John VIII d. 882. Pope (872–882). John opposed Ignatius of Constantinople and supported Photius. He allowed the Slavs to use their own languages in liturgy. He was forced to pay tribute to the Saracens for Rome's protection. Overall he was the strongest pope of the 9th cent.

John VIII ⟨John Palaeologus⟩ 1390–1448. Byzantine emperor (1425–48). John was left only the city of Constantinople at his accession. He unsuccessfully sought to safeguard his remaining domains by agreeing (1439) to a union of Eastern and Western churches at the Council of Florence.

John XII ⟨Octavian⟩ *c*937–964. Pope (955–964). He crowned Otto I Holy Roman Emperor (962), and, after conspiring against him, was deposed by a synod of 50 German and Italian bishops organized by Otto.

John XXI ⟨Giuliano, Pedro⟩ d. 1277. Pope (1276–77). John was the only Portuguese pope. He was the author of both medical and scholastic philosophical texts, including the Compendium of Logic.

John XXII 1244–1334. Pope (1316–34), who reigned at Avignon. He condemned the spiritual Franciscans, improved church administration, and struggled with Holy Roman Emperor Louis IV over papal authority in the empire.

John XXIII ⟨Roncalli, Angelo Giuseppe⟩ 1881–1963. Italian pope (1958–63), successor to Pius XII and a highly popular figure in the history of the modern church. Born to a poor family, he was ordained (1904) and later served in Vatican diplomatic posts. As pope, he was noted for promoting peace and social reforms to aid the poor, especially in such acclaimed encyclicals as Mater et Magistra and Pacem in Terris (both 1961); seeking cooperation with other religious denominations; and convening the Second Vatican Council (q.v.).

John XXIII (antipope) See Cossa, Baldassarre

John, Saint fl. 1st cent. AD. One of the Apostles. Brother of James, he was, with Peter, closest to Jesus and was the "disciple whom Jesus loved." Traditionally held to be the author of the fourth Gospel, three epistles, and the Book of Revelation, he was also held to have lived to an advanced age in Ephesus, dying there AD *c*100.

John Baptist de la Salle, Saint 1651–1719. French priest and educator and founder of the Christian Brothers teaching order. He spent his life teaching the children of the poor. In order to train his teachers, he founded (1685), at Rheims, what is considered the first normal school.

John Birch Society US organization devoted to exposing Communist subversion in the US and abolishing liberal legislation. Founded in 1958, it was briefly one of the foremost right-wing groups operating in the US.

John Cantacuzenus See John VI

John Capistran, Saint ⟨John of Capistrano, Saint⟩ 1385?–1436. Italian Franciscan priest. John preached against the Hussites (q.v.) in Germany and unsuccessfully led a band of crusaders to Belgrade in order to try to oust the Turks.

John Comnenus See John II

John Damascene, Saint See John of Damascus, Saint

John Ducas Vatatzes See John III

John Frederick I ⟨John Frederick the Magnanimous⟩ 1503–54. Elector (1532–47) and duke (1547–54) of Saxony, last elector of the Ernestine branch of the house of Witten. A leader of the Schmalkaldic League (q.v.), he warred against Emperor Charles V, and lost his electorship.

John Frederick the Magnanimous See John Frederick I

John Lackland See John

John Maurice of Nassau 1604–79. Dutch general and colonial governor. John conquered much of Brazil from Portugal for the Dutch West India Co. (q.v.) and seized Portuguese settlements on the coast of Guinea. He was governor of Brazil (1636–43).

John Mark See Mark, Saint

John of Austria 1547–78. Spanish soldier and naval hero who led Spanish forces to victory over the Turks in the 1571 Battle of Lepanto (q.v.). He was the natural son of Emperor Charles V.

John of Austria 1629–79. Spanish general, illegitimate son of Philip IV of Spain. He served as prime minister to Charles II from 1677 to 1679, having overthrown the regency of the Queen Mother Maria.

John of Brienne *c*1148–1237. French crusader. A leader in the Fifth Crusade (q.v.), he became titular king of Jerusalem (1210–25) and regent and co-emperor of Constantinople (1228–37) during the minority of Baldwin II.

John of Capistrano, Saint See John Capistran, Saint

John of Damascus, Saint ⟨Saint John Damascene⟩ *c*675–749. Syrian theologian and Doctor of the Eastern church, noted especially for his theological work The Fountain of Wisdom and for his writings against iconoclasm.

John of Gaunt 1340–99. Duke of Lancaster (from 1362) and son of Edward III of England. In effect, he ruled in England during the last years of his father's reign and during the early reign of Richard II. He was the ancestor of the Tudor (q.v.) kings.

John of Lancaster 1389–1435. English nobleman. John, son of Henry IV and brother of Henry V, was regent of France for his infant nephew, Henry VI. He attempted to solidify English rule in France, but his allowance of Joan of Arc's execution helped undermine his support.

John of Leiden *c*1509–36. Dutch leader of the Anabaptists (q.v.), who led a rebellion in Münster in 1534 and ruled briefly as "king." The lawlessness of his reign harmed the Anabaptist movement.

John of Salisbury *c*1115–80. English scholastic writer and philosopher. He served as bishop of Chartres (1176–80), wrote books on the church and Aristotelian philosophy, and was author of a biography of his friend Thomas à Becket.

John of the Cross, Saint 1542–91. Spanish mystic and poet, Doctor of the Church and founder of the Discalced Carmelites. His works are considered masterpieces of Spanish literature as well as of Catholic mystical theology.

John Palaeologus See John V

John Palaeologus See John VIII

John Paul II ⟨b. Wojtyla, Karol⟩ 1920–. Polish-born pope (1978–), successor to John Paul I, who died after only 34 days in office. John Paul II was the first non-Italian pope to be elected in nearly half a century. He has made notable journeys abroad, including the first papal visit to England (May 28, 1982) since the Church of England split from the Roman Catholic Church in 1534. He was wounded in an assassination attempt (May 14, 1981) at St. Peter's Square, Rome by a Muslim fanatic named Mehmet Ali Agca.

John Sobieski See John III

Johnson, Andrew 1808–75. Seventeenth US president (1865–69), successor to A. Lincoln on his assassination. A political leader in Tennessee, Johnson became a US congressman (1843–53) and senator (1857–62) and was the only southern senator to remain loyal to the Union during the American Civil War. In return, President A. Lincoln first appointed him military governor of Tennessee (1862–64) and then made Johnson his running mate in 1864. Johnson served as vice-president from March to April, 1865, when Lincoln was assassinated. A war Democrat, with no formal schooling, Johnson was unpopular in Congress from the outset. His attempts to promote a conciliatory Reconstruction program in the South, however, inflamed radical Republicans in Congress. Seeking to ensure equal rights still being denied Negroes in parts of the South, Congress passed the Civil Rights Act of 1866 (q.v.) over Johnson's veto. Then, in a bitter war against him, Congress passed other acts of Reconstruction despite his veto. Finally, when Johnson ousted his secretary of war, E. Stanton, radical Republicans won a House resolution for his impeachment (Feb. 24, 1868). The Senate tried Johnson (Mar. 5–May 26, 1868) on charges that his dismissal of Stanton violated the Tenure of Office Act (passed over his veto) but failed by a slim margin to convict him. Johnson did not seek reelection.

Johnson, Guy *c*1740–88. Irish-born American Loyalist leader. Johnson was England's superintendent of Indian affairs. He organized the Indians against the American colonists during the American Revolution.

Johnson, Hiram Warren 1866–1945. American political leader and governor of California (1910–17). He helped to found the Progressive party (1912) and ran unsuccessfully as vice-presidential candidate with Theodore Roosevelt. As US senator (1917–45), he was a leading isolationist.

Johnson, James Weldon 1871–1938. American poet. The first black admitted to the Florida bar (1897), Johnson helped to found and was secretary (1916–30) of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Johnson, Lyndon Baines 1908–73. Thirty-sixth US president (1963–69), successor to the presidency on J. Kennedy's assassination. His administration was marked by the passage of wide-ranging social legislation, ill-fated involvement in the Vietnam War (q.v.), and major outbreaks of social and political unrest. A Democrat and New Deal supporter, Johnson rose under the influence of President F. Roosevelt. He became US congressman from Texas (1937–49) and senator (1949–61). As Senate majority leader (from 1955), he demonstrated great political skill and was elected vice-president (1960) under Kennedy. On Kennedy's assassination (Nov. 22, 1963), he assumed office and was subsequently elected president by a wide margin in 1964. In the first years of his presidency, Johnson oversaw passage of bills instituting sweeping social reforms. In 1964, he won passage of legislation advanced under Kennedy, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (q.v.) and a major tax cut. He pressed for and got legislation for his Great Society (q.v.) program, which included the Voting Rights Act, aid to education, funding for antipoverty programs, and a Medicare program. His involvement in the Vietnam War, which increased dramatically after the 1964 elections, undermined his social programs, however. Antiwar protests as well as riots by blacks in cities across America increased to fever pitch by 1968, and Johnson declined to run for another term. (See also United States [1963–69].)

Johnson, Reverdy 1796–1876. American lawyer and politician. He served as council for the defense in the Dred Scott case (q.v.), helped to keep his native Maryland in the Union during the Civil War, and supported the Reconstruction policies of Pres. A. Johnson.

Johnson, Richard Mentor 1780–1850. Vice-president of the United States (1837–41) under Martin Van Buren. Johnson was the first vice-president to be chosen by the Senate, following a deadlock in the Electoral College.

Johnson, Samuel 1709–84. English literary figure who was renowned for his conversation as well as for his writings. After a brief career as a teacher, he came to London in 1737 and began writing journalistic works. His pioneering Dictionary of the English Language was published in 1755. In 1763, he began his association with his most famous biographer, J. Boswell.

Johnson, Sir William 1715–74. British Colonial merchant and landowner whose friendly relations with the Mohawk Indians and the Iroquois nation greatly helped the British during the French and Indian Wars (q.v.).

Johnson, William 1771–1834. American jurist, who served as associate justice of the US Supreme Court (1804–34).

Johnston, Albert Sidney 1803–62. Confederate general in the American Civil War. An able general, he led Confederate forces against U. S. Grant at the Battle of Shiloh (q.v.), in which he was killed.

Johnston, Joseph Eggleston 1807–1901. Confederate general in the American Civil War. He was one of the most able officers of the Confederacy, but his policy of defensive warfare during Sherman's Atlanta Campaign angered J. Davis, who relieved him of command. He was restored to command by Gen. R. E. Lee toward the end of the war.

John the Baptist, Saint d. AD *c*30. Jewish prophet and the forerunner of Jesus Christ. He baptized his followers, including his kinsman Jesus, but indicated that he merely anticipated the Messiah "who is to come." He denounced the tetrarch Herod Antipas for incestuously marrying his own niece, Herodias, daughter of his brother's wife. Herodias' revenge came when her daughter Salome pleased Herod with dancing and was told she could have whatever she desired. At Herodias' instigation, Salome asked for the head of John the Baptist on a platter. The incident of John's meeting his end in this manner has been a favorite theme of Christian art.

John the Fortunate See John III

John the Good See John II (1319–64)

John the Great See John I (1357–1433)

John the Perfect See John II (1455–95)

John the Posthumous See John I (1316)

John Zápolya See John I (1487–1540)

Joinville, Jean, sire de 1224?–1317? French historian whose biography of Louis IX of France is a valuable account of the life of Louis and of the Seventh Crusade (q.v.).

Jolliet, Louis See Marquette, Jacques

Jolson Al ⟨Yoelson, Asa⟩ 1886–1950. American singer and entertainer, famous for his stage performances and hit songs. He appeared in The Jazz Singer (1927), the first major film to use sound.

Jona See Jonah

Jonah ⟨Jonas⟩ ⟨Jona⟩ In the Bible, a Hebrew prophet sent by God to reform Nineveh. He set sail to avoid his mission, was swallowed by a whale, but emerged unscathed. Eventually he did preach to Nineveh, whose people repented. But Jonah proved to be less than happy when God decided to shower mercy upon repentant Nineveh. The story is told in the book of Jonah.

Jonas See Jonah

Jonathan In the Bible, the son of Saul and friend of David. Jonathan protected David from Saul's anger. He died in the battle at Mt. Gilboa.

Jones, Alfred Ernest 1897–1958. Welsh psychoanalyst. An associate and biographer of S. Freud, Jones played a key role in the introduction of psychoanalysis to Britain, Canada, and the United States.

Jones, Inigo 1573–1652. English architect. He introduced the Renaissance Palladian (neoclassical) style into England in such buildings as the Queen's House in Greenwich (1616) and the Banqueting Hall in Whitehall (1619–22).

Jones, John Luther See Jones, Casey

Jones, John Paul 1747–92. Scottish-born American naval hero. John Paul added "Jones" to his name and settled in America to avoid a trial springing from his improper handling of a ship's mutiny. During the American Revolution he plagued British shipping off the coasts of both England and North America. His most famous victory (1779) was aboard the Bonhomme Richard. Ordered to surrender by the British ship Serapis, he replied, "I have not yet begun to fight."

Jones, Robert Edmond 1887–1954. American scenic designer. He designed imaginative sets for such plays as E. O'Neill's The Iceman Cometh and Marc Connelly's The Green Pastures and for such films as the early color film La Cucaracha (1933).

Jones, Sir William 1746–94. English Orientalist and jurist who was influential in fostering the study of Oriental literature and language in Western Europe. He was the first to point out the resemblance of Sanskrit (q.v.) to Latin and Greek (1787).

Jonestown Former communal settlement founded by the Rev. Jim Jones and followers of his US-based People's Temple cult. Over 900 persons died (Nov. 19, 1978) after Jones ordered a mass suicide of his followers.

Jongleurs French medieval entertainers. The jongleurs were wandering minstrels whose specialties were comic songs and stories, juggling, and acrobatics.

Jonson, Ben 1572–1637. English Elizabethan playwright, critic, and poet. Considered to be the second-ranking English playwright after his friend W. Shakespeare, Jonson was also England's first unofficial poet laureate. Among his many satiric, innovative plays are Every Man in His Humour, Every Man Out of His Humour, Volpone, and The Alchemist.

Joppa See Jaffa

Joram See Jehoram

Jordan Kingdom located in the Middle East. Its capital is Amman. Formerly known as Transjordan, it became part of Great Britain's League of Nations mandate territory of Palestine after WW I. The history of modern Jordan begins in 1946 when it became independent as the Hashemite Kingdom of Transjordan. (For history of the region prior to 1946, see Palestine.) Key dates in the history of Jordan include:

1920 Transjordan became part of British mandate territory of Palestine.

1921 Transjordan made separate from Palestine; Abdullah ibn Hussein became ruler in Transjordan under British control.

1946 Transjordan granted independence (May 25) as Hashemite Kingdom of Transjordan.

1948–49 First Arab-Israeli War broke out after creation of Israeli state; Jordanian forces seized territory on West Bank of Jordan River.

1949 Transjordan became known as Jordan (Apr.).

1950 Jordan annexed territory on West Bank of Jordan River occupied during 1948–49 war.

1951 King Abdullah was assassinated; succeeded by his son Talal.

1952 Talal removed as mentally unfit; his son Hussein became king.

1958 Jordan joined (Feb.) with Iraq to form Arab Federation; revolution in Iraq overthrew the Iraqi monarchy (July) and Jordan withdrew from the federation (Aug.).

1967 Third Arab-Israeli War (Six-Day War) fought between Israel and Arab states (June 5–10); Israelis drove Jordanian forces across Jordan River and occupied West Bank.

1968 Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) guerrillas in Jordan clashed with government troops; PLO sought West Bank as nucleus of new Palestinian state, while King Hussein wanted it restored to Jordan.

1970 Renewed fighting between PLO and government troops (Sept.); Syrian troops crossed into Jordan to aid PLO.

1970 King Hussein formed new military-civilian government (Sept. 26) following cease-fire with PLO.

1970 Hussein again formed a new government (Oct. 28) after renewed fighting with PLO commandos.

1971 Jordanian troops engaged PLO commandos in fierce fighting (Jan.) near Amman.

1971 Government troops attacked PLO commando bases in north (July 13); PLO bases destroyed; Palestinian guerrillas driven out of Jordan to Lebanon, where they established new bases.

1971 PLO guerrillas assassinated Jordanian prime minister Wasfi al-Tal (Nov. 28).

1972 Hussein wounded in unsuccessful assassination attempt (Dec.) by Palestinian.

1973 Fourth Arab-Israeli War fought (Oct. 6–25) between Israel and allied Arab states; Jordan remained effectively neutral, but sent some units to fight in Syria.

1974 Hussein joined in Arab summit resolution backing the PLO as the sole representative of Palestinians and calling for independent Palestinian state.

1979 King Hussein and PLO leader Yasir Arafat issued joint statement condemning imminent peace settlement between Egypt and Israel (Mar. 17).

1980 Jordan announced its support for Iraq in its war against Iran (Sept.).

Josaphat See Jehoshaphat

Joseph See Barnabas, Saint

Joseph In the Bible, the son of Jacob and Rachel. Sold into slavery in Egypt by his brothers, Joseph became an important personage in Pharaoh's court. He proved to be the salvation of his family when famine drove them from Canaan to Egypt.

Joseph 1715–77. King of Portugal (1750–77). Joseph was completely dominated by his chief minister, the marquês de Pombal, who reformed the government and expelled the Jesuits.

Joseph *c*1840–1904. American Indian chief of the Nez Percé Indians (q.v.), who, in 1877, led his people on an unsuccessful retreat toward Canada after being forced to give up tribal lands.

Joseph I 1678–1711. Holy Roman Emperor (1705–11), successor to his father, Leopold I, and king of Hungary (1687–1711). In the War of the Spanish Succession, he successfully fought France but unsuccessfully supported the claim of his brother Charles (later Charles VI) to the Spanish throne.

Joseph II 1741–90. Holy Roman Emperor (1765–90), successor to his father, Francis I, and first of the Hapsburg-Lorraine line. An enlightened despot, Joseph initiated many social and administrative reforms, although most did not last beyond his reign. Dominated by his mother, Maria Theresa, during the first years of his reign, he undertook a broad plan to modernize the empire after her death (1780). He abolished (1781) serfdom and granted peasants basic rights; abolished monasteries, reduced the clergy, and issued (1781) the Edict of Toleration; and attempted to centralize government of the diverse territories within the empire. This last reform led to revolts in Hungary and the Austrian Netherlands. His reign also saw the War of the Bavarian Succession, territorial acquisitions from the first Partition of Poland, and participation of Austrian forces in the Russo-Turkish War of 1787–92 (q.v.).

Joseph, Father ⟨Gray Eminence⟩ ⟨b. François Leclerc du Tremblay⟩ 1577–1638. French Capuchin monk, religious reformer, and confidential agent of Cardinal Richelieu. His activities as Richelieu's agent helped lead France into the Thirty Years' War.

Joseph, Saint fl. 1st cent. AD. New Testament figure. Joseph was a Galilean carpenter, descendant of King David and husband of Mary. He was regarded as the young Jesus' earthly protector.

Joséphine ⟨Marie Josèphe Rose Tascher de la Pagerie⟩ 1763–1814. Empress of France and wife of Napoleon Bonaparte (1796–1809).

Joseph of Arimathea, Saint Secret follower of Jesus who received Jesus' body after the crucifixion and buried it in his own tomb. He figures in many later stories.

Josephus, Flavius *c*37–*c*100 AD. Jewish historian and soldier, noted for his works on Jewish history, including The History of the Jewish Wars, an account of the revolt of Judaea (AD 66–70), in which the Jewish Temple was destroyed.

Joses See Barnabas, Saint

Joshua ⟨Josue⟩ In the Bible, the successor to Moses as leader of the Hebrews, whom he led in the actual conquest of Canaan. His name is given to one of the books of the Bible.

Josiah ⟨Josias⟩ *d. c*609 BC. King of Judah, successor to his father, Amon. He led religious reforms that made Jerusalem the center of worship of Yahweh. The great event of his reign came in its 18th year when the "book of the law," apparently the book of Deuteronomy, was discovered in the Temple.

Josias See Josiah

Josquin des Prés *c*1445–1521. Flemish composer, considered the greatest Renaissance composer of his day. He is noted for his masses, motets, and chansons.

Josue See Joshua

Jouhaux, Léon 1879–1954. French Socialist and trade union leader long associated with the International Labor Organization. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1951.

Joule, James Prescott 1818–89. English physicist, noted for his discovery of the law of conservation of energy. The electrical unit of work is named after him.

Jourdan, Jean Baptiste 1762–1833. French revolutionary marshal of France. He gained a decisive victory over the Austrians in the 1794 Battle of Fleurus (q.v.). and introduced the first law that allowed general conscription (1798).

Jovian ⟨Jovianus, Flavius Claudius⟩ AD *c*331–364. Roman emperor (363–364), successor to Julian the Apostate. He made an unpopular treaty with the Persians, and restored Christianity to the position granted by Constantine and annulled by Julian.

Jovianus, Flavius Claudius See Jovian

Jowett, Benjamin 1817–93. English classical scholar, noted for his translation of the Dialogues of Plato (1871) and, as master of Balliol College, Oxford, for his influence on education.

Joyce, James 1882–1941. Irish author whose novel Ulysses (1922), with its innovative style, is considered a 20th-cent. literary masterpiece. Joyce left Ireland in 1904 and lived as an expatriate on the Continent. Two of his works are the semi-autobiographical A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, published in 1916, and Finnegans Wake, a vast experimental novel, published in 1939.

