness, soundness" (akin to holoklēros, see ENTIRE), occurs in Acts 3:16.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 1:6.¶

SOUTH, SOUTH WIND

notos (νότος, 3558) denotes (a) "the south wind," Luke 12:55; Acts 27:13; 28:13; (b) "south," as a direction, Luke 13:29; Rev. 21:13; (c) "the South," as a region, Matt. 12:42; Luke 11:31.¶

Note: For mesēmbria, Acts 8:26, see NOON.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 205–207.

SOUTHWEST

lips (λίψ, 3047), lit., "Libyan," denotes "the S.W. wind," Acts 27:12, "(looking) northeast (and southeast)," RV, lit., "(looking down) the southwest wind (and down the northwest wind)"; to look down a wind was to look in the direction in which it blows. A S.W. wind blows towards the N.E.; the aspect of the haven answers to this. See also under NORTHEAST, NORTHWEST.¶

SOW (Noun)

hus (ὗς, 5300), "swine" (masc. or fem.), is used in the fem. in 2 Pet. 2:22.¶

SOW (Verb), SOWER

speirō (σπείρω, 4687), "to sow seed," is used (1) literally, especially in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere, 1 Cor. 15:36, 37; 2 Cor. 9:10, "the sower"; (2) metaphorically, (a) in proverbial sayings, e.g., Matt. 13:3, 4; Luke 19:21, 22; John 4:37; 2 Cor. 9:6; (b) in the interpretation of parables, e.g., Matt. 13:19–23 (in these vv., RV, "was sown," for KJV, "received seed"); (c) otherwise as follows: of "sowing" spiritual things in preaching and teaching, 1 Cor. 9:11; of the interment of the bodies of deceased believers, 1 Cor. 15:42–44; of ministering to the necessities of others in things temporal (the harvest being proportionate to the "sowing"), 2 Cor. 9:6, 10 (see above); of "sowing" to the flesh, Gal. 6:7, 8 ("that" in v. 7 is emphatic, "that and that only," what was actually "sown"); in v. 8, eis, "unto," signifies "in the interests of"; of the "fruit of righteousness" by peacemakers, Jas. 3:18.

SPACE

A. Noun.

diastēma (διάστημα, 1292), "an interval, space" (akin to B), is used of time in Acts 5:7.¶

B. Verb.

diistēmi (διίστημι, 1339), "to set apart, separate" (dia, "apart," histēmi, "to cause to stand"), see A, is rendered "after the space of" in Luke 22:59; in Acts 27:28, with brachu, "a little," RV, "after a little space" (KJV, "when they had gone a little further"). See PART.

Notes: (1) In Acts 15:33 and Rev. 2:21, KJV, chronos, "time" (RV), is translated "space." (2) In Acts 19:8 and 10, epi, "for or during" (of time), is translated "for the space of"; in 19:34, "about the space of." (3) In Acts 5:34, KJV, brachu (the neuter of brachus, "short"), used adverbially, is translated "a little space" (RV "... while"). (4) In Gal. 2:1, dia, "through," is rendered "after the space of," RV, stressing the length of the period mentioned (KJV, "after," which would represent the preposition meta). (5) In Jas. 5:17 there is no word in the original representing the phrase "by the space of," KJV (RV, "for"). (6) In Rev. 14:20, KJV, apo, "away from," is translated "by the space of" (RV, "as far as"). (7) In Rev. 17:10, KJV, oligon, "a little while" (RV), is rendered "a short space."

SPARE, SPARINGLY

A. Verb.

pheidomai (φείδομαι, 5339), "to spare," i.e., "to forego" the infliction of that evil or retribution which was designed, is used with a negative in Acts 20:29; Rom. 8:32; 11:21 (twice); 2 Cor. 13:2; 2 Pet. 2:4, 5; positively, in 1 Cor. 7:28; 2 Cor. 1:3; rendered "forbear" in 2 Cor. 12:6. See FORBEAR.¶

Note: In Luke 15:17, perisseuō, "to abound, have abundance," is translated "have enough and to spare."

B. Adverb.

pheidomenōs (φειδομένως, 5340), akin to A, "sparingly," occurs in 2 Cor. 9:6 (twice), of sowing and reaping.¶

SPARROW

strouthion (στρουθίον, 4765), a diminutive of strouthos, "a sparrow," occurs in Matt. 10:29, 31; Luke 12:6, 7.¶

SPEAK

1. legō (λέγω, 3004), "to say, speak": see SAY, No. 1.

2. laleō (λαλέω, 2980), for which see SAY, No. 2, is used several times in 1 Cor. 14; the command prohibiting women from speaking in a church gathering, vv. 34, 35, is regarded by some as an injunction against chattering, a meaning which is absent from the use of the verb everywhere else in the NT; it is to be understood in the same sense as in vv. 2, 3–6, 9, 11, 13, 18, 19, 21, 23, 27–29, 39.

3. proslaleō (προσλαλέω, 4354), "to speak to or with" (pros, "to," and No. 2), is used in Acts 13:43 and 28:20.¶

4. phthengomai (φθέγγομαι, 5350), "to utter a sound or voice," is translated "to speak" in Acts 4:18: 2 Pet. 2:16; in 2:18, KJV, "speak" (RV, "utter").

5. apophthengomai (ἀποφθέγγομαι, 669), "to speak forth" (apo, "forth," and No. 4), is so rendered in Acts 2:14, RV (KJV, "said"), and 26:25; in 2:2 it denotes to give utterance.¶

6. antilegō (ἀντιλέγω, 483), "to speak against," is so rendered in Luke 2:34; John 19:12; Acts 13:45, KJV (RV, "contradicted"); 28:19, 22. See CONTRADICT, GAINSAY.

7. katalaleō (καταλαλέω, 2635), synonymous with No. 6 (kata, "against," and No. 2), is always translated "to speak against" in the RV. See BACKBITER, Note.

8. kakologeō (κακολογέω, 2551), "to speak evil": see CURSE, B, No. 4.

9. sullaleō (συλλαλέω, 4814), "to speak together" (sun, "with," and No. 2), is rendered "spake together" in Luke 4:36, RV. See COMMUNE, No. 3, CONFER, No. 2, TALK.

10. proeipon (προεῖπον, 4302), "to speak or say before" (a 2nd aorist tense from an obsolete present), is rendered "to speak before" in Acts 1:16; 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17. See FORETELL.

11. prophthanō (προφθάνω, 4399), "to anticipate" (an extension, by pro, "before," of phthanō, which has the same meaning), is rendered "spake first" in Matt. 17:25, RV (KJV, "prevented").¶

12. prosphōneō (προσφωνέω, 4377), "to address, call to," is rendered "spake unto" (or "to") in Luke 23:20; Acts 21:40; 22:2; "to call unto" (or "to") in Matt. 11:16; Luke 6:13; 7:32; 13:12.¶

13. eirō (εἴρω, Fut. of 3004), for which see SAY, No. 4, has a 1st aorist, passive participle rhēthen, "spoken" or "spoken of," used in Matt. 1:22; 2:15, 17, 23; 3:3; 4:14; 8:17; 12:17; 13:35; 21:4; 22:31; 24:15; 27:9 (in some texts in 27:35 and Mark 13:14).

Notes: (1) In Heb. 12:5, KJV, dialegomai, "to discuss, to reason," is translated "speaketh" (RV, "reasoneth"). (2) In Heb. 12:25, KJV chrēmatizō, "to warn, instruct," is translated "spake" (RV, "warned"): see ADMONISH. (3) In Eph. 4:31, KJV, blasphēmia is translated "evil speaking": see RAILING. (4) In Heb. 12:19, prostithēmi, "to put to, add," used with logos, "a word," is rendered "(that no word) more should be spoken," RV [KJV, "(that) the word should (not) be spoken (to them) any more"]. (5) In Acts 26:24, KJV, apologeomai, "to make a defense" (RV), is rendered "spake for himself." See ANSWER, B, No. 4. (6) In Rom. 15:21, KJV, anangellō, "to bring back word" (RV, "tidings... came"), is translated "he was... spoken of." (7) For "is spoken of" in Rom. 1:8, KJV, see PROCLAIM, No. 2. (8) For "spake out" in Luke 1:42, KJV, see VOICE, Note. (9) In Gal. 4:15, there is no verb in the original for the KJV, "ye spake of" (see RV). (10) For "spoken against" in Acts 19:36 see GAINSAY, C. (11) For "speak reproachfully," 1 Tim. 5:14, see REVILE, C. (12) In Acts 21:3, KJV, ginōskō is translated "speak," RV, "know."

SPEAKER (chief)

Note: In Acts 14:12 the verb hēgeomai, "to lead the way, be the chief," is used in the present participle with the article (together equivalent to a noun), followed by the genitive case of logos, "speech," with the article, the phrase being rendered "the chief speaker," lit., "the leader of the discourse." See CHIEF, C.

SPEAKING (evil, much) polulogia (πολυλογία, 4180), "loquacity," "much speaking" (polus, "much," logos, "speech"), is used in Matt. 6:7.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 10:19.¶

Note: For "evil speaking(s)," in Eph. 4:31, see RAILING; in 1 Pet. 2:1, see BACKBITING. For "shameful speaking" see COMMUNICATION, B, Note.

SPEAR

lonchē (λόγχη, 3057), primarily "a spearhead," then, "a lance or spear," occurs in John 19:34; some texts have it in Matt. 27:49¶ As to John 19:29, there is an old conjecture, mentioned by Field (Notes on the Trans. of the NT), to the effect that the sponge was put on a spear (hussos, "a javelin," the Roman pilum, instead of hussōpos, "hyssop").

SPEARMAN

SPECIAL

Note: Tuchōn, the 2nd aorist participle of tunchanō, "to happen, meet with, chance," is used with a negative signifying "not common or ordinary, special," Acts 19:11; so in 28:2. See COMMON, B, Note (3).

For SPECIALLY see ESPECIALLY

theatron (θέατρον, 2302), akin to theaomai, "to behold," denotes (a) "a theater" (used also as a place of assembly), Acts 19:29, 31; (b) "a spectacle, a show," metaphorically in 1 Cor. 4:9. See THEATER.¶

SPEECH

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), akin to legō (SPEAK, No. 1), most frequently rendered "word" (for an analysis see WORD), signifies "speech," as follows: (a) "discourse," e.g., Luke 20:20, RV, "speech" (KJV, "words"); Acts 14:12 (see SPEAKER); 20:7; 1 Cor. 2:1, 4; 4:19, KJV (RV, "word"); 2 Cor. 10:10; (b) "the faculty of speech," e.g., 2 Cor. 11:6; (c) "the manner of speech," e.g., Matt. 5:37, RV, "speech" (KJV, "communication"); Col. 4:6; (d) "manner of instruction," Titus 2:8; 1 Cor. 14:9, RV (KJV, "words"); Eph. 4:29, RV (KJV, "communication"). See SAYING.

2. lalia (λαλιά, 2981), akin to laleō (SPEAK, No. 2), denotes "talk, speech," (a) of "a dialect," Matt. 26:73; Mark 14:70; (b) "utterances," John 4:42, RV, "speaking" (KJV, "saying"); 8:43.¶

3. eulogia (εὐλογία, 2129) has the meaning "fair speaking, flattering speech" in Rom. 16:18, RV, "fair speech" (KJV, "fair speeches"). See BLESSING, C, No. 1.

4. chrēstologia (χρηστολογία, 5542), which has a similar meaning to No. 3, occurs with it in Rom. 16:18 [RV, "smooth . . . (speech)"]. See SMOOTH, Note.¶

Notes: (1) For "persuasiveness of speech," Col. 2:4, RV, see PERSUASIVE, B. (2) In Acts 14:11 "the speech of Lycaonia" translates the adverb Lukaonisti. Lycaonia was a large country in the center and south of the plateau of Asia Minor; the villages retained the native language, but cities like Lystra probably had a Seleucid tone in their laws and customs (Ramsay on Galatians).

SPEECHLESS

1. eneos (or enneos) (ἐνεός, 1769), "dumb, speechless," occurs in Acts 9:7.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 17:28; Isa. 56:10.¶

2. kōphos (κωφός), which means either "deaf" or "dumb" (see DEAF), is translated "speechless" in Luke 1:22.

Note: For phimoō, translated "he was speechless" in Matt. 22:12, see MUZZLE, SILENCE.

SPEED, SPEEDILY

Notes: (1) In Acts 17:15 "with all speed" is the rendering of the phrase hōs, "as," tachista, "most speedily" (the superlative of tachu, "speedily"), i.e., "as speedily as possible." (2) For "speedily," en tachei, in Luke 18:8, see QUICKLY, No. 4. (3) For "God speed" see GREETING, A, No. 2.

SPEND, SPENT

1. dapanaō (δαπανάω, 1159) denotes (a) "to expend, spend," Mark 5:26 [for Acts 21:24 see CHARGE, Note (5)]: 2 Cor. 12:15 (1st part: for "be spent," see No. 2); (b) "to consume, squander," Luke 15:14; Jas. 4:3. See CONSUME, Note.¶

2. ekdapanaō (ἐκδαπανάω, 1550), lit., "to spend out" (ek), an intensive form of No. 1, "to spend entirely," is used in 2 Cor. 12:15, in the passive voice, with reflexive significance, "to spend oneself out (for others)," "will . . . be spent," RV marg., "spent out" (see No. 1).¶

3. prosdapanaō (προσδαπανάω, 4325), "to spend besides" (pros, and No. 1), is used in Luke 10:35, "thou spendest more."¶

4. prosanaliskō (προσαναλίσκω, 4321), "to spend besides," a strengthened form of analiskō, "to expend, consume" (see CONSUME, No. 1), occurs in most texts in Luke 8:43.¶

5. diaginomai (διαγίνομαι, 1230), used of time, "to intervene, elapse," is rendered "was spent" in Acts 27:9. See PAST.

6. prokoptō (προκόπτω, 4298), "to cut forward a way, advance," is translated "is far spent," in Rom. 13:12, said metaphorically of "the night," the whole period of man's alienation from God. Though the tense is the aorist, it must not be rendered "was far spent," as if it referred, e.g., to Christ's first advent. The aorist is here perfective. See ADVANCE.

7. klinō (κλίνω, 2827), "to lean, decline," is said of the decline of day in Luke 24:29, "is (now) far spent," lit., "has declined." See BOW (Verb).

8. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become, occur," is rendered "was far spent" in Mark 6:35, lit., "much hour (i.e., many an hour) having taken place."

9. poieō (ποιέω, 4160), "to do," is translated "have spent (but one hour)," in Matt. 20:12, RV (KJV, "have wrought") lit., as in the Eng. idiom, "have done one hour"; so in Acts 20:3, RV, "when he had spent (lit., 'had done') three months" (KJV, "abode").

10. eukaireō (εὐκαιρέω, 2119), "to have leisure or devote one's leisure to," is translated "spent their time," in Acts 17:21. See LEISURE.

11. chronotribeō (χρονοτριβέω, 5551), "to spend time" (chronos, "time," tribō, "to rub, to wear out"), occurs in Acts 20:16.¶

Note: Polus, much, is rendered "far spent" twice in Mark 6:35, RV.

SPEW (KJV, SPUE) emeō (ἐμέω, 1692), "to vomit" (cf. Eng., "emetic"), is used in Rev. 3:16, figuratively of the Lord's utter abhorrence of the condition of the church at Laodicea.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 19:14.¶

SPICE(S)

1. arōma (ἄρωμα, 759), "spice," occurs in Mark 16:1, RV "spices" (KJV, "sweet spice"); Luke 23:56; 24:1; John 19:40.¶ A papyrus document has it in a list of articles for a sacrifice.

2. amōmon (ἄμωμον, 298a), amomum, probably a word of Semitic origin, a fragrant plant of India, is translated "spice" in Rev. 18:13, RV (KJV, "odors").¶

nardos (νάρδος, 3487) is derived, through the Semitic languages (Heb. nērd, Syriac nardin), from the Sanskrit nalada, "a fragrant oil," procured from the stem of an Indian plant. The Arabs call it the "Indian spike." The adjective pistikos is attached to it in the NT, Mark 14:3; John 12:3; pistikos, if taken as an ordinary Greek word, would signify "genuine." There is evidence, however, that it was regarded as a technical term. It has been suggested that the original reading was pistakēs, i.e., the Pistacia Terebinthus, which grows in Cyprus, Syria, Palestine, etc., and yields a resin of very fragrant odor, and in such inconsiderable quantities as to be very costly. "Nard was frequently mixed with aromatic ingredients... so when scented with the fragrant resin of the pistakē it would quite well be called nardos pistakēs" (E. N. Bennett, in the Classical Review for 1890, Vol. iv, p. 319). The oil used for the anointing of the Lord's head was worth about L/12, and must have been of the most valuable kind.¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 1:12; 4:13, 14.¶

SPILL

ekchunnō (or ekchunō,) (ἐκχύννω, 1632), "to pour out, shed," is rendered "be spilled" in Luke 5:37. See POUR, SHED.

Note: Some texts have ekcheō in Mark 2:22 (so KJV). The form in Luke 5:37 might also come from ekcheō.

SPIN

nēthō (νήθω, 3514), "to spin," is found in Matt. 6:28 and Luke 12:27, of the lilies of the field (see LILY).¶

pneuma (πνεῦμα, 4151) primarily denotes "the wind" (akin to pneō, "to breathe, blow"); also "breath"; then, especially "the spirit," which, like the wind, is invisible, immaterial and powerful. The NT uses of the word may be analyzed approximately as follows:

"(a) the wind, John 3:8 (where marg. is, perhaps, to be preferred); Heb. 1:7; cf. Amos 4:13, Sept.; (b) the breath, 2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 11:11; 13:15; cf. Job 12:10, Sept.; (c) the immaterial, invisible part of man, Luke 8:55; Acts 7:59; 1 Cor. 5:5; Jas. 2:26; cf. Eccl. 12:7, Sept.; (d) the disembodied (or 'unclothed,' or 'naked,' 2 Cor. 5:3, 4) man, Luke 24:37, 39; Heb. 12:23; 1 Pet. 4:6; (e) the resurrection body, 1 Cor. 15:45; 1 Tim. 3:16; 1 Pet. 3:18; (f) the sentient element in man, that by which he perceives, reflects, feels, desires, Matt. 5:3; 26:41; Mark 2:8; Luke 1:47, 80; Acts 17:16; 20:22; 1 Cor. 2:11; 5:3, 4; 14:4, 15; 2 Cor. 7:1; cf. Gen. 26:35; Isa. 26:9; Ezek. 13:3; Dan. 7:15; (g) purpose, aim, 2 Cor. 12:18; Phil. 1:27; Eph. 4:23; Rev. 19:10; cf. Ezra 1:5; Ps. 78:8; Dan. 5:12; (h) the equivalent of the personal pronoun, used for emphasis and effect: 1st person, 1 Cor. 16:18; cf. Gen. 6:3; 2nd person, 2 Tim. 4:22; Philem. 25; cf. Ps. 139:7; 3rd person, 2 Cor. 7:13; cf. Isa. 40:13; (i) character, Luke 1:17; Rom. 1:4; cf. Num. 14:24; (j) moral qualities and activities: bad, as of bondage, as of a slave, Rom. 8:15; cf. Isa. 61:3; stupor, Rom. 11:8; cf. Isa. 29:10; timidity, 2 Tim. 1:7; cf. Josh. 5:1; good, as of adoption, i.e., liberty as of a son, Rom. 8:15; cf. Ps. 51:12; meekness, 1 Cor. 4:21; cf. Prov. 16:19; faith, 2 Cor. 4:13; quietness, 1 Pet. 3:4; cf. Prov. 14:29; (k) the Holy Spirit, e.g., Matt. 4:1 (see below); Luke 4:18; (l) 'the inward man' (an expression used only of the believer, Rom. 7:22; 2 Cor. 4:16; Eph. 3:16); the new life, Rom. 8:4–6, 10, 16; Heb. 12:9; cf. Ps. 51:10; (m) unclean spirits, demons, Matt. 8:16; Luke 4:33; 1 Pet. 3:19; cf. 1 Sam. 18:10; (n) angels, Heb. 1:14; cf. Acts 12:15; (o) divine gift for service, 1 Cor. 14:12, 32; (p) by metonymy, those who claim to be depositories of these gifts, 2 Thess. 2:2; 1 John 4:1–3; (q) the significance, as contrasted with the form, of words, or of a rite, John 6:63; Rom. 2:29; 7:6; 2 Cor. 3:6; (r) a vision, Rev. 1:10; 4:2; 17:3; 21:10."*

Notes: (1) For phantasma, rendered "spirit," Matt. 14:26; Mark 6:49, KJV, see APPARITION. (2) For the distinction between "spirit" and "soul," see under SOUL, last three paragraphs.

The Holy Spirit

The "Holy Spirit" is spoken of under various titles in the NT ("Spirit" and "Ghost" are renderings of the same word, pneuma; the advantage of the rendering "Spirit" is that it can always be used, whereas "Ghost" always requires the word "Holy" prefixed.) In the following list the omission of the definite article marks its omission in the original (concerning this see below): "Spirit, Matt. 22:43; Eternal Spirit, Heb. 9:14; the Spirit, Matt. 4:1; Holy Spirit, Matt. 1:18; the Holy Spirit, Matt. 28:19; the Spirit, the Holy, Matt. 12:32; the Spirit of promise, the Holy, Eph. 1:13; Spirit of God, Rom. 8:9; Spirit of (the) living God, 2 Cor. 3:3; the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2:11; the Spirit of our God, 1 Cor. 6:11; the Spirit of God, the Holy,

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 204, 205.

Eph. 4:30; the Spirit of glory and of God, 1 Pet. 4:14; the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead (i.e., God), Rom. 8:11; the Spirit of your Father, Matt. 10:20; the Spirit of His Son, Gal. 4:6; Spirit of (the) Lord, Acts 8:39; the Spirit of (the) Lord, Acts 5:9; (the) Lord, (the) Spirit, 2 Cor. 3:18; the Spirit of Jesus, Acts 16:7; Spirit of Christ, Rom. 8:9; the Spirit of Jesus Christ, Phil. 1:19; Spirit of adoption, Rom. 8:15; the Spirit of truth, John 14:17; the Spirit of life, Rom. 8:2; the Spirit of grace, Heb. 10:29."†

The use or absence of the article in the original where the "Holy Spirit" is spoken of cannot always be decided by grammatical rules, nor can the presence or absence of the article alone determine whether the reference is to the "Holy Spirit." Examples where the Person is meant when the article is absent are Matt. 22:43 (the article is used in Mark 12:36); Acts 4:25, RV (absent in some texts); 19:2, 6; Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 2:4; Gal. 5:25 (twice); 1 Pet. 1:2. Sometimes the absence is to be accounted for by the fact that Pneuma (like Theos) is substantially a proper name, e.g., in John 7:39. As a general rule the article is present where the subject of the teaching is the Personality of the Holy Spirit, e.g., John 14:26, where He is spoken of in distinction from the Father and the Son. See also 15:26 and cf. Luke 3:22.

In Gal. 3:3, in the phrase "having begun in the Spirit," it is difficult to say whether the reference is to the "Holy Spirit" or to the quickened spirit of the believer; that it possibly refers to the latter is not to be determined by the absence of the article, but by the contrast with "the flesh"; on the other hand, the contrast may be between the "Holy Spirit" who in the believer sets His seal on the perfect work of Christ, and the flesh which seeks to better itself by works of its own. There is no preposition before either noun, and if the reference is to the quickened spirit it cannot be dissociated from the operation of the "Holy Spirit." In Gal. 4:29 the phrase "after the Spirit" signifies "by supernatural power," in contrast to "after the flesh," i.e., "by natural power," and the reference must be to the "Holy Spirit"; so in 5:17.

The full title with the article before both pneuma and hagios (the "resumptive" use of the article), lit., "the Spirit the Holy," stresses the character of the Person, e.g., Matt. 12:32; Mark 3:29; 12:36; 13:11; Luke 2:26; 10:21 (RV); John 14:26; Acts 1:16; 5:3; 7:51; 10:44, 47; 13:2; 15:28; 19:6; 20:23, 28; 21:11; 28:25; Eph. 4:30; Heb. 3:7; 9:8; 10:15.

The Personality of the Spirit is emphasized at the expense of strict grammatical procedure in John 14:26; 15:26; 16:8, 13, 14, where the emphatic pronoun ekeinos, "He," is used of Him in the masculine, whereas the noun pneuma is neuter in Greek, while the corresponding word in Aramaic, the language in which our Lord probably spoke, is feminine (rûchâ, cf. Heb. rûach). The rendering "itself" in Rom. 8:16, 26, due to the Greek gender, is corrected to "Himself" in the RV.

The subject of the "Holy Spirit" in the NT may be considered as to His divine attributes; His distinct Personality in the Godhead; His operation in connection with the Lord Jesus in His birth, His life, His baptism, His death; His operations in the world; in the church; His having been sent at Pentecost by the Father and by Christ; His operations in the individual believer; in local churches; His operations in the production of Holy Scripture; His work in the world, etc.

SPIRITUAL

A. Adjective.

pneumatikos (πνευματικός, 4152) "always connotes the ideas of invisibility and of power. It does not occur in the Sept. nor in the Gospels; it is in fact an after-Pentecost word. In the NT it is used as follows: (a) the angelic hosts, lower than God but higher in the scale of being than man in his natural state, are 'spiritual hosts,' Eph. 6:12; (b) things that have their origin with God, and which, therefore, are in harmony with His character, as His law is, are 'spiritual,' Rom. 7:14; (c) 'spiritual' is prefixed to the material type in order to indicate that what the type sets forth, not the type itself, is intended, 1 Cor. 10:3, 4; (d) the purposes of God revealed in the gospel by the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 2:13a, and the words in which that revelation is expressed, are 'spiritual,' 13b, matching, or combining, spiritual things with spiritual words [or, alternatively, 'interpreting spiritual things to spiritual men,' see (e) below]; 'spiritual songs' are songs of which the burden is the things revealed by the Spirit, Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16; 'spiritual wisdom and understanding' is wisdom in, and understanding of, those things, Col. 1:9; (e) men in Christ who walk so as to please God are 'spiritual,' Gal. 6:1; 1 Cor. 2:13b [but see (d) above], 15; 3:1; 14:37; (f) the whole company of those who believe in Christ is a 'spiritual house,' 1 Pet. 2:5a; (g) the blessings that accrue to regenerate men at this present time are called 'spiritualities,' Rom. 15:27; 1 Cor. 9:11; 'spiritual blessings,' Eph. 1:3; 'spiritual gifts,' Rom. 1:11; (h) the activities Godward of regenerate men are 'spiritual sacrifices,' 1 Pet. 2:5b; their appointed activities in the churches are also called 'spiritual gifts,' lit., 'spiritualities,' 1 Cor. 12:1; 14:1; (i) the resurrection body of the dead in Christ is 'spiritual,' i.e., such as is suited to the heavenly environment, 1 Cor. 15:44; (j) all that is produced and maintained among men by the operations of the Spirit of God is 'spiritual,' 1 Cor. 15:46....

"The spiritual man is one who walks by the Spirit both in the sense of Gal. 5:16 and in that of 5:25, and who himself manifests the fruit of the Spirit in his own ways....

"According to the Scriptures, the 'spiritual' state of soul is normal for the believer, but to this state all believers do not attain, nor when it is attained is it always maintained. Thus the apostle, in 1 Cor. 3:1–3, suggests a contrast between this spiritual state and that of the babe in Christ, i.e., of the man who because of immaturity and inexperience has not yet reached spirituality, and that of the man who by permitting jealousy, and the strife to which jealousy always leads, has lost it. The spiritual state is reached by diligence in the Word of God and in prayer; it is maintained by obedience and self-judgment. Such as are led by the Spirit are spiritual, but, of course, spirituality is not a fixed or absolute condition, it admits of growth; indeed growth in 'the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ,' 2 Pet. 3:18, is evidence of true spirituality."*

pneumatikōs (πνευματικῶς, 4153), "spiritually," occurs in 1 Cor. 2:14, with the meaning as (j) above, and Rev. 11:8, with the meaning as in (c). Some mss. have it in 1 Cor. 2:13.¶

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:6, the RV rightly renders the noun pneuma "(the mind) of the spirit," KJV, "spiritual (mind)." (2) In 1 Cor. 14:12 the plural of pneuma, "spirits," RV, marg., stands for "spiritual gifts" (text). (3) In 1 Pet. 2:2, the RV renders logikos "spiritual."

SPIT

1. ptuō (πτύω, 4429), "to spit," occurs in Mark 7:33; 8:23; John 9:6.¶ In the Sept., Num. 12:14.¶

2. emptuō (ἐμπτύω, 1716), "to spit upon" (en, "in," and No. 1), occurs in Matt. 26:67; 27:30; Mark 10:34; 14:65; 15:19; Luke 18:32.¶ In the Sept., Num. 12:14, in some texts; Deut. 25:9.¶

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 308–319.

SPITEFULLY (ENTREAT)

hubrizō (ὑβρίζω, 5195), used transitively, denotes "to outrage, treat insolently"; "to entreat shamefully" in Matt. 22:6, RV (KJV, "spitefully"); so in Luke 18:32, RV; in Acts 14:5 (KJV, "use despitefully"); in 1 Thess. 2:2, KJV and RV; in Luke 11:45, "reproachest." See DESPITEFULLY, ENTREAT, REPROACH, SHAMEFULLY.¶

SPITTLE

ptusma (πτύσμα, 4427), akin to ptuō, "to spit," occurs in John 9:6.¶

SPOIL (Noun and Verb), SPOILING

A. Nouns.

1. skulon (σκῦλον, 4661), used in the plural, denotes "arms stripped from a foe"; "spoils" in Luke 11:22.¶

2. akrothinion (ἀκροθίνιον, 205), primarily "the top of a heap" (akros, "highest, top," and this, "a heap"), hence "firstfruit offerings," and in war "the choicest spoils," Heb. 7:4.¶

3. harpagē (ἁρπαγή, 724), "pillage," is rendered "spoiling" in Heb. 10:34. See EXTORT, B, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. diarpazō (διαρπάζω, 1283), "to plunder," is found in Matt. 12:29, 2nd part (the 1st has harpazō, in the best texts), lit., "(then) he will completely (dia, intensive) spoil (his house)"; Mark 3:27 (twice).¶

2. harpazō (ἁρπάζω, 726), "to seize, snatch away," is rendered "spoil" in Matt. 12:29a (see No. 1). See CATCH, No. 1.

3. sulagōgeō (συλαγωγέω, 4812), "to carry off as spoil, lead captive" (sulē, "spoil," ago, "to lead"), is rendered "maketh spoil of" in Col. 2:8, RV (KJV, "spoil"), rather "carry you off as spoil." The false teacher, through his "philosophy and vain deceit," would carry them off as so much booty.¶

4. apekduō (ἀπεκδύω, 554), in the middle voice is translated "having spoiled" in Col. 2:15, KJV, RV, "having put off from Himself (the principalities and the powers)." These are regarded by some as the unsinning angels, because they are mentioned twice before in the Epistle (1:16; 2:10). It is also argued that the verb apekduō, rendered "having put off from Himself," in 2:15, is used in a somewhat different sense in 3:9. Such representations do not form a sufficiently cogent reason for regarding the principalities and the powers here mentioned as those of light, rather than those of darkness.

Others think that the reference is to the holy angels, which were in attendance at the giving of the Law (Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19), and that Christ wrought His work on the cross, without any such attendance; or, again, that, even apart from the Law and its circumstances, the Lord stripped Himself of those who usually ministered to Him, as, e.g., in the wilderness and in the garden of Gethsemane.

The exposition given by Lightfoot and others seems to be the right one. There is no doubt that Satan and his hosts gathered together to attack the soul of Christ, while He was enduring, in propitiatory sacrifice, the judgment due to our sins, and fulfilling the great work of redemption. There is an intimation of this in Ps. 22:21, "Save Me from the lion's mouth; yea, from the horns of the wild-oxen" (cf. vv. 12, 13). Doubtless the powers of darkness gathered against the Lord at that time, fiercely assaulting Him to the utmost of their power. He Himself had said, "This is your hour, and the power of darkness" (Luke 22:53). The metaphor of putting off from Himself these powers need not be pressed to the extent of regarding them as a garment clinging about Him. It seems to stand simply as a vivid description of His repulsion of their attack and of the power by which He completely overthrew them.

SPONGE

spongos (σπόγγος, 4699) was the medium by which vinegar was carried to the mouth of Christ on the cross, Matt. 27:48; Mark 15:36; John 19:29.¶

entruphaō (ἐντρυφάω, 1792) occurs in 2 Pet. 2:13 (RV, "revel").

SPOT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. spilos (σπῖλος, 4696), "a spot or stain," is used metaphorically (a) of moral blemish, Eph. 5:27; (b) of lascivious and riotous persons, 2 Pet. 2:13.¶

2. spilas (σπιλάς, 4694) is rendered "spots" in Jude 12, KJV: see ROCK, No. 2.

B. Verb.

spiloō (σπιλόω, 4695), akin to A, No. 1, is used in Jude 23, in the clause "hating even the garment spotted by the flesh," the garment representing that which, being brought into contact with the polluting element of the flesh, becomes defiled: see CLOTHING, No. 3 (last par.). See DEFILE, No. 4.

C. Adjective.

aspilos (ἄσπιλος, 784), "unspotted, unstained" (a, negative, and A), is used of a lamb, 1 Pet. 1:19; metaphorically, of keeping a commandment without alteration and in the fulfillment of it, 1 Tim. 6:14; of the believer in regard to the world, Jas. 1:27, and free from all defilement in the sight of God, 2 Pet. 3:14.¶

Note: For amōmos, in Heb. 9:14, KJV, see BLEMISH, B.

SPREAD

1. strōnnuō or strōnnumi (στρωννύω, 4766), "to spread," is so rendered in Matt. 21:8, RV, twice; Mark 11:8, RV, once. See FURNISH.

2. hupostrōnnuō (ὑποστρωννύω, 5291), "to spread under" (hupo), of clothes, is used in Luke 19:36.¶

3. dianemō (διανέμω, 1268), "to distribute," is used in the passive voice in Acts 4:17, "spread," lit., "be spread about" (dia).¶ In the Sept., Deut. 29:26, "to assign" or "divide" (concerning the worship of other gods).¶

4. diapherō (διαφέρω, 1308), "to carry about, spread abroad": see PUBLISH, No. 2; for other meanings of the word see BETTER (be), No. 1.

5. ekpetannumi (ἐκπετάννυμι, 1600), "to spread out" (as a sail), is rendered "did I spread out" in Rom. 10:21, RV (KJV, "I have stretched forth").¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 1:28 and 1 Thess. 1:8, KJV, exerchomai, "to go out or forth" (RV), is rendered "to spread abroad." (2) In Mark 6:14, KJV, ginomai, "to become," with phaneros, "manifest," is translated "had spread abroad" (RV, "had become known"). (3) In 2 Cor. 8:18, the RV "is spread" (KJV, "is") represents nothing in the original. (4) For RV, "spread His tabernacle over," Rev. 7:15, see DWELL, No. 9. (5) For Mark 1:45, see BLAZE ABROAD.

SPRING (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become," is used in the best texts in Heb. 11:12, "sprang" (some have gennaō, in the passive voice, rendered in the same way).

2. anatellō (ἀνατέλλω, 393), "to arise," is rendered by the verb "to spring," or "spring up," in Matt. 4:16 and Heb. 7:14. See ARISE, No. 9.

3. exanatellō (ἐξανατέλλω, 1816), ek or ex, "out," and No. 2, is used of the "springing" up of seeds, Matt. 13:5; Mark 4:5 (No. 7 in v. 8).¶

4. phuō (φύω, 5453), used transitively, "to bring forth, produce," denotes, in the passive voice, "to spring up, grow," of seed, Luke 8:6, 8, KJV, "was sprung up" and "sprang up" (RV, "grew"); in the active voice, intransitively, in Heb. 12:15, of a root of bitterness. See GROW.¶

5. sumphuō (συμφύω, 4855), "to cause to grow together" (sun, "with," and No. 4), occurs in Luke 8:7, RV, "grew with," KJV, "sprang up with."¶

6. blastanō (βλαστάνω, 985), "to sprout," is rendered "to spring up" in Matt. 13:26, of tare blades, and Mark 4:27, of seed. See BRING, A, No. 26, BUD.

7. anabainō (ἀναβαίνω, 305), "to go up," is rendered "sprang up" in Matt. 13:7, KJV, of thorns, and Mark 4:8, of seed (RV, "grew up").See GROW, No. 4.

8. hallomai (ἅλλομαι, 242), "to leap, spring," is rendered "springing up," of well water, in John 4:14, figurative of the Holy Spirit in the believer. See LEAP.

9. eispēdaō (εἰσπηδάω, 1530), "to spring" or "leap in," occurs in Acts 16:29, "sprang in."¶ In the Sept., Amos 5:19.¶

10. ekpēdaō (ἐκπηδάω, 1600a), "to spring forth," occurs in Acts 14:14, in the best texts. See RUN, Note (4).

B. Noun.

pēgē (πηγή, 4077) is rendered "springs" in 2 Pet. 2:17, RV: see FOUNTAIN.

Note: For epiginomai, Acts 28:13, see BLOW (verb).

SPRINKLE, SPRINKLING

A. Verb.

rhantizō (ῥαντίζω, 4472), "to sprinkle" (a later form of rhainō), is used in the active voice in Heb. 9:13, of "sprinkling" with blood the unclean, a token of the efficacy of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ, His blood signifying the giving up of His life in the shedding of His blood (cf. 9:22) under divine judgment upon sin (the voluntary act to be distinguished from that which took place after His death in the piercing of His side); so again in vv. 19, 21 (see B); in Heb. 10:22, passive voice, of the purging (on the ground of the same efficacy) of the hearts of believers from an evil conscience. This application of the blood of Christ is necessary for believers, in respect of their committal of sins, which on that ground receive forgiveness, 1 John 1:9. In Mark 7:4, the verb is found in the middle voice "in some ancient authorities" (RV marg.) instead of baptizō. In Rev. 19:13, the RV, "sprinkled" follows those texts which have rhantizō (marg., "some anc. auth. read 'dipped in.'" baptō; so Nestle's text).¶ This requires mention as a variant text in Rev. 19:13 under DIP.

B. Nouns.

1. rhantismos (ῥαντισμός, 4473), "sprinkling," akin to A, is used of the "sprinkling" of the blood of Christ, in Heb. 12:24 and 1 Pet. 1:2, an allusion to the use of the blood of sacrifices, appointed for Israel, typical of the sacrifice of Christ (see under A).¶

2. proschusis (πρόσχυσις, 4378), "a pouring or sprinkling upon," occurs in Heb. 11:28, of the "sprinkling" of the blood of the Passover lamb.¶

For SPUE see SPEW

SPY (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. enkathetos (ἐγκάθετος, 1455), an adjective denoting "suborned to lie in wait" (en, "in," kathiēmi, "to send down"), is used as a noun in Luke 20:20, "spies."¶ In the Sept., Job. 19:12; 31:9.¶

2. kataskopos (κατάσκοπος, 2685) denotes "a spy" (kata, "down," signifying "closely," and skopeō, "to view"), Heb. 11:31.¶

B. Verb.

kataskopeō (κατασκοπέω, 2684), "to view closely" (akin to A, No. 2), "spy out, search out" with a view to overthrowing, is used in Gal. 2:4.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 10:3; 1 Chron. 19:3.¶

For STABLISH see ESTABLISH

STAFF, STAVES

1. rhabdos (ῥάβδος, 4464), rendered "staff" or "staves" in Matt. 10:10, parallel passages, and Heb. 11:21: see ROD.

2. xulon (ξύλον, 3586), "wood," then, "anything made of wood," e.g., "a cudgel" or "staff," is rendered "staves" in Matt. 26:47, 55 and parallel passages. See STOCKS, TREE, WOOD.

For STAGGER see WAVER

anabathmos (ἀναβαθμός, 304), "an ascent" (akin to anabainō, "to go up"), denotes "a flight of stairs," Acts 21:35, 40. These were probably the steps leading down from the castle of Antonia to the Temple. (See Josephus, B.J., v., 5, 8.)¶ In the Sept., it is used, e.g., in the titles of the Songs of Ascents, Ps. 120–134.

For STALL see MANGER

histēmi (ἵστημι, 2476), transitively, "to cause to stand," is used intransitively ("to stand still") in Luke 8:44, translated "stanched." See STAND.

STAND (Noun and Verb), STANDING, STOOD

A. Noun.

luchnia (λυχνία, 3087), "a lampstand," is translated "stand" in Matt. 5:15 and parallel passages (KJV, "candlestick"). See LAMPSTAND.

B. Verbs.

1. histēmi (ἵστημι, 2476), (a) transitively, denotes "to cause to stand, to set"; in the passive voice, "to be made to stand," e.g., Matt. 2:9, lit., "was made to stand"; so Luke 11:18; 19:8 (Col. 4:12 in some mss.); in Rev. 13:1 the RV follows the best texts, "he stood" (not as KJV, "I stood"); the reference is to the Dragon. In the middle voice, "to take one's stand, place oneself," e.g., Rev. 18:15; (b) intransitively, in the 2nd aorist and perfect active, "to stand, stand by, stand still," e.g., Matt. 6:5; 20:32, "stood still"; in Luke 6:8, "stand forth" and "stood forth"; metaphorically, "to stand firm," John 8:44 (negatively), in the truth (see No. 7); Rom. 5:2, in grace; 1 Cor. 15:1, in the gospel; Rom. 11:20, "by thy faith," RV; 2 Cor. 1:24, "by faith" (marg., "by your faith"); of steadfastness, 1 Cor. 7:37; Eph. 6:11, 13, 14; Col. 4:12 [some mss. have the passive, see (a)]. See APPOINT, ESTABLISH, SET.

2. anistēmi (ἀνίστημι, 450), "to raise," intransitively, "to rise," is translated "to stand up" in Matt. 12:41, RV; Mark 14:60; Luke 4:16; 10:25; Acts 1:15; 5:34; 10:26; 11:28; 13:16; in 14:10, "stand upright." See ARISE, No. 1.

3. ephistēmi (ἐφίστημι, 2186) (epi, "upon," and No. 1), used intransitively, denotes "to stand upon or by, be present," Luke 2:9 and Acts 12:7, "stood by," RV (KJV, "came upon"); Luke 4:39, "stood over"; 24:4 and Acts 23:11, "stood by"; Acts 10:17, "stood"; 22:13, "standing by (me)," RV; so v. 20, KJV and RV. See ASSAULT, COME, No. 27, HAND (AT), B Note (2), INSTANT, PRESENT.

4. paristēmi (παρίστημι, 3936), intransitively, denotes "to stand by or beside" (para, "by," and No. 1), Mark 14:47, 69, 70; 15:35, 39 (RV, "stood by"); Luke 19:24; John 18:22; 19:26; Acts 1:10; 9:39; 23:2, 4; 27:23; in 27:24, "stand before"; in 4:10, "doth ... stand here"; in Luke 1:19, "stand"; Rom. 14:10, "we shall ... stand before" (middle voice); 2 Tim. 4:17, RV, "stood by" (KJV, "... with"). See COMMEND, No. 4.

5. periistēmi (περιίστημι, 4026), intransitively, "to stand around" (peri), is so used in John 11:42; Acts 25:7. See AVOID, No. 4.

6. sunistēmi (συνίστημι, 4921), intransitively, denotes "to stand with" (sun), Luke 9:32; for 2 Pet. 3:5, KJV, "standing," see COMPACTED, No. 1: for other meanings see APPROVE, A, No. 2.

7. stēkō (στήκω, 4739), a late present tense from hestēka, the perfect of histēmi, is used (a) literally, Mark 3:31; 11:25; John 1:26, in the best texts (in some texts Rev. 12:4); (b) figuratively, Rom. 14:4, where the context indicates the meaning "standeth upright" rather than that of acquittal; of "standing fast," 1 Cor. 16:13, "in the faith," i.e., by adherence to it; Gal. 5:1, in freedom from legal bondage; Phil. 1:27, "in one spirit"; Phil. 4:1 and 1 Thess. 3:8, "in the Lord," i.e., in the willing subjection to His authority; 2 Thess. 2:15, in the apostle's teaching; some mss. have it in John 8:44, the most authentic have histēmi, RV, "stood" (KJV, "abode").¶

8. menō (μένω, 3306), "to abide, remain," is rendered "might stand," in Rom. 9:11, of the purpose of God, i.e., might abide for the permanent recognition of its true character. See ABIDE, No. 1.

9. kukloō (κυκλόω, 2944), "stood round about," Acts 14:20: see COMPASS, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In Mark 3:3, egeirō, "to raise," followed by the phrase eis to meson, "into the midst," is translated "stand forth." (2) In 2 Tim. 4:16, KJV, paraginomai (in some texts, sumparaginomai), "to come up to assist," is rendered "stood with (me)," RV, "took (my) part." (3) In Heb. 9:8, RV, "is ... standing" (KJV, "was ... standing") represents the phrase echō, "to have," stasis, "a standing," lit., "has a standing." (4) For "stand ... in jeopardy" see DANGER.

STAR

1. astēr (ἀστήρ, 792), "a star," Matt. 2:2–10; 24:29; Mark 13:25; 1 Cor. 15:41; Rev. 6:13; 8:10–12; 9:1; 12:1, 4, isused metaphorically, (a) of Christ, as "the morning star," figurative of the approach of the day when He will appear as the "sun of righteousness," to govern the earth in peace, an event to be preceded by the rapture of the Church, Rev. 2:28; 22:16, the promise of the former to the overcomer being suggestive of some special personal interest in Himself and His authority; (b) of the angels of the seven churches, Rev. 1:16, 20; 2:1; 3:1; (c) of certain false teachers, described as "wandering stars," Jude 13, as if the "stars," intended for light and guidance, became the means of deceit by irregular movements.¶

2. astron (ἄστρον, 798), practically the same as No. 1, is used (a) in the sing. in Acts 7:43, "the star of the god Rephan," RV, the symbol or "figure," probably of Saturn, worshiped as a god, apparently the same as Chiun in Amos 5:26 (Rephan being the Egyptian deity corresponding to Saturn, Chiun the Assyrian); (b) in the plur., Luke 21:25; Acts 27:20; Heb. 11:12.¶

1. katechō (κατέχω, 2722), "to hold fast, hold back," is used in the sense of detaining in Luke 4:42, "would have stayed (Him)," RV. See HOLD.

2. epechō (ἐπέχω, 1907) has the meaning "to wait in a place, to stay," in Acts 19:22. See HEED, HOLD, MARK.

3. kōluō (κωλύω, 2967), "to hinder," is rendered "stayed" in Acts 27:43, RV (KJV, "kept"); so in 2 Pet. 2:16, RV (KJV, "forbad"). See HINDER.

For STEADFAST see STEDFAST

STEAL

kleptō (κλέπτω, 2813), "to steal," akin to kleptēs, "a thief" (cf. Eng., "kleptomania"), occurs in Matt. 6:19, 20; 19:18; 27:64; 28:13; Mark 10:19; Luke 18:20; John 10:10; Rom. 2:21 (twice); 13:9; Eph. 4:28 (twice).¶

STEDFAST, STEDFASTLY, STEDFASTNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), "firm, secure" (akin to bainō, "to go"), is translated "steadfast" in 2 Cor. 1:7; Heb. 2:2; 3:14, KJV (RV, "firm"); 6:19. See FIRM, FORCE, SURE.

2. hedraios (ἑδραῖος, 1476) primarily denotes "seated" (hedra, "a seat"); hence, "steadfast," metaphorical of moral fixity, 1 Cor. 7:37; 15:58; Col. 1:23, RV (KJV, "settled").¶

3. stereos (στερεός, 4731), firm, is rendered "steadfast" in 1 Pet. 5:9. See FIRM, No. 2.

B. Nouns.

1. stereōma (στερέωμα, 4733), primarily "a support, foundation," denotes "strength, steadfastness," Col. 2:5.¶ In the Sept., in Gen. 1:6, and Ezek. 1:22, it is used of the firmament, which was believed to be a solid canopy. The corresponding Heb. word rāqîa' means "expanse," from rāqa', "to spread out."

2. stērigmos (στηριγμός, 4740), "a setting firmly, supporting," then "fixedness, steadfastness" (akin to stērizō, "to establish"), is used in 2 Pet. 3:17.¶

krēmnos (κρημνός, 2911), "a steep bank" (akin to kremannumi, "to hang"), occurs in Matt. 8:32; Mark 5:13; Luke 8:33, RV, "the steep" (KJV, "a steep place").¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 25:12.¶

For STEERSMAN see GOVERNOR, B, Note

STEP (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

ichnos (ἴχνος, 2487), "a footstep, a track," is used metaphorically of the "steps" (a) of Christ's conduct, 1 Pet. 2:21; (b) of Abraham's faith, Rom. 4:12; (c) of identical conduct in carrying on the work of the gospel, 2 Cor. 12:18.¶

B. Verb.

katabainō (καταβαίνω, 2597), "to go, or come, down," is translated "steppeth down" in John 5:7. See COME, No. 19.

Note: Many ancient authorities have the passage in the KJV in John 5:4, which contains embainō, rendered "stepped in." See COME, No. 21.

STERN

prumna (πρύμνα, 4403), the feminine form of the adjective prumnos, "hindmost," is rendered "stern" in Acts 27:29; and in the RV in v. 41 and Mark 4:38. See PART, A, Note (2).¶

STEWARD, STEWARDSHIP

A. Nouns.

1. oikonomos (οἰκονόμος, 3623) primarily denoted "the manager of a household or estate" (oikos, "a house," nemō, "to arrange"), "a steward" (such were usually slaves or freedmen), Luke 12:42; 16:1, 3, 8; 1 Cor. 4:2; Gal. 4:2, RV (KJV, "governors"); in Rom. 16:23, the "treasurer" (RV) of a city (see CHAMBERLAIN, Note); it is used metaphorically, in the wider sense, of a "steward" in general, (a) of preachers of the gospel and teachers of the Word of God, 1 Cor. 4:1; (b) of elders or bishops in churches, Titus 1:7; (c) of believers generally, 1 Pet. 4:10.¶

2. epitropos (ἐπίτροπος, 2012) is rendered "steward" in Matt. 20:8; Luke 8:3: see GUARDIAN.

3. oikonomia (οἰκονομία, 3622) is rendered "stewardship" in Luke 16:2, 3, 4, and in the RV in 1 Cor. 9:17: see DISPENSATION.

B. Verb.

oikonomeō (οἰκονομέω, 3621), akin to A, Nos. 1 and 3, signifies "to be a house steward," Luke 16:2.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 112:5.¶

STICK

phruganon (φρύγανον, 5434) denotes "a dry stick" (from phrugō, "to parch"); in the plural, "brushwood," Acts 28:3.¶

STICK FAST

ereidō (ἐρείδω, 2043), primarily "to prop, fix firmly," is used intransitively in Acts 27:41 of a ship driving ashore, RV, "struck."¶

sklērotrachēlos (σκληροτράχηλος, 4644), from sklēros, "harsh, hard," trachēlos, "a neck," is used metaphorically in Acts 7:51.¶

STILL (Verb)

phimoō (φιμόω, 5392), in the passive voice, is rendered "be still" in Mark 4:39: see MUZZLE.

STILL (Adverb)

eti (ἔτι, 2089), "yet, as yet, still," is translated "still" in the RV in 1 Cor. 12:31; 2 Cor. 1:10; Gal. 1:10 and 5:11; KJV and RV in Rev. 22:11 (four times), where the word indicates the permanent character, condition and destiny of the unrighteous and the filthy, the righteous and the holy (for the verbs see the RV); in John 11:30, the best mss. have the word; so RV (KJV omits).

Note: For combinations see ABIDE, IGNORANCE, B, No. 1, STAND.

For STING see GOAD

STINK

ozō (ὄζω, 3605), "to emit a smell" (cf. Eng., "ozone"), occurs in John 11:39.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 8:14.¶

STIR, STIR UP (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

tarachos (τάραχος, 5017), akin to tarachē, "trouble," and tarassō, "to trouble," is rendered "stir" in Acts 12:18; 19:23.¶

B. Verbs.

1. anazōpureō (ἀναζωπυρέω, 329) denotes "to kindle afresh," or "keep in full flame" (ana, "up," or "again," zōos, "alive," pur, "fire"), and is used metaphorically in 2 Tim. 1:6, where "the gift of God" is regarded as a fire capable of dying out through neglect.¶ The verb was in common use in the vernacular of the time.

2. epegeirō (ἐπεγείρω, 1892), "stirred up" in Acts 14:2. See RAISE.

3. diegeirō (διεγείρω, 1326), "stir up" in 2 Pet. 1:13; 3:1: see ARISE, No. 4.

4. seiō (σείω, 4579), "to move to and fro," is rendered "was stirred" in Matt. 21:10, RV (KJV, "was moved"). See MOVE, QUAKE, SHAKE.

5. anaseiō (ἀνασείω, 383) primarily denotes "to shake back or out, move to and fro"; then, "to stir up," used metaphorically in Mark 15:11, RV, "stirred . . . up" (KJV, "moved"), and Luke 3:14; 23:5.¶

6. saleuō (σαλεύω, 4531), "stirred up" in Acts 17:13: see SHAKE.

7. parotrunō (παροτρύνω, 3951), from para, used intensively, beyond measure, and otrunō, "to urge on, rouse," occurs in Acts 13:50, "stirred up."¶

8. sunkineō (συγκινέω, 4787), "to move together" (sun, "together," kineō, "to move"), "to stir up, excite," is used metaphorically in Acts 6:12.¶

9. suncheō (συνχέω, 4797), "to pour together," is used metaphorically in Acts 21:27, "stirred up." See CONFOUND, B, No. 1.

10. paroxunō (παροξύνω, 3947), "stirred" in Acts 17:16: see PROVOKE, No. 2.

11. erethizō (ἐρεθίζω, 2042), "hath stirred" in 2 Cor. 9:2, RV. See PROVOKE, No. 3.

12. anastatoō (ἀναστατόω, 387), "to excite, unsettle" (akin to anistēmi, "to raise up," and anastasis, "a raising"), is used (a) of "stirring up" to sedition, and tumult, Acts 17:6, "turned . . . upside down"; 21:38, RV, "stirred up to sedition," KJV, "madest an uproar"; (b) "to upset" by false teaching, Gal. 5:12, RV, "unsettle" (KJV, "trouble").¶

Note: In Acts 24:12, poieō, "to make," with epistasis, "a stopping" (in some texts episustasis), signifies "to collect" (a crowd), KJV, "raising up (the people)," RV, "stirring up (a crowd)." See COME, Note (9).

For STOCK see KIND

STOCKS

xulon (ξύλον, 3586), "wood," is used of "stocks" in Acts 16:24. See STAFF, TREE, WOOD.

STOMACH

stomachos (στόμαχος, 4751), properly "a mouth, an opening," akin to stoma, "a mouth," denotes "the stomach" in 1 Tim. 5:23.¶

STONE (Noun, Verb, and Adjective)

A. Nouns.

1. lithos (λίθος, 3037) is used (I) literally, of (a) the "stones" of the ground, e.g., Matt. 4:3, 6; 7:9; (b) "tombstones," e.g., Matt. 27:60, 66; (c) "building stones," e.g., Matt. 21:42; (d) "a millstone," Luke 17:2; cf. Rev. 18:21 (see MILLSTONE); (e) the "tables (or tablets)" of the Law, 2 Cor. 3:7; (f) "idol images," Acts 17:29; (g) the "treasures" of commercial Babylon, Rev. 18:12, 16; (II) metaphorically, of (a) Christ, Rom. 9:33; 1 Pet. 2:4, 6, 8; (b) believers, 1 Pet. 2:5; (c) spiritual edification by scriptural teaching, 1 Cor. 3:12; (d) the adornment of the foundations of the wall of the spiritual and heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:19; (e) the adornment of the seven angels in Rev. 15:6, RV (so the best texts; some have linon, "linen," KJV); (f) the adornment of religious Babylon, Rev. 17:4; (III) figuratively, of Christ, Rev. 4:3; 21:11, where "light" stands for "Light-giver" (phōstēr).

2. psēphos (ψῆφος, 5586), "a smooth stone, a pebble," worn smooth as by water, or polished (akin to psaō, "to rub"), denotes (a) by metonymy, a vote (from the use of "pebbles" for this purpose; cf. psēphizō, "to count"), Acts 26:10, RV (KJV, "voice"); (b) a (white) "stone" to be given to the overcomer in the church at Pergamum, Rev. 2:17 (twice); a white "stone" was often used in the social life and judicial customs of the ancients; festal days were noted by a white "stone," days of calamity by a black; in the courts a white "stone" indicated acquittal, a black condemnation. A host's appreciation of a special guest was indicated by a white "stone" with the name or a message written on it; this is probably the allusion here.¶

Note: In John 1:42 petros stands for the proper name, Peter, as the RV (KJV, "a stone"; marg., "Peter"); petros denotes "a piece of a rock, a detached stone or boulder," in contrast to petra, "a mass of rock." See ROCK.

B. Verbs.

1. lithoboleō (λιθοβολέω, 3036), "to pelt with stones" (A, No. 1, and ballō, "to throw"), "to stone to death," occurs in Matt. 21:35; 23:37; Luke 13:34 (John 8:5 in some mss.: see No. 2); Acts 7:58, 59; 14:5; Heb. 12:20.¶

2. lithazō (λιθάζω, 3034), "to stone," virtually equivalent to No. 1, but not stressing the casting, occurs in John 8:5 (in the most authentic mss.); 10:31–33; 11:8; Acts 5:26; 14:19; 2 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 11:37.¶

3. katalithazō (καταλιθάζω, 2642), an intensive form of No. 2, "to cast stones at," occurs in Luke 20:6.¶

C. Adjective.

lithinos (λίθινος, 3035), "of stone" (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in John 2:6; 2 Cor. 3:3; Rev. 9:20.¶

For STONY see ROCKY

STOOP

1. kuptō (κύπτω, 2955), "to bow the head, stoop down," occurs in Mark 1:7; John 8:6, 8.¶

2. parakuptō (παρακύπτω, 3879) is rendered "to stoop down" in Luke 24:12; John 20:5, 11, RV, "stooping and looking in": see LOOK, No. 10.

STOP

1. phrassō (φράσσω, 5420), "to fence in" (akin to phragmos, "a fence"), "close, stop," is used (a) metaphorically, in Rom. 3:19, of "preventing" all excuse from Jew and Gentile, as sinners; in 2 Cor. 11:10, lit., "this boasting shall not be stopped to me"; passive voice in both; (b) physically, of the mouths of lions, Heb. 11:33 (active voice).¶

2. sunechō (συνέχω, 4912), "to hold together," is rendered "stopped (their ears)" in Acts 7:57. See HOLD.

3. epistomizō (ἐπιστομίζω, 1993), "to stop the mouth," Titus 1:11: see MOUTH, B.¶

STORE (Verb)

1. thēsaurizō (θησαυρίζω, 2343), "to lay up, store up," is rendered "in store" (lit., "storing"), with a view to help a special case of need, 1 Cor. 16:2; said of the heavens and earth in 2 Pet. 3:7, RV, "have been stored up (for fire)," marg., "stored (with fire)," KJV, "kept in store (reserved unto fire)." See LAY, No. 17, TREASURE.

2. apothēsaurizō (ἀποθησαυρίζω, 597), "to treasure up, store away" (apo), is used in 1 Tim. 6:19, of "laying up in store" a good foundation for the hereafter by being rich in good works.¶

For STOREHOUSE, STORECHAMBER, see CHAMBER

STORM

lailaps (λαῖλαψ, 2978), "a hurricane, whirlwind," is rendered "storm" in Mark 4:37; Luke 8:23; 2 Pet. 2:17, RV (KJV, "tempest"). See TEMPEST.¶

tristegos (τρίστεγος, 5152), an adjective denoting "of three stories" (treis, "three," stegē, "a roof"), occurs in Acts 20:9 (with oikēma, "a dwelling," understood), RV, "the third story" (KJV, "the third loft").¶

STRAIGHT

A. Adjectives.

1. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117), "direct, straight, right," is translated "straight," figuratively, of the paths of the Lord, Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; Luke 3:4; in v. 5 of the rectification of the crooked, with reference to moral transformation; in Acts 9:11, the name of a street in Damascus, still one of the principal thoroughfares. See RIGHT.

2. orthos (ὀρθός, 3717), used of height, denotes "upright," Acts 14:10; of line of direction, figuratively, said of paths of righteousness, Heb. 12:13.¶

B. Verbs.

1. euthunō (εὐθύνω, 2116), akin to A, No. 1, is used of the directing of a ship by the steersman, Jas. 3:4 (see GOVERNOR, B, Note); metaphorically, of making "straight" the way of the Lord, John 1:23.¶

2. anorthoō (ἀνορθόω, 461), "to set up, make straight": see LIFT, No. 6.

For STRAIGHT COURSE, see COURSE, B, Note (1)

For STRAIGHTWAY see FORTHWITH, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and IMMEDIATELY, No. 1

diülizō (διϋλίζω, 1368), primarily denotes "to strain thoroughly" (dia, "through," intensive, hulizō, "to strain"), then, "to strain out," as through a sieve or strainer, as in the case of wine, so as to remove the unclean midge, Matt. 23:24, RV (KJV, "strain at").¶ In the Sept., Amos 6:6.¶

For the Adjective STRAIT see NARROW

STRAIT (be in a), STRAITENED

1. sunechō (συνέχω, 4912), "to hold together, constrain," is translated "I am in a strait" in Phil. 1:23 (passive voice), i.e., being restricted on both sides, under a pressure which prevents a definite choice; so in Luke 12:50, "(how) am I straitened," i.e., pressed in. See CONSTRAIN, A, No. 3.

2. stenochōreō (στενοχωρέω, 4729), "to be pressed for room" (stenos, "narrow," chōros, "a space"), is rendered "to be straitened" in 2 Cor. 4:8, RV (KJV, "distressed"); 6:12 (twice). See ANGUISH, B, No. 1.¶

3. thlibō (θλίβω, 2346), for which see AFFLICT, No. 4, is used in the perfect participle passive of "a narrowed way," in Matt. 7:14, RV, "straitened," KJV, "narrow," of the way "that leadeth unto life," i.e., hemmed in like a narrow gorge between rocks.

akribestatos (ἀκριβέστατος, 196), the superlative degree of akribēs, "accurate, exact" (cf. akribōs, see ACCURATELY and associated words there), occurs in Acts 26:5, "the straitest (sect)," RV (KJV, "most straitest").¶

STRAITLY

Notes: (1) For polla, KJV, "straitly" in Mark 3:12; 5:43, see MUCH (RV). (2) In Acts 4:17 some mss. have apeilē, "a threat," with apeilō (middle voice), lit., "let us threaten them with a threat," KJV, "let us straitly threaten"; the best texts omit the noun (so RV). Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.), arguing for the presence of the noun, consider that it "clearly reflects the literal rendering of a Semitic original reported to Luke from an eye-witness—was it Paul?" (3) A similar construction, parangellō with the noun parangelia, occurs in Acts 5:28, "we straitly charged you," lit., "we charged you with a charge." See CHARGE, A, No. 6. (4) For embrimaomai, KJV, "charge straitly" (RV, "strictly") in Matt. 9:30; Mark 1:43, see CHARGE, C, No. 4.

For STRAKE, Acts 27:17, KJV (RV, "lowered"), see LET DOWN, No. 2.

STRANGE

A. Adjectives.

1. xenos (ξένος, 3581) denotes (a) "foreign, alien," Acts 17:18, of gods; Heb. 13:9, of doctrines; (b) "unusual," 1 Pet. 4:12, 2nd part, of the fiery trial of persecution (for 1st part, see B). See STRANGER.

2. allotrios (ἀλλότριος, 245) denotes (a) "belonging to another" (allos), see MAN'S, Note (1); (b) "alien, foreign, strange," Acts 7:6; Heb. 11:9, KJV, RV, "(a land) not his own." See ALIEN, STRANGER.

3. paradoxos (παράδοξος, 3861), "contrary to received opinion" (para, "beside," doxa, "opinion"; Eng. "paradox," "-ical"), is rendered "strange things" in Luke 5:26.¶

4. exō (ἔξω, 1845), outside, is rendered "strange" in Acts 26:11, KJV: see FOREIGN.

Note: In 1 Cor. 14:21 (1st part), RV, heteroglōssos, signifying "of a different tongue" (heteros, "another," glōssa, "a tongue") is translated "of strange (KJV, other) tongues."¶ xenizō (ξενίζω, 3579) denotes "to think something strange," 1 Pet. 4:4, 12, passive voice, i.e., "they are surprised," and "be (not) surprised"; in Acts 17:20, the present participle, active, is rendered "strange," i.e., "surprising." See ENTERTAIN, LODGE.

B. Verb.

STRANGER

A. Adjectives (used as nouns).

1. xenos (ξένος, 3581) "strange" (see No. 1 above), denotes "a stranger, foreigner," Matt. 25:35, 38, 43, 44; 27:7; Acts 17:21; Eph. 2:12, 19; Heb. 11:13; 3 John 5.

2. allotrios (ἀλλότριος, 245), "strangers," Matt. 17:25, 26; John 10:5 (twice): see No. 2, above.

3. allogenēs (ἀλλογενής, 241) (allos, "another," genos, "a race") occurs in Luke 17:18, of a Samaritan. Moulton and Milligan illustrate the use of the word by the inscription on the Temple barrier, "let no foreigner enter within the screen and enclosure surrounding the sanctuary"; according to Mommsen this inscription was cut by the Romans: cf. PARTITION.¶

Notes: (1) For paroikos, in KJV, see SOJOURN, B, No. 1. For parepidēmos, in KJV, see PILGRIM. (2) The pronoun heteros, "other," is translated "strangers" in 1 Cor. 14:21 (2nd part), RV (KJV, "other"); cf. STRANGE, A, Note.

B. Verb.

xenodocheō (ξενοδοχέω, 3580), "to receive strangers" (xenos, No. 1, above, and dechomai, "to receive"), occurs in 1 Tim. 5:10, RV, "(if) she hath used hospitality to strangers," KJV, "(if) she have lodged strangers."¶

Note: For epidēmeō, in KJV, see SOJOURNER, A, No. 2. For paroikeō, in KJV, see SOJOURN, A, No. 1.

C. Noun.

philoxenia (φιλοξενία, 5381), "love of strangers," occurs in Rom. 12:13, "hospitality," and Heb. 13:2, RV, "to show love unto strangers," KJV, "to entertain strangers." See ENTERTAIN, Note.¶

Note: For paroikia in Acts 13:17, see SOJOURN, C.

pniktos (πνικτός, 4156), from pnigō, "to choke," occurs in Acts 15:20, 29; 21:25, of the flesh of animals killed by strangling, without shedding their blood (see, e.g., Lev. 17:13, 14).¶

For STRAWED see FURNISH and SCATTER, No. 2

For STREAM see RIVER

STREET

1. plateia (πλατεῖα, 4113), grammatically the feminine of platus, "broad," is used as a noun (hodos, "a way," being understood, i.e., "a broad way"), "a street," Matt. 6:5; 12:19 (in some texts, Mark 6:56); Luke 10:10; 13:26; 14:21; Acts 5:15; Rev. 11:8; 21:21; 22:2.¶

2. amphodon (ἄμφοδον, 296), properly "a way around" (amphi, "around," hodos, "a way"), occurs in Mark 11:4, RV, "the open street" (KJV, "where two ways met").¶

Note: For rhumē, see LANE. For agora, see MARKET.

STRENGTH, STRENGTHEN

A. Nouns.

1. dunamis (δύναμις, 1411) is rendered "strength" in the RV and KJV of Rev. 1:16; elsewhere the RV gives the word its more appropriate meaning "power," for KJV, "strength," 1 Cor. 15:56; 2 Cor. 1:8; 12:9; Heb. 11:11; Rev. 3:8; 12:10. See ABILITY, No. 1, POWER, No. 1.

2. ischus (ἰσχύς, 2479), "ability, strength," is rendered "strength" in Mark 12:30, 33; Luke 10:27; in Rev. 5:12, KJV (RV, "might"). See ABILITY, No. 2, MIGHT.

3. kratos (κράτος, 2904), "force, might," is rendered "strength" in Luke 1:51, RV and KJV; RV, "strength" (KJV,"power") in Eph. 1:19 and 6:10. See DOMINION, No. 1, POWER, No. 4.

Note: In Rev. 17:13, KJV, exousia, "freedom of action," is rendered "strength" (RV, "authority").

B. Verbs.

1. dunamoō (δυναμόω, 1412), "to strengthen," occurs in Col. 1:11, and in the best texts in Heb. 11:34, "were made strong" (some have No. 2); some have it in Eph. 6:10 (the best have No. 2).¶ In the Sept., Ps. 52:7; 68:28; Eccl. 10:10; Dan. 9:27.¶

2. endunamoō (ἐνδυναμόω, 1743), "to make strong," is rendered "increased . . . in strength" in Acts 9:22; "to strengthen" in Phil. 4:13; 2 Tim. 2:1, RV, "be strengthened"; 4:17. See ENABLE, STRONG, B.

3. ischuō (ἰσχύω, 2480), akin to A, No. 2, "to have strength," is so rendered in Mark 5:4, RV (KJV, "could"); in Luke 16:3, RV, "I have not strength to" (KJV, "I cannot"). See AVAIL.

4. enischuō (ἐνισχύω, 1765), akin to A, No. 2, a strengthened form of No. 3, is used in Luke 22:43 and Acts 9:19.¶

5. krataioō (κραταιόω, 2901), "to strengthen," is rendered "to be strengthened" in Eph. 3:16. See STRONG, B.

6. sthenoō (σθενόω, 4599), from sthenos, "strength," occurs in 1 Pet. 5:10, in a series of future tenses, according to the best texts, thus constituting divine promises.¶

Notes: (1) For ischuō, Heb. 9:17, see AVAIL. (2) For stērizō, Luke 22:32, see ESTABLISH, No. 1. (3) For stereoō, Acts 3:7, see ESTABLISH, No. 2. (4) Epistērizō is found in some texts in Acts 18:23, KJV, "strengthening." See CONFIRM, A, No. 2, ESTABLISH, No. 1. (5) For "without strength," Rom. 5:6, KJV, see WEAK.