Juan Carlos I 1938–. Spanish king (1975–), successor to Gen. F. Franco. The son of the Carlist (q.v.) pretender Don Juan, he was designated (1954) by Franco as the next ruler of Spain. Juan Carlos succeeded to the throne Nov. 22, 1975, after Franco's death. He withstood an attempted military coup (Feb. 23–25, 1981), in which Spanish Civil Guardsmen stormed the Parliament and took many of the country's leaders hostage.

Juana la Beltraneja 1462–1530. Castilian princess and daughter of Henry IV of Castile. She contested the throne of Castile with Isabella. After Isabella's succession (1479), Juana retired to a convent.

Juárez, Benito 1806–72. Mexican national hero and president (1858–61, provisional; 1861–72), successor to I. Comonfort. He took part in the overthrow of Santa Anna, and, as minister of justice, reduced the power of the church and army in what is called the Ley Juárez. He became acting president on Comonfort's resignation and emerged victorious in the War of the Reform (1858–61). He then led the opposition government during the brief reign of Emperor Maximilian (1864–67) and, after Maximilian's fall, he was elected president (1867–72) twice. Juárez died while a revolt by P. Díaz was under way.

Juba I *c*85–46 BC. King of Numidia. He supported Pompey against Julius Caesar in North Africa. Defeated, he committed suicide.

Juba III d. AD *c*20. King of Numidia. Protégé of Augustus, he married Cleopatra Selene, daughter of Antony and Cleopatra. He was made king of Numidia and then Mauretania, and was a noted historian.

Jubal Old Testament figure. According to the book of Genesis, Jubal, son of Lambech and Adah, invented stringed and wind instruments and is considered the founder of music.

Judaea (Judea) Roman name for the southernmost division of ancient Palestine, called Judah (q.v.) in the Old Testament.

Judah Fourth son of Jacob and Leah. His name was given to one of the Twelve Tribes of Israel (q.v.) and to the area of southern Palestine in which two of the tribes settled.

Judah Southern part of the kingdom of Israel, a separate Israelite kingdom after the northern part seceded (*c*933 BC). The tribes of Judah and Benjamin had originally settled this southern region of the kingdom of Israel. In the unstable period after King Solomon's death, the north revolted against King Rehoboam and broke away. Jerusalem then became the capital of Judah. Judah became the sole Jewish national state after the Assyrians conquered the northern kingdom (*c*721) and dispersed its inhabitants. Judah also came under Assyrian domination, then passed to the Egyptians and finally to the Babylonians. Revolts against the Babylonians brought harsh reprisals by King Nebuchadnezzar (586), marked by the destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem and the Babylonian captivity (q.v.). After the Persians conquered the Babylonians, the Jews were allowed to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the Temple (516). Alexander the Great's conquests ended Persian rule and Judah subsequently passed to the Seleucids. The Jews successfully rebelled (168–142) against the Seleucids (see Maccabees), and a new independent Jewish kingdom, Judaea, was established (142). Independence was short-lived, however, and after a period of religious strife between Pharisees and Sadducees Judaea came under Roman control (from 63 BC). Revolts against Roman rule led to the destruction of Jerusalem in AD 70. (See also Palestine.)

Judah I AD *c*135–*c*220. Patriarch of the Jews in Palestine and president of the Sanhedrin. He compiled the Mishna (q.v.), a compendium of religious and social law.

Judaism One of the world's three great monotheistic religions. Modern Judaism is actually rabbinic Judaism, which developed (from 1st cent. AD) from the religion of the Jews of ancient Palestine. This forerunner of Judaism also gave rise to Christianity. Rabbinic Judaism arose after the destruction of the second Temple at Jerusalem. Rabbis (teachers) replaced the priests as religious leaders, the autonomous synagogues replaced the Temple as the center of worship, and prayer and study of the Torah were substituted for the sacrificial rites of the Temple. The Judaic tradition evolved by the rabbis governed both religious and secular life and preserved Jewish culture during the many centuries in which the Jews were dispersed in various foreign lands. (See also Palestine; Israel.) Key dates in the history of Judaism include:

C16TH?–13TH CENT.? BC Hebrews arrived in Palestine; practiced polytheistic religion; era of the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and acceptance of Yahweh (Jehovah).

c13TH CENT. BC Exodus under the guidance of Moses; Ark of the Covenant, the Law, given to Moses; Israelites became the chosen people and settled in the promised land (Palestine).

c940 BC First Temple constructed at Jerusalem under King Solomon; practices of sacrificial worship.

8TH CENT.? BC Period of the prophets, including Isaiah, Jeremiah, Elijah, Amos, Hosea, and Micah; opposed the priests and worship of false gods.

722 BC Exile of many of the inhabitants (Ten Lost Tribes) of the Northern Kingdom of Israel after the Assyrian conquest.

c622? BC Deuteronomic reform; foreign cults purged, Temple dedicated solely to worship of Yahweh, and worship concentrated at the Temple.

586 BC Babylonian conquest of the Kingdom of Judah; first Temple at Jerusalem destroyed; beginning of the Babylonian captivity.

586–538 BC Babylonian captivity; Israelites conducted prayer meetings to maintain their faith during foreign captivity.

538 BC Return to Palestine began; building of the second Temple completed (516), reestablishing a center of worship.

FROM 5TH CENT. BC Ezra began period of religious reforms; introduced the Torah (written Law), formalizing religious doctrine and observances; scribes (Sopherim) assumed leadership from priests; beginnings of oral Law as exposition of written Law; Babylonian prayer meetings outside the Temple continued, laying basis for synagogues.

5TH–2ND CENT. BC The Hebrew Bible ("the Old Testament") compiled from sacred writings, divided into the Law (Torah), the Prophets, and the Writings; exact versions edited by scholars called Masoretes.

FROM 2D CENT. BC Rise of the Sadducees (priestly class adhering strictly to the written Law) and Pharisees (adhering to the written Law and oral Law).

FROM 63 BC Palestine under Roman rule; Great Sanhedrin (Jewish court with religious and political functions) at the Temple in Jerusalem (until AD 70).

30 BC–AD 9 Hillel flourished; great biblical commentator and interpreter of Jewish tradition; devised "Seven Rules of Hillel" for interpreting the Bible.

AD 70 Second Temple at Jerusalem destroyed by Romans; from this time began the development of modern Judaism, with the ascendancy of the rabbinic tradition and decentralized worship in the synagogues; sacrificial worship replaced by prayer service and study.

AFTER AD 70 Johanan ben Zakkai flourished; a noted sage, he set up an academy after the destruction of the Temple and helped lay the foundations of rabbinic Judaism.

AD 40–135 Akiba ben Joseph lived; a chief founder of rabbinic Judaism.

2ND CENT. AD Jews, exiled from Jerusalem after the second Jewish Revolt (132–135), began to disperse to other areas of Near East; rabbinic Judaism devoted to preserving Jewish community and eventual return to promised land.

AD 3D CENT. Mishna codified in final form; collection of oral Laws begun in time of Ezra.

AD 500 Talmud, a collection of the opinions and decisions of the rabbis, compiled; with the Torah (Law), the Talmud became one of the twin pillars of Judaism.

9TH CENT. Seder Rab Amram, oldest surviving prayer book, written.

10TH CENT. Religious study centers, originally founded in Babylon, moved to Spain.

1040–1105 Rashi lived; famous for his commentaries on the Bible and Talmud.

1135–1204 Maimonides lived; the leading figure in medieval Judaism, he compiled a great code of Jewish Law and wrote important philosophical works.

13TH CENT. Rise of Cabala, a form of Jewish mysticism.

18TH CENT. Systematic modern study of rabbinic literature introduced by Elijah ben Solomon of Wilna (1720–97).

1720–97 Elijah ben Solomon lived; noted authority on Jewish culture; opposed Hasidism.

c1740 Hasidim movement founded in Poland: emphasized a mystical approach to God; opposed to rigorous doctrinal literalism; founded by Baal Shem Tov (c1700–60).

1783 Plea for religious tolerance advanced by Enlightenment philosopher M. Mendelssohn.

19th CENT. Rise of Reform Judaism, movement to make Judaism compatible with the modern world.

1810–74 Abraham Geiger lived; principal leader in the Reform Judaism movement.

19TH CENT. Haskala movement among Jews of Eastern and Central Europe; called for assimilation of Jews into European culture through reform of Jewish traditions and breakup of the Jewish ghettos.

19TH CENT. Orthodox Judaism reaffirmed its rigorous adherence to the totality of Jewish law and tradition; Rabbi Samson Raphael Hirsch (1808–85) among noted leaders.

19TH CENT. Conservative Judaism arose as middle position between Reform and Orthodox Judaism; divisions between various groups continue to present day.

1897 Zionism founded by Theodore Herzl; Zionists sought restoration of Jewish homeland in Palestine.

1948 Israel created; Jewish national state re-established in Palestine for the first time in many centuries.

Judas, Saint See Jude, Saint

Judas Iscariot One of the Apostles of Jesus Christ. He betrayed Jesus for 30 pieces of silver at the Garden of Gethsemane. Repenting his act, he killed himself.

Judas of Galilee fl. AD 6. Ancient Jewish zealot leader. He fomented a revolt against the Roman census for taxation purposes in AD 6 on the grounds that only God was the rightful ruler of Israel. He was killed for his part in this revolt. (Acts 5:37).

Jude, Saint ⟨Saint Judas⟩ One of the Apostles of Jesus Christ. He was also called Lebbaeus and Thaddeus. According to tradition, he suffered martyrdom in Persia with Saint Simon.

Judea See Judaea

judicial branch Branch of government vested with authority to interpret the laws and administer the courts. Based on the theory of the separation of powers, Article III of the US Constitution vests judicial power in a Supreme Court and lower courts established by Congress. Although not specifically provided for in the US Constitution, the power of judicial review of executive and legislative acts has become a marked feature of US government. Judicial review is considered to have started with the 1803 decision of the Supreme Court in Marbury vs Madison (q.v.), in which the court claimed power to invalidate acts of Congress.

Judith Jewish heroine who saved the people of her city from an attack by Holofernes, general of Nebuchadnezzar, by stealing into his camp and killing him. The incident has been a favorite subject for painters.

judo See jujitsu

Jugurtha d. 104 BC. King of Numidia (118–104 BC), successor to his uncle, Micipsa. Jugurtha's reign was marked by conflict with Rome. He was eventually captured and put to death in Rome.

jujitsu Oriental weaponless system of defense that aims to utilize an opponent's weight and strength against him by applying pressure to sensitive parts of his body, often by means of blows with the side of the hand (an allied system was developed as karate). Jujitsu was developed over a period of some 2,000 years by Buddhist monks in Japan, China, and Tibet as a means of self-defense not in conflict with nonviolent religious principles. Judo was created in the late 1880s in Japan by modifying jujitsu holds too dangerous to be used in sport.

Julia d. 54 BC. Daughter of Julius Caesar and wife of Pompey, who helped maintain peace between the two leaders while she lived.

Julia 39 BC–AD 14. Roman matron. Julia was the daughter of Augustus and wife of Tiberius, but she was banished by her father for her infidelities, and died of starvation soon after Tiberius became emperor.

Juliana 1909–. Queen of The Netherlands (1948–80), successor to her mother, Queen Wilhelmina. She stepped down in favor of her daughter Beatrix (1938—), who became queen in April, 1980.

Julian calendar Calendar instituted (46 BC) by Julius Caesar, dividing the year into 12 months and making it 365 days, 11 hours in length. It was superseded by the Gregorian calendar (q.v.) in most of Europe in 1582, although the change was not made in England until 1752 and in Russia until after 1917.

Julian the Apostate AD 331?–363. Roman emperor (AD 361–363), successor to Constantius II. Raised a Christian, he converted to paganism and unsuccessfully sought to restore it in the empire; hence his name.

Julius I, Saint d. AD 352. Pope (AD 337–352), successor to Pope Saint Mark. He supported Athanasius against the followers of Arianism by convoking a synod at Rome (AD 340), which cleared Athanasius of all the Arians' charges against him. Julius explicitly claimed jurisdiction over the other churches.

Julius II 1443–1513. Pope (1503–13), successor to Pius III. He returned the Papal States to church control and joined in the Holy League against France. He was a great patron of the arts, commissioning his own portrait by Raphael, the initial building of St. Peter's (1506) by Bramante, and the Creation frescoes on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel (q.v.) by Michelangelo.

July Offensive See June Offensive

July Revolution Rebellion (July, 1830) in France that resulted in the forced abdication of Charles X and the crowning of Louis-Philippe. A victory for the upper bourgeoisie over the aristocracy, the rebellion was brought about by Charles's attempt to restore the absolutist Ancien Régime (q.v.). It was sparked by his selection of the unpopular Ultra-royalist J. de Polignac to head the government. To overcome opposition to Polignac in the Chamber of Deputies, Charles issued the July Ordinances (July 26), dissolving the chamber, changing the electoral system (to his advantage), and imposing press censorship. Riots broke out in Paris (July 27–29), Charles abdicated, and Louis-Philippe was chosen king (Aug. 9) by the deputies. The reign of Louis-Philippe was thus called the July Monarchy after the revolt.

June Days Revolt (June 23–26, 1848) by workers in Paris, France, during the early months of the Second Republic (q.v.). Though workers had supported the February Revolution (1848), unemployment and failure of the work-relief program (national workshops) failed to ease the workers' discontent. A mass protest in which workers briefly took over (May 15) the National Assembly, resulted in the decision to dismantle the national workshops. The ensuing revolt engulfed Paris in bloody street fighting and brought down the interim government. Gen. Louis Cavaignac (1802–57) was granted dictatorial powers to restore order, and finally put an end to the fighting.

June Offensive ⟨July Offensive⟩ ⟨Summer Offensive⟩ ⟨Kerensky Offensive⟩ ⟨Galician Offensive⟩ Russian offensive (June–July, 1917) during WW I. After the overthrow of the czar in the February Revolution (1917), the provisional government, headed by A. Kerensky, continued to prosecute the war and launched a major offensive in Galicia (July 1). After initial gains, the offensive came to a standstill, and Russian forces were routed by the German counterattack (July 19). The failure of the offensive caused mass desertion and contributed to the Bolshevik seizure of power in Nov., 1917.

Jung, Carl Gustav 1875–1961. Swiss psychiatrist. One of his early works, The Psychology of Dementia Praecox (1906), led to a collaboration with S. Freud. Jung broke with Freud in 1913 after publishing The Psychology of the Unconscious in 1912. He developed the theory of personality types, extroverted and introverted, and of the collective unconscious.

Junges Deutschland See Young Germany

Junius, Franciscus 1589–1677. German-born scholar, noted for his studies of ancient, Anglo-Saxon, and Gothic literature.

Juno Chief goddess in the Roman religion, wife and sister of Jupiter and guardian of women and marriage. She corresponds to the Greek goddess Hera.

Junta Governmental committee. A junta is a council that exercises administrative powers, usually in a political emergency or after the overthrow of a government. From Spanish juntar, "to join."

Jupiter Chief god in the Roman religion, also called Jove. He corresponds to the Greek god Zeus.

Jurchen See Sung

Justin I AD *c*450–527. Byzantine emperor (AD 518–527), successor to Anastasius I and uncle of Justinian I. Justin established close ties with the church in Rome, persecuted Monophysitism (q.v.), and relied largely upon others to govern the empire.

Justinian I AD 483–565. Byzantine emperor (AD 527–565), successor to his father, Justin I. One of the great rulers of the late empire, he is especially remembered for the legal codex, Corpus Juris Civilis (q.v.), compiled at his direction. His reign was marked by the conflict between the Blues and Greens in the Nika Riot (532); his call for the Second Council of Constantinople (553) and his involvement in the controversy over Monophysitism (qq.v.); and his expansion of the empire, including reconquest of Africa from the Vandals (533–548) and Italy from the Ostrogoths (535–554). Many public buildings were constructed during his reign, including the Hagia Sophia (q.v.).

Justinian Code See Corpus Juris Civilis

Justin Martyr, Saint AD *c*100–165. Christian religious philosopher and apologist who combined Christian belief with Platonic philosophy. He was one of the first intellectual apologists for Christianity and is an invaluable source for our knowledge of early Christian doctrines.

Jutes Ancient Germanic people, possibly from the area near the mouth of the Rhine, who invaded England in the 5th cent. AD and settled in Kent and on the Isle of Wight.

Jutland, Battle of ⟨Skagerrak, ~⟩ Indecisive WW I naval battle (May 31–June 1, 1916) off the coast of Denmark. It was the only important sea battle between the British and German navies during the war. The German High Seas Fleet, under Admiral R. Scheer, was lured into battle (May 31) with the superior force of the British Grand Fleet, under Admiral J. Jellicoe. Though outnumbered, the Germans inflicted the greater losses on the British before managing to escape the trap. The Allied North Sea blockade, however, was not tested again by German surface warships.

Juvenal ⟨Decimus Junius Juvenalis⟩ 1st–2d cent. AD. Leading Roman satirical poet whose 16 verse satires described the follies and vices of Roman life and served as models for later writers.

Juvenalis, Decimus Junius See Juvenal

K

Kaaba ⟨Caaba⟩ Sacred shrine in the Great Mosque at Mecca and the major site of pilgrimage for the followers of Islam. Muslims face toward it when praying.

Kabul Afghan city (pop. 800,000), the capital and largest city of Afghanistan. Strategically located on the main routes to the Khyber Pass, it has been conquered many times since the time of Alexander the Great. It became Afghanistan's capital in the 18th cent. and figured in the Anglo-Afghan wars of the 19th cent.

Kadar, Janos See Hungarian Revolution of 1956

Kadesh, Battle of Inconclusive battle (*c*1288 BC) between the Egyptians under King Ramses II and the Hittites. The Egyptians launched the attack on Kadesh, in Syria, in an attempt to halt the Hittite encroachment on the Egyptian Empire.

Kadet ⟨Constitutional Democratic party⟩ Russian political party founded in 1905. A party of moderation, it was continually undermined by more radical groups and ceased to function after 1917.

Kaffirs See Kafirs

Kafirs ⟨Kaffirs⟩ Term originally applied by Muslims to all unbelievers. Adopted by the European settlers of South Africa, it was applied to the Bantu-speaking native peoples of the area.

Kafir Wars See Cape Frontier Wars

Kafka, Franz 1883–1924. Czech-born Austrian author. Kafka published little in his lifetime and supported himself by working in an insurance office. His friend Max Brod (1884–1968) published his three novels, The Trial, The Castle, and Amerika posthumously. These works on the alienation of modern man greatly influenced later existentialist authors and marked Kafka as one of the great writers of the 20th cent.

Kaganovich, Lazar Moiseyevich 1893–. Russian Communist leader who was instrumental in the rise to power of J. Stalin. Kaganovich played a key role in the development of Russian transportation and heavy industry.

Kagawa, Toyohiko 1888–1960. Japanese Christian evangelist, social reformer, and writer. He was prominent in the Japanese labor and social-welfare movements of the 1920s and 1930s.

K'ai Feng Jews Religious group that practiced Judaism at K'ai Feng, Honan province, China, from about the 12th to 19th cent.

Kailas Tibetan mountain peak, the highest point of the Kailas range in the Himalayas. It is believed by pilgrims to be the dwelling place of the Hindu god Shiva.

Kairouan ⟨Qairwan⟩ City in northern Tunisia, a holy city of Islam. Founded in 670, it was a major Islamic political, religious, and cultural center until the rise of Tunis in the 11th cent.

Kaiser-Wilhelmsland See Papua New Guinea

Kalb, Johann 1721–80. German officer in the French army. As a general in the Continental Army during the American Revolution, he served with G. Washington at Valley Forge (1777), and was killed in the Carolina Campaign.

Kalevala National epic of Finland. It was compiled and edited by E. Lönnrott, who used Finnish folk verses to produce a unified work.

Kali Hindu goddess, also known as the Black One. The consort of Shiva, she was goddess of death and destruction and was worshiped by the Thugs (q.v.).

Kalidasa fl. AD 5th cent.? Indian dramatist, considered to be the greatest Sanskrit writer and perhaps the greatest writer in India's history. His drama Sakuntala is his best-known work.

Kalinin, Mikhail Ivanovich 1875–1946. Russian politician. Official head of the Soviet Union from 1919 to 1946, he was chairman of the Soviet central executive committee (1919–38) and of the Presidium (1938–46).

Kalmar Union Scandinavian union (1397) of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, joined under one crown at Kalmar, Sweden. Sweden withdrew (1523) with the accession of Gustavus I, though Denmark and Norway remained united until 1814.

Kalmar War War (1611–13) between Sweden and Denmark for the possession of Norway's north coast and the dominance of the Baltic. Danish king Christian IV defeated Sweden under Charles IX. Denmark achieved a position of dominance over Sweden and exacted a tribute for the return of the port of Älvsborg.

Kalmucks ⟨Kalmycks⟩ Nomadic people of Mongolian stock occupying the region of the lower Volga River in the USSR. The Kalmucks migrated to the region (17th cent.) from Chinese Turkistan and were at first allies of the expanding Russian empire. In the 18th cent. they were made vassals, however, and Russian oppression forced the bulk of the Kalmucks into their disastrous journey back to China (1771). Of the 300,000 that began the trek, the majority were killed in attacks by Russians and the Kazakh and Kirghiz peoples. Those that reached Chinese Turkistan were settled in Sinkiang, northwestern China. The remaining Kalmucks in Russia were exiled to Siberia after WW II for collaborating with the Germans. They were released from exile in 1957.

Kalmycks See Kalmucks

Kamakura shogunate Period in Japanese history (1192–1333) when members of the Minamoto clan ruled Japan as shoguns. Minamoto Yoritomo, operating from Kamakura (north of Kyoto) crushed the rival clans of Taira (1185) and Fujiwara (1189) and was named shogun by the emperor in 1192. Yoritomo thus established the long period of rule by the shoguns and the warrior class. Imperial administration was quickly undermined during the Kamakura period and replaced by that of the shoguns. Following Yoritomo's death in 1199, however, the Hojo clan came to power as regents and became effective rulers under the Minamoto shoguns. The Hojo clan (and the Kamakura shogunate) remained in power until Emperor Daigo II led a successful revolt (1333) in which he ended the Kamakura rule. He reigned until 1336, when he in turn was ousted and there began a period of wars that brought the Ashikaga shoguns to power. During the Kamakura shogunate, the feudal system was established (formalized by the Joei Formulary, 1232), foreign trade flourished, the Zen and Pure Land sects of Buddhism were introduced to Japan, and there was a cultural flowering as well. The No Theater was developed during this period.

Kamehameha I ⟨Kamehameha the Great⟩ 1758?–1819. Hawaiian king who united and ruled all the Hawaiian Islands (1810–19) and established the Kamehameha dynasty of Hawaiian rulers.

Kamehameha the Great See Kamehameha I

Kamenev, Lev Borisovich 1883–1936. Russian Communist leader. He was a member, with J. Stalin and G. Zinoviev, of the triumvirate that succeeded N. Lenin and opposed L. Trotsky. He was executed (1936) in the Stalinist purge of the 1930s.

Kamiakin See Yakima Indian Wars

Kamikaze Japanese word meaning "divine wind." It was originally applied to the typhoon that destroyed (1281) a Mongol invasion fleet. In WW II it was applied to the Japanese suicide pilots who tried to fly their bomb-loaded planes into US ships.

Kammu 737–806. Emperor of Japan and founder of Kyōto, the capital of Japan until 1868. A strong ruler, he diminished the power of the Buddhists and brought peace to Japan's northern borders.

Kanagawa, Treaty of ⟨Perry Convention⟩ Treaty (Mar. 31, 1854) between Japan and the US. The treaty was secured by Commodore M. Perry, who had sailed to Japan (1853–1854) with a fleet of US warships to end Japanese isolationism. It secured good treatment for US sailors, opened two ports to US trade, and established a US consulate at Shimoda. It was the model for later treaties with other Western powers.

Kandinsky, Wassily 1866–1944. Russian painter and theorist, considered the founder of abstract art. He was a founder of the influential Munich art group, the Blau Reiter.

Kandy, kingdom of See Sri Lanka

Kanem-Bornu African empire that flourished in the region around Lake Chad from the 9th to 19th cent. It reached its height in the 16th–17th cents.

K'ang-hsi 1654–1722. Chinese emperor (1661–1722). He extended China's rule to Taiwan, Tibet, and Outer Mongolia, and encouraged the teaching of Western mathematics and astronomy.

K'ang Sheng 1899–1975. Chinese political leader. An active Communist since the 1920s, he was a member of the Central Committee and the Politburo and was one of the most powerful leaders in China.

K'ang Yu-wei See Reform Movement of 1898

Kanishka See Kaniska

Kaniska ⟨Kanishka⟩ AD 78?–103? Chinese ruler of northern India and founder of the Kusana empire (q.v.). He was an ardent Buddhist and may have introduced the belief to China. Trade with the Romans was fostered during his reign.

Kano Japanese family of painters who dominated art in Japan between the 15th and 17th cents. For seven generations they set painting style and their influence persisted well into the 19th cent.

Kansas Central US state (pop. 2,363,200), the 34th state. First explored (1541) by the Spanish explorer Francisco Coronado (1510–54), it was later claimed by France and acquired by the US in the Louisiana Purchase (1803). Kansas was at first considered too barren for settlement, but the controversy between pro- and antislavery groups seeking to establish a majority increased the population and led to passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act (q.v.) and the civil war known as Bleeding Kansas (q.v.). Kansas became a state in 1861.

Kansas-Nebraska Act US bill enacted (May 30, 1854) to establish Kansas and Nebraska as separate territories and, more important, to provide a compromise on the extension of slavery into the territories. Sponsored by Senator S. Douglas, the act helped bring on the American Civil War. Slavery had been barred from the region by the Missouri Compromise (1820), but Douglas' bill introduced the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, by which inhabitants of the region would decide the issue of slavery. Unpopular with antislavery groups, the act fostered creation of the antislavery Republican party and led to Bleeding Kansas (q.v.).

Kant, Immanuel 1724–1804. German philosopher. As a teacher at Königsberg University, he began his writings partly in reaction to his studies of G. Leibniz. His metaphysical work Critique of Pure Reason expressed his theories of what man could know. His Critique of Practical Reason (1788) gave his ethical beliefs, and his Critique of Judgment (1790) combined and completed his philosophies. Kant's writings have established him as one of the great philosophers of all time. He engineered a revolution in philosophy by focusing on what the human mind could subjectively know rather than upon what was objectively "out there."

Kantipur See Kathmandu

Kao Kang *c*1902–55. Chinese Communist leader. He was one of the most powerful political figures in the Communist government until his purge (Apr., 1955) from the party and subsequent suicide.

Kao Tsu ⟨Liu Pang⟩ 256–195 BC. Chinese emperor (202?–195 BC). Originally a peasant named Liu Pang, he seized power when the Ch'in dynasty collapsed. He established the Han dynasty, which created the administrative system that characterized Chinese rule until 1911.

Kapodistrias, Ioannes Antonios, Count ⟨Capo d'Istria, Giovanni Antonio⟩ 1776–1831. Greek president (1828–31). A former adviser to Russian czar Alexander I, he supported Greek independence. His autocratic measures made him an unpopular president, however, and he was assassinated.

Kappel, Battle of See Kappel Wars

Kappel Wars Name applied to two wars (1529, 1531) between Swiss Protestants and Catholics during the Swiss Reformation. During the second, the Swiss religious reformer U. Zwingli was killed at the Battle of Kappel (Oct. 11, 1531).

Kapp Putsch Unsuccessful reactionary uprising in Berlin (1920), named after its leader, Wolfgang Kapp (1858–1922). It sought to overthrow the Weimar Republic and restore the German monarchy.

Karachi Largest city (pop. 3,498,600) in Pakistan. It was Pakistan's capital from 1947 to 1959.

Karadžić, Vuk Stefanović ⟨Karajich, Vuk Stephenovich⟩ 1787–1864. Serbian scholar. He developed a simplified Cyrillic alphabet to reflect the Serbian language more closely and compiled collections of Serbian folk songs and tales.

Karageorge ⟨b. George Petrovic⟩ 1766?–1817. Serbian patriot who led the Serbian uprising against the Turks (1804). He was named hereditary leader of the Serbs (1808), and founded the Karageorgevich dynasty.

Karageorgevich Serbian dynasty, descended from the patriot leader Karageorge. It ruled Serbia from 1842 to 1858, and the kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (later Yugoslavia) from 1903 to 1945.

Karaites Jewish religious sect, said to have been founded in Persia in the 8th cent. It rejected Talmudic interpretation of the Bible and accepted only the Bible as the source of religious law. Its importance declined after the 12th cent., but it has inspired much biblical scholarship.

Karajich, Vuk Stephenovich See Karadžić, Vuk Stefanović

Karakhan, Lev See Karakhan Manifesto

Karakhan Manifesto Russian manifesto issued (July 15, 1919) by Lev Karakhan (1889–1937), then a member of the newly formed foreign ministry of the USSR. The manifesto renounced czarist rights and privileges in China. It made a tremendous impression in China as the first such renunciation by a former imperialist power and helped lead to the foundation of a Chinese Communist party (1921).

Karamanlis, Constantine 1907–. Greek statesman and prime minister (1955–63, 1974–). He was instrumental in resolving the crisis in Cyprus in 1960. Karamanlis was returned to power in 1974, following the collapse of the military junta that had taken control in 1967.

karate See jujitsu

Karens Members of several Sino-Thai tribal groups living in southern Burma and constituting a major minority. The Karens have resisted Burmese political rule since Burma's independence in 1948.

Karlowitz, Treaty of ⟨Carlowitz, Treaty of⟩ Treaty (Jan. 26, 1699) between the Ottoman Turks and Austria and her allies of the Holy League (Poland, Russia, and Venice), ending the Austro–Turkish War (1682–99). The treaty's provisions made Austria the major power in Eastern Europe. By its terms Austria gained most of Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia, and Slavonia. Poland won Podolia, and Venice received Dalmatia and Morea. Russia continued hostilities until it gained Azov.

Karman, Theodore von 1881–1963. American aeronautical engineer noted for his contributions in the field of mathematics to the development of aerodynamics.

Karmathians ⟨Carmathians⟩ Muslim reformist sect prominent from the 9th to 10th cent. Founded (*c*890) by the peasant prophet Karmat, the sect was centered in lower Mesopotamia and set up a communistic community there. From this base they fostered wars and rebellions against the Abbasid caliphate, and in the 10th cent. conquered Yemen. In *c*930 the Karmathians attacked Mecca and carried off the sacred Muslim Black Stone of the Kaaba. They ransomed it back (952); thereafter they declined from power quickly.

Karnak Egyptian village. Karnak occupies the northern half of the ancient site of Thebes; Luxor, the southern half. Karnak is famed for its ancient ruins and temples, especially the Temple of Amon, with its vast hall containing 134 massive columns arranged in 16 rows, the finest construction of the 18th dynasty.

Karo, Joseph ben Ephraim See Caro, Joseph ben Ephraim

Károlyi, Mihály, Count 1875–1955. Hungarian statesman who sought Hungarian autonomy within the Austro-Hungarian Empire. After World War I, he briefly served as president of the Hungarian republic (1919) before the rise of B. Kun.

Kashmir ⟨Jammu and Kashmir⟩ Former princely state, now divided between Pakistan and India. It includes the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir (54,000 sq. mi.) and Pakistani-controlled Azid Kashmir (32,000 sq. mi.). It was included in the Mogul Empire in 1587, and, after changing rulers several times, became part of British India in 1846. There was a Muslim revolt there after the 1947 partition of India. India and Pakistan have both made claims on the entire territory.

Kassem, Abdul Karim 1914–63. Iraqi political and military leader. After leading a successful revolt (1958) against the Iraqi monarchy, he became the first premier of the Iraqi republic, but was overthrown and executed by the Baath party in Feb., 1963.

Kassites Ancient people, possibly originating in western Iran, who conquered Babylonia and ruled there from the 18th to 12th cent. BC.

Kastrioti, George See Skanderbeg

Kathmandu ⟨Katmandu⟩ ⟨Kantipur⟩ Ancient city (pop. 150,400), capital of Nepal. It has long been a religious center and the seat of the ruling family of the Gurkha peoples (q.v.).

Katmandu See Kathmandu

Katō, Kōmei See Kato, Takaakira

Kato, Takaakira ⟨Katō Kōmei⟩ 1860–1926. Japanese statesman, and foreign minister when Japan presented the Twenty-One Demands (q.v.) to China (1915). He organized and headed the conservative Kenseikai party (1913).

Katyn Village in western USSR, near Smolensk. The nearby Katyn Forest was the site of a massacre (1943) of Polish officers during WW II, committed by either Russian or German forces. The Russians have consistently accused the Germans, but in 1952 a US congressional investigating committee claimed to have established that the massacre was carried out under Soviet auspices.

Kaufman, George S. 1889–1961. American playwright, collaborator on many very popular musicals and plays, including the Pulitzer Prize-winning Of Thee I Sing (1931) and You Can't Take It with You (1936).

Kaunda, Kenneth (David) 1924–. Zambian political leader who led the Zambian independence movement and became Zambia's first president (1964–).

Kaunitz, Wenzel Anton, Fürst von 1711–94. Austrian statesman. He allied Austria with France and Russia in a coalition against Prussia that led to the Seven Years' War (q.v.).

Kautsky, Karl Johann 1854–1938. German Socialist leader and Marxist theorist. He was the main contributor to the Erfurt program, which committed the German Social Democratic party to a Marxist program.

Kay, John 1704–64. English inventor of the fly shuttle (1733), a major advance in the development of mechanical weaving.

Kazan Capital city (pop. 870,000) of the Tatar Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, on the Volga River. A major commercial center, it was capital of an independent Tatar khanate from the 15th cent. until its capture by Ivan IV (1552). It became the capital of the Volga region in 1708 and was an outpost for Russian colonization of the East.

Kean, Edmund 1789–1833. English actor whose dynamic performances in such roles as Iago, Shylock, and Othello revolutionized English acting style and made him famous as one of England's greatest actors.

Kearny, Philip 1814–62. American Union general. A nephew of S. W. Kearny, he fought in the Mexican War and with the French in Europe. He was a dashing commander in the Peninsular Campaigns and was killed in action reconnoitering Confederate lines.

Kearny, Stephen Watts 1794–1848. American general in the Mexican War. He captured New Mexico, established a civil government there, and helped to capture California, where he was military governor for a time.

Keats, John 1795–1821. English poet, considered one of England's greatest Romantic poets. He gave up a career as a medical student in 1816 to write poetry. Despite his tragically short life and the lack of recognition of his work, Keats produced a number of works renowned for their sensuous imagery. Among his best-known poems are the odes On Melancholy, To a Nightingale, On a Grecian Urn, and To Psyche.

Keble, John 1792–1866. English clergyman and poet whose sermon National Apostacy is considered the origin of the Oxford movement within the Anglican church.

Keita, Modibo See Mali

Keitel, Wilhelm 1882–1946. German field marshal and chief of staff of the German high command during WW II. He was convicted at Nürnberg for war crimes and was executed.

Keith, George 1693?–1778. Scottish Jacobite leader. A brother of J. Keith, he took part in the abortive Jacobite uprising of 1715, and then escaped to the Continent, where he eventually rose high in the service of Prussia.

Keith, James Francis Edward 1696–1758. Scottish Jacobite leader in the Jacobite rebellion of 1715. He later served as field marshal in the Prussian army during the Seven Years' War.

Keller, Helen Adams 1880–1968. American author and public figure. Blind and deaf from infancy, she overcame her handicaps and became a noted writer and lecturer.

Kellermann, François Christophe 1735–1820. French general and marshal of France, his defeat of the Prussian army at the Battle of Valmy (1792) saved the revolutionary government in France.

Kelley, Oliver Hudson 1826–1913. American agriculturalist. He was one of the founders (1867) of the National Grange and became a leader of the Granger movement.

Kellogg, Frank Billings 1856–1937. American statesman. As US secretary of state (1925–29), he formulated the Kellogg-Briand Pact, for which he received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1929.

Kellogg-Briand Pact ⟨Pact of Paris⟩ International agreement (Aug. 27, 1928) declaring an end to war as an instrument of national policy. Initiated by US secretary of state F. Kellogg and French foreign minister A. Briand, the pact was originally signed at Paris by 15 nations and ultimately was subscribed to by 62. The pact was rendered ineffective by the lack of means of enforcement and by provisions that allowed defensive wars and wars to defend allies. In the following years it was ignored by the Japanese (Manchurian invasion, 1931) and others.

Kelts See Celts

Kelvin, William Thomson, 1st Baron 1824–1907. Scottish mathematician and physicist, noted especially for his contributions to the fields of thermodynamics and electricity. The scale of absolute temperature is named for him.

Kendall, Amos See Kitchen Cabinet

Kennedy Prominent American political family from Massachusetts. The founder, Joseph P. Kennedy (1888–1969), acquired a large fortune and served as F. Roosevelt's ambassador to London (1937–40). Three of his sons have gained prominence as American political leaders: J. Kennedy; R. Kennedy; and Edward Kennedy (1932–), US senator from Massachusetts from 1962.

Kennedy, Edward M. See Kennedy Family

Kennedy, John Fitzgerald 1917–63. Thirty-fifth US president (1961–63), successor to D. Eisenhower. A Democrat and US congressman from Massachusetts (1947–53), he served in the Senate from 1953 to 1960 and there established himself politically. In the 1960 elections he successfully opposed R. Nixon and became the youngest president (and first Catholic) ever elected to the office. As president, he sought enactment of legislation, which became stalled in Congress, for his New Frontier (q.v.) program; instituted the Alliance for Progress (1961) program; and started the Peace Corps program. Kennedy put the federal government squarely behind the civil rights movement in the South and used both federal troops and federal pressure to promote school desegregation there. In foreign affairs, Kennedy quickly became embroiled in a series of clashes with the Communists, including the embarrassing failure of the Bay of Pigs Invasion (q.v.), the crisis over the Berlin Wall (q.v.), the Cuban missile crisis (q.v.), and increasing involvement in the war against the Communists in Vietnam. He also concluded the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty of 1963. Kennedy was assassinated (Nov. 22, 1963) in Dallas, Texas, by Lee Harvey Oswald (1939–63). Oswald was in turn shot and killed by Jack Ruby (1911–67), a local citizen. Despite findings of the Warren Commission that Oswald acted alone, rumors of a second gunman and of various conspiracies persisted for years.

Kennedy, Joseph P. See Kennedy

Kennedy, Robert F. 1925–68. American politician, younger brother of President J. Kennedy. He was attorney general under presidents Kennedy and L. Johnson (1961–64). As US senator from New York (1964–68), he ran for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968 but was assassinated on June 5, 1968.

Kennedy Round Series of tariff negotiations conducted (1964–67) by 50 countries responsible for 80 percent of world trade. They agreed to tariff reductions of up to 50 percent on many industrial goods and to substantial reductions on other tariffs.

Kennesaw Mountain, Battle of See Atlanta Campaign

Kensett, John Frederick 1818–72. American painter, one of the group of painters known as the Hudson River school.

Kensington Rune Stone Controversial stone found (1898) on a farm near Kensington, Michigan. It bears runic inscriptions supposedly carved by Norse explorers in 1362.

Kent, kingdom of Ancient English kingdom. Founded by the Jutes (5th cent. AD), it rose to power (6th cent.) under Aethelbert, but in the 9th cent. became part of the kingdom of Wessex. The kingdom contained the bishopric of Canterbury, established during Aethelbert's rule.

Kent State Massacre Incident at Kent State University in Kent, Ohio, on May 4, 1970. Ohio National Guardsmen called out against a Vietnam War protest rally fired on protesters, killing four students. The incident provoked a nationwide protest against repression and redoubled sentiment against the war.

Kentucky Central state of the US (pop. 3,661,400), the 15th state. Kentucky was first settled in the 1760s. D. Boone opened the Wilderness Road from Tennessee to Kentucky and founded the first settlement, Boonesborough (1775). Made a county of Virginia (1776), Kentucky was the first territory west of the Appalachians to become a state (1792). Federal adoption of the Alien and Sedition Acts (1798) led to passage of the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions. Kentucky was a border state during the American Civil War. Although it remained in the Union, many Kentuckians fought for the Confederacy.

Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions Resolutions passed (Nov., Dec., 1798) by legislatures in the two states to oppose the Alien and Sedition Acts (1798). The ideas these resolutions put forward laid the basis for states' rights and the nullification controversy. Written by T. Jefferson (Kentucky) and J. Madison (Virginia), the resolutions amounted to a reply by Jeffersonian Republicans to the Federalist party interpretation of federal government powers. Essentially, Jefferson put forward the idea of a compact between the federal government and states established by the Constitution. Further, the states had the power to nullify federal laws they deemed unconstitutional.

Kenya (Republic of Kenya, formerly British East Africa) Republic located on the east coast of Africa. Its capital is Nairobi. The region of Kenya was early dominated by the Arabs. Control then passed to the Portuguese, back to the Arabs, and finally to the British. Kenya became independent in 1963. Key dates in the history of Kenya include:

8TH CENT. Arabs settled coast, establishing autonomous colonies.

c1000 Bantu tribes arrived in region.

16TH CENT. Portuguese arrived (from 1498) and gradually gained control of Kenyan coastal region.

1729 Arabs drove out Portuguese and took control of region.

1886 Britain and Germany set up "spheres of influence" in region; most of Kenya went to Britain.

1888 British East Africa Company given royal charter.

1895 British government took control; East Africa Protectorate established.

FROM 1903 European settlers arrived, taking control of highlands region.

1920 Kenya divided into British crown colony (coast) and protectorate (interior).

1952–56 Native Mau-Mau uprising against European domination.

1961 Black Africans gained majority control in Kenya's legislative council for the first time; Jomo Kenyatta, nationalist leader, freed from exile.

1963 Independence declared (Dec. 12); unicameral legislature established by constitution; Kenya African Union became sole political party.

1963–68 Border war with Somali Democratic Republic.

1964 Republic declared; Kenyatta first president (in office 1964–78).

1967 Kenya, Uganda, and Tanzania established East African trading community.

1969 Tom Mboya, Kenyatta's probable successor, assassinated.

1976 Hostilities with Uganda ended by formal peace agreement.

1978 Kenyatta died (Aug. 22); Daniel Arap Mori elected president.

Kenyatta, Jomo *c*1894–1978. Kenyan political leader and statesman. He was a leader in the Kenyan independence movement and became first president of the Republic of Kenya (1964–78).