STRETCH

1. ekteinō (ἐκτείνω, 1614), "to stretch out or forth," is so rendered in Matt. 12:13 (twice), 49; 14:31; 26:51; Mark 3:5 (twice); Luke 6:10; in Matt. 8:3; Mark 1:41 and Luke 5:13, RV (KJV, "put forth"); Luke 22:53; John 21:18; Acts 4:30; 26:1. For Acts 27:30 see LAY, No. 13.¶

2. epekteinō (ἐπεκτείνω, 1901), an intensive form of No. 1 (epi, "forth"), is used in Phil. 3:13, RV, "stretching forward" (KJV, "reaching forth"), a metaphor probably from the foot race (rather than the chariot race), so Lightfoot, who quotes Bengel's paraphrase, "the eye goes before and draws on the hand, the hand goes before and draws on the foot."¶

3. huperekteinō (ὑπερκτείνω, 5239), "to stretch out beyond" (huper, "over," and No. 1), occurs in 2 Cor. 10:14, RV, "we stretch (not) . . . overmuch" (KJV, ". . . beyond our measure").¶

Note: For ekpetannumi, Rom. 10:21, see SPREAD, No. 5. For epiballō, Acts 12:1, see PUT, No. 8.

STRICKEN (in years)

probainō (προβαίνω, 4260), "to go forward," is used metaphorically of age, in Luke 1:7, 18, with the phrases "in their (her) days," translated "well stricken in years" (see marg.); in 2:36, "of a great age" (marg., "advanced in many days"). See GO, No. 20.

For STRICT, RV, see MANNER, A, No. 5. For STRICTLY, RV, see STRAITLY STRIFE

1. eris (ἔρις, 2054), "strife, contention," is the expression of "enmity," Rom. 1:29, RV, "strife" (KJV, "debate"); 13:13; 1 Cor. 1:11, "contentions" (RV and KJV); 3:3; 2 Cor. 12:20, RV, "strife" (KJV, "debates"); Gal. 5:20, RV, "strife" (KJV, "variance"); Phil. 1:15; 1 Tim. 6:4; Titus 3:9, RV, "strifes" (KJV, "contentions"). See CONTENTION, A, No. 1.¶

2. erithia (or -eia) (ἐριθία, 2052): see FACTION.

3. antilogia (ἀντιλογία, 485), "strife," Heb. 6:16, KJV: see DISPUTE, A, No. 4.

4. machē (μάχη, 3163), "strifes," 2 Tim. 2:23: see FIGHTING, A.

5. philoneikia (φιλονεικία, 5379), "strife," Luke 22:24, KJV: see CONTENTION, A, No. 3.¶

6. logomachia (λογομαχία, 3055), "strife of words," 1 Tim. 6:4: see DISPUTE, A, No. 2.¶

STRIKE

Notes: (1) In Rev. 7:16, piptō, "to fall," is rendered "strike" in the RV, KJV, "light (on)." (2) In Acts 27:41, ereidō, "to fix firmly," is used of a ship driving ashore, RV, "struck" (KJV, "stuck fast").¶ (3) For paiō, "to smite," Rev. 9:5, KJV, "striketh," see SMITE, No. 3. (4) For patassō, "to smite," Matt. 26:51, KJV, "struck," see SMITE, No. 1. (5) For chalaō, "to let go," Acts 27:17, KJV, "strake," see LET DOWN, No. 2. (6) In Luke 22:64 some mss. have tuptō, "to beat," imperfect tense, "they were beating." (7) For rhapizō, Matt. 26:67, and rhapisma, Mark 14:65, see BLOW, SMITE, No. 6 and Note (2). Some mss. have ballō, "struck."

STRIKER

plēktēs (πλήκτης, 4131), "a striker, a brawler" (akin to plēssō, "to strike," smite), occurs in 1 Tim. 3:3; Titus 1:7.¶

ekduō (ἐκδύω, 1562), "to take off, strip off," is used especially of clothes, and rendered "to strip" in Matt. 27:28 (some mss. have enduō, "to clothe"), and Luke 10:30; to take off, Matt. 27:31; Mark 15:20; figuratively, 2 Cor. 5:4, "unclothed" (middle voice), of putting off the body at death (the believer's state of being unclothed does not refer to the body in the grave but to the spirit, which awaits the "body of glory" at the resurrection).¶

STRIPE

1. mōlōps (μώλωψ, 3468), "a bruise, a wound from a stripe," is used in 1 Pet. 2:24 (from the Sept. of Isa. 53:5), lit., in the original, "by whose bruise," not referring to Christ's scourging, but figurative of the stroke of divine judgment administered vicariously to Him on the cross (a comforting reminder to these Christian servants, who were not infrequently buffeted, v. 20, by their masters).¶

2. plēgē (πληγή, 4127), "a blow, stripe, wound" (akin to plēssō, "to strike," and plēktēs, "a striker"), is rendered "stripes" in Luke 12:48 (the noun is omitted in the original in v. 47 and the 2nd part of v. 48); Acts 16:23, 33; 2 Cor. 6:5; 11:23. See PLAGUE, WOUND.

STRIVE

1. agōnizomai (ἀγωνίζομαι, 75), "to contend" (Eng., "agonize"), is rendered "to strive"

in Luke 13:24; 1 Cor. 9:25; Col. 1:29; 4:12, RV (KJV, "laboring fervently"). In 1 Tim. 4:10, the best texts have this verb (RV, "strive") for oneidizomai, "to suffer reproach," KJV; see FIGHT, B, No. 1.

2. machomai (μάχομαι, 3164), "to fight, to quarrel, dispute," is rendered "to strive" in John 6:52; Acts 7:26; 2 Tim. 2:24. See FIGHT, B, No. 3.

3. diamachomai (διαμάχομαι, 1264), "to struggle against" (dia, intensive, and No. 2), is used of "contending" in an argument, Acts 23:9, "strove."¶

4. erizō (ἐρίζω, 2051), "to wrangle, strive" (eris, "strife"), is used in Matt. 12:19.¶

5. logomacheō (λογομαχέω, 3054), "to strive about words" (logos, "a word," and No. 2), is used in 2 Tim. 2:14.¶

6. antagōnizomai (ἀνταγωνίζομαι, 464), "to struggle against" (anti), is used in Heb. 12:4, "striving against."¶

7. sunagōnizomai (συναγωνίζομαι, 4865), "to strive together with" (sun), is used in Rom. 15:30.¶

8. sunathleō (συναθλέω, 4866), "to strive together," Phil. 1:27: see LABOR, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 2:5, KJV, athleō, "to contend in games, wrestle" (athlos, "a contest"), is rendered "strive." See CONTEND. (2) For philotimeomai, Rom. 15:20, see AIM.

For STRIVINGS, Titus 3:9, KJV, see FIGHTING

perierchomai (περιέρχομαι, 4022), "to go about," as an itinerant (peri, "around," erchomai, "to go"), is used of certain Jews in Acts 19:13, RV, "strolling" (KJV, "vagabond"). See COMPASS, No. 6, WANDER.

STRONG, STRONGER

A. Adjectives.

1. dunatos (δυνατός, 1415), "powerful, mighty," is translated "strong," in Rom. 15:1, where the "strong" are those referred to in ch. 14, in contrast to "the weak in faith," those who have scruples in regard to eating meat and the observance of days; 2 Cor. 12:10, where the strength lies in bearing sufferings in the realization that the endurance is for Christ's sake; 2 Cor. 13:9, where "ye are strong" implies the good spiritual condition which the apostle desires for the church at Corinth in having nothing requiring his exercise of discipline (contrast No. 2 in 1 Cor. 4:10). See ABLE, C, No. 1, MIGHTY, POSSIBLE, POWER.

2. ischuros (ἰσχυρός, 2478), "strong, mighty," is used of (a) persons: (1) God, Rev. 18:8; (2) angels, Rev. 5:2; 10:1; 18:21; (3) men, Matt. 12:29 (twice) and parallel passages; Heb. 11:34, KJV, "valiant" (RV, "mighty"); Rev. 6:15 (in the best texts; some have No. 1); 19:18, "mighty"; metaphorically, (4) the church at Corinth, 1 Cor. 4:10, where the apostle reproaches them ironically with their unspiritual and self-complacent condition; (5) of young men in Christ spiritually strong, through the Word of God, to overcome the evil one, 1 John 2:14; of (b) things: (1) wind, Matt. 14:30 (in some mss.), "boisterous"; (2) famine, Luke 15:14; (3) things in the mere human estimate, 1 Cor. 1:27; (4) Paul's letters, 2 Cor. 10:10; (5) the Lord's crying and tears, Heb. 5:7; (6) consolation, 6:18; (7) the voice of an angel, Rev. 18:2 (in the best texts; some have megas, "great"); (8) Babylon, Rev. 18:10; (9) thunderings, Rev. 19:6. See BOISTEROUS, MIGHTY.

3. ischuroteros (ἰσχυρότερος, 2478*), the comparative degree of No. 2, is used (a) of Christ, Matt. 3:11; Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; (b) of "the weakness of God," as men without understanding regard it, 1 Cor. 1:25; (c) of a man of superior physical strength, Luke 11:22; (d) in 1 Cor. 10:22, in a rhetorical question, implying the impossibility of escaping the jealousy of God when it is kindled.¶

Notes: (1) For "strong delusion," 2 Thess. 2:11, KJV, see ERROR, No. 1. (2) For "strong (meat)," Heb. 5:12, 14, KJV, see SOLID.

B. Verbs.

1. endunamoō (ἐνδυναμόω, 1743), "to make strong" (en, "in," dunamis, "power"), "to strengthen," is rendered "waxed strong" in Rom. 4:20, RV (KJV, "was strong"); "be strong," Eph. 6:10; "were made strong," Heb. 11:34. See ENABLE, STRENGTH, B, No. 2.

2. krataioō (κραταιόω, 2901), "to strengthen" (akin to kratos, "strength"), is rendered (a) "to wax strong," Luke 1:80; 2:40; "be strong," 1 Cor. 16:13, lit., "be strengthened"; "to be strengthened," Eph. 3:16 (passive voice in each place). See STRENGTHEN.¶

3. stereoō (στερεόω, 4732): see ESTABLISH, No. 2.

STRONGHOLDS

ochurōma (ὀχύρωμα, 3794), "a stronghold, fortress" (akin to ochuroō, "to make firm"), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 10:4, of those things in which mere human confidence is imposed.¶

kalamē (καλάμη, 2562), "a stalk of corn," denotes "straw" or "stubble"; in 1 Cor. 3:12, metaphorically of the effect of the most worthless form of unprofitable doctrine, in the lives and conduct of those in a church who are the subjects of such teaching; the teachings received and the persons who receive them are associated; the latter are "the doctrine exhibited in concrete form" (Lightfoot).¶

For STUCK see STICK

STUDY

Notes: For philotimeomai, "study," 1 Thess. 4:11, see AIM. For spoudazō, 2 Tim. 2:15, KJV, see DILIGENCE, B, No. 1.

For STUFF, Luke 17:31, KJV, see GOODS, No. 4

STUMBLE

1. proskoptō (προσκόπτω, 4350), "to strike against," is used of "stumbling," (a) physically, John 11:9, 10; (b) metaphorically, (1) of Israel in regard to Christ, whose Person, teaching, and atoning death, and the gospel relating thereto, were contrary to all their ideas as to the means of righteousness before God, Rom. 9:32; 1 Pet. 2:8; (2) of a brother in the Lord in acting against the dictates of his conscience, Rom. 14:21. See BEAT, No. 6.

2. ptaiō (πταίω, 4417), "to cause to stumble," signifies, intransitively, "to stumble," used metaphorically in Rom. 11:11, in the sense (b) (1) in No. 1; with moral significance in Jas. 2:10 and 3:2 (twice), RV, "stumble" (KJV, "offend"); in 2 Pet. 1:10, RV, "stumble" (KJV, "fall").¶

Note: For aptaistos, "from stumbling," Jude 24, RV, see FALL, B, Note (6).

For STUMBLING, STUMBLING BLOCK, STUMBLING-STONE, see OFFENSE, A, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and B

katanuxis (κατάνυξις, 2659), "a pricking" (akin to katanussō, "to strike" or "prick violently," Acts 2:37), is used in Rom. 11:8, RV, "stupor" (KJV, "slumber"). It is suggested that this meaning arose from the influence of the verb katanustazō, "to nod" or "fall asleep" (Field, Notes on the Translation of the NT). Evidently what is signified is the dulling of the spiritual sense.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 60:3; Isa. 29:10.¶

SUBDUE

katagōnizomai (καταγωνίζομαι, 2610), primarily, "to struggle against" (kata, "against," agōn, "a contest"), came to signify "to conquer," Heb. 11:33, "subdued."¶

Note: For hupotassō, KJV, "to subdue," in 1 Cor. 15:28 and Phil. 3:21, see SUBJECT.

SUBJECT, SUBJECTION (Verb, Adjective, Noun)

A. Verb.

hupotassō (ὑποτάσσω, 5293), primarily a military term, "to rank under" (hupo, "under," tassō, "to arrange"), denotes (a) "to put in subjection, to subject," Rom. 8:20 (twice); in the following, the RV, has to subject for KJV, "to put under," 1 Cor. 15:27 (thrice), 28 (3rd clause); Eph. 1:22; Heb. 2:8 (4th clause); in 1 Cor. 15:28 (1st clause), for KJV "be subdued"; in Phil. 3:21, for KJV, "subdue"; in Heb. 2:5, KJV, "hath . . . put in subjection"; (b) in the middle or passive voice, to subject oneself, to obey, be subject to, Luke 2:51; 10:17, 20; Rom. 8:7; 10:3, RV, "did (not) subject themselves" [KJV, "have (not) submitted themselves"]; 13:1, 5; 1 Cor. 14:34, RV, "be in subjection" (KJV, "be under obedience"); 15:28 (2nd clause); 16:16 RV, "be in subjection" (KJV, "submit, etc."); so Col. 3:18; Eph. 5:21, RV, "subjecting yourselves" (KJV, "submitting, etc."); v. 22, RV in italics, according to the best texts; v. 24, "is subject"; Titus 2:5, 9, RV, "be in subjection" (KJV, "be obedient"); 3:1, RV, "to be in subjection" (KJV, "to be subject"); Heb. 12:9, "be in subjection"; Jas. 4:7, RV, "be subject" (KJV, "submit yourselves"); so 1 Pet. 2:13; v. 18, RV, "be in subjection"; so 3:1, KJV and RV; v. 5, similarly; 3:22, "being made subject"; 5:5, RV, "be subject" (KJV, "submit yourselves"); in some texts in the 2nd part, as KJV. See OBEDIENT, SUBMIT.

Note: For doulagōgeō, 1 Cor. 9:27, KJV, "bring into subjection," see BONDAGE, B, No. 3. For anupotaktos, "not subject," Heb. 2:8, see DISOBEDIENT, B, Note.

B. Adjective.

enochos (ἔνοχος, 1777), "held in, bound by," in Heb. 2:15, "subject to": see DANGER, B, No. 1.

Note: For "subject to like passions," Jas. 5:17, KJV, see PASSION.

C. Noun.

hupotagē (ὑποταγή, 5292), "subjection," occurs in 2 Cor. 9:13; Gal. 2:5; 1 Tim. 2:11; 3:4.¶

SUBMIT

hupeikō (ὑπείκω, 5226), "to retire, withdraw" (hupo, under, eikō, "to yield"), hence, "to yield, submit," is used metaphorically in Heb. 13:17, of "submitting" to spiritual guides in the churches.¶

Note: For hupotassō, see SUBJECT, A.

hupoballō (ὑποβάλλω, 5260), "to throw or put under, to subject," denoted "to suggest, whisper, prompt"; hence, "to instigate," translated "suborned" in Acts 6:11. To "suborn" in the legal sense is to procure a person who will take a false oath. The idea of making suggestions is probably present in this use of the word.¶

SUBSTANCE

1. ouisia (οὐσία, 3776), derived from a present participial form of eimi, "to be," denotes "substance, property," Luke 15:12, 13, RV, "substance," KJV, "goods" and "substance."¶

2. huparchonta (ὑπάρχοντα, 5224), the neuter plural of the present participle of huparchō, "to be in existence," is used as a noun with the article, signifying one's "goods," and translated "substance" in Luke 8:3. See GOODS, POSSESS, A, No. 3.

3. huparxis (ὕπαρξις, 5223), existence (akin to No. 2), possession: see POSSESS, B, No. 4.

4. hupostasis (ὑπόστασις, 5287), for which see CONFIDENCE, A No. 2, is translated "substance" (a) in Heb. 1:3, of Christ as "the very image" of God's "substance"; here the word has the meaning of the real nature of that to which reference is made in contrast to the outward manifestation (see the preceding clause); it speaks of the divine essence of God existent and expressed in the revelation of His Son. The KJV, "person" is an anachronism; the word was not so rendered till the 4th cent. Most of the earlier Eng. versions have "substance"; (b) in Heb. 11:1 it has the meaning of "confidence, assurance" (RV), marg., "the giving substance to," KJV, "substance," something that could not equally be expressed by elpis, "hope."

SUBTLY

katasophizomai (κατασοφίζομαι, 2686), "to deal subtly" (from kata, "against, under," sophos, "wise, subtle," used in the Sept. in 2 Sam. 13:3, of Jonadab), occurs in Acts 7:19.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 1:10.¶

SUBTLETY

Note: For dolos, Matt. 26:4; Acts 13:10, see GUILE. For panourgia, 2 Cor. 11:3, see CRAFTINESS.

SUBVERT, SUBVERTING

A. Verb.

anaskeuazō (ἀνασκευάζω, 384), primarily, "to pack up baggage" (ana, "up," skeuos, "a vessel"), hence, from a military point of view, "to dismantle a town, to plunder," is used metaphorically in Acts 15:24, of unsettling or "subverting" the souls of believers. In the papyri it is used of going bankrupt.¶

Note: For anatrepō, Titus 1:11, see OVERTHROW, B, No. 3. For ekstrephō, Titus 3:11, see PERVERT, No. 4.

B. Noun.

katastrophē (καταστροφή, 2692), "an overthrow," 2 Pet. 2:6 (Eng., "catastrophe"), is rendered "subverting" in 2 Tim. 2:14. See OVERTHROW.¶

For SUCCEED, Acts 24:27, RV, see ROOM, Note (2)

For SUCCOR see HELP, B, No. 4

prostatis (προστάτις, 4368), a feminine form of prostatēs, denotes "a protectress, patroness"; it is used metaphorically of Phoebe in Rom. 16:2. It is a word of dignity, evidently chosen instead of others which might have been used (see, e.g., under HELPER), and indicates the high esteem with which she was regarded, as one who had been a protectress of many. Prostatēs was the title of a citizen in Athens, who had the responsibility of seeing to the welfare of resident aliens who were without civic rights. Among the Jews it signified a wealthy patron of the community.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 2:47, KJV, the article with the present participle, passive, of sōzō, "to save," lit., "the (ones), i.e., those, being saved," is translated "such as (should be saved)"; the RV, "those that (were being saved)," gives the correct meaning, marking the kind of persons who were added to the company; (2) "such as" is a rendering of certain relative pronouns: hoios, "what sort of," e.g., Matt. 24:21; 2 Cor. 12:20 (twice); Rev. 16:18; hostis, "whoever," e.g., Mark 4:20; hopoios, "of what sort," preceded by toioutos, "of such a sort," Acts 26:29; (3) deina, Matt. 26:18, denotes "such a one" (whom one cannot, or will not, name).¶ (4) In Heb. 13:5, "such things as ye have" represents the phrase ta paronta, "the (things) present" (present participle of pareimi); (5) in Luke 11:41, ta enonta, KJV, "such things as ye have," lit., "the (things) within" (eneimi, "to be in"), RV, "those things which are within" (KJV marg., "as you are able," RV, marg., "ye can"), perhaps signifying not outward things such as lustrations, but "what things ye have within your cups and platters," i.e., "your possessions."

SUCK (GIVE SUCK), SUCKLING

thēlazō (θηλάζω, 2337), from thēlē, "a breast," is used (a) of the mother, "to suckle," Matt. 24:19; Mark 13:17; Luke 21:23; in some texts in 23:29 (the best have trephō); (b) of the young, "to suck," Matt. 21:16, "sucklings"; Luke 11:27.¶

SUDDEN, SUDDENLY

A. Adjective.

aiphnidios (αἰφνίδιος, 160), "sudden," occurs in 1 Thess. 5:3, where it has the place of emphasis at the beginning of the sentence, as olethros, "destruction," which the adjective qualifies, has at the end; in Luke 21:34, it is used adverbially, RV, "suddenly" (KJV, "unawares"). See UNAWARES.¶

B. Adverbs.

1. aphnō (ἄφνω, 869), "suddenly," occurs in Acts 2:2; 16:26; 28:6.¶

2. exaiphnēs (ἐξαίφνης, 1810), a strengthened form, akin to No. 1, occurs in Mark 13:36; Luke 2:13; 9:39; Acts 9:3; 22:6.¶

3. exapina (ἐξάπινα, 1819), a later form of No. 2, occurs in Mark 9:8.¶

Note: For tacheōs in 1 Tim. 5:22, KJV, "suddenly," RV, "hastily," see QUICKLY, No. 3.

For SUE see LAW, B, No. 2

SUFFER

A. Verbs.

(a) to permit

1. eaō (ἐάω, 1439), "to let, permit," is translated "to suffer" in Matt. 24:43; Luke 4:41; 22:51; Acts 14:16; 16:7; 19:30; 28:4; 1 Cor. 10:13. See LEAVE (a) No. 9, LET, No. 4.

2. proseaō (προσεάω, 4330), "to permit further" (pros, and No. 1), occurs in Acts 27:7.¶

3. epitrepō (ἐπιτρέπω, 2010), for which see LEAVE, (b), is rendered "to suffer" in KJV and RV in Matt. 8:21; Mark 10:4; Luke 9:59; Acts 28:16; RV only, Luke 9:61 (KJV, "let"); KJV only, Acts 21:39; in some texts, Matt. 8:31, KJV only. See LIBERTY, C, Note, PERMIT.

4. aphiēmi (ἀφίημι, 863), "to send away," signifies "to permit, suffer," in Matt. 3:15 (twice); Matt. 19:14; 23:13; Mark 1:34; 5:19, 37; 10:14; 11:16; Luke 8:51; 12:39, KJV (RV, "left"); 18:16; John 12:7, RV, KJV and RV marg., "let (her) alone"; Rev. 11:9. See FORGIVE.

Notes: (1) In Acts 2:27 and 13:35, KJV, didōmi, "to give" (RV), is rendered "to suffer." (2) In 1 Cor. 6:7, KJV, apostereō, in the passive voice, is rendered "suffer yourselves to be defrauded" (RV, "be defrauded"). (3) For kōluō in Heb. 7:23, KJV, "were not suffered," see HINDER.

1. anechō (ἀνέχω, 430), in the middle voice, "to bear with," is rendered "to suffer" in Matt. 17:17 and parallel passages; KJV only, 1 Cor. 4:12 (RV, "endure"); 2 Cor. 11:19, 20 and Heb. 13:22 (RV, "bear with"). See BEAR, ENDURE.

2. paschō (πάσχω, 3958), "to suffer," is used (I) of the "sufferings" of Christ (a) at the hands of men, e.g., Matt. 16:21; 17:12; 1 Pet. 2:23; (b) in His expiatory and vicarious sacrifice for sin, Heb. 9:26; 13:12; 1 Pet. 2:21; 3:18; 4:1; (c) including both (a) and (b), Luke 22:15; 24:26, 46; Acts 1:3, "passion"; 3:18; 17:3; Heb. 5:8; (d) by the antagonism of the evil one, Heb. 2:18; (II) of human "suffering "(a) of followers of Christ, Acts 9:16; 2 Cor. 1:6; Gal. 3:4; Phil. 1:29; 1 Thess. 2:14; 2 Thess. 1:5; 2 Tim. 1:12; 1 Pet. 3:14, 17; 5:10; Rev. 2:10; in identification with Christ in His crucifixion, as the spiritual ideal to be realized, 1 Pet. 4:1; in a wrong way, 4:15; (b) of others, physically, as the result of demoniacal power, Matt. 17:15, RV, "suffereth (grievously)," KJV, "is (sore) vexed"; cf. Mark 5:26; in a dream, Matt. 27:19; through maltreatment, Luke 13:2; 1 Pet. 2:19, 20; by a serpent (negatively), Acts 28:5, RV, "took" (KJV, "felt:" see FEEL, Note); (c) of the effect upon the whole body through the "suffering" of one member, 1 Cor. 12:26, with application to a church.

3. propaschō (προπάσχω, 4310), "to suffer before" (pro, and No. 2), occurs in 1 Thess. 2:2.¶

4. sumpaschō (συμπάσχω, 4841), "to suffer with" (sun, and No. 2), is used in Rom. 8:17 of "suffering" with Christ; in 1 Cor. 12:26 of joint "suffering" in the members of the body.¶

5. hupechō (ὑπέχω, 5254), "to hold under" (hupo, "under," echō, "to have or hold"), is used metaphorically in Jude 7 of "suffering" punishment.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 89:50; Lam. 5:7.¶

6. kakoucheō (κακουχέω, 2558), "to ill-treat" (kakos, "evil," and echō, "to have"), is used in the passive voice in Heb. 11:37, RV,

"evil entreated" (KJV, "tormented"); in 13:3, RV, "are evil entreated" (KJV, "suffer adversity").¶

7. sunkakoucheomai (συγκακουχέομαι, 4778), "to endure adversity with," is used in Heb. 11:25 (sun, "with," and No. 6), RV, "to be evil entreated with," KJV, "to suffer affliction with."¶

8. makrothumeō (μακροθυμέω, 3114) is rendered "suffereth long" in 1 Cor. 13:4. See PATIENCE.

9. adikeō (ἀδικέω, 91), "to do wrong, injustice" (a, negative, dikē, "right"), is used in the passive voice in 2 Pet. 2:13, RV, "suffering wrong" (some texts have komizō, "to receive," KJV); there is a play upon words here which may be brought out thus, "being defrauded (of the wages of fraud)," a use of the verb illustrated in the papyri. See HURT.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 9:12, KJV, stegō, "to bear up under," is translated "suffer" (RV, "bear"); see BEAR, No. 11. (2) For hupomenō, rendered "to suffer" in 2 Tim. 2:12, see ENDURE, No. 2. (3) For "suffer hardship, suffer trouble," see HARDSHIP, Nos. 1 and 2. (4) For "suffer need," Phil. 4:12, see WANT. (5) For "suffer loss," 2 Cor. 7:9, RV, see LOSE, No. 2. (6) For "suffer persecution," see PERSECUTION. (7) For "suffer shipwreck," see SHIPWRECK. (8) For tropophoreō in Acts 13:18, "suffered . . . manners," see MANNER, E. (9) For "suffereth violence," biazō, see FORCE, B, No. 1, VIOLENCE, B, No. 2. (10) In 2 Thess. 1:9, RV, tinō, "to pay a penalty," is rendered "shall suffer (punishment)."¶

B. Adjective.

pathētos (παθητός, 3805), akin to paschō, denotes "one who has suffered," or "subject to suffering," or "destined to suffer"; it is used in the last sense of the "suffering" of Christ, Acts 26:23.¶

pathēma (πάθημα, 3804) is rendered "sufferings" in the RV (KJV, "afflictions") in 2 Tim. 3:11; Heb. 10:32; 1 Pet. 5:9; in Gal. 5:24, "passions" (KJV, "affections"). See AFFLICTION, B, No. 3.

Note: For kakopatheia, Jas. 5:10, RV, "suffering," see AFFLICTION, B, No. 1.

SUFFICE, SUFFICIENT

A. Verbs.

1. arkeō (ἀρκέω, 714), "to suffice," is rendered "is sufficient" in John 6:7; 2. Cor. 12:9; "it sufficeth" in John 14:8. See CONTENT, ENOUGH.

Note: For 1 Pet. 4:3, see B, No. 2.

2. hikanoō (ἱκανόω, 2427), "to make sufficient, render fit," is translated "made (us) sufficient" in 2 Cor. 3:6, RV (KJV, "hath made . . . able"). See ABLE, B, No. 6, Note.

B. Adjectives.

1. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), akin to A, No. 2, "enough, sufficient, fit," etc. is translated "sufficient" in 2 Cor. 2:6, 16; 3:5. See ABLE, C, No. 2.

2. arketos (ἀρκετός, 713), akin to A, No. 1, used with eimi, "to be," is translated "may suffice" in 1 Pet. 4:3. See ENOUGH, A, No. 1.

SUFFICIENCY

1. autarkeia (αὐτάρκεια, 841) (autos, "self," arkeō, see A, above; Eng., "autarchy"), "contentment," 1 Tim. 6:6, is rendered "sufficiency" in 2 Cor. 9:8.¶

2. hikanotēs (ἱκανότης, 2426) is rendered "sufficiency" in 2 Cor. 3:5.¶

For SUIT (make), Acts 25:24, RV, see DEAL WITH, Note (1)

SUM (Noun), SUM UP

A. Noun.

Note: For kephalaion, Acts 22:28; Heb. 8:1, see POINT, B.¶ For timē, Acts 7:16, see PRICE, A.

B. Verb.

anakephalaioō (ἀνακεφαλαιόω, 346), "to sum up, gather up" (ana, "up," kephalē, "a head"), "to present as a whole," is used in the passive voice in Rom. 13:9, RV, "summed up" (KJV, "briefly comprehended"), i.e., the one commandment expresses all that the Law enjoins, and to obey this one is to fulfil the Law (cf. Gal. 5:14); middle voice in Eph. 1:10, RV, "sum up" (KJV, "gather together"), of God's purpose to "sum up" all things in the heavens and on the earth in Christ, a consummation extending beyond the limits of the church, though the latter is to be a factor in its realization.¶

SUMMER

theros (θέρος, 2330), akin to therō, "to heat," occurs in Matt. 24:32; Mark 13:28; Luke 21:30.¶

SUMPTUOUS, SUMPTUOUSLY

A. Adjective.

lampros (λαμπρός, 2986), "bright," is rendered "sumptuous" in Rev. 18:14, RV See BRIGHT, GOODLY, Note.

B. Adverb.

lamprōs (λαμπρῶς, 2988), the corresponding adverb, is used in Luke 16:19, "sumptuously."¶

hēlios (ἥλιος, 2246), whence Eng. prefix "helio—," is used (a) as a means of the natural benefits of light and heat, e.g., Matt. 5:45, and power, Rev. 1:16; (b) of its qualities of brightness and glory, e.g., Matt. 13:43; 17:2; Acts 26:13; 1 Cor. 15:41; Rev. 10:1; 12:1; (c) as a means of destruction, e.g., Matt. 13:6; Jas. 1:11; of physical misery, Rev. 7:16; (d) as a means of judgment, e.g., Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24; Luke 21:25; 23:45; Acts 2:20; Rev. 6:12; 8:12; 9:2; 16:8.

Note: In Rev. 7:2 and 16:12, anatolē, "rising," used with hēlios, is translated "sunrising," RV (KJV, "east").

For SUNDER (Asunder) see CUT, No. 6

For SUNDRY see PORTION, C

deipneō (δειπνέω, 1172), "to sup" (said of taking the chief meal of the day), occurs in Luke 17:8; 22:20 (in the best texts), lit., "(the) supping"; so 1 Cor. 11:25; metaphorically in Rev. 3:20, of spiritual communion between Christ and the faithful believer.¶

For SUPERFLUITY see ABUNDANCE, A, No. 2, B, No. 1

perissos (περισσός, 4053), "abundant, more than sufficient," is translated "superfluous" in 2 Cor. 9:1. See ABUNDANT, C, No. 1, ADVANTAGE, MORE, B, No. 2.

SUPERSCRIPTION

epigraphē (ἐπιγραφή, 1923), lit., "an overwriting" (epi, "over," graphō, "to write") (the meaning of the anglicized Latin word "superscription"), denotes "an inscription, a title." On Roman coins the emperor's name was inscribed, Matt. 22:20; Mark 12:16; Luke 20:24. In the Roman Empire, in the case of a criminal on his way to execution, a board on which was inscribed the cause of his condemnation, was carried before him or hung round his neck; the inscription was termed a "title" (titlos). The four Evangelists state that at the crucifixion of Christ the title was affixed to the cross, Mark (15:26) and Luke (23:38) call it a "superscription"; Mark says it was "written over" (epigraphō, the corresponding verb). Matthew calls it "His accusation"; John calls it "a title" (a technical term). The wording varies: the essential words are the same, and the variation serves to authenticate the narratives, showing that there was no consultation leading to an agreement as to the details. See further under TITLE.¶

For SUPERSTITION see RELIGION

deisidaimōn (δεισιδαίμων, 1175), "reverent to the deity" (deidō, "to fear"; daimōn, "a demon," or "pagan god"), occurs in Acts 17:22 in the comparative degree, rendered "somewhat superstitious," RV (KJV, "too superstitious"), a meaning which the word sometimes has; others, according to its comparative form, advocate the meaning "more religious (than others)," "quite religious" (cf. the noun in 25:19). This is supported by Ramsay, who renders it "more than others respectful of what is divine"; so Deissmann in Light from the Ancient East, and others. It also agrees with the meaning found in Greek writers; the context too suggests that the adjective is used in a good sense; perhaps, after all, with kindly ambiguity (Grimm-Thayer). An ancient epitaph has it in the sense of "reverent" (Moulton and Milligan).¶

deipnon (δεῖπνον, 1173) denotes "a supper" or "feast" (for an analysis of the uses see FEAST, No. 2). In John 13:2 the RV, following certain texts, has "during supper" (KJV, "supper being ended").

Note: For "supper" in Luke 22:20 see SUP.

SUPPLICATION

1. deēsis (δέησις, 1162) is always translated "supplication," or the plural, in the RV. See PRAYER, B, No. 3.

2. hiketēria (ἱκετηρία, 2428) is the feminine form of the adjective hiketērios, denoting "of a suppliant," and used as a noun, formerly "an olive branch" carried by a suppliant (hiketēs), then later, "a supplication," used with No. 1 in Heb. 5:7.¶ In the Sept., Job 40:22 (Eng. Vers. 41:3).¶

SUPPLY (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. chorēgeō (χορηγέω, 5524) primarily, among the Greeks, signified "to lead a stage chorus or dance" (choros, and hēgeomai, "to lead"), then, "to defray the expenses of a chorus"; hence, later, metaphorically, "to supply," 2 Cor. 9:10 (2nd part; see also No. 2), RV, "supply" (KJV "minister"); 1 Pet. 4:11, RV, "supplieth" (KJV, "giveth"). See GIVE, Note (4), MINISTER, B, Note (1).¶

2. epichorēgeō (ἐπιχορηγέω, 2023), "to supply fully, abundantly" (a strengthened form of No. 1), is rendered "to supply" in the RV of 2 Cor. 9:10 (1st part) and Gal. 3:5 (for KJV, "to minister"), where the present continuous tense speaks of the work of the Holy Spirit in all His ministrations to believers individually and collectively; in Col. 2:19, RV, "being supplied" (KJV, "having nourishment ministered"), of the work of Christ as the Head of the church His body; in 2 Pet. 1:5, "supply" (KJV, "add"); in v. 11, "shall be . . . supplied" (KJV, "shall be ministered"), of the reward hereafter which those are to receive, in regard to positions in the kingdom of God, for their fulfillment here of the conditions mentioned.¶

Note: In 2 Cor. 9:10 (see Nos. 1 and 2 above) the stronger verb No. 2 is used where the will and capacity to receive are in view.

3. anaplēroō (ἀναπληρόω, 378), "to fill up, fulfill," is rendered "to supply" in 1 Cor. 16:17 and Phil. 2:30. See FILL, FULFILL, OCCUPY.

4. prosanaplēroō (προσαναπληρόω, 4322), "to fill up by adding to, to supply fully" (pros, "to," and No. 3), is translated "supplieth" in 2 Cor. 9:12, KJV (RV, "filleth up the measure of"); in 11:9, RV and KJV, "supplied."¶

Note: In Phil. 4:19, KJV, plēroō, to fulfill (RV), is rendered "shall supply."

B.Noun.

epichorēgia (ἐπιχορηγία, 2024), "a full supply," occurs in Eph. 4:16, "supplieth," lit., "by the supply of every joint," metaphorically of the members of the church, the body of which Christ is the Head, and Phil. 1:19, "the supply (of the Spirit of Jesus Christ)," i.e., "the bountiful supply"; here "of the Spirit" may be taken either in the subjective sense, the Giver, or the objective, the Gift.¶

SUPPORT

Notes: (1) In Acts 20:35, KJV, antilambanomai, "to help" (RV), is translated "support." See HELP, B, No. 1. (2) In 1 Thess. 5:14, antechomai signifies "to support": see HOLD, No. 3.

SUPPOSE

1. nomizō (νομίζω, 3543), "to consider, suppose, think," is rendered "to suppose" in Matt. 20:10; Luke 2:34; 3:23; Acts 7:25; 14:19; 16:27; 21:29; 1 Tim. 6:5; in 1 Cor. 7:26, KJV (RV, "I think"); in Acts 16:13, the RV adheres to the meaning "to suppose," "(where) we supposed (there was a place of prayer)"; this word also signifies "to practice a custom" (nomos) and is commonly so used by Greek writers. Hence the KJV, "was wont (to be made)"; it is rendered "to think" in Matt. 5:17; 10:34; Acts 8:20; 17:29; 1 Cor. 7:36. See THINK.¶

2. dokeō (δοκέω, 1380), "to be of opinion," is translated "to suppose" in Mark 6:49; Luke 24:37; John 20:15; Acts 27:13; in the following, KJV "suppose," RV, "think," Luke 12:51; 13:2; Heb. 10:29. It is most frequently rendered "to think," always in Matthew; always in John, except 11:31, "supposing," RV [where the best texts have this verb (for legō, KJV, "saying")], and 20:15 (see above).

3. hupolambanō (ὑπολαμβάνω, 5274), when used of mental action, signifies "to suppose," Luke 7:43, and Acts 2:15. See ANSWER, RECEIVE.

4. huponoeō (ὑπονοέω, 5282), "to suspect, to conjecture," is translated "suppose ye" in Acts 13:25, RV (KJV, "think ye"); "I supposed" in 25:18. See DEEM.

5. oiomai or oimai (οἴομαι, 3633) signifies "to expect, imagine, suppose"; it is rendered "to suppose" in John 21:25; Phil. 1:17, RV (KJV, v. 16, "thinking"); "think" in Jas. 1:7. See THINK.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 11:5, KJV, logizomai, "to reckon" (RV), is rendered "I suppose"; so in 1 Pet. 5:12, KJV, RV, "(as) I account (him)"; Silvanus was not supposed by Peter to be faithful, he was "reckoned" or regarded so. (2) In Phil. 2:25, KJV, hēgeomai, "to reckon," deem, is rendered "I supposed" (RV, "I counted").

huperechō (ὑπερέχω, 5242), "to be superior, to excel," is translated "supreme" in 1 Pet. 2:13: see EXCEL, No. 3.

SURE

A. Adjectives.

1. asphalēs (ἀσφαλής, 804), "safe," is translated "sure" in Heb. 6:19. See CERTAIN, B.

2. bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), "firm, steadfast," is used of (a) God's promise to Abraham, Rom. 4:16; (b) the believer's hope, Heb. 6:19, "steadfast"; (c) the hope of spiritual leaders regarding the welfare of converts, 2 Cor. 1:7, "steadfast"; (d) the glorying of the hope, Heb. 3:6, "firm"; (e) the beginning of our confidence, 3:14, RV, "firm" (KJV, "steadfast"); (f) the Law given at Sinai, Heb. 2:2, "steadfast"; (g) the testament (or covenant) fulfilled after a death, 9:17, "of force"; (h) the calling and election of believers, 2 Pet. 1:10, to be made "sure" by the fulfillment of the injunctions in vv. 5–7; (i) the word of prophecy, "made more sure," 2 Pet. 1:19, RV, KJV, "a more sure (word of prophecy)"; what is meant is not a comparison between the prophecies of the OT and NT, but that the former have been confirmed in the person of Christ (vv. 16–18). See FIRM.¶

3. pistos (πιστός, 4103), "faithful," is translated "sure" in Acts 13:34. See FAITHFUL.

Note: In 2 Tim. 2:19, KJV, stereos, "firm," is translated "sure," and connected with "standeth," RV, "the firm (foundation of God standeth)," i.e., "however much the faith may be misrepresented or denied, the firm foundation of God's knowledge and truth, with its separating power, remains."

B. Verb.

asphalizō (ἀσφαλίζω, 805), "to make safe or sure" (akin to A, No. 1), is rendered "to make sure" in Matt. 27:64, 65, 66, of the sepulchre of Christ; elsewhere, Acts 16:24, of making feet fast in the stocks. See FAST.¶

Note: In the KJV of John 16:30; Rom. 2:2 and 15:29, the verb oida, "to know," is translated "to be sure" (RV, in each place, "to know"). So with ginōskō, "to know," in John 6:69. For the difference between the verbs see KNOW.

SURELY

Notes: (1) In the KJV of Matt. 26:73; Mark 14:70; John 17:8, alēthōs, "truly," is rendered "surely" (RV, "of a truth"); so pantōs, "at all events, altogether," in Luke 4:23 (RV, "doubtless"), and nai, "yea," in Rev. 22:20 (RV, "yea"). (2) In Heb. 6:14, "surely" represents the phrase ei mēn (so the best texts; some have ē mēn). (3) For Luke 1:1, KJV, see BELIEVE, C, Note (4). (4) For "surely" in 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, see CORRUPT, A, No. 2 (b).

SURETY (Noun)

enguos (ἔγγυος, 1450) primarily signifies "bail," the bail who personally answers for anyone, whether with his life or his property (to be distinguished from mesitēs, "a mediator"); it is used in Heb. 7:22, "(by so much also hath Jesus become) the Surety (of a better covenant)," referring to the abiding and unchanging character of His Melchizedek priesthood, by reason of which His suretyship is established by God's oath (vv. 20, 21). As the Surety, He is the personal guarantee of the terms of the new and better covenant, secured on the ground of His perfect sacrifice (v. 27).¶

For SURETY (of a), Acts 12:11, KJV, see TRUE, D, No. 1

kraipalē (κραιπάλη, 2897) signifies "the giddiness and headache resulting from excessive wine-bibbing, a drunken nausea," "surfeiting," Luke 21:34.¶ Trench (Syn. §lxi) distinguishes this and the synonymous words, methē, "drunkenness," oinophlugia, "wine-bibbing" (KJV, "excess of wine," 1 Pet. 4:3), kōmos, "revelling."

For SURGE, Jas. 1:6, RV, see RAGE and WAVE

For SURMISE, SURMISINGS, see DEEM

epikaleō (ἐπικαλέω, 1941), "to put a name upon" (epi, "upon," kaleō, "to call"), "to surname," is used in this sense in the passive voice, in some texts in Matt. 10:3 (it is absent in the best); in Luke 22:3, in some texts (the best have kaleō, "to call"); Acts 1:23; 4:36; 10:5, 18, 32; 11:13; 12:12, 25; in some texts, 15:22 (the best have kaleō).

Notes: (1) In Mark 3:16, 17, "He surnamed" is a translation of epitithēmi, "to put upon, to add to," with onoma, "a name," as the object. (2) In Acts 15:37, KJV, kaleō, "to call "(RV, "called"), is rendered "whose surname was." (3) The verb eponomazō, translated "bearest the name" in Rom. 2:17, RV, finds a literal correspondence in the word "surname" (epi, "upon," = sur), and had this significance in Classical Greek.¶

For SURPASS, 2 Cor. 3:10, see EXCEED, A, No. 1

For SUSPENSE (hold in) see DOUBT, No. 6

chortasma (χόρτασμα, 5527), "fodder" (akin to chortazō, "to feed, fill," see FEED, No. 4), is used in the plural in Acts 7:11, "sustenance."¶ In the Sept., Gen. 24:25, 32; 42:27; 43:24; Deut. 11:15; Jud. 19:19.¶

SWADDLING CLOTHES

sparganoō (σπαργανόω, 4683), "to swathe" (from sparganon, "a swathing band"), signifies "to wrap in swaddling clothes" in Luke 2:7, 12. The idea that the word means "rags" is without foundation.¶ In the Sept., Job 38:9; Ezek. 16:4.¶

SWALLOW (Verb)

katapinō (καταπίνω, 2666), "to drink down" (kata, and pinō, "to drink"), "to swallow," is used with this meaning (a) physically, but figuratively, Matt. 23:24; Rev. 12:16;

(b)metaphorically, in the passive voice, of death (by victory), 1 Cor. 15:54; of being overwhelmed by sorrow, 2 Cor. 2:7; of the mortal body (by life), 5:4. See DEVOUR, No. 3, DROWN, No. 2.

SWEAR, SWORN

omnumi (ὄμνυμι) or omnuō (ὀμνύω, 3660) is used of "affirming or denying by an oath," e.g., Matt. 26:74; Mark 6:23; Luke 1:73; Heb. 3:11, 18; 4:3; 7:21; accompanied by that by which one swears, e.g., Matt. 5:34, 36; 23:16; Heb. 6:13, 16; Jas. 5:12; Rev. 10:6. Cf. ADJURE.

Note: For "false swearers," 1 Tim. 1:10, see FORSWEAR.

SWEAT

hidrōs (ἱδρώς, 2402) is used in Luke 22:44.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 3:19.¶

saroō (σαρόω, 4563) occurs in Matt. 12:44; Luke 11:25; 15:8.¶

glukus (γλυκύς, 1099) (cf. Eng., "glycerine," "glucose"), occurs in Jas. 3:11, 12 (KJV, "fresh" in this verse); Rev. 10:9, 10.¶

For SWEET SMELLING see SAVOR, No. 1

pimprēmi (πίμπρημι, 4092), primarily, "to blow, to burn," later came to denote "to cause to swell," and, in the middle voice, "to become swollen," Acts 28:6.¶ In the Sept., Num. 5:21, 22, 27.¶

Note: Some, connecting the word prēnēs in Acts 1:18 with pimprēmi, give it the meaning "swelling up": see HEADLONG.

SWELLING

1. phusiōsis (φυσίωσις, 5450) denotes "a puffing up, swelling with pride" (akin to phusioō, "to puff up"), 2 Cor. 12:20, "swellings."¶

2. huperonkos (ὑπέρογκος, 5246), an adjective denoting "of excessive weight or size," is used metaphorically in the sense of "immoderate," especially of arrogant speech, in the neuter plural, virtually as a noun, 2 Pet. 2:18; Jude 16, "great swelling words," doubtless with reference to gnostic phraseology.¶

astocheō (ἀστοχέω, 795), "to miss the mark," is translated "having swerved" in 1 Tim. 1:6. See ERR, No. 3. Moulton and Milligan illustrate the use of the verb from the papyri, e.g., of a man in extravagant terms bewailing the loss of a pet fighting cock, "(I am distraught, for my cock) has failed (me)."

SWIFT, SWIFTLY

1. oxus (ὀξύς, 3691) denotes "swift" in Rom. 3:15. See SHARP.

2. tachus (ταχύς, 5036), "swift, speedy," is used in Jas. 1:19.¶ Cf. tacheōs, tachu and tacheion, "quickly," tachos, "quickness, speed."

3. tachinos (ταχινός, 5031), a poetical and late form of No. 2, "of swift approach," is used in 2 Pet. 1:14, RV, "swiftly" (KJV, "shortly"), lit., "(the putting off of my tabernacle is) swift," i.e., "imminent"; in 2:1, "swift (destruction)."¶ In the Sept., Prov. 1:16; Isa. 59:7; Hab. 1:6.¶

1. kolumbaō (κολυμβάω, 2860), "to dive, plunge, into the sea," hence, "to swim," occurs in Acts 27:43.¶ Cf. kolumbēthra, "a pool."

2. ekkolumbaō (ἐκκολυμβάω, 1579), "to swim out of" (ek), occurs in Acts 27:42.¶

SWINE

choiros (χοῖρος, 5519), "a swine," is used in the plural, in the Synoptic Gospels only, Matt. 7:6; 8:30, 31, 32; Mark 5:11–13, 16; Luke 8:32, 33; Luke 15:15, 16. It does not occur in the OT¶

SWORD

1. machaira (μάχαιρα, 3162), "a short sword or dagger" (distinct from No. 2), e.g., Matt. 26:47, 51, 52 and parallel passages; Luke 21:24; 22:38, possibly "a knife" (Field, Notes on the Translation of the NT); Heb. 4:12 (see TWO-EDGED); metaphorically and by metonymy, (a) for ordinary violence, or dissensions, that destroy peace, Matt. 10:34; (b) as the instrument of a magistrate or judge, e.g., Rom. 13:4; (c) of the Word of God, "the sword of the Spirit," probing the conscience, subduing the impulses to sin, Eph. 6:17.

2. rhomphaia (ῥομφαία, 4501), a word of somewhat doubtful origin, denoted "a Thracian weapon of large size," whether a sword or spear is not certain, but usually longer than No. 1; it occurs (a) literally in Rev. 6:8; (b) metaphorically, as the instrument of anguish, Luke 2:35; of judgment, Rev. 1:16; 2:12, 16; 19:15, 21, probably figurative of the Lord's judicial utterances.¶

sukaminos (συκάμινος, 4807) occurs in Luke 17:6.¶ It is generally recognized as the black mulberry, with fruit like blackberries. The leaves are too tough for silkworms and thus are unlike the white mulberry. Neither kind is the same as the mulberry of 2 Sam. 5:23, 24, etc. The town Haifa was called Sycaminopolis, from the name of the tree.

SYCAMORE

sukomorea (συκομορέα, 4809) occurs in Luke 19:4.¶ This tree is of the fig species, with leaves like the mulberry and fruit like the fig. It is somewhat less in height than the sycamine and spreads to cover an area from 60 to 80 feet in diameter. It is often planted by the roadside, and was suitable for the purpose of Zacchaeus. Seated on the lowest branch he was easily within speaking distance of Christ.

SYNAGOGUE

sunagōgē (συναγωγή, 4864), properly "a bringing together" (sun, "together," agō, "to bring"), denoted (a) "a gathering of things, a collection," then, of "persons, an assembling, of Jewish religious gatherings," e.g., Acts 9:2; an assembly of Christian Jews, Jas. 2:2, RV, "synagogue" (KJV, marg.; text, "assembly"); a company dominated by the power and activity of Satan, Rev. 2:9; 3:9; (b) by metonymy, "the building" in which the gathering is held, e.g. Matt. 6:2; Mark 1:21. The origin of the Jewish "synagogue" is probably to be assigned to the time of the Babylonian exile. Having no temple, the Jews assembled on the Sabbath to hear the Law read, and the practice continued in various buildings after the return. Cf. Ps. 74:8.

SYNAGOGUE (put out of the) aposunagōgos (ἀποσυνάγωγος, 656), an adjective denoting "expelled from the congregation, excommunicated," is used (a) with ginomai, "to become, be made," John 9:22; 12:42; (b) with poieō, "to make," John 16:2. This excommunication involved prohibition not only from attendance at the "synagogue," but from all fellowship with Israelites.¶

SYNAGOGUE (ruler of the)

archisunagōgos (ἀρχισυνάγωγος, 752) denotes "the administrative official," with the duty of preserving order and inviting persons to read or speak in the assembly, Mark 5:22, 35, 36, 38; Luke 8:49; 13:14; Acts 13:15; "chief ruler" (KJV) in Acts 18:8, 17.¶

Note: In Luke 8:41, "ruler of the synagogue" represents archōn, "ruler," followed by the genitive case of the article and sunagōgē.

SYROPHOENICIAN

surophoinikissa or surophunissa (Συροφοινίκισσα, 4949) occurs in Mark 7:26 as the national name of a woman called "a Canaanitish woman" in Matt. 15:22, i.e., not a Jewess but a descendant of the early inhabitants of the coastland of Phoenicia. The word probably denoted a Syrian residing in Phoenicia proper.¶ There is a tradition that the woman's name was Justa and her daughter Bernice (Clementine Homilies, ii:19; iii:73). In Acts 21:2, 3, the two parts of the term are used interchangeably.

TABERNACLE

1. skēnē (σκηνή, 4633), "a tent, booth, tabernacle," is used of (a) tents as dwellings, Matt. 17:4; Mark 9:5; Luke 9:33; Heb. 11:9, KJV, "tabernacles" (RV, "tents"); (b) the Mosaic tabernacle, Acts 7:44; Heb. 8:5; 9:1 (in some mss.); 9:8, 21, termed "the tent of meeting," RV (i.e., where the people were called to meet God), a preferable description to "the tabernacle of the congregation," as in the KJV in the OT; the outer part, 9:2, 6; the inner sanctuary, 9:3; (c) the heavenly prototype, Heb. 8:2; 9:11; Rev. 13:6; 15:5; 21:3 (of its future descent); (d) the eternal abodes of the saints, Luke 16:9, RV, "tabernacles" (KJV, "habitations"); (e) the Temple in Jerusalem, as continuing the service of the tabernacle, Heb. 13:10; (f) the house of David, i.e., metaphorically of his people, Acts 15:16; (g) the portable shrine of the god Moloch, Acts 7:43.¶

2. skēnos (σκῆνος, 4636), the equivalent of No. 1, is used metaphorically of the body as the "tabernacle" of the soul, 2 Cor. 5:1, 4.¶

3. skēnōma (σκήνωμα, 4638) occurs in Acts 7:46; 2 Pet. 1:13, 14; see HABITATION, No. 6.¶

4. skēnopēgia (σκηνοπηγία, 4634), properly "the setting up of tents or dwellings" (No. 1, and pēgnumi, "to fix"), represents the word "tabernacles" in "the feast of tabernacles," John 7:2.¶ This feast, one of the three Pilgrimage Feasts in Israel, is called "the feast of ingathering" in Exod. 23:16; 34:22; it took place at the end of the year, and all males were to attend at the "tabernacle" with their offerings. In Lev. 23:34; Deut. 16:13, 16; 31:10; 2 Chron. 8:13; Ezra 3:4 (cf. Neh. 8:14–18), it is called "the feast of tabernacles" (or "booths," sukkôth), and was appointed for seven days at Jerusalem from the 15th to the 22nd Tishri (approximately October), to remind the people that their fathers dwelt in these in the wilderness journeys. Cf. Num. 29:15–38, especially v. 35–38, for the regulations of the eighth or "last day, the great day of the feast" (John 7:37).

Note: For skēnoō, "to spread a tabernacle over," Rev. 7:15, RV, see DWELL, No. 9.

1. trapeza (τράπεζα, 5132) is used of (a) "a dining table," Matt. 15:27; Mark 7:28; Luke 16:21; 22:21, 30; (b) "the table of shewbread," Heb. 9:2; (c) by metonymy, of "what is provided on the table" (the word being used of that with which it is associated), Acts 16:34; Rom. 11:9 (figurative of the special privileges granted to Israel and centering in Christ); 1 Cor. 10:21 (twice), "the Lord's table," denoting all that is provided for believers in Christ on the ground of His death (and thus expressing something more comprehensive than the Lord's Supper); "the table of demons," denoting all that is partaken of by idolaters as the result of the influence of demons in connection with their sacrifices; (d) "a moneychanger's table," Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; John 2:15; (e) "a bank," Luke 19:23 (cf. trapezitēs: see BANKERS); (f) by metonymy for "the distribution of money," Acts 6:2. See BANK.¶

2. plax (πλάξ, 4109) primarily denotes "anything flat and broad," hence, "a flat stone, a tablet," 2 Cor. 3:3 (twice); Heb. 9:4.¶

Note: Some texts have the word klinē, "a couch," in Mark 7:4 (KJV, "tables").

anakeimai (ἀνάκειμαι, 345), "to recline at a meal table," is rendered "sat at the table" in John 12:2, KJV, RV, "sat at meat" (some texts have sunanakeimai); "sat," of course does not express the actual attitude; in John 13:23, RV, "at the table reclining"; KJV, "leaning"; in 13:28, "at the table" (KJV and RV), lit., "of (those) reclining."

For TABLET see WRITING TABLET

skeuē (σκευή, 4631) denotes "gear, equipment, tackling" (of a ship), Acts 27:19.¶

oura (οὐρά, 3769), "the tail of an animal," occurs in Rev. 9:10 (twice), 19; 12:4.¶

1. lambanō (λαμβάνω, 2983), "to take, lay hold of," besides its literal sense, e.g., Matt. 5:40; 26:26, 27, is used metaphorically, of fear, in "taking" hold of people, Luke 7:16, RV (KJV, "came ... on"); of sin in "finding (occasion)," RV (KJV, "taking"), Rom. 7:8, 11, where sin is viewed as the corrupt source of action, an inward element using the commandment to produce evil effects; of the power of temptation, 1 Cor. 10:13; of "taking" an example, Jas. 5:10; of "taking" peace from the earth, Rev. 6:4; of Christ in "taking" the form of a servant, Phil. 2:7; of "taking" rightful power (by the Lord, hereafter), Rev. 11:17. See ACCEPT, No. 4.

2. analambanō (ἀναλαμβάνω, 353) signifies (a) "to take up" (ana), e.g., Acts 1:2, 11, 22 (RV, "received"); (b) "to take to oneself," Acts 7:43; or "to one's company," 20:13, 14; 23:31; 2 Tim. 4:11; of "taking up spiritual armor," Eph. 6:13, 16. See RECEIVE.

3. apolambanō (ἀπολαμβάνω, 618), besides its common meaning, "to receive," denotes "to take apart or aside," Mark 7:33, middle voice. It is frequent in the papyri, and, in the sense of separation or drawing aside, is illustrated in a message of sorrow, concerning the nonarrival of one who with others had been "shut up" as recluses in a temple (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). See RECEIVE.

4. epilambanō (ἐπιλαμβάνω, 1949), in the middle voice, "to lay hold of, take hold of," is used literally, e.g., Mark 8:23; Luke 9:47; 14:4; metaphorically, e.g., Heb. 8:9, "(I) took them (by the hand)": for other instances in each respect see HOLD, No. 7.

5. katalambanō (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), "to lay hold of," is rendered "to take," in Mark 9:18; John 8:3, 4. See APPREHEND.

6. metalambanō (μεταλαμβάνω, 3335), "to get, or have, a share of," is rendered "to take (food)" in Acts 2:46, RV (KJV, "did eat," see EAT, Note); 27:33, i.e., "to share it together." See HAVE, PARTAKE, RECEIVE.

7. paralambanō (παραλαμβάνω, 3880), besides its meaning "to receive," denotes "to take to (or with) oneself," of "taking" a wife, e.g., Matt. 1:20, 24; of "taking" a person or persons with one, e.g., Matt. 2:13, 14, 20, 21; 4:5, 8; of demons, 12:45; of Christ and His disciples, 17:1; 20:17; Mark 9:2; 10:32; 14:33; of witnesses, Matt. 18:16; of the removal of persons from the earth in judgment, when "the Son of Man is revealed," Matt. 24:40, 41; Luke 17:34, 35 (cf. the means of the removal of corruption, in v. 37); of the "taking" of Christ by the soldiers for scourging, Matt. 27:27, RV, and to crucifixion, John 19:16; see also Acts 15:39; 16:33; 21:24, 26, 32; 23:18. See RECEIVE.

8. sumparalambanō (συμπαραλαμβάνω, 4838), sun, "with," and No. 7, denotes "to take along with oneself," as a companion, Acts 12:25; 15:37, 38; Gal. 2:1.¶

9. proslambanō (προσλαμβάνω, 4355), "to take to oneself" (pros), is used of food, Acts 27:33–36; of persons, of Peter's act toward Christ, Matt. 16:22; Mark 8:32; for evil purposes, Acts 17:5; for good purposes, 18:26. See RECEIVE.

10. prolambanō (προλαμβάνω, 4301) is rendered "to take before" in 1 Cor. 11:21. See COME, Note (2) at end, OVERTAKE.

11. sullambanō (συλλαμβάνω, 4815), "to seize, take," is rendered "to take" in Matt. 26:55 and Mark 14:48, KJV (RV, "seize"); Luke 5:9; Acts 1:16; in 12:3 and 23:27, KJV (RV, "seize"). See CATCH, CONCEIVE, HELP.

12. airō (αἴρω, 142), "to lift, carry, take up or away," occurs very frequently with its literal meanings. In John 1:29 it is used of Christ as "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," not the sins, but sin, that which has existed from the time of the Fall, and in regard to which God has had judicial dealings with the world; through the expiatory sacrifice of Christ the sin of the world will be replaced by everlasting righteousness; cf. the plural, "sins", in 1 John 3:5. Righteous judgment was "taken away" from Christ at human tribunals, and His life, while voluntarily given by Himself (John 10:17, 18), was "taken (from the earth)," Acts 8:33 (quoted from the Sept. of Isa. 53:8). In John 15:2 it is used in the Lord's statement, "Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit, He taketh it away." This does not contemplate members of the "body" of Christ, but those who (just as a graft which being inserted, does not "abide" or "strike") are merely professed followers, giving only the appearance of being joined to the parent stem.

The Law described in Col. 2:14 as "the bond written in ordinances that was against us," Christ "took" out of the way at His cross. In 1 Cor. 5:2, airō is used in the best texts (some have No. 14), of the divine judgment which would have been exercised in "taking away" from the church the incestuous delinquent, had they mourned before God. See AWAY, BEAR, No. 9, etc.

13. apairō (ἀπαίρω, 522), "to lift off" (apo, "from," and No. 12), is used, in the passive voice, of Christ, metaphorically as the Bridegroom of His followers, Matt. 9:15; Mark 2:20; Luke 5:35.¶

14. exairō (ἐξαίρω, 1808), "to take away," is used of "putting away" a person in church discipline, 1 Cor. 5:13; for this verb as a variant reading in v. 2, see No. 12.¶

15. epairō (ἐπαίρω, 1869), "to lift, raise," is used in the passive voice and rendered "He was taken up" in Acts 1:9. See EXALT, HOIST, LIFT.

16. anaireō (ἀναιρέω, 337), "to take up" (ana, "up," and haireō, "to take"), is used of Pharaoh's daughter in "taking up" the infant Moses, Acts 7:21; of God's act in "taking away" the typical animal sacrifices under the Law, Heb. 10:9. See DEATH, C, No. 2, KILL, SLAY.

17. aphaireō (ἀφαιρέω, 851), "to take away" (apo), is used with this meaning in Luke 1:25; 10:42; 16:3; Rom. 11:27, of the "removal" of the sins of Israel; Heb. 10:4, of the impossibility of the "removal" of sins by offerings under the Law; in Rev. 22:19 (twice). See CUT, No. 8.

18. kathaireō (καθαιρέω, 2507), "to take down" (kata), besides its meaning of "putting down by force," was the technical term for the "removal" of the body after crucifixion, Mark 15:36, 46; Luke 23:53; Acts 13:29. See CAST, No. 14.

19. periaireō (περιαιρέω, 4014), "to take away that which surrounds" (peri, "around"), is used (a) literally, of "casting off" anchors, Acts 27:40, RV (KJV, "having taken up"); 28:13 in some texts, for perierchomai, "to make a circuit"; (b) metaphorically, of "taking away" the veil off the hearts of Israel, 2 Cor. 3:16; of hope of rescue, Acts 27:20; of sins (negatively), Heb. 10:11.¶

20. dechomai (δέχομαι, 1209), "to receive," is rendered "take (thy bond, RV, KJV, bill)" in Luke 16:6, 7; "take (the helmet of salvation)," Eph. 6:17, suggesting a heartiness in the "taking." See ACCEPT, No. 1, RECEIVE.

21. prosdechomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), "to receive favorably," is rendered "took" in Heb. 10:34. See ACCEPT, No. 3.

22. krateō (κρατέω, 2902), "to take hold of, get possession of," is translated "to take" in Matt. 9:25; 22:6; 26:4; Mark 1:31; 5:41; 9:27; 14:1, 44, 46, 49; Luke 8:54; Acts 24:6. See HOLD, No. 6.

23. drassomai (δράσσομαι, 1405), "to grasp with the hand, take hold of," is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 3:19, "taketh (the wise in their craftiness)."¶

24. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," found in the best texts in Mark 3:6, is rendered "took (counsel)"; some have poieō, "to make."

25. katechō (κατέχω, 2722), "to hold," is rendered "to take (the lowest place)" in Luke 14:9. See HOLD.

26. piazō (πιάζω, 4084), "to lay or take hold of forcefully," is always rendered "to take" in the RV. See APPREHEND, No. 2.

27. parapherō (παραφέρω, 3911), "to bear away" (para, "aside," pherō, "to bear"), "remove," is rendered "take away" in Mark 14:36, KJV, RV, "remove," as in Luke 22:42. See REMOVE.¶

28. echō (ἔχω, 2192), "to have, to hold," is used in Matt. 21:46 in the sense of regarding a person as something, "they took (Him) for (a prophet)." See HAVE.

29. sunagō (συνάγω, 4863), "to bring together," is used of "taking" a person into one's house receiving hospitality, "took . . . in," Matt. 25:35, 38, 43; so in Acts 11:26, RV, "were gathered together," KJV, "assembled"; perhaps the meaning is "they were entertained." See ASSEMBLE, BESTOW, GATHER.

30. ekduō (ἐκδύω, 1562), "to take off a garment from a person," is so rendered with reference to the soldiers' treatment of Christ, Matt. 27:31; Mark 15:20. See STRIP.

31. ekballō (ἐκβάλλω, 1544) has the meaning "to bring or take out" in Luke 10:35, "took out (two pence)," a word perhaps chosen to express the wholeheartedness of the act (lit., "to throw out"). See CAST, No. 5.

32. bastazō (βαστάζω, 941), "to bear, lift," is used of "taking up" stones, John 10:31. As to Matt. 3:11, Moulton and Milligan supply evidences from the vernacular that the word signified "to take off" (the sandals), which confirms Mark's word luō, "to unloose" (1:7). See BEAR, No. 1.

33. epicheireō (ἐπιχειρέω, 2021), "to take in hand" (epi, "upon," cheir, "the hand"), "to attempt, take upon oneself," is rendered "have taken in hand," Luke 1:1; "took upon (them)," Acts 19:13. See GO, No. 30.

34. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become, to come to be," is rendered "he be taken" in 2 Thess. 2:7, lit., "(until) he, or it, become" (for a treatment of the whole passage see Notes on Thess. by Hogg and Vine).

Notes: (1) For sunairō in Matt. 18:23, see RECKON. (2) Some texts have apagō, "to take away," in Acts 24:7. (3) In John 6:24, KJV, embainō, "to enter," is rendered "took (shipping)," RV, "got into (the boats)." (4) In 2 Thess. 1:8, KJV, didōmi, "to give" (RV "rendering"), is translated "taking." (5) In Rom. 3:5, KJV, epipherō, "to bring against," is rendered "taketh (vengeance)," RV, "visiteth (with wrath)." (6) In Luke 4:5, KJV, anagō, "to lead up" (RV, "led"), is rendered "took up." (7) In Acts 10:26, KJV, egeirō, "to raise" (RV), is rendered "took . . . up." (8) For "taking up" baggage, Acts 21:15, see BAGGAGE. (9) For "taken from" in 1 Thess. 2:17, KJV, see BEREAVED, No. 1. (10) Sunechō is translated "taken with" in Matt. 4:24; Luke 4:38; 8:37. See HOLDEN. (11) In 2 Pet. 2:12 "to be taken" translates the phrase eis halōsin, lit., "for capture" (halōsis, "a taking"). (12) In 1 Pet. 2:20, hupomenō, "to endure," is rendered "ye take . . . patiently." (13) In Matt. 11:12; John 6:15; Acts 23:10 harpazō (see CATCH) is rendered "take . . . by force." (14) For apotassomai, "to take leave of," see LEAVE, (c) No. 1. (15) For apaspazomai, rendered "to take leave of" in Acts 21:6, KJV, see LEAVE, (c) No. 2. (16) In Acts 21:6 some mss. have epibainō, KJV, "we took ship" (RV, embainō, "we went on board"): cf. Note (3), above. (17) For "untaken" in 2 Cor. 3:14 see UNLIFTED. (18) In 1 Tim. 5:9, KJV, katalegō is rendered "to take into the number" (RV, "be enrolled").¶ (19) For "take . . . to record" see TESTIFY. See also CARE, HEED, JOURNEY, THOUGHT (to take).

TALENT

A. Noun.

talanton (τάλαντον, 5007), originally "a balance," then, "a talent in weight," was hence "a sum of money" in gold or silver equivalent to a "talent." The Jewish "talent" contained 3,000 shekels of the sanctuary, e.g., Ex. 30:13 (about 114 lbs.). In NT times the "talent" was not a weight of silver, but the Roman-Attic "talent," comprising 6,000 denarii or drachmas, and equal to about L/240. It is mentioned in Matthew only, 18:24; 25:15, 16, 20 (twice in the best texts), 22 (thrice), 24, 25, 28 (twice). In 18:24 the vastness of the sum, 10,000 talents (L/2,400,000), indicates the impossibility of man's clearing himself, by his own efforts, of the guilt which lies upon him before God.¶

Note: That the "talent" denoted "something weighed" has provided the meaning of the Eng. word as "a gift or ability," especially under the influence of the parable of the talents (Matt. 25:14–30).

B. Adjective.

talantiaios (ταλαντιαῖος, 5006) denotes "of a talent's weight," Rev. 16:21.¶

For TALES see TALK

TALITHA

taleitha or talitha (ταλειθά, 5008), an Aramaic feminine meaning "maiden," Mark 5:41, has been variously transliterated in the NT Greek mss. Koumi or Koum (Heb. and Aram., qûm, "arise"), which follows, is interpreted by, "I say unto thee, arise." Koum is the better attested word; so in the Talmud, where this imperative occurs "seven times in one page" (Edersheim, Life and Times of Jesus, i, p. 631).¶

TALK (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), a word, is translated "talk" in Matt. 22:15; Mark 12:13. See ACCOUNT, B.

2. lēros (λῆρος, 3026) denotes "foolish talk, nonsense," Luke 24:11, RV, "idle talk" (KJV, "idle tales").¶

B. Verbs.

1. laleō (λαλέω, 2980), "to speak, say," is always translated "to speak" in the RV, where the KJV renders it by "to talk," Matt. 12:46; Mark 6:50; Luke 24:32; John 4:27 (twice); 9:37; 14:30; Acts 26:31; Rev. 4:1; 17:1; 21:9, 15. The RV rendering is preferable; the idea of "chat" or "chatter" is entirely foreign to the NT, and should never be regarded as the meaning in 1 Cor. 14:34, 35. See COMMUNE, Note, SAY, No. 1, Note, and No. 2, SPEAK.

2. sullaleō (συλλαλέω, 4814), "to speak with" (sun), is translated "to talk with," Matt. 17:3; Mark 9:4; Luke 9:30. See CONFER, No. 2.

3. homileō (ὁμιλέω, 3656), "to be in company with, consort with" (homilos, "a throng"; homilia, "company"), hence, "to converse with," is rendered "to talk with," Acts 20:11. See COMMUNE, No. 2.