Kepler, Johannes 1571–1630. German astronomer, author of three laws describing planetary motion, now known as Kepler's laws. Kepler's work contributed to the later work of I. Newton.

Kerensky, Aleksandr Feodorovich 1881–1970. Russian revolutionary. He took part in the February Revolution (1917) that toppled the czarist government, and served as premier of the Provisional Government from July until the Bolshevik October Revolution.

Kerensky Offensive See June Offensive

Kern, Jerome 1885–1945. American composer noted for his scores for many musicals. His musical Show Boat had a major influence on later musicals.

Kerouac, Jack ⟨~, Jean-Louis⟩ 1922–69. American novelist. A leader of the Beat movement, Kerouac is known best for his novel On The Road.

Kerouac, Jean-Louis See Kerouac, Jack

Kesselring, Albert 1887–1960. German field marshal, one of A. Hitler's top commanders. He led air operations in Poland, Russia, and the West, and was commander in chief of operations in Italy (1943) during WW II.

Key, Francis Scott 1779–1843. American poet, author of The Star-Spangled Banner. Key's poem, inspired by the British attack on Ft. McHenry (1814) during the War of 1812, was set to music and became the US national anthem (1931).

Keynes, John Maynard, 1st baron of Tilton 1883–1946. British economist whose views have influenced the economic policies of many governments, notably F. Roosevelt's New Deal (q.v.). He wrote The General Theory of Employment, Interest, and Money, which advocated government intervention in solving the unemployment problem. A delegate to the Bretton Woods Conference (1944), he played a key role in establishing the International Monetary Fund.

KGB Russian political security police force. Created in 1954, it functions as an espionage agency as well as a force against internal subversion and domestic dissidence. (See also GPU.)

Khafre ⟨Chephren⟩ *c*2555–? BC. Ancient Egyptian king of the 4th dynasty. He built the second great pyramid at Giza.

Khair ed-Din See Barbarossa II

Khalifa, the See Abd Allah

Khalji Dynasty See Delhi Sultanate

khanate of Khiva Former khanate in south-central Asia, ruled by the Uzbeks. It flourished from the 16th cent. until its conquest by Russia (1873). The area is now part of the Turkmen and Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republics.

Khanbalik See Peking

Khartoum, Battle of Battle (1885) between British forces and the forces of the Mahdi, at Khartoum, Sudan. The British were besieged at Khartoum and were finally (Jan. 26) overwhelmed, and British general C. Gordon and all his garrison were killed. The battle is one of the great military engagements of British history.

Khazars ⟨Chazars⟩ Turkic people who ruled a powerful empire (*c*6th–10th cents.) located west of the Volga and north of the Black Sea in what is now southeastern USSR. With its capital at Itil, at the mouth of the Volga, the Khazar empire controlled trade between Byzantium and the East and between the Arab Empire and Slavic peoples to the north. By the 8th cent., the Khazar ruling class had embraced Judaism and entered into close relations with the Byzantines. The empire fell (965) to invading Russian armies of Sviatoslav, duke of Kiev, and thereafter ceased to be a power.

Khedive Ismail See Ismail Pasha

Khmelnitsky, Bogdan See Chmielnicki, Bogdan

Khmer Empire Ancient empire of southeast Asia located in what are now Cambodia and Laos. Established in the 6th cent., it rose to prominence in the 9th to 15th cents., during which time Buddhism, Hinduism, Sanskrit literature, and other elements of Indian culture flourished in the region. The empire reached its height in the 12th and 13th cents., when the cities of Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom were built. Its decline began (14th cent.) with repeated invasions by Annamese and Thais. The capture (15th cent.) of Angkor Thom by the Thais marked the end of Khmer power in the region.

Khmer Rouge ⟨Red Cambodians⟩ Cambodian Communists. Supported by the Viet Cong, the insurgent group overthrew the government of Lon Nol (1975), and, after a bloody rule, was in turn overthrown by a Vietnamese-backed faction (1978).

Khomeini, Ruhollah, Ayatollah 1901–. Iranian religious leader, a Muslim fundamentalist, and virtual dictator of Iran from Jan. 31, 1979 as a result of the Iranian revolution. Long exiled in Iraq and France during the regime of Shah Muhammad Reza Pahlevi, he returned to tumultuous popular acclaim in Iran after nearly a year of massive violent protests had resulted in the shah's abdication and departure (Jan. 16, 1979). It soon became clear that successive governments and officials acted only on the sufferance of the Ayatollah, even when pledged to the idea of an Islamic republic. He instituted a puritanical and repressive regime, increasingly dominated by religious leaders. Declining to take responsibility for actual government, even though his power was absolute, he contributed to increasing turmoil and chaos, especially after Iraq's military attack on Iran on Sept. 22, 1980. Khomeini's approval of mob violence led to the seizure by Iranian militants of the US Embassy (Nov. 4, 1979) and the hostage crisis (q.v.).

Khorezm Region of ancient Persia, now part of Soviet Turkistan. Once part of Cyrus the Great's empire, it became independent in the 12th cent. It was conquered by Genghis Khan (1220), Tamerlane (1378), and by the Uzbeks (16th cent.), who established an independent Uzbek state called the khanate of Khiva (q.v.).

Khosru I d. 579. Persian king (531–579). He expanded his empire east to the Indus River, and conquered parts of the Byzantine Empire. He encouraged culture and instituted reforms.

Khosru II d. 628. Persian king (590–628). After being usurped, Khosru regained the throne with the aid of Byzantine emperor Maurice. After Maurice's murder (602), Khosru turned against the Byzantines, but was defeated by Heraclius I.

Khrushchev, Nikita Sergeyevich 1894–1971. Russian Communist leader, first secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (1953–64) and premier (1958–64). He joined (1918) the Communist party and rose through the ranks to serve J. Stalin in the Great Purge. A member of the ruling Politburo from 1959, he won the power struggle that erupted after Stalin's death (1953) and that year replaced Malenkov as the party's first secretary. His long tenure during the Cold War era was marked by his de-Stalinization program (1956), Russian intervention in the Hungarian Revolution (1956), erection of the Berlin Wall (1961), the U-2 incident, failed Five-Year Plans, and the Cuban missile crisis (1962). His ouster (Oct., 1964) was brought on by failures in the Cuban crisis and agricultural production, as well as deteriorating relations with China.

Khufu ⟨Cheops⟩ *c*2589–*c*2566 BC. Ancient Egyptian king of the 4th dynasty. He built the great pyramid at Giza.

Khwarazm See Khorezm

Khyber Pass Steep mountain pass on the border of Pakistan and Aghanistan. It has long been a commercial route to India as well as an invasion route for such conquerors as Alexander the Great and Tamerlane. It also was used by British forces during the Anglo–Afghan Wars.

Kiangsi soviet Independent Chinese Communist government set up (1931) in Kiangsi province after the split between Nationalists and Communists. It was from Kiangsi that the Long March (1934) to Shansi province began.

Kickapoo Indians North American Indian tribe, once located in the northern Midwest. After the massacre (*c*1765) of the Illinois Indians, in which the Kickapoo took part, they occupied lands in Illinois. They aided the British in the American Revolution, fought with Chief Tecumseh against the Americans in the War of 1812, and, after ceding their lands to the US, took part in the Black Hawk War (1831–32). Forced to leave Illinois, they resettled in Kansas.

Kid, Thomas See Kyd, Thomas

Kidd, William *c*1645–1701. British privateer and pirate, known as Captain Kidd. Through numerous legends and stories he has come to be a leading figure in pirate lore.

Kido Koin ⟨Kido Takayoshi⟩ 1833–77. Japanese statesman. He helped to overthrow the Japanese shogunate (1868) and restore imperial rule. He subsequently helped to end feudalism in Japan and institute constitutional government.

Kido Takayoshi See Kido Koin

Kiel, Treaty of Peace settlement (Jan. 14, 1814) between Denmark and Sweden during the Napoleonic Wars. Denmark, an ally of France, was forced to surrender Norway to Sweden, thus further declining as a European power.

Kierkegaard, Sören 1813–55. Danish philosopher and religious writer whose works had a tremendous influence on the development of modern existentialism. Kierkegaard opposed the philosophical system of the dialectic advanced by G. Hegel and held that man's existence must be governed by his own conscious choice. He also advanced the theory that in religion "truth is subjectivity." His works include Either/Or, Philosophical Fragments, and Works of Love.

Kiesinger, Kurt Georg 1904–. German politician. As chancellor of West Germany (1966–69), he continued the pro-West policies of K. Adenauer and L. Erhard.

Kiev Russian city (pop. 2,144,000), capital of Kiev oblast and Ukrainian SSR and third largest Russian city. Originally a trading center between Scandinavia and Constantinople, it was conquered (9th cent.) by the Varangians, then rose in the 11th cent. to become capital of Kievan Russia. Destroyed (1240) by the Mongols, it passed to Lithuania (14th cent.), Poland (1569), and Russia (1686). Occupied by the Germans during WW II, the city was heavily damaged.

Kimhi, David 1160?–1235? Hebrew scholar believed to have lived and died in Narbonne, France. His grammar and lexicon were the leading works in their field for centuries.

Kim Il-sung ⟨Kim Song Ju⟩ 1912–. Leader of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (North Korea) since 1948.

Kimitake Hiraoka See Mishima Yukio

Kim Song Ju See Kim Il-sung

Kindi ⟨Al-Kindi⟩ fl. 9th cent. Arab philosopher. He translated Aristotle's work into Arabic and attempted to reconcile Aristotelian and Neoplatonist thought. His extensive writings dealt with medicine, astrology, and mathematics.

king Designation given to the male ruler of a nation or state. The title is generally hereditary.

King, Martin Luther, Jr. 1929–68. American civil rights leader renowned for his use of nonviolent resistance in the fight for racial equality. A minister in Montgomery, Alabama, he led a successful boycott opposing segregated city buses (1956), and organized the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. One of the leading figures in the black civil rights movement, he led the massive March on Washington, D.C. (1963). King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964. He was assassinated in 1968 in Memphis, Tennessee.

King, William Lyon Mackenzie 1874–1950. Canadian Liberal party leader and prime minister (1921–26, 1926–30, 1935–48). A specialist on labor, he was first elected to Parliament in 1908 and became Liberal party leader in 1919. During his long tenure as prime minister, he guided Canada through WW II, entered into defense alliances with the US by the Ogdensburg Declaration (1940) and Hyde Park Declaration (1941), and took part in the United Nations Charter conferences (1945).

King Cotton Term once used in the US South to express the value, both political and economic, of the southern cotton crop in the years before the American Civil War. Believers in the notion of King Cotton held that the importance of cotton would guarantee the South's success if it were ever forced to secede from the Union. Senator J. Hammond made it the subject of a famous speech before the US Senate (Mar. 4, 1858).

kingdom of See under names inverted, as in Castile, kingdom of King George's War (1744–48). American phase of the War of the Austrian Succession in Europe. It was an outgrowth of colonial rivalries between France and Britain, both of which then had interests in North America, and it was the third of four so-called French and Indian Wars (q.v.). The French began hostilities by capturing a British fort located off Nova Scotia. Spurred on by colonists in Massachusetts, the northern British colonies mustered an army of 4,000 militiamen. With the aid of British warships, they captured the heavily defended French fort at Louisburg, Nova Scotia (1745). Two subsequent attempts (1746, 1747) by French fleets failed to retake Nova Scotia. The French and their Indian allies launched raids into the British colonies, while the British were successful against the French in the West Indies. The war was ended by the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle (1748), which restored conquered territories.

King Philip's War War (1675–76) between New England colonists and Indian tribes in the region. The bloody war cost the lives of hundreds of colonists and resulted in the dispersal of New England tribes to the West. Relations between colonists and Indians were seriously eroded by the Pequot War (1637) and expansion of white settlements on Indian lands. The Indians formed a confederacy under King Philip, son of the Indian leader Massasoit, but they maintained peaceful relations until colonials executed three Wampanoag tribesmen. War broke out with an Indian raid (June, 1675) on a border settlement. Thereafter dozens of Colonial settlements from Connecticut to Maine were raided and burned. The Colonial militia retaliated in kind against Wampanoag, Narragansett, and Nipmuck villages. The war ended with the death (Aug., 1676) of King Philip.

King's law See Griffenfeld, Peder Schumacher, Count

Kingsley, Charles 1819–75. English author and clergyman whose novels reflected his concern for social issues of the day. He was a leading figure in the Christian Socialism movement.

King's Men See Chamberlain's Men

Kings Mountain, Battle of Battle (Oct. 7, 1780) of the Carolina Campagin (q.v.) in the American Revolution, at Kings Mountain, South Carolina. A decisive American victory over Loyalist forces, it contributed to the final British defeat.

King's Peace ⟨Peace of Antalcidas⟩ Peace agreement (387 BC) between Sparta and Persia. Sparta, simultaneously fighting a war against Persia and against an alliance of Greek city-states (Corinthian War, 395–387 BC), negotiated this peace with Persian king Artaxerxes II. By its terms, Greek cities in the west were declared to be autonomous, while those in Asia Minor were to belong to Persia. Sparta forced (386) Athenian acceptance of the peace by a naval blockade, and thereafter dominated the region as it had before the Corinthian War. This led to new rebellions and Sparta's eventual defeat (371) by Thebes.

Kingston Capital city (pop. 111,900) of Jamaica since 1872. Founded in 1693, Jamaica has become one of the commercial, industrial, and tourist centers of the West Indies and is noted for its deep-water harbor.

King William's War American Colonial war (1689–97) fought by Britain against France in North America. An extension of the War of the Grand Alliance against French king Louis XIV, it is considered the first of the French and Indian Wars. War began with a naval attack on Quebec (1690) by the British. The French and their Indian allies, led by Count Frontenac, then launched attacks on Schenectady, New York, Salmon Falls, New Hampshire, and Casco Bay, in Maine. The New England colonies in turn raised a militia, led by Sir W. Phips, which captured (May 11, 1690) Port Royal in French Acadia. British colonists subsequently attacked Quebec, but were unable to take it. Thereafter, the French and British and their respective Indian allies conducted raids on border settlements. The Treaty of Ryswick ended the war and provided for restoration of all conquered territories.

Kinsey, Alfred Charles 1894–1956. American zoologist, known best for his studies of human sexual behavior.

Kinshasa ⟨Leopoldville⟩ Capital city (pop. 2,008,400) of Zaire. Founded (1881) by H. Stanley, it is Zaire's commercial and cultural center.

Kioto See Kyoto

Kipchak khanate See Golden Horde

Kipling, Rudyard 1865–1936. English author, one of England's leading writers in the late 19th and early 20th cents. Much of his work reflects England's history as a colonial empire. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1907.

Kirby-Smith, Edmund See Smith, Edmund Kirby

Kircher, Athanasius 1601?–80. German Jesuit and scientist. His work with microscopes led him to believe that disease was caused by invisible bodies. He is credited with the invention of the magic lantern.

Kirchhoff, Gustav Robert 1824–87. German physicist, noted for his contributions to spectrum analysis, thermodynamics, and electricity. With R. Bunsen, he discovered the elements cesium and rubidium.

Kirchner, Ernst Ludwig 1880–1938. German painter and graphic artist. He was one of the founders of Die Brücke, a German expressionist art movement.

Kirke, Sir David 1596?–1654? English trader and adventurer. He captured Quebec (1629) and served as governor of Newfoundland.

Kirov, Sergei Mironovich 1888–1934. Russian Communist leader. His assassination marked the beginning of the Stalinist purges of the 1930s.

Kisfaludy, Károly 1788–1830. Hungarian dramatist, considered the founder of Hungarian national drama. Among his best-known works is the play Tatars in Hungary.

Kish Ancient Mesopotamian city in Iraq, east of Babylon. According to ancient legend, it was the site of the first Sumerian capital after the Great Flood.

Kishi Nobusuke 1896–. Japanese prime minister (1957–60). His support of a controversial US-Japanese security treaty caused widespread protest and led to his resignation.

Kissinger, Henry Alfred 1923–. American political scientist, US secretary of state (1973–77) under presidents R. Nixon and G. Ford. He figured prominently in the Nixon administration's efforts to find a solution to the Vietnam War. Following the Arab-Israeli War (1973), Kissinger instituted his so-called shuttle diplomacy, in which he traveled between the Egyptian and Israeli capitals in an attempt to negotiate an agreement between the two countries. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1973.

Kitasato, Shibasaburo 1852–1931. Japanese physician and bacteriologist. He developed an antitoxin for tetanus (with E. Behring) and identified ,independently of A. Yersin, the bacillus causing bubonic plague (1894).

Kit-Cat Club London club of the early 18th cent. It was founded by leading Whigs and included well-known literary personages among its members.

Kitchen Cabinet Group of unofficial advisers to US president A. Jackson during his first term of office (1829–33). Composed of editors of important newspapers and Jackson's political associates, the group came to replace regular Cabinet officers and advisers in formulating Jackson's policies. Of diminished importance after the Cabinet reorganization (1831), the group included Amos Kendall (1789–1869), Francis P. Blair (1791–1876), Duff Green (1791–1875), William B. Lewis, John H. Eaton (1790–1856), Isaac Hill, and M. Van Buren.

Kitchen Debate Widely publicized exchange between US vice-president R. Nixon and Soviet premier N. Khrushchev that took place (1959) while the two men were visiting an American exhibit of a model American kitchen. The two vigorously argued the merits of the American and Soviet systems before the accompanying reporters and media representatives. Nixon later instanced this impromptu "debate" as proof of his ability to deal with the Soviets.

Kitchener, Horatio Herbert Kitchener, 1st earl 1850–1916. British field marshal and statesman. He conquered the Sudan and reoccupied Khartoum (1898), and was chief of staff in the South African War. As secretary of war (1914–16), he greatly expanded Britain's military forces.

Kittredge, George Lyman 1860–1941. American scholar and educator. An authority on Shakespeare, Chaucer, and Malory, he taught at Harvard (1888–1936) and had a great influence on the teaching of English.

Kitty Hawk Village in northeastern North Carolina. Nearby is Kill Devil Hill, where the Wright brothers made their first successful powered flight (1903).

Kléber, Jean Baptiste 1753–1800. French general. He campaigned in the French Revolutionary Wars, suppressed the Royalist rebellion in the Vendée (1793), and commanded French forces in Egypt.

Klee, Paul 1879–1940. Swiss abstract artist, whose many works are noted for their innovative style, subtle humor, and use of color.

Kleist, Heinrich von 1777–1811. German poet and dramatist, considered one of the great German dramatists of the 19th cent.

Klemperer, Otto 1885–1973. One of the leading German orchestral conductors of the 20th cent. He is noted for introducing new works of I. Stravinsky and others and for his interpretations of the works of L. Beethoven and G. Mahler.

Klondike Region of the Yukon Territory in northwestern Canada. Discovery of gold here in 1896 led to the gold rush (1897–99).

Kloster-Zeven, Convention of See Convention of Kloster-Zeven

Kluck, Alexander von See Marne, Battle of the

KMT See Kuomintang

Knickerbocker American Colonial term for Dutch colonists in New York State. They were so named after the Herman Knickerbocker family, which settled near Albany (*c*1674).

Knights Hospitalers ⟨Knights of St. John⟩ ⟨Knights of Jerusalem⟩ ⟨in full Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem⟩ Important religious and military order founded (*c*1099) in Jerusalem. The order was created by Gerard de Martignes and confirmed (1153) by Pope Eugenius III. Dedicated to the healing and protection of pilgrims to the Holy Land, the order grew rich and powerful during the Crusades. Grateful knights, healed at the order's hospital, made bequests of money and land, while the knights of the order undertook military operations in its name. The misfortunes of the Crusades and the rise of Turkish power, however, forced the order to relocate several times after the fall of Jerusalem (1187): to Acre (1189); to Cyprus (1291); to Rhodes (1310), which they conquered; and to Malta (1530). The order declined in importance after being driven out of Rhodes. Napoleon's conquest of Malta (1798) effectively brought the order to an end. In 1879 it was reorganized and revived as a charitable organization.

Knights of Calatrava Oldest Spanish military and religious order. Established by Cistercian monks to protect the city of Calatrava against the Moors (1158), the order subsequently gained control of large territories. It remained powerful until King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella took control of it (1493) under the authority of the crown.

Knights of Jerusalem See Knights Hospitalers

Knights of Labor US labor organization, founded (1869) in Philadelphia. Originally a secret organization under the leadership of Uriah S. Stephens (1821–82), it included workers of all kinds (as opposed to craft organizations) and sought to replace capitalism with workers' cooperatives. Secrecy was abolished (1881), and under the leadership of Terence V. Powderly (1849–1924) the group reached its greatest membership, some 700,000. In 1886, after a wave of strikes in the US and the disastrous Haymarket Square Riot, membership in the group began a rapid decline. By the end of the century, it was largely replaced by the American Federation of Labor, and was disbanded in 1917.

Knights of Saint Crispin Early US trade union. Founded (1867) to organize shoemakers, a major union in the US. By 1878, however, most of its members had joined the Knights of Labor.

Knights of St. John See Knights Hospitalers

Knights of the Golden Circle Secret order of supporters of the South during the American Civil War. Founded (1854) in Ohio as a proslavery group, it turned to supporting the Confederacy after the outbreak of war. Active mainly in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, and Kentucky, the group was composed largely of Democrats who wanted to end the war (called Copperheads). In 1864, the group became known as the Sons of Liberty.