4. sunomileō (συνομιλέω, 4926), "to converse, talk with," occurs in Acts 10:27.¶

mataiologos (ματαιολόγος, 3151), an adjective denoting "talking idly" (mataios, "vain, idle," legō, "to speak"), is used as a noun (plural) in Titus 1:10.¶

TALKING (vain, foolish)

1. mataiologia (ματαιολογία, 3150), a noun corresponding to the above, is used in 1 Tim. 1:6, RV, "vain talking" (KJV, "vain jangling").¶

2. mōrologia (μωρολογία, 3473), from mōros, "foolish, dull, stupid," and legō, is used in Eph. 5:4; it denotes more than mere idle "talk." Trench describes it as "that 'talk of fools' which is foolishness and sin together" (Syn. §xxxiv).¶

damazō (δαμάζω, 1150), "to subdue, tame," is used (a) naturally in Mark 5:4 and Jas. 3:7 (twice); (b) metaphorically, of the tongue, in Jas. 3:8.¶ In the Sept., Dan. 2:40.¶

burseus (βυρσεύς, 1038), "a tanner" (from bursa, "a hide"), occurs in Acts 9:43; 10:6, 32.¶

For TARE (Verb) see TEAR

zizanion (ζιζάνιον, 2215) is a kind of darnel, the commonest of the four species, being the bearded, growing in the grain fields, as tall as wheat and barley, and resembling wheat in appearance. It was credited among the Jews with being degenerate wheat. The rabbis called it "bastard." The seeds are poisonous to man and herbivorous animals, producing sleepiness, nausea, convulsions and even death (they are harmless to poultry). The plants can be separated out, but the custom, as in the parable, is to leave the cleaning out till near the time of harvest, Matt. 13:25–27, 29, 30, 36, 38, 40.¶ The Lord describes the tares as "the sons of the evil one"; false teachings are indissociable from their propagandists. For the Lord's reference to the Kingdom see KINGDOM.

TARRY

1. menō (μένω, 3306), "to abide," is translated by the verb "to abide," in the RV, for KJV, "to tarry," in Matt. 26:38; Mark 14:34; Luke 24:29; John 4:40; Acts 9:43; 18:20; the RV retains the verb "to tarry" in John 21:22, 23; in Acts 20:5, KJV, "tarried" (RV, "were waiting"). Some mss. have it in Acts 20:15 (KJV, "tarried"). See ABIDE.

2. epimenō (ἐπιμένω, 1961), to abide, continue, a strengthened form of No. 1, is translated "to tarry" in Acts 10:48; 21:4, 10; 28:12, 14; 1 Cor. 16:7, 8; Gal. 1:18, RV (KJV, "abode"). See ABIDE, No. 2.

3. hupomenō (ὑπομένω, 5278), "to endure," is rendered "tarried behind" in Luke 2:43. See ENDURE, No. 2.

4. prosmenō (προσμένω, 4357), "to abide still, continue," is translated "tarried" in Acts 18:18, suggesting patience and steadfastness in remaining after the circumstances which preceded; in 1 Tim. 1:3, RV, "to tarry" (KJV, "to abide still"). See ABIDE, No. 6.

5. diatribō (διατρίβω, 1304), for which see

ABIDE, No. 7, is invariably rendered "to tarry," in the RV; KJV, twice, John 3:22; Acts 25:6; "continued" in John 11:54; Acts 15:35; "abode," Acts 12:19; 14:3, 28; 20:6; "abiding," 16:12; "had been," 25:14.¶

6. chronizō (χρονίζω, 5549), "to spend or while away time"; "to tarry," Matt. 25:5; Luke 1:21; Heb. 10:37. See DELAY, No. 2.

7. bradunō (βραδύνω, 1019), "to be slow" (bradus, "slow"), is rendered "I tarry long," 1 Tim. 3:15; "is . . . slack," 2 Pet. 3:9.¶

8. kathizō (καθίζω, 2523), "to make to sit down," or, intransitively, "to sit down," is translated "tarry ye" in Luke 24:49. See SIT.

9. mellō (μέλλω, 3195), "to be about to," is rendered "(why) tarriest thou?" in Acts 22:16. See ABOUT, B.

10. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), "to expect, await" (ek, "from," dechomai, "to receive"), is translated "tarry" in 1 Cor. 11:33, KJV (RV, "wait"). See EXPECT, LOOK, WAIT.

Notes: (1) In Acts 27:33, KJV, prosdokaō, "to wait, look for," is translated "have tarried" (RV, "wait"). (2) In Acts 15:33, poieō, "to make or do," is used with chronos, "time," KJV, "they had tarried a space," RV, "they had spent some time."

geuō (γεύω, 1089), "to make to taste," is used in the middle voice, signifying "to taste" (a) naturally, Matt. 27:34; Luke 14:24; John 2:9; Col. 2:21; (b) metaphorically, of Christ's "tasting" death, implying His personal experience in voluntarily undergoing death, Heb. 2:9; of believers (negatively) as to "tasting" of death, Matt. 16:28; Mark 9:1; Luke 9:27; John 8:52; of "tasting" the heavenly gift (different from receiving it), Heb. 6:4; "the good word of God, and the powers of the age to come," 6:5; "that the Lord is gracious," 1 Pet. 2:3. See EAT.

TATTLER

phluaros (φλύαρος, 5397), "babbling, garrulous" (from phluō, "to babble": cf. phluareō, "to prate against"), is translated "tattlers" in 1 Tim. 5:13.¶

TAUGHT (Adjective)

1. didaktos (διδακτός, 1318), primarily "what can be taught," then, "taught," is used (a) of persons, John 6:45; (b) of things, 1 Cor. 2:13 (twice), "(not in words which man's wisdom) teacheth, (but which the Spirit) teacheth," lit., "(not in words) taught (of man's wisdom, but) taught (of the Spirit)."¶

2. theodidaktos (θεοδίδακτος, 2312), "God-taught" (Theos, "God," and No. 1), occurs in 1 Thess. 4:9, lit., "God-taught (persons)"; while the missionaries had "taught" the converts to love one another, God had Himself been their Teacher. Cf. John 6:45 (see No. 1).¶

For TAXED, TAXING see ENROLL, ENROLMENT

TEACH

A. Verbs.

1. didaskō (διδάσκω, 1321) is used (a) absolutely, "to give instruction," e.g., Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Rom. 12:7; 1 Cor. 4:17; 1 Tim. 2:12; 4:11; (b) transitively, with an object, whether persons, e.g., Matt. 5:2; 7:29, and frequently in the Gospels and Acts, or things "taught," e.g., Matt. 15:9; 22:16; Acts 15:35; 18:11; both persons and things, e.g., John 14:26; Rev. 2:14, 20.

2. paideuō (παιδεύω, 3811), "to instruct and train": see INSTRUCT, No. 2.

3. katēcheō (κατηχέω, 2727), for which see INFORM, No. 2, INSTRUCT, No. 1, is rendered "to teach" in 1 Cor. 14:19, KJV (RV, "instruct"); Gal. 6:6 (twice).

4. heterodidaskaleō (ἑτεροδιδασκαλέω, 2085), "to teach a different doctrine" (heteros, "different," to be distinguished from allos, "another of the same kind": see ANOTHER), is used in 1 Tim. 1:3; 6:3, RV, KJV, "teach (no) other doctrine" and "teach otherwise," of what is contrary to the faith.¶

Notes: (1) For mathēteuō, "to teach," in the KJV of Matt. 28:19; Acts 14:21, see DISCIPLE, B. (2) In Acts 16:21, KJV, katangellō, "to declare, preach," is rendered "teach" (RV, "set forth"). (3) For "teacheth" in 1 Cor. 2:13, see TAUGHT, No. 1 (b).

B. Adjective.

didaktikos (διδακτικός, 1317), "skilled in teaching" (akin to No. 1 above: Eng., "didactic"), is translated "apt to teach" in 1 Tim. 3:2; 2 Tim. 2:24.¶

TEACHER, FALSE TEACHERS

1. didaskalos (διδάσκαλος, 1320) is rendered "teacher" or "teachers" in Matt. 23:8, by Christ, of Himself; in John 3:2 of Christ; of Nicodemus in Israel, 3:10, RV; of "teachers" of the truth in the churches, Acts 13:1; 1 Cor. 12:28, 29; Eph. 4:11; Heb. 5:12; Jas. 3:1, RV; by Paul of his work among the churches, 1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11; of "teachers," wrongfully chosen by those who have "itching ears," 2 Tim. 4:3. See MASTER, RABBI.

2. kalodidaskalos (καλοδιδάσκαλος, 2567) denotes "a teacher of what is good" (kalos), Titus 2:3.¶

3. pseudodidaskalos (ψευδοδιδάσκαλος, 5572), "a false teacher," occurs in the plural in 2 Pet. 2:1.¶

For TEACHING (Noun) see DOCTRINE, Nos. 1 and 2

dakruon or dakru (δάκρυον, 1144), akin to dakruō, "to weep," is used in the plural, Mark 9:24; Luke 7:38, 44 (with the sense of washing therewith the Lord's feet); Acts 20:19, 31; 2 Cor. 2:4; 2 Tim. 1:4; Heb. 5:7; 12:17; Rev. 7:17; 21:4.¶

TEAR, TORN

1. sparassō (σπαράσσω, 4682), denotes "to tear, rend, convulse," Mark 1:26; 9:20 (in some mss.), 26, RV, "having ... torn" (KJV, "rent"); Luke 9:39.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 22:8, of the foundations of heaven; Jer. 4:18, of the heart.¶

2. susparassō (συσπαράσσω, 4952), "to tear violently" (sun, "with," intensive), "convulse completely," a strengthened form of No. 1, is used in Mark 9:20, in the best texts (some have No. 1); Luke 9:42.¶

3. diaspaō (διασπάω, 1288), "to break or tear asunder," is translated "should be torn in pieces" in Acts 23:10, RV (KJV, "... pulled ..."). See REND, No. 5.

4. rhēgnumi (ῥήγνυμι, 4486), "to break," is rendered "teareth" in Mark 9:18, KJV (RV, "dasheth ... down"). See HINDER, No. 1.

TEDIOUS (to be) enkoptō (ἐνκόπτω, 1465), "to hinder," is rendered "to be tedious" in Acts 24:4, of detaining a person unnecessarily. See HINDER, No. 1.

For TEETH see TOOTH

TELL

1. legō (λέγω, 3004) and the 2nd aorist form eipon, used to supply this tense in legō, are frequently translated "to tell," e.g., Matt. 2:13, RV, "I tell," KJV, "I bring (thee) word"; 10:27. See SAY, No. 1.

2. laleō (λαλέω, 2980), for which see SAY, No. 2, is usually rendered "to speak," in the RV (for KJV, "to tell"), e.g., Matt. 26:13; Luke 1:45; 2:17, 18, 20; Acts 11:14; 27:25; but RV and KJV, "to tell" in John 8:40; Acts 9:6; 22:10.

3. eklaleō (ἐκλαλέω, 1583), "to speak out" (ek), is translated "tell" in Acts 23:22.¶

4. eirō (εἴρω, Fut. of 3004), for which see SAY, No. 4, is rendered "to tell" in Matt. 21:24; Mark 11:29; John 14:29; Rev. 17:7.

5. apangellō (ἀπαγγέλλω, 518), "to announce, declare, report" (usually as a messenger), is frequently rendered "to tell," e.g., Matt. 8:33; 14:12. See BRING, No. 36.

6. anangellō (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), "to bring back word, announce," is sometimes rendered "to tell," e.g., John 5:15; 2 Cor. 7:7. See DECLARE, No. 1.

7. diēgeomai (διηγέομαι, 1334), for which see DECLARE, No. 6, is rendered "to tell," in the KJV and RV, in Mark 9:9; Heb. 11:32.

8. exēgeomai (ἐξηγέομαι, 1834), for which see DECLARE, No. 8, is translated "told" in Luke 24:35, KJV (RV, "rehearsed").

9. diasapheō (διασαφέω, 1285), "to make clear" (dia, "throughout," saphēs, "clear"), explain fully, is translated "told" in Matt. 18:31. See EXPLAIN.

10. mēnuō (μηνύω, 3377) is rendered "told" in Acts 23:30, KJV: see show, No. 7.

11. proeirō (prolegō) (προείρω, 4280v), "to tell before," is so rendered in Matt. 24:25: see FORETELL, FOREWARN.

Note: In the following, oida, "to know," is translated "tell" in the KJV (RV, "know"), Matt. 21:27; Mark 11:33; Luke 20:7; John 3:8; 8:14; 16:18; 2 Cor. 12:2.

TEMPER TOGETHER

sunkerannumi (συγκεράννυμι, 4786), "to mix or blend together," is used in 1 Cor. 12:24, of the combining of the members of the human body into an organic structure, as illustrative of the members of a local church (see v. 27, where there is no definite article in the original). See MIXED (with).

TEMPERANCE, TEMPERATE

A. Noun.

enkrateia (ἐγκράτεια, 1466), from kratos, "strength," occurs in Acts 24:25; Gal. 5:23; 2 Pet. 1:6 (twice), in all of which it is rendered "temperance"; the RV marg., "self-control" is the preferable rendering, as "temperance" is now limited to one form of self-control; the various powers bestowed by God upon man are capable of abuse; the right use demands the controlling power of the will under the operation of the Spirit of God; in Acts 24:25 the word follows "righteousness," which represents God's claims, self-control being man's response thereto; in 2 Pet. 1:6, it follows "knowledge," suggesting that what is learned requires to be put into practice.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. enkratēs (ἐγκρατής, 1468), akin to A, denotes "exercising self-control," rendered "temperate" in Titus 1:8.¶

2. nēphalios (νηφάλιος, 3524), for which see SOBER, is translated "temperate" in 1 Tim. 3:2, RV (KJV, "vigilant"); in 3:11 and Titus 2:2, RV (KJV, "sober").¶

Note: In Titus 2:2, KJV, sōphrōn, "sober," is rendered "temperate" (RV, "soberminded").

C. Verb.

enkrateuomai (ἐγκρατεύομαι, 1467), akin to A and B, No. 1, rendered "is temperate" in 1 Cor. 9:25, is used figuratively of the rigid self-control practiced by athletes with a view to gaining the prize. See CONTINENCY.

TEMPEST

1. thuella (θύελλα, 2366), "a hurricane, cyclone, whirlwind" (akin to thuō, "to slay," and thumos, "wrath"), is used in Heb. 12:18.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 10:22; Deut. 4:11; 5:22.¶

2. seismos (σεισμός, 4578), "a shaking" (Eng., "seismic," etc.), is used of a "tempest" in Matt. 8:24. See EARTHQUAKE.

3. cheimōn (χειμών, 5494), "winter, a winter storm," hence, in general, "a tempest," is so rendered in Acts 27:20. See WEATHER, WINTER.

4. lailaps (λαῖλαψ, 2978), "a tempest," 2 Pet. 2:17, KJV: see STORM.

Note: For "tossed with a tempest," Acts 27:18, KJV, see LABOR, B, No. 2.

TEMPESTUOUS

tuphōnikos (τυφωνικός, 5189), from tuphōn, "a hurricane, typhoon," is translated "tempestuous" in Acts 27:14.¶

TEMPLE

1. hieron (ἱερόν, 2411), the neuter of the adjective hieros, "sacred," is used as a noun denoting "a sacred place, a temple," that of Artemis (Diana), Acts 19:27; that in Jerusalem, Mark 11:11, signifying the entire building with its precincts, or some part thereof, as distinct from the naos, "the inner sanctuary" (see No. 2); apart from the Gospels and Acts, it is mentioned only in 1 Cor. 9:13. Christ taught in one of the courts, to which all the people had access. Hieron is never used figuratively. The Temple mentioned in the Gospels and Acts was begun by Herod in 20 B.C., and destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70.

2. naos (ναός, 3485), "a shrine or sanctuary," was used (a) among the heathen, to denote the shrine containing the idol, Acts 17:24; 19:24 (in the latter, miniatures); (b) among the Jews, the sanctuary in the "Temple," into which only the priests could lawfully enter, e.g., Luke 1:9, 21, 22; Christ, as being of the tribe of Judah, and thus not being a priest while upon the earth (Heb. 7:13, 14; 8:4), did not enter the naos; for 2 Thess. 2:4 see Note (below); (c) by Christ metaphorically, of His own physical body, John 2:19, 21; (d) in apostolic teaching, metaphorically, (1) of the church, the mystical body of Christ, Eph. 2:21; (2) of a local church, 1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 2 Cor. 6:16; (3) of the present body of the individual believer, 1 Cor. 6:19; (4) of the "Temple" seen in visions in the Apocalypse, 3:12; 7:15; 11:19; 14:15, 17; 15:5, 6, 8; 16:1, 17; (5) of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb, as the "Temple" of the new and heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:22. See SANCTUARY and HOLY, B (b), par. 4.

Notes: (1) The "temple" mentioned in 2 Thess. 2:4 (naos), as the seat of the Man of Sin, has been regarded in different ways. The weight of Scripture evidence is in favor of the view that it refers to a literal "temple" in Jerusalem, to be reconstructed in the future (cf. Dan. 11:31 and 12:11, with Matt. 24:15). For a fuller examination of the passage, see Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 250–252. (2) For oikos, rendered "temple," Luke 11:51, KJV, see HOUSE, No. 1.

neōkoros (νεωκόρος, 3511), Acts 19:35, RV, and KJV marg., "temple keeper" (KJV, "worshiper"), is used in profane Greek of "one who has charge of a temple." Coin inscriptions show that it was an honorary title given to certain cities, especially in Asia Minor, where the cult of some god or of a deified human potentate had been established, here to Ephesus in respect of the goddess Artemis. Apparently the imperial cult also existed at Ephesus. Josephus applies the word to Jews as worshipers, but this is not the meaning in Acts 19.¶

TEMPORAL

proskairos (πρόσκαιρος, 4340), "for a season" (pros, "for," kairos, "a season"), is rendered "temporal" in 2 Cor. 4:18. See SEASON, WHILE.

TEMPT

A. Verbs.

1. peirazō (πειράζω, 3985) signifies (1) "to try, attempt, assay" (see TRY); (2) "to test, try, prove," in a good sense, said of Christ and of believers, Heb. 2:18, where the context shows that the temptation was the cause of suffering to Him, and only suffering, not a drawing away to sin, so that believers have the sympathy of Christ as their High Priest in the suffering which sin occasions to those who are in the enjoyment of communion with God; so in the similar passage in 4:15; in all the temptations which Christ endured, there was nothing within Him that answered to sin. There was no sinful infirmity in Him. While He was truly man, and His divine nature was not in any way inconsistent with His Manhood, there was nothing in Him such as is produced in us by the sinful nature which belongs to us; in Heb. 11:37, of the testing of OT saints; in 1 Cor. 10:13, where the meaning has a wide scope, the verb is used of "testing" as permitted by God, and of the believer as one who should be in the realization of his own helplessness and his dependence upon God (see PROVE, TRY); in a bad sense, "to tempt" (a) of attempts to ensnare Christ in His speech, e.g., Matt. 16:1; 19:3; 22:18, 35, and parallel passages; John 8:6; (b) of temptations to sin, e.g., Gal. 6:1, where one who would restore an erring brother is not to act as his judge, but as being one with him in liability to sin, with the possibility of finding himself in similar circumstances, Jas. 1:13, 14 (see note below); of temptations mentioned as coming from the Devil, Matt. 4:1; and parallel passages; 1 Cor. 7:5; 1 Thess. 3:5 (see TEMPTER); (c) of trying or challenging God, Acts 15:10; 1 Cor. 10:9 (2nd part); Heb. 3:9; the Holy Spirit, Acts 5:9: cf. No. 2.

Note: *"James 1:13–15 seems to contradict other statements of Scripture in two respects, saying (a) that 'God cannot be tempted with evil,' and (b) that 'He Himself tempteth no man.' But God tempted, or tried, Abraham, Heb. 11:17, and the Israelites tempted, or tried, God, 1 Cor. 10:9. V. 14, however, makes it plain that, whereas in these cases the temptation or trial, came from without, James refers to temptation, or trial, arising within, from uncontrolled appetites and from evil passions, cf. Mark 7:20–23. But though such temptation does not proceed from God, yet does God regard His people while they endure it, and by it tests and approves them."

2. ekpeirazō (ἐκπειράζω, 1598), an intensive form of the foregoing, is used in much the same way as No. 1 (2) (c), in Christ's quotation from Deut. 6:16, in reply to the Devil, Matt. 4:7; Luke 4:12; so in 1 Cor. 10:9, RV, "the Lord" (KJV, "Christ"); of the lawyer who "tempted" Christ, Luke 10:25.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 6:16; 8:2, 16; Ps. 78:18.¶ Cf. dokimazō (see PROVE).

B. Adjective.

apeirastos (ἀπείραστος, 551), "untempted, untried" (a, negative, and A, No. 1), occurs in Jas. 1:13, with eimi, "to be," "cannot be tempted," "untemptable" (Mayor).¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 97.

TEMPTATION

peirasmos (πειρασμός, 3986), akin to A, above, is used of (1) "trials" with a beneficial purpose and effect, (a) of "trials" or "temptations," divinely permitted or sent, Luke 22:28; Acts 20:19; Jas. 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:6; 4:12, RV, "to prove," KJV, "to try"; 2 Pet. 2:9 (singular); Rev. 3:10, RV, "trial" (KJV, "temptation"); in Jas. 1:12, "temptation" apparently has meanings (1) and (2) combined (see below), and is used in the widest sense; (b) with a good or neutral significance, Gal. 4:14, of Paul's physical infirmity, "a temptation" to the Galatian converts, of such a kind as to arouse feelings of natural repugnance; (c) of "trials" of a varied character, Matt. 6:13 and Luke 11:4, where believers are commanded to pray not to be led into such by forces beyond their own control; Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38; Luke 22:40, 46, where they are commanded to watch and pray against entering into "temptations" by their own carelessness or disobedience; in all such cases God provides "the way of escape," 1 Cor. 10:13 (where peirasmos occurs twice). (2) Of "trial" definitely designed to lead to wrong doing, "temptation," Luke 4:13; 8:13; 1 Tim. 6:9; (3) of "trying" or challenging God, by men, Heb. 3:8.¶

TEMPTER

Note: The present participle of peirazō, "to tempt," preceded by the article, lit., "the (one) tempting," is used as a noun, describing the Devil in this character, Matt. 4:3; 1 Thess. 3:5.¶

deka (δέκα, 1176), whence the Eng. prefix "deca–," is regarded by some as the measure of human responsibility, e.g., Luke 19:13, 17; Rev. 2:10; it is used in a figurative setting in Rev. 12:3; 13:1; 17:3, 7, 12, 16.

Notes: (1) In Acts 23:23, hebdomēkonta, "seventy," is translated "threescore and ten." (2) For "ten thousand" see THOUSAND.

For TEND, John 21:16; 1 Pet. 5:2, RV, see FEED, No. 2

hapalos (ἁπαλός, 527), "soft, tender," is used of the branch of a tree, Matt. 24:32; Mark 13:28.¶

Note: For Luke 1:78, "tender mercy"; Phil. 1:8; 2:1 "tender mercies," see BOWELS.

1. dekatos (δέκατος, 1182), an adjective from deka, "ten," occurs in John 1:39; Rev. 11:13; 21:20.¶

2. dekatē (δεκάτη, 1181), grammatically the feminine form of No. 1, with meris, "a part," understood, is used as a noun, translated "a tenth part" in Heb. 7:2, "a tenth," v. 4; "tithes" in vv. 8, 9.¶

For TENTS see TABERNACLE, No. 1

skēnopoios (σκηνοποιός, 4635), an adjective, "tentmaking" (skēnē, "a tent," poieō, "to make"), is used as a noun in Acts 18:3.¶

TERM (appointed) prothesmios (προθέσμιος, 4287), an adjective denoting "appointed beforehand" (pro, "before," tithēmi, "to put, appoint": see APPOINT No. 3, Note), is used as a noun, prothesmia (grammatically feminine, with hēmera, "a day," understood), as in Greek law, "a day appointed before," Gal. 4:2, RV, "the term appointed," i.e., "a stipulated date" (KJV, "the time appointed").¶

epigeios (ἐπίγειος, 1919), "on earth, earthly" (epi, "on," gē, "the earth"), is rendered "terrestrial" in 1 Cor. 15:40 (twice), in contrast to epouranios, "heavenly." See EARTHLY, No. 2.

For TERRIBLE, Heb. 12:21, see FEARFUL, B, No. 1

A. Verbs.

1. ptoeō (πτοέω, 4422), "to terrify," is used in the passive voice, Luke 21:9; 24:37.¶

2. ekphobeō (ἐκφοβέω, 1629), "to frighten away" (ek, "out," phobos, "fear"), occurs in 2 Cor. 10:9.¶

3. pturō (πτύρω, 4426), "to scare," Phil. 1:28: see AFFRIGHTED, B, No. 1.¶

B. Adjective.

emphobos (ἔμφοβος, 1719), "terrified," is so rendered in the RV of Acts 24:25. See TREMBLE.

TERROR

1. phobos (φόβος, 5401), "fear," is rendered "terror" in Rom. 13:3; in 2 Cor. 5:11 and 1 Pet. 3:14, KJV (RV, "fear"). See FEAR, No. 1.

2. phobētron (φόβητρον, 5400), "that which causes fright, a terror," is translated "terrors" in Luke 21:11, RV (KJV, "fearful sights").¶ See FEAR, A, Note. For ptoēsis, See AMAZEMENT.

For TESTAMENT see COVENANT

diatithēmi (διατίθημι, 1303), "to arrange, dispose," is used only in the middle voice in the NT; in Heb. 9:16, 17, the present participle with the article, lit., "the (one) making a testament (or covenant)," virtually a noun, "the testator" (the covenanting one); it is used of "making a covenant" in 8:10 and 10:16 and Acts 3:25. In "covenant-making," the sacrifice of a victim was customary (Gen. 15:10; Jer. 34:18, 19). He who "made a covenant" did so at the cost of a life. While the terminology in Heb. 9:16, 17 has the appearance of being appropriate to the circumstances of making a will, there is excellent reason for adhering to the meaning "covenant-making." The rendering "the death of the testator" would make Christ a Testator, which He was not. He did not die simply that the terms of a testamentary disposition might be fulfilled for the heirs. Here He who is "the Mediator of a new covenant" (v. 15) is Himself the Victim whose death was necessary. The idea of "making a will" destroys the argument of v. 18. In spite of various advocacies of the idea of a will, the weight of evidence is confirmatory of what Hatch, in Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 48, says: "There can be little doubt that the word (diathēkē) must be invariably taken in this sense of 'covenant' in the NT, and especially in a book . . . so impregnated with the language of the Sept. as the Epistle to the Hebrews" (see also Westcott, and W. F. Moulton). We may render somewhat literally thus: 'For where a covenant (is), a death (is) necessary to be brought in of the one covenanting; for a covenant over dead ones (victims) is sure, since never has it force when the one covenanting lives' [Christ being especially in view]. The writer is speaking from a Jewish point of view, not from that of the Greeks. "To adduce the fact that in the case of wills the death of the testator is the condition of validity, is, of course, no proof at all that a death is necessary to make a covenant valid. . . . To support his argument, proving the necessity of Christ's death, the writer adduces the general law that he who makes a covenant does so at the expense of life" (Marcus Dods). See APPOINT, MAKE.

TESTIFY

1. martureō (μαρτυρέω, 3140), for which see WITNESS, is frequently rendered "to bear witness, to witness," in the RV, where KJV renders it "to testify," John 2:25; 3:11, 32; 5:39; 15:26; 21:24; 1 Cor. 15:15; Heb. 7:17; 11:4; 1 John 4:14; 5:9; 3 John 3. In the following, however, the RV, like the KJV, has the rendering "to testify," John 4:39, 44; 7:7; 13:21; Acts 26:5; Rev. 22:16, 18, 20.

2. epimartureō (ἐπιμαρτυρέω, 1957), "to bear witness to" (a strengthened form of No. 1), is rendered "testifying" in 1 Pet. 5:12.¶

3. marturomai (μαρτύρομαι, 3143), primarily, "to summon as witness," then, "to bear witness" (sometimes with the suggestion of solemn protestation), is rendered "to testify" in Acts 20:26, RV (KJV, "I take... to record"); 26:22, in the best texts (some have No. 1), RV; Gal. 5:3; Eph. 4:17; 1 Thess. 2:11, in the best texts (some have No. 1), RV, "testifying" (KJV, "charged").¶

4. diamarturomai (διαμαρτύρομαι, 1263), "to testify or protest solemnly," an intensive form of No. 3, is translated "to testify" in Luke 16:28; Acts 2:40; 8:25; 10:42; 18:5; 20:21, 23, 24; 23:11; 28:23; 1 Thess. 4:6; Heb. 2:6; "to charge" in 1 Tim. 5:21; 2 Tim. 2:14; 4:1.¶

5. promarturomai (προμαρτύρομαι, 4303), "to testify beforehand," occurs in 1 Pet. 1:11, where the pronoun "it" should be "He" (the "it" being due to the grammatically neuter form of pneuma; the personality of the Holy Spirit requires the masculine pronoun).¶

Note: In Rev. 22:18 some texts have summartureō, "to bear witness with." See WITNESS.

TESTIMONY

1. marturion (μαρτύριον, 3142), "a testimony, witness," is almost entirely translated "testimony" in both KJV and RV. The only place where both have "witness" is Acts 4:33. In Acts 7:44 and Jas. 5:3, the RV has "testimony" (KJV, "witness").

In 2 Thess. 1:10, "our testimony unto you," RV, refers to the fact that the missionaries, besides proclaiming the truths of the gospel, had borne witness to the power of these truths. Kērugma, "the thing preached, the message," is objective, having especially to do with the effect on the hearers; marturion is mainly subjective, having to do especially with the preacher's personal experience. In 1 Tim. 2:6 the RV is important, "the testimony (i.e., of the gospel) to be borne in its own times," i.e., in the times divinely appointed for it, namely, the present age, from Pentecost till the church is complete. In Rev. 15:5, in the phrase, "the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in Heaven," the "testimony" is the witness to the rights of God, denied and refused on earth, but about to be vindicated by the exercise of the judgments under the pouring forth of the seven bowls or vials of divine retribution. See WITNESS.

2. marturia (μαρτυρία, 3141), "witness, evidence, testimony," is almost always rendered "witness" in the RV (for KJV, "testimony" in John 3:32, 33; 5:34; 8:17; 21:24, and always for KJV, "record," e.g., 1 John 5:10, 11), except in Acts 22:18 and in the Apocalypse, where both, with one exception, have "testimony," 1:2, 9; 6:9; 11:7; 12:11, 17; 19:10 (twice); 20:4 (KJV, "witness"). In 19:10, "the testimony of Jesus" is objective, the "testimony" or witness given to Him (cf. 1:2, 9; as to those who will bear it, see Rev. 12:17, RV). The statement "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy," is to be understood in the light, e.g., of the "testimony" concerning Christ and Israel in the Psalms, which will be used by the godly Jewish remnant in the coming time of "Jacob's Trouble." All such "testimony" centers in and points to Christ. See WITNESS.

TETRARCH

A. Noun.

tetraarchēs or tetrarchēs (τετραάρχης, 5076) denotes "one of four rulers" (tetra, "four," archē, "rule"), properly, "the governor of the fourth part of a region"; hence, "a dependent princeling," or "any petty ruler" subordinate to kings or ethnarchs; in the NT, Herod Antipas, Matt. 14:1; Luke 3:19; 9:7; Acts 13:1.¶

B. Verb.

tetraarcheō or tetrarcheō (τετραρχέω, 5075), "to be a tetrarch," occurs in Luke 3:1 (thrice), of Herod Antipas, his brother Philip and Lysanias. Antipas and Philip each inherited a fourth part of his father's dominions. Inscriptions bear witness to the accuracy of Luke's details.¶

For THAN see †, p. 1

THANK, THANKS (Noun and Verb), THANKFUL, THANKFULNESS, THANKSGIVING, THANKWORTHY

A. Nouns.

1. charis (χάρις, 5485), for the meanings of which see GRACE, No. 1, is rendered "thank" in Luke 6:32, 33, 34; in 17:9, "doth he thank" is lit., "hath he thanks to"; it is rendered "thanks (be to God)" in Rom. 6:17, RV (KJV, "God be thanked"); "thanks" in 1 Cor. 15:57; in 1 Tim. 1:12 and 2 Tim. 1:3, "I thank" is, lit., "I have thanks"; "thankworthy," 1 Pet. 2:19, KJV (RV, "acceptable"). See ACCEPT, D, No. 2.

2. eucharistia (εὐχαριστία, 2169), eu,

"well," charizomai, "to give freely" (Eng., "eucharist"), denotes (a) "gratitude," "thankfulness," Acts 24:3; (b) "giving of thanks, thanksgiving," 1 Cor. 14:16; 2 Cor. 4:15; 9:11, 12 (plur.); Eph. 5:4; Phil. 4:6; Col. 2:7; 4:2; 1 Thess. 3:9 ("thanks"); 1 Tim. 2:1 (plur.); 4:3, 4; Rev. 4:9, "thanks"; 7:12.¶

B. Verbs.

1. eucharisteō (εὐχαριστέω, 2168), akin to A, No. 2, "to give thanks," (a) is said of Christ, Matt. 15:36; 26:27; Mark 8:6; 14:23; Luke 22:17, 19; John 6:11, 23; 11:41; 1 Cor. 11:24; (b) of the Pharisee in Luke 18:11 in his self-complacent prayer; (c) is used by Paul at the beginning of all his epistles, except 2 Cor. (see, however, eulogētos in 1:3), Gal., 1 Tim., 2 Tim. (see, however, charin echō, 1:3), and Titus, (1) for his readers, Rom. 1:8; Eph. 1:16; Col. 1:3; 1 Thess. 1:2; 2 Thess. 1:3 (cf. 2:13); virtually so in Philem. 4; (2) for fellowship shown, Phil. 1:3; (3) for God's gifts to them, 1 Cor. 1:4; (d) is recorded (1) of Paul elsewhere, Acts 27:35; 28:15; Rom. 7:25; 1 Cor. 1:14; 14:18; (2) of Paul and others, Rom. 16:4; 1 Thess. 2:13; of himself, representatively, as a practice, 1 Cor. 10:30; (3) of others, Luke 17:16; Rom. 14:6 (twice); 1 Cor. 14:17; Rev. 11:17; (e) is used in admonitions to the saints, the Name of the Lord Jesus suggesting His character and example, Eph. 5:20; Col. 1:12; 3:17; 1 Thess. 5:18; (f) as the expression of a purpose, 2 Cor. 1:11, RV; (g) negatively of the ungodly, Rom. 1:21.¶ "Thanksgiving" is the expression of joy Godward, and is therefore the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22); believers are encouraged to abound in it (e.g., Col. 2:7, and see C, below).

2. exomologeō (ἐξομολογέω, 1843), in the middle voice, signifies "to make acknowledgment," whether of sins (to confess), or in the honor of a person, as in Rom. 14:11; 15:9 (in some mss. in Rev. 3:5); this is the significance in the Lord's address to the Father, "I thank (Thee)," in Matt. 11:25 and Luke 10:21, the meaning being "I make thankful confession" or "I make acknowledgment with praise." See CONFESS, No. 2, CONSENT, PROMISE.

3. anthomologeomai (ἀνθομολογέομαι, 437), "to acknowledge fully, to celebrate fully (anti) in praise with thanksgiving," is used of Anna in Luke 2:38.¶

Note: For homologeō, rendered "giving thanks" in Heb. 13:15 (RV, "make confession"), See CONFESS, A, No. 1 (d).

C. Adjective.

eucharistos (εὐχάριστος, 2170), primarily, "gracious, agreeable" (as in the Sept., Prov. 11:16, of a wife, who brings glory to her husband¶), then "grateful, thankful," is so used in Col. 3:15.¶

For THAT (Conjunction, etc.) see †, p. 1

For THAT (Demonstrative Pronoun), see THIS

theatron (θέατρον, 2302), "a theater," was used also as "a place of assembly," Acts 19:29, 31; in 1 Cor. 4:9 it is used of "a show" or "spectacle." See SPECTACLE.¶

THEE

Note: This translates the oblique forms of the pronoun su, "thou." In 2 Tim. 4:11, it translates the reflexive pronoun seautou, "thyself."

THEFT

1. klopē (κλοπή, 2829), akin to kleptō, "to steal," is used in the plural in Matt. 15:19; Mark 7:22.¶

2. klemma (κλέμμα, 2809), "a thing stolen," and so, "a theft," is used in the plural in Rev. 9:21.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 31:39; Ex. 22:3, 4.¶

THEIR, THEIRS

Note: These pronouns are the rendering of (1) autōn, the genitive plur. of autos, "he," e.g., Matt. 2:12; (2) heautōn, "of themselves," the genitive plur. of heautou, "of himself," e.g., Matt. 8:22; Rom. 16:4, 18, "their own"; or the accusative plur. heautous, e.g., 2 Cor. 8:5, "their own selves" (for John 20:10, see HOME, A, No. 3); (3) idious, the accusative plur. of idios, "one's own," e.g., 1 Cor. 14:35, "their own"; (4) toutōn, lit., "of these," the gen. plur. of houtos, "this," Rom. 11:30, "their (disobedience)"; (5) ekeinōn, the gen. plur. of ekeinos, "that one" (emphatic), e.g., 2 Cor. 8:14 (twice), "their," lit., "of those"; 2 Tim. 3:9, "theirs."

THEM, THEMSELVES

Note: These translate the plural, in various forms, of (1) autos [see (1) above], e.g., Matt. 3:7; (2) heatou [see (2) above], e.g., Matt. 15:30; (3) houtos (toutous) [see (4) above], e.g., Acts 21:24; (4) ekeinos [see (5) above], e.g., Matt. 13:11. Regarding allēlōn, "of one another," and its other forms, the RV substitutes "one another" for the KJV "themselves" in Mark 8:16; 9:34; Luke 4:36; John 6:52; 11:56; 16:17; 19:24; Acts 26:31; 28:4; Rom. 2:15, but adheres to the rendering "themselves" in Mark 15:31; Acts 4:15; 28:25.

THEN

1. tote (τότε, 5119), a demonstrative adverb of time, denoting "at that time," is used (a) of concurrent events, e.g., Matt. 2:17; Gal. 4:8, "at that time"; v. 29, "then"; 2 Pet. 3:6,"(the world) that then was," lit., "(the) then (world)"; (b) of consequent events, "then, thereupon," e.g., Matt. 2:7; Luke 11:26; 16:16, "[from (KJV, "since")] that time"; John 11:14; Acts 17:14; (c) of things future, e.g., Matt. 7:23; 24:30 (twice), 40; eight times in ch. 25; 1 Cor. 4:5; Gal. 6:4; 1 Thess. 5:3; 2 Thess. 2:8. It occurs 90 times in Matthew, more than in all the rest of the NT together.

2. eita (εἶτα, 1534) denotes sequence (a) "of time, then, next," Mark 4:17, RV, "then"; 4:28, in some texts; 8:25, RV, "then" (KJV, "after that"); Luke 8:12; John 13:5; 19:27; 20:27; in some texts in 1 Cor. 12:28; 1 Cor. 15:5, 7, 24; 1 Tim. 2:13; 3:10; Jas. 1:15; (b) In argument, Heb. 12:9, "furthermore."¶

3. epeita (ἔπειτα, 1899) "thereupon, thereafter," then (in some texts, Mark 7:5; kai, "and," in the best); Luke 16:7; John 11:7; 1 Cor. 12:28, RV, "then" (KJV, "after that"); 15:6 and 7 (ditto); v. 23, RV, KJV, "afterward" (No. 2 in v. 24); v. 46 (ditto); Gal. 1:18; v. 21, RV (KJV, "afterwards"); 2:1; 1 Thess. 4:17; Heb. 7:2, RV (KJV, "after that"); v. 27, Jas. 3:17, 4:14. See AFTER.¶

4. loipon (λοιπόν, 3063), "finally, for the rest," the neuter of loipos, "(the) rest," used adverbially, is rendered "then" in Acts 27:20, KJV (RV, "now.").

5. oun (οὖν, 3767), a particle expressing sequence or consequence, is rendered "then," e.g., Matt. 22:43; 27:22; Luke 11:13.

6. oukoun (οὐκοῦν, 3766), an adverb formed from ouk, "not," oun, "therefore," with the negative element dropped, meaning "so then," is used in John 18:37.¶

Notes: (1) In James 2:24, where in some texts the inferential particle toinun, "therefore," occurs, the KJV renders it by "then" (RV follows the superior mss. which omit it). (2) For conjunctions (ara, "so"; de, "but"; gar "for"; kai, "and"; te, "and"), sometimes translated "then," see †, p. 1.

THENCE (from)

ekeithen (ἐκεῖθεν, 1564) is used (a) of place, e.g., Matt. 4:21, "from thence"; 5:26; in Acts 20:13, "there"; often preceded by kai, written kákeithen, e.g., Mark 9:30 and Luke 11:53 (in the best texts); Acts 7:4; 14:26; (b) of time, Acts 13:21, "and afterward." See AFTER.

Note: In Acts 28:13, hothen, "from whence," is translated "from thence."

eti (ἔτι, 2089), "yet, still, further," is rendered "thenceforth" in Matt. 5:13.

Notes: (1) In Luke 13:9, RV, the phrase eis to mellon, lit., "unto the about to be" (mellō, "to be about to"), is translated "thenceforth" (KJV, "after that"). (2) In John 19:12, KJV, ek toutou, "from this," is translated "from thenceforth" (RV, "upon this").

THERE, THITHER

1. ekei (ἐκεῖ, 1563) signifies (a) "there," e.g., Matt. 2:13, frequently in the Gospels; (b) "thither," e.g., Luke 17:37; in Rom. 15:24, "thitherward."

2. ekeise (ἐκεῖσε, 1566), properly, "thither," signifies "there" in Acts 21:3; 22:5.¶ In the Sept., Job 39:29.¶

3. ekeithen (ἐκεῖθεν, 1564), "thence," is rendered "there" in Acts 20:13. See THENCE.

4. enthade (ἐνθάδε, 1759), "here, hither," is rendered "there" in Acts 10:18. See HERE, HITHER.

5. autou (αὐτοῦ, 847), the genitive case, neuter, of autos, he, lit., "of it," is used as an adverb, "there," in Acts 18:19; 21:4 (in some texts in 15:34). See HERE.

Notes: (1) In Luke 24:18 and Acts 9:38, "there" translates the phrase en autē, "in it." (2) In John 21:9, "there" is used to translate the verb keimai. (3) In Matt. 24:23 (2nd part), KJV, hōde, "here" (RV), is translated "there." (4) In Acts 17:21, "there" forms part of the translation of epidēmeō, "to sojourn," "sojourning there," RV ("which were there," KJV).

THEREABOUT

Note: The phrase peri toutou, "concerning this," is rendered "thereabout" in Luke 24:4.

THEREAT

Note: The phrase di'autēs, lit., "by (dia) it," is rendered "thereat" in Matt. 7:13, KJV (RV, "thereby").

THEREBY

Notes: (1) Di'autēs (see above) occurs in Matt. 7:13; John 11:4; Heb. 12:11. (2) Dia tautēs, "by means of this, thereby," occurs in Heb. 12:15; 13:2. (3) En autē, "in, or by, it," is rendered "thereby" in Rom. 10:5; en autō in Eph. 2:16 (some texts have en heautō, "in Himself"); 1 Pet. 2:2.

For THEREFORE see †, p. 1

THEREIN, THEREINTO, THEREOF, THEREON, THEREOUT, THERETO, THEREUNTO, THEREUPON, THEREWITH

Note: These translate various phrases consisting of a preposition with forms of either the personal pronoun autos, "he," or the demonstrative houtos, "this."

For THESE see THIS

THEY, THEY THEMSELVES

Note: When not forming part of the translation of the 3rd pers., plur. of a verb, (1) these translate the plural of the pronouns under HE, in their various forms, autos, houtos, ekeinos, heautou. (2) In Acts 5:16, hoitines, the plural of hostis, "anyone who," is translated "they"; so in 23:14, translated "and they"; in 17:11, "in that they" (some texts have it in Matt. 25:3). (3) Sometimes the plural of the article is rendered "they," e.g., Phil. 4:22; Heb. 13:24; in 1 Cor. 11:19, "they which are (approved)" is, lit., "the approved"; in Gal. 2:6, "they... (who were of repute)," RV.

THIEF, THIEVES

1. kleptēs (κλέπτης, 2812) is used (a) literally, Matt. 6:19, 20; 24:43; Luke 12:33, 39; John 10:1, 10; 12:6; 1 Cor. 6:10; 1 Pet. 4:15; (b) metaphorically of "false teachers," John 10:8; (c) figuratively, (1) of the personal coming of Christ, in a warning to a local church, with most of its members possessed of mere outward profession and defiled by the world, Rev. 3:3; in retributive intervention to overthrow the foes of God, 16:15; (2) of the Day of the Lord, in divine judgment upon the world, 2 Pet. 3:10 and 1 Thess. 5:2, 4; in v. 2, according to the order in the original "the word 'night' is not to be read with 'the day of the Lord,' but with 'thief,' i.e., there is no reference to the time of the coming, only to the manner of it. To avoid ambiguity the phrase may be paraphrased, 'so comes as a thief in the night comes.' The use of the present tense instead of the future emphasizes the certainty of the coming.... The unexpectedness of the coming of the thief, and the unpreparedness of those to whom he comes, are the essential elements in the figure; cf. the entirely different figure used in Matt. 25:1–13."¶*

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 153, 154.

2. lēstēs (λῃστής, 3027) is frequently rendered "thieves" in the KJV, e.g., Matt. 21:13. See ROBBER.

mēros (μηρός, 3382) occurs in Rev. 19:16; Christ appears there in the manifestation of His judicial capacity and action hereafter as the executor of divine vengeance upon the foes of God; His name is spoken of figuratively as being upon His "thigh" (where the sword would be worn; cf. Ps. 45:3), emblematic of His strength to tread down His foes, His action being the exhibition of His divine attributes of righteousness and power.¶

For THINE see THY

THING(S)

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word, an account," etc., is translated "thing" in Matt. 21:24, KJV (1st part), and Luke 20:3, KJV, RV, "question" (in Matt. 21:24, 2nd part, "these things" translates tauta, the neut. plur. of houtos, "this"); Luke 1:4; Acts 5:24, KJV (RV, "words") See ACCOUNT.

2. pragma (πρᾶγμα, 4229), for which see MATTER, No. 2, is translated "thing" in Matt. 18:19, as part of the word "anything," lit., "every thing"; Luke 1:1, KJV only; Acts 5:4; in Heb. 6:18; 10:1, and 11:1, "things." See BUSINESS, MATTER, WORK.

3. rhēma (ῥῆμα, 4487), "a saying, word," is translated "thing" in Luke 2:15; v. 19, KJV (RV, "saying"); in Acts 5:32, "things." See SAYING.

Notes: (1) The neuter sing. and plur. of the article are frequently rendered "the thing" and "the things"; so with tauta, "these things," the neut. plur. of houtos, "this." (2) So in the case of the neut. plur. of certain pronouns and adjectives without nouns, e.g., "all," "base," "heavenly," "which." (3) When "thing" represents a separate word in the original, it is a translation of one or other of Nos. 1, 2, 3, above. (4) In Phil. 2:10, "things" is added in italics to express the meaning of the three adjectives.

THINK

1. dokeō (δοκέω, 1380), "to suppose, to think, to form an opinion," which may be either right or wrong, is sometimes rendered "to think," e.g., Matt. 3:9; 6:7; see ACCOUNT, No. 1, SUPPOSE, No. 2.

2. hēgeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), for which see ACCOUNT, No. 3, is rendered "to think" in Acts 26:2; 2 Cor. 9:5, "I thought"; Phil. 2:6, KJV (RV, "counted"); 2 Pet. 1:13.

3. noeō (νοέω, 3539), "to perceive, understand, apprehend," is rendered "think" in Eph. 3:20. See PERCEIVE, UNDERSTAND.

4. huponoeō (ὑπονοέω, 5282), "to suppose, surmise" (hupo, "under," and No. 3), is rendered "to think" in Acts 13:25, KJV (RV, "suppose"). See DEEM.

5. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049), "to reckon," is rendered "to think," in Rom. 2:3, KJV (RV, "reckonest"); 1 Cor. 13:5, KJV, RV, "taketh (not) account of," i.e., love does not reckon up or calculatingly consider the evil done to it (something more than refraining from imputing motives); 13:11, "I thought"; in the following, for the KJV, "to think," in 2 Cor. 3:5, RV, "to account"; 10:2 (twice), "count"; 10:7, "consider"; 10:11, "reckon"; 12:6, "account." In Phil. 4:8, "think on (these things)," it signifies "make those things the subjects of your thoughtful consideration," or "carefully reflect on them" (RV marg., "take account of"). See ACCOUNT, A, No. 4.

6. nomizō (νομίζω, 3543), to suppose, is sometimes rendered to think, e.g., Matt. 5:17. See SUPPOSE, No. 1.

7. phroneō (φρονέω, 5426), "to be minded in a certain way" (phrēn, "the mind"), is rendered "to think," in Rom. 12:3 (2nd and 3rd occurrences), RV, "not to think of himself more highly (huperphroneō, see No. 13) than he ought to think (phroneō); but so to think (phroneō) as to think soberly [sōphroneō, see Note (3)]"; the play on words may be expressed by a literal rendering somewhat as follows: "not to over-think beyond what it behoves him to think, but to think unto sober-thinking"; in 1 Cor. 4:6, some inferior texts have this verb, hence the KJV "to think"; in the best texts, it is absent, hence the RV, puts "go" in italics; lit., the sentence is "that ye might learn the (i.e., the rule) not beyond what things have been written." The saying appears to be proverbial, perhaps a rabbinical adage. Since, however, graphō, "to write," was a current term for framing a law or an agreement (so Deissmann, Bible Studies, and Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.), it is quite possible that the apostle's meaning is "not to go beyond the terms of a teacher's commission, thinking more of himself than the character of his commission allows"; this accords with the context and the whole passage, 3:1–4:5. In Phil. 1:7, KJV, "to think" (RV, "to be . . . minded"). See AFFECTION, B, Note (1) and list there.

8. oiomai or oimai (οἴομαι, 3633), "to imagine," is rendered "I suppose" in John 21:25; "thinking" in Phil. 1:17, RV (v. 16, KJV, "supposing"); "let (not that man) think," Jas. 1:7. See SUPPOSE.¶

9. phainō (φαίνω, 5316), in the passive voice, "to appear," is rendered "(what) think (ye)" in Mark 14:64, lit., "what does it appear to you?" See APPEAR, No. 1.

10. eudokeō (εὐδοκέω, 2106), "to be well-pleasing," is rendered "we thought it good" in 1 Thess. 3:1. See PLEASE.

11. axioō (ἀξιόω, 515), "to regard as worthy" (axios), "to deem it suitable," is rendered "thought (not) good" in Acts 15:38. See WORTHY, B.

12. enthumeomai (ἐνθυμέομαι, 1760), "to reflect on, ponder," is used in Matt. 1:20; 9:4: see No. 14. Cf. enthumēsis, "consideration" (see THOUGHT).¶

13. huperphroneō (ὑπερφρονέω, 5252), "to be overproud, high-minded," occurs in Rom. 12:3, rendered "to think of himself more highly." See No. 7.¶

14. dienthumeomai (διενθυμέομαι, 1223 and 1760), "to consider deeply" (dia, "through," and No. 12), is used of Peter in Acts 10:19, in the best texts (some have No. 12).¶

15. epiballō (ἐπιβάλλω, 1911), "to throw oneself upon," is used metaphorically in Mark 14:72, "when he thought thereon (he wept)," lit., "thinking thereon," but "to think" is an exceptional sense of the word (see BEAT, CAST, LAY, PUT); hence various suggestions have been made. Field, following others, adopts the meaning "putting (his garment) over (his head)," as an expression of grief. Others regard it as having here the same meaning as archomai, "to begin" (at an early period, indeed, archomai was substituted in the text for the authentic epiballō); Moulton confirms this from a papyrus writing. Another suggestion is to understand it as with dianoian, mind, i.e., "casting his mind thereon."

Notes: (1) In Acts 26:8, KJV, krinō, "to judge, reckon," is translated "should it be thought" (RV, "is it judged"). (2) In Luke 12:17, KJV, dialogizomai, "to reason" (RV, "reasoned"), is translated "thought." (3) In Rom. 12:3, sōphroneō, "to think soberly," RV, is, lit., "unto sober thinking," the infinitive mood of the verb being used as a noun (KJV marg., "to sobriety"): Cf. No. 7. See SOBER, B, No. 2.

THIRD, THIRDLY

tritos (τρίτος, 5154) is used (a) as a noun, e.g., Luke 20:12, 31; in Rev. 8:7–12 and 9:15, 18, "the third part," lit., "the third"; (b) as an adverb, with the article, "the third time," e.g., Mark 14:41; John 21:17 (twice); without the article, lit., "a third time," e.g., John 21:14; 2 Cor. 12:14; 13:1; in enumerations, in Matt. 26:44, with ek, "from," lit., "from the third time" (the ek indicates the point of departure, especially in a succession of events, cf. John 9:24; 2 Pet. 2:8); absolutely, in the accusative neuter, in 1 Cor. 12:28, "thirdly"; (c) as an adjective (its primary use), e.g., in the phrase "the third heaven," 2 Cor. 12:2 [cf. HEAVEN, A, No. 1 (c), PARADISE]; in the phrase "the third hour," Matt. 20:3; Mark 15:25; Acts 2:15 ("... of the day"); 23:23 ("... of the night"); in a phrase with hēmera, "a day," "on the third day" (i.e., "the next day but one"), e.g., Matt. 16:21; Luke 24:46; Acts 10:40; in this connection the idiom "three days and three nights," Matt. 12:40, is explained by ref. to 1 Sam. 30:12, 13, and Esth. 4:16 with 5:1; in Mark 9:31 and 10:34, the RV, "after three days," follows the texts which have this phrase, the KJV, "the third day," those which have the same phrase as in Matt. 16:21, etc.

Note: For "third story," Acts 20:9, RV, see STORY.

THIRST (Noun and Verb), THIRSTY (to be), ATHIRST

A. Noun.

dipsos (δίψος, 1373), "thirst" (cf. Eng., "dipsomania"), occurs in 2 Cor. 11:27.¶

B. Verb.

dipsaō (διψάω, 1372) is used (a) in the natural sense, e.g., Matt. 25:35, 37, 42; in v. 44, "athirst" (lit., "thirsting"); John 4:13, 15; 19:28; Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 4:11; Rev. 7:16; (b) figuratively, of spiritual "thirst," Matt. 5:6; John 4:14; 6:35; 7:37; in Rev. 21:6 and 22:17, "that is athirst."

THIRTY, THIRTYFOLD

triakonta (τριάκοντα, 5144) is usually rendered "thirty," e.g., Matt. 13:23; "thirtyfold," in Matt. 13:8, KJV only; in Mark 4:8, RV only; in Mark 4:20, KJV and RV.

THIS, THESE

Note: The singular and plural translate various forms of the following: (1) houtos, which is used (a) as a noun, "this one," followed by no noun, e.g., Matt. 3:17; translated in Luke 2:34, "this child"; in 1 Cor. 5:3, RV, "this thing." (KJV, "this deed"); for "this fellow" see FELLOW, Note (3); in Acts 17:32 the RV rightly omits "matter"; in Heb. 4:5 "place" is italicized; it is frequently rendered "this man," e.g., Matt. 9:3; John 6:52; "of this sort," 2 Tim. 3:6, KJV (RV, "of these"); (b) as an adjective with a noun, either with the article and before it, e.g., Matt. 12:32, or after the noun (which is preceded by the article), e.g., Matt. 3:9 and 4:3, "these stones"; or without the article often forming a predicate, e.g., John 2:11; 2 Cor. 13:1; (2) ekeinos, "that one," rendered "this" in Matt. 24:43; (3) autos; "he," rendered "this" in Matt. 11:14, lit., "he"; in John 12:7, KJV (RV, "it"); in the feminine, Luke 13:16; (4) the article ho, Matt. 21:21 (to, the neuter), KJV (RV, "what"); in Rom. 13:9 (1st part); Gal. 5:14; Heb. 12:27, the article to is virtually equivalent to "the following."

The demonstrative pronouns THAT and the plural THOSE translate the same pronouns (1), (2), (3) mentioned above. In Heb. 7:21, KJV, "those" translates the article, which requires the RV, "they."

tribolos (τρίβολος, 5146) occurs in Matt. 7:16 and Heb. 6:8 (KJV, "briers").¶ In the Sept., Gen. 3:18; 2 Sam. 12:31; Prov. 22:5; Hos. 10:8.¶ Cf. THORNS.

For THITHER, THITHERWARD see THERE

Note: In John 7:34, 36, KJV, hopou, "where" (RV) is amplified by the italicized word "thither."

For THONG see LATCHET

THORN, THORNS (of)

A. Nouns.

1. akantha (ἄκανθα, 173), "a brier, a thorn" (from akē, "a point"), is always used in the plural in the NT, Matt. 7:16 and parallel passage in Luke 6:44; Matt. 13:7 (twice), 22 and parallels in Mark and Luke; in Matt. 27:29 and John 19:2, of the crown of "thorns" placed on Christ's head (see also B) in mock imitation of the garlands worn by emperors. They were the effects of the divine curse on the ground (Gen. 3:18; contrast Isa. 55:13). The "thorns" of the crown plaited by the soldiers, are usually identified with those of the Zizyphus spina Christi, some 20 feet high or more, fringing the Jordan and abundant in Palestine; its twigs are flexible. Another species, however, the Arabian qundaul, crowns of which are plaited and sold in Jerusalem as representatives of Christ's crown, seems likely to be the one referred to. The branches are easily woven and adapted to the torture intended. The word akantha occurs also in Heb. 6:8.¶

2. skolops (σκόλοψ, 4647) originally denoted "anything pointed," e.g., "a stake"; in Hellenistic vernacular, "a thorn" (so the Sept., in Num. 33:55; Ezek. 28:24; Hos. 2:6¶), 2 Cor. 12:7, of the apostle's "thorn in the flesh"; his language indicates that it was physical, painful, humiliating; it was also the effect of divinely permitted Satanic antagonism; the verbs rendered "that I should (not) be exalted overmuch" (RV) and "to buffet" are in the present tense, signifying recurrent action, indicating a constantly repeated attack. Lightfoot interprets it as "a stake driven through the flesh," and Ramsay agrees with this. Most commentators adhere to the rendering "thorn." Field says "there is no doubt that the Alexandrine use of skolops for thorn is here intended, and that the ordinary meaning of 'stake' must be rejected." What is stressed is not the metaphorical size, but the acuteness of the suffering and its effects. Attempts to connect this with the circumstances of Acts 14:19 and Gal. 4:13 are speculative.¶

B. Adjective.

akanthinos (ἀκάνθινος, 174), "of thorns" (from A, No. 1), is used in Mark 15:17 and John 19:5.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 34:13.¶

THOROUGHLY (THROUGHLY)

Note: This is usually part of the translation of a verb, e.g., CLEANSE, FURNISH, PURGE. In 2 Cor. 11:6, the phrase en panti, "in everything," RV, is translated "throughly" in the KJV.

For THOSE see THIS (last part of Note)

THOU

Note: Frequently this forms part of the translation of a verb in the 2nd person, singular. Otherwise it translates (a) the pronoun su, used for emphasis or contrast, e.g., John 1:19, 21 (twice), 25, 42 (twice); 8:5, 13, 25, 33, 48, 52, 53; Acts 9:5; in addressing a person or place, e.g., Matt. 2:6; Luke 1:76; John 17:5; perhaps also in the phrase su eipas, "thou hast said," e.g., Matt. 26:64 (sometimes without emphasis, e.g., Acts 13:33); (b) in the oblique cases, e.g., the dative soi, lit., "to thee," e.g., Matt. 17:25, "what thinkest thou?" (lit., "what does it seem to thee?"); (c) autos, "self," e.g., Luke 6:42; Acts 21:24, "thou thyself"; (d) the reflexive pronoun, seauton, Rom. 2:19, "thou thyself."

For THOUGH see †, p. 1

For THOUGHT (Verb) see THINK

THOUGHT (Noun)

1. epinoia (ἐπίνοια, 1963), "a thought by way of a design" (akin to epinoeō, "to contrive," epi, intensive, noeō, "to consider"), is used in Acts 8:22.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 20:10.¶

2. noēma (νόημα, 3540), "a purpose, device of the mind" (akin to noeō, see No. 1), is rendered "thought" in 2 Cor. 10:5, "thoughts" in Phil. 4:7, RV: see DEVICE, No. 2.

3. dianoēma (διανόημα, 1270), "a thought," occurs in Luke 11:17, where the sense is that of "machinations."¶

4. enthumēsis (ἐνθύμησις, 1761), is translated "thoughts" in Matt. 9:4; 12:25; Heb. 4:12: see DEVICE, No. 1.

5. logismos (λογισμός, 3053) is translated "thoughts" in Rom. 2:15: see IMAGINATION, No. 1.

6. dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261), "reasoning," is translated "thoughts" in Matt. 15:19; Mark 7:21; Luke 2:35; 6:8; in 5:22, KJV, RV, "reasonings"; in 9:47, KJV, RV, "reasoning," and 24:38, KJV, RV, "reasonings"; so 1 Cor. 3:20; in Luke 9:46, KJV and RV, "reasoning"; "thoughts" in Jas. 2:4, KJV and RV. See DISPUTE, IMAGINATION, REASONING.

THOUGHT (to take)

1. merimnaō (μεριμνάω, 3309) denotes "to be anxious, careful." For the KJV, "to take thought," the RV substitutes "to be anxious" in Matt. 6:25, 27, 28, 31, 34; 10:19; Luke 12:11, 22, 25, 26, See CARE, B, No. 1.

2. promerimnaō (προμεριμνάω, 4305), "to be anxious beforehand," occurs in Mark 13:11.¶

3. phroneō (φρονέω, 5426): for Phil. 4:10, RV, "ye did take thought," see CARE, B, No. 6.

4. pronoeō (προνοέω, 4306), "to provide," is rendered "to take thought" in Rom. 12:17 and 2 Cor. 8:21. See PROVIDE.

THOUSAND (-S)

1. chilioi (χίλιοι, 5507), "a thousand," occurs in 2 Pet. 3:8; Rev. 11:3; 12:6; 14:20; 20:2–7.¶

2. chilias (χιλιάς, 5505), "one thousand," is always used in the plural, chiliades, but translated in the sing. everywhere, except in the phrase "thousands of thousands," Rev. 5:11.

Notes: (1) The following compounds of No. 1 represent different multiples of a thousand: dischilioi, 2,000, Mark 5:13;¶ trischilioi, 3,000, Acts 2:41;¶ tetrakischilioi, 4,000, Matt. 15:38; 16:10; Mark 8:9, 20; Acts 21:38;¶ pentakischilioi, 5,000, Matt. 14:21; 16:9; Mark 6:44; 18:19; Luke 9:14; John 6:10;¶ heptakischilioi, 7,000, Rom. 11:4.¶ (2) Murias, "a myriad, a vast number," "many thousands," Luke 12:1, RV; Acts 21:20; it also denotes 10,000, Acts 19:19, lit., "five ten-thousands"; Jude 14, "ten thousands"; in Rev. 5:11 "ten thousand times ten thousand" is, lit., "myriads of myriads"; in Rev. 9:16 in the best texts, dismuriades muriadōn, "twice ten thousand times ten thousand" RV (KJV, "two hundred thousand thousand"): see INNUMERABLE. (3) Murioi (the plur. of murios), an adjective signifying "numberless," is used in this indefinite sense in 1 Cor. 4:15 and 14:19; it also denotes the definite number "ten thousand," Matt. 18:24.¶

THREATEN

1. apeileō (ἀπειλέω, 546) is used of Christ, negatively, in 1 Pet. 2:23; in the middle voice, Acts 4:17, where some texts have the noun apeilē in addition, hence the KJV, "let us straitly threaten," lit., "let us threaten ... with threatening" (see THREATENING).¶ (See also STRAITLY.)

2. prosapeileō (προσαπειλέω, 4324), "to threaten further" (pros, and No. 1), occurs in the middle voice in Acts 4:21.¶

apeilē (ἀπειλή, 547), akin to apeileō (see above), occurs in Acts 4:29 (in some mss. v. 17); 9:1; Eph. 6:9.¶

treis (τρεῖς, 5143) is regarded by many as a number sometimes symbolically indicating fullness of testimony or manifestation, as in the three persons in the Godhead, cf. 1 Tim. 5:19; Heb. 10:28; the mention in 1 John 5:7 is in a verse which forms no part of the original; no Greek ms. earlier than the 14th century contained it; no version earlier than the 5th cent. in any other language contains it, nor is it quoted by any of the Greek or Latin "Fathers" in their writings on the Trinity. That there are those who bear witness in Heaven is not borne out by any other Scripture. It must be regarded as the interpolation of a copyist.

In Mark 9:31 and 10:34 the best texts have meta treis hemeras, "after three days," which idiomatically expresses the same thing as tȩ̄ tritȩ̄ hēmerą, "on the third day," which some texts have here, as, e.g., the phrase "the third day" in Matt. 17:23; 20:19; Luke 9:22; 18:33, where the repetition of the article lends stress to the number, lit., "the day the third"; 24:7, 46; Acts 10:40. For THREE TIMES see THRICE.

THREE HUNDRED

triakosioi (τριακόσιοι, 5145) occurs in Mark 14:5 and John 12:5.¶

For THREESCORE see SIXTY and SEVENTY

For THREE THOUSAND see THOUSAND

THRESH

aloaō (ἀλοάω, 248), "to thresh," is so rendered in 1 Cor. 9:10; in v. 9 and 1 Tim. 5:18, "that treadeth out the corn."¶

THRESHING FLOOR

halōn (ἅλων, 257), "a threshing floor," is so translated in Matt. 3:12, and Luke 3:17, RV (KJV, "floor"), perhaps by metonymy for the grain.¶

For THREW see THROW

tris (τρίς, 5151) occurs in Matt. 26:34, 75 and parallel passages; in Acts 10:16 and 11:10, preceded by epi, "up to"; 2 Cor. 11:25 (twice); 12:8.

THROAT (Noun), to take by the (Verb)

A. Noun.

larunx (λάρυγξ, 2995), "a throat" (Eng., "larynx"), is used metaphorically of "speech" in Rom. 3:13.¶

B. Verb.

pnigō (πνίγω, 4155), "to choke," is rendered "took ... by the throat" in Matt. 18:28. See CHOKE, No. 1.

THRONE

1. thronos (θρόνος, 2362), "a throne, a seat of authority," is used of the "throne" (a) of God, e.g., Heb. 4:16, "the throne of grace," i.e., from which grace proceeds; 8:1; 12:2; Rev. 1:4; 3:21 (2nd part); 4:2 (twice); 5:1; frequently in Rev.; in 20:12, in the best texts, "the throne" (some have Theos, "God," KJV); cf. 21:3; Matt. 5:34; 23:22; Acts 7:49; (b) of Christ, e.g. Heb. 1:8; Rev 3:21 (1st part); 22:3; His seat of authority in the Millennium, Matt. 19:28 (1st part); (c) by metonymy for angelic powers, Col. 1:16; (d) of the Apostles in millennial authority, Matt. 19:28 (2nd part); Luke 22:30; (e) of the elders in the heavenly vision, Rev. 4:4 (2nd and 3rd parts), RV, "thrones" (KJV, "seats"); so 11:16; (f) of David, Luke 1:32; Acts 2:30; (g) of Satan, Rev. 2:13, RV, "throne" (KJV, "seat"); (h) of "the beast," the final and federal head of the revived Roman Empire, Rev. 13:2; 16:10.

2. bēma (βῆμα, 968), for which see JUDGMENT SEAT, is used of the throne or tribunal of Herod, Acts 12:21.

THRONG (Verb)

1. thlibō (θλίβω, 2346), "to press," is rendered "throng," Mark 3:9. See AFFLICT, No. 4.

2. sunthlibō (συνθλίβω, 4918), "to press together," on all sides (sun, "together," and No. 1), a strengthened form, is used in Mark 5:24, 31.¶

3. sumpnigō (συμπνίγω, 4846), "to choke," is used of "thronging" by a crowd, Luke 8:42. See CHOKE, No. 3.

Note: For sunechō, "to hold together, press together," Luke 8:45 (KJV, "throng"), see PRESS.

For THROUGH and THROUGHOUT see †, p. 1

For THROUGHLY see THOROUGHLY

THROW

1. ballō (βάλλω, 906), "to cast, to throw," is rendered "to throw" in Mark 12:42, KJV (RV, "cast"); so Acts 22:23 (2nd part); "to throw down," Rev. 18:21 (2nd part), KJV (RV, "cast down"). See CAST, No. 1.

2. rhiptō (ῥίπτω, 4496), "to hurl, throw, throw off," is rendered "had thrown . . . down" in Luke 4:35, RV (KJV, "had thrown"). See CAST, No. 2.

3. katakrēmnizō (κατακρημνίζω, 2630), "to throw over a precipice" (krēmnos), "cast down headlong," is rendered "throw . . . down" in Luke 4:29 (KJV, "cast . . . down headlong").¶

4. kataluō (καταλύω, 2647), lit., "to loosen down," is rendered "to throw down" (of the stones of the Temple) in Matt. 24:2 and parallel passages. See DESTROY, No. 5.

THRUST

1. ballō (βάλλω, 906), for which cf. THROW, No. 1, is rendered "to thrust" in John 20:25, 27, KJV (RV, "put"); Acts 16:24, KJV (RV, "cast"); so Rev. 14:16, 19. See CAST, No. 1.

2. ekballō (ἐκβάλλω, 1544), "to cast out," is rendered "thrust . . . out" in Luke 4:29, KJV (RV, "cast . . . forth"); so 13:28 and Acts 16:37. See CAST, No. 5.

3. apōtheō (ἀπωθέω, 638), "to thrust away," is used in the middle voice, "to thrust away from oneself," and translated "thrust away" in Acts 7:27, 39; "thrust . . . from," 13:46, RV (KJV, "put . . . from"); "having thrust from them," 1 Tim. 1:19, RV (KJV, "having put away"). See CAST, No. 13.

4. katatoxeuō (κατατοξεύω, 2700), "to strike down with an arrow, shoot dead," occurs in Heb. 12:20 in some mss. (in a quotation from Ex. 19:13, Sept.).¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 11:23 and Luke 10:15 the best texts have katabainō, "to go down" (RV), instead of katabibazō, in the passive voice, "to be thrust down or brought down" (KJV). (2) In Acts 27:39, KJV, exōtheō, "to drive out," is rendered "to thrust in," RV, "drive (the ship) upon (it [i.e., the beach])." (3) In Rev. 14:15, 18, KJV, pempō, to send (RV, "send forth"), is translated "thrust in." (4) For Luke 5:3, KJV, see LAUNCH, No. 2.

THUNDER, THUNDERING

brontē (βροντή, 1027): in Mark 3:17 "sons of thunder" is the interpretation of Boanērges, the name applied by the Lord to James and John; their fiery disposition is seen in 9:38 and Luke 9:54; perhaps in the case of James it led to his execution. The name and its interpretation have caused much difficulty; some suggest the meaning "the twins." It is however most probably the equivalent of the Aramaic benê regesh, "sons of tumult"; the latter of the two words was no doubt used of "thunder" in Palestinian Aramaic; hence the meaning "the sons of thunder"; the cognate Hebrew word ragash, "to rage," is used in Ps. 2:1 and there only. In John 12:29 brontē is used with ginomai, "to take place," and rendered "it had thundered"; lit., "there was thunder"; elsewhere, Rev. 4:5; 6:1; 8:5; 10:3, 4; 11:19; 14:2; 16:18; 19:6.¶

houtōs or houtō (οὕτως, 3779), "in this way, so, thus," is used (a) with reference to what precedes, e.g., Luke 1:25; 2:48; (b) with reference to what follows, e.g., Luke 19:31, rendered "on this wise," in Matt. 1:18; John 21:1, and before quotations, Acts 7:6; 13:34; Rom. 10:6, KJV (RV, "thus"); Heb. 4:4; (c) marking intensity, rendered "so," e.g., Gal. 1:6; Heb. 12:21; Rev. 16:18; (d) in comparisons, rendered "so," e.g., Luke 11:30; Rom. 5:15. See FASHION, B, LIKEWISE, Note (1), MANNER, C, No. 2, SO, Note (1).

Notes: (1) Touto, the neuter of houtos, "this," is translated "thus" in 2 Cor. 1:17; 5:14; Phil. 3:15; the neuter plural, tauta, "these things," e.g., in Luke 18:11; 19:28; John 9:6; 11:43; 13:21; 20:14; Acts 19:41. (2) Tade, these things (the neuter plural of hode, "this"), is translated "thus" in Acts 21:11. (3) In Luke 17:30, KJV, kata tauta, lit., "according to these things," is rendered "thus" (RV, "after the same manner," follows the reading kata ta auta, lit., "according to the same things").

THY, THINE, THINE OWN, THYSELF

Note: These are translations of (1) the possessive pronoun sos, and its inflections, e.g., Matt. 7:3 (1st part); it is used as a noun with the article, in the phrases to son, "that which is thine," Matt. 20:14; 25:25, "thine own"; hoi soi, "thy friends," Mark 5:19; ta sa, "thy goods," Luke 6:30, lit., "the thine"; (2) one of the oblique cases of su, "thou"; sou, "of thee," e.g., Matt. 1:20; 7:3 (2nd part), "thine own"; soi, "to thee," e.g., Mark 5:9; with menō, "to remain," Acts 5:4 (1st part), "thine own," lit., "remain to thee"; in Matt. 26:18, pros se, "at thy house," lit., "with thee"; (3) seauton, "(as) thyself," Rom. 13:9; seautou, "of thyself," e.g., Matt. 4:6; seautō, "to thyself," Acts 16:28; (4) heautou (with apo, "from"), John 18:34, "of thyself," lit., "from thyself"; (5) autos, "self," is sometimes used for "thyself," e.g., Luke 6:42.

THYINE (WOOD)

thuïnos (θύϊνος, 2367) is akin to thuia, or thua, an African aromatic and coniferous tree; in Rev. 18:12 it describes a wood which formed part of the merchandise of Babylon; it was valued by Greeks and Romans for tables, being hard, durable and fragrant (KJV marg., "sweet").¶

TIDINGS

A. Noun.

phasis (φάσις, 5334), akin to phēmi, "to speak," denotes "information," especially against fraud or other delinquency, and is rendered "tidings" in Acts 21:31.¶

Note: In Acts 11:22, KJV, logos, "a word, a report" (RV), is rendered "tidings."

B. Verbs.

1. euangelizō (εὐαγγελίζω, 2097) is used of any message designed to cheer those who receive it; it is rendered "to bring, declare, preach," or "show good or glad tidings," e.g., Luke 1:19; 2:10; 3:18, RV; 4:43, RV; 7:22, RV; 8:1; Acts 8:12 and 10:36, RV; 14:15, RV; in 1 Thess. 3:6, "brought us glad (KJV, good) tidings"; in Heb. 4:2, RV, "we have had good tidings preached"; similarly, 4:6; in 1 Pet. 1:25 rhēma, "a word," is coupled with this verb, "the word of good tidings which was preached," RV (KJV, "the word which by the gospel is preached"). See PREACH, A, No. 1.

2. anangellō (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), "to announce, declare," is rendered "(no) tidings . . . came," in Rom. 15:21, RV, KJV, "was (not) spoken of." See TELL.

TIE

1. deō (δέω, 1210), "to bind," is rendered "to tie" in Matt. 21:2; Mark 11:2, 4; Luke 19:30. See BIND.

2. proteinō (προτείνω, 4385), "to stretch out or forth," is used of preparations for scourging, Acts 22:25, RV, "had tied (him) up" (KJV, "bound").¶

TILES, TILING

keramos (κέραμος, 2766), "potter's clay," or "an earthen vessel," denotes in the plural "tiles" in Luke 5:19, RV, KJV, "tiling."¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 17:28.¶

For TILL (Conjunction) see †, p. 1

geōrgeō (γεωργέω, 1090), "to till the ground," is used in the passive voice in Heb. 6:7, RV, "it is tilled" (KJV, " . . . dressed").¶ Moulton and Milligan point out that, agriculture being the principal industry in Egypt, this word and its cognates (geōrgion, see HUSBANDRY, and geōrgos, see HUSBANDMAN) are very common in the papyri with reference to the cultivation of private allotments and the crown lands.

TIME

A. Nouns.

1. chronos (χρόνος, 5550) denotes "a space of time," whether short, e.g., Matt. 2:7; Luke 4:5, or long, e.g., Luke 8:27; 20:9; or a succession of "times," shorter, e.g., Acts 20:18, or longer, e.g., Rom. 16:25, RV, "times eternal"; or duration of "time," e.g., Mark 2:19, 2nd part, RV, "while" (KJV, "as long as"), lit., "for whatever time." For a fuller treatment see SEASON, A, No. 2.

2. kairos (καιρός, 2540), primarily "due measure, due proportion," when used of "time," signified "a fixed or definite period, a season," sometimes an opportune or seasonable "time," e.g., Rom. 5:6, RV, "season"; Gal. 6:10, "opportunity." In Mark 10:30 and Luke 18:30, "this time" (kairos), i.e., "in this lifetime," is contrasted with "the coming age." In 1 Thess. 5:1, "the times and the seasons," "times" (chronos) refers to the duration of the interval previous to the Parousia of Christ and the length of "time" it will occupy (see COMING, No. 3), as well as other periods; "seasons" refers to the characteristics of these periods. See SEASON, A, No. 1, and the contrasts between chronos and kairos under SEASON, A, No. 2.

3. hōra (ὥρα, 5610), primarily, "any time or period fixed by nature," is translated "time" in Matt. 14:15; Luke 14:17; Rom. 13:11, "high time"; in the following the RV renders it "hour," for KJV, "time," Matt. 18:1; Luke 1:10; John 16:2, 4, 25; 1 John 2:18 (twice); Rev. 14:15; in Mark 6:35, RV, "day"; in 1 Thess. 2:17, RV, "a short (season)," lit., "(the season, KJV, 'time') of an hour." See HOUR.

B. Adverbs.

1. pōpote (πώποτε, 4455), "ever yet," is rendered "at any time" in John 1:18; 5:37; 1 John 4:12. For Luke 15:29 see Note (14) below. See NEVER.

2. ēdē (ἤδη, 2235), "already, now," is translated "by this time" in John 11:39. See ALREADY.

3. palai (πάλαι, 3819), "long ago, of old," is rendered "of old time" in Heb. 1:1 (KJV, "in time past"). See OLD.

Notes: (1) In Luke 9:51 and Acts 8:1, KJV, hēmera, "a day," is translated "time," in the former, plural, RV, "the days"; in Luke 23:7 (plural), RV "(in these) days," KJV, "(at that) time." (2) In 1 Tim. 6:19 the phrase eis to mellon, lit., "unto the about-to-be," i.e., "for the impending (time)," is rendered "against the time to come." (3) In 1 Cor. 16:12, KJV, nun, "now" (RV), is rendered "at this time"; in Acts 24:25, the phrase to nun echon, lit., "the now having," is rendered "at this time" (the verb is adjectival); the phrase is more expressive than the simple "now." Cf. heōs tou nun, "until now," Matt. 24:21 and Mark 13:19, RV, KJV, "unto (this time)." (4) For polumerōs, strangely rendered "at sundry times," in Heb. 1:1, KJV, see PORTION, C. (5) For "long time," see LONG. (6) For "nothing . . . at any time," see NOTHING, Note (3). (7) For proskairos, rendered "for a time" in Mark 4:17, KJV, see SEASON, WHILE. (8) In Matt., apo tote, "from that time," lit., "from then," occurs thrice, 4:17; 16:21; 26:16; in Luke 16:16, RV (KJV, "since that time"); in John 6:66, KJV, "from that time" translates ek toutou, lit., "from, or out of, this," RV, "upon this." (9) In Luke 4:27, the preposition epi signifies "in the time of." (10) For genea, rendered "times" in Acts 14:16, "time" in 15:21, see AGE, No. 2 (RV, "generations"). (11) For "at every time," 2 Pet. 1:15, RV, see ALWAYS, No. 2. (12) For "in time of need," Heb. 4:16, see CONVENIENT, and NEED, C, Note. (13) In Heb. 2:1, pote signifies "at any time"; in 1 Pet. 3:5, "in the old time"; in 2 Pet. 1:21, "in old time." See PAST. In the following where the KJV has "sometimes" the RV has "once" in Eph. 2:13 and 5:8; "aforetime" in Titus 3:3. (14) In Luke 15:29, KJV, oudepote, "never," is rendered "neither . . . at any time" (RV, "never"). (15) For eukaireō, "to spend time," Acts 17:21, see SPEND, No. 10. (16) For chronotribeō, "to spend time," see SPEND, No. 11. (17) For prolegō, rendered "told . . . in time past," in Gal. 5:21, KJV, see FOREWARN. (18) In Luke 12:1, "in the mean time" is a rendering of the phrase en hois, lit., "in which (things or circumstances)." (19) In Rev. 5:11 there is no word representing "times": see THOUSAND, Note (2). (20) In Gal. 4:2 prothesmios (in its feminine form, with hēmera, "day," understood) is rendered "time appointed" (see APPOINT, No. 3 and Note, TERM).

For TINKLING see CLANGING akron (ἄκρον, 206), "the top, an extremity," is translated "tip" in Luke 16:24. See END, C, Note (6), TOP.

TIP

For TITHES (Noun) see TENTH, No. 2

TITHE (Verb)

1. dekatoō (δεκατόω, 1183), from dekatos, "tenth", in the active voice denotes "to take tithes of," Heb. 7:6, RV, "hath taken (KJV, received) tithes"; in the passive, "to pay tithes," 7:9, RV, "hath paid (KJV, 'payed') tithes."¶ In the Sept., Neh. 10:37.¶

2. apodekatoō (ἀποδεκατόω, 586) denotes (a) "to tithe" (apo, "from," dekatos, "tenth"), Matt. 23:23 (KJV, "pay tithe of"); Luke 11:42; in Luke 18:12 (where the best texts have the alternative form apodekateuō), "I give tithes"; (b) "to exact tithes" from Heb. 7:5.¶

3. apodekateuō (ἀποδεκατεύω, 586v), "to give tithes," in Luke 18:12 (some texts have No. 2).¶

Note: Heb. 7:4–9 shows the superiority of the Melchizedek priesthood to the Levitical, in that (1) Abraham, the ancestor of the Levites, paid "tithes" to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:20); (2) Melchizedek, whose genealogy is outside that of the Levites, took "tithes" of Abraham, the recipient himself of the divine promises; (3) whereas death is the natural lot of those who receive "tithes," the death of Melchizedek is not recorded; (4) the Levites who received "tithes" virtually paid them through Abraham to Melchizedek.

TITLE

titlos (τίτλος, 5102), from Latin titulus, is used of the inscription above the cross of Christ, John 19:19, 20. See SUPERSCRIPTION.¶

keraia or kerea (κεραία, 2762), "a little horn" (keras, "a horn"), was used to denote the small stroke distinguishing one Hebrew letter from another. The rabbis attached great importance to these; hence the significance of the Lord's statements in Matt. 5:18 and Luke 16:17, charging the Pharisees with hypocrisy, because, while professing the most scrupulous reverence to the Law, they violated its spirit.

Grammarians used the word to denote the accents in Greek words.¶

For TO see †, p. 1

TODAY, THIS DAY

sēmeron (σήμερον, 4594), an adverb (the Attic form is tēmeron), akin to hēmera, a day, with the prefix t originally representing a pronoun. It is used frequently in Matthew, Luke and Acts; in the last it is always rendered "this day"; also in Heb. 1:5, and the RV of 5:5 (KJV, "to day") in the same quotation; "today" in 3:7, 13, 15; 4:7 (twice); 13:8; also Jas. 4:13.

The clause containing sēmeron is sometimes introduced by the conjunction hoti, "that," e.g., Mark 14:30; Luke 4:21; 19:9; sometimes without the conjunction, e.g., Luke 22:34; 23:43, where "today" is to be attached to the next statement, "shalt thou be with Me"; there are no grammatical reasons for the insistence that the connection must be with the statement "Verily I say unto thee," nor is such an idea necessitated by examples from either the Sept. or the NT; the connection given in the KJV and RV is right.

In Rom. 11:8 and 2 Cor. 3:14, 15, the lit. rendering is "unto the today day," the emphasis being brought out by the RV, "unto (until) this very day."

In Heb. 4:7, the "today" of Ps. 95:7 is evidently designed to extend to the present period of the Christian faith.

TOGETHER

1. homou (ὁμοῦ, 3674), used in connection with place, in John 21:2; Acts 2:1 (in the best texts), RV, "together" (KJV, "with one accord," translating the inferior reading homothumadon: see ACCORD, A), is used without the idea of place in John 4:36; 20:4.¶

2. hama (ἅμα, 260), "at once," is translated "together" in Rom. 3:12; 1 Thess. 4:17; 5:10. See EARLY, Note, WITHAL.

Notes: (1) For pamplēthei, Luke 23:18, RV, see ONCE, Note. (2) In 1 Thess. 5:11, KJV, allēlous, "one another" (RV), is rendered "yourselves together"; in Luke 23:12, KJV, meta allēlōn, lit., "with one another," is rendered "together" (RV, "with each other"); so in Luke 24:14, KJV, pros allēlous, RV, "with each other." (3) In the following, "together" translates the phrase epi to auto, lit., "to (upon, or for) the same," Matt. 22:34; Luke 17:35; Acts 1:15; 2:44 (3:1, in some texts); 4:26; 1 Cor. 7:5; 14:23, RV: see PLACE, A, Note (7). (4) In Acts 14:1, it translates kata to auto, "at the same"; it may mean "in the same way" (i.e., as they had entered the synagogue at Pisidian Antioch). (5) In many cases "together" forms part of another word.

TOIL (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. kopiaō (κοπιάω, 2872), "to be weary, to labor," is rendered "to toil" in Matt. 6:28; Luke 5:5 (12:27, in some mss.); in 1 Cor. 4:12, RV (KJV, "we labor"). See LABOR.

2. basanizō (βασανίζω, 928), primarily, "to rub on the touchstone, to put to the test," then, "to examine by torture" (basanos, "touchstone, torment"), hence denotes "to torture, torment, distress"; in the passive voice it is rendered "toiling" in Mark 6:48, KJV (RV, "distressed"). See PAIN, TORMENT, VEX.

B. Noun.

kopos (κόπος, 2873), "labor, trouble," is rendered "toil" in Rev. 2:2, RV (KJV, "labor"). See LABOR.

TOKEN

1. sēmeion (σημεῖον, 4592), "a sign, token or indication," is translated "token" in 2 Thess. 3:17, of writing of the closing salutations, the apostle using the pen himself instead of his amanuensis, his autograph attesting the authenticity of his Epistles. See MIRACLE, SIGN.

2. sussēmon (σύσσημον, 4953), "a fixed sign or signal, agreed upon with others" (sun, "with"), is used in Mark 14:44, "a token."¶ In the Sept., Judg. 20:38, 40; Isa. 5:26; 49:22; 62:10.¶

3. endeigma (ἔνδειγμα, 1730), "a plain token, a proof" (akin to endeiknumi, "to point out, prove"), is used in 2 Thess. 1:5 "a manifest token," said of the patient endurance and faith of the persecuted saints at Thessalonica, affording proof to themselves of their new life, and a guarantee of the vindication by God of both Himself and them (see No. 4, Note).¶

4. endeixis (ἔνδειξις, 1732), "a pointing out, showing forth," is rendered "evident token" in Phil. 1:28. See DECLARE, B, PROOF. Cf. apodeixis, 1 Cor. 2:4.

Note: No. 4 refers to the act or process of proving, No. 3 to the thing proved. While the two passages, Phil. 1:28 and 2 Thess. 1:5, contain similar ideas, endeigma indicates the "token" as acknowledged by those referred to; endeixis points more especially to the inherent veracity of the "token."

TOLERABLE

anektos (ἀνεκτός, 414) (akin to anechō, in the middle voice, "to endure," see ENDURE, No. 5) is used in its comparative form, anektoteros, in Matt. 10:15; 11:22, 24; Luke 10:12, 14; some texts have it in Mark 6:11.¶

For TOLL see CUSTOM (Toll)

TOMB

1. mnēmeion (μνημεῖον, 3419) is almost invariably rendered "tomb" or "tombs" in the RV, never "grave," sometimes "sepulchre"; in the KJV, "tomb" in Matt. 8:28; 27:60; Mark 5:2; 6:29. See GRAVE No. 1, SEPULCHRE.

2. mnēma (μνῆμα, 3418), rendered "tombs" in Mark 5:3, 5; Luke 8:27: see GRAVE, No. 2, SEPULCHRE.

3. taphos (τάφος, 5028), akin to thaptō, "to bury," is translated "tombs" in Matt. 23:29; elsewhere "sepulchre." See SEPULCHRE.

aurion (αὔριον, 839) is used either without the article, e.g., Matt. 6:30; 1 Cor. 15:32; Jas. 4:13; or with the article in the feminine form, to agree with hēmera, "day," e.g., Matt. 6:34; Acts 4:3, RV, "the morrow" (KJV, "next day"); Jas. 4:14; preceded by epi, "on," e.g., Luke 10:35; Acts 4:5.

TONGUE (-S)

A. Nouns.

1. glōssa (γλῶσσα, 1100) is used of (1) the "tongues . . . like as of fire" which appeared at Pentecost; (2) "the tongue," as an organ of speech, e.g., Mark 7:33; Rom. 3:13; 14:11; 1 Cor. 14:9; Phil. 2:11; Jas. 1:26; 3:5, 6, 8; 1 Pet. 3:10; 1 John 3:18; Rev. 16:10; (3) (a) "a language," coupled with phulē, "a tribe," laos, "a people," ethnos, "a nation," seven times in the Apocalypse, 5:9; 7:9; 10:11; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6; 17:15; (b) "the supernatural gift of speaking in another language without its having been learnt"; in Acts 2:4–13 the circumstances are recorded from the viewpoint of the hearers; to those in whose language the utterances were made it appeared as a supernatural phenomenon; to others, the stammering of drunkards; what was uttered was not addressed primarily to the audience but consisted in recounting "the mighty works of God"; cf. 2:46; in 1 Cor., chapters 12 and 14, the use of the gift of "tongues" is mentioned as exercised in the gatherings of local churches; 12:10 speaks of the gift in general terms, and couples with it that of "the interpretation of tongues"; chapt. 14 gives instruction concerning the use of the gift, the paramount object being the edification of the church; unless the "tongue" was interpreted the speaker would speak "not unto men, but unto God," v. 2; he would edify himself alone, v. 4, unless he interpreted, v. 5, in which case his interpretation would be of the same value as the superior gift of prophesying, as he would edify the church, vv. 4–6; he must pray that he may interpret, v. 13; if there were no interpreter, he must keep silence, v. 28, for all things were to be done "unto edifying," v. 26. "If I come . . . speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you," says the apostle (expressing the great object in all oral ministry), "unless I speak to you either by way of revelation, or of knowledge, or of prophesying, or of teaching?" (v. 6). "Tongues" were for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers, v. 22, and especially to unbelieving Jews (see v. 21): cf. the passages in the Acts.

There is no evidence of the continuance of this gift after apostolic times nor indeed in the later times of the apostles themselves; this provides confirmation of the fulfillment in this way of 1 Cor. 13:8, that this gift would cease in the churches, just as would "prophecies" and "knowledge" in the sense of knowledge received by immediate supernatural power (cf. 14:6). The completion of the Holy Scriptures has provided the churches with all that is necessary for individual and collective guidance, instruction, and edification.

2. dialektos (διάλεκτος, 1258), "language" (Eng., "dialect"), is rendered "tongue" in the KJV of Acts 1:19; 2:6, 8; 21:40; 22:2; 26:14. See LANGUAGE.¶

B. Adjective.

heteroglōssos (ἑτερόγλωσσος, 2084) is rendered "strange tongues" in 1 Cor. 14:21, RV (heteros, "another of a different sort"—see ANOTHER— and A, No. 1), KJV, "other tongues."¶

C. Adverb.

hebraisti (or ebraisti, Westcott and Hort) (Ἑβραϊστί, 1447) denotes (a) "in Hebrew," Rev. 9:11, RV (KJV, "in the Hebrew tongue"); so 16:16; (b) in the Aramaic vernacular of Palestine, John 5:2, KJV, "in the Hebrew tongue" (RV, "in Hebrew"); in 19:13, 17, KJV, "in the Hebrew" (RV, "in Hebrew"); in v. 20, KJV and RV, "in Hebrew"; in 20:16, RV only, "in Hebrew (Rabboni)."¶

Note: Cf. Hellēnisti, "in Greek," John 19:20,

RV; Acts 21:37, "Greek."¶ See also Rhōmaisti, under LATIN.

TOOTH, TEETH

odous (ὀδούς, 3599) is used in the sing. in Matt. 5:38 (twice); elsewhere in the plural, of "the gnashing of teeth," the gnashing being expressive of anguish and indignation, Matt. 8:12; 13:42, 50; 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Mark 9:18; Luke 13:28; Acts 7:54; in Rev. 9:8, of the beings seen in a vision and described as locusts.¶

TOP

A. Noun.

akron (ἄκρον, 206), for which see TIP, is used of Jacob's staff, Heb. 11:21.

B. Phrases.

Note: In Matt. 27:51 and Mark 15:38, apo anōthen, "from the top" (lit., "from above"), is used of the upper part of the Temple veil. In John 19:23, the different phrase ek tōn anōthen is used of the weaving of the Lord's garment (the chitōn: see CLOTHING), lit., "from the parts above."

TOPAZ

topazion (τοπάζιον, 5116) is mentioned in Rev. 21:20, as the ninth of the foundation stones of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem; the stone is of a yellow color (though there are topazes of other colors) and is almost as hard as the diamond. It has the power of double refraction, and when heated or rubbed becomes electric.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 28:17; 39:10; Job 28:19; Ps. 119:127, "(gold and) topaz"; Ezek. 28:13.¶

lampas (λαμπάς, 2985), "a torch," is used in the plur. and translated "torches" in John 18:3; in Rev. 8:10, RV, "torch" (KJV, "lamp"). See LAMP.

TORMENT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. basanismos (βασανισμός, 929), akin to basanizō (see TOIL, No. 2), is used of divine judgments in Rev. 9:5; 14:11; 18:7, 10, 15.¶

2. basanos (βάσανος, 931), primarily "a touchstone," employed in testing metals, hence, "torment," is used (a) of physical diseases, Matt. 4:24: (b) of a condition of retribution in Hades, Luke 16:23, 28.¶

Note: In 1 John 4:18, KJV, kolasis, "punishment" (RV), is rendered "torment." See PUNISHMENT, No. 3.

B. Verbs.

1. basanizō (βασανίζω, 928), for which see TOIL, No. 2, is translated "to torment," (a) of sickness, Matt. 8:6; (b) of the doom of evil spirits, Mark 5:7; Luke 8:28; (c) of retributive judgments upon impenitent mankind at the close of this age, Rev. 9:5; 11:10; (d) upon those who worship the Beast and his image and receive the mark of his name, 14:10; (e) of the doom of Satan and his agents, 20:10.

2. kakoucheō (κακουχέω, 2558), "to treat evilly," in the passive voice is translated "tormented" in Heb. 11:37, KJV (RV, "evil entreated"). See SUFFER, No. 6.

3. odunao (ὀδυνάω, 3600), for which see ANGUISH, B, No. 3, in the passive voice is rendered "I am (thou art) tormented" in Luke 16:24, 25, KJV.

TORMENTOR

basanistēs (βασανιστής, 930), properly, "a torturer" (akin to basanizō, see TORMENT, B), "one who elicits information by torture," is used of jailors, Matt. 18:34.¶

tumpanizō (τυμπανίζω, 5178) primarily denotes "to beat a drum" (tumpanon, "a kettledrum," Eng., "tympanal," "tympanitis," "tympanum"), hence, "to torture by beating, to beat to death," Heb. 11:35.¶ In the Sept., 1 Sam. 21:13, "(David) drummed (upon the doors of the city)."¶ The tympanum as an instrument of "torture" seems to have been a wheel-shaped frame upon which criminals were stretched and beaten with clubs or thongs.

TOSS

1. rhipizō (ῥιπίζω, 4494), primarily "to fan a fire" (rhipis, "a fan," cf. rhipē, "twinkling"), then, "to make a breeze," is used in the passive voice in Jas. 1:6, "tossed," of the raising of waves by the wind.¶

2. kludōnizomai (κλυδωνίζομαι, 2831) signifies "to be tossed by billows" (kludōn, "a billow"); metaphorically, in Eph. 4:14, of an unsettled condition of mind influenced and agitated by one false teaching and another, and characterized by that immaturity which lacks the firm conviction begotten by the truth.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 57:20.¶

Note: For "being . . . tossed," Acts 27:18, See LABOR, B, No. 2.

TOUCH (Verb)

1. haptō (ἅπτω, 681), primarily, "to fasten to," hence, of fire, "to kindle," denotes, in the middle voice (a) "to touch," e.g., Matt. 8:3, 15; 9:20, 21, 29; (b) "to cling to, lay hold of," John 20:17; here the Lord's prohibition as to clinging to Him was indicative of the fact that communion with Him would, after His ascension, be by faith, through the Spirit; (c) "to have carnal intercourse with a woman," 1 Cor. 7:1; (d) "to have fellowship and association with unbelievers," 2 Cor. 6:17; (e) (negatively) "to adhere to certain Levitical and ceremonial ordinances," in order to avoid contracting external defilement, or to practice rigorous asceticism, all such abstentions being of "no value against the indulgence of the flesh," Col. 2:21, KJV (RV, "handle"); (f) "to assault," in order to sever the vital union between Christ and the believer, said of the attack of the Evil One, 1 John 5:18. See HANDLE, No. 2, KINDLE, LIGHT.

2. thinganō (θιγγάνω, 2345), "to touch," a lighter term than No. 1, though Heb. 11:28 approximates to it, in expressing the action of the Destroyer of the Egyptian firstborn; in Heb. 12:20 it signifies "to touch," and is not to be interpreted by Ps. 104:32, "He toucheth (No. 1 in the Sept.) the hills and they smoke"; in Col. 2:21, RV (KJV, "handle"). See HANDLE, No. 2.¶

3. prospsauō (προσψαύω, 4379), "to touch upon, to touch slightly," occurs in Luke 11:46.¶

4. psēlaphaō (ψηλαφάω, 5584), "to feel, to handle," is rendered "that might be touched" in Heb. 12:18. See FEEL, No. 3, HANDLE, No. 1.

5. katagō (κατάγω, 2609), "to bring down," is used of bringing a ship to land in Acts 27:3. See BRING No. 16.

6. sumpatheō (συμπαθέω, 4834), for which see COMPASSION, A, No. 3, is rendered "be touched with" in Heb. 4:15.

7. paraballō (παραβάλλω, 3846), for which see ARRIVE, No. 4, COMPARE, No. 2, is rendered "touched at" in Acts 20:15, RV.

For TOUCHING (Preposition) see †, p. 1

lention (λέντιον, 3012) denotes "a linen cloth or towel" (Lat., linteum), as used by the Lord, John 13:4, 5; it was commonly used by servants in a household.¶

purgos (πύργος, 4444) is used of "a watch-tower in a vineyard," Matt. 21:33; Mark 12:1; probably, too, in Luke 14:28 (cf. Isa. 5:2); in Luke 13:4, of the "tower in Siloam," the modern Silwan, which is built on a steep escarpment of rock.¶

TOWN

1. kōmopolis (κωμόπολις, 2969) denotes "a country town," Mark 1:38, "a large village" usually without walls.¶

2. kōmē (κώμη, 2968), "a village," or "country town without walls." The RV always renders this "village" or "villages," KJV, "town" or "towns," Matt. 10:11; Mark 8:23, 26 (twice), 27; Luke 5:17; 9:6, 12; John 7:42; 11:1, 30. See VILLAGE.

TOWN CLERK

grammateus (γραμματεύς, 1122), "a writer, scribe," is used in Acts 19:35 of a state "clerk," an important official, variously designated, according to inscriptions found in Graeco-Asiatic cities. He was responsible for the form of decrees first approved by the Senate, then sent for approval in the popular assembly, in which he often presided. The decrees having been passed, he sealed them with the public seal in the presence of witnesses. Such an assembly frequently met in the theater. The Roman administration viewed any irregular or unruly assembly as a grave and even capital offense, as tending to strengthen among the people the consciousness of their power and the desire to exercise it. In the circumstances at Ephesus the town clerk feared that he might himself be held responsible for the irregular gathering. See SCRIBE.

TRACE

A. Verb.

parakoloutheō (παρακολουθέω, 3877), "to follow up," is used of investigating or "tracing" a course of events, Luke 1:3, where the writer, humbly differentiating himself from those who possessed an essential apostolic qualification, declares that he "traced the course of all things" (RV) about which he was writing (KJV, "having had . . . understanding, etc."). See FOLLOW, No. 5.

B. Adjective.

anexichniastos (ἀνεξιχνίαστος, 421) signifies "that cannot be traced out" (a, negative, ex, for ek, "out," ichnos, "a track"), is rendered "past tracing out" in Rom. 11:33, RV (KJV, "past finding out"); in Eph. 3:8, "unsearchable." See FIND, Note (3), UNSEARCHABLE.¶ In the Sept., Job 5:9; 9:10; 34:24.¶

TRADE (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038), "to work," is rendered "traded" in Matt. 25:16; in Rev. 18:17, KJV, "trade," RV, "gain their living." See COMMIT, DO, LABOR, B, Note (1), MINISTER, WORK.

2. pragmateuomai (πραγματεύομαι, 4231) is rendered "trade ye" in Luke 19:13, RV, which adds "herewith": see OCCUPY.¶

3. diapragmateuomai (διαπραγματεύομαι, 1281), "to accomplish by traffic, to gain by trading," occurs in Luke 19:15.¶

4. emporeuomai (ἐμπορεύομαι, 1710) is rendered "trade" in Jas. 4:13, RV: see BUY, Note, MERCHANDISE, B.

B. Nouns.

1. technē (τέχνη, 5078), "an art" (Eng., "technique," "technical"), is used in Acts 18:3 (2nd part) of a "trade," RV (KJV, "occupation"). For the 1st part see Note below. See ART.

2. meros (μέρος, 3313), "a portion," is used of "a trade" in Acts 19:27. See CRAFT, No. 5.

Note: For the adjective homotechnos, "of the same trade," Acts 18:3, 1st part, RV, see CRAFT, No. 4.¶

paradosis (παράδοσις, 3862), "a handing down or on" (akin to paradidōmi, "to hand over, deliver"), denotes "a tradition," and hence, by metonymy, (a) "the teachings of the rabbis," interpretations of the Law, which was thereby made void in practice, Matt. 15:2, 3, 6; Mark 7:3, 5, 8, 9, 13; Gal. 1:14; Col. 2:8; (b) of "apostolic teaching," 1 Cor. 11:2, RV, "traditions" (KJV, "ordinances"), of instructions concerning the gatherings of believers (instructions of wider scope than ordinances in the limited sense); in 2 Thess. 2:15, of Christian doctrine in general, where the apostle's use of the word constitutes a denial that what he preached originated with himself, and a claim for its divine authority (cf. paralambanō, "to receive," 1 Cor. 11:23; 15:3); in 2 Thess. 3:6, it is used of instructions concerning everyday conduct.¶

For TRAIN, Titus 2:4, RV, see SOBER, B, No. 3

prodotēs (προδότης, 4273) denotes "a betrayer, traitor"; the latter term is assigned to Judas, virtually as a title, in Luke 6:16; in 2 Tim. 3:4 it occurs in a list of evil characters, foretold as abounding in the last days. See BETRAY, B.

TRAMPLE

katapateō (καταπατέω, 2662), "to tread down, trample under foot," is rendered "trample" in Matt. 7:6. See TREAD, No. 2.

ekstasis (ἔκστασις, 1611), for which see AMAZE, A, No. 1, denotes "a trance" in Acts 10:10; 11:5; 22:17, a condition in which ordinary consciousness and the perception of natural circumstances were withheld, and the soul was susceptible only to the vision imparted by God.

For TRANQUIL, 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, see QUIET, No. 1

metamorphoō (μεταμορφόω, 3339), "to change into another form" (meta, implying change, and morphē, "form:" see FORM, No. 1), is used in the passive voice (a) of Christ's "transfiguration," Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:2; Luke (in 9:29) avoids this term, which might have suggested to gentile readers the metamorphoses of heathen gods, and uses the phrase egeneto heteron, "was altered", lit., "became (ginomai) different (heteros)"; (b) of believers, Rom. 12:2, "be ye transformed," the obligation being to undergo a complete change which, under the power of God, will find expression in character and conduct; morphē lays stress on the inward change, schēma (see the preceding verb in that verse, suschēmatizō) lays stress on the outward (see FASHION, No. 3, FORM, No. 2); the present continuous tenses indicate a process; 2 Cor. 3:18 describes believers as being "transformed (RV) into the same image" (i.e., of Christ in all His moral excellencies), the change being effected by the Holy Spirit.¶

TRANSFORM

1. metamorphoō (μεταμορφόω, 3339) is rendered "transformed" in Rom. 12:2: see TRANSFIGURE.

2. metaschēmatizō (μετασχηματίζω, 3345) in the passive voice is rendered "to be transformed" in the KJV of 2 Cor. 11:13, 14, 15: see FASHION, C, No. 1.

TRANSGRESS, TRANSGRESSION

A. Verbs.

1. parabainō (παραβαίνω, 3845), lit., "to go aside" (para), hence "to go beyond," is chiefly used metaphorically of "transgressing" the tradition of the elders, Matt. 15:2; the commandment of God, 15:3; in Acts 1:25, of Judas, KJV, "by transgression fell" (RV, "fell away"); in

2 John 9 some texts have this verb (KJV, "transgresseth"), the best have proagō (see GO, No. 10).¶

2. huperbainō (ὑπερβαίνω, 5233), lit., "to go over" (huper), used metaphorically and rendered "transgress" in 1 Thess. 4:6 (KJV, "go beyond"), i.e., of "overstepping" the limits separating chastity from licentiousness, sanctification from sin.¶.

3. parerchomai (παρέρχομαι, 3928), "to come by" (para, "by," erchomai, "to come"), "pass over," and hence, metaphorically, "to transgress," is so used in Luke 15:29. See COME, No. 9, PASS.

B. Nouns.

1. parabasis (παράβασις, 3847), akin to A, No. 1, primarily "a going aside," then, "an overstepping," is used metaphorically to denote "transgression" (always of a breach of law): (a) of Adam, Rom. 5:14; (b) of Eve, 1 Tim. 2:14; (c) negatively, where there is no law, since "transgression" implies the violation of law, none having been enacted between Adam's "transgression" and those under the Law, Rom. 4:15; (d) of "transgressions" of the Law, Gal. 3:19, where the statement "it was added because of transgressions" is best understood according to Rom. 4:15; 5:13 and 5:20; the Law does not make men sinners, but makes them "transgressors"; hence sin becomes "exceeding sinful," Rom. 7:7, 13. Conscience thus had a standard external to itself; by the Law men are taught their inability to yield complete obedience to God, that thereby they may become convinced of their need of a Savior; in Rom. 2:23, RV, "transgression (of the Law)," KJV, "breaking (the Law)"; Heb. 2:2; 9:15.¶

2. paranomia (παρανομία, 3892), "lawbreaking" (para, "contrary to," nomos, "law"), is rendered "transgression" in 2 Pet. 2:16, RV (KJV, "iniquity").¶

Note: In 1 John 3:4 (1st part), KJV, poieō, "to do," with anomia, "lawlessness," is rendered "transgresseth . . . the law" (RV, "doeth . . . lawlessness"); in the 2nd part anomia alone is rendered "transgression of the law," KJV (RV, "lawlessness").

TRANSGRESSOR

1. parabatēs (παραβάτης, 3848), lit. and primarily, "one who stands beside," then, "one who oversteps the prescribed limit, a transgressor" (akin to parabainō, "to transgress," see above); so Rom. 2:25, RV (KJV, "a breaker"); v. 27, RV, "a transgressor" (KJV, "dost transgress"); Gal. 2:18; Jas. 2:9, 11.¶

Note: Hamartōlos, "a sinner, one who misses the mark," is applicable to all men without distinction; parabatēs stresses the positive side of sin, and is applicable to those who received the Law.

2. anomos (ἄνομος, 459), "without law" (a-, negative), is translated "transgressors" in Luke 22:37 (in some texts, Mark 15:28), in a quotation from Isa. 53:12. See LAW, C, No. 3, LAWLESS, A.

TRANSLATE, TRANSLATION

A. Verbs.

1. methistēmi or methistanō (μεθίστημι, 3179), "to change, remove" (meta, implying "change," histēmi, "to cause to stand"), is rendered "hath translated" in Col. 1:13. See PUT, REMOVE, TURN (away).

2. metatithēmi (μετατίθημι, 3346), "to transfer to another place" (meta, see above, tithēmi, "to put"), is rendered "to translate" in Heb. 11:5 (twice). See CARRY, CHANGE, REMOVE, TURN.

B. Noun.

metathesis (μετάθεσις, 3331), "a change of position" (akin to A, No. 2), is rendered "translation" in Heb. 11:5. See CHANGE, REMOVING.

For TRANSPARENT, Rev. 21:21, see DAWN, A, No. 2, Note

TRAP

thēra (θήρα, 2339) denotes "a hunting, chase," then, "a prey"; hence, figuratively, of "preparing destruction by a net or trap," Rom. 11:9.¶

TRAVAIL (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. mochthos (μόχθος, 3449), "labor, involving painful effort," is rendered "travail" in 2 Cor. 11:27, RV (KJV, "painfulness"); in 1 Thess. 2:9 and 2 Thess. 3:8 it stresses the toil involved in the work.¶

2. ōdin (ὠδίν, 5604), a birth pang, "travail pain," is used illustratively in 1 Thess. 5:3 of the calamities which are to come upon men at the beginning of the Day of the Lord; the figure used suggests the inevitableness of the catastrophe. See PAIN, No. 2, SORROW.

B. Verbs.

1. ōdinō (ὠδίων, 5605), akin to A, No. 2, is used negatively in Gal. 4:27, "(thou) that travailest (not)," quoted from Isa. 54:1; the apostle applies the circumstances of Sarah and Hagar (which doubtless Isaiah was recalling) to show that, whereas the promise by grace had temporarily been replaced by the works of the Law (see Gal. 3:17), this was now reversed, and, in the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham, the number of those saved by the gospel would far exceed those who owned allegiance to the Law. Isa. 54 has primary reference to the future prosperity of Israel restored to God's favor, but frequently the principles underlying events recorded in the OT extend beyond their immediate application.

In 4:19 the apostle uses it metaphorically of a second travailing on his part regarding the churches of Galatia; his first was for their deliverance from idolatry (v. 8), now it was for their deliverance from bondage to Judaism. There is no suggestion here of a second regeneration necessitated by defection. There is a hint of reproach, as if he was enquiring whether they had ever heard of a mother experiencing second birth pangs for her children.

In Rev. 12:2 the woman is figurative of Israel; the circumstances of her birth pangs are mentioned in Isa. 66:7 (see also Micah 5:2, 3). Historically the natural order is reversed. The Manchild, Christ, was brought forth at His first advent; the travail is destined to take place in "the time of Jacob's trouble," the "great tribulation," Matt. 24:21; Rev. 7:14. The object in 12:2 in referring to the birth of Christ is to connect Him with His earthly people Israel in their future time of trouble, from which the godly remnant, the nucleus of the restored nation, is to be delivered (Jer. 30:7).¶

2. sunōdinō (συνωδίνω, 4944), "to be in travail together," is used metaphorically in Rom. 8:22, of the whole creation.¶

3. tikto (τίκτω, 5088), "to beget," is rendered "travail" in John 16:21.

For TRAVEL (companions in), Acts 19:29, and TRAVEL WITH, 2 Cor. 8:19, see COMPANION, No. 1.

TRAVEL

dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), "to go or pass through," is translated "travelled" in Acts 11:19. See COME, No. 5.

Note: For apodēmeō, rendered "travelling" in Matt. 25:14, KJV, see GO, No. 27.

TREAD, TRODE, TRODDEN

1. pateō (πατέω, 3961) is used (a) intransitively and figuratively, of "treading" upon serpents, Luke 10:19; (b) transitively, of "treading" on, down or under, of the desecration of Jerusalem by its foes, Luke 21:24; Rev. 11:2; of the avenging, by the Lord in Person hereafter, of this desecration and of the persecution of the Jews, in divine retribution, metaphorically spoken of as the "treading" of the winepress of God's wrath, Rev. 14:20; 19:15 (cf. Isa. 63:2, 3).¶

2. katapateō (καταπατέω, 2662), "to tread down, trample under foot," is used (a) literally, Matt. 5:13; 7:6; Luke 8:5; 12:1; (b) metaphorically, of "treading under foot" the Son of God, Heb. 10:29, i.e., turning away from Him, to indulge in willful sin.¶

For TREADING out the corn, see THRESH

TREASURE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. thēsauros (θησαυρός, 2344) denotes (1) "a place of safe keeping" (possibly akin to tithēmi, "to put"), (a) "a casket," Matt. 2:11; (b) "a storehouse," Matt. 13:52; used metaphorically of the heart, Matt. 12:35, twice (RV, "out of his treasure"); Luke 6:45; (2) "a treasure," Matt. 6:19, 20, 21; 13:44; Luke 12:33, 34; Heb. 11:26; "treasure" (in heaven or the heavens), Matt. 19:21; Mark 10:21; Luke 18:22; in these expressions (which are virtually equivalent to that in Matt. 6:1, "with your Father which is in Heaven") the promise does not simply refer to the present life, but looks likewise to the hereafter; in 2 Cor. 4:7 it is used of "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ," descriptive of the gospel, as deposited in the earthen vessels of the persons who proclaim it (cf. v. 4); in Col. 2:3, of the wisdom and knowledge hidden in Christ.¶

2. gaza (γάζα, 1047), a Persian word, signifying "royal treasure," occurs in Acts 8:27.¶

B. Verb.

thēsaurizō (θησαυρίζω, 2343), akin to A, No. 1, is used metaphorically in Rom. 2:5 of "treasuring up wrath." See LAY, No. 17.

For TREASURER see CHAMBERLAIN, Note

TREASURY

1. gazophulakion (γαζοφυλάκιον, 1049), from gaza, "a treasure," phulakē, "a guard," is used by Josephus for a special room in the women's court in the Temple in which gold and silver bullion was kept. This seems to be referred to in John 8:20; in Mark 12:41 (twice), 43 and Luke 21:1 it is used of the trumpet-shaped or ram's-horn-shaped chests, into which the temple offerings of the people were cast. There were 13 chests, six for such gifts in general, seven for distinct purposes.¶

2. korbanas (κορβανᾶς, 2878), signifying

"the place of gifts," denoted the Temple "treasury," Matt. 27:6. See CORBAN.¶

For TREATED, Acts 27:3, RV, see ENTREAT (to deal with) logos (λόγος, 3056), a word, denotes "a treatise or written narrative" in Acts 1:1. See WORD.

TREATISE

TREE

1. dendron (δένδρον, 1186), "a living, growing tree" (cf. Eng., "rhododendron," lit., "rose tree"), known by the fruit it produces, Matt. 12:33; Luke 6:44; certain qualities are mentioned in the NT; "a good tree," Matt. 7:17, 18; 12:33; Luke 6:43; "a corrupt tree" (ditto); in Jude 12, metaphorically, of evil teachers, "autumn trees (KJV, 'trees whose fruit withereth') without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots," RV; in Luke 13:19 in some texts, "a great tree," KJV (RV, "a tree"); for this and Matt. 13:32 see MUSTARD; in Luke 21:29 "the fig tree" is illustrative of Israel, "all the trees" indicating gentile nations.

2. xulon (ξύλον, 3586) "wood, a piece of wood, anything made of wood" (see STAFF, STOCKS), is used, with the rendering "tree," (a) in Luke 23:31, where "the green tree" refers either to Christ, figuratively of all His living power and excellencies, or to the life of the Jewish people while still inhabiting their land, in contrast to "the dry," a figure fulfilled in the horrors of the Roman massacre and devastation in A.D. 70 (cf. the Lord's parable in Luke 13:6–9; see Ezek. 20:47, and cf. 21:3); (b) of "the cross," the tree being the stauros, the upright pale or stake to which Romans nailed those who were thus to be executed, Acts 5:30; 10:39; 13:29; Gal. 3:13; 1 Pet. 2:24; (c) of "the tree of life," Rev. 2:7; 22:2 (twice), 14, 19, RV, KJV, "book." See WOOD.

TREMBLE, TREMBLING

A. Verbs.

1. tremō (τρέμω, 5141), "to tremble, especially with fear," is used in Mark 5:33; Luke 8:47 (Acts 9:6, in some mss.); 2 Pet. 2:10, RV,"they tremble (not)," KJV, "they are (not) afraid."¶

2. seiō (σείω, 4579), "to move to and fro, shake," is rendered "will I make to tremble" in Heb. 12:26, RV (KJV, "I shake"). See QUAKE, SHAKE.

Notes: (1) For phrissō in Jas. 2:19, KJV, "tremble," see SHUDDER. (2) For the adjective entromos, "trembling," Acts 7:32; 16:29, RV, "trembling for fear," see QUAKE, No. 1. (3) The adjective emphobos, used with ginomai, "to become," is rendered "trembled" in Acts 24:25 (RV, "was terrified"); in Luke 24:5, RV, "they were affrighted," KJV, "they were afraid." See AFFRIGHTED, A.

B. Noun.

tromos (τρόμος, 5156), "a trembling" (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in Mark 16:8, RV, "trembling (. . . had come upon them)"; 1 Cor. 2:3; 2 Cor. 7:15; Eph. 6:5; Phil. 2:12.¶

TRENCH

charax (χάραξ, 5482), primarily "a pointed stake," hence, "a palisade or rampart," is rendered "trench" in Luke 19:43, KJV (RV, "bank," marg., "palisade"). In A.D. 70, Titus, the Roman general, surrounded Jerusalem with a palisaded mound (Tyndale, l.c., renders it "mound"). The Jews in one of their sorties destroyed this charax, after which Titus surrounded the city with a wall of masonry.¶

TRESPASS (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

paraptōma (παράπτωμα, 3900), primarily "a false step, a blunder" (akin to parapiptō, "to fall away," Heb. 6:6), lit., "a fall beside," used ethically, denotes "a trespass," a deviation, from uprightness and truth, Matt. 6:14, 15 (twice); 18:35, in some mss.; Mark 11:25, 26; in Romans the RV substitutes "trespass" and "trespasses" for KJV, "offense" and "offenses," 4:25, "for (i.e., because of) our trespasses"; 5:15 (twice), where the trespass is that of Adam (in contrast to the free gift of righteousness, v. 17, a contrast in the nature and the effects); 5:16, where "of many trespasses" expresses a contrast of quantity; the condemnation resulted from one "trespass," the free gift is "of (ek, expressing the origin, and throwing stress upon God's justifying grace in Christ) many trespasses"; v. 17, introducing a contrast between legal effects and those of divine grace; v. 18, where the RV, "through one trespass," is contrasted with "one act of righteousness"; this is important, the difference is not between one man's "trespass" and Christ's righteousness (as KJV), but between two acts, that of Adam's "trespass" and the vicarious death of Christ; v. 20 [cf. TRANSGRESSION, B, No. 1 (d)]; in 2 Cor. 5:19, KJV and RV, "trespasses"; in Eph. 1:7, RV, "trespasses" (KJV, "sins"); in 2:1, RV, "(dead through your) trespasses," KJV, "(dead in) trespasses"; 2:5, RV, "(dead through our) trespasses," KJV, "(dead in) sins"; so Col 2:13 (1st part); in the 2nd part, KJV and RV, "trespasses."

In Gal. 6:1, RV, "(in any) trespass" (KJV, "fault"), the reference is to "the works of the flesh" (5:19), and the thought is that of the believer's being found off his guard, the "trespass" taking advantage of him; in Jas. 5:16, KJV, "faults" (RV, "sins" translates the word hamartias, which is found in the best texts), auricular confession to a priest is not in view here or anywhere else in Scripture; the command is comprehensive, and speaks either of the acknowledgment of sin where one has wronged another, or of the unburdening of a troubled conscience to a godly brother whose prayers will be efficacious, or of open confession before the church.

In Rom. 11:11, 12, the word is used of Israel's "fall," i.e., their deviation from obedience to God and from the fulfillment of His will (to be distinguished from the verb ptaiō, "fall," in the 1st part of v. 11, which indicates the impossibility of recovery). See FALL, A, No. 2.¶

B. Verb.

hamartanō (ἁμαρτάνω, 264) "to sin," is translated "to trespass," in the KJV of Matt. 18:15, and Luke 17:3, 4 (RV, "to sin").

Note: For the different meanings of words describing sin, see SIN. Paraptōma, and hamartēma ("a sinful deed") are closely associated, with regard to their primary meanings: parabasis seems to be a stronger term, as the breach of a known law (see TRANSGRESSION).

TRIAL

1. dokimē (δοκιμή, 1382), for which see EXPERIENCE, No. 2, is rendered "trial" in 2 Cor. 8:2, KJV (RV, "proof").

2. peira (πεῖρα, 3984), "a making trial, an experiment," is used with lambanō, "to receive or take," in Heb. 11:29, rendered "assaying," and v. 36, in the sense of "having experience of" (akin to peiraō, "to assay, to try"), "had trial."¶ In the Sept., Deut. 28:56.¶

3. peirasmos (πειρασμός, 3986), akin to No. 2, is rendered "trials" in Acts 20:19, RV. See TEMPTATION.

4. purōsis (πύρωσις, 4451), akin to puroō, "to set on fire," signifies (a) "a burning"; (b) "a refining," metaphorically in 1 Pet. 4:12, "fiery trial," or rather "trial by fire," referring to the refining of gold (1:7). See BURNING.

Note: For dokimion, rendered "trial" in 1 Pet. 1:7, KJV, see PROOF, No. 2.

TRIBE (-S)

1. phulē (φυλή, 5443), "a company of people united by kinship or habitation, a clan, tribe," is used (a) of the peoples of the earth, Matt. 24:30; in the following the RV has "tribe(-s)" for KJV, "kindred(-s)," Rev. 1:7; 5:9; 7:9; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6; (b) of the "tribes" of Israel, Matt. 19:28; Luke 2:36; 22:30; Acts 13:21; Rom. 11:1; Phil. 3:5; Heb. 7:13, 14; Jas. 1:1; Rev. 5:5; 7:4–8; 21:12.¶

2. dōdekaphulos (δωδεκάφυλος, 1429), an adjective signifying "of twelve tribes" (dōdeka, "twelve," and No. 1), used as a noun in the neuter, occurs in Acts 26:7.¶

thlipsis (θλῖψις, 2347), for which see AFFLICTION, B, No. 4, is translated "tribulation" in the RV (for KJV, "affliction") in Mark 4:17; 13:19; plural in 2 Thess. 1:4, KJV, "tribulations," RV, "afflictions"; in Acts 14:22 "many tribulations" (KJV, "much tribulation"); in Matt. 24:9, "unto tribulation" (KJV, "to be afflicted"); in 2 Cor. 1:4; 7:4; 2 Thess. 1:6, KJV, "tribulation" for RV, "affliction"; RV and KJV, "tribulation(-s)," e.g., in Rom. 2:9; 5:3 (twice); 8:35; 12:12; Eph. 3:13; Rev. 1:9; 2:9, 10, 22.

In Rev. 7:14, "the great tribulation," RV, lit., "the tribulation, the great one" (not as KJV, without the article), is not that in which all saints share; it indicates a definite period spoken of by the Lord in Matt. 24:21, 29; Mark 13:19, 24, where the time is mentioned as preceding His second advent, and as a period in which the Jewish nation, restored to Palestine in unbelief by gentile instrumentality, will suffer an unprecedented outburst of fury on the part of the antichristian powers confederate under the Man of Sin (2 Thess. 2:10–12; cf. Rev. 12:13–17); in this tribulation gentile witnesses for God will share (Rev. 7:9), but it will be distinctly "the time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer. 30:7); its beginning is signalized by the setting up of the "abomination of desolation" (Matt. 24:15; Mark 13:14, with Dan. 11:31; 12:11).

Note: For the verb thlibō, in the passive voice rendered "suffer tribulation" in 1 Thess. 3:4, KJV (RV, "suffer affliction"), see AFFLICT, No. 4.

TRIBUTE

1. phoros (φόρος, 5411), akin to pherō, "to bring," denotes "tribute" paid by a subjugated nation, Luke 20:22; 23:2; Rom. 13:6, 7.¶

2. kēnsos (κῆνσος, 2778), Lat. and Eng., "census," denotes "a poll tax," Matt. 17:25; 22:17, 19; Mark. 12:14.¶

3. didrachmon (δίδραχμον, 1323), "the half-shekel," is rendered "tribute" in Matt. 17:24 (twice): see SHEKEL, No. 2.¶

kosmeō (κοσμέω, 2885), "to arrange, adorn," is used of "trimming" lamps, Matt. 25:7. See ADORN, GARNISH.

thriambeuō (θριαμβεύω, 2358) denotes (a) "to lead in triumph," used of a conqueror with reference to the vanquished, 2 Cor. 2:14. Theodoret paraphrases it "He leads us about here and there and displays us to all the world." This is in agreement with evidences from various sources. Those who are led are not captives exposed to humiliation, but are displayed as the glory and devoted subjects of Him who leads (see the context). This is so even if there is a reference to a Roman "triumph." On such occasions the general's sons, with various officers, rode behind his chariot (Livy, xlv. 40). But there is no necessary reference here to a Roman "triumph" (Field, in Notes on the Trans. of the NT). The main thought is that of the display, "in Christ" being the sphere; its evidences are the effects of gospel testimony.

In Col. 2:15 the circumstances and subjects are quite different, and relate to Christ's victory over spiritual foes at the time of His death; accordingly the reference may be to the triumphant display of the defeated.¶

For TRODE see TREAD

TROUBLE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

thlipsis (θλῖψις, 2347), for which see AFFLICTION, No. 4, and TRIBULATION, is rendered "trouble" in the KJV of 1 Cor. 7:28 (RV, "tribulation"); 2 Cor. 1:4 (2nd clause), 8 (RV, "affliction").

Note: In some mss. tarachē, "an agitation, disturbance, trouble," is found in Mark 13:8 (plur.) and John 5:4 (RV omits).¶

B. Verbs.

1. tarassō (ταράσσω, 5015), akin to tarachē (A, Note), is used (1) in a physical sense, John 5:7 (in some mss. v. 4), (2) metaphorically, (a) of the soul and spirit of the Lord, John 11:33, where the true rendering is "He troubled Himself"; (b) of the hearts of disciples, 14:1, 27; (c) of the minds of those in fear or perplexity, Matt. 2:3; 14:26; Mark 6:50; Luke 1:12; 24:38; 1 Pet. 3:14; (d) of subverting the souls of believers, by evil doctrine, Acts 15:24; Gal. 1:7; 5:10; (e) of stirring up a crowd, Acts 17:8; v. 13 in the best texts, "troubling (the multitudes)," RV.¶

2. diatarassō (διαταράσσω, 1298), "to agitate greatly" (dia, "throughout," and No. 1), is used of the Virgin Mary, Luke 1:29.¶

3. ektarassō (ἐκτράσσω, 1613), "to throw into great trouble, agitate," is used in Acts 16:20, "do exceedingly trouble (our city)."¶ In the Sept., Ps. 18:4; 88:16.¶

4. thlibō (θλίβω, 2346), "to afflict," is rendered "to trouble" in the KJV, e.g., 2 Cor. 4:8 (RV, "pressed"); 7:5, but never in the RV: see AFFLICT, No. 4, PRESS, STRAITENED, TRIBULATION.

5. enochleō (ἐνοχλέω, 1776), from en, "in," ochlos, "a throng, crowd," is used in Heb. 12:15 of a root of bitterness; in Luke 6:18 (in the best texts; some have ochleō), RV, "were troubled" (KJV, "were vexed").¶

6. parenochleō (παρενοχλέω, 3926), "to annoy concerning anything" (para, and No. 5), occurs in Acts 15:19, "we trouble (not them)."¶

7. skullō (σκύλλω, 4660), primarily "to flay," hence, "to vex, annoy" ("there was a time when the Greek, in thus speaking, compared his trouble to the pains of flaying alive," Moulton, Proleg., p. 89), is used in the active voice in Mark 5:35; Luke 8:49; in the passive voice, Matt. 9:36, in the best texts, RV, "they were distressed" (some have ekluō, KJV, "they fainted"); in the middle voice, Luke 7:6, "trouble (not thyself)."¶ The word is frequent in the papyri.

8. anastatoō (ἀναστατόω, 387) is rendered "trouble" in Gal. 5:12, KJV: see STIR, No. 12, TURN, No. 15, UPROAR.

9. thorubeō (θορυβέω, 2350), akin to thorubos, "a tumult," in the middle voice, "to make an uproar," is rendered "trouble not yourselves" in Acts 20:10, KJV. See ADO, TUMULT.

10. throeō (θροέω, 2360), "to make an outcry" (throos, "a tumult"), is used in the passive voice, Matt. 24:6; Mark 13:7; Luke 24:37; 2 Thess. 2:2.¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 5:4.¶

11. thorubazō (θορυβάζω, 2351d), "to disturb, to trouble" (akin to No. 9), is used in Luke 10:41, in the best texts (in some, turbazō, with the same meaning).¶

12. adēmoneō (ἀδημονέω, 85), "to be much troubled, distressed" (perhaps from a, negative, and dēmōn, "knowing," the compound therefore originally suggesting bewilderment), is translated "sore troubled" in Matt. 26:37 and Mark 14:33, RV (KJV, "very heavy"); so the RV in Phil. 2:26 (KJV, "full of heaviness"); Lightfoot renders it "distressed," a meaning borne out in the papyri. See HEAVY.¶

13. diaponeō (διαπονέω, 1278) denotes "to work out with toil," hence, "to be sore troubled"; so the RV in Acts 4:2 and 16:18 (KJV, "grieved"); Mark 14:4 in some texts.¶

Notes: (1) The noun kopos, "a striking, beating," then, "laborious toil, trouble," used with parechō, "to furnish, to supply," is rendered "to trouble" (lit., "to give trouble to"), in Matt. 26:10; Mark 14:6; Luke 11:7; 18:5; Gal. 6:17; the meaning is to embarrass a person by distracting his attention, or to give occasion for anxiety. In the last passage the apostle expresses his determination not to allow the Judaizing teachers to distract him any further. See LABOR, A, No. 1. (2) For "suffer trouble" in 2 Tim. 2:9, see HARDSHIP.

TROW

Note: Some mss. have dokeō, "to think," in Luke 17:9, KJV, "I trow (not)."

For TRUCE BREAKERS see IMPLACABLE

TRUE, TRULY, TRUTH

A. Adjectives.

1. alēthēs (ἀληθής, 227), primarily, "unconcealed, manifest" (a, negative, lēthō, "to forget," = lanthanō, "to escape notice"), hence, actual, "true to fact," is used (a) of persons, "truthful," Matt. 22:16; Mark 12:14; John 3:33; 7:18; 8:26; Rom. 3:4; 2 Cor. 6:8; (b) of things, "true," conforming to reality, John 4:18, "truly," lit., "true"; 5:31, 32; in the best texts, 6:55 (twice), "indeed"; 8:13, 14 (v. 16 in some texts: see No. 2), 17; 10:41; 19:35; 21:24; Acts 12:9; Phil. 4:8; Titus 1:13; 1 Pet. 5:12; 2 Pet. 2:22; 1 John 2:8, 27; 3 John 12.¶

2. alēthinos (ἀληθινός, 228), akin to No. 1, denotes "true" in the sense of real, ideal, genuine; it is used (a) of God, John 7:28 (cf. No. 1 in 7:18, above); 17:3; 1 Thess. 1:9; Rev. 6:10; these declare that God fulfills the meaning of His Name; He is "very God," in distinction from all other gods, false gods (alēthēs, see John 3:33 in No. 1, signifies that He is veracious, "true" to His utterances, He cannot lie); (b) of Christ, John 1:9; 6:32; 15:1; 1 John 2:8; 5:20 (thrice); Rev. 3:7, 14; 19:11; His judgment, John 8:16 (in the best texts, instead of No. 1); (c) God's words, John 4:37; Rev. 19:9; 21:5; 22:6; the last three are equivalent to No. 1; (d) His ways, Rev. 15:3; (e) His judgments, Rev. 16:7; 19:2; (f) His riches, Luke 16:11; (g) His worshipers, John 4:23; (h) their hearts, Heb. 10:22; (i) the witness of the apostle John, John 19:35; (j) the spiritual, antitypical tabernacle, Heb. 8:2; 9:24, not that the wilderness tabernacle was false, but that it was a weak and earthly copy of the heavenly.¶

Note: "Alēthinos is related to alēthēs as form to contents or substances; alēthēs denotes the reality of the thing, alēthinos defines the relation of the conception to the thing to which it corresponds = genuine" (Cremer).

3. gnēsios (γνήσιος, 1103), primarily "lawfully begotten" (akin to ginomai, "to become"), hence, "true, genuine, sincere," is used in the apostle's exhortation to his "true yoke-fellow" in Phil. 4:3. See OWN, SINCERITY.

Note: In the KJV of 2 Cor. 1:18 and 1 Tim. 3:1, pistos, "faithful" (RV), is translated "true."

B. Verb.

alētheuō (ἀληθεύω, 226) signifies "to deal faithfully or truly with anyone" (cf. Gen. 42:16, Sept., "whether ye deal truly or no"), Eph. 4:15, "speaking the truth"; Gal. 3:16, "I tell (you) the truth," where probably the apostle is referring to the contents of his epistle.¶

C. Noun.

alētheia (ἀλήθεια, 225), "truth," is used (a) objectively, signifying "the reality lying at the basis of an appearance; the manifested, veritable essence of a matter" (Cremer), e.g., Rom. 9:1; 2 Cor. 11:10; especially of Christian doctrine, e.g., Gal. 2:5, where "the truth of the Gospel" denotes the "true" teaching of the Gospel, in contrast to perversions of it; Rom. 1:25, where "the truth of God" may be "the truth concerning God" or "God whose existence is a verity"; but in Rom 15:8 "the truth of God" is indicative of His faithfulness in the fulfillment of His promises as exhibited in Christ; the word has an absolute force in John 14:6; 17:17; 18:37, 38; in Eph. 4:21, where the RV, "even as truth is in Jesus," gives the correct rendering, the meaning is not merely ethical "truth," but "truth" in all its fullness and scope, as embodied in Him; He was the perfect expression of the truth; this is virtually equivalent to His statement in John 14:6; (b) subjectively, "truthfulness," "truth," not merely verbal, but sincerity and integrity of character, John 8:44; 3 John 3, RV; (c) in phrases, e.g., "in truth" (epi, "on the basis of"), Mark 12:14; Luke 20:21; with en, "in," 2 Cor. 6:7; Col. 1:6; 1 Tim. 2:7, RV (KJV, "in . . . verity"); 1 John 3:18; 2 John 1, 3, 4.

Note: In Matt. 15:27, KJV, nai, "yea" (RV), is translated "truth."

D. Adverbs.

1. alēthōs (ἀληθῶς, 230), "truly, surely," is rendered "of a truth" in Matt. 14:33; 26:73 and Mark 14:70, R.V, (KJV, "surely"); Luke 9:27; 12:44; 21:3; John 6:14; 7:40; 17:8, RV, "of a truth" (KJV, "surely"); Acts 12:11, RV (KJV, "of a surety"); "in truth," 1 Thess. 2:13; "truly," Matt. 27:54; Mark 15:39. See INDEED, No. 3.

2. gnēsiōs (γνησίως, 1104), "sincerely, honorably" (akin to A, No. 3), is rendered "truly"

(marg., "genuinely") in Phil, 2:20 (KJV, "naturally").¶

Notes: (1) The particles ara, men, and de are sometimes rendered "truly" in the KJV, but are differently rendered in the RV. (2) In 1 Cor. 14:25, KJV, ontōs (RV, "indeed") is rendered "of a truth." See CERTAIN, C, No. 1, INDEED, No. 4. (3) In John 20:30, KJV, the particle oun, therefore (RV), is rendered "truly."

TRUMP, TRUMPET

A. Noun.

salpinx (σάλπιγξ, 4536) is used (1) of the natural instrument, 1 Cor. 14:8; (2) of the supernatural accompaniment of divine interpositions, (a) at Sinai, Heb. 12:19; (b) of the acts of angels at the second advent of Christ, Matt. 24:31; (c) of their acts in the period of divine judgments preceding this, Rev. 8:2, 6, 13; 9:14; (d) of a summons to John to the presence of God, Rev. 1:10; 4:1; (e) of the act of the Lord in raising from the dead the saints who have fallen asleep and changing the bodies of those who are living, at the Rapture of all to meet Him in the air, 1 Cor. 15:52, where "the last trump" is a military allusion, familiar to Greek readers, and has no connection with the series in Rev. 8:6 to 11:15; there is a possible allusion to Num. 10:2–6, with reference to the same event, 1 Thess. 4:16, "the (lit., a) trump of God" (the absence of the article suggests the meaning "a trumpet such as is used in God's service").¶

B. Verb.

salpizō (σαλπίζω, 4537), "to sound a trumpet," Matt. 6:2; as in (2) (c) above, Rev. 8:6, 7, 8, 10, 12, 13; 9:1, 13; 10:7; 11:15; as in (2) (e) 1 Cor. 15:52.¶

salpistēs (σαλπιστής, 4538) occurs in Rev. 18:22.¶

TRUST (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

pepoithēsis (πεποίθησις, 4006) is rendered "trust" in 2 Cor. 3:4, KJV; see CONFIDENCE, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. peithō (πείθω, 3982), intransitively, in the perfect and pluperfect active, "to have confidence, trust," is rendered "to trust" in Matt. 27:43; Mark 10:24; Luke 11:22; 18:9; 2 Cor. 1:9; 10:7; Phil, 2:24; 3:4, KJV (RV, "to have confidence"); Heb. 2:13; in the present middle, Heb. 13:18, KJV (RV, "are persuaded"). See AGREE, No. 5, PERSUADE.

2. pisteuō (πιστεύω, 4100), "to entrust," or, in the passive voice, "to be entrusted with," is rendered "to commit to one's trust," in Luke 16:11; 1 Tim 1:11; "to be put in trust with," 1 Thess. 2:4, KJV (RV, "to be intrusted").

Note: Wherever elpizō, "to hope," is translated "to trust" in the KJV, the RV substitutes "to hope." So proelpizō, "to hope before." See HOPE.

For TRUTH see TRUE

TRY, TRIED

1. dokimazō (δοκιμάζω, 1381) is rendered "to try" in the KJV in 1 Cor. 3:13; 1 Thess. 2:4; 1 Pet. 1:7; 1 John 4:1: see PROVE, No. 1.

2. peirazō (πειράζω, 3985) is rendered "to try" in Heb. 11:17; Rev. 2:2, 10; 3:10. In Acts 16:7 it is rendered "assayed"; in 24:6, RV, "assayed" (KJV, "hath gone about"): see GO, Note (2) (b). See EXAMINE, PROVE, TEMPT. Cf. peiraō in Acts 26:21, RV, "assayed" (KJV, "went about"); see GO, Note (2) (c).

Notes: (1) In Rev. 3:18, KJV, puroō, in the passive voice, "to be purified by fire" (RV, "refined"), is rendered "tried." (2) For dokimion, Jas. 1:3, KJV, "trying," see PROOF. (3) For dokimos, Jas. 1:12, KJV, "tried," see APPROVED. (4) In 1 Pet. 4:12, KJV, the phrase pros peirasmon, lit., "for trial," i.e., "for testing," is rendered "to try (you)," RV, "to prove (you)."

TUMULT

1. akatastasia (ἀκαταστασία, 181) is rendered "tumults" in Luke 21:9, RV; 2 Cor. 6:5; 12:20. See CONFOUND, A, No. 1.

2. thorubos (θόρυβος, 2351), "a noise, uproar, tumult," is rendered "tumult" in Matt. 27:24 and Mark 5:38; in Matt. 26:5, RV (KJV, "uproar"), so in Mark 14:2; in Acts 20:1, "uproar," KJV and RV; in 24:18, "tumult"; in 21:34, KJV, "tumult" (RV, "uproar").¶

Note: For thorubeō, RV, "to make a tumult," see NOISE, Note (2).

TURN

1. strephō (στρέφω, 4762) denotes (1) in the active voice, (a) "to turn" (something), Matt. 5:39; (b) "to bring back," Matt. 27:3 (in the best texts; some have No. 2); (c) reflexively, "to turn oneself, to turn the back to people," said of God, Acts 7:42; (d) "to turn one thing into another," Rev. 11:6 (the only place where this word occurs after the Acts); (2) in the passive voice, (a) used reflexively, "to turn oneself," e.g. Matt. 7:6; John 20:14, 16; (b) metaphorically, Matt. 18:3, RV, "(except) ye turn" (KJV, "... be converted"); John 12:40 (in the best texts; some have No. 4). See CONVERT, A, No. 1.