Knights of the Temple of Solomon See Knights Templars

Knights Templars ⟨Templars⟩ ⟨Knights of the Temple of Solomon⟩ Important religious military order founded (*c*1119) during the Crusades. Organized by Hugh de Payens at Jerusalem to protect Christian pilgrims from Muslim attacks, the order was confirmed (1128) by Pope Honorius III. It subsequently grew into a powerful army in service against the Muslims and, through bequests, gained considerable wealth and lands in Europe. After the failure of the Crusades, the Templars became a powerful banking group and thereby aroused opposition by the European nobility. French king Philip IV, with consent of Pope Clement V, began persecutions (1307) of the Templars. By 1314, its property had been confiscated, and the order ceased to exist.

Knights' War Unsuccessful rebellion of German knights (1522–23) during the Reformation. The knights, led by F. von Sickengen, supported the Reformation and sought to ensure their ancient privileges.

Knossos See Cnossus

Know-Nothing party ⟨American party⟩ Short-lived US political party active in the mid-1800s. Originally a secretive group, members answered questions about its activities by saying they knew nothing (hence the name). Its major aim, however, was promotion of American nativism, in reaction to the rising tide of European immigration. The party became a national organization (1845) and made significant gains in the 1854 elections in New York, Massachusetts, and other states. The secretive elements were abolished in 1855, but the party split the same year over the slavery issue. It declined rapidly during the remainder of the decade, and its presidential candidate, M. Fillmore, carried only Maryland in 1856.

Knox, Frank ⟨Knox, William Franklin⟩ 1874–1944. American newspaper publisher. He was unsuccessful Republican vice-presidential candidate (1936), but served as US secretary of the navy (1940–44) under President F. Roosevelt in a Democratic administration.

Knox, Henry 1750–1806. American officer in the American Revolution. He directed the removal of artillery from Fort Ticonderoga to Boston, where it was used to force British evacuation. Knox served as first US secretary of war (1785–94).

Knox, John *c*1514–72. Scottish reformer and founding father of the Church of Scotland. After the execution (1546) of his mentor, G. Wishart, he joined a group of Scottish Presbyterian conspirators who had avenged Wishart's death. Eventually captured by Catholic forces, he was rescued from slavery and thereafter served the Protestant cause in England and on the Continent. With the beginning of the Scottish Reformation (1557), Knox returned to Scotland (1559) to lead the fight against Catholic armies. Following the establishment of the Church of Scotland, Knox and others wrote the First Book of Discipline, setting forth the basic organization of the church. Knox lost many supporters with the accession (1561) of Mary Queen of Scots. He continued to uphold his beliefs and resolutely opposed Mary. His efforts were rewarded when the Protestant nobles forced her abdication (1567).

Knox, Philander Chase 1853–1921. American politician. As US attorney general (1901–04), he led government prosecution of trusts. As secretary of state (1909–13), he defended American financial interests abroad through what has been termed "dollar diplomacy."

Knox, William Franklin See Knox, Frank

Knut See Canute

Kobo-Daishi See Kukai

Koch, Robert 1843–1910. German bacteriologist, a leading figure in the founding of bacteriology. His contributions include the discovery of the organisms causing anthrax (1876) and those causing tuberculosis (1882).

Koffka, Kurt 1886–1941. German psychologist. With W. Köhler and M. Wertheimer, he founded the school of Gestalt psychology.

Koguryŏ Ancient Korean kingdom, founded *c*2d–1st cents. BC. In 668 BC, it was overrun by the Chinese T'ang and Korean Silla dynasties, and was incorporated into the kingdom of Silla.

Kohathites See Levites

Köhler, Wolfgang 1887–1967. Estonian-born psychologist who, with K. Koffka and M. Wertheimer, founded the Gestalt school of psychology.

Kokoschka, Oskar 1886–1980. Austrian painter and writer and leading figure in expressionism. He is noted for his expressionist landscapes and dramas.

Kolchak, Aleksandr Vasilyevich 1874–1920. Russian admiral and leader (1918–20) of anti-Bolshevik forces in Siberia during the Russian civil war.

Kolin, Battle of Austro-Prussian battle (June 18, 1757) during the Seven Years' War, at Kolin, now in Czechoslovakia. A force of 53,000 Austrians under L. von Daun defeated some 60,000 Prussians under Frederick the Great, raising the Prussian siege of Prague and forcing Frederick to evacuate Bohemia.

Konbaung dynasty See Alaungpaya; Burmese War (third)

Königgrätz, Battle of ⟨Sadowa, ~⟩ Decisive battle (July 3, 1866) near Königgrätz, now in Czechoslovakia, ending the Seven Weeks' War between Prussia and Austria. Prussian troops commanded by H. von Moltke defeated the Austrian army under Ludwig August von Benedek (1804–81). Austrian casualties were about 40,000, compared to Prussian losses of fewer than 15,000. The victory gave Prussia dominance over Germany.

Königsmark, Countess Maria Aurora 1668?–1728. Swedish noblewoman, mistress of King Augustus II of Poland and Saxony, and mother of Maurice, Comte de Saxe.

Konoye, Fumimaro, Prince 1891–1945. Japanese statesman. As premier of Japan (1937–39, 1940–41) he helped to form the Axis alliance with Germany and Italy.

Koowescoowe See Ross, John

Korah Biblical Hebrew leader who led an unsuccessful revolt against Moses and Aaron. He was swallowed up by the earth with Dathan, Abiram, and 250 others.

Koran ⟨Quran⟩ The sacred book of Islam. A compilation of the revelations received by Muhammad during his lifetime, it is one of the world's most influential books and the major unifying force in the Islamic religion. The authorized version was written (*c*650) by Muhammad's secretary, Zaid ibn Thabit, by order of the caliph Uthman. Divided into 114 chapters (suras), the Koran sets forth religious doctrine and codes concerning conduct of the followers of Islam. Accepted as the word of God, the Koran is above doubt or criticism in the Islamic world.

Korea Country occupying a large peninsula in eastern Asia, divided after WW II into North Korea (Democratic People's Republic of Korea, capital at Pyongyang) and South Korea (Republic of Korea, capital at Seoul). Korea has been influenced by neighboring China since ancient times and was reduced to a Chinese vassal state in the 17th cent. Control of Korea passed to the Japanese in the early 1900s and they held it until the end of WW II. The Soviets and the US established zones of occupation in 1945 and North and South Korea have been under separate governments ever since. Since the Korean War (q.v.) there have only been limited and largely fruitless talks on reunification. Key events in the history of Korea include:

12TH CENT. BC Ki Tse, Chinese feudal lord, founded first known kingdom in Korea; had fled China after overthrow of Shang dynasty.

1ST CENT. BC–7TH CENT. AD Three Kingdoms period: rise of three separate native kingdoms (Koguryo, Silla, Paekche) on Korean peninsula.

4TH CENT. AD Buddhism introduced.

670–935 Kingdom of Silla gained control over peninsula and formed first unified Korean kingdom; Confucianism and other elements of Chinese culture introduced.

935–1392 Koryo kingdom established control over Korea; distinct Korean culture developed.

13TH CENT. Korea invaded by Mongols from China; Mongols gained control over Korea.

1392 Yi Songgye founded Yi dynasty in Korea (ruled until 1910); established capital at Seoul, ended Mongol control, and established Confucianism.

1592–98 Japanese emperor Hideyoshi unsuccessfully attempted to conquer Korea; Koreans drove out Japanese with Chinese help.

1637 Chinese reduced Korea to vassal state following series of invasions.

17TH–19TH CENT. Korea entered period of extreme isolationism; Hermit Kingdom, as it was called, permitted only Chinese influence.

1876 Japan forced Korea to agree to a commercial treaty, thus ending period of Korean isolation; opened Korea to trade agreements with US and other Western nations.

1894–95 First Sino-Japanese War fought; led to increasing Japanese influence over Korea.

1904–05 Japanese forces occupied Korea during Russo-Japanese War, thus increasing Japan's hold on Korea.

1905 Korea declared a Japanese protectorate.

1910–45 Korea part of Japanese empire; annexed in 1910, it was thereafter exploited by Japanese; underwent rapid industrialization.

1945 Korea divided at end of WW II into two sectors; Soviet troops occupied sector north of 38th parallel; US forces occupied territory in south; plans called for reunification within five years.

1948 Soviet opposition to moves for reunification resulted in establishment (May 1) of People's Republic of Korea in north and (Aug. 15) Republic of Korea in south.

1948–60 Syngman Rhee in office as first elected president of Republic of Korea.

1948–72 Kim Il-sung (Kim Song Ju) premier in North Korea.

1949 US and Soviets withdrew troops from Korea.

1950 North Korean forces invaded south (June 25), instigating Korean war (1950–53).

1953 South Korea signed mutual defense treaty with US.

1958 Chinese completed withdrawal of troops from North Korea.

1960 Protest march (Apr. 19) in South Korea led to bloodbath as police shot at student demonstrators; civil unrest spread throughout South Korea, forcing Syngman Rhee to resign.

1961 Military junta seized power (May) in South Korea in bloodless coup; Gen. Park Chung Hee became leader of military government.

1963–69 Park Chung Hee president in South Korea; fostered economic growth and buildup of military.

1968 North Koreans seized US intelligence ship Pueblo (Jan. 23), provoking international incident.

1972 Pres. Park imposed martial law in South Korea (Oct. 17); National Assembly dissolved; political activities banned.

1972 Constitutional revisions adopted (Nov. 21); gave Pres. Park unlimited power and term of office.

1972 Kim Il Sung elected president of North Korea (Dec. 28); remained in office into early 1980s; new constitution promulgated.

1974 Pres. Park ordered measures to stifle growing opposition (Jan 8) in South Korea.

1974 Unsuccessful assassination attempt against Pres. Park in Seoul (Aug.).

1977 US announced intention of withdrawing US troops from Korea; opposition to move later ended in reversal of plan.

1977 North Koreans shot down US helicopter that had accidentally crossed over into the north.

1977 South Koreans implicated in scandal involving bribery of US congressmen.

1979 Talks on reunification with north held (Jan.-Mar.), though little progress was made.

1979 South Korean President Park assassinated (Oct. 26) by head of the Korean intelligence agency; martial law imposed.

1979–80 Choi Kyu Hah installed as South Korean president; some political restrictions rescinded; forced to resign (1980) as unrest mounted.

1980 Antigovernment unrest resulted in imposition (May 18) of total martial law in south.

1980 South Korean troops crushed antigovernment revolt in city of Kwangju (June 21).

1980 Chun Doo Hwan in office (Sept. 1) as president of South Korea.

1980 Major purge of government officials (July 9) directed at ending corruption in South Korea.

1980 New constitution approved by South Korean voters (Oct. 22); would limit presidential powers and lift ban on political parties.

1981 Martial law lifted (Jan. 24) by Pres. Chun Doo Hwan.

Korean War War (1950–53) between the North Koreans, backed by the Communist Chinese, and the South Koreans, backed by UN peace forces (principally US troops). Korea was ravaged by the war and there were some 4 million casualties (2 million of them civilians). The war was caused by various factors, including the Communists' desire to reunite Korea under their rule and the rise of Cold War tensions between Communist and non-Communist nations. Korea had been divided at the end of WW II, with Soviet forces occupying the territory north of the 38th parallel, and US forces to the south of it. Plans to reunite the country were never instituted. A Communist government was established in the north and a pro-Western government evolved in the south. Thus the Communist invasion of the south in 1950 became a part of the larger Cold War (q.v.) between the Communists and the US and its Western allies. In this context the war was a major test of the US policy of "containing" communism. Key events in the war include:

1950 Communist forces from North Korea mounted full-scale invasion of south (June 25); UN called for measures to aid South Korea against the invasion.

1950 US Pres. H. Truman ordered US military to aid South Korea as part of UN police action (June 30).

1950 South Korean and US forces driven to small zone around Pusan, southeastern Korea (early Sept.).

1950 US Gen. D. MacArthur, commander of UN forces, launched amphibious landing at Inchon (Sept. 15), well to the north; forced North Koreans to retreat.

1950 Seoul retaken by UN forces (Sept. 26).

1950 UN forces followed retreating North Korean forces across 38th parallel; captured Pyongyang, North Korean capital (Oct. 19).

1950 UN forces occupied most of Korea and advanced to Yalu River, Korean border with China, despite warnings by Chinese; Chinese launched invasion into Korea (Nov. 26).

1951 Chinese forces captured Seoul (Jan. 4).

1951 UN forces recaptured Seoul (Mar. 14) after Communist advance faltered.

1951 Communists pushed back to lines roughly along the 38th parallel; Gen. MacArthur openly advocated new invasion across 38th parallel, and was removed (Apr. 11) as supreme commander by President Truman; MacArthur was succeeded by Gen. M. Ridgway.

1951 Communist spring offensive (from May 15) failed.

1951 Peace talks began (July 10) at Kaesong; reconvened at Panmunjom (Oct. 25).

1953 Armistice signed (July 27).

Kornilov, Lavr Georgyevich 1870–1918. Russian general, made commander in chief by A. Kerensky after the February Revolution (1917). He was dismissed, then arrested, for sending troops against Kerensky, and later led anti-Bolshevik forces.

Kortruk, Battle of See Golden Spurs, Battle of the Koryo Korean kingdom (935–1392) from which the name Korea is derived. During its existence the Korean peninsula was unified and its capital established at Songjong (modern Kaesong).

Korzybski, Alfred ⟨Habdank⟩ 1879–1950. Polish-born American scientist who founded the linguistic system known as general semantics.

Kosciusko, Thaddeus 1746–1817. Polish general and champion of Polish independence. He fought with distinction against the British in the American Revolution, then fought unsuccessfully in Poland against the Russians (1792–93). After the second Partition of Poland (1793), he led a rebellion (1794) against both Russian and Prussian forces. This led to the third Partition of Poland and his imprisonment (1794–96). Thereafter he lived in the US, France, and Switzerland.

Kosovo, Battle of 1. Battle (June 20, 1389; by tradition, June 15) at Kosovo, now in Yugoslavia, in which the Ottoman forces of Murad I defeated a confederation of Slavic forces under Serbian prince Lazar I (d. 1389). Both Murad and Lazar were killed. 2. Battle (Oct. 16–17, 1448) at Kosovo, now in Yugoslavia, in which the Ottoman forces under Murad II defeated the Hungarian army of J. Hunyadi.

Kossuth, Lajos See Kossuth, Louis

Kossuth, Louis ⟨~, Lajos⟩ 1802–94. Hungarian revolutionary, one of the leading figures in the Hungarian Revolution of 1848. He led the republic of Hungary briefly (1849), but was forced to resign in the face of Russian and Austrian intervention.

Koster, Laurens Janszoon ⟨Coster, Laurens Janszoon⟩ *c*1370–*c*1440. Dutch sexton, credited by some as being the inventor of printing with movable type. The controversy over whether he or J. Gutenberg first used movable type continues.

Kosygin, Aleksey Nikolayevich 1904–80. Russian statesman who succeeded N. Khrushchev as premier (1964–80). He joined the Communist party in 1927 and held various government positions under J. Stalin and Khrushchev. He played a major role in Soviet economic planning. As premier, he shared power with L. Brezhnev for a time but was gradually overshadowed.

Kowait See Kuwait

Krebs, Sir Hans Adolf 1900–. German-born English biochemist. With F. A. Lipmann, he received the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine in 1953 for his studies of the metabolic reaction process known as the citric acid, or Krebs, cycle.

Kremer, Gerhard See Mercator, Gerardus

Kremlin Triangular citadel in Moscow, once a fortress and now the seat of the government of the USSR. Originally constructed in 1156 and modified considerably thereafter, the Kremlin is surrounded by a wall topped by twenty towers. Inside are numerous buildings that were once cathedrals, armories, and palaces, now used for government purposes. The center of czarist government until 1712, when Peter the Great made St. Petersburg capital, it became the seat of the revolutionary government in 1918. Within the Kremlin walls is the famous Great Bell (Czar Bell), the world's largest. Red Square is located on the east side of the Kremlin.

Kreuger, Ivar 1880–1932. Swedish financier who attempted to build a world monopoly of the production of matches. The worldwide Great Depression caused his speculative venture to fail, and he committed suicide.

Kreutzer, Rodolphe 1766–1831. French composer and violinist noted for his 40 études for the violin. L. Beethoven dedicated his Kreutzer Sonata to him.

Krishna One of the leading Hindu divinities, the eighth incarnation of Vishnu.

Krishnamurti, Jiddu 1895–. Indian religious philosopher. With Annie Besant, he founded the World Order of the Star, in which he was proclaimed the incarnation of the messianic Buddha. He renounced the claim and dissolved the order. Since 1969 he has headed the Krishnamurti Foundation.

Kroeber, Alfred Louis 1876–1960. American anthropologist and authority on the Indians of southwestern US, Mexico, and Peru. His work is a major contribution to modern anthropology.

Kronos See Cronus

Kronstadt Rebellion Russian revolt (Mar., 1921), the first major revolt against Bolshevik rule after the Russian civil war. Headed by sailors from the Kronstadt naval base near Leningrad, it sought measures to ease the economic hardships caused by the civil war and Bolshevik rule. Though suppressed, it led to the institution of the New Economic Policy.

Kropotkin, Peter Alekseyevich, Prince 1842–1921. Russian anarchist and author, a leading figure in the development of anarchist theory.

Krüdener, Barbara Juliane von, Baroness 1764–1824. Russian novelist and mystic who for a time had great influence over Czar Alexander I. She claimed to have inspired Alexander to conclude the Holy Alliance.

Kruger, Oom Paul See Kruger, Stephanus Johannes Paulus

Kruger, Stephanus Johannes Paulus ⟨Kruger, Oom Paul⟩ 1825–1904. South African statesman. Leader of the Transvaal independence movement, he served as president of the Transvaal (1883–1900) until the Boer defeat in the Boer War.

Kruger telegram Communication (Jan. 3, 1896) from German kaiser William II to Paulus Kruger, president of the Transvaal Republic, congratulating him on his victory over the British in the Jameson Raid (q.v.). The telegram greatly angered the British people.

Krupp, Alfred 1812–87. German steel magnate. He introduced modern production methods to Germany and manufactured heavy guns for Prussia in the Franco-Prussian War.

Krupp, Alfred Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach 1907–67. German industrialist, son of G. Krupp. During WW II, he employed concentration-camp victims as slave labor in Krupp factories, and confiscated property in the Nazi-occupied nations. He was imprisoned after the war (1948–51).

Krupp, Friedrich 1787–1826. German steel manufacturer. He founded the steel works at Essen (*c*1810) which later grew into the massive Krupp armaments and munitions empire.

Krupp, Friedrich Albert (Fritz) 1854–1902. German industrialist, son of A. Krupp. He greatly expanded the scope of Krupp interests.

Krupp, Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach 1870–1950. German industrialist. He adopted the name Krupp upon his marriage to Bertha Krupp, daughter of F. Krupp. He made Krupp the leading armaments manufacturer during WW I, supported the rise of A. Hitler, and helped Germany to rearm for WW II.

Krutch, Joseph Wood 1893–1970. American author and critic, noted for his drama criticism and for his writing on nature.

Krylov, Ivan Andreyevich 1768–1844. Russian fabulist. His fables in verse satirized contemporary Russian figures and attitudes and have had a lasting influence on Russian culture.

Kshatriya caste See caste system

Kuala Lumpur Capital and largest city (pop. 452,000) of Malaysia. It was founded (1857) as a mining town by the Chinese, who constitute the majority of the city's population. It became the capital of the Federated Malay States (1895) and of independent Malaya (1957).

Kuan Ti Chinese god of war. Originally a Chinese scholar, who was executed in the 3d cent. AD, he was later deified as the god of war and became a favorite deity of the Chinese people.

Kublai Khan *c*1215–94. Mongol emperor (1260–90), successor to his brother Mangu Khan, and grandson of Genghis Khan. He was founder of the Mongol Yüan dynasty in China. Following his election as emperor, he attacked northern China, and thus completed (1279) Mongol conquest (and reunification) of China. With his capital at Khanbalik, or Cambuluc (modern Peking), he ruled China and nominally controlled a vast Mongol empire that stretched across Asia. His military expeditions against Korea and Burma were successful, but he failed in his attacks on Japan (1274–81) and Java (1293). He was a great builder, and the splendor of his court was recorded by M. Polo.

Kuchuk Kainarji, Treaty of Treaty (July 21, 1774) between Russia and the Ottoman Empire, ending the Russo-Turkish War of 1768–74. The treaty gave Russia Black Sea ports in the Crimea, opened Turkish waters to Russian ships, and gave Russia rights to represent Christians within the Ottoman Empire. The latter provision allowed Russia to proclaim itself protector of orthodox Christians there and facilitated the eventual takeover of Ottoman territories. In addition to ceding Crimean territories to Russia, the treaty made the Ottoman khanate of Crimea independent, and restored Walachia and Moldavia to the Ottomans.

Kufah ⟨Al-Kufa⟩ Former Arab city located south of Baghdad. Founded (638) by Caliph Omar I, it became seat of the Abbasid caliphate for a time (8th cent.) and rose to become a major seat of Muslim culture. Repeatedly attacked from the 10th cent. on, it had practically disappeared by the 14th cent.