2. apostrephō (ἀποστρέφω, 654) denotes (a)

"to cause to turn away (apo), to remove," Rom. 11:26; 2 Tim. 4:4 (1st clause); metaphorically, "to turn away from allegiance, pervert," Luke 23:14; (b) "to make to return, put back," Matt. 26:52; (c) in the passive voice, used reflexively, "to turn oneself away from," Matt. 5:42; 2 Tim. 1:15; Titus 1:14; Heb. 12:25; in the active voice, Acts 3:26. See PERVERT, PUT.¶

3. diastrephō (διαστρέφω, 1294), "to distort" (dia, "asunder"), is rendered "to turn aside," RV (KJV, "... away"), in Acts 13:8. See PERVERT, No. 2.

4. epistrephō (ἐπιστρέφω, 1994) is used (a) transitively, "to make to turn towards" (epi), Luke 1:16, 17; Jas 5:19, 20 (to convert); (b) intransitively, "to turn oneself round," e.g., in the passive voice, Mark 5:30 (see RETURN); in the active voice, Matt. 13:15, RV, "turn again" (KJV, "be converted"); Acts 11:21; 14:15; 15:19; 1 Thess. 1:9, "ye turned," the aorist tense indicating an immediate and decisive change, consequent upon a deliberate choice; conversion is a voluntary act in response to the presentation of truth. See CONVERT.

5. metastrephō (μεταστρέφω, 3344) signifies, in the passive voice, "to be turned" (of a change into something different, meta) in Acts 2:20 and Jas. 4:9: see PERVERT, No. 3.

6. hupostrephō (ὑποστρέφω, 5290) is used intransitively of "turning back, behind" (hupo), e.g., Luke 17:15, "turned back"; in 2:45, RV, "returned": see RETURN.

7. apobainō (ἀποβαίνω, 576), "to go from," is used metaphorically of events, "to issue, turn out," Luke 21:13; Phil. 1:19. See GO, No. 21.

8. metagō (μετάγω, 3329), "to move from one side to another," is rendered "to turn about" in Jas. 3:3, 4.¶

9. metatithēmi (μετατίθημι, 3346), "to change," is translated "turning (the grace of God)" in Jude 4. See CARRY, CHANGE, REMOVE, TRANSLATE.

10. anakamptō (ἀνακάμπτω, 344), ana, "back," kamptō, "to bend," is rendered "shall turn ... again," in Luke 10:6. See RETURN.

11. ektrepō (ἐκτρέπω, 1624), "to cause to turn aside" (ek, "from," trepō, "to turn"), is used in the passive voice, with middle sense, in 1 Tim. 1:6; 5:15; 6:20, RV, "turning away" (KJV, "avoiding"); 2 Tim. 4:4 (2nd clause); Heb. 12:13, "be (not) turned out of the way" (RV, marg., "put out of joint"); some adhere to the meaning "to turn aside, go astray"; the interpretation depends on the antithesis which follows, "but rather be healed" (RV), which is not the antithesis to "turning aside" or being "turned" out of the way; accordingly the marg. is to be preferred (the verb is often used medically).¶ In the Sept., Amos 5:8.¶

12. apotrepō (ἀποτρέπω, 665), "to cause to turn away" (apo), is used in the middle voice in 2 Tim. 3:5.¶

13. peritrepō (περιτρέπω, 4062), "to turn about" (peri), is rendered "doth turn (thee to madness)" in Acts 26:24, RV, KJV, "doth make (thee mad)."¶

14. methistēmi (μεθίστημι, 3179) is used metaphorically in Acts 19:26, "turned away (much people)." See PUT, REMOVE, TRANSLATE.

15. anastatoō (ἀναστατόω, 387), "to stir up, excite, unsettle" (ana, "up," histēmi, "to cause to stand"), is rendered "have turned (the world) upside down" in Acts 17:6. See TROUBLE, UPROAR.

16. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become," is rendered "shall be turned" in John 16:20 (of sorrow into joy).

17. ekklinō (ἐκκλίνω, 1578), "to turn aside" (ek, "from," klinō, "to lean"), is rendered "have ... turned aside" in Rom. 3:12 (KJV, "are ... gone out of the way"); 16:17, RV, "turn away" (KJV, "avoid"); 1 Pet. 3:11, RV, ditto (KJV, "eschew").¶

18. diadechomai (διαδέχομαι, 1237), "to receive through another, to receive in turn" (dia, "through," dechomai, "to receive"), occurs in Acts 7:45, RV, "in their turn ... when they entered" (KJV, "that came after"); the meaning here is "having received (it) after," i.e., as from Moses under Joshua's leadership. In the papyri the word is used similarly of visiting as deputy (see also Field, Notes on the Trans. of the NT, 116).¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 2:22, KJV, anachōreō, "to retire, withdraw," is rendered "turned aside" (RV, "withdrew"). (2) For "turned to flight," klinō, Heb. 11:34, see FLIGHT, B. (3) For the phrase "by turn" in 1 Cor. 14:27 see COURSE, B, Note (3).

TURNING

tropē (τροπή, 5157), used especially of the revolution of the heavenly orbs (akin to trepō, "to turn"), occurs in Jas. 1:17, "(neither shadow) that is cast by turning," RV (KJV, "of turning"). For a more detailed treatment of the passage, see SHADOW, No. 2.¶

For TURTLEDOVE see DOVE

For TUTOR see GUARDIAN and INSTRUCTOR, No. 1.

TWAIN, TWO

duo (δύο, 1417) is rendered "twain" in Matt. 5:41; 19:5, 6; 21:31; 27:21, 51; Mark 10:8 (twice); 15:38; in 1 Cor. 6:16 and Eph. 5:31, RV (KJV, "two"); Eph. 2:15; in Rev. 19:20, RV (KJV, "both").

Notes: (1) In the following phrases the numeral is used distributively: (a) ana duo, "two apiece," John 2:6 (in some mss., Luke 9:3); in Luke 10:1, "two and two" ("by twos"); (b) kata duo, "by two," 1 Cor. 14:27; (c) duo duo, "by two and two," lit., "two (and) two," Mark 6:7 (not a Hebraism; the form of expression is used in the papyri); (d) eis duo, "into two," "in twain," Matt. 27:51 and Mark 15:38 (see above). (2) In Luke 17:34 duo stands for "two men"; in v. 35 for "two women."

TWELFTH

dōdekatos (δωδέκατος, 1428) occurs in Rev. 21:20.¶

TWELVE

dōdeka (δώδεκα, 1427) is used frequently in the Gospels for the twelve apostles, and in Acts 6:2; 1 Cor. 15:5; Rev. 21:14b; of the tribes of Israel, Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:30; Jas. 1:1; Rev. 21:12c (cf. 7:5–8; 12:1); in various details relating to the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:12–21; 22:2. The number in general is regarded as suggestive of divine administration.

TWENTY

eikosi (εἴκοσι, 1501) occurs in Luke 14:31; John 6:19; Acts 1:15; 27:28; 1 Cor. 10:8; of the "four and twenty" elders, in Rev. 4:4 (twice), 10; 5:8; 11:16; 19:4 (combined in one numeral with tessares, "four," in some mss.).¶

dis (δίς, 1364) occurs in Mark 14:30, 72; Luke 18:12; Jude 12; combined with muriades, "ten thousand," in Rev. 9:16; rendered "again" in Phil. 4:16 and 1 Thess. 2:18. See AGAIN.¶

rhipē (ῥιπή, 4493), akin to rhiptō, "to hurl," was used of any rapid movement, e.g., the throw of a javelin, the rush of wind or flame; in 1 Cor. 15:52 of the "twinkling" of an eye.¶

For TWO see TWAIN

TWO-EDGED

distomos (δίστομος, 1366), lit., "two-mouthed" (dis, and stoma, "a mouth"), was used of rivers and branching roads; in the NT of swords, Heb. 4:12; Rev. 1:16; 2:12, RV, "two-edged" (KJV, "with two edges").¶ In the Sept., Judg. 3:16; Ps. 149:6; Prov. 5:4.¶

For TWOFOLD MORE see DOUBLE

TWO HUNDRED

diakosioi (διακόσιοι, 1250) occurs in Mark 6:37; John 6:7; 21:8; Acts 23:23 (twice); 27:37, "two hundred (threescore and sixteen)"; Rev. 11:3, "(a thousand) two hundred (and threescore)"; so 12:6.¶

Note: In Acts 27:37, some ancient authorities read "about threescore and sixteen souls" (RV, margin). The confusion was quite natural when the word diakosioi was not written in full but represented by one Greek letter. The larger number is by no means improbable: Josephus sailed for Rome in A.D. 63 in a ship which had 600 on board (Life, ch. 3).

For TWO THOUSAND see THOUSAND, Note (1)

U

For UNAPPROACHABLE, 1 Tim. 6:16, RV, see APPROACH, B

UNAWARES

Notes: (1) In Heb. 13:2, lanthanō, "to escape notice," is used with the aorist participle of xenizō, "to entertain," signifying "entertained . . . unawares" (an idiomatic usage common in classical Greek). (2) For aiphnidios, "unawares," in Luke 21:34, KJV, see SUDDENLY. (3) In Gal. 2:4, KJV, pareisaktos, "brought in secretly," is rendered "unawares brought in." See PRIVILY, Note: cf. BRING, No. 17.¶ (4) In Jude 4, KJV, pareisdunō, "to slip in secretly," is rendered "crept in unawares." See CREEP, A, No. 2.¶.

UNBELIEF

1. apistia (ἀπιστία, 570), "unbelief" 12 times, but see BELIEF, C, Note (2) for references.

2. apeitheia (ἀπείθεια, 543) is always rendered "disobedience" in the RV; in Rom. 11:30, 32 and Heb. 4:6, 11, KJV, "unbelief." See DISOBEDIENCE, A, No. 1.

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571), an adjective, is used as a noun, rendered "unbeliever" in 2 Cor. 6:15 and 1 Tim. 5:8, RV; plural in 1 Cor. 6:6 and 2 Cor. 6:14; KJV only, Luke 12:46 (RV, "unfaithful"). See BELIEF, C, Note (3) FAITHLESS, INCREDIBLE.

UNBELIEVING

A. Adjective.

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571): see BELIEF, C, Note (3).

B. Verb.

apeitheō (ἀπειθέω, 544): see DISBELIEVE, DISOBEDIENT, C.

UNBLAMEABLE, UNBLAMEABLY

A. Adjectives.

1. amemptos (ἄμεμπτος, 273), "unblameable" (from a, negative, and memphomai, "to find fault"), is so rendered in 1 Thess. 3:13, i.e., "free from all valid charge." See BLAME, B, No. 3.

2. amōmos (ἄμωμος, 299): see BLEMISH, B.

B. Adverb.

amemptōs (ἀμέμπτως, 274) is used in 1 Thess. 2:10, "unblameably," signifying that no charge could be maintained, whatever charges might be made. See BLAME, C.

For UNCEASING see CEASE, B. For UNCEASINGLY, RV, in Rom. 1:9, see CEASE, C

UNCERTAIN, UNCERTAINLY, UNCERTAINTY

A. Adjective.

adēlos (ἄδηλος, 82) denotes (a) "unseen"; with the article, translated "which appear not" (a, negative, dēlos, "evident"), Luke 11:44; (b) "uncertain, indistinct," 1 Cor. 14:8.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 51:6.¶

B. Adverb.

adēlōs (ἀδήλως, 84), "uncertainly" (akin to A), occurs in 1 Cor. 9:26.¶

C. Noun.

adēlotēs (ἀδηλότης, 83), "uncertainty" (akin to A and B), occurs in 1 Tim. 6:17, "(the) uncertainty (of riches)," RV (the KJV translates it as an adjective, "uncertain"), i.e., riches the special character of which is their "uncertainty"; the Greek phrase is a rhetorical way of stressing the noun "riches"; when a genitive (here "of riches") precedes the governing noun (here "uncertainty") the genitive receives emphasis.¶

aparabatos (ἀπαράβατος, 531) is used of the priesthood of Christ, in Heb. 7:24, "unchangeable," "unalterable, inviolable," RV, marg. (a meaning found in the papyri); the more literal meaning in KJV and RV margins, "that doth not pass from one to another," is not to be preferred. This active meaning is not only untenable, and contrary to the constant usage of the word, but does not adequately fit with either the preceding or the succeeding context.¶

For UNCIRCUMCISED and UNCIRCUMCISION see CIRCUMCISION

UNCLEAN

A. Adjectives.

1. akathartos (ἀκάθαρτος, 169), "unclean, impure" (a, negative, kathairo, "to purify"), is used (a) of "unclean" spirits, frequently in the Synoptists, not in John's gospel; in Acts 5:16; 8:7; Rev. 16:13; 18:2a (in the 2nd clause the birds are apparently figurative of destructive satanic agencies); (b) ceremonially, Acts 10:14, 28; 11:8; 1 Cor. 7:14; (c) morally, 2 Cor. 6:17, including (b), RV; "no unclean thing"; Eph. 5:5; Rev. 17:4, RV, "the unclean things" (KJV follows the text which have the noun akathartēs, "the filthiness").

2. koinos (κοινός, 2839), "common," is translated "unclean" in Rom. 14:14 (thrice); in Rev. 21:27, RV (KJV, "that defileth," follows the inferior texts which have the verb koinoō: see B). See COMMON, DEFILE, C, UNHOLY, No. 2.

B. Verb.

koinoō (κοινόω, 2840), to make koinos, "to defile," is translated "unclean" in Heb. 9:13, KJV, where the perfect participle, passive, is used with the article, hence the RV, "them that have been defiled." See DEFILE, A, No. 1.

C. Noun.

akatharsia (ἀκαθαρσία, 167), akin to A, No. 1, denotes "uncleanness," (a) physical, Matt. 23:27 (instances in the papyri speak of tenants keeping houses in good condition); (b) moral, Rom. 1:24; 6:19; 2 Cor. 12:21; Gal. 5:19; Eph. 4:19; 5:3; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 2:3 (suggestive of the fact that sensuality and evil doctrine are frequently associated); 4:7.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:10, KJV, miasmos, "a defilement," is rendered "uncleanness"; see DEFILEMENT, B, No. 2.¶

For UNCLOTHED see STRIP

aschēmōn (ἀσχήμων, 809), "shapeless" (a, negative, schēma, "a form"), the opposite of euschēmōn, "comely," is used in 1 Cor. 12:23.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 34:7; Deut. 24:3.¶

Note: For the verb aschēmoneō, rendered "to behave oneself uncomely" in 1 Cor. 7:36, KJV, see BEHAVE, No. 4.

akatakritos (ἀκατάκριτος, 178), rendered "uncondemned" in Acts 16:37; 22:25 (a, negative, katakrinō, "to condemn"), properly means "without trial, not yet tried." Sir W. M. Ramsay points out that the apostle, in claiming his rights, would probably use the Roman phrase re incognita, i.e., "without investigating our case" (The Cities of St. Paul, p. 225).¶

For UNCORRUPTIBLE see CORRUPT, C, No. 2. For UNCORRUPTNESS, see CORRUPT, B, No. 4

apostegazō (ἀποστεγάζω, 648) signifies "to unroof" (apo, from, stegē, "a roof"), Mark 2:4.¶

For UNCOVERED, 1 Cor. 11:5, 13, see UNVEILED

UNDEFILED

amiantos (ἀμίαντος, 283), "undefiled, free from contamination" (a, negative, miainō, "to defile"), is used (a) of Christ, Heb. 7:26; (b) of pure religion, Jas. 1:27; (c) of the eternal inheritance of believers, 1 Pet. 1:4; (d) of the marriage bed as requiring to be free from unlawful sexual intercourse, Heb. 13:4.¶

UNDER, UNDERNEATH

1. hupokatō (ὑποκάτω, 5270), an adverb signifying "under," is used as a preposition and rendered "under" in Mark 6:11; 7:28; Luke 8:16; Heb. 2:8; Rev. 5:3, 13; 6:9; 12:1; "underneath" in Matt. 22:44, RV (Mark 12:36 in some mss.); John 1:50, RV (KJV, "under").¶

2. katōterō (κατωτέρω, 2736), the comparative degree of katō, "below, beneath," occurs in Matt. 2:16, "under."

3. elasson (ἐλάσσον, 1640), the neuter of the adjective elassōn, "less," is used adverbially in 1 Tim. 5:9, "under" (or "less than"). See LESS.

Notes: (1) The preposition epi, "upon," is rendered "under" in Heb. 7:11; 9:15; 10:28, KJV (RV, "on the word of"). (2) The preposition en, "in," is rendered "under" in Matt. 7:6; Rom. 3:19 (1st part). (3) The usual preposition is hupo.

hupozōnnumi (ὑποζώννυμι, 5269), hupo, "under," zōnnumi, "to gird," is used of frapping a ship, Acts 27:17, bracing the timbers of a vessel by means of strong ropes.¶

UNDERSTAND, UNDERSTOOD

A. Verbs.

1. suniēmi (συνίημι, 4920), primarily, "to bring or set together," is used metaphorically of "perceiving, understanding, uniting" (sun), so to speak, the perception with what is perceived, e.g., Matt. 13:13–15, 19, 23, 51; 15:10; 16:12; 17:13, and similar passages in Mark and Luke; Acts 7:25 (twice); 28:26, 27; in Rom. 3:11, the present participle, with the article, is used as a noun, lit., "there is not the understanding (one)," in a moral and spiritual sense; Rom. 15:21; 2 Cor. 10:12, RV, "are (without) understanding," KJV, "are (not) wise"; Eph. 5:17, RV, "understand." See CONSIDER, Note (2).

2. noeō (νοέω, 3539), "to perceive with the mind," as distinct from perception by feeling, is so used in Matt. 15:17, KJV, "understand," RV, "perceive"; 16:9, 11; 24:15 (here rather perhaps in the sense of considering) and parallels in Mark (not in Luke); John 12:40; Rom. 1:20; 1 Tim. 1:7; Heb. 11:3; in Eph. 3:4, KJV, "may understand" (RV, "can perceive"); 3:20, "think"; 2 Tim. 2:7, "consider," See CONSIDER, No. 4.¶

3. ginōskō (γινώσκω, 1097), "to know, to come to know," is translated "to understand" in the KJV in Matt. 26:10 and John 8:27 (RV, "to perceive"); KJV and RV in John 8:43; 10:6; in 10:38, RV (in some texts pisteuō, KJV, "believe"); KJV and RV in 12:16; 13:7 RV, KJV, "know" (see Note under KNOW, No. 2); Acts 8:30; in Phil. 1:12, KJV, RV, "know" (in some texts, Acts 24:11, KJV). See KNOW, No. 1.

4. epistamai (ἐπίσταμαι, 1987), "to know well," is rendered "to understand" in Mark 14:68; Jude 10, RV, 2nd clause (KJV, "know"). See KNOW, No. 5.

5. punthanomai (πυνθάνομαι, 4441), "to inquire," is rendered "to understand" in Acts 23:34. See INQUIRE.

6. gnōrizō (γνωρίζω, 1107), "to make known," is rendered "I give . . . to understand" in 1 Cor. 12:3. See KNOW, No. 8.

7. agnoeō (ἀγνοέω, 50), "to be ignorant," is rendered "they understood not" in Mark 9:32; Luke 9:45; in 2 Pet. 2:12, KJV, RV, "they are ignorant of." See IGNORANT, B, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 13:2, KJV, oida, "to know, to perceive," is rendered "understand" (RV, "know"); so in 14:16. (2) For manthanō, rendered "understand in Acts 23:27, KJV, see LEARN, No. 1. (3) In 1 Cor. 13:11, KJV, phroneō, "to be minded," is rendered "I understood" (RV, "I felt"). (4) For parakoloutheō, Luke 1:3, KJV, "have perfect understanding of," see TRACE.

B. Adjectives.

1 eusēmos (εὔσημος, 2154) primarily denotes "conspicuous" or "glorious" (as in Ps. 81:3, Sept.; EV, "solemn"¶), then, "distinct, clear to understanding," 1 Cor. 14:9, "easy to be understood" (KJV, marg., "significant"). ¶

2. dusnoētos (δυσνόητος, 1425), "hard to be understood" (dus, a prefix like Eng., "mis- or un-," and A, No. 2), occurs in 2 Pet. 3:16.¶

UNDERSTANDING

A. Nouns.

1. nous (νοῦς, 3563), for which see MIND, No. 1, is translated "understanding" in Luke 24:45, KJV (RV, "mind"); 1 Cor. 14:14, 15 (twice), 19; Phil. 4:7; Rev. 13:18.

2. sunesis (σύνεσις, 4907), akin to suniēmi, "to set together, to understand," denotes (a) "the understanding, the mind or intelligence," Mark 12:33; (b) "understanding, reflective thought," Luke 2:47; 1 Cor. 1:19, RV, "prudence"; Eph. 3:4, RV (KJV, "knowledge"); Col. 1:9; 2:2; 2 Tim. 2:7¶ See PRUDENCE, No. 2.

3. dianoia (διάνοια, 1271), for which see MIND, No. 2, is rendered "understanding" in Eph. 4:18; 1 John 5:20 (in some texts, Eph. 1:18, KJV, for kardia, "heart," RV).

B. Adjective.

asunetos (ἀσύνετος, 801), "without understanding or discernment" (a, negative, sunetos, "intelligent, understanding"), is translated "without understanding" in Matt. 15:16; Mark 7:18; Rom. 1:31; 10:19, RV, "void of understanding" (KJV, "foolish"); in Rom. 1:21, RV, "senseless" (KJV, "foolish").¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 14:20, KJV, phrēn, "the mind," is translated "understanding" (twice), RV, "mind."

For UNDONE (leave) see LEAVE, No. 1

agnaphos (ἄγναφος, 46), "uncarded" (a, negative, knaptō, "to card wool"), is rendered "undressed," of cloth, in Matt. 9:16 and Mark 2:21, RV (KJV, "new").¶

For UNEQUALLY see YOKED

UNFAITHFUL

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571), "unbelieving, faithless," is translated "unfaithful" in Luke 12:46, RV (KJV, "unbelievers"). See BELIEF, C, Note (3), FAITHLESS, INCREDIBLE.

For UNFEIGNED see DISSIMULATION, C

For UNFRUITFUL see FRUIT, B, No. 2

UNGODLINESS, UNGODLY

A. Noun.

asebeia (ἀσέβεια, 763), "impiety, ungodliness," is used of (a) general impiety, Rom. 1:18; 11:26; 2 Tim. 2:16; Titus 2:12; (b) "ungodly" deeds, Jude 15, RV, "works of ungodliness"; (c) of lusts or desires after evil things, Jude 18. It is the opposite of eusebeia, "godliness."¶

Note: Anomia is disregard for, or defiance of, God's laws; asebeia is the same attitude towards God's Person.

B. Adjective.

asebēs (ἀσεβής, 765), "impious, ungodly" (akin to A), "without reverence for God," not merely irreligious, but acting in contravention of God's demands, Rom. 4:5; 5:6; 1 Tim. 1:9; 1 Pet. 4:18; 2 Pet. 2:5 (v. 6 in some mss.); 3:7; Jude 4, 15 (twice).¶

C. Verb.

asebeō (ἀσεβέω, 764), akin to A and B, signifies (a) "to be or live ungodly," 2 Pet. 2:6; (b) "to commit ungodly deeds," Jude 15.¶

UNHOLY

1. anosios (ἀνόσιος, 462) (a, negative, n, euphonic, hosios, "holy"), "unholy, profane," occurs in 1 Tim. 1:9; 2 Tim. 3:2.¶ Cf. HOLY. In the Sept., Ezek. 22:9.¶

2. koinon (κοινόν, 2839), the neut. of koinos, "common," is translated "an unholy thing" in Heb. 10:29. See COMMON, DEFILE, C, UNCLEAN, A, No. 2.

For UNITED, Rom. 6:5, RV, see PLANT, C; in Heb. 4:2, see MIXED (with), Note henotēs (ἑνότης, 1775), from hen, the neuter of heis, "one," is used in Eph. 4:3, 13.¶

adikos (ἄδικος, 94), "not in conformity with dikē, 'right,'" is rendered "unjust" in the KJV and RV in Matt. 5:45; Luke 18:11; Acts 24:15; elsewhere for the KJV "unjust" the RV has "unrighteous." See UNRIGHTEOUS.

Note: For adikeō, "to be unrighteous," or "do unrighteousness," Rev. 22:11, RV, and adikia, "unrighteous," Luke 16:8 and 18:6, RV, see UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

For UNKNOWN see IGNORANCE, B, No. 1, and KNOW, B, No. 4

apophortizō (ἀποφορτίζω, 670), "to discharge a cargo" (apo, "from," phortizō, "to load"), is used in Acts 21:3.¶

UNLAWFUL

athemitos (ἀθέμιτος, 111), a late form for athemistos (themis, "custom, right"; in classical Greek, "divine law"), "contrary to what is right," is rendered "an unlawful thing" (neuter) in Acts 10:28; in 1 Pet. 4:3, "abominable."¶

Note: For 2 Pet. 2:8, KJV, see LAWLESS.

UNLEARNED

1. agrammatos (ἀγράμματος, 62), lit., "unlettered" (grammata, "letters": graphō, "to write"), Acts 4:13, is explained by Grimm-Thayer as meaning "unversed in the learning of the Jewish schools"; in the papyri, however, it occurs very frequently in a formula used by one who signs for another who cannot write, which suggests that the rulers, elders and scribes regarded the apostles as "unlettered" (Moulton and Milligan).¶

2. amathēs (ἀμαθής, 261), "unlearned" (manthanō, "to learn"), is translated "unlearned" in 2 Pet. 3:16, KJV (RV, "ignorant").¶

3. apaideutos (ἀπαίδευτος, 521), "uninstructed" (paideuō, "to train, teach"), is translated "unlearned" in 2 Tim. 2:23, KJV (RV, "ignorant").¶

Note: For idiōtēs, rendered "unlearned" in 1 Cor. 14:16, 23, 24, see IGNORANT, No. 4.

For UNLEAVENED see BREAD, No. 2

For UNLESS see EXCEPT

anakaluptō (ἀνακαλύπτω, 343), "to uncover, unveil," used in 2 Cor. 3:14 with the negative mē, "not," is rendered "unlifted," RV, KJV, "untaken away" (a paraphrase rather than translation); the RV marg., "remaineth, it not being revealed that it is done away," is not to be preferred. The best rendering seems to be, "the veil remains unlifted (for it is in Christ that it is done away)." Judaism does not recognize the vanishing of the glory of the Law as a means of life, under God's grace in Christ. In 3:18 the RV, "unveiled (face)" (KJV, "open"), continues the metaphor of the veil (vv. 13–17), referring to hindrances to the perception of spiritual realities, hindrances removed in the unveiling.¶

luō (λύω, 3089), "to loose," is rendered "to unloose" in Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; John 1:27; in Acts 13:25, RV: see LOOSE.

UNMARRIED

agamos (ἄγαμος, 22), a, negative, gameō, "to marry," occurs in 1 Cor. 7:8, 11, 32, 34.¶

UNMERCIFUL

aneleēmōn (ἀνελεήμων, 415), "without mercy" (a, negative, n, euphonic, eleēmōn, "merciful"), occurs in Rom. 1:31.¶

For UNMIXED, Rev. 14:10, RV, see MIXTURE, Note

For UNMOVABLE, Acts 27:41, see MOVE, B, No. 1; in 1 Cor. 15:58, MOVE, B, No. 2

UNPREPARED

aparaskeuastos (ἀπαρασκεύαστος, 532), from a, negative, and paraskeuazō (see PREPARE, B, No. 4), occurs in 2 Cor. 9:4.¶

UNPROFITABLE, UNPROFITABLENESS

A. Adjectives.

1. achreios (ἀχρεῖος, 888), "useless" (chreia, "use"), "unprofitable," occurs in Matt. 25:30 and Luke 17:10.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 6:22.¶

2. achrēstos (ἄχρηστος, 890), "unprofitable, unserviceable" (chrēstos, "serviceable"), is said of Onesimus, Philem. 11, antithetically to eu-

chrēstos, "profitable," with a play on the name of the converted slave (from onēsis, "profit").¶

Note: Achreios is more distinctly negative than achrēstos, which suggests positively hurtful.

3. alusitelēs (ἀλυσιτελής, 255), "not advantageous, not making good the expense involved" (lusitelēs, "useful"), occurs in Heb. 13:17.¶

4. anōphelēs (ἀνωφελής, 512), "not beneficial or serviceable" (a, negative, n, euphonic, ōpheleō, "to do good, to benefit"), is rendered "unprofitable" in Titus 3:9; in the neuter, used as a noun, "unprofitableness," Heb. 7:18, said of the Law as not accomplishing that which the "better hope" could alone bring.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 28:3; Isa. 44:10; Jer. 2:8.¶

B. Verb.

achreoō, or achreioō (ἀχρεόω, 889), akin to A, No. 1, "to make useless," occurs in Rom. 3:12, in the passive voice, rendered "they have ... become unprofitable."¶

For UNQUENCHABLE see QUENCH

UNREASONABLE

1. alogos (ἄλογος, 249), "without reason, irrational," is rendered "unreasonable" in Acts 25:27. See BRUTE.

2. atopos (ἄτοπος, 824), lit., "out of place" (topos, "a place"), is translated "unreasonable" in 2 Thess. 3:2, where the meaning intended seems to be "perverse, truculent." See AMISS.

For UNREBUKEABLE see BLAME, B, No. 5

adikos (ἄδικος, 94), not conforming to dikē, "right," is translated "unrighteous" in Luke 16:10 (twice), RV, 11; Rom. 3:5; 1 Cor. 6:1, RV; 6:9; Heb. 6:10; 1 Pet. 3:18, RV; 2 Pet. 2:9, RV: see UNJUST.

UNRIGHTEOUSNESS

A. Noun.

adikia (ἀδικία, 93) denotes (a) "injustice," Luke 18:6, lit., "the judge of injustice"; Rom. 9:14; (b) "unrighteousness, iniquity," e.g., Luke 16:8, lit., "the steward of unrighteousness," RV marg., i.e., characterized by "unrighteousness"; Rom. 1:18, 29; 2:8; 3:5; 6:13; 1 Cor. 13:6, RV, "unrighteousness"; 2 Thess. 2:10, "[with all (lit., 'in every) deceit'] of unrighteousness," i.e., deceit such as "unrighteousness" uses, and that in every variety; Antichrist and his ministers will not be restrained by any scruple from words or deeds calculated to deceive; 2 Thess. 2:12, of those who have pleasure in it, not an intellectual but a moral evil; distaste for truth is the precursor of the rejection of it; 2 Tim. 2:19, RV; 1 John 1:9, which includes (c); (c) "a deed or deeds violating law and justice" (virtually the same as adikēma, "an unrighteous act"), e.g., Luke 13:27, "iniquity"; 2 Cor. 12:13, "wrong," the wrong of depriving another of what is his own, here ironically of a favor; Heb. 8:12, 1st clause, "iniquities," lit., "unrighteousnesses" (plural, not as KJV); 2 Pet. 2:13, 15, RV, "wrongdoing," KJV, "unrighteousness"; 1 John 5:17. See INIQUITY.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 6:14, KJV, anomia, "lawlessness," is translated "unrighteousness" (RV, "iniquity"). (2) Adikia is the comprehensive term for wrong, or wrongdoing, as between persons; anomia, "lawlessness," is the rejection of divine law, or wrong committed against it.

B. Verb.

adikeō (ἀδικέω, 91), "to do wrong," is rendered in Rev. 22:11, RV, firstly, "he that is unrighteous," lit., "the doer of unrighteousness" (present participle of the verb, with the article), secondly, "let him do unrighteousness (still)," the retributive and permanent effect of a persistent course of unrighteous-doing (KJV, "he that is unjust, let him be unjust"). See HURT, OFFENDER, Note, WRONG.

For UNRIPE, UNTIMELY, see FIG, No. 2

UNRULY

1. anupotaktos (ἀνυπότακτος, 506), "not subject to rule" (a, negative, n, euphonic, hupotassō, "to put in subjection"), is used (a) of things, Heb. 2:8, RV, "not subject" (KJV, "not put under"); (b) of persons, "unruly," 1 Tim. 1:9, RV (KJV, "disobedient"); Titus 1:6, 10. See DISOBEDIENT, B, Note.¶

2. ataktos (ἄτακτος, 814) is rendered "unruly" in 1 Thess. 5:14, KJV (marg. and RV, "disorderly"). See DISORDERLY, A.¶

Note: In Jas. 3:8, some texts have akatastetos, "that cannot be restrained," KJV, "unruly": see RESTLESS.¶

UNSEARCHABLE

1. anexeraunētos, or anexereunētos (ἀνεξεραύνητος, 419), a, negative, n, euphonic, ex (ek), "out," eraunaō, "to search, examine," is used in Rom. 11:33, of the judgments of God.¶

2. anexichniastos (ἀνεξιχνίαστος, 421), with the same prefixes as in No. 1, and an adjectival form akin to ichneuō, "to trace out" (ichnos, "a footprint, a track"), is translated "unsearchable" in Eph. 3:8, of the riches of Christ; in Rom. 11:33, "past tracing out," of the ways of the Lord (cf. No. 1, in the same verse). The ways of God are the outworkings of His judgment. Of the two questions in v. 34, the first seems to have reference to No. 1, the second to No. 2. See FIND, Note (3), TRACE.¶

UNSEEMLINESS, UNSEEMLY

aschēmosunē (ἀσχημοσύνη, 808), from aschēmōn, "unseemly," is rendered "unseemliness" in Rom. 1:27, RV: see SHAME, No. 4.

Note: For "behave . . . unseemly" see BEHAVE, No. 4.

For UNSETTLE, Gal. 5:12, RV, see STIR, No. 12

For UNSKILLFUL, Heb. 5:13, see EXPERIENCE, No. 1

UNSPEAKABLE

1. anekdiēgētos (ἀνεκδιήγητος, 411) denotes "inexpressible" (a, negative, n, euphonic, ekdiēgeomai, "to declare, relate"), 2 Cor. 9:15, "unspeakable" (of the gift of God); regarding the various explanations of the gift, it seems most suitable to view it as the gift of His Son.¶

2. aneklalētos (ἀνεκλάλητος, 412) denotes "unable to be told out" (eklaleō, "to speak out"), 1 Pet. 1:8, of the believer's joy.¶

3. arrhētos (ἄρρητος, 731), primarily, "unspoken" (a, negative, rhētos, "spoken"), denotes "unspeakable," 2 Cor. 12:4, of the words heard by Paul when caught up into paradise.¶ The word is common in sacred inscriptions especially in connection with the Greek Mysteries; hence Moulton and Milligan suggest the meaning "words too sacred to be uttered."

For UNSPOTTED see SPOT, C

UNSTABLE, UNSTEADFAST

1. astēriktos (ἀστήρικτος, 793), a, negative, stērizō, "to fix," is used in 2 Pet. 2:14; 3:16, KJV, "unstable," RV, "unsteadfast."¶

2. akatastatos (ἀκατάστατος, 182), from kathistēmi, "to set in order," is rendered "unstable" in Jas. 1:8: see RESTLESS.

For UNTAKEN AWAY, 2 Cor. 3:14, KJV, see UNLIFTED

acharistos (ἀχάριστος, 884) denotes "ungrateful, thankless" (charis, "thanks"), Luke 6:35; 2 Tim. 3:2.¶

For UNTIL and UNTO see †, p. 1

For UNTIMELY see FIG, No. 2

For UNTOWARD see CROOKED

UNVEILED

akatakaluptos (ἀκατακάλυπτος, 177), "uncovered" (a, negative, katakaluptō, "to cover"), is used in 1 Cor. 11:5, 13, RV, "unveiled," with reference to the injunction forbidding women to be "unveiled" in a church gathering.¶ Whatever the character of the covering, it is to be on her head as "a sign of authority" (v. 10), RV, the meaning of which is indicated in v. 3 in the matter of headships, and the reasons for which are given in vv. 7–9, and in the phrase "because of the angels," intimating their witness of, and interest in, that which betokens the headship of Christ. The injunctions were neither Jewish, which required men to be veiled in prayer, nor Greek, by which men and women were alike "unveiled." The apostle's instructions were "the commandment of the Lord" (14:37) and were for all the churches (vv. 33, 34).

Note: For the verb anakaluptō, rendered "unveiled" in 2 Cor. 3:18, RV, see UNLIFTED (2nd ref.).

aniptos (ἄνιπτος, 449), "unwashed" (a, negative, niptō, "to wash"), occurs in Matt. 15:20; Mark 7:2 (v. 5 in some mss.).¶

UNWILLING

Note: "I am unwilling" is the RV rendering of thelō, "to will," with the negative ou, in 3 John 13 (KJV, "I will not").

UNWISE

1. anoētos (ἀνόητος, 453) is translated "unwise" in Rom. 1:14, KJV; see FOOLISH, No. 2.

2. aphrōn (ἄφρων, 878) is translated "unwise" in Eph. 5:17, KJV; see FOOLISH, No. 1.

3. asophos (ἄσοφος, 781), a, negative, is rendered "unwise" in Eph. 5:15, RV (KJV, "fools").¶

UNWORTHILY, UNWORTHY

A. Adverb.

anaxiōs (ἀναξίως, 371) is used in 1 Cor. 11:27, of partaking of the Lord's Supper "un-worthily," i.e., treating it as a common meal, the bread and cup as common things, not apprehending their solemn symbolic import. In the best texts the word is not found in v. 29 (see RV).¶

B. Adjective.

anaxios (ἀνάξιος, 370), a, negative, n, euphonic, axios, "worthy," is used in 1 Cor. 6:2. In modern Greek it signifies "incapable."¶

Note: In Acts 13:46, "unworthy" represents the adjective axios, preceded by the negative ouk.

UP

Notes: (1) In Matt. 13:6 and Mark 4:6, KJV, anatellō, "to rise" (of the sun), is rendered "was up." See RISE. (2) The adverb is used with numerous Eng. verbs to translate single Greek verbs. In John 11:41 and Heb. 12:15, however, the adverb anō, "up," is used separately: see ABOVE, BRIM, HIGH.

For UPBRAID see REPROACH, B, No. 1

UPHOLD

pherō (φέρω, 5342), "to bear, carry, uphold," is rendered "upholding" in Heb. 1:3. See BEAR.

For UPON see †, p. 1

For UPPER see CHAMBER, COUNTRY, B, No. 1, ROOM

UPPERMOST

Note: In Luke 11:43 prōtokathedria, "a chief seat," is translated "uppermost seats," KJV (RV, "chief seats"). In Matt. 23:6 and Mark 12:39, KJV, prōtoklisia, "a chief place," is translated "uppermost rooms" (RV, "chief place" and "chief places"). See CHIEF, B, Nos. 6 and 7.

For UPRIGHT see STRAIGHT, No. 2; UPRIGHTLY see WALK, No. 6 euthutēs (εὐθύτης, 2118), from euthus, "straight," is rendered "uprightness" in Heb. 1:8, RV, KJV, "righteousness," marg., "rightness," or, "straightness."¶

For UPROAR (Noun), thorubos, see TUMULT, and for stasis see RIOT

UPROAR (Verbs)

thorubeō (θορυβέω, 2350), used in the middle voice, denotes "to make a noise or uproar," or, transitively, in the active voice, "to trouble, throw into confusion," Acts 17:5. See ADO, NOISE, TROUBLE.

Note: For suncheō, "to confuse," Acts 21:31 (KJV, "was in an uproar"), see CONFUSION; for anastatoō, Acts 21:38 (KJV, "madest an uproar"), see STIR UP.

For UPSIDE DOWN see TURN, No. 15

URGE

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:50, KJV, parotrunō, "to urge on" (RV), is rendered "stirred up."¶ (2) In Acts 13:43, peithō, "to persuade," is rendered "urged," RV (KJV, "persuaded"). (3) For enechō, rendered "to urge" in Luke 11:53, KJV, see ENTANGLE, No. 3.

US

The oblique cases of hēmeis, "we," are the genitive hēmōn, "of us," the dative hēmin, "to us," the accusative hēmas, "us." When the nominative hēmeis is used, it is always emphatic, e.g., John 11:16, "(let) us (go)"; lit., "we, let us go"; 1 Thess. 5:8, "let us . . . be sober," lit., "we . . . let us be sober." Sometimes the oblique cases are governed by prepositions.

USE (Noun), USEFUL

1. hexis (ἕξις, 1838), akin to echō, "to have," denotes "habit, experience," "use," Heb. 5:14.¶

2. chreia (χρεία, 5532), "need," is translated "uses" in Titus 3:14; in Eph. 4:29, KJV, "(for the) use (of edifying)," RV, "(as the) need (may be)." See NECESSITY, NEED.

3. chrēsis (χρῆσις, 5540), "use" (akin to chraomai, "to use"), occurs in Rom. 1:26, 27.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 2:21, the adjective euchrēstos, "useful, serviceable" (eu, "well," chraomai, "to use"), is translated "meet for . . . use"; in 4:11, "useful," RV (KJV, "profitable"); in Philem. 11, "profitable." See PROFITABLE, B, No. 2.¶ (2) In 1 Cor. 8:7 the best texts have the noun sunētheia, RV, "being used," lit., "by the custom (of the idol)," i.e., by being associated. See CUSTOM. In the Sept., Prov. 31:13.¶ Contrast achrēstos, "unprofitable," Philem. 11.¶

USE (Verb)

1. chraomai (χράομαι, 5531), from chrē, "it is necessary," denotes (a) "to use," Acts 27:17; 1 Cor. 7:21, where "use it rather" means "use your bondservice rather"; 7:31, where "they that use (this world)" is followed by the strengthened form katachraomai, rendered "abusing," or "using to the full" (RV, marg.); 9:12, 15; 2 Cor. 1:17; 3:12; 13:10; 1 Tim. 1:8, of "using" the Law lawfully, i.e., agreeably to its designs; 1 Tim. 5:23; (b) "deal with," Acts 27:3. See ENTREAT (to treat). Cf. the active chraō (or kichrēmi), "to lend," Luke 11:5. See LEND.¶

2. echō (ἔχω, 2192), "to have," is rendered "using" in 1 Pet. 2:16 (marg., "having"); see HAVE.

3. anastrephō (ἀναστρέφω, 390) chiefly denotes "to behave, to live in a certain manner," rendered "(were so) used" in Heb. 10:33 (passive voice); the verb, however, does not mean "to treat or use"; here it has the significance of "living amidst sufferings, reproaches," etc. See ABIDE, BEHAVE, LIVE, OVERTHROW, PASS, RETURN.

Notes: (1) In Acts 19:19, KJV, prassō, "to practice" (RV), is rendered "used." (2) For Heb. 5:13, KJV, "useth (milk)," see PARTAKE, B, No. 3. (3) In 1 Thess. 2:5, "were we found using" is the rendering of the verb ginomai, "to become," with the preposition en, "in," governing the noun, "words (or speech) [of flattery]"; this idiomatic phrase signifies "to be engaged in, to resort to." A rendering close to the meaning of the Greek is "for neither at any time did we fall into the use of flattering speech"; cf. 1 Tim. 2:14, "fallen into transgression." (4) "To use" is combined in Eng. with other words, e.g., DECEIT, DESPITEFULLY, HOSPITALITY, REPETITIONS.

USING

apochrēsis (ἀπόχρησις, 671), a strengthened form of chrēsis, "a using," and signifying "a misuse" (akin to apochraomai, "to use to the full, abuse"), is translated "using" in Col. 2:22; the clause may be rendered "by their using up." "The unusual word was chosen for its expressiveness; the chrēsis here was an apochrēsis; the things could not be used without rendering them unfit for further use" (Lightfoot).¶

For USURP see AUTHORITY, B, No. 3

USURY

Note: The RV, "interest," Matt. 25:27; Luke 19:23, is the preferable rendering of tokos here. See INTEREST.¶

For UTMOST PART see END, A, No. 3

UTTER

1. laleō (λαλέω, 2980), "to speak," is rendered "to utter" in 2 Cor. 12:4 and Rev. 10:3, 4 (twice). See PREACH, SAY, SPEAK, TALK, TELL.

2. ereugomai (ἐρεύγομαι, 2044), primarily, "to spit or spue out," or, of oxen, "to bellow, roar," hence, "to speak aloud, utter," occurs in Matt. 13:35.¶ This affords an example of the tendency for certain words to become softened in force in late Greek.

3. aphiēmi (ἀφίημι, 863), "to send forth," is used of "uttering" a cry, Mark 15:37, of Christ's final "utterance" on the cross, RV, "uttered" (KJV, "cried"). See FORGIVE, LAY, Note (2), LEAVE, LET, OMITTED, PUT, REMIT, SUFFER, YIELD.

4. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," is translated "utter" in 1 Cor. 14:9. See GIVE.

5. phthengomai (φθέγγομαι, 5350), "to utter a sound or voice," is translated "uttering" in 2 Pet. 2:18, RV: see SPEAK, No. 4.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:26, alalētos, "inexpressible" (a, negative, laleō, "to speak"), is rendered "which cannot be uttered."¶ (2) In Heb. 5:11, KJV, dusermēneutos, followed by legō, "to speak," [translated "hard of interpretation" (RV), dus (whence "dys-" in Eng., "dyspeptic," etc.), a prefix like Eng., "un–," or "mis–," and hermēneuō, "to interpret"], is rendered "hard to be uttered."¶ logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word," is translated "utterance" in 1 Cor. 1:5; 2 Cor. 8:7; Eph. 6:19. See WORD.

Notes: (1) In Col. 4:3, KJV, logos is rendered "(a door) of utterance." (2) For apophthengomai, rendered "utterance" in Acts 2:4, see SPEAK, No. 5.

For UTTERLY, 1 Cor. 6:7, see ACTUALLY; 2 Pet. 2:12, see CORRUPT, A, No. 2 (b)

UTTERMOST

1. panteles (παντελές, 3838), the neuter of the adjective pantelēs, "complete, perfect," used with eis to ("unto the"), is translated "to the uttermost" in Heb. 7:25, where the meaning may be "finally"; in Luke 13:11 (negatively), "in no wise."¶

2. telos (τέλος, 5056), "an end," is rendered "the uttermost" in 1 Thess. 2:16, said of divine wrath upon the Jews, referring to the prophecy of Deut. 28:15–68; the nation as such, will yet, however, be delivered (Rom. 11:26; cf. Jer. 30:4–11). The full phrase is eis telos, "to the uttermost," which is probably the meaning in John 13:1, "to the end."

Notes: (1) For "uttermost (farthing)," Matt. 5:26, KJV, see LAST. For "uttermost in Acts 24:22, see DETERMINE, No. 5. (2) For "uttermost part (-s)", see END, A, No. 3 (a) and C (b).

VAIN, IN VAIN, VAINLY

A. Adjectives.

1. kenos (κενός, 2756), "empty," with special reference to quality, is translated "vain" (as an adjective) in Acts 4:25; 1 Cor. 15:10, 14 (twice); Eph. 5:6; Col. 2:8; Jas. 2:20; in the following the neuter, kenon, follows the preposition eis, "in," and denotes "in vain," 2 Cor. 6:1; Gal. 2:2; Phil. 2:16 (twice); 1 Thess. 3:5. See EMPTY, B, where the applications are enumerated.

2. mataios (μάταιος, 3152), "void of result," is used of (a) idolatrous practices, Acts 14:15, RV, "vain things" (KJV, "vanities"); (b) the thoughts of the wise, 1 Cor. 3:20; (c) faith, if Christ is not risen, 1 Cor. 15:17; (d) questionings, strifes, etc., Titus 3:9; (e) religion, with an unbridled tongue, Jas. 1:26; (f) manner of life, 1 Pet. 1:18.¶ For the contrast between No. 1 and No. 2 see EMPTY.

Note: For mataiologoi, Titus 1:10, see TALKERS (vain).¶

B. Verbs.

1. mataioō (ματαιόω, 3154), "to make vain, or foolish," corresponding in meaning to A, No. 2, occurs in Rom. 1:21, "became vain."¶

2. kenoō (κενόω, 2758), "to empty," corresponding to A, No. 1, is translated "should be in vain" in 2 Cor. 9:3, KJV. See EFFECT, EMPTY, VOID.

C. Adverbs.

1. matēn (μάτην, 3155), properly the accusative case of matē, "a fault, a folly," signifies "in vain, to no purpose," Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7.¶

2. dōrean (δωρεάν, 1432), the accusative of dōrea, "a gift," is used adverbially, denoting (a) "freely" (see FREE, D); (b) "uselessly," "in vain," Gal. 2:21, KJV (RV, "for nought"). See CAUSE, A, under "without a cause."

3. eikē (εἰκῇ, 1500) denotes (a) "without cause," "vainly," Col. 2:18; (b) "to no purpose," "in vain," Rom. 13:4; Gal. 3:4 (twice); 4:11. See CAUSE, A, Note (1), under "without a cause."

VAINGLORY, VAINGLORIOUS

A Nouns.

1. kenodoxia (κενοδοξία, 2754), from kenos, "vain, empty," doxa, "glory," is used in Phil. 2:3.¶

2. alazoneia, or -ia (ἀλαζονεία, 212) denotes "boastfulness, vaunting," translated "vainglory" in 1 John 2:16, RV (KJV, "pride"); in Jas. 4:16, RV, "vauntings" (KJV, "boastings"). Cf. alazōn, "a boaster."¶

B. Adjective.

kenodoxos (κενόδοξος, 2755), akin to A, No. 1, is rendered "vainglorious" in Gal. 5:26, RV (KJV, "desirous of vain glory").¶

For VALIANT see MIGHTY, B, No. 2, STRONG, No. 2 (a) (3)

VALLEY

pharanx (φάραγξ, 5327) denotes "a ravine or valley," sometimes figurative of "a condition of loneliness and danger" (cf. Ps. 23:4); the word occurs in Luke 3:5 (from the Sept. of Isa. 40:4).¶

VALUE

A. Verb.

diapherō (διαφέρω, 1308), used intransitively, means "to differ, to excel," hence "to be of more value," Matt. 6:26, RV, "are (not) ye of (much) more value" (KJV, "better"); 12:12 and Luke 12:24, ditto; Matt. 10:31; Luke 12:7. See BETTER (be), CARRY, No. 4, DIFFER, DRIVE, No. 7, EXCELLENT, MATTER, Note (1), PUBLISH, No. 2.

Note: For timaō, rendered "to value" in Matt. 27:9 (twice), KJV, see PRICE.

B. Noun.

timē (τιμή, 5092) denotes "a valuing, a price, honor"; in Col. 2:23, RV, "(not of any) value (against the indulgence of the flesh)" [KJV, "(not in any) honor . . . "], i.e., the ordinances enjoined by human tradition are not of any value to prevent (pros, "against"; cf. Acts 26:14) indulgence of the flesh. See HONOR, PRECIOUS, PRICE, SUM.

VANISH, VANISHING

A. Verb.

aphanizō (ἀφανίζω, 853), "to render unseen," is translated "vanisheth away" in Jas. 4:14 (passive voice, lit., "is made to disappear"). See CONSUME, DISFIGURE, PERISH.

Note: In 1 Cor. 13:8, KJV, katargeō, "to abolish," is rendered "it shall vanish away" (RV, ". . . be done away"). See ABOLISH.

B. Noun.

aphanismos (ἀφανισμός, 854), a, negative, phainō, "to cause to appear" (akin to A), occurs in Heb. 8:13, RV, "(nigh unto) vanishing away"; the word is suggestive of abolition.¶

Note: In Luke 24:31, the adjective aphantos (akin to A and B), "invisible," used with ginomai, "to become," and followed by apo, "from," with the plural personal pronoun, is rendered "He vanished out of their sight" (KJV, marg., "He ceased to be seen of them"), lit., "He became invisible from them."¶

mataiotēs (ματαιότης, 3153), "emptiness as to results," akin to mataios (see EMPTY, VAIN), is used (a) of the creation, Rom. 8:20, as failing of the results designed, owing to sin; (b) of the mind which governs the manner of life of the Gentiles, Eph. 4:17; (c) of the "great swelling words" of false teachers, 2 Pet. 2:18.¶

Note: For mataios, in the neut. plur. in Acts 14:15, "vanities," see VAIN, A, No. 2 (a).

VAPOR

atmis (ἀτμίς, 822) is used of "smoke," Acts 2:19; figuratively of human life, Jas. 4:14.¶

VARIABLENESS, VARIATION

parallagē (παραλλαγή, 3883) denotes, in general, "a change" (Eng., "parallax," the difference between the directions of a body as seen from two different points), "a transmission" from one condition to another; it occurs in Jas. 1:17, RV, "variation" (KJV, "variableness"); the reference may be to the sun, which "varies" its position in the sky.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 9:20.¶

dichazō (διχάζω, 1369), "to cut apart, divide in two," is used metaphorically in Matt. 10:35, "to set at variance."¶

Notes: (1) In Gal. 5:20, KJV, eris, "strife" (RV), is rendered "variance." (2) For adiakritos, Jas. 3:17, RV, "without variance" (marg., "doubtfulness, or partiality"), KJV, "without partiality" (marg., "without wrangling"), see PARTIAL.¶

perpereuomai (περπερεύομαι, 4068), "to boast or vaunt oneself" (from perperos, "vainglorious, braggart," not in the NT), is used in 1 Cor. 13:4, negatively of love.¶

For VAUNTINGS see VAINGLORY

For VEHEMENT see DESIRE, A, No. 3

VEHEMENTLY

1. deinōs (δεινῶς, 1171), for which see GRIEVOUS, B, No. 1, is rendered "vehemently" in Luke 11:53.

2. eutonōs (εὐτόνως, 2159), vigorously, is translated "vehemently" in Luke 23:10, of accusations against Christ. See MIGHTY, D.

3. ekperissōs (ἐκπερισσῶς, 1537 and 4053), formed from ek, "out of," and the adverb perissōs, "exceedingly, the more," is found in Mark 14:31, in the best texts (some have ek perissou, the genitive case of the adjective perissos, "more"), RV, "exceeding vehemently" (KJV, "the more vehemently"), of Peter's protestation of loyalty; the RV gives the better rendering.¶

Note: For "brake (KJV, 'beat') vehemently," Luke 6:48, 49, see BEAT, No. 8.

VEIL

1. katapetasma (καταπέτασμα, 2665), lit., "that which is spread out" (petannumi) "before" (kata), hence, "a veil," is used (a) of the inner "veil" of the tabernacle, Heb. 6:19; 9:3; (b) of the corresponding "veil" in the Temple, Matt. 27:51; Mark 15:38; Luke 23:45; (c) metaphorically of the "flesh" of Christ, Heb. 10:20, i.e., His body which He gave up to be crucified, thus by His expiatory death providing a means of the spiritual access of believers, the "new and living way," into the presence of God.¶

2. kalumma (κάλυμμα, 2571), "a covering," is used (a) of the "veil" which Moses put over his face when descending Mount Sinai, thus preventing Israel from beholding the glory, 2 Cor. 3:13; (b) metaphorically of the spiritually darkened vision suffered retributively by Israel, until the conversion of the nation to their Messiah takes place, vv. 14, 15, 16. See under UNLIFTED.¶

3. peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018), rendered "a veil" in the KJV marg. of 1 Cor. 11:15: see COVER, B, No. 1, VESTURE.¶

ekdikēsis (ἐκδίκησις, 1557), lit., "(that which proceeds) out of justice," not, as often with human "vengeance," out of a sense of injury or merely out of a feeling of indignation. The word is most frequently used of divine "vengeance," e.g., Rom. 12:19; Heb. 10:30. For a complete list see AVENGE, B, No. 2. The judgments of God are holy and right (Rev. 16:7), and free from any element of self-gratification or vindictiveness.

Notes: (1) Dikē, "justice," is translated "vengeance" in the KJV of Acts 28:4 and Jude 7: see JUSTICE. (2) In Rom. 3:5, KJV, orgē, "wrath" (RV), is rendered "vengeance": see ANGER, WRATH.

For VENOMOUS see BEAST, No. 2

VERILY

1. alēthōs (ἀληθῶς, 230), "truly" (akin to alētheia, "truth"), is translated "verily" in 1 John 2:5. See INDEED, No. 3, SURELY, TRULY.

2. amēn (ἀμήν, 281), the transliteration of a Heb. word = "truth," is usually translated "verily" in the four Gospels; in John's gospel the Lord introduces a solemn pronouncement by the repeated word "verily, verily" twenty-five times. See AMEN.

3. ontōs (ὄντως, 3689), "really" (connected with eimi, "to be"), is rendered "verily" in Mark 11:32, RV, and Gal. 3:21. See INDEED, No. 4.

Notes: (1) In Acts 16:37, gar, "for," is translated "verily." (2) In Heb. 2:16, dēpou (in some texts dē pou), a particle meaning "of course, we know," is rendered "verily."¶ (3) In Luke 11:51, KJV, nai, "yea" (RV), is translated "verily." (4) The particle men (see INDEED, No. 1) is rendered "verily," e.g., in 1 Cor. 5:3; 14:17; Heb. 12:10; in the KJV, Heb. 3:5; 7:5, 18; 1 Pet. 1:20; in Acts 26:9 it is combined with oun ("therefore"): see YEA, No. 4.

For VERITY, 1 Tim. 2:7, KJV, see TRUTH

VERY

Notes: (1) When "very" forms part of the translation of numerous other words (e.g., act, bold, many, precious, sorrowful, well), there is no separate word in the original. (2) For sphodra, "exceedingly," sometimes rendered "very" in the KJV, see EXCEEDING, B, No. 2. (3) Occasionally one of the forms of the pronoun autos, "self, same," is translated "very"; the RV rendering is sometimes "himself," etc., e.g., 1 Thess. 5:23, "(The God of peace) Himself"; see, however, John 14:11, "(the) very (works)"; Rom. 13:6 and Phil. 1:6, "(this) very (thing)"; Heb. 10:1, "(the) very (image)"; and the RV, "very" (KJV, "same") in Luke 12:12; 20:19; 24:13, 33; Acts 16:18; Rom. 9:17; Eph. 6:22. (4) Sometimes it translates the conjunction kai, in the sense of "even," e.g., Matt. 10:30; in 24:24, KJV, "very" (RV, "even"); Luke 12:59. (5) In Philem. 12, RV, "my very" translates the possessive pronoun emos (in the neuter plural, ema) used with emphasis. (6) In Mark 8:1 some texts have pampollou, "very great," KJV (from pas, "all," polus, "much"), RV, "a great (pollou) multitude" (after palin, "again"). (7) For "very great" in Matt. 21:8 see GREAT, Note (6). (8) The adverb lian is translated "very" in Mark 16:2; 2 Cor. 11:5; 12:11. See EXCEEDING, B, No. 1.

VESSEL

1. skeuos (σκεῦος, 4632) is used (a) of "a vessel or implement" of various kinds, Mark 11:16; Luke 8:16; John 19:29; Acts 10:11, 16; 11:5; 27:17 (a sail); Rom. 9:21; 2 Tim. 2:20; Heb. 9:21; Rev. 2:27; 18:12; (b) of "goods or household stuff," Matt. 12:29 and Mark 3:27, "goods"; Luke 17:31, RV, "goods" (KJV, "stuff"); (c) of "persons," (1) for the service of God, Acts 9:15, "a (chosen) vessel"; 2 Tim. 2:21, "a vessel (unto honor)"; (2) the "subjects" of divine wrath, Rom. 9:22; (3) the "subjects" of divine mercy, Rom. 9:23; (4) the human frame, 2 Cor. 4:7; perhaps 1 Thess. 4:4; (5) a husband and wife, 1 Pet. 3:7; of the wife, probably, 1 Thess. 4:4; while the exhortation to each one "to possess himself of his own vessel in sanctification and honor" is regarded by some as referring to the believer's body [cf. Rom. 6:13; 1 Cor. 9:27; see No. (4)], the view that the "vessel" signifies the wife, and that the reference is to the sanctified maintenance of the married state, is supported by the facts that in 1 Pet. 3:7 the same word timē, "honor," is used with regard to the wife; again in Heb. 13:4, timios, "honorable" (RV, "in honor") is used in regard to marriage; further, the preceding command in 1 Thess. 4 is against fornication, and the succeeding one (v. 6) is against adultery.¶ In Ruth 4:10, Sept., ktaomai, "to possess," is used of a wife.

2. angos (ἄγγος, 30d) denotes "a jar" or "pail," Matt. 13:48, in the best texts (some have No. 3). It is used, in an inscription, of a cinerary urn.¶

3. angeion (ἀγγεῖον, 30) denotes "a small vessel" (a diminutive of No. 2), e.g., for carrying oil, Matt. 25:4.¶

Note: For phaulos, Jas. 3:16, RV, see EVIL, A, No. 3.

1. himation (ἱμάτιον, 2440), "an outer garment," is rendered "vesture" in Rev. 19:13, 16, KJV (RV, "garment"). See APPAREL, No. 2.

2. himatismos (ἱματισμός, 2441), used of "clothing in general," is translated "vesture" in Matt. 27:35, KJV, in a quotation from Ps. 22:18 (RV, following the better texts, omits the quotation); in John 19:24, KJV and RV; see CLOTHING, No. 4.

3. peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018) is translated "vesture" in Heb. 1:12, KJV (RV, "mantle"). See COVER, B, No. 1.

VEX

1. ochleō (ὀχλέω, 3791), "to disturb, trouble," is used in the passive voice, of being "troubled" by evil spirits, Acts 5:16.¶

2. basanizō (βασανίζω, 928), "to torment," is translated "vexed" in 2 Pet. 2:8. See TORMENT.

Notes: (1) In Luke 6:18, the best texts have enochleō, RV, "troubled." See TROUBLE, B, No. 5. (2) In 2 Pet. 2:7, KJV, kataponeō, "to wear down with toil," is translated "vexed." See DISTRESS, B, No. 4. (3) In Acts 12:1, KJV, kakoō, "to afflict" (RV), is translated "to vex." See AFFLICT, No. 1. (4) For Matt. 17:15, KJV, "vexed," see GRIEVOUSLY, B, Note (2).

For VIAL see BOWL VICTORY, VICTORIOUS

A. Nouns.

1. nikē (νίκη, 3529), "victory," is used in 1 John 5:4.¶

2. nikos (νῖκος, 3534), a later form of No. 1, is used in Matt. 12:20; 1 Cor. 15:54, 55, 57.¶

B. Verb.

nikaō (νικάω, 3528), "to conquer, overcome," is translated "(them) that come victorious (from)" in Rev. 15:2, RV (KJV, "that had gotten the victory"). See CONQUER, OVERCOME, PREVAIL.

VICTUALS

episitismos (ἐπισιτισμός, 1979), "provisions, food" (epi, "upon," sitizō, "to feed, nourish"; sitos, "food"), is translated "victuals" in Luke 9:12.¶

Note: In Matt. 14:15, KJV, brōma, "food, meat," is translated "victuals" (RV, "food"). See MEAT.

For VIGILANT, 1 Tim. 3:2, see TEMPERATE; 1 Pet. 5:8, see WATCHFUL

VILE

A. Noun.

atimia (ἀτιμία, 819), "dishonor," is translated "vile" in Rom. 1:26, RV, marg., "(passions) of dishonor." See DISHONOR.

B. Adjectives.

1. rhuparos (ῥυπαρός, 4508), "filthy, dirty," is used (a) literally, of old shabby clothing, Jas. 2:2, "vile"; (b) metaphorically, of moral defilement, Rev. 22:11 (in the best texts).¶ In the Sept., Zech. 3:3, 4.¶

2. ponēros (πονηρός, 4190), "evil," is translated "vile" in Acts 17:5, RV (KJV, "lewd"). See BAD, EVIL.

Note: For "vile" in the KJV of Phil. 3:21, see HUMILIATION.

kōmē (κώμη, 2968), "a village," or "country town," primarily as distinct from a walled town, occurs in the Gospels; elsewhere only in Acts 8:25. The difference between polis, "a city," and kōmē, is maintained in the NT, as in Josephus. Among the Greeks the point of the distinction was not that of size or fortification, but of constitution and land. In the OT the city and the village are regularly distinguished. The Mishna makes the three distinctions, a large city, a city, and a village.

The RV always substitutes "village(-s)" for KJV, "town(-s)," Matt. 10:11; Mark 8:23, 26, 27; Luke 5:17; 9:6, 12; John 7:42; 11:1, 30. See TOWN.

VILLANY

1. rhądiourgia (ῥᾳδιουργία, 4468) lit. and primarily denotes "ease in working" (rhądios, "easy," ergon, "work"), "easiness, laziness"; hence "recklessness, wickedness," Acts 13:10, RV, "villany," KJV, "mischief."¶ In the papyri it is used of "theft."

2. rhądiourgēma (ῥᾳδιούργημα, 4467), "a reckless act" (akin to No. 1), occurs in Acts 18:14, RV, "villany" (KJV, "lewdness").¶

ampelos (ἄμπελος, 288) is used (a) lit., e.g., Matt. 26:29 and parallel passages; Jas. 3:12; (b) figuratively, (1) of Christ, John 15:1, 4, 5; (2) of His enemies, Rev. 14:18, 19, "the vine of the earth" (RV, "vintage" in v. 19), probably figurative of the remaining mass of apostate Christendom.¶

ampelourgos (ἀμπελουργός, 289), "a worker in a vineyard" (from ampelos, "a vine," and ergon), is rendered "vinedresser" in Luke 13:7, RV (KJV, "dresser of the vineyard").¶

VINEGAR

oxos (ὄξος, 3690), akin to oxus, "sharp," denotes "sour wine," the ordinary drink of laborers and common soldiers; it is used in the four Gospels of the "vinegar" offered to the Lord at His crucifixion. In Matt. 27:34 the best texts have oinos, "wine" (RV). Some have oxos (KJV, "vinegar"), but Mark 15:23 (KJV and RV) confirms the RV in the passage in Matthew. This, which the soldiers offered before crucifying, was refused by Him, as it was designed to alleviate His sufferings; the "vinegar" is mentioned in Mark 15:36; so Luke 23:36, and John 19:29, 30.¶ In the Sept., Num. 6:3; Ruth 2:14; Ps. 69:21; Prov. 25:20.¶

VINEYARD

ampelōn (ἀμπελών, 290) is used 22 times in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere in 1 Cor. 9:7.

VIOLENCE, VIOLENT, VIOLENTLY

A. Nouns.

1. bia (βία, 970) denotes "force, violence," said of men, Acts 5:26; 21:35; 24:7; of waves, 27:41.¶

2. hormēma (ὄρμημα, 3731), "a rush" (akin to hormaō, "to urge on, to rush"), is used of the fall of Babylon, Rev. 18:21, KJV, "violence," RV, "mighty fall."¶

3. biastēs (βιαστής, 973), "a forceful or violent man," is used in Matt. 11:12. See FORCE, B, No. 1, Note.¶

Note: In Heb. 11:34, KJV, dunamis, "power" (RV), is rendered "violence."

B. Verbs.

1. diaseiō (διασείω, 1286), "to shake violently," is used in Luke 3:14, "do violence," including intimidation.¶ In the Sept., Job 4:14.¶

2. biazō (βιάζω, 971), in the passive voice, is rendered "suffereth violence" in Matt. 11:12; see FORCE, B, Nos. 1 and 2. Some, e.g., Cremer (Lexicon) and Dalman (Words of Jesus, pp. 139,ff.), hold that the reference is to the antagonism of the enemies of the kingdom, but Luke 16:16 (middle voice: RV, "entereth violently") indicates the meaning as referring to those who make an effort to enter the kingdom in spite of violent opposition: see PRESS, A, No. 3.¶

Note: For hormaō, rendered "ran violently," in Matt. 8:32 and parallels, see RUN, RUSH.

VIPER

echidna (ἔχιδνα, 2191) is probably a generic term for "poisonous snakes." It is rendered "viper" in the NT, (a) of the actual creature, Acts 28:3; (b) metaphorically in Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7.¶

VIRGIN

parthenos (παρθένος, 3933) is used (a) of "the Virgin Mary," Matt. 1:23; Luke 1:27; (b) of the ten "virgins" in the parable, Matt. 25:1, 7, 11; (c) of the "daughters" of Philip the evangelist, Acts 21:9; (d) those concerning whom the apostle Paul gives instructions regarding marriage, 1 Cor. 7:25, 28, 34; in vv. 36, 37, 38, the subject passes to that of "virgin daughters" (RV), which almost certainly formed one of the subjects upon which the church at Corinth sent for instructions from the apostle; one difficulty was relative to the discredit which might be brought upon a father (or guardian), if he allowed his daughter or ward to grow old unmarried. The interpretation that this passage refers to a man and woman already in some kind of relation by way of a spiritual marriage and living together in a vow of virginity and celibacy, is untenable if only in view of the phraseology of the passage; (e) figuratively, of "a local church" in its relation to Christ, 2 Cor. 11:2; (f) metaphorically of "chaste persons," Rev. 14:4.¶

aretē (ἀρετή, 703) properly denotes whatever procures preeminent estimation for a person or thing; hence, "intrinsic eminence, moral goodness, virtue," (a) of God, 1 Pet. 2:9, "excellencies" (KJV, "praises"); here the original and general sense seems to be blended with the impression made on others, i.e., renown, excellence or praise (Hort); in 2 Pet. 1:3, "(by His own glory and) virtue," RV (instrumental dative), i.e., the manifestation of His divine power; this significance is frequently illustrated in the papyri and was evidently common in current Greek speech; (b) of any particular moral excellence, Phil. 4:8; 2 Pet. 1:5 (twice), where virtue is enjoined as an essential quality in the exercise of faith, RV, "(in your faith supply) virtue."¶

Note: In the KJV of Mark 5:30; Luke 6:19;

8:46, dunamis, "power" (RV), is rendered "virtue."

VISIBLE

horatos (ὁρατός, 3707), from horaō, "to see," occurs in Col. 1:16.¶

VISION

1. horama (ὅραμα, 3705), "that which is seen" (horaō), denotes (a) "a spectacle, sight," Matt. 17:9; Acts 7:31 ("sight"); (b) "an appearance, vision," Acts 9:10 (v. 12 in some mss.); 10:3, 17, 19; 11:5; 12:9; 16:9, 10; 18:9.¶

2. horasis (ὅρασις, 3706), "sense of sight," is rendered "visions" in Acts 2:17; Rev. 9:17. See LOOK, B.

3. optasia (ὀπτασία, 3701) (a late form of opsis, "the act of seeing"), from optanō, "to see, a coming into view," denotes a "vision" in Luke 1:22; 24:23; Acts 26:19; 2 Cor. 12:1.¶

VISIT

1. episkeptomai (ἐπισκέπτομαι, 1980), primarily, "to inspect" (a late form of episkopeō, "to look upon, care for, exercise oversight"), signifies (a) "to visit" with help, of the act of God, Luke 1:68, 78; 7:16; Acts 15:14; Heb. 2:6; (b) "to visit" the sick and afflicted, Matt. 25:36, 43; Jas. 1:27; (c) "to go and see," "pay a visit to," Acts 7:23; 15:36; (d) "to look out" certain men for a purpose, Acts 6:3. See LOOK.¶

Note: In the Sept., "to visit with punishment," e.g., Ps. 89:32; Jer. 9:25.

2. historeō (ἱστορέω, 2477), from histōr, "one learned in anything," denotes "to visit" in order to become acquainted with, Gal. 1:18, RV, "visit" (KJV, "see"), RV marg., "become acquainted with."¶

3. epipherō (ἐπιφέρω, 2018), for which see BRING, No. 6, is rendered "visiteth (with wrath)" in Rom. 3:5, RV, KJV, "taketh (vengeance)."

VISITATION

episkopē (ἐπισκοπή, 1984), for which see BISHOP, No. 2, denotes "a visitation," whether in mercy, Luke 19:44, or in judgment, 1 Pet. 2:12.

For VOCATION, Eph. 4:1, see CALL, B

phōnē (φωνή, 5456), "a sound," is used of the voice (a) of God, Matt. 3:17; John 5:37; 12:28, 30; Acts 7:31; 10:13, 15; 11:7, 9; Heb. 3:7, 15; 4:7; 12:19, 26; 2 Pet. 1:17, 18; Rev. 18:4; 21:3; (b) of Christ, (1) in the days of His flesh, Matt. 12:19 (negatively); John 3:29; 5:25; 10:3, 4, 16, 27; 11:43; 18:37; (2) on the cross, Matt. 27:46, and parallel passages; (3) from heaven, Acts 9:4, 7; 22:7, 9, 14; 26:14; Rev. 1:10, 12 (here, by metonymy, of the speaker), 15; 3:20; (4) at the resurrection "to life," John 5:28; 1 Thess. 4:16, where "the voice of the archangel" is, lit., "a voice of an archangel," and probably refers to the Lord's voice as being of an archangelic character; (5) at the resurrection to judgment, John 5:28 [not the same event as (4)]; (c) of human beings on earth, e.g., Matt. 2:18; 3:3; Luke 1:42, in some texts, KJV, "voice", and frequently in the Synoptists; (d) of angels, Rev. 5:11, and frequently in the Apocalypse; (e) of the redeemed in heaven, e.g., Rev. 6:10; 18:22; 19:1, 5; (f) of a pagan god, Acts 12:22; (g) of things, e.g., wind, John 3:8, RV, "voice" (KJV, "sound"). See SOUND.

Notes: (1) In Luke 1:42 (1st part), KJV, anaphōneō, "to lift up one's voice," is rendered "spake out," RV, "lifted up (her) voice." (2) In Acts 26:10, KJV, "I gave my voice" (RV, ". . . vote"): see STONE, No. 2.

VOID

1. kenoō (κενόω, 2758), "to empty, make of no effect," is rendered "to make void," in Rom. 4:14; 1 Cor. 1:17, RV; 9:15; 2 Cor. 9:3, RV. See EFFECT (of none), No. 3, EMPTY, VAIN, B, No. 2.

2. atheteō (ἀθετέω, 114), for which see DISANNUL, No. 1, is rendered "to make void" in Gal. 2:21, RV (KJV, "frustrate"); 3:15, RV.

3. akuroō (ἀκυρόω, 208), for which see DISANNUL, No. 2, is rendered "to make void" in Matt. 15:6; Mark 7:13, RV.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 3:31, KJV, katargeō is translated "to make void." See ABOLISH, EFFECT (of none), No. 2. (2) See also IMPOSSIBLE, B, OFFENSE, UNDERSTANDING.

For VOLUME see ROLL, B

VOLUNTARY

Note: In Col. 2:18, thelō (for which see DESIRE, B, No. 6) is rendered "(in a) voluntary (humility)," present participle, i.e., "being a voluntary (in humility)," KJV marg., RV marg., "of his own mere will (by humility)," en, "in," being rendered as instrumental; what was of one's own mere will, with the speciousness of humility, would mean his being robbed of his prize.

VOMIT

exerama (ἐξέραμα, 1829), "a vomit" (from exeraō, "to disgorge"), occurs in 2 Pet. 2:22.¶

For VOTE, Acts 26:10, RV, see STONE, No. 2

homologeō (ὁμολογέω, 3670), "to agree," is found in the best texts in Acts 7:17, and rendered "vouchsafed," RV, with reference to God's promise to Abraham; some mss. have ōmosen, "swore" (omnumi, "to swear"), as in KJV. See CONFESS, PROFESS, PROMISE, THANKS, B, Note.

euchē (εὐχή, 2171) denotes also "a vow," Acts 18:18; 21:23, with reference to the "vow" of the Nazirite (wrongly spelt Nazarite), see Num. 6, RV; in Jas. 5:15, "prayer." See PRAYER.¶

VOYAGE

ploos or plous (πλόος, 4144) is rendered "a voyage" (pleō, "to sail") in Acts 27:10 (KJV and RV); in 21:7, RV (KJV, "course"); in 27:9, RV (KJV, "sailing"). See COURSE, B, Note (4).¶

kineō (κινέω, 2795), "to move," is used of those who mocked the Lord at His crucifixion, nodding their heads in the direction of the cross as if sneering at this supposed ending of His career, Matt. 27:39; Mark 15:29. Cf. 2 Kings 19:21; Job 16:4; Ps. 22:7; 109:25; Isa. 37:22. See MOVE, No. 1.

WAGES

1. opsōnion (ὀψώνιον, 3800), for which see CHARGE, A, No. 5, denotes (a) "soldiers' pay," Luke 3:14; 1 Cor. 9:7 ("charges"); (b) in general, "hire, wages of any sort," used metaphorically, Rom. 6:23, of sin; 2 Cor. 11:8, of material support which Paul received from some of the churches which he had established and to which he ministered in spiritual things; their support partly maintained him at Corinth, where he forebore to receive such assistance (vv. 9, 10).¶

2. misthos (μισθός, 3408), "hire," is rendered "wages" in John 4:36; in 2 Pet. 2:15, KJV (RV, "hire"). See HIRE, A.

WAIL, WAILING

Notes: (1) For alalazō, rendered "to wail" in Mark 5:38, see CLANGING. (2) For koptō, rendered "to wail" in Rev. 1:7, KJV (RV, "shall mourn") and 18:9, RV, "wail" (KJV, "lament"), see BEWAIL. (3) For pentheō, rendered "to wail" in Rev. 18:15, 19, KJV, see MOURN. (4) For klauthmos, rendered "wailing" in Matt. 13:42, 50, KJV, see WEEP. (5) In Matt. 11:17 and Luke 7:32, KJV, thrēneō, "to wail" (RV), is rendered "to mourn." See BEWAIL, Note (1), MOURN.

WAIT

1. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), for which see EXPECT, No. 1, is rendered "to wait" in John 5:3, KJV; Acts 17:16; 1 Cor. 11:33, RV.

2. apekdechomai (ἀπεκδέχομαι, 553), "to await or expect eagerly," is rendered "to wait for" in Rom. 8:19, 23, 25; 1 Cor. 1:7; Gal. 5:5; Phil 3:20, RV (KJV, "look for"); Heb. 9:28, RV (KJV, "look for"), here "them that wait" represents believers in general, not a section of them; 1 Pet. 3:20 (in the best texts; some have No. 1). See LOOK (for), Note (1).¶

3. prosdechomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), "to look for" with a view to favorable reception, is rendered "to wait for" in Mark 15:43; Luke 2:25; 12:36; 23:51. See LOOK (for), No. 2.

4. prosdokaō (προσδοκάω, 4328), "to await," is rendered "to wait for" in Luke 1:21; 8:40; Acts 10:24; in 27:33, RV "ye wait" (KJV, "have tarried"). See LOOK (for), No. 1.

5. anamenō (ἀναμένω, 362), "to wait for" (ana, "up," used intensively, and menō, "to abide"), is used in 1 Thess. 1:10, of "waiting" for the Son of God from heaven; the word carries with it the suggestion of "waiting" with patience and confident expectancy.¶

6. perimenō (περιμένω, 4037), "to await an event," is used in Acts 1:4, of "waiting" for the Holy Spirit, "the promise of the Father."¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:18.¶

7. proskartereō (προσκαρτερέω, 4342), to continue steadfastly, is rendered "to wait on," in Mark 3:9 and Acts 10:7. See CONTINUE, No. 9 (in the Sept., Num. 13:21¶).

8. paredreuō (παρεδρεύω, 3917a), "to sit constantly beside" (para, "beside," hedra, "a seat"), is used in the best texts in 1 Cor. 9:13, RV, "wait upon (KJV, "at") (the altar)."¶ In the Sept., Prov. 1:21; 8:3.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Thess. 3:5, KJV, hupomonē, "patience" (so RV), is rendered "patient waiting" (marg., "patience"). See PATIENCE. (2) For "lie in wait" in Eph. 4:14, KJV, see WILES. (3) For "lying in wait," Acts 20:19, KJV, and "laid wait," 20:3; 23:30, see PLOT.

WAKE

grēgoreō (γρηγορέω, 1127), translated "wake" in 1 Thess. 5:10, is rendered "watch" in the RV marg., as in the text in v. 6, and the RV in the twenty-one other places in which it occurs in the NT (save 1 Pet. 5:8, "be watchful"). It is not used in the metaphorical sense of "to be alive"; here it is set in contrast with katheudō, "to sleep," which is never used by the apostle with the meaning "to be dead" (it has this meaning only in the case of Jairus' daughter). Accordingly the meaning here is that of vigilance and expectancy as contrasted with laxity and indifference. All believers will live together with Christ from the time of the Rapture described in ch. 4; for all have spiritual life now, though their spiritual condition and attainment vary considerably. Those who are lax and fail to be watchful will suffer loss (1 Cor. 3:15; 9:27; 2 Cor. 5:10, e.g.), but the apostle is not here dealing with that aspect of the subject. What he does make clear is that the Rapture of believers at the second coming of Christ will depend solely on the death of Christ for them, and not upon their spiritual condition. The Rapture is not a matter of reward, but of salvation. See WATCH.

WALK

1. peripateō (περιπατέω, 4043) is used (a) physically, in the Synoptic Gospels (except Mark 7:5); always in the Acts except in 21:21; never in the Pauline Epistles, nor in those of John; (b) figuratively, "signifying the whole round of the activities of the individual life, whether of the unregenerate, Eph. 4:17, or of the believer, 1 Cor. 7:17; Col. 2:6. It is applied to the observance of religious ordinances, Acts 21:21; Heb. 13:9, marg., as well as to moral conduct. The Christian is to walk in newness of life, Rom. 6:4, after the spirit, 8:4, in honesty, 13:13, by faith, 2 Cor. 5:7, in good works, Eph. 2:10, in love, 5:2, in wisdom, Col. 4:5, in truth, 2 John 4, after the commandments of the Lord, v. 6. And, negatively, not after the flesh, Rom. 8:4; not after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 3:3; not in craftiness, 2 Cor. 4:2; not by sight, 5:7; not in the vanity of the mind, Eph. 4:17; not disorderly, 2 Thess. 3:6."* See GO, Note (2) (r).

2. poreuō (πορεύω, 4198), for which see DEPART, No. 8, and GO, No. 1, is used in the middle voice and rendered "to walk" in Luke 1:6, of the general activities of life; so in Luke 13:33, KJV, "walk" (RV, "go on My way"); Acts 9:31; 14:16; 1 Pet. 4:3; 2 Pet. 2:10; Jude, 16, 18.

3. emperipateō (ἐμπεριπατέω, 1704), "to walk about in, or among" (en, "in," and No. 1), is used in 2 Cor. 6:16, of the activities of God in the lives of believers.¶

4. stoicheō (στοιχέω, 4748), from stoichos, "a row," signifies "to walk in line," and is used metaphorically of "walking" in relation to others (No. 1 is used more especially of the individual walk); in Acts 21:24, it is translated "walkest orderly"; in Rom. 4:12, "walk (in . . . steps)"; in Gal. 5:25 it is used of walking "by the Spirit," RV, in an exhortation to keep step with one another in submission of heart to the Holy Spirit, and therefore of keeping step with Christ, the great means of unity and harmony in a church (contrast No. 1 in v. 16; v. 25 begins a new section which extends to 6:10); in 6:16 it is used of walking by the rule expressed in vv. 14, 15; in Phil. 3:16 the reference is to the course pursued by the believer who makes "the prize of the high calling" the object of his ambition.¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 11:6.¶

5. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), "to go through" (dia), is rendered "to walk through" in the KJV of Matt. 12:43 and Luke 11:24 (RV, "passeth through"). See COME, No. 5, PASS, No. 2.

6. orthopodeō (ὀρθοποδέω, 3716), "to walk in a straight path" (orthos, "straight," pous, "a foot"), is used metaphorically in Gal. 2:14, signifying a "course of conduct" by which one leaves a straight track for others to follow ("walked . . . uprightly").¶

Note: In Mark 1:16, KJV, paragō, "to pass along" (RV, "passing along"), is translated "walked."

WALL

1. teichos (τεῖχος, 5038), "a wall," especially one around a town, is used (a) literally, Acts 9:25; 2 Cor. 11:33; Heb. 11:30; (b) figuratively, of the "wall" of the heavenly city, Rev. 21:12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19.¶

2. toichos (τοῖχος, 5109), "a wall," especially of a house, is used figuratively in Acts 23:3, "(thou whited) wall."¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 67.

3. mesotoichon (μεσότοιχον, 3320), "a partition wall" (mesos, "middle," and No. 2), occurs in Eph. 2:14, figuratively of the separation of Gentile from Jew in their unregenerate state, a partition demolished by the Cross for both on acceptance of the gospel. Cf. PARTITION.¶

pēra (πήρα, 4082), "a traveler's leather bag or pouch for holding provisions," is translated "wallet" in the RV (KJV, "scrip"), Matt. 10:10; Mark 6:8; Luke 9:3; 10:4; 22:35, 36.¶ Deissmann (Light from the Ancient East) regards it as an alms-bag.

WALLOW (Verb and Noun)

A. Verb.

kuliō (κυλίω, 2947) in the active voice denotes "to roll, roll along"; in the middle voice in Mark 9:20, rendered "wallowed."¶

B. Noun.

kulismos (κυλισμός, 2946), "a rolling, wallowing," akin to A (some texts have kulisma), is used in 2 Pet. 2:22, of the proverbial sow that had been washed.¶

WANDER

A. Verb.

planaō (πλανάω, 4105), for which see DECEIT, C, No. 6, is translated "to wander" in Heb. 11:38, passive voice, lit., "were made to wander."

Note: In the KJV of 1 Tim. 5:13 and Heb. 11:37, perierchomai, "to go about or around," is translated "to wander about." See GO, No. 29.

B. Noun.

planētēs (πλανήτης, 4107), "a wanderer" (Eng., "planet"), is used metaphorically in Jude 13, of the evil teachers there mentioned as "wandering (stars)."¶ In the Sept., Hos. 9:17.¶

WANT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. husterēsis (ὑστέρησις, 5304), akin to B, No. 1 (below), occurs in Mark 12:14 and Phil. 4:11.¶

2. husterēma (ὑστέρημα, 5305) denotes (more concretely than No. 1) (a) "that which is lacking" (see LACK); (b) "need, poverty, want," rendered "want" in Luke 21:4 (KJV, "penury"); 2 Cor. 8:14 (twice); 9:12; 11:9 (2nd occurence), RV, "want" (KJV, "that which was lacking").

3. chreia (χρεία, 5532) is rendered "want" in Phil. 2:25, KJV (RV, "need"). See BUSINESS.

B. Verbs.

1. hustereō (ὑστερέω, 5302) signifies "to be in want," Luke 15:14; 2 Cor. 11:9 (1st occurrence); Phil. 4:12, RV (KJV "to suffer need"); in John 2:3, KJV, "wanted" (RV, "failed"). See BEHIND, B, No. 1.

2. leipō (λείπω, 3007), "to leave," is rendered "to be wanting" in Titus 1:5 and 3:13, and in the KJV in Jas. 1:4. See LACK, C, No. 3.

WANTONNESS, WANTON, WANTONLY

A. Nouns.

1. aselgeia (ἀσέλγεια, 766), "lasciviousness, licentiousness," is rendered "wantonness" in 2 Pet. 2:18, KJV; see LASCIVIOUSNESS.

2. strēnos (στρῆνος, 4764), "insolent luxury," is rendered "wantonness" in Rev. 18:3, RV (marg., "luxury"; KJV, "delicacies," not a sufficiently strong rendering).¶

B. Verbs.

1. strēniaō (στρηνιάω, 4763), akin to A, No. 2, "to run riot," is rendered "waxed wanton" in Rev. 18:7, RV, and "lived wantonly" in v. 8. See DELICATELY, Note (1). The root of the verb is seen in the Latin strenuus. ¶

2. katastrēniaō (καταστρηνιάω, 2691), an intensive form of No. 1, "to wax wanton against," occurs in 1 Tim. 5:11.¶

WAR (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. polemeō (πολεμέω, 4170) (Eng., "polemics"), "to fight, to make war," is used (a) literally, Rev. 12:7 (twice), RV; 13:4; 17:14; 19:11; (b) metaphorically, Rev. 2:16, RV; (c) hyperbolically, Jas. 4:2. See FIGHT, B, Note (1).¶

2. strateuō (στρατεύω, 4754), used in the middle voice, "to make war" (from stratos, "an encamped army"), is translated "to war" in 2 Cor. 10:3; metaphorically, of spiritual "conflict," 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 2:3, KJV; Jas. 4:1; 1 Pet. 2:11. See SOLDIER, B.

3. antistrateuomai (ἀντιστρατεύομαι, 497), not found in the active voice antistrateuō, "to make war against" (anti), occurs in Rom. 7:23.¶

Note: For "men of war," Luke 23:11, KJV, see SOLDIER, No. 2.

B. Noun.

polemos (πόλεμος, 4171), "war" (akin to A, No. 1), is so translated in the RV, for KJV, "battle," 1 Cor. 14:8; Rev. 9:7, 9; 16:14; 20:8; for KJV, "fight," Heb. 11:34; KJV and RV in Jas. 4:1, hyperbolically of private "quarrels"; elsewhere, literally, e.g., Matt. 24:6; Rev. 11:7. See BATTLE.

WARD

1. phulakē (φυλακή, 5438), "a guard," is used of the place where persons are kept under guard (akin to phulax, "a keeper"), and translated "ward" in Acts 12:10. See CAGE, HOLD (Noun), IMPRISONMENT, PRISON, WATCH.

2. tērēsis (τήρησις, 5084) primarily denotes "a watching" (tēreō, "to watch"); hence "imprisonment, ward," Acts 4:3 (KJV, "hold"); 5:18, RV, "(public) ward" [KJV, "(common) prison"]. See HOLD (Noun), KEEPING, B, PRISON.

Note: For "were kept in ward," Gal. 3:23, see GUARD, B, No. 3, KEEP, No. 6.

WARE OF

phulassō (φυλάσσω, 5442) denotes "to guard, watch"; in 2 Tim. 4:15, "of (whom) be thou ware" (middle voice): see BEWARE, No. 3.

Note: For sunoida, translated "were ware" in Acts 14:6, KJV (RV, "became aware of it"), see KNOW, A, No. 6.

WARFARE

strateia, or -tia (στρατεία, 4756), primarily "a host or army," came to denote "a warfare," and is used of spiritual "conflict" in 2 Cor. 10:4; 1 Tim. 1:18.¶

Note: For the verb "to go a warfare," 1 Cor. 9:7, KJV, see SOLDIER, B, No. 1.

WARM (Verb)

thermainō (θερμαίνω, 2328), "to warm, heat" (Eng. "thermal," etc.), when used in the middle voice, signifies "to warm oneself," Mark 14:54, 67; John 18:18 (twice), 25; Jas. 2:16.¶

WARN

1. noutheteō (νουθετέω, 3560), "to put in mind, warn," is translated "to warn" in the KJV, in the passages mentioned under ADMONISH, B, No. 1 (which see); the RV always translates this word by the verb "to admonish."

2. hupodeiknumi (ὑποδείκνυμι, 5263), primarily, "to show secretly" (hupo, "under," deiknumi, "to show"), hence, generally, "to teach, make known," is translated "to warn" in Matt. 3:7; Luke 3:7; 12:5, RV (KJV, "forewarn"). See FOREWARN, Note, SHEW.

3. chrēmatizō (χρηματίζω, 5537), for which see ADMONISH, B, No. 3, is translated "to warn" in Matt. 2:12, 22; Acts 10:22; Heb. 8:5, RV (KJV, "admonished"); 11:7; 12:25, RV (KJV, "spake").

WAS, WAST, WERE, WERT

Note: When not part of another verb, or phrase, these translate eimi, "to be," e.g., Matt. 1:18, or the following: (a) ginomai, "to become," e.g., Matt. 8:26; (b) huparchō, "to exist," especially when referring to an already existing condition, e.g., Luke 8:41; Acts 5:4 (2nd part); 16:3; 27:12; Rom. 4:19, KJV, "when he was" (RV, "he being"); (c) echō, "to have," e.g., Acts 12:15; (d) apechō, "to be away, to be distant," e.g., Luke 7:6; 24:13; (e) mellō, "to be about to," e.g., Luke 19:4; Acts 21:27, 37, KJV (RV, "was about to"); (f) sumbainō, "to come to pass, happen," e.g., Acts 21:35; (g) in Gal. 4:28, the preposition kata, "according to," is rendered "was," in the phrase "as Isaac was," lit., "like Isaac"; as Isaac's birth came by divine interposition, so does the spiritual birth of every believer.

WASH

1. niptō (νίπτω, 3538) is chiefly used of "washing part of the body," John 13:5 6, 8 (twice, figuratively in 2nd clause), 12, 14 (twice); in 1 Tim. 5:10, including the figurative sense; in the middle voice, to wash oneself, Matt. 6:17; 15:2; Mark 7:3; John 9:7, 11, 15; 13:10.¶ For the corresponding noun see BASON.

2. aponiptō (ἀπονίπτω, 633), "to wash off," is used in the middle voice, in Matt. 27:24.¶

3. louō (λούω, 3068) signifies "to bathe, to wash the body," (a) active voice, Acts 9:37; 16:33; (b) passive voice, John 13:10, RV, "bathed" (KJV, "washed"); Heb. 10:22, lit., "having been washed as to the body," metaphorical of the effect of the Word of God upon the activities of the believer; (c) middle voice, 2 Pet. 2:22. Some inferior mss. have it instead of luō, "to loose," in Rev. 1:5 (see RV).¶

4. apolouō (ἀπολούω, 628), "to wash off or away," is used in the middle voice, metaphorically, "to wash oneself," in Acts 22:16, where the command to Saul of Tarsus to "wash away" his sins indicates that by his public confession, he would testify to the removal of his sins, and to the complete change from his past life; this "washing away" was not in itself the actual remission of his sins, which had taken place at his conversion; the middle voice implies his own particular interest in the act (as with the preceding verb "baptize," lit., "baptize thyself," i.e., "get thyself baptized"); the aorist tenses mark the decisiveness of the acts; in 1 Cor. 6:11, lit., "ye washed yourselves clean"; here the middle voice (rendered in the Passive in KJV and RV, which do not distinguish between this and the next two passives; see RV marg.) again indicates that the converts at Corinth, by their obedience to the faith, voluntarily gave testimony to the complete spiritual change divinely wrought in them.¶ In the Sept., Job 9:30.¶

5. plunō (πλύνω, 4150) is used of "washing inanimate objects," e.g., "nets," Luke 5:2 (some texts have apoplunō); of "garments," figuratively, Rev. 7:14; 22:14 (in the best texts; the KJV translates those which have the verb poieō, "to do," followed by tas entolas autou, "His commandments").¶

6. rhantizō (ῥαντίζω, 4472), "to sprinkle," is used in the middle voice in Mark 7:4, in some ancient texts, of the acts of the Pharisees in their assiduous attention to the cleansing of themselves after coming from the market place (some texts have baptizō here). See SPRINKLE.

7. brechō (βρέχω, 1026), "to wet," is translated "to wash" in Luke 7:38, 44, KJV; the RV, "to wet" and "hath wetted," gives the correct rendering. See RAIN, B.

8. baptizō (βαπτίζω, 907) is rendered "washed" in Luke 11:38. See BAPTIZE.

Note: With regard to Nos. 1, 3, 5, the Sept. of Lev. 15:11 contains all three with their distinguishing characteristics, No. 1 being used of the hands, No. 3 of the whole body, No. 5 of the garments.

WASHING

1. baptismos (βαπτισμός, 909) denotes "the act of washing, ablution," with special reference to purification, Mark 7:4 (in some texts, v. 8); Heb. 6:2, "baptisms"; 9:10, "washings. See BAPTISM.¶

2. loutron (λουτρόν, 3067), "a bath, a laver" (akin to louō, see above), is used metaphorically of the Word of God, as the instrument of spiritual cleansing, Eph. 5:26; in Titus 3:5, of "the washing of regeneration" (see REGENERATION).¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 4:2; 6:6.¶

WASTE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

apōleia (ἀπώλεια, 684), "destruction," is translated "waste" in Matt. 26:8; Mark 14:4. See DESTRUCTION, B, II, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. diaskorpizō (διασκορπίζω, 1287), "to scatter abroad," is used metaphorically of "squandering property," Luke 15:13; 16:1. See DISPERSE, SCATTER.

2. portheō (πορθέω, 4199), "to ravage," is rendered "wasted" in Gal. 1:13, KJV; see DESTROY, Note, HAVOC.

3. lumainō (λυμαίνω, 3075), "to outrage, maltreat," is used in the middle voice in Acts 8:3, of Saul's treatment of the church, RV, "laid waste" (KJV, "made havoc of").¶

WATCH (Noun and Verb), WATCHERS, WATCHFUL, WATCHINGS

A. Nouns.

1. phulakē (φυλακή, 5438) is used (a) with the meaning "a watch," actively, "a guarding," Luke 2:8, lit., "(keeping, phulassō) watches"; (b) of "the time during which guard was kept by night, a watch of the night," Matt. 14:25; 24:43; Mark 6:48; Luke 12:38. See CAGE, HOLD, IMPRISONMENT, PRISON.

Note: Among the Jews the night was divided into three "watches" (see, e.g., Exod. 14:24; Judg. 7:19), and this continued on through Roman times. The Romans divided the night into four "watches"; this was recognized among the Jews (see Mark 13:35).

2. koustōdia (κουστωδία, 2892), from Lat., custodia (cf. Eng., "custody"), is rendered "watch" in Matt. 27:65, 66 and 28:11, KJV: see GUARD.¶

3. agrupnia (ἀγρυπνία, 70), "sleeplessness" (akin to B, No. 4), is rendered "watchings" in 2 Cor. 6:5; 11:27.¶

B. Verbs.

1. grēgoreō (γρηγορέω, 1127), "to watch," is used (a) of "keeping awake," e.g., Matt. 24:43; 26:38, 40, 41; (b) of "spiritual alertness," e.g., Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 16:13; Col. 4:2; 1 Thess. 5:6, 10 (for which see WAKE); 1 Pet. 5:8, RV, "be watchful" (KJV, "be vigilant"); Rev. 3:2, 3; 16:15.

2. tēreō (τηρέω, 5083), "to keep," is rendered "to watch," of those who kept guard at the cross, Matt. 27:36, 54; 28:4, RV, "watchers" (KJV, "keepers"), lit., "the watching ones." See HOLD, No. 8, KEEP, OBSERVE, PRESERVE, RESERVE.

3. paratēreō (παρατηρέω, 3906), "to observe," especially with sinister intent (para, "near," and No. 2), is rendered "to watch" in Mark 3:2; Luke 6:7; 14:1; 20:20; Acts 9:24. See OBSERVE.

4. agrupneō (ἀγρυπνέω, 69), "to be sleepless" (from agreuō, "to chase," and hupnos, "sleep"), is used metaphorically, "to be watchful," in Mark 13:33; Luke 21:36; Eph. 6:18; Heb. 13:17. The word expresses not mere wakefulness, but the "watchfulness" of those who are intent upon a thing.¶

5. nēphō (νήφω, 3525), "to abstain from wine," is used metaphorically of moral "alertness," and translated "to watch," in the KJV of 2 Tim. 4:5. See SOBER.

WATER (Noun and Verb), WATERING, WATERLESS

A. Noun.

hudōr (ὕδωρ, 5204), whence Eng. prefix, "hydro–," is used (a) of the natural element, frequently in the Gospels; in the plural especially in the Apocalypse; elsewhere, e.g., Heb. 9:19; Jas. 3:12; in 1 John 5:6, that Christ "came by water and blood," may refer either (1) to the elements that flowed from His side on the cross after His death, or, in view of the order of the words and the prepositions here used, (2) to His baptism in Jordan and His death on the cross. As to (1), the "water" would symbolize the moral and practical cleansing effected by the removal of defilement by our taking heed to the Word of God in heart, life and habit; cf. Lev. 14, as to the cleansing of the leper. As to (2), Jesus the Son of God came on His mission by, or through, "water" and blood, namely, at His baptism, when He publicly entered upon His mission and was declared to be the Son of God by the witness of the Father, and at the cross, when He publicly closed His witness; the apostle's statement thus counteracts the doctrine of the Gnostics that the divine Logos united Himself with the Man Jesus at His baptism, and left him at Gethsemane. On the contrary, He who was baptized and He who was crucified was the Son of God throughout in His combined deity and humanity.

The word "water" is used symbolically in John 3:5, either (1) of the Word of God, as in 1 Pet. 1:23 (cf. the symbolic use in Eph. 5:26), or, in view of the preposition ek, "out of," (2) of the truth conveyed by baptism, this being the expression, not the medium, the symbol, not the cause, of the believer's identification with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. So the New Birth is, in one sense, the setting aside of all that the believer was according to the flesh, for it is evident that there must be an entirely new beginning. Some regard the kai, "and," in John 3:5, as epexegetic, = "even," in which case the "water" would be emblematic of the Spirit, as in John 7:38 (cf. 4:10, 14), but not in 1 John 5:8, where the Spirit and the "water" are distinguished. "The water of life," Rev. 21:6 and 22:1, 17, is emblematic of the maintenance of spiritual life in perpetuity. In Rev. 17:1 the "waters" are symbolic of nations, peoples, etc.

Note: For potamos, rendered "waters" in 2 Cor. 11:26, see RIVER.

B. Verb.

potizō (ποτίζω, 4222), "to give to drink," is used (a) naturally in Luke 13:15, "watering," with reference to animals; (b) figuratively, with reference to spiritual ministry to converts, 1 Cor. 3:6–8. See DRINK, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) For hudropoteō, "to drink water," 1 Tim. 5:23, see DRINK, B, No. 5. (2) For the adjective anudros, "waterless" (RV), "without water," see DRY, No. 2.

hudria (ὑδρία, 5201) occurs in John 2:6, 7; 4:28.¶

1. kuma (κῦμα, 2949), from kuō, "to be pregnant, to swell," is used (a) literally in the plural, Matt. 8:24; 14:24; Mark 4:37 (Acts 27:41, in some mss.); (b) figuratively, Jude 13.¶

2. salos (σάλος, 4535) denotes "a tossing," especially the rolling swell of the sea, Luke 21:25, KJV, "waves" (RV, "billows").¶

3. kludōn (κλύδων, 2830), "a billow," is translated "wave" in Jas. 1:6, KJV (RV, "surge"); in Luke 8:24 it is translated "raging (of the water)." See RAGE, B.¶

WAVER, WAVERING

A. Adjective.

aklinēs (ἀκλινής, 186), "without bending" (a, negative, klinō, "to bend"), occurs in Heb. 10:23, KJV, "without wavering," RV, "that it waver not."¶

B. Verb.

diakrinō (διακρίνω, 1252) is rendered "to waver" in Rom. 4:20, RV (KJV, "staggered"); in Jas. 1:6 (twice). See DOUBT, No. 3.

WAX

1. prokoptō (προκόπτω, 4298), for which see ADVANCE, is rendered "to wax" in 2 Tim. 3:13.

2. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become," is translated "waxed" in Luke 13:19, KJV (RV, "became"); in Heb. 11:34, KJV and RV, "waxed": see COME, No. 12, etc.

Note: This verb forms part of the translation of certain tenses of other verbs; see, e.g., BOLD, A, No. 2, COLD, C, CONFIDENT, B, No. 1, CORRUPT, A, No. 2, GROSS, OLD, D, No. 2, STRONG, B, No. 2, WANTON, B, Nos. 1 and 2, WEARY, No. 2, WROTH, No. 1.

WAY

1. hodos (ὁδός, 3598) denotes (a) "a natural path, road, way," frequent in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere, e.g., Acts 8:26; 1 Thess. 3:11; Jas. 2:25; Rev. 16:12; (b) "a traveler's way" (see JOURNEY); (c) metaphorically, of "a course of conduct," or "way of thinking," e.g., of righteousness, Matt. 21:32; 2 Pet. 2:21; of God, Matt. 22:16, and parallels, i.e., the "way" instructed and approved by God; so Acts 18:26 and Heb. 3:10, "My ways" (cf. Rev. 15:3); of the Lord, Acts 18:25; "that leadeth to destruction," Matt. 7:13; " . . . unto life," 7:14; of peace, Luke 1:79; Rom. 3:17; of Paul's "ways" in Christ, 1 Cor. 4:17 (plural); "more excellent" (of love), 1 Cor. 12:31; of truth, 2 Pet. 2:2; of the right "way," 2:15; of Balaam (id.); of Cain, Jude 11; of a "way" consisting in what is from God, e.g., of life, Acts 2:28 (plural); of salvation, Acts 16:17; personified, of Christ as the means of access to the Father, John 14:6; of the course followed and characterized by the followers of Christ, Acts 9:2; 19:9, 23; 24:22. See HIGHWAY.

Note: In Luke 5:19 and 19:4 the noun is not expressed in the original, but is understood.

2. parodos (πάροδος, 3938), "a passing or passage," is used with en, "in," 1 Cor. 16:7, "by the way" (lit, "in passing").¶

3. tropos (τρόπος, 5158), "a turning, a manner," is translated "way" in Rom. 3:2, "(every) way"; Phil. 1:18, "(in every) way." See CONVERSATION, MANNER, MEANS.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 1:11, KJV, poreia, "a journey, a going," is rendered "ways" (RV, "goings"). (2) In Heb. 12:17, topos, "a place," is rendered in KJV marg., "way (to change his mind)." (3) For the KJV rendering of makran "a good (or great) way off," Matt. 8:30; Luke 15:20, see FAR, B, No. 1. (4) In Luke 14:32, porrō is rendered "a great way off." (5) In Heb. 5:2, KJV, planaō, middle voice, "to wander," is rendered "(them) that are out of the way," RV, "(the) erring." (6) In Col. 2:14 and 2 Thess. 2:7, ek mesou, is translated "out of the way"; see MIDST, Note (1) (e). (7) For "two ways" in Mark 11:4, KJV, see STREET. (8) In John 10:1, the adverb allachothen, "from some other place" (from allos, "another"), is translated "some other way." (9) In 2 Pet. 3:1, the KJV translates en "by way of" ("by," RV). (10) In Gal. 2:5, the renderings "by," KJV, "in the way of," RV, serve to express the dative case of hupotagē, subjection. (11) For propempō, "to bring on one's way," Acts 15:3; 21:5, and the KJV of 2 Cor. 1:16 (RV, "to be set forward on my journey"), see BRING, No. 25. (12) Aperchomai, "to go away," is rendered "to go one's way," e.g., Matt. 13:25; 20:4; Mark 11:4; 12:12; Luke 19:32; John 11:46; Acts 9:17; Jas. 1:24: see GO, No. 14. (13) In Luke 8:14, KJV, poreuomai, "to go on one's way" (RV), is rendered "go forth"; in 13:33, KJV, "walk" (RV, "go on my way"); in Matt. 24:1, KJV, it is rendered "departed" (RV, "was going on his way"): see DEPART, No. 8. (14) In Acts 24:3, pantē is rendered "in all ways" (KJV, "always").¶ (15) In Rom. 3:12, KJV, ekklinō, "to turn aside" (RV), is rendered "are gone out of the way." (16) See also ESCAPE, B, LASCIVIOUS.

WE

Note: When this is not part of the translation of a verb or phrase, it stands for some case of hēmeis, the plural of egō, "I"; this separate use of the pronoun is always emphatic. For "we ourselves," see OURSELVES.

WEAK, WEAKENED, WEAKER, WEAKNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. asthenēs (ἀσθενής, 772), lit., "strengthless" (see IMPOTENT), is translated "weak," (a) of physical "weakness," Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38; 1 Cor. 1:27; 4:10; 11:30 (a judgment upon spiritual laxity in a church); 2 Cor. 10:10; 1 Pet. 3:7 (comparative degree); (b) in the spiritual sense, said of the rudiments of Jewish religion, in their inability to justify anyone, Gal. 4:9; of the Law, Heb. 7:18; in Rom. 5:6, RV, "weak" (KJV, "without strength"), of the inability of man to accomplish his salvation; (c) morally or ethically, 1 Cor. 8:7, 10; 9:22; (d) rhetorically, of God's actions according to the human estimate, 1 Cor. 1:25, "weakness," lit., "the weak things of God." See FEEBLE, SICK.

2. adunatos (ἀδύνατος, 102), lit., "not powerful," is translated "weak" in Rom. 15:1, of the infirmities of those whose scruples arise through lack of faith (see 14:22, 23), in the same sense as No. 1 (c); the change in the adjective (cf. 14:1) is due to the contrast with dunatoi, the "strong," who have not been specifically mentioned as such in ch. 14. See IMPOSSIBLE.

B. Verb.

astheneō (ἀσθενέω, 770), "to lack strength," is used in much the same way as A, No. 1, and translated "being . . . weak" in Rom. 4:19, KJV (RV, "being weakened"); 8:3; 14:1, 2 (in some texts, 1 Cor. 8:9); 2 Cor. 11:21, 29 (twice); 12:10; 13:3, 4, 9. See DISEASED, IMPOTENT, SICK.

C. Noun.

astheneia (ἀσθένεια, 769), for which see INFIRMITY, is rendered "weakness," of the body, 1 Cor. 2:3; 15:43; 2 Cor. 11:30, RV; 12:5 (plural, RV), 9, 10, RV; Heb. 11:34; in 2 Cor. 13:4, "He was crucified through weakness" is said in respect of the physical sufferings to which Christ voluntarily submitted in giving Himself up to the death of the cross.

WEALTH

euporia (εὐπορία, 2142), primarily "facility" (eu, "well," poros, "a passage"), hence "plenty, wealth," occurs in Acts 19:25.¶ Cf. euporeō, "to be well provided for, to prosper," Acts 11:29.¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 10:24, the KJV, "wealth," RV, "good," is, lit., "the (thing) of the other."

WEAPONS

hoplon (ὅπλον, 3696), always in the plur., is translated "weapons" in John 18:3 and 2 Cor. 10:4, the latter metaphorically of those used in spiritual warfare. See ARMOR, INSTRUMENTS.

WEAR, WEARING

A. Verbs.

1. phoreō (φορέω, 5409), a frequentative form of pherō, "to bear," and denoting "repeated or habitual action," is chiefly used of clothing, weapons, etc., of soft raiment, Matt. 11:8; fine clothing, Jas. 2:3; the crown of thorns, John 19:5. See BEAR, No. 7.

2. endiduskō (ἐνδιδύσκω, 1737), "to put on," is used in the active voice in Mark 15:17 (in good mss.; some have No. 3); in Luke 8:27 (middle voice), in some texts; the best have No. 3. For Luke 16:19, see CLOTHE, No. 3.¶

3. enduō (ἐνδύω, 1746) is rendered "to wear" in Luke 8:27 (middle voice; see No. 2). See CLOTHE, No. 2, PUT, No. 26.

4. klinō (κλίνω, 2827), "to bend, decline," is used of a day, "wearing" away, Luke 9:12 (in 24:29, "is far spent"). See BOW, No. 4, FLIGHT, B, LAY, No. 6, SPEND.

5. hupōpiazō (ὑπωπιάζω, 5299) is translated "wear (me) out" in Luke 18:5, RV (KJV, "weary"). For this and the somewhat different application in 1 Cor. 9:27, see BUFFET, No. 2.¶

B. Noun.

perithesis (περίθεσις, 4025), "a putting around or on" (peri, "around," tithēmi, "to put"), is used in 1 Pet. 3:3 of "wearing" jewels of gold (RV).¶

For WEARINESS, 2 Cor. 11:27, RV, see LABOR, No. 1

WEARY

1. kopiaō (κοπιάω, 2872), "to grow weary, be beaten out" (kopos, "a beating, toil"), is used of the Lord in John 4:6 (used in His own word "labor" in Matt. 11:28), in Rev. 2:3, RV. See LABOR, TOIL.

2. kamnō (κάμνω, 2577), "to be weary," is rendered "to wax weary" in Heb. 12:3, RV. See FAINT, No. 3, SICK.

3. ekkakeō or enkakeō (ἐκκακέω, 1573), for which see FAINT, No. 2, is rendered "to be weary" in Gal. 6:9; 2 Thess. 3:13.

Note: For hupōpiazō, rendered "to weary" in Luke 18:5, KJV, see WEAR, A, No. 5.

WEATHER

1. eudia (εὐδία, 2105), akin to eudios, "calm," denotes "fair weather," Matt. 16:2.¶

2. cheimōn (χειμών, 5494), "winter," also "a winter storm," is translated "foul weather" in Matt. 16:3. See TEMPEST, WINTER.

For WEDDING see MARRIAGE

WEEK

sabbaton (σάββατον, 4521) is used (a) in the plural in the phrase "the first day of the week," Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:2, 9; Luke 24:1; John 20:1, 19; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2. For this idiomatic use of the word see ONE, A, (5); (b) in the singular, Luke 18:12, "twice in the week," lit., "twice of the sabbath," i.e., twice in the days after the sabbath. See SABBATH.

WEEP, WEEPING

A. Verbs.

1. klaiō (κλαίω, 2799) is used of "any loud expression of grief," especially in mourning for the dead, Matt. 2:18; Mark 5:38, 39; 16:10; Luke 7:13; 8:52 (twice); John 11:31, 33 (twice); 20:11 (twice), 13, 15; Acts 9:39; otherwise, e.g., in exhortations, Luke 23:28; Rom. 12:15; Jas. 4:9; 5:1; negatively, "weep not," Luke 7:13; 8:52; 23:28; Rev. 5:5 (cf. Acts 21:13); in 18:9, RV, "shall weep" (KJV, "bewail"). See BEWAIL.

2. dakruō (δακρύω, 1145), "to shed tears" (dakruon, "a tear"), is used only of the Lord Jesus, John 11:35.¶

Note: Other synonymous verbs are thrēneō, "to mourn," of formal lamentation: see BEWAIL, Note (1); alalazō, "to wail"; stenazō, "to groan" (oduromai, "to lament audibly," is not used in NT; see the noun odurmos, "mourning").

B. Noun.

klauthmos (κλαυθμός, 2805), akin to A, No. 1, denotes "weeping, crying," Matt. 2:18; 8:12; 13:42, 50, RV (KJV, "wailing"); 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Luke 13:28; Acts 20:37.¶

WEIGH, WEIGHT, WEIGHTY, WEIGHTIER

A. Verbs.

1. bareō (βαρέω, 916), "to weigh down," is so rendered in 2 Cor. 1:8, RV; see BURDEN, B, No. 1.

2. histēmi (ἵστημι, 2476), "to cause to stand," is used in Matt. 26:15, RV, "they weighed (unto)" (of pieces of silver), KJV, metaphorically, "covenanted (with)."

B. Nouns.

1. baros (βάρος, 922), akin to A, is rendered "weight" in 2 Cor. 4:17. See BURDEN, A, No. 1.

2. onkos (ὄγκος, 3591) denotes "a bulk or mass"; hence, metaphorically, "an encumbrance, weight," Heb. 12:1.¶

C. Adjective.

barus (βαρύς, 926), "heavy" (akin to A and B, No. 1), is rendered "weighty" in 2 Cor. 10:10, of Paul's letters. The comparative degree is used in the neuter plural in Matt. 23:23, "(the) weightier matters (of the Law)." See GRIEVOUS, HEAVY.

WELCOME

1. apodechomai (ἀποδέχομαι, 588), "to receive gladly," is rendered "to welcome" in the RV of Luke 8:40; 9:11. See RECEIVE.

2. hupolambanō (ὑπολαμβάνω, 5274), "to take up, to entertain," is rendered "to welcome" in 3 John 8, RV, of a hearty "welcome" to servants of God. See RECEIVE.

WELL (Noun)

phrear (φρέαρ, 5421), "a pit," is translated a "well" in John 4:11, 12. See PIT.

Note: For pēgē, translated "well" in John 4:6 (twice), 14; 2 Pet. 2:17, see FOUNTAIN.

WELL (Adverb)

1. kalōs (καλῶς, 2573), "finely" (akin to kalos, "good, fair"), is usually translated "well," indicating what is done rightly; in the Epistles it is most frequent in 1 Tim. (3:4, 12, 13; 5:17); twice it is used as an exclamation of approval, Mark 12:32; Rom. 11:20; the comparative degree kallion, "very well," occurs in Acts 25:10. See GOOD, C, No. 1.

Note: The neuter form of the adjective kalos, with the article and the present participle of poieō, "to do," is translated "well-doing" in Gal. 6:9.

2. eu (εὖ, 2095), primarily the neuter of an old word, eus, "noble, good," is used (a) with verbs, e.g., Mark 14:7, "do (poieō) . . . good"; Acts 15:29 (prassō); Eph. 6:3 (ginomai, "to be"); (b) in replies, "good," "well done," Matt. 25:21, 23; in Luke 19:17, eu ge (in the best texts). The word is the opposite of kakōs, "evilly." See GOOD, C, No. 2.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 1:18, beltion, the neuter form of what is used as the comparative degree of agathos, "good," is used adverbially and translated "very well."¶ (2) For John 2:10, "have well drunk" (RV, "freely"), see DRINK, B, No. 2. (3) Hōs, "as," with kai, "also (and)," is rendered "as well as" in Acts 10:47 (kathōs in some mss.) and 1 Cor. 9:5. (4) In Heb 4:2 kathaper, "even as," with kai, is translated "as well as": see EVEN, No. 8.

WELL (do), WELL-DOING

A. Verbs.

1. agathopoieō (ἀγαθοποιέω, 15), "to do good" (agathos, "good," poieō, "to do"), is used (a) of such activity in general, 1 Pet. 2:15, "well-doing"; v. 20, "do well"; 3:6, 17; 3 John 11, "doeth good"; (b) of "acting for another's benefit," Mark 3:4; Luke 6:9, 33, 35.¶

2. kalopoieō (καλοποιέω, 2569), "to do well, excellently, act honorably" (kalos, "good," poieō, "to do"), occurs in 2 Thess. 3:13.¶ The two parts of the word occur separately in Rom. 7:21; 2 Cor. 13:7; Gal. 6:9; Jas. 4:17.

Notes: (1) The distinction between Nos. 1 and 2 follows that between agathos and kalos (see GOOD). (2) In John 11:12, KJV, sōzō (passive voice, "to be saved"), is rendered "he shall do well" (RV, "he will recover").

B. Noun.

agathopoiia (ἀγαθοποιία, 16), "well-doing" (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in 1 Pet. 4:19.¶

C. Adjective.

agathopoios (ἀγαθοποιός, 17), "doing good, beneficent," is translated "them that do well" in 1 Pet. 2:14, lit., "well-doing (ones)."¶

For WELL-BELOVED see BELOVED

WELL-NIGH

Note: This forms part of the translation of sumplēroō, "to fulfill," in Luke 9:51, "were well-nigh" come (see COME, No. 36), and plēroō, "to fulfill," in Acts 7:23, "was well-nigh . . .," lit., "a time (of forty years) was fulfilled (to him)" (see FULFILL, A, No. 1).

WELL PLEASED

A. Noun.

eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), "good pleasure," occurs in the genitive case in Luke 2:14, lit., "(men) of good pleasure" (so RV marg.), RV, "(men) in whom He is well pleased" (the genitive is objective); the KJV, "good will (toward men)," follows the inferior texts which have the nominative. See DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELL-PLEASING, WILL.

B. Verb.

eudokeō (εὐδοκέω, 2106), "to be well pleased": see PLEASE, A, No. 3, WILLING, B, No. 3.

WELL-PLEASING

A. Adjective.

euarestos (εὐάρεστος, 2101) is used in Rom. 12:1, 2, translated "acceptable (RV marg., "well-pleasing"); in the following the RV has "well-pleasing," Rom. 14:18; 2 Cor. 5:9; Eph. 5:10; in Phil. 4:18 and Col. 3:20 (RV and KJV); in Titus 2:9, RV, "well-pleasing" (KJV, "please ... well"); in Heb. 13:21, RV and KJV. See ACCEPTABLE.¶

B. Verb.

euaresteō (εὐαρεστέω, 2100), akin to A, is rendered "to be well-pleasing" in Heb. 11:5, 6, RV (KJV, "please"); in Heb. 13:16, "is well pleased."¶

C. Noun.

eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), lit., "good pleasure," is rendered "well-pleasing" in Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21. See DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELL PLEASED, WILL.

For WENT see GO

WEST

dusmē (δυσμή, 1424), "the quarter of the sun-setting" (dusis, "a sinking, setting"; dunō, "to sink"), hence, "the west," occurs in Matt. 8:11; 24:27; Luke 12:54 (some regard this as the sunset); 13:29; Rev. 21:13.¶

For WET, Luke 7:38, 44, RV, see WASH, No. 7

kētos (κῆτος, 2785) denotes "a huge fish, a sea monster," Matt. 12:40.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 1:21; Job 3:8; 9:13; 26:12; Jonah 1:17 (twice); 2:1, 10.¶

WHAT

Notes: (1) Most frequently this is a translation of some form of the relative pronoun hos or the interrogative tis. (2) Other words are (a) hoios, "of what kind," e.g., 2 Cor. 10:11, RV (KJV, "such as"); 1 Thess. 1:5, "what manner of men"; 2 Tim. 3:11 (twice), lit., "what sorts of things," "what sorts of persecutions"; (b) poios, "what sort of," e.g., Matt. 21:23, 24, 27; 24:42, 43; Luke 5:19; 6:32–34; 20:2, 8; 24:19; John 12:33, "what manner of"; so in 18:32; 21:19; Rom. 3:27; 1 Cor. 15:35; in Jas. 4:14, "what"; 1 Pet. 2:20 and Rev. 3:3 (ditto); 1 Pet. 1:11, "what manner of"; (c) hopoios, "what sort of," 1 Cor. 3:13; "what manner of," 1 Thess. 1:9; (d) hosos, "how great," Mark 6:30 (twice), RV, "whatsoever"; Acts 15:12; Rom. 3:19, "what things soever"; Jude 10 (1st part), "what soever things," RV; (2nd part) "what"; (e) posos, "how great, how much," 2 Cor. 7:11, "what (earnest care)," RV (posos here stands for the repeated words in the Eng. versions, the adjective not being repeated in the original); (f) hostis, "what (things)," Phil. 3:7; (g) in Matt. 26:40, houtōs, "thus, so," is used as an exclamatory expression, translated "What" (in a word immediately addressed by the Lord to Peter), lit., "So"; (h) for potapos, rendered "what" in Mark 13:1 (2nd part), KJV, see MANNER; (i) in 1 Cor. 6:16, 19, KJV, the particle ē, "or" (RV), is rendered "What?"; in 1 Cor. 14:36, KJV and RV, "what?" (j) in 1 Cor. 11:22, gar, "in truth, indeed," has its exclamatory use "What?" (3) In John 5:19 "but what" translates a phrase, lit., "if not anything." (4) In Matt. 8:33 "what" is, lit., "the things" (neuter plural of the article).

WHATSOEVER

Note: For this see Notes on words under WHAT. Frequently by the addition of the particle an, or the conjunction ean, "if," the phrase has the more general idea of "whatsoever," e.g., with hos, Matt. 10:11; with hosos, Matt. 17:12; with hostis, neuter form, Luke 10:35.

WHEREFORE

Note: This represents (1) some phrases introduced by the preposition dia, "on account of," dia touto, "on account of this," e.g., Matt. 12:31; Rom. 5:12; Eph. 1:15; 3 John 10; dia hēn (the accusative feminine of hos, "who"), "on account of which" (aitia, "a cause," being understood), e.g., Acts 10:21 (with aitia, expressed, Titus 1:13; Heb. 2:11); dia ti "on account of what?" (sometimes as one word, diati), e.g., Luke 19:23; Rom. 9:32; 2 Cor. 11:11; Rev. 17:7; (2) dio = dia ho (the neuter of the relative pronoun hos), "on account of which (thing)," e.g., Matt. 27:8; Acts 15:19; 20:31; 24:26; 25:26; 27:25, 34; Rom. 1:24; 15:7; 1 Cor. 12:3; 2 Cor. 2:8; 5:9; 6:17; Eph. 2:11; 3:13; 4:8, 25; 5:14; Phil. 2:9; 1 Thess. 5:11; Philem. 8; Heb. 3:7, 10; 10:5; 11:16; 12:12, 28; 13:12; Jas. 1:21; 4:6; 1 Pet. 1:13; 2 Pet. 1:10, 12; 3:14; (3) dioper, "for which very reason" (a strengthened form of the preceding), 1 Cor. 8:13; 10:14 (14:13 in some mss.);¶ (4) hothen (which denotes "whence," when used of direction or source, e.g., Matt. 12:44), used of cause and denoting "wherefore" in Heb. 2:17; 3:1; 7:25; 8:3; (5) ti, "what, why," John 9:27; Acts 22:30; Gal. 3:19, KJV (RV, "what"); (6) heneka with tinos (the genitive case of ti), "because of what," Acts 19:32; (7) charin with hou, the genitive case, neuter of hos, "for the sake of what," Luke 7:47; (8) eis, "unto," with ti, "what," Matt. 14:31; with ho, "which" (the accusative neuter of hos), 2 Thess. 1:11, KJV (RV, "to which end"); (9) ara, "so," 2 Cor. 7:12, KJV (RV, "so"); with ge, "at least," Matt. 7:20, KJV (RV, "therefore"); (10) hina, "in order that," with ti, "what," Matt. 9:4; (11) toigaroun, "therefore," rendered "wherefore" in Heb. 12:1, KJV; (12) in Matt. 26:50, epi, "unto," with ho, as in No. (8) above, KJV, "wherefore (art thou come)?" RV, "(do that) for which (thou art come)"; (13) oun, a particle expressing sequence or consequence, e.g., Matt. 24:26; Acts 6:3; (14) hōste, "so that," "wherefore," e.g., Rom. 7:12, 13; 1 Cor. 10:12; 11:27, 33; 14:22, 39; 2 Cor. 5:16; Gal. 3:24; 4:7; Phil. 4:1; 1 Thess. 4:18; 1 Pet. 4:19.

Notes: (1) This is the translation of (a) the article with nouns, adjectives, numerals, participles, etc., e.g., "that which," etc.; (b) the relative pronoun hos, "who," in one of its forms (a frequent use); (c) hostis, "whoever," differing from hos by referring to a subject in general, as one of a class, e.g., Rom. 2:15; Gal. 4:24 (twice); 5:19; Rev. 2:24; 20:4; (d) the interrogative pronoun tis, "who? which?," e.g., Matt. 6:27; John 8:46; (e) hoios, "of what kind," e.g., Phil. 1:30; (f) poios, the interrogative of (e), e.g., John 10:32; (g) hosos, "whatsoever," etc.; plural, how many, translated "which" in Acts 9:39. (2) In Acts 8:26, KJV, hautē (the feminine of houtos, "this"), "the same" (RV), is translated "which." (3) In the triple title of God in Rev. 1:4, 8; 4:8, "which" is the translation, firstly, of the article with the present participle of eimi, to be, lit., "the (One) being," secondly, of the article with the imperfect tense of eimi (impossible of lit. translation, the title not being subject to grammatical change), thirdly, of the article with the present participle of erchomai, to come, lit., "the coming (One)"; in 11:17 and 16:5 the wording of the KJV and RV differs; in 11:17 the KJV follows the inferior mss. by adding "and art to come" (RV omits); in 16:5, the KJV, "and shalt be," represents kai ("and") followed by the article and the future participle of eimi, "to be," lit., "and the (One) about to be"; the RV substitues the superior reading "Thou Holy One," lit., "the holy (One)": see HOLY, B, No. 2. (4) In Phil. 2:21, KJV, "the things of Jesus Christ" (RV, is rendered "the things which are Jesus Christ's."

WHILE, WHILES, WHILST

Notes: (1) See LITTLE, B, No. 1. (2) In Matt. 13:21, proskairos estin, lit., "is for a season," is rendered "dureth (RV, endureth) for a while." (3) Chronos, "time," is rendered "while" in Luke 18:4; John 7:33; 12:35 (1st part); 1 Cor. 16:7; kairos, "a season," "a while," Luke 8:13; in Acts 19:22, RV, "while" (KJV, "season"); for the different meanings of these words see SEASON. (4) In Acts 18:18, KJV, "a good while," is, lit., "sufficient days," RV, "many days." (5) In Acts 28:6, KJV, epi polu, lit., "upon much," is rendered "a great while" (RV, "long"). (6) For Mark 1:35 see DAY, B. (7) In Mark 15:44 palai, "long ago," is rendered "any while." (8) In Acts 27:33 and Heb. 3:13 achri (or achris) followed by hou, the genitive case of the relative pronoun hos, lit., "until which," is rendered "while"; cf. en hǭ, in Mark 2:19; Luke 5:34; John 5:7; en tǭ, in Luke 1:21, RV, "while"; in Heb. 3:15, "while it is said," is, lit., "in the being said" (en, with the article and the pres. infin., passive of legō); so, e.g., in Matt. 13:25 (9) In Heb. 10:33, AV., "whilst ye were made," partly translating the present participle of theatrizomai, "to become a gazing-stock," RV, "being made"; in the 2nd part, ginomai, "to become," is translated "whilst ye became," KJV (RV, "becoming").¶ (10) The conjunction heōs, "until," etc., has the meaning "while" in Matt. 14:22; Mark 6:45; 14:32; in some texts, John 9:4; 12:35, 36; with hotou, "whatever" (an oblique case, neuter, of hostis, "whoever"), "whiles," Matt. 5:25. (11) In Acts 20:11 hikanos, "sufficient," is rendered "a long while." (12) Hōs, as, "while" in Luke 24:32 (twice); John 12:35, 36; Acts 1:10; 10:17. (13) Hotan, "when," is rendered "while" in 1 Cor. 3:4, KJV (RV, "when"). (14) Hote, "when," is rendered "while" in John 17:12; Heb. 9:17. (15) In John 4:31 metaxu, "between," used with en tǭ, "in the," is rendered "meanwhile"; in Rom. 2:15 metaxu is itself rendered "the mean while" (RV, "between"). (16) In Acts 18:18, RV, hikanos is rendered "many" (KJV, "good"). (17) In 1 Pet. 1:6, RV, oligon, "a little," is rendered "for a little while" (KJV, "for a season").

WHISPERER, WHISPERING

1. psithuristēs (ψιθυριστής, 5588), "a whisperer," occurs in an evil sense in Rom. 1:29.¶

2. psithurismos (ψιθυρισμός, 5587), "a whispering," is used of "secret slander" in 2 Cor. 12:20.¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 10:11, of "a murmured enchantment."¶

Note: Synonymous with No. 1 is katalalos, "a backbiter" (Rom. 1:30¶), the distinction being that this denotes one guilty of open calumny, psithuristēs, one who does it clandestinely.

WHITE (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjective.

leukos (λευκός, 3022) is used of (a) clothing (sometimes in the sense of "bright"), Matt. 17:2; 28:3; Mark 9:3; 16:5; Luke 9:29; John 20:12; Acts 1:10; symbolically, Rev. 3:4, 5, 18; 4:4; 6:11; 7:9, 13; 19:14 (2nd part); (b) hair, Matt. 5:36; Christ's head and hair (in a vision; cf. Dan. 7:9), Rev. 1:14 (twice); ripened grain, John 4:35; a stone, Rev. 2:17, an expression of the Lord's special delight in the overcomer, the new name on it being indicative of a secret communication of love and joy; a horse (in a vision), 6:2; 19:11 14 (1st part); a cloud, 14:14; the throne of God, 20:11.¶

Note: Lampros, "bright, clear," is rendered "white" in Rev. 15:6, KJV, of "white (linen)" (RV, "bright," following those mss. which have lithon "stone"); in 19:8 (RV, "bright"). See BRIGHT, CLEAR, GOODLY, Note, GORGEOUS.

B. Verbs.

1. leukainō (λευκαίνω, 3021), "to whiten, make white" (akin to A), is used in Mark 9:3; figuratively in Rev. 7:14.¶

2. koniaō (κονιάω, 2867), from konia, "dust, lime," denotes "to whiten, whitewash," of tombs, Matt. 23:27; figuratively of a hypocrite, Acts 23:3.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 27:2, 4; Prov. 21:9.¶

For WHITHER, WHITHERSOEVER, see †, p. 1.

WHO, WHOM, WHOSE

Notes: These are usually the translations of forms of the relative pronoun hos, or of the interrogative pronoun tis; otherwise of hostis, "whoever," usually of a more general subject than hos, e.g., Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19; Gal. 2:4; hosos, "as many as," Heb. 2:15; in Acts 13:7, KJV, houtos, "this (man)," is translated "who," RV, "the same."

WHOLE (made), WHOLLY, WHOLESOME

A. Adjectives.

1. holos (ὅλος, 3650), for which see ALL, A, No. 3, and ALTOGETHER, signifies "whole," (a) with a noun, e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; Mark 8:36; 15:1, 16, 33; Luke 11:36 (1st part), though holon may here be used adverbially with phōteinon, "wholly light" [as in the 2nd part, RV, "wholly (full of light)"]; John 11:50; 1 Cor. 12:17 (1st part); 1 John 2:2; 5:19; (b) absolutely, as a noun, e.g., Matt. 13:33; 1 Cor. 12:17 (2nd part).

2. pas (πᾶς, 3956), for which see ALL, A, No. 1, is sometimes translated "the whole" when used with the article, e.g., Matt. 8:32, 34; Rom. 8:22.

3. hapas (ἅπας, 537), for which see ALL, A, No. 2, is rendered "the whole," e.g., in Luke 19:37; 23:1.

4. holoklēros (ὁλόκληρος, 3648), from No. 1 and klēros, "a lot," is rendered "whole" in 1 Thess. 5:23: see ENTIRE.

5. hugiēs (ὑγιής, 5199) (cf. Eng., "hygiene") is used especially in the Gospels of making sick folk "whole," Matt. 12:13; 15:31; Mark 3:5; 5:34; Luke 6:10; John 5:4, 6, 9, 11, 14, 15; 7:23; also Acts 4:10; of "sound (speech)," Titus 2:8. See SOUND.¶

6. holotelēs (ὁλοτελής, 3651), "wholly," 1 Thess. 5:23, is lit., "whole-complete" (A, No. 1, and telos, "an end"), i.e., "through and through"; the apostle's desire is that the sanctification of the believer may extend to every part of his being. The word is similar in meaning to No. 4; holoklēros draws attention to the person as a "whole," holotelēs, to the several parts which constitute him.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 4:15, the sentence freely rendered "give thyself wholly to them" is, lit., "be in these (things)."

B. Verbs.

1. hugiainō (ὑγιαίνω, 5198), "to be in good health," akin to A, No. 5, is rendered "they that are whole" in Luke 5:31; "whole" in 7:10 (present participle); "wholesome" in 1 Tim. 6:3, KJV (RV, "sound"; marg., "healthful"). See HEALTH, SOUND.

2. sōzō (σώζω, 4982), "to save," is sometimes rendered "to make whole," and, in the passive voice, "to be made whole," or "to be whole," e.g., Matt. 9:21, 22 (twice), and parallel passages; Acts 4:9. See HEAL, SAVE.

3. iaomai (ἰάομαι, 2390), "to heal," is rendered "to make whole," Matt. 15:28; Acts 9:34, KJV (RV, "healeth"). See HEAL.

4. ischuō (ἰσχύω, 2480), "to be strong," is rendered "they that are whole" in Matt. 9:12 and Mark 2:17. See ABLE, B, No. 4.

5. diasōzō (διασώζω, 1295), "to save thoroughly" (dia), is used in the passive voice and rendered "were made whole" in Matt. 14:36, RV (KJV, "were made perfectly whole"). See ESCAPE, HEAL, SAVE.

For WHORE, WHOREMONGER see FORNICATION, HARLOT

WHOSO, WHOSOEVER

Note: The same pronouns as those under WHO are used for the above, often with the addition of the particle an and a change of construction when a generalization is expressed. Some texts in Mark 15:6 have hosper, a strengthened form of hos, KJV, "whomsoever." For sentences introduced by the conjunction ei or ean, "if," see †, p. 1.

For WHY see †, p. 1

WICKED

1. ponēros (πονηρός, 4190), for which see BAD, No. 2, EVIL, A and B, No. 2, is translated "wicked" in the KJV and RV in Matt. 13:49; 18:32; 25:26; Luke 19:22; Acts 18:14; 1 Cor. 5:13; in the following the RV substitutes "evil" for KJV, "wicked": Matt. 12:45 (twice); 13:19; 16:4; Luke 11:26; Col. 1:21; 2 Thess. 3:2; and in the following, where Satan is mentioned as "the (or that) evil one": Matt. 13:38; Eph. 6:16; 1 John 2:13, 14; 3:12 (1st part); 5:18; in v. 19 for KJV, "wickedness"; he is so called also in KJV and RV in John 17:15; 2 Thess. 3:3; KJV only in Luke 11:4; in 3 John 10, KJV, the word is translated "malicious," RV, "wicked."

2. athesmos (ἄθεσμος, 113), "lawless" (a, negative, thesmos, "law, custom"), "wicked," occurs in 2 Pet. 2:7; 3:17.¶ An instance of the use of the word is found in the papyri, where a father breaks off his daughter's engagement because he learnt that her fiancé was giving himself over to lawless deeds (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).

Notes: (1) In Matt. 21:41, KJV, kakos (for which see BAD, No. 1, EVIL, A, No. 1), is translated "wicked" (RV, "miserable"). (2) In Acts 2:23 and 2 Thess 2:8, KJV, anomos, "lawless" (RV), is translated "wicked."

WICKEDNESS

1. ponēria (πονηρία, 4189), akin to ponēros (see above, No. 1), is always rendered "wickedness" save in Acts 3:26: see INIQUITY, No. 4.

2. kakia (κακία, 2549), "evil," is rendered "wickedness" in Acts 8:22; RV in Jas. 1:21, KJV, "naughtiness." See EVIL, B, No. 1, MALICE.

Notes: (1) For the KJV of 1 John 5:19 see WICKED, No. 1. (2) In Acts 25:5, KJV, the word atopos (RV, "amiss") is incorrectly rendered "wickedness."

For WIDE see BROAD

chēra (χήρα, 5503), Matt. 28:13 (in some texts); Mark 12:40, 42, 43; Luke 2:37; 4:25, 26, lit., "a woman a widow"; 7:12; 18:3, 5; 20:47; 21:2, 3; Acts 6:1; 9:39, 41; 1 Tim. 5:3 (twice), 4, 5, 11, 16 (twice); Jas. 1:27; 1 Tim. 5:9 refers to elderly "widows" (not an ecclesiastical "order"), recognized, for relief or maintenance by the church (cf. vv. 3, 16), as those who had fulfilled the conditions mentioned; where relief could be ministered by those who had relatives that were "widows" (a likely circumstance in large families), the church was not to be responsible; there is an intimation of the tendency to shelve individual responsibility at the expense of church funds. In Rev. 18:7, it is used figuratively of a city forsaken.¶

WIFE, WIVES

1. gunē (γυνή, 1135) denotes (1) "a woman, married or unmarried" (see WOMAN); (2) "a wife," e.g., Matt. 1:20; 1 Cor. 7:3, 4; in 1 Tim. 3:11, RV, "women," the reference may be to the "wives" of deacons, as the KJV takes it.

2. gunaikeios (γυναικεῖος, 1134), an adjective denoting "womanly, female," is used as a noun in 1 Pet. 3:7, KJV, "wife," RV, "woman."¶

Note: In John 19:25 the article stands idiomatically for "the wife (of)"; in Matt. 1:6, the article is rendered "her that had been the wife (of)."

WIFE'S MOTHER

penthera (πενθερά, 3994) denotes "a mother-in-law," Matt. 8:14; 10:35; Mark 1:30; Luke 4:38; 12:53 (twice).¶

agrios (ἄγριος, 66) denotes (a) "of or in fields" (agros, "a field"), hence, "not domestic," said of honey, Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; (b) "savage, fierce," Jude 13, RV, metaphorically, "wild (waves)," KJV, "raging."¶ It is used in the papyri of a malignant wound.

Note: In Rev. 6:8 the RV renders thērion (plural) "wild beasts" (KJV, "beasts").

WILDERNESS

1. erēmia (ἐρημία, 2047), "an uninhabited place," is translated "wilderness"in the KJV of Matt. 15:33 and Mark 8:4 (RV, "a desert place"); RV and KJV, "wilderness" in 2 Cor. 11:26. See DESERT, A. (In the Sept., Isa. 60:20; Ezek. 35:4, 9.¶)

2. erēmos (ἔρημος, 2048), an adjective signifying "desolate, deserted, lonely," is used as a noun, and rendered "wilderness" 32 times in the KJV; in Matt. 24:26 and John 6:31, RV, "wilderness" (KJV, "desert"). For the RV, "deserts" in Luke 5:16 and 8:29 see DESERT, B.

WILES

methodia, or —eia (μεθοδία, 3180) denotes "craft, deceit" (meta, "after," hodos, "a way"), "a cunning device, a wile," and is translated "wiles (of error)" in Eph. 4:14, RV [KJV paraphrases it, "they lie in wait (to deceive)"], lit., "(with a view to) the craft (singular) of deceit"; in 6:11, "the wiles (plural) (of the Devil.)"¶

WILFULLY, WILLFULLY

A. Adverb.

hekousiōs (ἑκουσείως, 1596) denotes "voluntarily, willingly," Heb. 10:26, (of sinning) "willfully"; in 1 Pet. 5:2, "willingly" (of exercising oversight over the flock of God).¶

B. Verb.

thelō (θέλω, 2309), "to will," used in the present participle in 2 Pet. 3:5, is rendered "willfully (forget)" in the RV, KJV, "willingly (are ignorant of)," lit., "this escapes them (i.e., their notice) willing (i.e. of their own will)." See WILL, C, No. 1, WILLING, B, No. 1.