Kukai ⟨Kobo-Daishi⟩ 774–835. Japanese Buddhist priest and scholar. Kukai evolved the "True Word" Buddhist philosophy. He is credited with inventing the style in which Japanese is written.

Ku Klux Klan Secret terrorist organization formed (1867) in the US South to oppose Reconstruction and maintain white supremacy. The Klan originated in Tennessee under the leadership of Gen. N. Forrest and later was responsible for attacks on blacks and carpetbaggers. Forrest disbanded the Klan (1869), and the Force Bill (1870, 1871) effectively suppressed it. Reformed (1915) by William J. Simmons, the new Klan promoted anti-Catholic, anti-Semitic and white supremacist views and after WW I rose to power in many states, including those outside the South. The Klan declined (after 1925) and died out during the Depression. Revived again (1960s) under Robert Shelton, the Klan carried out attacks on civil rights workers in the South.

Kulikovo, Battle of Russian victory (Sept. 8, 1380) over forces of the Golden Horde. Though the Tatars later reconquered the Russians, the battle marked the turning point in the struggle against Tatar domination (from 1240). The Russians, led by Dmitri Ivanovich, prince of Moscow, met the Tatars, led by Mamay, leader of the western part of the Golden Horde, at Kulikovo, on the upper Don River. There were great losses on both sides, but the Tatars were forced to retreat, and did not return until 1382.

Kulturkampf German Chancellor O. Bismarck's struggle (1871–83) to assert government control over the Roman Catholic church. Precipitated by the declaration (1870) of papal infallibility (which expanded papal powers at the expense of secular leaders), conflict between the church and state governments broke out in Germany and other European countries. In Germany, Bismarck had, by 1872, taken steps to limit Catholic influence, including expulsion of the Jesuits. He instituted the May, or Falk, Laws (May, 1873), which further limited church powers, and then mandated (1875) civil marriage services. Resistance by German clergymen and the Catholic Center party's 1878 election victory forced Bismarck to moderate. Some years after the death of Pope Pius IX (1878), he reached an accommodation with Pope Leo XIII.

Kun, Béla 1886–*c*1939. Hungarian Communist leader who briefly headed a Soviet republic in Hungary (1919). Later a leader of the Comintern, he became a victim of the Stalinist purges of the 1930s.

Kunersdorf, Battle of Austro-Russian victory (Aug. 12, 1759) over Prussia during the Seven Years' War, at Kunersdorf, Poland. The battle left the Prussian army of Frederick the Great in complete disarray, but the allies failed to follow up their victory.

Kuomintang ⟨KMT⟩ Chinese nationalist political party, the ruling party in China from 1928 to 1949. Following the Communist takeover (1949) on the mainland, the KMT formed the opposition government in Taiwan. Organized (1912) as a political party after the Chinese Revolution of 1911, it was led by Sun Yat-sen and called for parliamentary government. Banned (1913), the party organized (1917–23) opposition governments under Sun and then joined (1923) with the Chinese Communist party (CCP). The KMT launched (1926) the Northern Expedition and, by 1928, after breaking with the CCP (1927), took control of the government. Civil war between the Nationalists and the Communists raged almost continuously thereafter until the CCP expelled the KMT in 1949.

Kurdistan Mountain region including parts of Iran, Iraq, Syria, Turkey, and Soviet Armenia. Inhabited primarily by Kurds, it has been conquered successively by the Arabs, Seljuk Turks, Mongols, and Ottoman Turks. After WW I, the region was taken from Ottoman rule, and the Treaty of Sèvres (1920) called for establishment of a new Kurdish state. The Treaty of Lausanne (1923), which superseded the Treaty of Sèvres, made no such provision, and the region has since been the site of several Kurdish revolts.

Kurds See Kurdistan

Kuropatkin, Aleksey Nikolayevich 1848–1925. Russian general. He fought in the Russo-Turkish War of 1877–78, served as minister of war (1898), and unsuccessfully commanded Russian troops in Manchuria (1904–5) in the Russo-Japanese War.

Kusana ⟨Kushana⟩ ⟨Kushan⟩ Descendants of the Yüeh-chi, who established a ruling dynasty over much of northern India, Afghanistan, and territories to the north from AD *c*78–220. They declined at about the time of the rise of the Sassanidae.

Kushan See Kusana

Kushana See Kusana

Kutuzov, Mikhail Ilarionovich 1745–1813. Russian field marshal who commanded Russian forces during Napoleon's invasion of Russia (1812–13). He fought the French at Borodino, and defeated Napoleon through a policy of retreat and minor engagement.

Kuwait ⟨Kowait⟩ Independent Arab emirate, at the head of the Persian Gulf between Saudi Arabia and Iraq. Originally settled (18th cent.) by Arab tribes, Kuwait passed under nominal Ottoman rule (late 18th to early 19th cent.). By agreement with the sheik of Kuwait (Jan. 23, 1899), it became a British protectorate, remaining so until its independence (June, 1961). Oil was discovered in Kuwait (1938), and the emirate has since become a major exporter of oil. Its ruling family, in power since the 18th cent., governs through a constitutional monarchy. Kuwait had the world's highest per capita income in 1981.

Kwang Hsu 1872–1908. Emperor of China (1875–1908), successor to his aunt, Tz'u Hsi. After assuming authority (1889), he issued several edicts to institute reform in China during the "hundred days of reform." His aunt soon resumed the regency, ending Kwang's rule.

Kyd Thomas ⟨Kid, Thomas⟩ 1558–94. English dramatist, whose play The Spanish Tragedy was the model for the Elizabethan revenge tragedy. He may also have written an earlier version of Hamlet.

Kyongsong See Seoul

Kyoto ⟨Kioto⟩ Japanese city (pop. 1,465,000). Founded (794) as Heian-kyo and made capital of Japan, it was the imperial residence until 1868, when Tokyo became the capital. It is a major center of Japanese art and culture.

L

labor unions Organizations of workers for improvement of pay, benefits, and working conditions. Unions are the chief manifestation of the labor movement, which rose in response to the new economic and social order brought about by the Industrial Revolution. Early unions in Europe date from the 18th cent. and were at first suppressed by law. During the 19th cent., unions generally won legal recognition and greatly increased their memberships. In 1901, the first international labor union federation, what became known as the International Federation of Trade Unions (IFTU), was formed by the Second Socialist International. By 1919, the IFTU included about half the world's union members, but splits caused by formation of a separate Communist union federation (1921) and internal disputes resulted in the breakup of the IFTU (1945). It was replaced (1945) by the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU), with Communist unions participating. By 1949, however, the WFTU split along Communist/non-Communist lines, and in that year the non-Communist unions organized the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU). Since then, both the ICFTU and WFTU have been active in promoting union growth in underdeveloped countries. In the US, the union movement began in earnest with formation of the first national federation of unions, the National Labor Union (1866–72), which was followed by the Knights of Labor (1869–1917) and the American Federation of Labor (1886–). The late 1800s saw a period of major strikes and attempts to suppress unions by violent means. The early 1900s were marked by the activities of the militant Industrial Workers of the World (IWW). Nevertheless union membership steadily increased and important benefits were won. The New Deal legislation of the Depression years included many acts favoring both labor and unions. A longstanding division in the US labor movement, the rivalry between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, was ended (1955) by a merger in which the AFL-CIO was formed.

Labour party British political party, founded (1900) by a coalition of trade unions with participation by members of the Fabian Society (q.v.). Though openly committed to Socialist ideals since 1918, the party has traditionally favored specific legislative programs over ideology. The party formed its first government (1922–24) under R. MacDonald, who again led the government (1929–31). The Labour party joined the coalition government under W. Churchill during WW II and, after a major victory at the polls in 1945, formed the government of C. Attlee (1945–51). During Attlee's ministry, major Socialist programs were enacted, including nationalization of railroads, banks, mines, and utilities, and establishment of a national health plan. Ousted by the Conservatives, the Labour party returned to power under H. Wilson (1964–70, 1974–76) and under J. Callaghan (1976–79).

Labrador Largely unpopulated peninsular region in northeastern Canada. It was explored by Norsemen and rediscovered by J. Cabot (1497).

La Bruyère, Jean de 1645–96. French writer, known for his moralistic work Les Caractères ou les moeurs de ce siècle (1688), considered a classic of French literature.

Lacedaemon See Laconia

La Chaise, François d'Aix de 1624–1709. French Jesuit priest. From 1675 until his death he was the confessor of Louis XIV and wielded great influence.

Laclede, Pierre *c*1724–78. French fur trader and pioneer in America. The trading post and village he founded along the Mississippi (1764) became St. Louis, Missouri.

Laconia ⟨Lacedaemon⟩ In ancient Greek geography, a region in the southern Peloponnesus. Its capital and chief city was Sparta, which was for years involved in a struggle with Athens for leadership in Greece.

Ladd, William 1778–1841. American pacifist, writer, and crusader for international peace. He founded the American Peace Society (1828) and popularized its cause through many writings.

Ladies' Peace See Cambrai, Treaty of

Ladislaus ⟨Lancelot⟩ *c*1379–1414. King of Naples (1386–1414), successor to his father, Charles III of Anjou. He warred (1387–99) against his rival for the throne, Louis II, and sacked Rome (1413).

Ladislaus I 1040–95. King of Hungary (1077–95). One of Hungary's national heroes, he defended the country against the Poles, Russians, and Tatars and conquered Croatia. He was canonized as a Catholic saint.

Ladislaus I 1260–1333. Duke (1306–20) and king (1320–33) of Poland. He restored the Polish kingdom, which had been divided (1305–12). He took Danzig as the ally of the Teutonic Knights but later fought and won a six-year war against the order.

Ladislaus II ⟨~ Jagiello⟩ 1350?–1434. King of Poland (1386–1434). Ladislaus, grand duke of Lithuania, married the Polish queen Jadwiga, became king, and thereby founded the Jagiello dynasty. During his reign, he warred against the Teutonic Knights and, by his victories (notably the Battle of Tannenberg, 1410), made Poland a great power.

Ladislaus III 1424–44. King of Poland (1434–44) and of Hungary (as Ladislaus V, 1440–44). He led two crusades against the Turks. The first won him Walachia (1443). He was killed in battle at Varna (in Bulgaria) during the second.

Ladislaus V ⟨Ladislaus Posthumus⟩ 1440–57. King of Hungary (1444–57) and Bohemia (1453–57). Prevented from leaving the court of his guardian, Holy Roman Emperor Frederick III, until 1452, he was then unable to wrest power from his regents, J. Hunyadi (Hungary) and George of Podebrad (Bohemia).

Ladislaus Jagiello See Ladislaus II

Ladislaus Posthumus See Ladislaus V

Lady of the Lake In Arthurian legend, an enchantress who lived in a castle in an underwater kingdom. She gave the sword Excalibur to Arthur, kidnapped Sir Launcelot as a youth and brought him up.

Laënnec, René Théophile Hyacinthe 1781–1826. French physician. He invented the stethoscope and made major contributions to the diagnosis of chest diseases.

Laertes In Greek legend, the king of Ithaca and father of Odysseus. He was one of the Argonauts.

La Farge, John 1835–1910. American artist, noted for his murals and stained-glass windows, many of which were executed for churches and chapels.

Lafayette, Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert du Motier, marquis de ⟨La Fayette, ~⟩ 1757–1834. French soldier and political leader, a hero of the American Revolution and the early French Revolution. A volunteer general in the American Revolution, he distinguished himself at the battles of Brandywine (1777) and Yorktown (1780) and convinced the French to aid the American cause. During the French Revolution, he was a prominent member of the bourgeois faction; served in the Assembly of Notables (1787), the States-General (1789) the National Assembly (vice-president, 1789); and drafted the Declaration of the Rights of Man (1789). He fell from prominence when, frightened by the growing extremism of the revolution, he ordered the Paris National Guard to fire on a mob (July 17, 1791). Under threat of trial for his opposition to radical republicanism, he defected (1792) to Austria. Returned to France (1799) by Napoleon, he lived quietly until the July Revolution (1830), when he helped install King Louis Philippe.

Laffite, Jean ⟨Lafitte, ~⟩ *c*1780–1826? French privateer and smuggler. He and his men helped the Americans defeat the British in the Battle of New Orleans (1815), during the War of 1812.

Lafitte, Jean See Laffite, Jean

La Follette, Robert Marion 1855–1925. American politician, US senator (1906–25), and a leader of the Progressive party. He was the unsuccessful Progressive candidate for president in 1924.

La Fontaine, Jean de 1621–95. French poet, author of Fables choises, mises en vers (1668–94), consisting of more than 200 fables in verse and considered a literary masterpiece.

LaFontaine, Sir Louis Hippolyte 1807–64. Canadian statesman who served as joint prime minister with R. Baldwin of a united province of Canada (1842–43, 1848–51). Their ministries introduced reforms and established responsible parliamentary government in Canada.

Lagash ⟨Shirpurla⟩ Ancient city in Sumeria, located in southern Mesopotamia between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Inhabited as early as the 6th millennium BC, the city rose to importance in the 3d millennium BC and was conquered by the Akkadian ruler, Sargon, during this period.

Lagos, Battle of Naval battle (Aug. 7–18, 1759) of the Seven Years' War. A British fleet under Admiral Edward Boscawen (1711–61) defeated a French naval force off Lagos, Portugal, and thus headed off a major French invasion of England.

Lagrange, Joseph Louis, Comte 1736–1813. French mathematician, considered the leading mathematician of his day. His major work was Mécanique analytique, a mathematical analysis of mechanics.

La Hire ⟨pseud. of Vignoles, Etienne de⟩ *c*1390–*c*1443. French commander during the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453). He was a loyal companion of Joan of Arc and helped her defeat the English at Orléans and Patay. He continued in command during the decade following her death.

La Hogue, Battle of See Grand Alliance, War of the

Laibach, Congress of See Congress of Laibach

laissez-faire Economic theory popular during the 18th and 19th cents., which assumed an underlying natural order in economic systems. Thus, it was believed, individuals left to their own initiative (i.e., free from government regulation) would naturally produce the greatest good for themselves and society as a whole. The theory was advanced by the French Physiocrats (q.v.) (18th cent.) as a reaction against mercantilism (q.v.) and they emphasized the basic tenet of freedom from government regulation. A. Smith (the "invisible hand" of unregulated competition) and J. S. Mill became the leading exponents of the doctrine in Britain, where it appealed to the commercial interests of the Industrial Revolution. The laissez-faire doctrine was also applied to politics, in a more limited fashion. The doctrine was largely out of favor by the end of the 19th cent.

Lake Chudskoye, Battle of See Peipus, Battle of Lake

Lake Regullus, Battle of See Etruscans

Lally, Thomas Arthur, compte de French general, who led a French expeditionary force in India during the Seven Years' War. His forced surrender to the British at Pondicherry (Jan., 1761) marked the end of French power in India and led to his execution by French authorities for treason.

Lama A Tibetan Buddhist holy man. (See also Tibetan Buddhism.)

Lamar, Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus 1825–93. American statesman. He supported the Confederacy during the American Civil War (1861–65) and later served as congressman and senator from Mississippi (1873–75), as secretary of the interior (1885–88), and as associate justice of the Supreme Court (1888–93).

Lamarck, Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine de Monet, chevalier de 1744–1829. French biologist. He is known for his theory of evolution (proved incorrect by C. Darwin), which held that acquired characteristics are hereditary.

Lamartine, Alphonse Marie Louis de 1790–1869. French poet and politician. He is known best for his volume of poetry, Méditations poétiques, which influenced the Romantic movement.

Lamb, Charles 1775–1834. Great English essayist, poet, and critic. Among his noted works were Essays of Elia and (written with his sister Mary) the children's book Tales from Shakespeare.

Lambertini, Prospero See Benedict XIV

lame duck An officeholder who has failed to be reelected but who remains in office until his successor is sworn in. The Twentieth Amendment to the US Constitution (Jan. 23, 1933) abolished the former lame duck sessions of Congress by requiring a new Congress to convene on Jan. 3 after the November in which it was elected.

Lamennais, Felicité Robert de ⟨La Mannais, ~⟩ 1782–1854. French priest and liberal Catholic apologist. He promoted both papalism and Christian democracy in France. He broke with church authorities on doctrinal issues and died an unrepentant excommunicate.

Lamia In classical mythology, a female demon who murdered and devoured children after the goddess Hera murdered her children.

Lamian War ⟨Greek War⟩ War (323–322 BC) against Macedonian rule in Greece, fought after the death of Alexander the Great. Athens, at the head of a league of Greek city-states, waged war against the Macedonian general Antipater and succeeded in besieging him at the city of Lamia. The arrival of Macedonian reinforcements (322 BC) allowed Antipater to lift the siege and defeat Athens and its allies. He then imposed an oligarchical government (controlled by him) on Athens.

Lancaster English noble family founded (1267) by E. Lancaster, second son of Henry III. Lancastrian kings of England were Henry IV, Henry V, and Henry VI. Lancastrians warred against the Yorkists in the War of the Roses (q.v.).

Lancaster, Edmund, earl of ⟨Crouchback, Edmund⟩ 1245–96. Second son of Henry III of England, brother of Edward I. He held the title King of Sicily (1255–63), fought in the crusades (1271), and founded the House of Lancaster.

Lancaster, John of See John of Lancaster

Lancaster, Thomas, earl of *c*1277–1322. English nobleman, leader of the barons who opposed Edward II and his favorites, notably P. Gaveston and the Despensers. Though he gained great power under Edward for a time, he was eventually defeated and beheaded during warfare against the king.

Lancelot See also Ladislaus

Lancelot, Sir ⟨Launcelot⟩ Knight important in Arthurian legend. Kidnapped as a youth and raised by the Lady of the Lake, he became a knight of King Arthur's Round Table and lover of the king's wife, Guinevere. He was father of Sir Galahad.

Land, Edwin Herbert 1909–. American inventor and physicist, inventor of the Polaroid camera. He also devised range-fingers, night-sight lenses, and anti-aircraft sights for use in WW II.

Land Acts, Irish See Irish Land Acts

Landen, Pepin of See Carolingians

Land of Cockaigne ⟨Land of Cockayne⟩ Imaginary land in medieval lore, where idleness and gluttony prevailed.

Land of Nod Biblical place. Cain fled to this land east of Eden after killing his brother Abel.

Landon, Alfred Mossman 1887–. American politician. A banker and oil executive, Landon was governor of Kansas (1933–37). The Republican presidential candidate in 1936, he was soundly defeated by F. Roosevelt.

Landsmaal See Aasen, Ivar

Landsteiner, Karl 1868–1943. Viennese-born American pathologist. He won the Nobel Prize (1930) for his discovery of human blood types, and later identified the RH Factor (1940).

Lane, Sir Ralph *c*1530–1603. English adventurer and governor of the ill-fated Lost Colony (q.v.) in Roanoke, Virginia.

Lanfranc d. 1089. Italian priest who became archbishop of Canterbury (1070–89) during the reign of William I. He served as adviser to the king and crowned his successor, William II (1087).

Langdon, John 1741–1819. American Revolutionary War leader. He provided financial backing for the New Hampshire militia, and was president of New Hampshire (1785–86, 1788–89), a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, and US senator (1789–1801).

Langland, William *c*1330–1400. English author, believed to have written the allegorical poem The Vision of Piers Plowman. It is considered a classic of medieval literature.

Langtry, Lily See Bean, Roy

Lannes, Jean 1769–1809. French marshal. He served under Napoleon in the Italian (1796) and Egyptian (1798–99) campaigns, won an important victory at Montebello (1800), and was killed in the battle at Essling.

La Noche Triste See Alvarado, Pedro de

Lansdowne, Henry Charles Keith Petty-Fitzmaurice, 5th marquis of 1845–1927. British statesman. He was governor general of Canada (1883–88) and of India (1888–94), secretary of war (1895–1900) during the Boer War, and foreign secretary (1900–05).

Lansing US city (pop. 130,400), capital of Michigan, and a manufacturing center. It was settled *c*1837 and became capital in 1847.

Laocoön In Greek mythology, a priest of Apollo. During the Trojan War he warned the Trojans not to allow the wooden horse, left by the Greeks, into the city. But when he and his sons were strangled by serpents, the Trojans decided to ignore his admonition.

Lao Country See Pathet Lao

Laodicean War See Syrian War (third)

Lao-Dong ⟨Vietnam Workers party⟩ Vietnamese Communist party established in 1951 by Ho Chi Minh. It succeeded the Viet-Minh as the ruling political party of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

Laos ⟨Lao People's Democratic Republic⟩ Communist state located in Southeast Asia, on the northwest Indochina peninsula. Its capital is Vientiane. The people are believed to be descendants of the Thai. Long dominated by France, Laos was (after 1950) torn by a bitter struggle between the Western-backed royalists and the Communist-backed Pathet Lao. The Pathet Lao gained complete control in 1975.

MID-14TH CENT. Lan Xang kingdom founded by Fa Ngoun; Buddhism introduced.

17TH CENT. Lan Xang kingdom extended control over much of Indochina.

1707 Lan Xang kingdom divided into Luang Prabang and Vientiane kingdoms; constant warfare for next century.

19TH CENT. Siam dominated region.

19TH CENT. French arrived in region.

1893 Laos became French protectorate, incorporated into French Indochina.

1942–45 WW II; occupied by Japan; encouraged to declare independence from France under rule of king of Luang Prabang.

1946 France reestablished control; made king of Luang Prabang constitutional monarch.

1949 Laos granted semi-autonomous status within French Union.

1950 Nationalist, Communist Pathet Lao formed by Prince Souphanouvong to oppose French domination.

1953 Vietnamese Communist Viet Minh and Pathet Lao power established in north as French Indochina War spread to Laos.

1954–55 Geneva agreement gave northern provinces to Pathet Lao, remainder to royalists.

1954 Laos gained full sovereignty (Dec. 29).

1957 Prince Souvanna Phouma, royalist premier, and Pathet Lao leader Souphanouvong formed unified government.

1959–62 Civil war resumed, soon becoming conflict between Communists, neutralists, and pro-West factions; neutralist Souvanna Phouma driven into Cambodia.

1962 Geneva Conference arranged for unified coalition government under Souvanna Phouma.

1963 Renewed civil war with Pathet Lao, aided by North Vietnam.

1964 Right-wing military coup attempt against Souvanna Phouma.

FROM 1965 Vietnam War intensified; North Vietnamese established Ho Chi Minh Trail through eastern Laos and gradually increased troop strength there.

1970 Laotian government troops lost Plain de Jarres to North Vietnamese.

1970 CIA activity in Laos revealed.

1971 South Vietnamese troops backed by US air support invaded Laos (Jan.-Mar.) as Vietnam War spread to region.

1971 North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces advanced against government positions.

1973 Pathet Lao and Souvanna Phouma concluded (Feb. 21) peace agreement.

1973 Government and Pathet Lao reached (July 29) general agreement on political and military settlement.

1973 Right-wing military coup put down (Aug.).

1974 Coalition government formed with Pathet Lao; Souvanna Phouma remained as premier, Souphanouvong as president of National Political Council.

1975 Pathet Lao abolished coalition government and monarchy (Dec. 2).

1975– President Souphanouvong in power in new government.

1979 Vietnamese and Laotian forces invaded Cambodia from Laos and overthrew Pol Pot regime.

Lao-tze ⟨Lao-tzu⟩ *c*604–531 BC. Chinese classical philosopher. The reputed founder of Taoism (q.v.), he preached conformity to the Tao, or eternal spirit of right conduct, and is considered one of the great figures of Chinese history.

Lao-tzu See Lao-tze

La Pérouse, Jean François de Galup, comte de 1741–c1788. French navigator. He explored the Pacific islands while searching for the Northwest Passage and discovered La Pérouse Strait (1787).

Laplace, Pierre Simon, marquis de 1749–1827. French astronomer and mathematician. He made important discoveries concerning planetary motions.

Lapland North European region that lies almost entirely within the Arctic Circle and is divided between Norway, Sweden, Finland, and Russia. Its indigenous inhabitants, the Laplanders, are nomadic.

Lapse, Doctrine of See Doctrine of Lapse

Lapua movement Fascist organization (1929–32) in Finland. Strongly opposed to Russia and communism, the group rose to power briefly and forced a government ban on the Communist party. However, an attempt (1932) to overthrow the government, led by Gen. Kurt M. Wallenius, miscarried and resulted in a ban on the Lapua movement.

Lardner, Ringgold Wilmer ⟨~, Ring⟩ 1885–1933. American writer. He was known for his humorous short stories about ordinary people. His works include You Know Me, Al and How to Write Short Stories.

Lares and Penates Ancient Roman deities, worshiped at the crossroads and in the household. The Lar originally was a god of the field. He later evolved into a household god as well and was worshiped, with the Penates, or household gods, as protectors of the home.

Largo Caballero, Francisco 1869–1946. Spanish Socialist leader whose radical polemics helped bring on the Spanish Civil War (1936–39). He served briefly as prime minister and war minister (1936–37) before being ousted by the Communists.

La Rochefoucauld, François, duc de 1613–80. French writer famous as the author of maxims, such as those collected in Réflexions ou sentences et maximes morales.

Larousse, Pierre Athanase 1817–75. French grammarian, lexicographer, and encyclopedist, who compiled a number of the leading reference works of 19th-cent. France, including the Grand Dictionnaire universel du XIX siècle.

Larsa Ancient city of Babylonia, near what is now Uruk, Iraq. It is mentioned in the Bible (Genesis) and flourished under the Elamites from *c*2000 BC to 1760 BC.

Lars Porsena ⟨Lars Porsenna⟩ Legendary Etruscan king of Clusium who conquered Rome (6th cent. BC).

Lars Porsenna See Lars Porsena

La Salle, Robert Cavelier, sieur de 1643–87. French explorer in North America. He claimed the Mississippi Valley region for France (1682) and named it Louisiana.

Lascaris, Theodore See Nicaea, Empire of

Las Casas, Bartolomé de 1474–1566. Spanish missionary and historian. He worked to improve the treatment of South American Indians by the Spanish, helped bring about the New Laws (1542), and wrote the Historia de las Indias.

Lassalle, Ferdinand 1825–64. German Socialist and labor leader. He participated in the revolution of 1848 and was a founder of the German Social Democratic party.

Lasso, Orlando di ⟨orig. Roland Delattre⟩ *c*1530–94. Belgian composer. He is considered one of the greatest Renaissance composers and is especially noted for his motets. As a youth he was kidnapped three times for choirs because his voice was so beautiful.

Last Supper In the Bible, the last meal taken by Jesus and his disciples before his arrest and crucifixion. Jesus there established the sacrament of the Eucharist and told of the future betrayal by one of them (Judas Iscariot).

La Téne culture See Celts

Lateran Name of a complex of church buildings in southeastern Rome, built on land donated to the Catholic church by Emperor Constantine. Among them are the Basilica of St. John Lateran, the cathedral church of Rome, and the Lateran Palace (16th cent.)

Lateran Councils Councils of the Roman Catholic church at Rome. 1. First (9th ecumenical): Convened by Pope Calixtus II (1123), it reaffirmed decisions of the Concordat of Worms (q.v.) regarding the Investiture Controversy (q.v.). It was the first church council convened in the West. 2. Second (10th ecumenical): Convened (1139) by Pope Innocent II, it ended the schism created by election of antipope Anacletus II (reigned 1130–38), condemned the teachings of Arnold of Brescia, and forbade marriage by monks, nuns, and other clerics. 3. Third (11th ecumenical): Convened (1179) by Pope Alexander III, it came after restoration of peace between the pope and Holy Roman Emperor Frederick I. The council ordered that the pope be elected solely by the college of cardinals (by a two-thirds majority) and proclaimed the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.). 4. Fourth (12th ecumenical): Convened (1215) by Pope Innocent III, it is considered one of the great councils. It instituted many lasting organizational and procedural reforms, proclaimed the crusades (q.v.) to recover the Holy Land, defined the doctrine of transubstantiation, and established the Easter Duty. 5. Fifth (18th ecumenical): Held (1512–17) under popes Julius II and Leo X, the council opposed attempts to revive conciliarism (q.v.) and issued the Concordat of 1516, providing for a settlement of disputes between the pope and French king Louis XII.

Lateran Synod Roman Catholic synod (1059) that established the procedure by which the pope was to be elected. It called for election by a college of cardinals, thus eliminating the powers of both the Holy Roman Emperor and the Roman clergy in the selection of popes.

Lateran Treaty Agreement (Feb. 11, 1929) between Italy and the papacy, settling the Roman Question. During the unification of Italy (Risorgimento), the kingdom of Italy seized control of the Papal States and the city of Rome (1860, 1870). The new government offered (Law of Guarantees, 1871) the pope compensation for the territories taken and rights to the Vatican and Lateran. But the pope refused and thus created the Roman Question. Negotiations began in 1926 and the final agreement was signed by B. Mussolini, for King Victor Emmanuel III, and Cardinal P. Gaspari, for Pope Pius XI. It provided for creation of Vatican City as an independent state, establishment of Roman Catholicism as the state religion in Italy, and a large financial compensation to the church for loss of the Papal States.

later Le dynasty Vietnamese dynasty (1428–1788). During its existence the kingdom of Annam (q.v.) gained its independence from China and greatly increased its territorial control.

Lathyrus, Ptolemy VIII See Ptolemy VIII

Latimer, Hugh *c*1485–1555. English Protestant martyr. He supported King Henry VIII in his divorce from Catherine of Aragon, then opposed by the Roman Catholic church, and actively preached the Reformation. Under Catholic Mary Tudor, however, he was convicted of heresy and burned at the stake.

Latin America Term used to refer to the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking countries south of the southwest border of the US, including Mexico and the nations of Central America and South America. (See individual countries.)

Latin Empire of Constantinople Feudal empire centered at Constantinople (1204–61). It was established by leaders of the Fourth Crusade (q.v.), after they captured the Byzantine capital of Constantinople (1204) and divided various Byzantine lands among themselves and their Venetian bankers. Viewed as a Western intrusion, in Eastern lands, it began to decline soon after its creation. The empire suffered the hostility of the local population, incursions of the Bulgars and Turks, and resistance by the Byzantine emperors, who retired across the Bosporus to form the empire of Nicaea. The empire lapsed after Byzantine emperor Michael VIII retook Constantinople in 1261. However, some Greek islands remained in Venetian hands, Athens passed under Catalan rule, and part of mainland Greece remained in the Frankish Villehardouin family for a longer period.

Latin Fathers See Fathers of the Church

Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem Kingdom established (1099) in Palestine and Syria by leaders of the First Crusade (q.v.). A feudal kingdom, it included the cities of Jerusalem, Acre, and Tyre and controlled Antioch, Edessa, and Tripoli. Among its rulers were Baldwin I, Baldwin II, Fulk, Amalric I, and Baldwin V. Subsequent crusades were unsuccessful against the Muslims, and Jerusalem fell (1187) to Saladin. Thereafter Muslim armies made further conquests and expelled the last Christian forces from the region by the capture (1291) of Acre. Although the kingdom itself ceased to exist in fact, the title "King of Jerusalem" continued in use for centuries.

Latins Ancient people that inhabited Latium, a plain in what is now central Italy. Romans were Latins and Rome was one of the early Latin cities established in the region (as were Alba Longa, Tusculum, and others). The cities formed confederations to resist the Etruscans and Samnites (Samnite Wars, q.v.,) and Rome gradually emerged as the dominant power. Rome established complete control by her victory in the Latin War (340–338 BC).

Latin Wars Wars (340–338 BC) in which a number of Italian cities sought equality with Rome. With their defeat by Rome, some of these states were made into colonies, others into states dependent upon Rome, and others ceded land for settlement by the Romans.

La Tremoille, Louis de la See Novara, Battles of Latrobe, Benjamin Henry 1764–1820. American architect. He introduced the Greek Revival style in America and directed the rebuilding of the Capitol after it was burned by the British in 1814.

Latter-Day Saints, Church of Jesus Christ of See Mormons

Lattimore, Owen 1900–. American Orientalist and writer. He spent many years overseas in China and served as the US political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek. He was unjustly charged (1950) by Senator J. McCarthy with being a major Communist spy in the US and was not completely cleared until 1955.

Latvia Historic region and constituent republic of Russia, located along the Baltic Sea. Taken by the Livonian Brothers of the Sword (13th cent.), the area was subsequently divided and controlled variously by Poland, Sweden, and Russia. Latvia became an independent state (1918) during the Baltic Wars of Liberation, but by 1940 it had been annexed by Russia.

Laud, William 1573–1645. Archbishop of Canterbury (1633–45). He persecuted the Puritans and Calvinists and supported Charles I in his conflict with Parliament. Impeached by the Long Parliament (1640), he was beheaded.

Lauderdale, John Maitland, duke of 1616–82. Scottish statesman. As secretary of state for Scotland and member of the Cabal (q.v.) ministry, he was notorious for his harsh rule in Scotland.

Laudon, Gideon Ernst Freiherr von ⟨Loudon, ~⟩ 1717–90. Austrian field marshal. He fought in the service of the Hapsburgs and distinguished himself in the War of Austrian Succession, the Seven Years' War, and the Austro-Turkish War.

Lancelot, Sir See Launcelot, Sir

Laura de Noves 1308?–40. Woman believed to be the inspiration for Petrarch's love poems.

Laurens, Henry 1724–92. American statesman, president of the Continental Congress (1777–78). He was captured (1780) by the British while taking a proposed treaty to The Netherlands. The treaty later precipitated war between England and The Netherlands.

Laurier, Sir Wilfrid 1841–1919. Canadian statesman and first French-Canadian prime minister (1896–1911). A leader of the Liberal party, he worked to develop the Canadian west.

Lausanne, Conference of See Conference of Lausanne

Lausanne, Treaty of 1. Treaty (Oct. 18, 1912) concluding the Italo-Turkish War. The treaty called for Turkey's withdrawal from Tripoli. 2. Treaty (July 24, 1923) that formally ended hostilities of the Greco-Turkish War (1920–22) and modified terms of the Treaty of Sèvres (q.v.). By it Turkey regained control of the Dardanelles, eastern Thrace, and other territories, including Smyrna.

Laval, François Xavier de ⟨Laval-Montmorency, François Xavier⟩ 1623?–1708. French cleric, the first Catholic bishop in Canada. He founded the seminary of Quebec (1663), which became Laval University.

Laval, Pierre 1883–1945. French politician. As premier of the Vichy government during WW II (1942–44), he instituted forced labor and other harsh measures in France. He was executed for treason after the war.

Lavalleja, Juan Antonio *c*1786–1853. Uruguayan revolutionary. He led a group, known as the Thirty-three Immortals, and declared Uruguayan independence from Brazil (1825). He later led the Blancos party in Uruguay.

Laval-Montmorency, François Xavier See Laval, François Xavier de

Laveran, Charles Louis Alphonse 1845–1922. French physician. He discovered the parasite that causes malaria (1880). Awarded Nobel Prize (Physiology and Medicine) in 1907.

Lavoisier, Antoine Laurent 1743–94. French chemist. He explained the role of oxygen in combustion and thereby disproved the phlogiston theory.

Law, Andrew Bonar 1858–1923. British statesman. He succeeded A. Balfour as Conservative party leader in the House of Commons (1911–15), where he opposed Irish Home Rule. He became prime minister (1922–23).

Law, John 1671–1729. Scottish financier. He organized the ill-fated Mississippi Scheme (q.v.) in France for the exploitation of Louisiana colonies.

Law of Guarantees Italian law (May 13, 1871) that attempted to establish the relationship between the Italian government and the papacy. It guaranteed religious and diplomatic freedom to the papacy, and established an annual income for the pope, but did not restore papal authority to the territories that had been incorporated into Italy during unification. Pope Pius IX did not accept it, and relations between Italy and the papacy were not formalized until signing of the Lateran Treaty of 1929.

Lawrence, Abbott 1792–1855. US manufacturer and politician. He was a founder of the textile city Lawrence, Massachusetts, and was US minister to Great Britain (1849–52).

Lawrence, Amos Adams 1814–86. American philanthropist. He supported abolitionist movements and contributed to the establishment of a college in Lawrence, Kansas, that became the University of Kansas.

Lawrence, Charles 1709–60. British general and governor of Nova Scotia (1756–60). He was largely responsible for the deportation of French colonials from Acadia (in Canada) after the British took over this French colony.

Lawrence, David Herbert 1885–1930. British author. Lawrence was one of the most influential writers in the 20th cent. His work includes the novels Sons and Lovers, Women in Love, The Rainbow, and Lady Chatterley's Lover.

Lawrence, Ernest Orlando 1901–58. American physicist. Lawrence invented the cyclotron. He also introduced the use of neutron beams in cancer treatment and patented a color television tube. Awarded Nobel Prize in physics 1939.

Lawrence, James 1781–1813. American naval officer. He commanded the Hornet and the Chesapeake (q.v.) during the War of 1812. It was aboard the latter that he uttered his famous cry "Don't give up the ship!"

Lawrence, Sir Thomas 1769–1830. English painter, the leading portrait painter of his day. Among his works is the noted portrait of Queen Charlotte.

Lawrence, Thomas Edward ⟨Lawrence of Arabia⟩ 1888–1935. English soldier and author. During WW I, he led the Arab troops of Faisal I in revolt against the Turks and described his adventures in The Seven Pillars of Wisdom (1926).

Lawrence of Arabia See Lawrence, Thomas Edward

Laxness, Halldór Kiljan 1902–. Icelandic novelist. His works include The Weaver of Cashmere and Independent People. He received the Nobel Prize in literature in 1955.

Layamon *fl. c*1200. Middle English poet whose work, Brut, makes the first mention in English of the Arthurian legend and introduced Lear, Cymbeline, and Merlin.

lay investiture See investiture controversy

Lazarus In the Bible, the brother of Mary and Martha of Bethany. He was raised from the dead by Jesus after four days.

League See Catholic League

League of See under names inverted, as in Augsburg, League of

League of Augsburg, War of See Grand Alliance, War of

League of the Russian People See Black Hundreds

Leahy, William Daniel 1875–1959. American naval officer. He served in the Spanish-American War and in WW I. He became chief of staff under President F. Roosevelt (1942) and continued in that post under President H. Truman until 1949.

Leakey, Louis Seymour Bazett 1903–72. British archaeologist and anthropologist. He is noted for his controversial interpretations of extremely ancient humanoid fossils, which indicated that forerunners of man were much older than previously thought. His wife, Mary Leakey, discovered (1959) the noted Zinjanthropus fossil remains (believed 1,750,000 years old) in the Olduvai Gorge, Tanzania. Leakey subsequently discovered (1961) what he called a more direct ancestor of man, the Homo habilis.

Leander See Hero and Leander

Leaning Tower of Pisa Tower constructed (1174–1350) at Pisa, Italy. It leans about 17 feet from the perpendicular due to settling, and is a noted attraction for tourists. Numerous attempts have been made to halt the settling, which threatens to topple the structure.

Lear Legendary king of Britain. Geoffrey of Monmouth apparently adapted the story of Lear and his three daughters from Celtic mythology. W. Shakespeare made the story the basis of his tragedy King Lear.

Lebanese Crisis US intervention in a Lebanese civil war. US marines were landed in Lebanon by President D. Eisenhower (July, 1958), in pursuance of the Eisenhower Doctrine (q.v.), after opposition to the pro-Western government of C. Chamoun broke out into open rebellion. The marines helped to stabilize the situation. The crisis was resolved by the election of Gen. F. Chebab, who had refused to commit the Lebanese army to either side during the fighting.

Lebanese War See Lebanon (1982)

Lebanon ⟨Republic of Lebanon⟩ Country located in the Mideast and occupying the mountainous coastal region of the eastern Mediterranean. The Lebanese coast was originally the home of Phoenician traders and from the 6th cent. BC various powers had control of the region. Later the mountains of Lebanon offered refuge to religious groups seeking to escape persecution. The Maronite Christians arrived first (7th cent. AD) and were followed by the heretical Muslim sect, the Druses. Orthodox Muslims also arrived in the region. In modern times conflict between these diverse factions has resulted in instability and war. Traditional rivalries were further complicated in the 1970s as PLO guerrillas, Syrian troops, and UN peace-keeping forces occupied various parts of the country. Effective control of the country became virtually impossible. The Israelis finally crushed the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in Lebanon during the 1982 Lebanese War but many obstacles to the creation of a stable government remained. Key events in Lebanese history include:

c25TH–6TH CENT. BC Phoenicians controlled region; established cities in coastal region (modern Sidon, Tyre, Beirut, and others) which served as a base for their commercial empire.

6TH–4TH CENT. BC Persians took control of territory.

4TH–1ST CENT. BC Alexander the Great conquered the area (332 BC) and thereafter the area was controlled by successor states in the region.

64 BC Romans took control of area; Christianity later introduced.

5TH CENT. AD Byzantines maintained control over area after the collapse of the Western Roman Empire.

7TH CENT. AD Maronite Christians established themselves in the Lebanese mountains seeking refuge from persecution by the Byzantine emperor.

7TH CENT. Arab Muslim conquest; Maronites in mountain regions resisted Islam and thus began the historic split between Christians and Muslims in surrounding territories.

11TH CENT. Members of the Muslim Druse sect, fleeing Orthodox Muslim persecution, established an emirate in southern Lebanon.

16TH–20TH CENT. Ottoman Empire controlled region; Lebanon enjoyed considerable autonomy.

FROM 1516 Maronites in religious communion with the Catholic church in Rome.

1860 Druse massacre of Christians led to active French intervention.

1861–1914 Greater Lebanon, governed by a Christian, created by Ottomans; made relatively autonomous under Ottoman control.

1920 France given League of Nations mandates over Lebanon and Syria.

1926 Lebanese Republic organized by French as separate from Syria.

1941 Vichy forces ousted by Allies during WW II; Free French declared it independent (1941), though troops remained to 1946.

1943 Unwritten "National Compact" allotted Lebanese presidency to a Maronite Christian; prime minister to be a Sunni Muslim, assembly speaker a Shi'ite Muslim, foreign minister an Orthodox Christian, etc.

1945 Lebanon became a fully independent republic (Jan. 1).

1945 Became a member of the UN.

1945 Joined the Arab League.

1948–49 Arab-Israeli War; Lebanon joined in Arab attack on newly created Israeli state.

1952–58 C. Chamoun served as president; established relations with Western powers.

1958 US Marines landed in Lebanon (July) to halt civil war against pro-Western Maronite government of C. Chamoun; crisis ended with election of Gen. Fuad Chebab.

1958–64 Chebab in office as president; fostered closer relations with Arab states.

1962 Military coup attempt crushed.

1964–70 Charles Helou in office as president.