WILL, WOULD

A. Nouns.

1. thelēma (θέλημα, 2307) signifies (a) objectively, "that which is willed, of the will of God," e.g., Matt. 18:14; Mark 3:35, the fulfilling being a sign of spiritual relationship to the Lord; John 4:34; 5:30; 6:39, 40; Acts 13:22, plural, "my desires"; Rom. 2:18; 12:2, lit., "the will of God, the good and perfect and acceptable"; here the repeated article is probably resumptive, the adjectives describing the will, as in the Eng. versions; Gal. 1:4; Eph. 1:9; 5:17, "of the Lord"; Col. 1:9; 4:12; 1 Thess. 4:3; 5:18, where it means "the gracious design," rather than "the determined resolve"; 2 Tim. 2:26, which should read "which have been taken captive by him" [(autou), i.e., by the Devil; the RV, "by the Lord's servant" is an interpretation; it does not correspond to the Greek] unto His (ekeinou) will" (i.e., "God's will"; the different pronoun refers back to the subject of the sentence, viz., God); Heb. 10:10; Rev. 4:11, RV, "because of Thy will"; of human will, e.g., 1 Cor. 7:37; (b) subjectively, the "will" being spoken of as the emotion of being desirous, rather than as the thing "willed"; of the "will" of God, e.g., Rom. 1:10; 1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 1:1; 8:5; Eph. 1:1, 5, 11; Col. 1:1; 2 Tim. 1:1; Heb. 10:7, 9, 36; 1 John 2:17; 5:14; of human "will," e.g., John 1:13; Eph. 2:3, "the desires of the flesh"; 1 Pet. 4:3 (in some texts); 2 Pet. 1:21. See DESIRE, A, No. 5, PLEASURE, Note (1).

2. thelēsis (θέλησις, 2308) denotes "a willing, a wishing" [similar to No. 1 (b)], Heb. 2:4.¶

3. boulēma (βούλημα, 1013), "a deliberate design, that which is purposed," Rom. 9:19; 1 Pet. 4:3 (in the best texts). See PURPOSE, A, No. 1.

4. eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107) (eu, "well," dokeō, "to think") is rendered "good will" in Luke 2:14, KJV (see WELL PLEASED); Phil. 1:15: see DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELL-PLEASING.

5. eunoia (εὔνοια, 2133), "good will" (eu, "well," nous, "the mind"), occurs in Eph. 6:7 (in some texts, 1 Cor. 7:3).¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:36, KJV, boulē, "counsel" (RV), is translated "will." (2) In Rev. 17:17, KJV, gnōmē, "an opinion," RV, "mind," is translated "will." (3) For "will-worship," Col. 2:23, see WORSHIP, B, No. 2.

B. Adjectives.

1. hekōn (ἑκών, 1635), "of free will, willingly," occurs in Rom. 8:20, RV, "of its own will" (KJV, "willingly"); 1 Cor. 9:17, RV, "of my own will" (KJV, "willingly").¶ In the Sept., Exod. 21:13; Job 36:19.¶

2. akōn (ἄκων, 210), a, negative, and No. 1, "unwillingly," occurs in 1 Cor. 9:17, RV, "not of mine own will" (KJV, "against my will").¶ In the Sept., Job 14:17.¶

C. Verbs.

When "will" is not part of the translation of the future tense of verbs, it represents one of the following:

1. thelō (θέλω, 2309), for the force of which see DESIRE, B, No. 6, usually expresses "desire" or "design"; it is most frequently translated by "will" or "would"; see especially Rom. 7:15, 16, 18–21. In 1 Tim. 2:4, RV, "willeth" signifies the gracious "desire" of God for all men to be saved; not all are "willing" to accept His condition, depriving themselves either by the self-established criterion of their perverted reason, or because of their self-indulgent preference for sin. In John 6:21, the KJV renders the verb "willingly" (RV, "they were willing"); in 2 Pet. 3:5, KJV, the present participle is translated "willingly" (RV, "wilfully").

The following are RV renderings for the KJV, "will": Matt. 16:24, 25, "would"; "wouldest," 19:21 and 20:21; "would," 20:26, 27; Mark 8:34, 35; 10:43, 44; "would fain," Luke 13:31; "would," John 6:67; "willeth," 7:17; in 8:44, "it is your will (to do)"; "wouldest," Rom. 13:3; "would," 1 Cor. 14:35 and 1 Pet. 3:10.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), for the force of which see DESIRE, B, No. 7, usually expresses the deliberate exercise of volition more strongly than No. 1, and is rendered as follows in the RV, where the KJV has "will": Matt. 11:27 and Luke 10:22, "willeth"; Jas. 4:4, "would"; in Jas. 3:4, RV, "willeth" (KJV, "listeth"). In Jas. 1:18 the perfect participle is translated "of His own will," lit. "having willed."

3. mellō (μέλλω, 3195), "to be about to," is translated "will" in Matt. 2:13 and John 7:35 (twice); "wilt," John 14:22; "will," Acts 17:31; "wouldest," 23:20; "will," 27:10 and Rev. 3:16. See ABOUT, B.

WILLING (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjectives.

1. prothumos (πρόθυμος, 4289) is rendered "willing" in Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38, RV. See READY, No. 2.

2. hekousios (ἑκούσιος, 1595), "willing," is used with kata in Philem. 14, lit., "according to willing," RV, "of free will" (KJV, "willingly").¶

B. Verbs.

1. thelō (θέλω, 2309) is rendered "ye were willing" in John 5:35. See WILL, C, No. 1.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014) is rendered "(if) Thou be willing" in Luke 22:42; in 2 Pet. 3:9, KJV (RV, "wishing"). See WILL, C, No. 2.

3. eudokeō (εὐδοκέω, 2106), "to be well pleased, to think it good," is rendered "we are willing" in 2 Cor. 5:8; in 1 Thess. 2:8, KJV, "we were willing" (RV, "we were well pleased"). See PLEASE, PLEASURE.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 8:3, KJV, authairetos, "of one's own accord" (RV), is rendered "willing of themselves"; in v. 17, "of his own accord." See ACCORD.¶ (2) For "willing to communicate," 1 Tim. 6:18, see COMMUNICATE, C.

For WILLING MIND see READINESS

For WIN see POSSESS, A, No. 2

WIND (Noun)

1. anemos (ἄνεμος, 417), besides its literal meaning, is used metaphorically in Eph. 4:14, of variable teaching. In Matt. 24:31 and Mark 13:27 the four "winds" stand for the four cardinal points of the compass; so in Rev. 7:1, "the four winds of the earth" (cf. Jer. 49:36; Dan. 7:2); the contexts indicate that these are connected with the execution of divine judgments. Deissmann (Bible Studies) and Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) illustrate the phrase from the papyri.

2. pnoē (πνοή, 4157), "a blowing, blast" (akin to pneō, "to blow"), is used of the rushing "wind" at Pentecost, Acts 2:2. See BREATH.

3. pneuma (πνεῦμα, 4151) is translated "wind" in John 3:8 (RV, marg., "the Spirit breatheth," the probable meaning); in Heb. 1:7 the RV has "winds" for KJV, "spirits." See SPIRIT.

Notes: (1) For pneō, "to blow" ("wind" in Acts 27:40), see BLOW, No. 1. (2) For anemizō, Jas. 1:6, "driven by the wind," see DRIVE, No. 8.¶

WIND (Verb)

1. deō (δέω, 1210), "to bind," is translated "wound (it in linen clothes)," John 19:40, KJV, of the body of Christ (RV, "bound"). See BIND, No. 1, TIE.

2. sustellō (συστέλλω, 4958) is translated "wound ... up" in Acts 5:6 (RV, "wrapped ... round"). See SHORTEN, No. 2, WRAP.

3. eneileō (ἐνειλέω, 1750), "to roll in, wind in," is used in Mark 15:46, of "winding" the cloth around the Lord's body, RV, "wound" (KJV, "wrapped").¶

WINDOW

thuris (θυρίς, 2376), a diminutive of thura, "a door," occurs in Acts 20:9; 2 Cor. 11:33.¶

WINE

1. oinos (οἶνος, 3631) is the general word for "wine." The mention of the bursting of the wineskins, Matt. 9:17; Mark 2:22; Luke 5:37, implies fermentation. See also Eph. 5:18 (cf. John 2:10; 1 Tim. 3:8; Titus 2:3). In Matt. 27:34, the RV has "wine" (KJV, "vinegar," translating the inferior reading oxos).

The drinking of "wine" could be a stumbling block and the apostle enjoins abstinence in this respect, as in others, so as to avoid giving an occasion of stumbling to a brother, Rom. 14:21. Contrast 1 Tim. 5:23, which has an entirely different connection. The word is used metaphorically (a) of the evils ministered to the nations by religious Babylon, 14:8; 17:2; 18:3;

(b) of the contents of the cup of divine wrath upon the nations and Babylon, Rev. 14:10; 16:19; 19:15.

2. gleukos (γλεῦκος, 1098) denotes sweet "new wine," or must, Acts 2:13, where the accusation shows that it was intoxicant and must have been undergoing fermentation some time.¶ In the Sept., Job 32:19.¶

Note: In instituting the Lord's Supper He speaks of the contents of the cup as the "fruit of the vine." So Mark 14:25.

For GIVEN TO WINE see BRAWLER, No. 1

oinopotēs (οἰνοπότης, 3630), "a wine drinker" (oinos, and potēs, "a drinker"), is used in Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:34.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 23:20.¶

For WINEBIBBINGS see EXCESS, Note (2)

WINEPRESS, WINE-VAT

1. lēnos (ληνός, 3025) denotes "a trough or vat," used especially for the treading of grapes, Matt. 21:33. Not infrequently they were dug out in the soil or excavated in a rock, as in the rock vats in Palestine today. In Rev. 14:19, 20 (twice) and 19:15 (where oinos is added, lit., "the winepress of the wine") the word is used metaphorically with reference to the execution of divine judgment upon the gathered foes of the Jews at the close of this age preliminary to the establishment of the millennial kingdom.¶

2. hupolēnion (ὑπολήνιον, 5276) was "a vessel" or "trough" beneath the press itself (hupo, "beneath," and No. 1), for receiving the juice, Mark 12:1, RV, "a pit for the winepress."¶ In the Sept., Isa. 16:10; Joel 3:13; Hag. 2:16; Zech. 14:10.¶

For WINESKINS see SKIN

WING

pterux (πτέρυξ, 4420) is used of birds, Matt. 23:37; Luke 13:34; symbolically in Rev. 12:14, RV, "the two wings of the great eagle" (KJV, "two wings of a great eagle"), suggesting the definiteness of the action, the "wings" indicating rapidity and protection, an allusion, perhaps, to Exod. 19:4 and Deut. 32:11, 12; of the "living creatures" in a vision, Rev. 4:8; 9:9.¶ Cf. pterugion, "a pinnacle."

For WINK AT see OVERLOOK

WINTER (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

cheimōn (χειμών, 5494) denotes "winter," in Matt. 24:20; Mark 13:18; John 10:22; 2 Tim. 4:21. See TEMPEST.

B. Verb.

paracheimazō (παραχειμάζω, 3914) denotes "to winter at a place" (para, at, and A), Acts 27:12 (2nd part); 28:11; 1 Cor. 16:6; Titus 3:12.¶

Note: In Acts 27:12 (1st part) paracheimasia, "a wintering," is rendered "(to) winter in."¶

WIPE

1. apomassō (ἀπομάσσω, 631), "to wipe off, wipe clean" (apo, "from," massō, "to touch, handle"), is used in the middle voice, of "wiping" dust from the feet, Luke 10:11.¶

2. ekmassō (ἐκμάσσω, 1591), "to wipe out" (ek), "wipe dry," is used of "wiping" tears from Christ's feet, Luke 7:38, 44; John 11:2; 12:3; of Christ's "wiping" the disciples' feet, John 13:5.¶

3. exaleiphō (ἐξαλείφω, 1813), "to wipe out or away" (ek, or ex, "out," aleiphō, "to anoint"), is used metaphorically of "wiping" away tears from the eyes, Rev. 7:17; 21:4. See BLOT OUT.

WISDOM

1. sophia (σοφία, 4678) is used with reference to (a) God, Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 1:21, 24; 2:7; Eph. 3:10; Rev. 7:12; (b) Christ, Matt. 13:54; Mark 6:2; Luke 2:40, 52; 1 Cor. 1:30; Col. 2:3; Rev. 5:12; (c) "wisdom" personified, Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:35; 11:49; (d) human "wisdom" (1) in spiritual things, Luke 21:15; Acts 6:3, 10; 7:10; 1 Cor. 2:6 (1st part); 12:8; Eph. 1:8, 17; Col. 1:9, RV, "(spiritual) wisdom," 28; 3:16; 4:5; Jas. 1:5; 3:13, 17; 2 Pet. 3:15; Rev. 13:18; 17:9; (2) in the natural sphere, Matt. 12:42; Luke 11:31; Acts 7:22; 1 Cor. 1:17, 19, 20, 21 (twice), 22; 2:1, 4, 5, 6 (2nd part), 13; 3:19; 2 Cor. 1:12; Col. 2:23; (3) in its most debased form, Jas. 3:15, "earthly, sensual, devilish" (marg., "demoniacal").¶

2. phronēsis (φρόνησις, 5428), "understanding, prudence," i.e., a right use of phrēn, "the mind," is translated "wisdom" in Luke 1:17. See PRUDENCE.

Note: "While sophia is the insight into the true nature of things, phronēsis is the ability to discern modes of action with a view to their results; while sophia is theoretical, phronēsis is practical" (Lightfoot). Sunesis, "understanding, intelligence," is the critical faculty; this and phronēsis are particular applications of sophia.

WISE, WISER, WISELY

A. Adjectives.

1. sophos (σοφός, 4680) is used of (a) God, Rom. 16:27; in 1 Tim. 1:17 and Jude 25 sophos is absent, in the best mss: (see the RV), the comparative degree, sophōteros, occurs in 1 Cor. 1:25, where "foolishness" is simply in the human estimate; (b) spiritual teachers in Israel, Matt. 23:34; (c) believers endowed with spiritual and practical wisdom, Rom. 16:19; 1 Cor. 3:10; 6:5; Eph. 5:15; Jas. 3:13; (d) Jewish teachers in the time of Christ, Matt. 11:25; Luke 10:21; (e) the naturally learned, Rom. 1:14, 22; 1 Cor. 1:19, 20, 26, 27; 3:18–20.¶

2. phronimos (φρόνιμος, 5429), "prudent, sensible, practically wise," Matt. 7:24; 10:16; 24:45; 25:2, 4, 8, 9; Luke 12:42; 16:8 (comparative degree, phronimōteros); 1 Cor. 10:15; in an evil sense, "wise (in your own conceits)," lit., "wise (in yourselves)," i.e., "judged by the standard of your self-complacency," Rom. 11:25; 12:16; ironically, 1 Cor. 4:10; 2 Cor. 11:19.¶

B. Noun.

magos (μάγος, 3097) denotes "a Magian," one of a sacred caste, originally Median, who apparently conformed to the Persian religion while retaining their old beliefs; it is used in the plural, Matt. 2:1, 7, 16 (twice), "wise men." See also SORCERER.

C. Verbs.

1. sophizō (σοφίζω, 4679) is rendered "to make wise" in 2 Tim. 3:15: see DEVISED.

2. suniēmi or suniō (συνίημι, 4920), "to perceive, understand," is used negatively in 2 Cor. 10:12, KJV, "are not wise" (RV, "are without understanding"). See UNDERSTAND.

D. Adverb.

phronimōs (φρονίμως, 5430), "wisely" (akin to A, No. 2), occurs in Luke 16:8.¶

WISE (IN NO)

1. ou mē (οὐ μή), a double negative, expressing an emphatic negation, "by no means," is rendered "in no wise" in Matt. 10:42; Luke 18:17; John 6:37; Acts 13:41; Rev. 21:27.

2. pantōs (πάντως, 3843), "altogether, by all means," is used with the negative ou ("not") in Rom. 3:9, stating a complete denial, rendered "No, in no wise." See ALL, B, 3, ALTOGETHER, B, 1.

3. panteles (παντελές, 3838), the neuter of pantelēs, is used with the negative mē, and with eis to, "unto the," in Luke 13:11, and translated "in no wise," lit., "not to the uttermost": see UTTERMOST, No. 1.

For WISE (ON THIS) see THUS

WISH

1. euchomai (εὔχομαι, 2172) is rendered "to wish" in Acts 27:29 (RV marg., "prayed"); so Rom. 9:3; in 2 Cor. 13:9 and 3 John 2, RV, "pray": see PRAY.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), in Mark 15:15, RV, is translated "wishing" (KJV, "willing"); so 2 Pet. 3:9; in Acts 25:22, RV, could wish" (KJV, "would"). See WILL, C, No. 2.

3. thelō (θέλω, 2309), in 1 Cor. 16:7, RV, is translated "wish" (KJV, "will"); Gal. 4:20, "I could wish" (KJV, "I desire"). See WILL, C, No. 1.

oida (οἶδα, Perf. of 1492), "to know," in the pluperfect tense (with imperfect meaning) is rendered "wist" (the past tense of the verb "to wit": cf. WOT) in Mark 9:6; 14:40; Luke 2:49; John 5:13; Acts 12:9; 23:5. See KNOW, No. 2.

WIT (TO)

A. Adverb.

hōs (ὡς, 5613), a relative adverb signifying "as," or "how," is used in 2 Cor. 5:19 to introduce the statement "that God was . . .," and rendered "to wit," lit., "how."

B. Verb.

gnōrizō (γνωρίζω, 1107), "to know, to make known," is rendered "we do (you) to wit" in 2 Cor. 8:1, KJV, RV, "we make known (to you)." See KNOW, No. 8.

Note: In Rom. 8:23 the italicized words "to wit" are added to specify the particular meaning of "adoption" there mentioned.

For WITCHCRAFT see SORCERY

hama (ἅμα, 260), at the same time, is rendered "withal" in Acts 24:26, RV (KJV, "also"); 1 Tim. 5:13 (with kai, "also"); Philem. 22.

Notes: (1) In Eph. 6:16, RV, the phrase en pasin (en, "in," and the dative plural of pas, "all") is rightly rendered "withal" (KJV, "above all"); the shield of faith is to accompany the use of all the other parts of the spiritual equipment. (2) In 1 Cor. 12:7 sumpherō is rendered "profit withal." See EXPEDIENT, PROFIT, B, No. 1. (3) In Acts 25:27, kai, "also," is rendered "withal."

WITHDRAW

1. hupostellō (ὑποστέλλω, 5288) is translated "withdraw" in Gal. 2:12: see DRAW, B, No. 4.

2. apospaō (ἀποσπάω, 645), in the passive voice, is translated "was withdrawn" in Luke 22:41, KJV: see PART (Verb), No. 3.

3. anachōreō (ἀναχωρέω, 402) is translated "to withdraw" in the RV of Matt. 2:22 and John 6:15; RV and KJV in Matt. 12:15 and Mark 3:7. See DEPART, No. 10.

4. hupochōreō (ὑποχωρέω, 5298), "to retire," is translated "withdrew Himself" in Luke 5:16; elsewhere in 9:10, RV, "withdrew apart" (KJV, "went aside"). See GO, No. 16.¶

5. stellō (στέλλω, 4724), "to bring together, gather up" (used of furling sails), hence, in the middle voice, signifies "to shrink from a person or thing," 2 Thess. 3:6, "withdraw"; elsewhere, 2 Cor. 8:20, "avoiding." See AVOID.¶ Cf. No. 1.

Note: In 1 Tim. 6:5, some texts have aphistēmi, rendered "withdraw thyself," KJV.

WITHER (away)

xērainō (ξηραίνω, 3583), "to dry up, parch, wither," is translated "to wither," (a) of plants, Matt. 13:6; 21:19, 20; Mark 4:6; 11:20, RV (KJV, "dried up"), 21; Luke 8:6; John 15:6; Jas. 1:11; 1 Pet. 1:24; (b) of members of the body, Mark 3:1, and, in some texts, 3. See DRY, B, OVERRIPE, PINE AWAY, RIPE.

Notes: (1) For the adjective xēros, "dry, withered," see DRY, A, No. 1. (2) For "whose fruit withereth," Jude 12, KJV, see AUTUMN.

WITHHOLD

kōluō (κωλύω, 2967), "to hinder, restrain," is translated "withhold (not)" in Luke 6:29, RV, KJV, "forbid (not) to take." See FORBID, HINDER, KEEP, Note (7), SUFFER, WITHSTAND.

Note: For "withholdeth" in 2 Thess. 2:6 see RESTRAIN.

WITHIN

Note: This is a translation of (a) entos: see INSIDE, No. 1; in Luke 17:21 the RV marg., "in the midst of," is to be preferred; the kingdom of God was not in the hearts of the Pharisees; (b) en, "of thinking or saying within oneself," e.g., Luke 7:39, 49 (marg., "among"); locally, e.g., Luke 19:44; (c) esōthen, 2 Cor. 7:5; Rev. 4:8; 5:1; "from within," Mark 7:21, 23; Luke 11:7; "within," Matt. 23:25; Luke 11:40, RV, "inside"; in Matt. 23:27, 28, RV, "inwardly"; (d) esō, John 20:26; Acts 5:23; 1 Cor. 5:12 (i.e., "within" the church); (e) pros, to, or with, in Mark 14:4, KJV, "within" (RV, "among"); (f) dia, "through," rendered "within (three days)" in Mark 14:58, KJV (RV, "in," looking through the time to the event, and in keeping with the metaphor of building); (g) esōteros, Heb. 6:19, the comparative degree of esō, used with the article translated "that within," lit., "the inner (part of the veil)," i.e., "inside": see INNER, No. 2; (h) in Luke 11:41, RV, eneimi, "to be in," is rendered "are within" (KJV, "ye have").

WITHOUT

Notes: (1) This is a translation of (a) exō, "outside," e.g., Matt. 12:46, 47; "(them that are) without," 1 Cor. 5:12, 13; Col. 4:5; 1 Thess. 4:12 (the unregenerate); Heb. 13:11–13; (b) exōthen, "from without," or "without," e.g., Mark 7:15, 18; Luke 11:40; 2 Cor. 7:5; 1 Tim. 3:7; as a preposition, Rev. 11:2; (c) chōris, "apart from," frequently used as a preposition, especially in Hebrews [4:15; 7:7, 20, 21; 9:7, 18, 22, 28; 11:6; in 11:40, RV, "apart from" (KJV, "without"); 12:8, 14]; (d) aneu, like chōris, but rarer, Matt. 10:29; Mark 13:2; 1 Pet. 3:1; 4:9;¶ (e) ater, Luke 22:6, marg., "without (tumult)"; v. 35;¶ (f) ektos, "out of, outside," 1 Cor. 6:18: see OTHER, OUT, OUTSIDE; (g) parektos, "besides, in addition," 2 Cor. 11:28, "(those things that are) without," RV, marg., "(the things which) I omit," or "(the things that come) out of course." (2) In Acts 5:26, ou, "not," meta, "with," is rendered "without (violence)." (3) In Acts 25:17, KJV, "without (any delay)" represents poieō, "to make," and mēdemian, "no," RV, "I made no (delay)." (4) For "without ceasing, Acts 12:5, KJV, see EARNESTLY, C, No. 1. (5) In many nouns the negative prefix a forms part of the word and is translated "without."

WITHSTAND

1. kōluō (κωλύω, 2967), "to hinder," is rendered "withstand" in Acts 11:17. See FORBID, HINDER.

2. anthistēmi (ἀνθίστημι, 436), "to set against," is translated "to withstand" in Acts 13:8 (middle voice); in the intransitive 2nd aorist, active voice, Eph. 6:13; 2 Tim. 3:8 (1st part; middle voice in 2nd part); 4:15. See RESIST.

WITNESS (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. martus or martur (μάρτυς, 3144) (whence Eng., "martyr," one who bears "witness" by his death) denotes "one who can or does aver what he has seen or heard or knows"; it is used (a) of God, Rom. 1:9; 2 Cor. 1:23; Phil. 1:8; 1 Thess. 2:5, 10 (2nd part); (b) of Christ, Rev. 1:5; 3:14; (c) of those who "witness" for Christ by their death, Acts 22:20; Rev. 2:13; Rev. 17:6; (d) of the interpreters of God's counsels, yet to "witness" in Jerusalem in the times of the Antichrist, Rev. 11:3; (e) in a forensic sense, Matt. 18:16; 26:65; Mark 14:63; Acts 6:13; 7:58; 2 Cor. 13:1; 1 Tim. 5:19; Heb. 10:28; (f) in a historical sense, Luke 11:48; 24:48; Acts 1:8, 22; 2:32; 3:15; 5:32; 10:39, 41; 13:31; 22:15; 26:16; 1 Thess. 2:10 (1st part); 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 2:2; Heb. 12:1, "(a cloud) of witnesses," here of those mentioned in ch. 11, those whose lives and actions testified to the worth and effect of faith, and whose faith received "witness" in Scripture; 1 Pet. 5:1.¶

2. marturia (μαρτυρία, 3141), "testimony, a bearing witness," is translated "witness" in Mark 14:55, 56, 59; Luke 22:71; John 1:7, 19 (RV); 3:11, 32 and 33 (RV); 5:31, 32, 34 (RV), 36; RV in 8:13, 14, 17; 19:35; 21:24; KJV in Titus 1:13; KJV and RV in 1 John 5:9 (thrice), 10a; RV in 10b, 11; 3 John 12: see TESTIMONY, No. 2.

3. marturion (μαρτύριον, 3142), "testimony or witness as borne, a declaration of facts," is translated "witness" in Matt. 24:14, KJV; Acts 4:33; 7:44 (KJV); Jas. 5:3 (KJV): see TESTIMONY, No. 1.

4. pseudomartus or -tur (ψευδομάρτυς, 5571 and 3144) denotes "a false witness," Matt. 26:60; 1 Cor. 15:15.¶

5. pseudomarturia (ψευδομαρτυρία, 5577), "false witness," occurs in Matt. 15:19; 26:59.¶

B. Verbs.

1. martureō (μαρτυρέω, 3140) denotes (I) "to be a martus" (see A, No. 1), or "to bear witness to," sometimes rendered "to testify" (see TESTIFY, No. 1); it is used of the "witness" (a) of God the Father to Christ, John 5:32, 37; 8:18 (2nd part); 1 John 5:9, 10; to others, Acts 13:22; 15:8; Heb. 11:2, 4 (twice), 5, 39; (b) of Christ, John 3:11, 32; 4:44; 5:31; 7:7; 8:13, 14, 18 (1st part); 13:21; 18:37; Acts 14:3; 1 Tim. 6:13; Rev. 22:18, 20; of the Holy Spirit, to Christ, John 15:26; Heb. 10:15; 1 John 5:7, 8, RV, which rightly omits the latter part of v. 7 (it was a marginal gloss which crept into the original text: see THREE); it finds no support in Scripture; (c) of the Scriptures, to Christ, John 5:39; Heb. 7:8, 17; (d) of the works of Christ, to Himself, and of the circumstances connected with His death, John 5:36; 10:25; 1 John 5:8; (e) of prophets and apostles, to the righteousness of God, Rom. 3:21; to Christ, John 1:7, 8, 15, 32, 34; 3:26; 5:33, RV; 15:27; 19:35; 21:24; Acts 10:43; 23:11; 1 Cor. 15:15; 1 John 1:2; 4:14; Rev. 1:2; to doctrine, Acts 26:22 (in some texts, so KJV; see No. 2); to the Word of God, Rev. 1:2; (f) of others, concerning Christ, Luke 4:22; John 4:39; 12:17; (g) of believers to one another, John 3:28; 2 Cor. 8:3; Gal. 4:15; Col. 4:13; 1 Thess. 2:11 (in some texts: see No. 2); 3 John 3, 6, 12 (2nd part); (h) of the apostle Paul concerning Israel, Rom. 10:2; (i) of an angel, to the churches, Rev. 22:16; (j) of unbelievers, concerning themselves, Matt. 23:31; concerning Christ, John 18:23; concerning others, John 2:25; Acts 22:5; 26:5; (II) "to give a good report, to approve of," Acts 6:3; 10:22; 16:2; 22:12; 1 Tim. 5:10; 3 John 12 (1st part); some would put Luke 4:22 here.¶

2. marturomai (μαρτύρομαι, 3143), strictly meaning "to summon as a witness," signifies "to affirm solemnly, adjure," and is used in the middle voice only, rendered "to testify" in Acts 20:26, RV (KJV, "I take . . . to record"); 26:22, RV, in the best texts [see No. 1 (e)]; Gal. 5:3; Eph. 4:17; 1 Thess. 2:11, in the best texts [see No. 1 (g)].¶

3. summartureō (συμμαρτυρέω, 4828) denotes "to bear witness with" (sun), Rom. 2:15; 8:16; 9:1.¶

4. sunepimartureō (συνεπιμαρτυρέω, 4901) denotes "to join in bearing witness with others," Heb. 2:4.¶

5. katamartureō (καταμαρτυρέω, 2649) denotes "to witness against" (kata), Matt. 26:62; 27:13; Mark 14:60 (in some mss., 15:4, for katēgoreō, "to accuse," RV).¶

6. pseudomartureō (ψευδομαρτυρέω, 5576), "to bear false witness" (pseudēs, "false"), occurs in Matt. 19:18; Mark 10:19; 14:56, 57; Luke 18:20; in some texts, Rom. 13:9.¶

C. Adjective.

amarturos (ἀμάρτυρος, 267) denotes "without witness" (a, negative, and martus), Acts 14:17.¶

WOE

ouai (οὐαί, 3759), an interjection, is used (a) in denunciation, Matt. 11:21; 18:7 (twice); eight times in ch. 23; 24:19; 26:24; Mark 13:17; 14:21; Luke 6:24, 25 (twice), 26; 10:13; six times in ch. 11; 17:1; 21:23; 22:22; 1 Cor. 9:16; Jude 11; Rev. 8:13 (thrice); 12:12; as a noun, Rev. 9:12 (twice); 11:14 (twice); (b) in grief, "alas," Rev. 18:10, 16, 19 (twice in each).¶

lukos (λύκος, 3074) occurs in Matt. 10:16; Luke 10:3; John 10:12 (twice); metaphorically, Matt. 7:15; Acts 20:29.¶

WOMAN

1. gunē (γυνή, 1135), for which see also WIFE, is used of a "woman" unmarried or married, e.g., Matt. 11:11; 14:21; Luke 4:26, of a "widow"; Rom. 7:2; in the vocative case, used in addressing a "woman," it is a term not of reproof or severity, but of endearment or respect, Matt. 15:28; John 2:4, where the Lord's words to His mother at the wedding in Cana, are neither rebuff nor rebuke. The question is, lit., "What to Me and to thee?" and the word "woman," the term of endearment, follows this. The meaning is "There is no obligation on Me or you, but love will supply the need." She confides in Him, He responds to her faith. There was lovingkindness in both hearts. His next words about "His hour" suit this; they were not unfamiliar to her. Cana is in the path to Calvary; Calvary was not yet, but it made the beginning of signs possible. See also 4:21; 19:26.

In Gal. 4:4 the phrase "born of a woman" is in accordance with the subject there, viz., the real humanity of the Lord Jesus; this the words attest. They declare the method of His incarnation and "suggest the means whereby that humanity was made free from the taint of sin consequent upon the Fall, viz., that He was not born through the natural process of ordinary generation, but was conceived by the power of the Holy Spirit... To have written 'born of a virgin' would have carried the argument in a wrong direction... Since that man is born of woman is a universal fact, the statement would be superfluous if the Lord Jesus were no more than man" (Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 184f.).

2. gunaikarion (γυναικάριον, 1133), a diminutive of No. 1, a "little woman," is used contemptuously in 2 Tim. 3:6, "a silly woman."¶

3. presbuteros (πρεσβύτερος, 4245), "elder, older," in the feminine plural, denotes "elder women" in 1 Tim. 5:2. See ELDER, A, No. 1.

4. presbutis (πρεσβῦτις, 4247), the feminine of presbutēs, "aged," is used in the plural and translated "aged women" in Titus 2:3.¶

5. thēleia (θήλεια, 2338), the feminine of the adjective thēlus, denotes "female," and is used as a noun, Rom. 1:26, 27. See FEMALE.

WOMB

1. koilia (κοιλία, 2836) denotes "the womb," Matt. 19:12; Luke 1:15, 41, 42, 44; 2:21; 11:27; 23:29; John 3:4; Acts 3:2; 14:8; Gal. 1:15. See BELLY, No. 1.

2. gastēr (γαστήρ, 1064), is rendered "womb" in Luke 1:31. See BELLY, No. 2.

3. mētra (μήτρα, 3388), the matrix (akin to mētēr, "a mother"), occurs in Luke 2:23; Rom. 4:19.¶

WONDER (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. teras (τέρας, 5059), "something strange," causing the beholder to marvel, is always used in the plural, always rendered "wonders," and generally follows sēmeia, "signs"; the opposite order occurs in Acts 2:22, 43; 6:8, RV; 7:36; in Acts 2:19 "wonders" occurs alone. A sign is intended to appeal to the understanding, a "wonder" appeals to the imagination, a power (dunamis) indicates its source as supernatural. "Wonders" are manifested as divine operations in thirteen occurrences (9 times in Acts); three times they are ascribed to the work of Satan through human agents, Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22 and 2 Thess. 2:9.

2. thambos (θάμβος, 2285), "amazement," is rendered "wonder" in Acts 3:10. See AMAZE, A, No. 2.

Notes: (1) For thauma, "a wonder" (rendered "admiration" in Rev. 17:6, KJV), see MARVEL. (2) In Rev. 12:1, 3 and 13:13 sēmeion, "a sign," is translated in the KJV, "wonder(s)," RV, "sign(s)." (3) In Acts 3:11 ekthambos (ek, intensive, and No. 2) is translated "greatly wondering."¶ (4) For pseudos, 2 Thess. 2:9, "lying wonders," see FALSE, B. Cf. AMAZE, B, Nos. 3 and 4.

B. Verb.

Note: For thaumazō, see MARVEL; for existēmi, Acts 8:13, KJV, see AMAZE, B, No. 1.

WONDERFUL (THING, WORK)

Notes: (1) In Matt. 7:22, KJV, dunamis (in the plural) is rendered "wonderful works" (RV, "mighty works," marg., "powers"). See POWER. (2) In Acts 2:11, KJV, the adjective megaleios, "magnificent," in the neuter plural with the article, is rendered "the wonderful works" (RV, "the mighty works").¶ (3) In Matt. 21:15, the neuter plural of the adjective thaumasios, "wonderful," is used as a noun, "wonderful things," lit., "wonders."

WONT

ethō (ἔθω, 1486), "to be accustomed," is used in the pluperfect tense (with imperfect meaning), eiōtha, rendered "was wont" in Matt. 27:15; Mark 10:1. See CUSTOM, B, No. 2, MANNER, A, Note (1).

Notes: (1) In Mark 15:8, "he was wont to do," RV, represents the imperfect tense of poieō, "to do" (KJV, "he had ever done"). (2) In Luke 22:39, KJV, ethos, "a custom," preceded by kata and the article, lit., "according to the (i.e., His) custom," is translated "as He was wont" (RV, "as His custom was"): see CUSTOM, A, No. 1. (3) In Acts 16:13 the KJV, "was wont," translates the texts which have the passive voice of nomizō with its meaning "to hold by custom"; the RV, "we supposed," translates the texts which have the imperfect tense, active, with the meaning "to consider, suppose."

WOOD

1. xulon (ξύλον, 3586) denotes "timber, wood for any use" 1 Cor. 3:12; Rev. 18:12 (twice). See STAFF, STOCKS, TREE.

2. hulē (ὕλη, 5208) denotes "a wood, a forest," Jas. 3:5 (KJV, "matter," marg., "wood").¶ See MATTER, Note (3).

WOOL

erion (ἔριον, 2053) occurs in Heb. 9:19; Rev. 1:14.¶

WORD

1. logos (λόγος, 3056) denotes (I) "the expression of thought"—not the mere name of an object—(a) as embodying a conception or idea, e.g., Luke 7:7; 1 Cor. 14:9, 19; (b) a saying or statement, (1) by God, e.g., John 15:25; Rom. 9:9; 9:28, RV, "word" (KJV, "work"); Gal. 5:14; Heb. 4:12; (2) by Christ, e.g., Matt. 24:35 (plur.); John 2:22; 4:41; 14:23 (plur.); 15:20. In connection with (1) and (2) the phrase "the word of the Lord," i.e., the revealed will of God (very frequent in the OT), is used of a direct revelation given by Christ, 1 Thess. 4:15; of the gospel, Acts 8:25; 13:49; 15:35, 36; 16:32; 19:10; 1 Thess. 1:8; 2 Thess. 3:1; in this respect it is the message from the Lord, delivered with His authority and made effective by His power (cf. Acts 10:36); for other instances relating to the gospel see Acts 13:26; 14:3; 15:7; 1 Cor. 1:18, RV; 2 Cor. 2:17; 4:2; 5:19; 6:7; Gal. 6:6; Eph. 1:13; Phil. 2:16; Col. 1:5; Heb. 5:13; sometimes it is used as the sum of God's utterances, e.g., Mark 7:13; John 10:35; Rev. 1:2, 9; (c) discourse, speech, of instruction, etc., e.g., Acts 2:40; 1 Cor. 2:13; 12:8; 2 Cor. 1:18; 1 Thess. 1:5; 2 Thess. 2:15; Heb. 6:1, RV, marg.; doctrine, e.g., Matt. 13:20; Col. 3:16; 1 Tim. 4:6; 2 Tim. 1:13; Titus 1:9; 1 John 2:7;

(II) "The Personal Word," a title of the Son of God; this identification is substantiated by the statements of doctrine in John 1:1–18, declaring in verses 1 and 2 (1) His distinct and superfinite Personality, (2) His relation in the Godhead (pros, "with," not mere company, but the most intimate communion), (3) His deity; in v. 3 His creative power; in v. 14 His incarnation ("became flesh," expressing His voluntary act; not as KJV, "was made"), the reality and totality of His human nature, and His glory "as of the only begotten from the Father," RV (marg., "an only begotten from a father"), the absence of the article in each place lending stress to the nature and character of the relationship; His was the shekinah glory in open manifestation; v. 18 consummates the identification: "the only-begotten Son (RV marg., many ancient authorities read "God only begotten,"), which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him," thus fulfilling the significance of the title "Logos," the "Word," the personal manifestation, not of a part of the divine nature, but of the whole deity (see IMAGE).

The title is used also in 1 John 1, "the Word of life" combining the two declarations in John 1:1 and 4 and Rev. 19:13 (for 1 John 5:7 see THREE).

2. rhēma (ῥῆμα, 4487) denotes "that which is spoken, what is uttered in speech or writing"; in the singular, "a word," e.g., Matt. 12:36; 27:14; 2 Cor. 12:4; 13:1; Heb. 12:19; in the plural, speech, discourse, e.g., John 3:34; 8:20; Acts 2:14; 6:11, 13; 11:14; 13:42; 26:25; Rom. 10:18; 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17; it is used of the gospel in Rom. 10:8 (twice), 17, RV, "the word of Christ" (i.e., the "word" which preaches Christ); 10:18; 1 Pet. 1:25 (twice); of a statement, command, instruction, e.g., Matt. 26:75; Luke 1:37, RV, "(no) word (from God shall be void of power)"; v. 38; Acts 11:16; Heb. 11:3.

The significance of rhēma (as distinct from logos) is exemplified in the injunction to take "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God," Eph. 6:17; here the reference is not to the whole Bible as such, but to the individual scripture which the Spirit brings to our remembrance for use in time of need, a prerequisite being the regular storing of the mind with Scripture.

Notes: (1) Epos, "a word," is used in a phrase in Heb. 7:9, lit., "(as to say) a word," RV, "(so to) say," KJV, "(as I may so) say"; logos is reasoned speech, rhēma, an utterance, epos, "the articulated expression of a thought" (Abbott-Smith). (2) In Rom. 16:18, KJV, chrēstologia, "useful discourse" (chrēstos, "beneficial"), is rendered "good words" [RV, "smooth . . . (speech)"].¶ (3) For logikos, 1 Pet. 2:2 (RV, "spiritual"), rendered "of the word," KJV, see MILK. (4) For the verb apangellō, rendered "to bring word," see BRING, No. 36. (5) In Matt. 2:13, KJV, eipon, "to tell" (RV), is rendered "bring . . . word." (6) For "enticing words," Col. 2:4, see ENTICE and PERSUASIVENESS. (7) For "strifes of words," 1 Tim. 6:4, KJV, and "strive . . . about words," 2 Tim. 2:14, see STRIFE, STRIVE. (8) For suntomōs, Acts 24:4, "a few words," see FEW, B.¶ For the same phrase see FEW, A, Nos. 1 and 2.

WORK (Noun and Verb), WROUGHT

A. Nouns.

1. ergon (ἔργον, 2041) denotes (I) "work, employment, task," e.g., Mark 13:34; John

4:34; 17:4; Acts 13:2; Phil. 2:30; 1 Thess. 5:13; in Acts 5:38 with the idea of enterprise; (II) "a deed, act," (a) of God, e.g., John 6:28, 29; 9:3; 10:37; 14:10; Acts 13:41; Rom. 14:20; Heb. 1:10; 2:7; 3:9; 4:3, 4, 10; Rev. 15:3; (b) of Christ, e.g., Matt. 11:2; especially in John, 5:36; 7:3, 21; 10:25, 32, 33, 38; 14:11, 12; 15:24; Rev. 2:26; (c) of believers, e.g., Matt. 5:16; Mark 14:6; Acts 9:36; Rom. 13:3; Col. 1:10; 1 Thess. 1:3, "work of faith," here the initial act of faith at conversion (turning to God, v. 9); in 2 Thess. 1:11, "every work of faith," RV, denotes every activity undertaken for Christ's sake; 2:17; 1 Tim. 2:10; 5:10; 6:18; 2 Tim. 2:21; 3:17; Titus 2:7, 14; 3:1, 8, 14; Heb. 10:24; 13:21; frequent in James, as the effect of faith [in 1:25, KJV, "(a doer) of the work," RV, "(a doer) that worketh"]; 1 Pet. 2:12; Rev. 2:2 and in several other places in chs. 2 and 3; 14:13; (d) of unbelievers, e.g., Matt. 23:3, 5; John 7:7; Acts 7:41 (for idols); Rom. 13:12; Eph. 5:11; Col. 1:21; Titus 1:16 (1st part); 1 John 3:12; Jude 15, RV; Rev. 2:6, RV; of those who seek justification by works, e.g., Rom. 9:32; Gal. 3:10; Eph. 2:9; described as the works of the law, e.g., Gal. 2:16; 3:2, 5; dead works, Heb. 6:1; 9:14; (e) of Babylon, Rev. 18:6; (f) of the Devil, John 8:41; 1 John 3:8. See DEED.

2. ergasia (ἐργασία, 2039) denotes "a work" or "business," also "a working, performance," Eph. 4:19, where preceded by eis, "to," it is rendered "to work" (marg., "to make a trade of"). See DILIGENCE, GAIN.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 9:28, KJV, logos, "a word" (RV), is rendered "work." (2) For pragma, Jas. 3:16, rendered "work" in KJV, the RV has "deed." (3) For praxis, "a doing," Matt. 16:27, RV marg., KJV, "works," see DEED. (4) For the KJV, "much work," Acts 27:16, see DIFFICULTY. (5) For "workfellow," Rom. 16:21, KJV, see WORKER, No. 2. (6) In Matt. 14:2 and Mark 6:14, KJV, dunameis, "powers," RV, is translated "mighty works"; in Acts 2:22, RV, "mighty works," KJV, "miracles." (7) For "wonderful works" see WONDERFUL, Note (2).

B. Verbs.

1. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038) is used (I) intransitively, e.g., Matt. 21:28; John 5:17; 9:4 (2nd part); Rom. 4:4, 5; 1 Cor. 4:12; 9:6; 1 Thess. 2:9; 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:8, 10–12 (for the play upon words in v. 11 see BUSYBODY, A); (II) transitively, (a) "to work something, produce, perform," e.g., Matt. 26:10, "she hath wrought"; John 6:28, 30; 9:4 (1st part); Acts 10:35; 13:41; Rom. 2:10; 13:10; 1 Cor. 16:10; 2 Cor. 7:10a, in the best texts, some have No. 2; Gal. 6:10, RV, "let us work"; Eph. 4:28; Heb. 11:33; 2 John 8; (b) "to earn by working, work for," John 6:27, RV, "work" (KJV, "labor"). See COMMIT, DO, LABOR, MINISTER, TRADE.

2. katergazomai (κατεργάζομαι, 2716), an emphatic form of No. 1, signifies "to work out, achieve, effect by toil," rendered "to work" (past tense, "wrought") in Rom. 1:27; 2:9, RV; 4:15 (the Law brings men under condemnation and so renders them subject to divine wrath); 5:3; 7:8, 13; 15:18; 2 Cor. 4:17; 5:5; 7:10 (see No. 1), 11; 12:12; Phil. 2:12, where "your own salvation" refers especially to freedom from strife and vainglory; Jas. 1:3, 20; 1 Pet. 4:3. See DO, No. 5.

3. energeō (ἐνεργέω, 1754), lit., "to work in" (en, and A, No. 1), "to be active, operative," is used of "(a) God, 1 Cor. 12:6; Gal. 2:8; 3:5; Eph. 1:11, 20; 3:20; Phil. 2:13a; Col. 1:29; (b) the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor, 12:11; (c) the Word of God, 1 Thess. 2:13 (middle voice; KJV, 'effectually worketh'); (d) supernatural power, undefined, Matt. 14:2; Mark 6:14; (e) faith, as the energizer of love, Gal. 5:6; (f) the example of patience in suffering, 2 Cor. 1:6; (g) death (physical) and life (spiritual), 2 Cor. 4:12; (h) sinful passions, Rom. 7:5; (i) the spirit of the Evil One, Eph. 2:2; (j) the mystery of iniquity, 2 Thess. 2:7."*

To these may be added (k) the active response of believers to the inworking of God, Phil. 2:13b, RV, "to work (for)," KJV, "to do (of)"; (l) the supplication of the righteous, Jas. 5:16, RV, "in its working" (KJV, "effectual fervent").

4. poieō (ποιέω, 4160), "to do," is rendered "to work" in Matt. 20:12, KJV (RV, "spent"); Acts 15:12, "had wrought"; 19:11; 21:19; Heb. 13:21; Rev. 16:14; 19:20; 21:27, KJV (RV, "maketh"; marg., "doeth"). See DO.

5. sunergeō (συνεργέω, 4903), "to work with or together" (sun), occurs in Mark 16:20; Rom. 8:28, "work together"; 1 Cor. 16:16, "helpeth with"; 2 Cor. 6:1, "workers together," present participle, "working together"; the "with Him" represents nothing in the Greek; Jas. 2:22, "wrought with." See HELP.¶

6. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), "to become, take place," is rendered "wrought" in Mark 6:2; Acts 5:12, "were . . . wrought."

WORKER, WORKFELLOW, FELLOW WORKERS, WORKMAN

1. ergatēs (ἐργάτης, 2040) is translated "workers" in Luke 13:27 ("of iniquity"); 2 Cor. 11:13 ("deceitful"); Phil. 3:2 ("evil"); "workman," Matt. 10:10, KJV (RV, "laborer"); "workman," 2 Tim. 2:15; "workmen," Acts 19:25. See LABORER.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 114, 115.

2. sunergos (συνεργός, 4904) denotes "a worker with," and is rendered "workfellow" in Rom. 16:21, KJV, RV, "fellow worker"; in Col. 4:11, "fellow workers" (see RV). See the RV, "God's fellow workers," in 1 Cor. 3:9. See COMPANION, HELPER, LABORER, Note.

Note: For "workers at home," Titus 2:5, see HOME, B.

WORKING

1. energeia (ἐνέργεια, 1753) (Eng., "energy") is used (1) of the "power" of God, (a) in the resurrection of Christ, Eph. 1:19; Col. 2:12, RV, "working" (KJV, "operation"); (b) in the call and enduement of Paul, Eph. 3:7; Col. 1:29; (c) in His retributive dealings in sending "a working of error" (KJV, "strong delusion") upon those under the rule of the Man of Sin who receive not the love of the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness, 2 Thess. 2:11; (2) of the "power" of Christ (a) generally, Phil. 3:21; (b) in the church, individually, Eph. 4:16; (3) of the power of Satan in energizing the Man of Sin in his "parousia," 2 Thess. 2:9, "coming."¶

2. energēma (ἐνέργημα, 1755), "what is wrought," the effect produced by No. 1, occurs in 1 Cor. 12:6, RV, "workings" (KJV, "operations"); v. 10.¶

For WORKMANSHIP see MADE, B

WORLD

1. kosmos (κόσμος, 2889), primarily "order, arrangement, ornament, adornment" (1 Pet. 3:3, see ADORN, B), is used to denote (a) the "earth," e.g., Matt. 13:35; John 21:25; Acts 17:24; Rom. 1:20 (probably here the universe: it had this meaning among the Greeks, owing to the order observable in it); 1 Tim. 6:7; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; (b) the "earth" in contrast with Heaven, 1 John 3:17 (perhaps also Rom. 4:13); (c) by metonymy, the "human race, mankind," e.g., Matt. 5:14; John 1:9 [here "that cometh (RV, 'coming') into the world" is said of Christ, not of "every man"; by His coming into the world He was the light for all men]; v. 10; 3:16, 17 (thrice), 19; 4:42, and frequently in Rom., 1 Cor. and 1 John; (d) "Gentiles" as distinguished from Jews, e.g., Rom. 11:12, 15, where the meaning is that all who will may be reconciled (cf. 2 Cor. 5:19); (e) the "present condition of human affairs," in alienation from and opposition to God, e.g., John 7:7; 8:23; 14:30; 1 Cor. 2:12; Gal. 4:3; 6:14; Col. 2:8; Jas. 1:27; 1 John 4:5 (thrice); 5:19; (f) the "sum of temporal possessions," Matt. 16:26; 1 Cor. 7:31 (1st part); (g) metaphorically, of the "tongue" as "a world (of iniquity)," Jas. 3:6, expressive of magnitude and variety.

2. aiōn (αἰών, 165), "an age, a period of time," marked in the NT usage by spiritual or moral characteristics, is sometimes translated "world"; the RV marg. always has "age." The following are details concerning the world in this respect; its cares, Matt. 13:22; its sons, Luke 16:8; 20:34; its rulers, 1 Cor. 2:6, 8; its wisdom, 1 Cor. 1:20; 2:6; 3:18; its fashion, Rom. 12:2; its character, Gal. 1:4; its god, 2 Cor. 4:4. The phrase "the end of the world" should be rendered "the end of the age," in most places (see END, A, No. 2); in 1 Cor. 10:11, KJV, "the ends (telē) of the world," RV, "the ends of the ages," probably signifies the fulfillment of the divine purposes concerning the ages in regard to the church [this would come under END, A, No. 1, (c)]. In Heb 11:3 [lit., "the ages (have been prepared)"] the word indicates all that the successive periods contain; cf. 1:2.

Aiōn is always to be distinguished from kosmos, even where the two seem to express the same idea, e.g., 1 Cor. 3:18, aiōn, v. 19, kosmos; the two are used together in Eph. 2:2, lit., "the age of this world." For a list of phrases containing aiōn, with their respective meanings, see EVER, B.

3. oikoumenē (οἰκουμένη, 3625), "the inhabited earth" (see EARTH, No. 2), is used (a) of the whole inhabited world, Matt. 24:14; Luke 4:5; 21:26; Rom. 10:18; Heb. 1:6; Rev. 3:10; 16:14; by metonymy, of its inhabitants, Acts 17:31; Rev. 12:9; (b) of the Roman Empire, the world as viewed by the writer or speaker, Luke 2:1; Acts 11:28; 24:5; by metonymy, of its inhabitants, Acts 17:6; 19:27; (c) the inhabited world in a coming age, Heb. 2:5.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 13:3, KJV, gē, "the earth" (RV), is translated "world." (2) For phrases containing aiōnios, e.g., Rom. 16:25; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 1:2, see ETERNAL, No. 2.

WORLDLY

kosmikos (κοσμικός, 2886), "pertaining to this world," is used (a) in Heb. 9:1, of the tabernacle, KJV, "worldly," RV, "of this world" (i.e., made of mundane materials, adapted to this visible world, local and transitory); (b) in Titus 2:12, ethically, of "worldly lusts," or desires.¶

For WORLD RULERS, Eph. 6:12, RV, see RULER, No. 3

WORM

1. skōlēx (σκώλυξ, 4663), "a worm which preys upon dead bodies," is used metaphorically by the Lord in Mark 9:48; in some mss. vv. 44, 46, cf. Isa. 66:24. The statement signifies the exclusion of the hope of restoration, the punishment being eternal.¶

2. skōlēkobrōtos (σκωληκόβρωτος, 4662) denotes "devored by worms" (skōlēx, and bibrōskō, "to eat"), Acts 12:23.¶

apsinthos (ἄψινθος, 894) (Eng., "absinthe"), a plant both bitter and deleterious, and growing in desolate places, figuratively suggestive of "calamity" (Lam. 3:15) and injustice (Amos 5:7), is used in Rev. 8:11 (twice; in the 1st part as a proper name).¶

WORSE

A. Adjectives.

1. cheirōn (χείρων, 5501), used as the comparative degree of kakos, "evil," describes (a) the condition of certain men, Matt. 12:45; Luke 11:26; 2 Pet. 2:20; (b) evil men themselves and seducers, 2 Tim. 3:13; (c) indolent men who refuse to provide for their own households, and are worse than unbelievers, 1 Tim. 5:8, RV; (d) a rent in a garment, Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21; (e) an error, Matt. 27:64; (f) a person suffering from a malady, Mark 5:26; (g) a possible physical affliction, John 5:14; (h) a punishment, Heb. 10:29, "sorer." See SORE. ¶

2. elassōn or elattōn (ἐλάσσων, 1640) is said of wine in John 2:10. See LESS.

3. hēssōn or hēttōn (ἧσσων, 2276), "less, inferior," used in the neuter, after epi, "for," is translated "worse" in 1 Cor. 11:17; in 2 Cor. 12:15 the neuter, used adverbially, is translated "the less."¶

B. Verbs.

1. hustereō (ὑστερέω, 5302) is rendered "are we the worse" in 1 Cor. 8:8. See BEHIND, B, No. 1, COME, No. 39, DESTITUTE, FAIL, Note (2), LACK, WANT.

2. proechō (προέχω, 4281), "to hold before, promote," is rendered "are we better" in Rom. 3:9, KJV (passive voice); RV, "are we in worse case." See BETTER (be), Note (1).¶

WORSHIP (Verb and Noun), WORSHIPING

A. Verbs.

1. proskuneō (προσκυνέω, 4352), "to make obeisance, do reverence to" (from pros, "towards," and kuneō, "to kiss"), is the most frequent word rendered "to worship." It is used of an act of homage or reverence (a) to God, e.g., Matt. 4:10; John 4:21–24; 1 Cor. 14:25; Rev. 4:10; 5:14; 7:11; 11:16; 19:10 (2nd part) and 22:9; (b) to Christ, e.g., Matt. 2:2, 8, 11; 8:2; 9:18; 14:33; 15:25; 20:20; 28:9, 17; John 9:38; Heb. 1:6, in a quotation from the Sept. of Deut. 32:43, referring to Christ's second advent; (c) to a man, Matt. 18:26; (d) to the Dragon, by men, Rev. 13:4; (e) to the Beast, his human instrument, Rev. 13:4, 8, 12; 14:9, 11; (f) the image of the Beast, 13:15; 14:11; 16:2; (g) to demons, Rev. 9:20; (h) to idols, Acts 7:43.

Note: As to Matt. 18:26, this is mentioned as follows, in the "List of readings and renderings preferred by the American Committee" (see RV Classes of Passages, IV): "At the word 'worship' in Matt. 2:2, etc., add the marginal note 'The Greek word denotes an act of reverence, whether paid to man (see chap. 18:26) or to God (see chap. 4:10).'" The Note to John 9:38 in the American Standard Version in this connection is most unsound; it implies that Christ was a creature. J. N. Darby renders the verb "do homage" [see the Revised Preface to the Second Edition (1871) of his New Translation].

2. sebomai (σέβομαι, 4576), "to revere," stressing the feeling of awe or devotion, is used of "worship" (a) to God, Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7; Acts 16:14; 18:7, 13; (b) to a goddess, Acts 19:27. See DEVOUT, No. 3.

3. sebazomai (σεβάζομαι, 4573), akin to No. 2, "to honor religiously," is used in Rom. 1:25.¶

4. latreuō (λατρεύω, 3000), "to serve, to render religious service or homage," is translated "to worship" in Phil. 3:3, "(who) worship (by the Spirit of God)," RV, KJV, "(which) worship (God in the spirit)"; the RV renders it "to serve" (for KJV, "to worship") in Acts 7:42; 24:14; KJV and RV, "(the) worshipers" in Heb. 10:2, present participle, lit., "(the ones) worshiping." See SERVE.

5. eusebeō (εὐσεβέω, 2151), "to act piously towards," is translated "ye worship" in Acts 17:23. See PIETY (to show).

Notes: (1) The worship of God is nowhere defined in Scripture. A consideration of the above verbs shows that it is not confined to praise; broadly it may be regarded as the direct acknowledgement to God, of His nature, attributes, ways and claims, whether by the outgoing of the heart in praise and thanksgiving or by deed done in such acknowledgment. (2) In Acts 17:25 therapeuō, "to serve, do service to" (so RV), is rendered "is worshiped." See CURE, HEAL.

B. Nouns.

1. sebasma (σέβασμα, 4574) denotes "an object of worship" (akin to A, No. 3); Acts

17:23 (see DEVOTION); in 2 Thess. 2:4, "that is worshiped"; every object of "worship," whether the true God or pagan idols, will come under the ban of the Man of Sin.¶

2. ethelothrēskeia (or -ia) (ἐθελοθρησκεία, 1479), "will-worship" (ethelō, "to will," thrēskeia, "worship"), occurs in Col. 2:23, voluntarily adopted "worship," whether unbidden or forbidden, not that which is imposed by others, but which one affects.¶

3. thrēskeia (θρησκεία, 2356), for which see RELIGION, is translated "worshiping" in Col. 2:18.

Note: In Luke 14:10, KJV, doxa, "glory" (RV), is translated "worship."

WORSHIPER

1. proskunētēs (προσκυνητής, 4353), akin to proskuneō (see WORSHIP, A, No. 1), occurs in John 4:23.¶

2. neōkoros (νεωκόρος, 3511) is translated "worshiper" in Acts 19:35 KJV: see TEMPLE KEEPER.¶

3. theosebēs (θεοσεβής, 2318) denotes "reverencing God" (theos, "God," sebomai, see WORSHIP, A, No. 2), and is rendered "a worshiper of God" in John 9:31.¶ Cf. theosebeia, "godliness," 1 Tim. 2:10.¶

Note: For Heb. 10:2, see WORSHIP, A, No. 4.

WORTHY, WORTHILY

A. Adjectives.

1. axios (ἄξιος, 514), "of weight, worth, worthy," is said of persons and their deeds: (a) in a good sense, e.g., Matt. 10:10, 11, 13 (twice), 37 (twice), 38; 22:8; Luke 7:4; 10:7; 15:19, 21; John 1:27; Acts 13:25; 1 Tim. 5:18; 6:1; Heb. 11:38; Rev. 3:4; 4:11; 5:2, 4, 9, 12; (b) in a bad sense, Luke 12:48; 23:15; Acts 23:29; 25:11, 25; 26:31; Rom. 1:32; Rev. 16:6. See MEET, REWARD.

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), "sufficient," is translated "worthy" in this sense in Matt. 3:11 (marg., "sufficient"); so 8:8; Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; 7:6. See ABILITY, C, No. 2, etc.

3. enochos (ἔνοχος, 1777), "held in, bound by," is translated "worthy (of death)" in Matt. 26:66 and Mark 14:64, RV (marg., "liable to"; KJV, "guilty"). See DANGER.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 2:7, KJV, kalos, "good, fair," is translated "worthy" (RV, "honorable"). (2) For the KJV of Eph. 4:1; Col. 1:10; 1 Thess. 2:12, see C, below.

B. Verbs.

1. axioō (ἀξιόω, 515), "to think or count worthy," is used (1) of the estimation formed by God (a) favorably, 2 Thess. 1:11, "may count (you) worthy (of your calling)," suggestive of grace (it does not say "may make you worthy"); Heb. 3:3, "of more glory," of Christ in comparison with Moses; (b) unfavorably, 10:29, "of how much sorer punishment"; (2) by a centurion (negatively) concerning himself, Luke 7:7; (3) by a church, regarding its elders, 1 Tim. 5:17, where "honor" stands probably for "honorarium," i.e., "material support." See also DESIRE, B, No. 1 (Acts 28:22), THINK (Acts 15:38).¶

2. kataxioō (καταξιόω, 2661), a strengthened form of No. 1, occurs in Luke 20:35; 21:36, in some texts; Acts 5:41; 2 Thess. 1:5.¶ See ACCOUNT, A, No. 5.

C. Adverb.

axiōs (ἀξίως, 516), "worthily," so translated in the RV [with one exception, see (c)], for KJV, "worthy" and other renderings, (a) "worthily of God," 1 Thess. 2:12, of the Christian walk as it should be; 3 John 6, RV, of assisting servants of God in a way which reflects God's character and thoughts; (b) "worthily of the Lord," Col. 1:10; of the calling of believers, Eph. 4:1, in regard to their "walk" or manner of life; (c) "worthy of the gospel of Christ," Phil. 1:27, of a manner of life in accordance with what the gospel declares; (d) "worthily of the saints," RV, of receiving a fellow believer, Rom. 16:2, in such a manner as befits those who bear the name of "saints."¶ Deissmann (Bible Studies, pp. 248ff.) shows from various inscriptions that the phrase "worthily of the god" was very popular at Pergamum.

For WORTHY DEEDS, Acts 24:2, KJV, see CORRECTION

WOT

Note: This form, the 1st person singular and the plural of the present tense of an Anglo-Saxon verb witan, "to see" or "to know" (for the past tense cf. WIST), is a rendering of (1) oida, "to know," in Acts 3:17; 7:40; Rom. 11:2 (see KNOW, No. 2); (2) gnōrizō, "to come to know," in Phil. 1:22 (see KNOW, No. 8).

WOULD

Notes: (1) This is often a translation of various inflections of a Greek verb. When it represents a separate word, it is always emphatic, and is a translation of one or other of the verbs mentioned under WILL. (2) Ophelon (the 2nd aorist tense of opheilō, "to owe") expresses a wish, "I would that," either impracticable, 1 Cor. 4:8, RV (KJV, "would to God"); or possible, 2 Cor. 11:1; Gal. 5:12; Rev. 3:15. (3) Euchomai, "to pray," with the particle an, expressing a strong desire with a remote possibility of fulfillment, is used in Acts 26:29, "I would (to God, that)."

WOUND (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

trauma (τραῦμα, 5134), "a wound," occurs in Luke 10:34.¶

Note: Plēgē, "a blow, a stroke," is used in Luke 10:30 with epitithēmi, "to lay on," lit., "laid on blows," RV, "beat" (KJV, "wounded"). In Rev. 13:3, 12, plēgē is used with the genitive case of thanatos, "death," lit., "stroke of death," RV, "death stroke" (KJV, "deadly wound"); the rendering "wound" does not accurately give the meaning; in v. 14, with the genitive of machaira, "a sword," KJV, "wound" (RV, "stroke").

B. Verb.

traumatizō (τραυματίζω, 5135), "to wound" (from A), occurs in Luke 20:12 and Acts 19:16.¶

Note: In Rev. 13:3, KJV, sphazō, "to slay," is translated "wounded," RV, "smitten" (KJV and RV marg., "slain").

For WOUND (wrapped) see WIND (Verb)

WOVEN

huphantos (ὑφαντός, 5307), from huphainō, "to weave" (found in good mss. in Luke 12:27), is used of Christ's garment, John 19:23.¶

diaparatribē (διαπαρατριβή, 3859v), found in 1 Tim. 6:5, denotes "constant strife," "obstinate contests" (Ellicott), "mutual irritations" (Field), KJV, "perverse disputings" (marg., "gallings one of another"), RV "wranglings." Some texts have paradiatribē. The preposition dia- is used intensively, indicating thoroughness, completeness.¶ The simple word paratribē (not found in the NT), denotes "hostility, enmity." See DISPUTE, No. 3.

WRAP

1. eneileō (ἐνειλέω, 1750), "to roll in, wind in," occurs in Mark 15:46; see WIND (Verb), No. 3.¶

2. entulissō (ἐντυλίσσω, 1794), "to roll in," occurs in Matt. 27:59; Luke 23:53; John 20:7: see ROLL, No. 5.¶

3. sustellō (συστέλλω, 4958), "to wrap" or "wind up," Acts 5:6; see WIND, No. 2; 1 Cor. 7:29, see SHORTEN, No. 2.¶

WRATH

1. orgē (ὀργή, 3709): see ANGER and Notes (1) and (2).

2. thumos (θυμός, 2372), "hot anger, passion," for which see ANGER, Notes (1) and (2), is translated "wrath" in Luke 4:28; Acts 19:28; Rom. 2:8, RV; Gal. 5:20; Eph. 4:31; Col. 3:8; Heb. 11:27; Rev. 12:12; 14:8, 10, 19; 15:1, 7; 16:1; 18:3; "wraths" in 2 Cor. 12:20; "fierceness" in Rev. 16:19; 19:15 (followed by No. 1).¶

3. parorgismos (παροργισμός, 3950) occurs in Eph. 4:26: see ANGER, A, Note (2).¶

Note: For the verb parorgizō, "to provoke to wrath," Eph. 6:4, KJV, see ANGER, B, No. 2.

WREST

strebloō (στρεβλόω, 4761), "to twist, to torture" (from streblē, "a winch" or "instrument of torture," and akin to strephō, "to turn"), is used metaphorically in 2 Pet. 3:16, of "wresting" the Scriptures on the part of the ignorant and unsteadfast.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 22:27.¶

WRESTLE, WRESTLING

palē (πάλη, 3823), "a wrestling" (akin to pallō, "to sway, vibrate"), is used figuratively in Eph. 6:12, of the spiritual conflict engaged in by believers, RV, "(our) wrestling," KJV, "(we) wrestle."¶ talaipōros (ταλαίπωρος, 5005), "distressed, miserable, wretched," is used in Rom. 7:24 and Rev. 3:17.¶ Cf. talaipōria, "misery," and talaipōreō (see AFFLICT).

WRETCHED

WRINKLE

rhutis (ῥυτίς, 4512), from an obsolete verb rhuō, signifying "to draw together," occurs in Eph. 5:27, describing the flawlessness of the complete church, as the result of the love of Christ in giving Himself up for it, with the purpose of presenting it to Himself hereafter.¶

WRITE, WROTE, WRITTEN

A. Verbs.

1. graphō (γράφω, 1125) is used (a) of "forming letters" on a surface or writing material, John 8:6; Gal. 6:11, where the apostle speaks of his having "written" with large letters in his own hand, which not improbably means that at this point he took the pen from his amanuensis and finished the epistle himself; this is not negatived by the fact that the verb is in the aorist or past definite tense, lit., "I wrote," for in Greek idiom the writer of a letter put himself beside the reader and spoke of it as having been "written" in the past; in Eng. we should say "I am writing," taking our point of view from the time at which we are doing it; cf. Philem. 19 (this Ep. is undoubtedly a holograph), where again the equivalent English translation is in the present tense (see also Acts 15:23; Rom. 15:15); possibly the apostle, in Galatians, was referring to his having "written" the body of the epistle but the former alternative seems the more likely; in 2 Thess. 3:17 he says that the closing salutation is written by his own hand and speaks of it as "the token in every epistle" which some understand as a purpose for the future rather than a custom; see, however, 1 Cor. 16:21 and Col. 4:18. The absence of the token from the other epistles of Paul can be explained differently, their authenticity not being dependent upon this; (b) "to commit to writing, to record," e.g., Luke 1:63; John 19:21, 22; it is used of Scripture as a standing authority, "it is written," e.g., Mark 1:2; Rom. 1:17 (cf. 2 Cor. 4:13); (c) of "writing directions or giving information," e.g., Rom. 10:5, "(Moses) writeth," RV (KJV, "describeth"); 15:15; 2 Cor. 7:12; (d) of "that which contained a record or message," e.g., Mark 10:4, 5; John 19:19; 21:25; Acts 23:25.

2. epistellō (ἐπιστέλλω, 1989) denotes "to send a message by letter, to write word" (stellō, "to send"; Eng., "epistle"), Acts 15:20; 21:25 (some mss. have apostellō, "to send"); Heb. 13:22.¶

3. prographō (προγράφω, 4270) denotes "to write before," Rom. 15:4 (in the best texts; some have graphō); Eph. 3:3. See SET (forth).

4. engraphō (ἐγγράφω, 1449) denotes "to write in," Luke 10:20; 2 Cor. 3:2, 3.¶

5. epigraphō (ἐπιγράφω, 1924) is rendered "to write over or upon" (epi) in Mark 15:26; figuratively, on the heart, Heb. 8:10; 10:16; on the gates of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:12. See INSCRIPTION.

Notes: (1) For apographō, Heb. 12:23, KJV, "written," see ENROLL. (2) In 2 Cor. 3:7 "written" is a translation of en, "in," with the dative plural of gramma, a letter, lit., "in letters."

B. Adjective.

graptos (γραπτός, 1123), from A, No. 1, "written," occurs in Rom. 2:15.¶

WRITING

gramma (γράμμα, 1121), from graphō, "to write," is rendered "writings" in John 5:47. See LETTER, No. 1.

Notes: (1) For biblion, "writing," KJV in Matt. 19:7, see BILL, No. 1. (2) In John 19:19, KJV, "the writing (was)" is a translation of the perfect participle, passive voice, of graphō, RV, "(there was) written."

WRITING TABLET (KJV, WRITING TABLE)

pinakidion (πινακίδιον, 4093) occurs in Luke 1:63, a diminutive of pinakis, "a tablet," which is a variant reading here.¶

WRONG (Noun and Verb), WRONGDOER, WRONGDOING

A. Nouns.

1. adikia (ἀδικία, 93), a, negative, dikē, "right," is translated "wrong" in 2 Pet. 2:13 (2nd part), 15, RV, "wrongdoing" (KJV, unrighteousness); in 2 Cor. 12:13, it is used ironically. See INIQUITY, UNJUST, UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

2. adikēma (ἀδίκημα, 92) denotes "a misdeed, injury," in the concrete sense (in contrast to No. 1), Acts 18:14, "a matter of wrong"; 24:20, RV, "wrongdoing" (KJV, "evil doing"). See INIQUITY.

B. Verb.

adikeō (ἀδικέω, 91), "to do wrong," is used (a) intransitively, to act unrighteously, Acts 25:11, RV, "I am a wrongdoer" (KJV, "... an offender"); 1 Cor. 6:8; 2 Cor. 7:12 (1st part); Col. 3:25 (1st part); cf. Rev. 22:11 (see UNRIGHTEOUSNESS, B); (b) transitively, "to wrong," Matt. 20:13; Acts 7:24 (passive voice), 26, 27; 25:10; 2 Cor. 7:2, v. 12 (2nd part; passive voice); Gal. 4:12, "ye did (me no) wrong," anticipating a possible suggestion that his vigorous language was due to some personal grievance; the occasion referred to was that of his first visit; Col. 3:25 (2nd part), lit., "what he did wrong," which brings consequences both in this life and at the judgment seat of Christ; Philem. 18; 2 Pet. 2:13 (1st part); in the middle or passive voice, "to take or suffer wrong, to suffer (oneself) to be wronged," 1 Cor. 6:7. See HURT, OFFENDER, UNJUST.

WRONGFULLY

adikōs (ἀδίκως, 95), akin to the above, occurs in 1 Pet. 2:19.¶

Note: For "exact wrongfully," Luke 3:14, RV, see ACCUSE, B, No. 5.

WROTH (be)

1. orgizō (ὀργίζω, 3710), always in the middle or passive voice in the NT, is rendered "was (were) wroth" in Matt. 18:34; 22:7; Rev. 11:18, RV, (KJV, "were angry"); 12:17, RV, "waxed wroth." See ANGER, B, No. 1.

2. thumoō (θυμόω, 2373) signifies "to be very angry" (from thumos, "wrath, hot anger"),

"to be stirred into passion," Matt. 2:16, of Herod (passive voice).¶

3. cholaō (χολάω, 5520), primarily, "to be melancholy" (cholē, "gall"), signifies "to be angry," John 7:23, RV, "are ye wroth" (KJV, "... angry").¶

For WROUGHT see WORK

Y

YE, YOU, YOURSELVES, YOUR OWN SELVES

Notes: (1) These are most frequently the translations of various inflections of a verb; sometimes of the article before a nominative used as a vocative, e.g., Rev. 18:20, "ye saints, and ye apostles, and ye prophets" (lit., "the saints, etc."). When the 2nd person plural pronouns are used separately from a verb, they are usually one or other of the forms of humeis, the plural of su, "thou," and are frequently emphatic, especially when they are subjects of the verb, an emphasis always to be noticed, e.g., Matt. 5:13, 14, 48; 6:9, 19, 20; Mark 6:31, 37; John 15:27a; Rom. 1:6; 1 Cor. 3:17, 23; Gal. 3:28, 29a; Eph. 1:13a; 2:8; 2:11, 13; Phil. 2:18; Col. 3:4, 7a; 4:1; 1 Thess. 1:6; 2:10, 19, 20; 3:8; 2 Thess. 3:13; Jas. 5:8; 1 Pet. 2:9a; 1 John 2:20, 24 (1st and 3rd occurrences), 27a; 4:4; Jude 17, 20. (2) The addition of autoi, "yourselves," to the pronoun marks especial emphasis, e.g., Mark 6:31; John 3:28; 1 Cor. 11:13; 1 Thess. 4:9. Sometimes autoi is used without the pronoun, e.g., Luke 11:46, 52; Acts 2:22; 20:34; 1 Thess. 2:1; 3:3; 5:2; 2 Thess. 3:7; Heb. 13:3. (3) The reflexive pronoun "yourselves" represents the various plural forms of the reflexive pronoun heautou (frequently governed by some preposition), e.g., Matt. 3:9; 16:8; 23:31; 25:9; Mark 9:50; Luke 3:8; 12:33, 57; 16:9; 21:30, "of your own selves"; 21:34; Acts 5:35; in Rom. 11:25, "in your own (conceits)," lit., "in (en; some texts have para, 'among') yourselves"; so 12:16 (with para); 1 Pet. 4:8; Jude 20, 21; in Eph. 5:19, RV, "one to another" (KJV, and RV marg., "to yourselves").

Note: In 1 Thess. 5:11, KJV, allēlous, "one another" (RV), is rendered "yourselves together."

YEA, YES

1. nai (ναί, 3483), a particle of affirmation, is used (a) in answer to a question, Matt. 9:28; 11:9; 13:51; 17:25; 21:16; Luke 7:26; John 11:27; 21:15, 16; Acts 5:8; 22:27; Rom. 3:29; (b) in assent to an assertion, Matt. 15:27, RV (KJV, "truth"); Mark 7:28; Rev. 14:13; 16:7, RV (KJV, "even so"); (c) in confirmation of an assertion, Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21, RV (KJV, "even so"); Luke 11:51, RV (KJV, "verily"); 12:5; Phil. 4:3 (in the best texts); Philem. 20; (d) in solemn asseveration, Rev. 1:7 (KJV and RV, "even so"); 22:20, RV (KJV, "surely"); (e) in repetition for emphasis, Matt. 5:37; 2 Cor. 1:17; Jas. 5:12; (f) singly in contrast to ou, "nay," 2 Cor. 1:18, 19 (twice), 20, "(the) yea," RV.¶

2. alla (ἀλλά, 235), "but," is translated "yea" in John 16:2; Rom. 3:31, KJV (RV, "nay"); 1 Cor. 4:3; 2 Cor. 7:11 (six times); Gal. 4:17, KJV (RV, "nay"); Phil. 1:18; 2:17; 3:8; Jas. 2:18.

3. kai (καί, 2532), "and, even," is rendered "yea," e.g., Luke 2:35; John 16:32; 1 Cor. 2:10; 2 Cor. 8:3; in Acts 7:43, KJV (RV, "and").

4. men oun (μέν οὖν, 3304), in some texts menounge, i.e., men-oun-ge, "yea rather," occurs, e.g., in Luke 11:28; in Rom. 10:18, "yea (KJV, yes) verily"; in Phil. 3:8, RV, "yea verily" (KJV, "yea doubtless").

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 15:15 the RV translates kai by "and" (KJV, "yea"). (2) In Luke 24:22 the RV translates alla kai "moreover" (KJV, "yea ... and"). (3) In 1 Cor. 16:6, KJV, ē kai, "or even" (RV), is translated "yea, and." (4) In 2 Cor. 5:16, KJV, the phrase ei kai (some texts have ei de kai) is translated "yea, though" (RV, "even though"). (5) In Phil. 2:8, RV, the particle de, "but," is translated "yea" (KJV, "even").

YEAR

A. Nouns.

1. etos (ἔτος, 2094) is used (a) to mark a point of time at or from which events take place, e.g., Luke 3:1 (dates were frequently reckoned from the time when a monarch began to reign); in Gal. 3:17 the time of the giving of the Law is stated as 430 "years" after the covenant of promise given to Abraham; there is no real discrepancy between this and Ex. 12:40; the apostle is not concerned with the exact duration of the interval; it certainly was not less than 430 "years"; the point of the argument is that the period was very considerable; Gal. 1:18 and 2:1 mark events in Paul's life; as to the former the point is that three "years" elapsed before he saw any of the apostles; in 2:1 the 14 "years" may date either from his conversion or from his visit to Peter mentioned in 1:18; the latter seems the more natural (for a full discussion of the subject see Notes on Galatians by Hogg and Vine, pp. 55ff.); (b) to mark a space of time, e.g., Matt. 9:20; Luke 12:19; 13:11; John 2:20; Acts 7:6, where the 400 "years" mark not merely the time that Israel was in bondage in Egypt, but the time that they sojourned or were strangers there (the RV puts a comma after the word "evil"); the Genevan Version renders Gen. 15:13 "thy posterity shall inhabit a strange land for 400 years"; Heb. 3:17; Rev. 20:2–7; (c) to date an event from one's birth, e.g., Mark 5:42; Luke 2:42; 3:23; John 8:57; Acts 4:22; 1 Tim. 5:9; (d) to mark recurring events, Luke 2:41 (with kata, used distributively); 13:7; (e) of an unlimited number, Heb. 1:12.

2. eniautos (ἐνιαυτός, 1763), originally "a cycle of time," is used (a) of a particular time marked by an event, e.g., Luke 4:19; John 11:49, 51; 18:13; Gal. 4:10; Rev. 9:15; (b) to mark a space of time, Acts 11:26; 18:11; Jas. 4:13; 5:17; (c) of that which takes place every year, Heb. 9:7; with kata [cf. (d) above], Heb. 9:25; 10:1, 3.¶

3. dietia (διετία, 1333) denotes "a space of two years" (dis, "twice," and No. 1), Acts 24:27; 28:30.¶

4. trietia (τριετία, 5148) denotes "a space of three years" (treis, "three," and No. 1), Acts 20:31.¶

Note: In Luke 1:7, 18, hēmera, "a day," is rendered "years."

B. Adjectives.

1. dietēs (διετής, 1332), akin to A, No. 3, denotes "lasting two years, two years old," Matt. 2:16.¶

2. hekatontaetēs (ἑκατονταετής, 1541) denotes "a hundred years old," Rom. 4:19.¶

C. Adverb.

perusi (πέρυσι, 4070), "last year, a year ago" (from pera, "beyond"), is used with apo, "from" 2 Cor. 8:10; 9:2.¶

Note: In Heb. 11:24, KJV, ginomai, "to become," with megas, "great," is rendered "when he was come to years" (RV, "when he was grown up").

For YES, see YEA

YESTERDAY

echthes or chthes (ἐχθές, 5504v) occurs in John 4:52; Acts 7:28; Heb. 13:8.¶

YET

Notes: This represents (1) the adverb eti, implying addition or duration, e.g., Matt. 12:40; Rom. 3:7; 5:6, 8; 9:19; in Heb. 12:26, 27, "yet ... more"; (2) alla, but, marking antithesis or transition, e.g., Mark 14:29; 1 Cor. 4:4, 15; 9:2; (3) mentoi, "nevertheless," John 4:27; 20:5; (4) akmēn, "even to this point of time" (the accusative case of akmē, "a point"), Matt. 15:16; ¶ (5) ouketi, "no longer," Mark 15:5, KJV, "yet ... nothing" (RV, "no more ... anything"); 2 Cor. 1:23, KJV, "not as yet"; "yet not," e.g. Gal. 2:20, KJV; (6) oupō, "not yet," John 7:39 and 1 Cor. 8:2 (oudepō, in some mss., KJV, "nothing yet"); oudepō, John 19:41, "never yet"; 20:9, "as yet ... not"; (7) mēpō, "not yet," Rom. 9:11; Heb. 9:8;¶ (8) kai, "and, even, also," "yet" in Luke 3:20; in Gal. 3:4, ei ge kai, KJV, "if ... yet" (RV, "if ... indeed"); (9) ge, a particle meaning "indeed," "yet," Luke 11:8; (10) oudeis pōpote, 19:30, RV, "no man ever yet," KJV, "yet never man," lit., "no one at any time (yet)"; (11) the following, in which the RV gives the correct meaning for the KJV, "yet": ēdē, "now," Mark 13:28; pote, "ever," Eph. 5:29 (KJV, "ever yet"); kai ... de, John 8:16, "yea and" (KJV, "and yet"); ou pleious, Acts 24:11, "not more"; (12) mellō, "to be about to," "are yet," Rev. 8:13; (13) other combinations with AND, AS, NOR, NOT.

YIELD

1. didōmi (δίδωμι, 1325), "to give," is translated "to yield," i.e., "to produce," in Matt. 13:8, RV (KJV, "brought forth"); Mark 4:7, 8. See GIVE.

2. apodidōmi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), "to give up or back," is translated "to yield" in Heb. 12:11; Rev. 22:2 (in each case, of bearing fruit). See DELIVER, A, No. 3, etc.

3. paristēmi or paristanō (παρίστημι, 3936), "to present," is translated "to yield" in Rom. 6:13 (twice), 16, 19 (twice), RV, "to present," in each place. See COMMEND, etc.

4. poieō (ποιέω, 4160), "to make, to do," is translated "yield" in Jas. 3:12. See DO.

5. aphiēmi (ἀφίημι, 863), "to send away," is translated "yielded up (His spirit)" in Matt. 27:50 (cf. paratithēmi, "I commend," Luke 23:46, and paradidōmi, "He gave up," John 19:30). See FORGIVE, etc.

6. peithō (πείθω, 3982), "to persuade," in the passive voice, "to be persuaded," is translated

"do (not) thou yield," Acts 23:21. See PERSUADE.

Note: In Acts 5:10, KJV, ekpsuchō, "to breathe one's last, expire" (ek, "out," psuchē, "the life"), is translated "yielded up (RV, "gave up") the ghost." See GHOST (give up the), No. 2.

YOKE, YOKED

A. Nouns.

1. zugos (ζυγός, 2218), "a yoke," serving to couple two things together, is used (1) metaphorically, (a) of submission to authority, Matt. 11:29, 30, of Christ's "yoke," not simply imparted by Him but shared with Him; (b) of bondage, Acts 15:10 and Gal. 5:1, of bondage to the Law as a supposed means of salvation; (c) of bondservice to masters, 1 Tim. 6:1; (2) to denote "a balance," Rev. 6:5. See BALANCE.¶

2. zeugos (ζεῦγος, 2201), "a pair of animals," Luke 14:19. See PAIR.

B. Verb.

heterozugeō (ἑτεροζυγέω, 2086), "to be unequally yoked" (heteros, "another of a different sort," and A, No. 1), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 6:14.¶

YOKEFELLOW

sunzugos or suzugos (σύνζυγος, 4805), an adjective denoting "yoked together," is used as a noun in Phil. 4:3, "a yokefellow, fellow laborer"; probably here it is a proper name, Synzygus, addressed as "true," or "genuine" (gnēsios), i.e., "properly so-called."¶ ekei (ἐκεῖ, 1563), "there," is rendered "yonder" in Matt. 26:36; "to yonder place," 17:20. See THERE, THITHER.

For YOU see YE

YOUNG, YOUNG (children, daughter, man, men, woman, women)

1. neōteros (νεώτερος, 3501), the comparative degree of neos, "new, youthful," is translated "young" in John 21:18; in the plural, Acts 5:6, "young men" (marg., "younger"); Titus 2:6, KJV, RV, "younger men." See YOUNGER.

2. neos (νέος, 3501), in the feminine plural, denotes "young women," Titus 2:4. See NEW, No. 2.

3. neanias (νεανίας, 3494), "a young man," occurs in Acts 7:58; 20:9; 23:17, 18 (in some texts).¶

4. neaniskos (νεανίσκος, 3495), a diminutive of No. 3, "a youth, a young man," occurs in Matt. 19:20, 22; Mark 14:51 (1st part; RV omits in 2nd part); 16:5; Luke 7:14; Acts 2:17; 5:10 (i.e., attendants); 23:18 (in the best texts), 22; 1 John 2:13, 14, of the second branch of the spiritual family.¶

5. nossos or neossos (νοσσός, 3502), "a young bird" (akin to No. 2), is translated "young" in Luke 2:24.¶ Cf. nossia, "a brood," Luke 13:34, and the noun nossion, used in the neuter plural, nossia, in Matt. 23:37, "chickens"; nossion is the diminutive of nossos.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 20:12, KJV, pais, a "lad" (RV), is translated "young man." (2) In Mark 7:25, KJV, thugatrion, a diminutive of thugatēr, "a daughter," is rendered "young (RV, 'little') daughter." (3) In Mark 10:13, KJV, paidion, in the neuter plural, is rendered "young (RV, 'little') children." (4) In Acts 7:19, KJV, brephos, in the neuter plural, is rendered "young children," RV, "babes." See BABE, No. 1.

YOUNGER

1. neōteros (νεώτερος, 3501), for which see No. 1, above, occurs in Luke 15:12, 13; 22:26; 1 Tim. 5:1 ("younger men"); 5:2, feminine; v. 11, "younger (widows)"; v. 14, "younger (widows)," RV, marg. and KJV, "younger (women)" (see WIDOW); 1 Pet. 5:5. For Titus 2:6 see YOUNG, No. 1.¶

2. elassōn (ἐλάσσων, 1640) is rendered "younger" in Rom. 9:12: see LESS.

YOUR, YOURS

Notes: (1) "Your" is most frequently the translation of humōn, lit., "of you," the genitive plural of su, "thou, you"; it is translated "yours" in 1 Cor. 3:21, 22; in 8:9, "of yours"; 16:18; 2 Cor. 12:14. In the following the dative plural, humin, lit., "to you," is translated "your"; Luke 16:11, lit., "(who will entrust) to you"; in 21:15 "your adversaries" is, lit., "(those opposed) to you"; in 1 Cor. 6:5 and 15:34, KJV, "(I speak to) your (shame)," RV, "(I say this to move) you (to shame)," is, lit., "(I speak unto a shame) to you." The accusative plural, humas, preceded by kata, "according to," is rendered in Acts 18:15 "your own (law)," RV, KJV, "your (law)," lit., "(of the law) according to you," with emphasis and scorn; in Eph. 1:15 the same construction is used of faith, but kata here means "among," as in the RV, "(the faith . . . which is) among you," KJV, "your (faith)"; in John 14:26 "He shall . . . bring to your remembrance" is, lit., "He shall . . . put you in mind of." (2) The possessive pronoun, humeteros, "your," is used in Luke 6:20; John 7:6; 8:17; 15:20; Acts 27:34; Rom. 11:31; 1 Cor. 15:31; 16:17; 2 Cor. 8:8; Gal. 6:13; in Luke 16:12, "your own."¶ (3) In Rom. 16:19, KJV, the phrase to epi humin, lit.,

"the (matter) over you," is rendered "on your behalf" (RV, "over you," following the mss. which omit the neuter article to).

YOUTH neotēs (νεότης, 3503), from neos, "new," occurs in Mark 10:20; Luke 18:21; Acts 26:4; 1 Tim. 4:12 (in some mss., Matt. 19:20).¶

YOUTHFUL

neōterikos (νεωτερικός, 3512), from neōteros, the comparative degree of neos, "new," is used especially of qualities, of lusts, 2 Tim. 2:22.¶

Z

zēlos (ζῆλος, 2205) denotes "zeal" in the following passages: John 2:17, with objective genitive, i.e., "zeal for Thine house"; so in Rom. 10:2, "a zeal for God"; in 2 Cor. 7:7, RV, "(your) zeal (for me)," KJV, "(your) fervent mind (toward me)"; used absolutely in 7:11; 9:2; Phil. 3:6 (in Col. 4:13 in some texts; the best have ponos, "labor," RV). See ENVY, Note, FERVENT, C, Note (2), INDIGNATION, A, Note (3), JEALOUSY.

ZEALOUS

A. Noun.

zēlōtēs (ζηλωτής, 2207) is used adjectivally, of "being zealous" (a) "of the Law," Acts 21:20; (b) "toward God," lit., "of God," 22:3, RV, "for God"; (c) "of spiritual gifts," 1 Cor. 14:12, i.e., for exercise of spiritual gifts (lit., "of spirits," but not to be interpreted literally); (d) "for (KJV, 'of') the traditions of my fathers," Gal. 1:14, of Paul's loyalty to Judaism before his conversion; (e) "of good works," Titus 2:14.

The word is, lit., "a zealot," i.e., "an uncompromising partisan." The "Zealots" was a name applied to an extreme section of the Pharisees, bitterly antagonistic to the Romans. Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 1. 1, 6; B.J. ii. 8. 1) refers to them as the "fourth sect of Jewish philosophy" (i.e., in addition to the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes), founded by Judas of Galilee (cf. Acts 5:37). After his rebellion in A.D. 6, the Zealots nursed the fires of revolt, which, bursting out afresh in A.D. 66, led to the destruction of Jerusalem in 70. To this sect Simon, one of the apostles, had belonged, Luke 6:15; Acts 1:13. The equivalent Hebrew and Aramaic term was "Cananaean" (Matt. 10:4); this is not connected with Canaan, as the KJV "Canaanite" would suggest, but is derived from Heb. qannâ, "jealous."¶

B. Verbs.

1. zēloō (ζηλόω, 2206), "to be jealous," also signifies "to seek or desire eagerly"; in Gal. 4:17, RV, "they zealously seek (you)," in the sense of taking a very warm interest in; so in v. 18, passive voice, "to be zealously sought" (KJV, "to be zealously affected"), i.e., to be the object of warm interest on the part of others; some texts have this verb in Rev. 3:19 (see No. 2). See AFFECT, Note, COVET, DESIRE, ENVY, JEALOUS.

2. zēleuō (ζηλεύω), a late and rare form of No. 1, is found in the best texts in Rev. 3:19, "be zealous."¶

Note: For spoudazō, Gal. 2:10, RV, see DILIGENT, B, No. 1.

ADDITIONAL NOTES

ON THE PARTICLE KAI (καί, 2532)

(a) The particle kai, "and," chiefly used for connecting words, clauses and sentences (the copulative or connective use), not infrequently signifies "also." This is the adjunctive, or amplificatory, use, and it is to be distinguished from the purely copulative significance "and." A good illustration is provided in Matt. 8:9, in the words of the centurion, "I also am a man under authority." Other instances are Matt. 5:39, 40; 8:9; 10:18; 18:33; 20:4; Luke 11:49; 12:41, 54, 57; 20:3; John 5:26, "the Son also," RV; 7:3; 12:10; 14:1, 3, 7, 19; 15:9, 27; 17:24; Acts 11:17; Rom. 1:13; 6:11; 1 Cor. 7:3; 11:25; 15:30; Gal. 6:1; Phil. 4:12, "I know also," RV; 1 Thess. 3:12. In 1 Cor. 2:13 the kai phrase signifies "which are the very things we speak, with the like power of the Holy Spirit."

This use includes the meanings "so," or "just so," by way of comparison, as in Matt. 6:10, and "so also," e.g., John 13:33; cf. Rom. 11:16. In Heb. 7:26 the most authentic mss. have kai in the first sentence, which may be rendered "for such a High Priest also became us." Here it virtually has the meaning "precisely."

(b) Occasionally kai tends towards an adversative meaning, expressing a contrast, "yet," almost the equivalent of alla, "but"; see, e.g., Mark 12:12, "yet they feared"; Luke 20:19; John 18:28, "yet they themselves entered not." Some take it in this sense in Rom. 1:13, where, however, it may be simply parenthetic. Sometimes in the English versions the "yet" has been added in italics, as in 2 Cor. 6:8, 9, 10.

(c) In some passages kai has the meaning "and yet," e.g., Matt. 3:14, "and yet comest Thou to me?"; 6:26, "and yet (RV 'and,' KJV, 'yet') your Heavenly Father feedeth them"; Luke 18:7, "and yet He is longsuffering"; John 3:19, "and yet men loved the darkness"; 4:20, "and yet we say"; 6:49, "and yet they died"; 1 Cor. 5:2, "and yet ye are puffed up"; 1 John 2:9, "and yet hateth his brother." The same is probably the case in John 7:30, "and yet no man laid hands on Him"; some rule this and similar cases out because of the negative in the sentence following the kai, but that seems hardly tenable.

(d) In some passages it has a temporal significance, "then." In Luke 7:12 the kai, which is untranslated in the English versions, provides the meaning "then, behold, there was carried out"; so Acts 1:10, "then, behold, two men stood." This use is perhaps due to the influence of the Septuagint, reflecting the Hebrew idiom, especially when idou "behold" follows the kai.

(e) There is also the inferential use before a question, e.g., Mark 10:26, "then who can be saved?" RV. This is commonly expressed by the English "and," as in Luke 10:29; John 9:36.

(f) Occasionally it has almost the sense of hoti, "that," e.g., Matt. 26:15 (first part); Mark 14:40 (last part); Luke 5:12, 17, where, if the kai had been translated, the clause might be rendered "that, behold, a man . . . ," lit., " and behold . . . "; so v. 17; see also 9:51, where kai, "that," comes before "He steadfastly set"; in 12:15, "take heed that ye keep." What is said under (d), regarding the influence of the Septuagint, is applicable also to this significance.

(g) Sometimes it has the consecutive meaning of "and so": e.g., Matt. 5:15, "and so it shineth"; Phil. 4:7, "and so the peace . . . "; Heb. 3:19, "and so we see."

(h) The epexegetic or explanatory use. This may be represented by the expressions "namely," "again," "and indeed," "that is to say"; it is usually translated by "and." In such cases not merely an addition is in view. In Matt. 21:5, "and upon a colt" means "that is to say, upon a colt." In John 1:16 the clause "and grace for grace" is explanatory of the "fullness." In John 12:48, "and receiveth not My sayings," is not simply an addition to "that rejecteth Me," it explains what the rejection involves, as the preceding verse shows. In Mark 14:1, "and the unleavened bread" is perhaps an instance, since the Passover feast is so defined in Luke 22:1. In Acts 23:6 the meaning is "the hope, namely, the resurrection of the dead." In Rom. 1:5 "grace and apostleship" may signify "grace expressed in apostleship." In Eph. 1:1 "and the faithful" does not mark a distinct class of believers, it defines "the saints"; but in this case it goes a little further than what is merely epexegetical, it adds a more distinctive epithet than the preceding and may be taken as meaning "yes indeed."

For the suggestion as to the epexegetic use of kai in John 3:5, "water, even the Spirit," see WATER.

In regard to Titus 3:5, "the renewing of the Holy Ghost" is coordinate with "the washing of regeneration," and some would regard it as precisely explanatory of that phrase, taking the kai as signifying "namely." Certainly the "renewing" is not an additional and separate impartation of the Holy Spirit; but the scope of the renewal is surely not limited to regeneration; the second clause goes further than what is merely epexegetic of the first. Just so in Rom. 12:2, "the renewing of your mind" is not a single act, accomplished once and for all, as in regeneration. See under RENEW, B. The Holy Ghost, as having been "shed on us," continues to act in renewing us, in order to maintain by His power the enjoyment of the relationship into which He has brought us. "The man is cleansed in connection with the new order of things; but the Holy Ghost is a source of an entirely new life, entirely new thoughts; not only of a new moral being, but of the communication of all that in which this new being develops itself . . . He ever communicates more and more of the things of this new world into which He has brought us... 'the renewing of the Holy Ghost' embraces all this... so that it is not only that we are born of Him, but that He works in us, communicating to us all that is ours in Christ" (J. N. Darby). Both the washing and the renewing are His work.

(i) The ascensive use. This is somewhat similar to the epexegetic significance. It represents, however, an advance in thought upon what precedes and has the meaning "even." The context alone can determine the occurrences of this use. The following are some instances. In Matt. 5:46, 47, the phrases "even the publicans" and "even the Gentiles" represent an extension of thought in regard to the manner of reciprocity exhibited by those referred to, in comparison with those who, like the Pharisees, were considered superior to them. In Mark 1:27, "even the unclean spirits" represents an advance in the minds of the people concerning Christ's miraculous power, in comparison with the authority exercised by the Lord in less remarkable ways. So in Luke 10:17. In Acts 10:45, the kai, rendered "also," in the phrase "on the Gentiles also," seems necessary to be regarded in the same way, in view of the amazement manifested by those of the circumcision, and thus the rendering will be "even on the Gentiles was poured out the gift"; cf. 11:1.

In Rom. 13:5, the clause "but also for conscience sake" should probably be taken in this sense. In Gal. 2:13, the phrase "even Barnabas" represents an advance of thought in comparison with the waywardness of others; as much as to say, "the Apostle's closest associate, from whom something different might be expected, was surprisingly carried away." In Phil. 4:16 there are three occurrences of kai, the first ascensive, "even"; the second (untranslated) meaning "both," before the word "once"; the third meaning "and." In 1 Thess. 1:5, in the cause "and in the Holy Ghost," the kai rendered "and," is ascensive, conveying an extension of thought beyond "power"; that is to say, "power indeed, but the power of the Holy Spirit." In 1 Pet. 4:14 "the Spirit of God" is "the Spirit of glory." Here there is an advance in idea from the abstract to the personal. The phrase "the Spirit of God" does more than define "the Spirit of glory"; it is explanatory but ascensive also.

When preceded or followed by the conjunction ei, "if," the phrase signifies "even if," or "if even," e.g., Mark 14:29; Phil. 2:17; 1 Pet. 3:1.

ON THE PARTICLE DE (δέ, 1161)

The particle de has two chief uses, (a) continuative or copulative, signifying "and," or "in the next place," (b) adversative, signifying "but," or "on the other hand." The first of these, (a), is well illustrated in the genealogy in Matt. 1:2–16, the line being simply reckoned from Abraham to Christ. So in 2 Cor. 6:15, 16, where the de anticipates a negative more precisely than would be the case if kai had been used. In 1 Cor. 15:35; Heb. 12:6, e.g., the de "and (scourgeth)" is purely copulative.

(b) The adversative use distinguishes a word or clause from that which precedes. This is exemplified, for instance, in Matt. 5:22, 28, 32, 34, 39, 44, in each of which the egō, "I," stands out with pronounced stress by way of contrast. This use is very common. In Matt. 23:4 the first de is copulative, "Yea, they bind heavy burdens" (RV), the second is adversative, "but they themselves will not..."

In John 3:1, RV, it may not at first sight seem clear whether the de, "Now," is copulative, introducing an illustration of Christ's absolute knowledge, or adversative, signifying "But." In the former case the significance would be that, however fair the exterior might be, as exemplified in Nicodemus, he needs to be born again. In the latter case it introduces a contrast, in regard to Nicodemus, to what has just been stated, that "Jesus did not trust Himself" (2:24) to those mentioned in v. 23. And, inasmuch as He certainly did afford to Nicodemus the opportunity of learning the truths of the New Birth and the kingdom of God, as a result of which he became a disciple ("secret" though he was), he may be introduced in the apostle's narrative as an exception to those who believed simply through seeing the signs accomplished by the Lord (2:23).

In Rom. 3:22, in the clause "even the righteousness," the de serves to annex not only an explanation, defining "a righteousness of God" (v. 21, RV), but an extension of the thought; so in 9:30, "even the righteousness which is of faith."

In 1 Cor. 2:6, in the clause "yet a wisdom," an exception (not an addition) is made to what precedes; some would regard this as belonging to (a) it seems, however, clearly adversative. In 4:7 the first de is copulative, "and what hast thou... ?"; the second is adversative, "but if thou didst receive..."

In 1 Thess. 5:21 "many ancient authorities insert 'but'" (see RV marg.), so translating de, between the two injunctions "despise not prophesyings" and "prove all things," and this is almost certainly the correct reading. In any case the injunctions are probably thus contrastingly to be connected.

In 2 Pet. 1:5–7, after the first de, which has the meaning "yea," the six which follow, in the phrases giving virtues to be supplied, suggest the thought "but there is something further to be done." These are not merely connective, as expressed by the English "and," but adversative, as indicating a contrast to the possible idea that to add virtue to our faith is sufficient for the moral purpose in view.

De, in combination with the negatives ou and mē (oude and mēde, usually "but not," "and not," "neither," "nor,"), sometimes has the force of "even," e.g., oude in Matt. 6:29, "even Solomon ... was not arrayed ..."; Mark 6:31, lit., "(they had) not even leisure to eat"; Luke 7:9, lit., "not even in Israel have I found such faith"; John 7:5, "For even His brethren did not believe on Him"; Acts 4:32, lit., "not even one of them"; 1 Cor. 5:1, "not even among the Gentiles"; mēde, in Mark 2:2, "not even about the door"; 1 Cor 5:11, lit., "with such a one not even to eat."

ON THE PREPOSITIONS ANTI (ἀντί, 473) AND HUPER (ὑπέρ, 5228)

The basic idea of anti is "facing." This may be a matter of opposition, unfriendliness or antagonism, or of agreement. These meanings are exemplified in compounds of the preposition with verbs, and in nouns. The following are instances: antiparerchomai in Luke 10:31, 32, where the verb is rendered "passed by on the other side," i.e., of the road, but facing the wounded man; antiballō in Luke 24:17, where the anti suggests that the two disciples, in exchanging words (see RV marg.), turned to face one another, indicating the earnest nature of their conversation. The idea of antagonism is seen in antidikos, "an adversary," Matt. 5:25, antichristos, "antichrist," 1 John 4:3, etc.

There is no instance of the uncompounded preposition signifying "against." Arising from the basic significance, however, there are several other meanings attaching to the separate use of the preposition. In the majority of the occurrences in the NT, the idea is that of "in the place of," "instead of," or of exchange; e.g., Matt. 5:38, "an eye for (anti) an eye"; Rom. 12:17, "evil for evil"; so 1 Thess, 5:15; 1 Pet. 3:9, and, in the same verse, "reviling for reviling." The ideas of substitution and exchange are combined, e.g., in Luke 11:11, "for a fish ... a serpent"; Heb. 12:16, "for one mess of meat ... his own birthright." So in Matt. 17:27, "a shekel (statēr) ... for thee and Me," where the phrase is condensed; that is to say, the exchange is that of the coin for the tax demanded from Christ and Peter, rather than for the persons themselves. So in 1 Cor. 11:15, where the hair is a substitute for the covering.

Of special doctrinal importance are Matt. 20:28; Mark 10:45, "to give His life a ransom (lutron) for (anti) many." Here the substitutionary significance, "instead of," is clear, as also with the compound antilutron in 1 Tim. 2:6, "who gave Himself a ransom (antilutron) for (huper) all"; here the use of huper, "on behalf of," is noticeable. Christ gave Himself as a ransom (of a substitutionary character), not instead of all men, but on behalf of all. The actual substitution, as in the passages in Matthew and Mark, is expressed by the anti, instead of, "many." The unrepentant man should not be told that Christ was his substitute, for in that case the exchange would hold good for him and though unregenerate he would not be in the place of death, a condition in which, however, he exists while unconverted. Accordingly the "many" are those who, through faith, are delivered from that condition. The substitutionary meaning is exemplified in Jas. 4:15, where the KJV and RV render the anti "for that" (RV, marg., "instead of").

In Heb. 12:2, "for (anti) the joy that was set before Him endured the cross," neither the thought of exchange nor that of substitution is conveyed; here the basic idea of facing is present. The cross and the joy faced each other in the mind of Christ and He chose the one with the other in view.

In John 1:16 the phrase "grace for grace" is used. The idea of "following upon" has been suggested, as wave follows wave. Is not the meaning that the grace we receive corresponds to the grace inherent in Christ, out of whose fullness we receive it?

The primary meaning of huper is "over," "above." Hence, metaphorically, with the accusative case, it is used of superiority, e.g., Matt. 10:24, "above his master" (or teacher); or of measure in excess, in the sense of beyond, e.g., 1 Cor. 4:6, "beyond the things that are written"; or "than," after a comparative, e.g., Luke 16:8; Heb. 4:12; or "more than," after a verb, e.g., Matt. 10:37. With the genitive it means "on behalf of, in the interests of," e.g., of prayer, Matt. 5:44; of giving up one's life, and especially of Christ's so doing for man's redemption, e.g., John 10:15; 1 Tim. 2:6, "on behalf of all" (see under Anti); 2 Thess. 2:1, "in the interest of (i.e., 'with a view to correcting your thoughts about') the Coming." The difficult passage, 1 Cor. 15:29, possibly comes here. With an alteration of the punctuation (feasible from the ms. point of view), the reference may be to baptism as taught elsewhere in the NT, and the verse may read thus: "Else what shall they do which are being baptized? (i.e., what purpose can they serve?); (it is) in the interest of the dead, if the dead are not raised at all. Why then are they baptized in the interest of them?" That is to say, they fulfill the ordinance in the interest of a Christ who is dead and in joint witness with (and therefore, in the interest of) believers who never will be raised, whereas an essential element in baptism is its testimony to the resurrection of Christ and of the believer.

In some passages huper may be used in the substitutionary sense, e.g., John 10:11, 15; Rom. 8:32; but it cannot be so taken in the majority of instances. Cf. 2 Cor. 5:15, in regard to which, while it might be said that Christ died in place of us, it cannot be said that Christ rose again in the place of us.

ON THE PREPOSITIONS APO (ἀπό, 575) AND EK (ἐκ, 1537).

The primary meaning of apo is "off"; this is illustrated in such compounds as apokaluptō, "to take the veil off, to reveal"; apokoptō, "to cut off"; hence there are different shades of meaning, the chief of which is "from" or "away from," e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; 9:22; Luke 24:31, lit., "He became invisible from them"; Rom. 9:3.

The primary meaning of ek is "out of," e.g., Matt. 3:17, "a voice out of the heavens" (RV); 2 Cor. 9:7, lit., "out of necessity." Omitting such significances of ek as "origin, source, cause, occasion," etc., our consideration will here be confined to a certain similarity between apo and ek. Since apo and ek are both frequently to be translated by "from" they often approximate closely in meaning. The distinction is largely seen in this, that apo suggests a starting point from without, ek from within; this meaning is often involved in apo, but apo does not give prominence to the "within-ness," as ek usually does. For instance, apo is used in Matt. 3:16, where the RV rightly reads "Jesus . . . went up straightway from the water"; in Mark 1:10 ek is used, "coming up out of the water"; ek (which stands in contrast to eis in v. 9) stresses more emphatically than apo the fact of His having been baptized in the water. In all instances where these prepositions appear to be used alternately this distinction is to be observed.

The literal meaning "out of" cannot be attached to ek in a considerable number of passages. In several instances ek obviously has the significance of "away from"; and where either meaning seems possible, the context, or some other passage, affords guidance. The following are examples in which ek does not mean "out of the midst of" or "out from within," but has much the same significance as apo: John 17:15, "that Thou shouldest keep them from the evil one"; 1 Cor. 9:19, "though I was free from all men"; 2 Cor. 1:10, "who delivered us from so great a death" (KJV); 2 Pet. 2:21, "to turn back from the holy commandment"; Rev. 15:2, "them that had come victorious from the beast, and from his image, and from the number of his name" (ek in each case).

Concerning the use of ek, in 1 Thess. 1:10, "Jesus, which delivereth (the present tense, as in the RV, is important) us from the wrath to come" [or, more closely to the original, "our Deliverer (cf. the same phrase in Rom. 11:26) from the coming wrath"], the passage makes clear that the wrath signifies the calamities to be visited by God upon men when the present period of grace is closed. As to whether the ek here denotes "out of the midst of" or "preservation from," this is determined by the statement in 5:9, that "God appointed us not unto wrath, but unto the obtaining of salvation"; the context there shows that the salvation is from the wrath just referred to. Accordingly the ek signifies "preservation from" in the same sense as apo, and not "out from the midst of."

ON THE PREPOSITION EN (ἐν, 1772)

En, "in," is the most common preposition. It has several meanings, e.g., "of place" (e.g., Heb. 1:3, lit., "on the right hand," i.e., in that position), and time, e.g., in 1 Thess. 2:19; 3:13; 1 John 2:28, in each of which the phrase "at His coming" (inadequately so rendered, and lit., "in His Parousia") combines place and time; the noun, while denoting a period, also signifies a presence involving accompanying circumstances, e.g., 1 Thess. 4:15.

Further consideration must here be confined to the instrumental use, often rendered "with" (though en in itself does not mean "with"), e.g., Matt. 5:13, "wherewith" (lit., 'in what,' i.e., by what means) shall it be salted"; 7:2, "with what measure ye mete." Sometimes the instrumental is associated with the locative significance (which indeed attaches to most of its uses), e.g., Luke 22:49, "shall we smite with the sword?" the smiting being viewed as located in the sword; so in Matt. 26:52, "shall perish with the sword"; cf. Rev. 2:16; 6:8; 13:10. In Matt. 12:24, "by (marg., 'in') Beelzebub," indicates that the casting out is located in Beelzebub. Cf.

Luke 1:51, "with His arm." In Heb. 11:37, the statement "they were slain with the sword" is, lit., "they died by (en) slaughter of the sword." There is a noticeable change in Rom. 12:21, from hupo, "by," to en, "with," in this instrumental and locative sense; the lit. rendering is "be not overcome by (hupo) evil, but overcome evil with (en) good," en expressing both means and circumstances. A very important instance of the instrumental en is in Rom. 3:25, where the RV, "faith, by His blood," corrects the KJV, "faith in His blood," and the commas which the RV inserts are necessary. Thus the statement reads "whom God set forth to be a propitiation, through faith, by His blood." Christ is a propitiation, by means of His blood, i.e., His expiatory death. Faith is exercised in the living God, not in the blood, which provides the basis of faith.

GREEK WORD INDEX

TOPICAL INDEX

Introduction

The Topical Index to Vine's Complete Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words enables you to find, in a single location, a comprehensive list of the Hebrew and Greek words that Vine's treats that are pertinent to the specific topic listed. This unique Index thus saves you time and will identify many more entries pertinent to the topics many users are studying than they would identify without the benefit of this exclusive tool. Because the Topical Index is thorough and generously cross-referenced, you can now mine the riches of Vine's careful definitions and insightful comments more thoroughly and completely than ever before.

Entries are arranged under twelve subject headings (see below) and numerous subdivisions. At the beginning of most of the subdivisions stands a summary of the words included (see, for example, the summary at the subdivision General Revelation, p. 2). The summary is followed by an alphabetical listing of the pertinent English entries from Vine's, beneath which are listed the Strong's numbers (where available), the transliterations of the Hebrew and Greek into English characters, and the Vine's page numbers. Note that Strong's numbers in regular type refer to the Old Testament portion of Vine's (for example, 1396). But Strong's numbers in italic type refer to the New Testament portion of Vine's (for example, 1396).

The twelve subject headings (with beginning page numbers) follow:

REVELATION, p. 2
GOD, p. 3
JESUS CHRIST, p. 6
THE HOLY SPIRIT, p. 13
CREATION, p. 14
SUPERNATURAL BEINGS, p. 20
HUMAN BEINGS, p. 21
SIN, p. 31
SALVATION, p. 37
THE LIFE OF THE BELIEVER, p. 41
THE PEOPLE OF GOD, p. 50
THE FUTURE, p. 60

Following these and concluding the Index is a listing of General and Function words, such as pronouns and number words that, apart from specific uses with other words, convey little theological or expository content.

Suggestions for Use

1. First look up the word or concept in the main portions of Vine's. For example, we could look up "atonement" in both the Old Testament portion (p. 10) and in the New Testament portion (pp. 43–44).

2. If we did not know already, the comments in these entries would help us identify SIN and SALVATION as likely places to consult within the Topical Index.

3. We examine both of those for direct references to "atonement." By reading the comments at the beginning of the SIN subject heading (see p. 31), we discover that "atonement" is not listed here, although we may wish to examine the entries for the many terms directly related to "sin," which is the reason people need atonement.

4. By reading the comments at the beginning of the SALVATION subject heading (see p. 37), we discover many entries worth investigating: First we find a whole subdivision treating "atonement" in the Old Testament that lists pertinent entries such as "ALTAR," "TO ATONE, ATONEMENT," "BLOOD," "CONTINUAL, CONTINUALLY," "TO KILL," "OFFERING," and so forth. Each entry will refer us to a discussion of one or more biblical words that relates directly to "atonement." Here we discover the great benefit of this Topical Index: It pulls together a whole host of important words and entries from Vine's that we might not know how to compile on our own or, if we could compile it, it would take far more time than it takes to locate the list we want in a single place in the Topical Index.

Beyond this initial subdivision on atonement in the Old Testament, we find another subdivision concerning the atoning death of Jesus Christ (see p. 38). There is yet another host of important terms we may wish to explore. Note that in both subdivisions important cross-references are also displayed, encouraging us to continue our targeted research in even other areas.

5. Once we have identified subdivisions where the word or concept we wish to study is located, we look up as many discussions of specific words in Vine's as we wish to. We keep in mind that words listed with a Strong's number in regular type (for example, 1396) are discussed in the Old Testament portion, while words listed with a Strong's number in italic type (for example, 1396) are found in the New Testament portion.

We discover that, with the Topical Index, Vine's yields up more of its treasured careful definitions and insightful comments concerning our word or concept than we likely would have found without the Topical Index. Vine's has become a Bible study tool more valuable than ever before!

REVELATION

General Revelation

The creation reveals (revelation) the wisdom and power of its Creator, so that all humanity has a natural awareness (know) of God.

The Word of God

Scripture is the written (to write) and inspired (sacred) word of God. God speaks through the books (to number, count) of Scripture, both literally and figuratively (allegory). His word is active (pierce) and effectual, discerning the thoughts and intentions of the heart.

All Scripture is profitable for teaching sound doctrine, for bringing reproof, correction, and for instruction in salvation through faith in Jesus Christ, who is himself the incarnate Word of God.

Believers are to be doers, rather than just hearers of the word, and are to feed (eat; meditate; taste) on God's word, allowing it to be implanted in their hearts.

Numbers

Some numbers that appear in Scripture have a special theological significance. God is one, and this denotes unity. Three is associated primarily with the doctrine of the Trinity, but also with periods of significant divine activity (third day, etc.). Seven (seventh; seven times; seventy) expresses completeness and perfection, while six (sixth; sixty) on the other hand, suggests incompleteness. The number twelve (twelfth) is suggestive of divine administration, and forty is used in Scripture in circumstances suggesting probation, separation, or judgment. (As with other entries, these are arranged an alphabetical, not numerical, sequence.)

Works of God

God's mighty works can be seen throughout history: in the nation of Israel, in the ministry of Jesus Christ, and in the church. He prospers (wealth) his people, giving them peace, security, and blessing (blessed; to be gracious, show favor; liberally). He shepherds them with care (wing) and heals the sick. His work is like that of a potter shaping the clay.

When his people are unfaithful, they come under his judgment (to judge), but he does not forget them; and when they cry out to him, he forgives their sin and redeems them, helping them (to go out, go forth; hero; to stretch out) against their enemies (avenge).

His saving (to save) and delivering (to deliver) work is seen supremely in his sending Jesus Christ to die for the sins of the world.

His Baptism and Temptation

Jesus was baptized by John in the River Jordan (water) at the start of his public ministry. At his baptism, a voice from heaven affirmed Jesus as God's Son in whom the Father was well-pleased, and the Holy Spirit descended on him bodily in the appearance (form) of a dove.

After his baptism, Jesus was led by the Spirit into the wilderness, where he was tempted (tempt) by the Devil for forty days.

His Suffering

Jesus Christ suffered many attempts by the Jews to seize him (cast him headlong) in order to put him to death, and they were constantly looking for an opportunity to ensnare and entangle him in his teaching.

In the garden of Gethsemane, at a stone's throw (cast) from the disciples, Jesus sweat drops of blood in his agony, as he wrestled with the cup of suffering that it was his Father's will for him to drink. Judas the traitor, who had been waiting for an opportunity, betrayed Jesus with a kiss.

The soldiers who arrested him took him first to the high priest and then to Pilate, the governor at the judgment hall in his palace, where they stripped and blindfolded him, put a scarlet (gorgeous) robe and a crown of thorns on him. They mocked him and spit on him, raining down blows upon his head as they beat him, but when threatened, he remained silent. Pilate declared himself innocent of the blood of Jesus as he sat on the judgment seat at the Stone Pavement, and Jesus was taken to be flogged with a scourge, suffering terrible stripes before being led away to be crucified.

Work and Ministry of the Holy Spirit

In the Old Testament, the Holy Spirit only came on (clothe) particular people at specific times to impart wisdom and knowledge (to think, devise), to speak (tongue) to communicate God's will, or to change (turn) hearts and minds. But a time was foretold when the Holy Spirit would be poured out (pour; shed) on all flesh.

On the day of Pentecost when all the believers were gathered (wait) together, the Holy Spirit fell (cloven; fall) upon them, empowering (power) and anointing them for service and witness to Christ. Full of the Holy Spirit, they began speaking in other languages. Later, other believers were baptized in the Holy Spirit at the laying on of the apostles' hands.

The Holy Spirit is a person who can grieve when quenched. He is at work in the world to convict (judge; judgment) of sin. He dwells in the church and is at work in believers (flow; live; spring; search) to teach (compare; taught) them, to renew their minds, and to produce (appear) in them the likeness of Jesus (transfigure) through sanctification. He is the adversary of the flesh and binds believers together in unity. He helps believers in their intercessions (groan) and gives supernatural gifts of grace: the words of wisdom (wise) and knowledge; gifts of faith, healing, the working of miracles, prophecy, and discernment (decision); tongues and their interpretation. Those who are led by the Spirit will reap their reward, not only in the life to come, but in producing the fruit of the Spirit in their lives now: love, joy, peace, longsuffering (patience), gentleness (kindness), goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance (continency).

Time

Time is a creation of God marking the duration of life, which is measured by days (daily; cock; dawn; early; to rise up early; even; evening; hour; midday; midnight; morning; morrow; next day; noon; night; today; tomorrow; yesterday), weeks, months (new moon), and years, through changes in the seasons (autumn; summer; temporal; winter).

God also appoints particular times (abolish; age; begin; former; complete; cease; end; ever; final; finish; fulfill; fullness; last; late; latter; term; swift; space; short; shortly) for the unfolding of his purposes in history.

Because of the brevity of human life, it is imperative to make the most of opportunities (chance; immediately; moment) in the present, and not to delay (tarry), as time continues to pass (past).

Plants, Food, and Agriculture

The economy of Israel was chiefly agricultural. The ground (dust) was cleared of thorns and thistles, irrigated (pit; to give drink; water), and then plowed (plough; till) for the sowing of grain (barley; corn; ear; husks; chaff), which, when harvested (barn; basket; garner; sickle) and threshed (threshing-floor), was ground (grind; mill; millstone) into flour for making bread (crumb; leaven), the staple diet in biblical times.

Animals (cattle; herd; ox; fatling) were farmed (field; grass; mow) for their meat (dine; eat; sop; mess; meal; victuals), their milk, and their skins, as well as for sacrifice.

Plants were also a major source of food and materials (flax; reeds). Fruit trees (fig; fig tree; olives [from which olive oil was made]; sycamore; sycamine) and especially grapes (cluster; drink; vineyard; vinedresser; wine; winepress) were widely cultivated.

The diet was supplemented with fish (broiled; net), eggs (hen), and honey (honeycomb; sweet).

Herbs and spices (anise, cinnamon; cummin; hyssop; mint; mustard; myrrh; rue) had a variety of uses.

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS

Angelic Beings

Angels are supernatural, created beings, who minister to God and to believers, acting as messengers (announce; send; tell), as agents of judgment (destroy; smite; reaper), and as worshipers in heaven (host; innumerable). They are strong (ability) and sometimes contend with other powers.

There are different orders of angels (dignity; dominion), which include archangels and seraphim (to burn).

Other supernatural beings depicted in Scripture are winged creatures (beast; cherubim).

The Nature of the Human Race

Human nature has three components:

- The flesh represents the physical aspect of human (man's) nature, which is mortal because of sin. The body (blood; bone; slave) is frail, human life is a mere vapor (breath; vanish), and human nature is carnal (fleshly).
- The spirit (breath) is that inward (belly; joint) part of people which gives them their identity and by which they think (mind; conscience; imagination), feel (heart; reins), and have life.
- The soul refers chiefly to that which is natural as opposed to that which is spiritual, and is the seat of the sentient element in human beings.

(These key terms express a wide range of meanings in the Old and New Testaments that cannot be adequately expressed in this compressed description of them. Each pertinent Vine entry should be examined closely to discover the nuances of meaning terms such as flesh, spirit, and soul expressed throughout the Bible.)

Human Relationships

The family unit was ordained by God for the benefit (benevolence) of its members. In biblical times it referred to a much broader group of relatives than it generally does today in the west. As a group of relatives (kin; kind; kindred; generation; tribe), family could include parents (father; mother), sons (brother), daughters (sister), children (small; offspring; weaker one; suck; young; youth), cousins, grandmother, grandchildren, foster-brother, father-in-law, mother-in-law (wife's mother), as well as household servants (to build; household; householder; bondman; goodman; hired servant; manservant; menservants; nurse). Guests were accorded great honor, and good relations with neighbors (countrymen; neighborhood) were vital for the well-being of the community.

The firstborn (birthday) male (although not bastards) in a family had unique privileges (heir; birthright; surname; forefather; handed down) and marriage (betroth; espoused; husband; wife; bride; virgin; unmarried) was a solemn undertaking, although divorce was permissible under certain circumstances.

Friendship (friend; acquaintance; companion; commune; company; to encounter; to discern) could be a great blessing or a bad influence in the case of both men (male; fellow) and women (damsel; female; maid; maiden; woman).

Parts of the Body and Clothing

The face (cheek; ear; eye; forehead; head; lip; mouth; nose) is the main visual characteristic of a person. Along with other parts of the body (arm; back; hand; right hand; palm; neck; knee; foot; heel), it is often associated in Scripture with certain gestures expressing mood and attitudes. Other parts of the body are simply functional (ankle-bones; leg) and/or they may be representative. Bosom (breast) is representative of motherhood, while shoulder denotes strength, and the stomach is associated with appetite.

Clothing (apparel; vesture) also carries symbolic meaning (mantle; girdle; sandal; shoe; latchet). Garments (cover) were originally provided by God for Adam and Eve, but soon became indicators of poverty (bare; undressed; leather; sheepskin) or wealth (robe; purple; silk).

Cloth was also used to make aprons, handkerchiefs, napkins, towels, and sheets, and women skilled with a needle (sew) were greatly admired and respected.

Human Civilization

Human civilization comprises that network of social relationships, institutions, and values that make up the corporate aspect of human life. Society is organized in communities (for example, city; town; village) within countries (border; boundary; colony; district; region), with their associated governing institutions (ruler; emperor; queen), judicial systems (court; senate; magistrate), methods of criminal punishment (cell; behead; jailer), and means of defense (army; gate; chariotry).

Scripture amply illustrates the daily round of human activity (to arise; kindle; sweep; swim; bathed; flee) in biblical times, with its reference to everyday items (bed; pillow; oven; pitcher; dish; couch) to be found in houses (roof; room; property), and human customs, for example, regarding dead bodies (bier; cave; sepulchre). Education (school), arts and crafts (entertain; dance; theater; poet), music (harp; cymbal; minstrel), and the variety of occupations (silversmith; soldier; tanner; tentmakers; physician; to work) carried on illustrate the rich variety of life in biblical times. Business and trade (market; merchants; to sell) and the associated coinage (money; farthing; pence; shekel) and weights and measures (cubit; furlong; fathom) were an integral part of daily life, as was travel (street; compass; seafaring; boat; mariners).

Communication, both oral (language; Latin) and written (narrative; letter; writing), was highly developed.

Sinners Described

A wide variety of terms are used in Scripture to describe all these who do wrong (wrongfully; offender; malefactor; reprobate; transgressor).

Sinners are ungodly (unrighteous), without God, wicked, abusers, men-pleasers, and God-fighters (fighting). Unbelievers are often impenitent and held in bondage (bondman) to sin.

Aspects of Sin

Sin is an abomination (abominable; amiss; hate; miserable; noisome; perverse; vile) in the sight of God that alienates humanity from him, leading to divine condemnation (inclose) and the punishment (drown; punish) of death (dead; debt; decay; lose; recompence; wages).

Because of the fall, all human beings are held captive (beset; branded; bondage; enslaved; sell) to this curse of sin, and the human heart (delusion; desire; devise; gross; thought) has an inherent bias towards evil (bad; base; carnal; crooked; dark; malignity; revive). Human weaknesses and failings (fault) are also sinful in themselves and may lead to further sin.

Ignorance (blindness; brute; dull; rude) and folly (fool; foolishness; idle; barren; irksome; raca; stupid fellow; unwise) are aspects of sin, as is unbelief (disbelieve; unbelieving) and hardness of heart (hard; stiffnecked; to shut).

Sin produces strife (blame), shame (ashamed; reproach), dishonor and toil, and causes harm (hurt; injure) to both the sinner and to the one sinned against.

Sinful Behavior

Sin affects every level of human existence and sinful behavior portrayed in Scripture includes sexual sins (adultery; fornication; lasciviousness; loose conduct; lust; nakedness; wantonness), any kind of excess (belly; carousings; dainty; delicately; drunk; effeminate; glutton; gluttonous; revel; surfeiting; winebibber), deceit (cloke; conceits; conceive; dishonesty; dissimulation; defraud; feign; fraud; guile; hypocrisy; hypocrite; sleight; suborn; to think, devise; white; wiles), pride (haughty; high-minded; proud; puff; self-willed; swelling; vainglory; vaunt), and all behavior which is riotous (insolent; unruly; unseemly; violence) and foolish (dote) or lazy (slothful; sluggish).

Wrong attitudes towards money (lucre; mammon) are sinful and can lead to oppressing (exact; extort; unmerciful) others.

Stealing (rob; robber; theft), murder (manslayers; murderer), prejudice, envy, coveting, anger (bitterness), and all kinds of malice (craftiness; despitefully; entice; villainy) are condemned in Scripture, and lack of self-control (incontinency), evil passions (affections), and fickleness are deplored.

SALVATION

Atonement

The Old Testament

Sacrificial System

Under the Old Testament system of atonement, the blood of beasts (heifers; bullocks; lambs; rams) was offered as sacrifice at the tabernacle for sins. The animal had to be perfect if the Lord was to accept (to think, devise) the burnt offering. As all the sacrifice was consumed on the altar, an offering made in this way was a pleasant savor to the Lord. The priests had specific instructions from the Lord on the slaughter of animals, how to kill (strangled) the offering, sprinkle the blood on the altar, and burn incense (censer) in order to atone for the sins of the people. Sacrifices had to be made continually (continuity), although such regulations were only a shadow of things to come.

The Death of Jesus Christ

In his death on the cross, Jesus Christ fulfilled and replaced the Old Testament sacrificial system (priesthood; unchangeable). He offered up himself as the supreme, once-for-all sacrifice (slay) of atonement through the shedding (sprinkling) of his blood. By his one act of righteousness, salvation (save) as a free gift is for all who believe. In being delivered up to death (interposed; taste), Jesus accomplished several things:

- He paid the penalty of sin. In his body Jesus Christ bore (bear; nail; stripe) the sins of the world so that humanity might receive forgiveness (remission) and that their sin would be imputed to Christ's account, in order that Christ's righteousness might be reckoned to their account. He was the propitiation of God's wrath against sin (mercy seat).
- He broke (kill) the power of sin by paying the ransom price (buy, bought; deliver, deliverance, deliverer; exchange; redemption), so that believers could be free (discharged; liberty; release) from slavery to sin.
- He removed the pollution of sin by making men clean (blot out; washing) through his blood.
- He destroyed (abolish) the partition (hedge) of sin to reconcile human beings to God and put them back into a right relationship (justification) with him, so that they may never again be separated (die) from God.

Regeneration

Regeneration is the work of the Holy Spirit that brings new life (anew; begin; new; newness; renewing) to the inner being of believers and adopts (adoption) them into the family of God, making them become God's children (beget). The Holy Spirit also gives assurance that believers are accepted as children of God and have access into God's presence.

Regeneration is accompanied by conversion, a turning to God in repentance and faith.

God chooses from the beginning (appoint; choice; determine; predestinate) to bring individuals to salvation through faith in Jesus Christ on account of his love and mercy.

Other Old Testament Aspects of Salvation

Salvation (to save) in the Old Testament was not understood exclusively as salvation from sin, but embraced the idea of being saved from anything from which deliverance (to deliver) was sought, such as enemies and troubles.

God's loving-kindness, power, and help are offered to his people in need of peace and deliverance from such situations.

God's choosing (to choose) to bring people into an intimate relationship with him, whereby they receive life and are made holy (to be righteous; to sanctify), goes as far back as Abram, and arises from God's covenant relationship with Abram and his descendants, by which God promises to remember the remnant of his people.

Responsibilities to God

Prayer

Prayer (supplication) is the means by which believers communicate with God and receive guidance (answer; direct) for their lives. Effective (avail) prayer depends on faith and a right relationship with God.

Asking (importunity; knock; petition; plead; request) for oneself and for others (intercessions; mention) is an important aspect of prayer.

Scripture also gives guidance on the practicalities of prayer, like praying in secret (chamber), postures for prayer (kneeling; to spread out), and praying without ceasing, but not using vain repetitions.

Responsibilities to the World

To do good (maintain; well-doing) for the benefit of others is a characteristic of God which is reflected in the life of the believer. Scripture makes it clear that while salvation does not depend on good deeds, it does lead to them as believers are constrained by the love of God. Believers are to minister to the poor (poverty) and needy (destitute) and are not to oppress (interest) the widow, the fatherless (bereaved; desolate), and the stranger (alien; foreign; forget; to sojourn). They are to bring comfort (consolation) to the brokenhearted (break; bruise; faint-hearted), visit the sick, and to be peacemakers and ambassadors for Christ, acting like salt and light (lamp; lampstand; cellar) in the world.

The Life of Faith

The Walk of Faith

The walk (accurately; narrow; path; straight; way) of faith is grounded in the need for believers to abide (firm; cleave; root; stedfast) in Christ, abhorring (eschew; renounce; resist) evil, mortifying the deeds of the body, and keeping themselves unspotted (spot) from the world (worldly; conformed; fashion). Scripture likens the life of faith to a fight (buffet; contend) or running (run) a race (course) to gain a prize (crown; reward). As believers follow after (disciple; imitate; learn) God in this way, he gives them the physical and moral ability (conquer; strength; to be strong) they need.

The walk of faith is one of knowing (acknowledge; key) God as a friend and understanding (eye; apprehend; to see; perceive; senses; to take away) him, although human understanding of God will always be limited. God is a rewarder of those who seek (feel) him and he gives wisdom (wise) for right living, as believers meditate (eat) on whatever things are lovely.

Threats to the Life of Faith

There are many dangers (enemy; hinder) to the life of faith, both physical and spiritual, which believers are to beware of (abstain; attend; child; flee; heed; ware of).

Wealth, while not condemned in Scripture, does have its dangers (choke; rich; root), and there are many temptations (beguile; cumber; seduce) to wander from the truth (err; error) and to become discouraged (burden; faint; weary).

Believers are warned (forewarn) not to go beyond their faith (deal; proportion), or to waver (doubt; double-minded), or to be afraid (fear), and to keep themselves from being unequally yoked (separate; concord) with unbelievers.

They are also exhorted in Scripture to avoid disputes and jealousy (bitter), and all things which lead to an unfruitful (empty) or faithless existence.

The Suffering of Believers

That they will face suffering (affliction; anguish; hardship; sorrow; tribulation), trials, and persecution (contradict; persecutor; waste) should not come as a surprise to believers.

Scripture records the torture (beat; saw asunder; scourge; scourgings; stocks; tormentors), imprisonment (bind; bond; chain; prison; prisoner; ward), hunger, and other hazards (thorn; banded; spectacle) which confronted Paul and others as they preached the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Nevertheless, believers are encouraged to endure (abide; bear) suffering as good soldiers, without being affrighted or ashamed, knowing that if they share in the fellowship of Christ's sufferings (baptism; behind, come behind; deadness; fill; fill up), they will also share in his victory.

THE PEOPLE OF GOD

Old Testament Names for the People of God

God chose Israel to be his heritage and treasured possession; a people who were to be separate from those around them. The names for the Old Testament people of God reflect the nature of their relationship with God. He is the parent who has given them birth (bear; build), they are his flock and his vineyard which he has chosen to plant. The twelve tribes of Israel repeatedly suffered major catastrophes that brought them to the brink of extinction, but in his mercy, God always preserved a remnant (to consume; to be left, remain; residue; remainder).

New Testament Names for the People of God

A number of names for the people of God in the New Testament emphasize different aspects of the relationship that believers have with God and with the world.

Christian (call) was first applied in New Testament times, but the believers were more commonly referred to as saints because of the righteousness that was theirs by faith, or as the brethren (brothers) as a sign of their belonging to the family of God. They are God's children by adoption, the elect or chosen ones. They are the beloved of God, a royal priesthood and servants of God.

As God's flock they are under the care of Christ, the Chief Shepherd of the sheep; while remnant contrasts the relatively small number saved by the gospel from the midst of unbelieving Israel. Pilgrim highlights the fact that believers are sojourners in the world, but they are not of it.

Jews and Gentiles

The Jews were the descendants of the Old Testament Hebrew people (to pass over) and included the Pharisees and scribes.

The Life of the People of God

The Gentiles are often referred to as the nations in the Old Testament, and in derogatory terms such as barbarians, dogs, and publicans in the New Testament. They and the Syrophoenician woman who came to Jesus were excluded from all the privileges associated with being a Jew, except for those proselytes who had converted to Judaism. In Christ, however, the distinction between Jew and Gentile is abolished.

The Life of the People of God

The Covenants

The covenant expressed God's committed relationship to, and his requirements of, his people. It was a solemn agreement often confirmed with an oath (vouchsafe) and with the use of salt, and accompanied by a sacrifice (testator).

God covenanted with Noah not to destroy the earth again by a flood, and gave the rainbow as a sign of the covenant.

God's covenant with Abraham was a promise to bless (fatness) the whole world in every generation through his descendants and to give him the land of Canaan. Circumcision was the outward sign of the making (or cutting) of this covenant.

The covenant at Sinai was accompanied by the giving of the Law (to command; commandment). Israel found it impossible to keep the Law, and covenant-breakers (break; implacable) led to the promise of a new (dedicate) covenant mediated through the death of Jesus Christ and sealed in his blood, where circumcision was spiritual (concision) rather than physical, as under the old covenant.

The Nature and Foundation of the Church

The church is the congregation (assemble; assembly) of believers, both locally and universally. Scripture uses a number of metaphors to describe the church and Christ's relationship with the church.

- It is the body (band; bond; compacted; joint; knit together; supply), of which Jesus Christ is the head.
- It is a spiritual building (build; frame) in which Christ is both the foundation and chief cornerstone, built also on the foundation of the apostles and prophets (masterbuilder).
- It is the bride (cherish; wrinkle) of Christ and he is the bridegroom.

Activity and Government of God's People in the Old Testament

The Promised Land was divided up among the twelve tribes of Israel, according to descent (genealogy; reckon) from the patriarchs, and governed by Israel's leaders (commander; elder; head; to judge; to keep, oversee; prince; to tell) and their advisers (to counsel), until the kingdom of Israel was united under the reign (throne) of David.

Because of their persistent unfaithfulness, God sought to refine (test) the Israelites by suffering through famine (wither), plague (pestilence; to touch), war, harsh labor, and ultimately through exiling them from the land (carrying away; to be desolate; dispersion; to drive out; to forsake; to go away, leave; to perish; scatter). Through such calamity (reproach), they were humbled (to repent; to mourn; to rend, tear; sackcloth; ashes) and cried out (to awake; to cry) to God in their distress. When they returned (to return) to him, God always restored (restoration) them.

The Ministry and Mission of the Church

The mission (commit; send) of the church is to preach (discourse; proclaim; tell; testify; testimony; witness) and teach (correct; instruct) the message of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the world, handing on the tradition of the faith.

Preachers and teachers are to teach sound doctrine and be able to expound the word of God and give a defense of the faith, and to admonish when necessary. In addition to the ministry of preaching and teaching, other ministries given to the church are those of apostle, prophet (prophetess), evangelist, pastor (feed; shepherd), and helps (helper). In the fellowship of believers, however, all are called to minister (add) and to make intercessions.

Problems in the Life of the Church

Many forces threaten the church both from within and without.

Internal wranglings (contention; defect), factions, and schisms all cause division, while the immorality of the love feasts (unworthily) in the early church needed correction. Paul also had to address disorderly behavior in the church, issues concerning women in the church (shamefastness; speak; unveiled), and to bring correction to those striving for preeminence.

Impostors (rock; spy), false prophets, and false teachers (bereaved; thief; pasture) also seek to infiltrate the church to bewitch (devour; subvert; itching) believers by introducing error (fable; gangrene; old wives') and heresy, and by their heretical teaching (stubble) to divert others from the truth and into sects. Religion, science, and superstitious attitudes were additional threats to the church.

Worship of God in Ancient Israel

The Place of Worship

Until the completion (to be consumed) of the temple (part; pinnacle; porch; sea; sheep gate; treasury; to turn towards; watch) in Jerusalem, which became a place of pilgrimage (to come up, ascend), the worship of God centered on the tabernacle (sanctuary) housing the ark of the covenant containing the tablets of the Law, Aaron's rod (bud; to stretch out), and the jar of manna. During the wilderness years the tent of meeting outside the camp symbolized (fashion) God's presence (to dwell; house; shewbread) with his people.

Moses, and later the high priest, would gather the congregation (assembly; stand) of Israel together to communicate God's will to the people, as it had been revealed to them.

Synagogues as places of worship for the Jewish community were established later.

Feasts and Festivals

The feasts (holy day) and festivals mentioned in the Old Testament commemorate either an event in Israel's history (Dedication; Passover; Unleavened Bread), or serve to mark the seasons (year) of the agricultural (Firstfruits; Firstborn; Weeks) and religious calendar (to atone; New Moon; to cease; work; Sabbath).

In the New Testament, some of these festivals are given new meaning, such as Pentecost, which was originally a harvest festival but came to celebrate the birth of the church, and also the festival of Easter was inaugurated.

Worship of God in the Church

The Ordinances of the Church

Baptism and the Lord's Supper were both instituted by Jesus Christ as symbols of faith in him.

Baptism signifies the washing away of sin and the burying of the old life and marks a person's entry into the church.

The breaking of bread (eat) and the wine (drink) celebrated at the feast of Communion are symbols of the sacrifice of the body and blood of Jesus given for sinful humanity. In this ceremony believers participate in the effects of both the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ and anticipate (proclaim) his return.

THE FUTURE

End Times

The end (approach) times will be marked by earthquakes (brimstone), pestilence (locust), bitterness (wormwood), and torment (gnaw; sorrow; travail); the love of many will grow cold, and false Christs and traitors (betray) will abound. This is the beginning of God's final judgments (flame) on the earth and its inhabitants (accomplish; complete; perfection). The successive opening of the seven seals and the pouring out of the seven bowls, culminating in silence in heaven, discloses these events.

The antichrist and the beast (diadem; false prophet), rising from the sand of the sea, are the two figures who dominate the latter days, but God has promised to cut short those last (later) days because of the great terror and tribulation they will bring.

Eternal Life and Heaven

Heaven (Abraham's bosom; air; paradise), the abode of God, is the future hope (sure) of all believers, who will be raised (up) to glory (burden; life-giving; live) with Jesus Christ into an inheritance which is eternal and will not fade (undefiled).

The future spiritual body will be clothed (clothing; white) with immortality and incorruption, and believers will be citizens of the new Jerusalem.

The marriage supper (feast) of the Lamb will take place at the inauguration of God's kingdom.

Death and Everlasting Punishment

Sleep (asleep) is often used as a metaphor for death (die) in Scripture, and Sheol (to ask; bury; to go down; grave; Hades; house; land; pit; sepulchre; tomb) is the destiny of all.

Hell, the place of everlasting punishment (destroy) in darkness (outer; black) and burning in a lake of unquenchable fire, is the final outcome for all those who forfeit life (perish) by their rejection of God. It is a place of torment (gnash; tooth; worm) and separation (fix; gulf).

The Abyss (bottomless) is the abode of demons.