1967 Lebanon did not participate in Arab-Israeli War.

1969 Fighting broke out (Oct.) between Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) guerrillas and Lebanese troops.

1970–76 Suleiman Franjieh in office as president. PLO guerrillas, driven out of Jordan, established headquarters in Lebanon; tensions with Israel increased as PLO guerrillas launched attacks on Israelis.

1972 PLO guerrillas and Lebanese troops clashed.

1973 Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam resigned (Apr.) after Israelis raided PLO buildings in Beirut.

1973 Lebanon neutral in fourth Arab-Israeli War.

1975–76 Lebanese civil war pitted Muslims allied with Palestinians and PLO against the Phalangists, a military organization of the Maronites, which dominated the other Christian forces.

1976 Cease-fire agreement reached (Jan.) through Syrian involvement; Muslims gained greater voice in government.

1976 Elias Sarkis elected to presidency by parliament (May), after the ouster of Franjieh.

1976 15,000 Syrian troops entered Lebanon to help halt the civil war (May).

1976 Syrian troops occupied Beirut (Nov. 10) as part of Arab League plan to restore peace there.

1978 Israelis invaded southern border region (Mar.) to clear out PLO guerrilla strongholds there; turned over many strategic points to Christian militia as they withdrew to Israel.

1981 Fighting broke out (Apr. 2) in Beirut and surrounding area; Syrian troops involved in the fighting against Christian militia while Israeli jets attacked Syrians.

1981 Syrian antiaircraft missile emplacements moved into Bekáa Valley after Israeli air attacks.

1981 Downing of Israeli aircraft by Syrian antiaircraft missile led to Israeli demand to withdraw emplacements (May).

1981 Special envoy Philip C. Habib dispatched to Middle East by US President R. Reagan to arrange peaceful settlement.

1981 Israeli air raids conducted in Lebanon in retaliation for PLO attacks on Israel; US suspended shipment of aircraft to Israel (July 20).

1981 Cease-fire between Israelis and the PLO in Lebanon arranged by US special envoy P. Habib (July 24).

1981 Bomb explosions kill dozens in Sidon (Sept. 1) and in Beirut (Oct. 1).

1982 Lebanese War; major invasion of southern Lebanon by Israel began (June 6); Israelis said they would halt advance at 25 miles into Lebanon.

1982 Syrian antiaircraft missile sites in Bekáa Valley destroyed by Israeli air attacks.

1982 Israeli forces drive to within sight of Beirut (June 10); PLO trapped in Beirut between Israelis and Phalangists.

1982 Siege of Beirut (June–Aug.); Israelis gradually advanced to positions surrounding PLO-controlled west Beirut; began shelling and bombing of sector as neotiations with PLO and others were continued by US envoy P. Habib.

1982 PLO agreed in principle to evacuate Beirut; President Reagan declared end to violence was crucial (Aug. 2) as conditions in west Beirut worsened.

1982 Habib plan for evacuation accepted by Israel (Aug. 15); US, France, and Italy agreed to contribute troops to oversee evacuation of PLO forces, thus ending Israeli siege of Beirut (Aug. 19).

1982 Last PLO guerrillas evacuated from Beirut (Aug. 21–Sept. 1).

1982 President-elect Bashir Gemayel and other Christian Phalangists killed by terrorist bomb (Sept. 14).

1982 Beirut Massacre revealed (Sept.); hundreds of Palestinians massacred in refugee camp by Christian militiamen; Israeli occupation forces criticized for failing to prevent massacre.

1982 Amin Gemayel named president (Sept.).

Lebrun, Albert 1871–1950. French statesman, last president of the Third Republic (1931–40). He surrendered to Marshal H. Pétain, head of the pro-German Vichy government.

Le Brun, Charles 1619–90. French artist. Court painter to King Louis XIV (from 1662) and thereafter he dominated French art. He was director of the Gobelins, a company producing furnishings for French royalty, and designed much of the interior at Versailles, including the Galerie des Glaces.

Lechfeld, Battle of Decisive victory (Aug. 10, 955) over the Magyars by Otto I, German king (later emperor). The battle, which took place near Augsburg, Germany, put an end to the Magyars' westward expansion.

Leclerc, Charles Victor Emmanuel 1772–1802. French general, Napoleon's brother-in-law. He died of yellow fever contracted while putting down a revolt in Haiti led by P. Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Leclerc, Jacques Philippe 1902–47. French general during WW II. He led a force of Free French troops stationed in Equatorial Africa on a 1,500-mile march to join the British in Tripoli (1942–43). He was also a commander in the Normandy invasion.

Lecompton Constitution Proslavery constitution adopted (1857) by the Territory of Kansas prior to its admission as a state. S. Douglas led congressional opposition to acceptance of the constitution and admission of Kansas as a proslavery state. This forced a vote (1858) by inhabitants of Kansas, and the Lecompton Constitution was rejected. Kansas was admitted (1861) as a free state.

Leconte de Lisle, Charles See Parnassians

Le Corbusier ⟨pseud. of Jeanneret, Charles Édouard⟩ 1887–1965. Swiss-born French architect whose work helped revolutionize 20th-cent. architectural design. He pioneered the use of ferroconcrete and modular housing designs and was an advocate of artistic purism.

Leda In Greek mythology, the wife of Tyndareus, king of Sparta. She was mother of Castor and Pollux, Helen of Troy, and Clytemnestra. Legends vary as to the children's father, some accounts saying Ledo was seduced by Zeus.

Ledru-Rollin, Alexandre Auguste 1807–74. French politician. He took part in the Revolution of 1848 and advocated universal suffrage. After an unsuccessful insurrection against Louis Napoleon (1849), he fled to England.

Le dynasty, later See later Le dynasty

Lee, Ann 1736–84. English mystic. Called Mother Ann, she became a leader of the Shaking Quakers and introduced the Shaker sect to the US (1774) at Watervliet, New York.

Lee, Arthur 1740–92. American diplomat. In France with B. Franklin and S. Deane to obtain aid for the colonials during the American Revolution, he became involved in disputes with Deane and Franklin. Both Deane and Lee were eventually recalled.

Lee, Charles 1731–82. English-born American army officer during the American Revolution. As second-in-command to G. Washington, he constantly criticized and disobeyed him. He conspired with Lord Howe, prevented an American victory at Monmouth (1778), and was ousted in disgrace (1780).

Lee, Fitzhugh 1835–1905. Confederate general in the American Civil War, nephew of R. E. Lee. A cavalry commander, he figured in battles at Antietam, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg and in the Wilderness and Shenandoah Valley campaigns. He later became governor of Virginia (1886–90).

Lee, Francis Lightfoot 1734–97. American Revolutionary War leader. He was a delegate to the Continental Congress (1775–79) from Virginia and signed the Declaration of Independence.

Lee, Henry ⟨Lee, Light-Horse Harry⟩ 1756–1818. American Revolutionary cavalry officer, father of R. E. Lee. He was a member of the Continental Congress (1785–88) and governor of Virginia (1792–95). He eulogized G. Washington as "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Lee, Light-Horse Harry See Lee, Henry

Lee, Richard d. 1664. English colonist in Virginia. A wealthy landowner, he held various public offices and founded the Lee family, which was prominent in Virginia.

Lee, Richard Henry 1732–94. American statesman and signer of the Declaration of Independence, which he vigorously supported in the Continental Congress. He helped arrange the Committees of Correspondence (q.v.) and was a Virginia delegate to the Continental Congress (1774–79, 1784–89). His opposition to a strong federal government created by the Constitution helped bring about passage of the Bill of Rights.

Lee, Robert Edward 1807–70. Confederate commander during the American Civil War (1861–65) and military hero of the Confederacy. A Virginian and West Point graduate, he distinguished himself during the Mexican War (1846–48), served as a cavalry commander in Texas (1857–61), and led federal troops (1859) against J. Brown in the Harpers Ferry Raid (q.v.). He resigned from the military (1861) when Virginia seceded from the Union, and organized Virginia's military forces. He then served as J. Davis' military adviser (1861–62) and, in mid-1862, took command of the Army of Northern Virginia. It was in this command that Lee proved his brilliance as a military commander and seriously challenged the better-equipped Union armies. He blocked a Union drive toward Richmond (1862), launched a Confederate invasion of the North (checked at Antietam, 1862), turned back new Union offensives at Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville (1862, 1863), and began his second invasion of the North. Badly defeated at Gettysburg (1863) in this campaign, he skillfully conducted defensive operations (1864–65) against U. Grant's forces for the remainder of the war. Named overall Confederate commander (Feb. 6, 1865), he was at last forced to surrender at Appomattox Courthouse (Apr. 9, 1865) and thereby effectively ended the Civil War.

Lee, William 1739–95. American diplomat. His proposed commercial treaty between the American colonies and The Netherlands was discovered by the British and became the cause of war between England and The Netherlands (1780).

Lee Kuan Yew 1923–. First prime minister of the Republic of Singapore (1959–).

Leeuwenhoek, Antony van 1632–1723. Dutch scientist. Using microscopes he made himself, he became the first to describe accurately bacteria, protozoa, red corpuscles, spermatozoa, striped muscle, and many other microscopic cells and organisms.

Legal Tender Act US congressional act (1862) authorizing the issue of $150 million in paper (Greenback) notes without gold backing to help finance the Civil War. After the war the act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court (1870). The court reversed itself in 1871.

Léger, Fernand 1881–1955. French artist, noted for his use of modern industrial images in his "machine art."

legion Unit of the Roman army. It was in use from about 400 BC to the time of the German invasions and, though its composition and organization varied through this period, generally consisted of 4,000–6,000 infantrymen arranged in eight ranks. Other units, such as cavalry, were also part of the legion.

Legislative Assembly Name of the national representative body of revolutionary France (Oct. 1, 1791–Sept. 20, 1792). Dominated by the moderate Girondists, it was replaced by the National Convention after the overthrow of the monarchy. During the Second Republic, the name was revived for the assembly, which sat for two years (1849–51).

It was dissolved by Napoleon III as a prelude to the dissolution of the Second Republic itself.

legislative branch Name for the branch of government that makes or changes laws. It is generally representative and is often composed of two houses (upper and lower). (See also Congress of the United States.)

Legitimists In French history, the supporters (19th cent.) of the head of the senior Bourbon line as rightful French king. They opposed the claims of the Orleanists and the Bonapartists.

Legula, Augusto Bernardino 1863–1932. President of Peru (1908–12, 1919–30). He settled long-standing disputes with Bolivia, Brazil, and Chile. Though he encouraged modernization, his ruthless treatment of opponents led to his ouster in 1930.

Leibnitz, Gottfried Wilhelm, baron von See Leibniz, Gottfried Wilhelm, baron von Leibniz, Gottfried Wilhelm, baron von ⟨Leibnitz, ~⟩ 1646–1716. German philosopher and mathematician. Leibniz developed new notations for calculus and a theory of infinitesimal calculus that predated I. Newton's findings by three years. He actively sought a reconciliation of Catholicism and Protestantism and professed an optimistic belief in a divine plan of the universe that was ridiculed by Voltaire in Candide. Leibniz' work influenced, among others, I. Kant and B. Russell.

Leicester, Robert Dudley, earl of 1532?–88. English courtier who won the favor of Queen Elizabeth I but did not succeed in marrying her. A member of the Puritan sect, he opposed Catholics in England and advocated war with Spain.

Leiden ⟨Leyden⟩ City in southwest Netherlands. The University of Leiden (1575) is the oldest in The Netherlands. Originally a Roman settlement, the city became a textile manufacturing center in the 16th cent. A center of the revolt against Spanish rule in the Low Countries, Leiden was nearly reduced by a long siege. It was saved when William the Silent opened the dikes and flooded the surrounding countryside (1574).

Leiden, John of See John of Leiden

Leif Ericsson fl. 1000. Norse explorer, son of Eric the Red. Raised among the Norse colonists in Greenland, he was converted to Christianity while visiting Norway. Sent back to Greenland to convert the colonists, he apparently went off course and landed somewhere in North America, which he called Vinland. He wintered there and then went on to Greenland. By another account, he first went to Greenland and then sailed westward on a voyage of discovery.

Leipzig City (pop. 565,000) in East Germany. Chartered in the 12th cent., it hosted annual trade fairs and was the scene of one of M. Luther's debates (1519). It was a leading cultural center of Europe from the 17th to early 20th cents. and many important figures in German music and literature resided there. The city was heavily damaged in WW II.

Leipzig, Battle of ⟨Nations, ~⟩ Major defeat (Oct. 16–19, 1813) for Napoleon during the Napoleonic Wars. The battle resulted in the loss of Germany and Poland. Prior to the battle, the allies forced Napoleon to concentrate his 180,000-man army at Leipzig and, after a preliminary battle (Oct. 16), massed some 300,000 troops to oppose him. The main attack was launched (Oct. 18) and included Austrian, Russian, Prussian, and Swedish troops. By the early hours of Oct. 19, Napoleon's retreat was under way. Allied losses were 55,000. The French lost 38,000 and some 30,000 were taken prisoner.

Leipzig Debate Famous debate (July, 1519) between M. Luther and J. Eck held in Leipzig (now in East Germany). Luther was called upon to defend his then emerging Protestant doctrine and his opposition to indulgences (q.v.). Both Luther and Eck, a Catholic theologian, claimed to have won.

Leipzig Interim See Augsburg Interim

Leisler, Jacob See Leisler's Rebellion

Leisler's Rebellion Insurrection (1689–91) in the British colony of New York. The ouster of the Catholics and accession of Protestant King William (1688) precipitated uprisings in the colonies against Catholic officials. Jacob Leisler (1640–91) set himself up as governor of southern New York in one such outbreak. In 1691, his supporters skirmished with British troops sent to restore order, though Leisler surrendered later that year. He was subsequently executed.

Lemaître, Georges 1894–1966. Belgian astrophysicist who postulated the "big bang" theory of the creation of the universe.

Lemercier, Jacques *c*1585–1654. French architect. Royal architect (from 1618), he completed the Louvre and designed the Sorbonne and the Palais Richelieu (which became the Palais Royal).

Lenclos, Ninon de 1620?–*c*1705. French courtesan whose lovers included La Rochefoucauld and the Great Condé. Her salon attracted the leading society of her day.

lend-lease Program used by the US during WW II to provide Allies with war materials and supplies. Congress narrowly passed (Mar. 1941) the Lend-Lease Act just prior to US entry into the war, initially to aid Britain. This aid was soon extended to China, Russia and, by war's end, some 35 other allied nations. A reverse lend-lease program was set up in 1942, by which nations could repay lend-lease debts by providing US forces with supplies and services. When the program ended (Aug. 1945), some $50 billion in aid had been provided.

L'Enfant, Pierre Charles 1754–1825. French-born American architect and engineer. He drew up plans for the capital city of Washington, D.C., but was dismissed in 1792. His plans were ignored until 1901, when they were used in the remodeling of the city.

Lenin, Nikolai ⟨pseud. of Ulyanov, Vladimir Ilich⟩ 1870–1924. Russian Communist leader, a central figure in the Russian Revolution, and founder of the Bolsheviks (q.v.). Lenin embraced Marxism in 1889 and was eventually arrested and exiled to Siberia (1897–1900). Leaving Russia, he became prominent in the Social Democratic Labor party and, at a party meeting (1903), began the division of the group into two factions, the Mensheviks and (his) Bolsheviks. On the outbreak of the Russian Revolution of 1917, Lenin's return to Russia in the famous "sealed train" (Apr.) was arranged by the Germans, who were counting on the revolution to eliminate Russia from participation in WW I. In Russia, Lenin opposed the provisional government, advocating instead a dictatorship of the proletariat. Lenin's Bolshevik faction gradually gained control of the Soviets in ensuing months and finally ousted the provisional government (1917) in the October Revolution (q.v.). Lenin became dictator and, aided by J. Stalin, L. Trotsky, and others, arranged the Treaty of Brest-Litvosk (1918) with Germany, turned Russian factories over to workers, ended private ownership of land, nationalized banks, and introduced other radical reforms. Consolidating his position, Lenin successfully opposed attempts at counter-revolution (1918–21) and crushed his political opponents. He established (1919) the Third International (q.v.) and introduced (1921) his New Economic Policy (q.v.) to revive the economy. By the time of his death in 1924, he ruled virtually without opposition and had succeeded in laying the foundations of the Russian Communist state.

Leningrad ⟨formerly St. Petersburg⟩ Russian city (pop. 4,073,000), located in the northeast on the Gulf of Finland. It is a major seaport and industrial center. The city was founded (1703) as St. Petersburg by Peter the Great as a "window into Europe," and made the Russian capital in 1712. The scene of revolutionary movements in 1825, 1905, and 1917, it was replaced as capital by Moscow in 1918. The city was renamed Petrograd (1914) and Leningrad (1924). During WW II, it was besieged and heavily damaged by Germany (Sept. 1941–Jan. 1944).

Leninism Term applied to the political, economic, and social theories advanced by N. Lenin. His theories were built on the teachings of K. Marx and included a new perception of imperialism. Lenin held that imperialist powers would, in their exploitation of underdeveloped regions, come into conflict with each other and thereby sow the seeds of their own destruction. Leninism was also marked by its authoritarian temper, especially in its concept of the revolutionary party as an elite, highly disciplined organization.

Lenôtre, André ⟨Le Nôtre,~⟩ 1613–1700. French landscape architect who designed the gardens of Versailles, Chantilly, Fontainebleau, and others.

Leo I d. AD 474. Roman emperor of the East, (457–474), successor to Marcian. He organized the disastrous attack on the Vandals, under Gaiseric, in North Africa (468).

Leo I, Saint AD *c*400–461. Italian-born pope (440–461), one of the important popes of the early church. He actively opposed heresy, including Manichaeanism, Pelagianism, Nestorianism, and Eutychianism. His doctrines regarding the two natures of Jesus in one person were adopted at the Council of Chalcedon (q.v.).

Leo III, Saint d. 816. Italian-born pope (795–816), successor of Adrian I. He crowned Charlemagne as Roman emperor in 800, thus re-creating the Roman Empire in the West and establishing the tradition by which the pope conferred imperial authority on the emperor.

Leo III ⟨~ the Isaurian⟩ *c*680–741. Byzantine emperor (717–41) and founder of the Isaurian dynasty. He defeated the last Arab siege of Constantinople (717–18) and began the long controversy over iconoclasm (726).

Leo V d. 820. Byzantine emperor (813–20), successor to Michael I. He halted the Bulgar attacks on Constantinople. He also precipitated a resurgence of the iconoclastic controversy and deposed the patriarch Nicephorus.

Leo VI ⟨Leo the Wise⟩ ⟨Leo the Philosopher⟩ 866–912. Byzantine emperor (886–912) whose compilation of imperial law, the Basilica, was adopted as the Byzantine Empire's legal code.

Leo IX, Saint ⟨Bruno of Egisheim⟩ 1002–54. German-born pope (1049–54). A clerical reformer. His unsuccessful battle with the Normans in Sicily (formerly dominated by the Byzantines) led to quarrels and excommunication (July 16, 1054) of the patriarch of Constantinople. This in turn precipitated the Schism (q.v.) between the Eastern and Western churches.

Leo X ⟨Medici, Giovanni de⟩ 1475–1521. Italian-born pope (1513–21), successor to Julius II. His main interest was in the arts. He excommunicated M. Luther (1521) for initiating a protest against the sale of indulgences (1517) during his reign and thus figured in the beginning of the Protestant Reformation.

Leo XIII ⟨Pecci, Gioacchino⟩ 1810–1903. Italian-born pope (1878–1903), successor to Pius IX . He helped end the anti-Catholic Kulturkampf (q.v.) in Germany and worked to end friction between the papacy and secular governments elsewhere. He supported the scientific and religious theories of Thomas Aquinas and pointed out flaws in both capitalism and socialism in his Rerum novarum (1891).

Leo Africanus *c*1485–*c*1554. Arab traveler and author. Captured by pirates and sold as a slave to Pope Leo X, he converted to Christianity and wrote his famous work, Description of Africa.

Leonardo da Vinci 1452–1519. Italian painter, sculptor, architect, engineer, and scientist who was one of the greatest figures of the Renaissance and who is today remembered as the archetypal "Renaissance man" for his multifaceted genius. Born in Florence, he studied art as an apprentice and in 1478 painted his early masterpiece Adoration of the Kings. Thereafter he enjoyed the patronage of a succession of nobles, including Ludovico Sforza at Milan (1482–99), Cesare Borgia (1502) at Florence, Louis XII of France (1506), and Francis I (from 1516). During his lifetime he completed such famous works as the Last Supper, Madonna and Child with St. Anne, the Mona Lisa, and St. John the Baptist. He is considered an influential pioneer in Renaissance painting and is noted as a master of light and shade and for his technique of sfumato, by which he added a delicately hazy quality to the blending of color. None of his sculptures survive, but he is known to have worked on, among others, a monument to Francesco Sforza. In his lifetime, Da Vinci was also employed as an architect and military engineer and was deeply involved in studies of human anatomy (especially as it related to art) and the natural world. The full extent of his interests, however, was revealed only in his notebooks, which range from details of his scientific investigations to drawings of a man-powered flying machine.

Leonidas d. 480 BC. King of Sparta (*c*491–480 BC), successor to his half-brother Cleomenes I. He became a Spartan hero when he led the unsuccessful defense of the pass of Thermopylae (480 BC) against invading Persians during the Persian Wars. He and his force of 300 Spartans were killed in the battle.

Leopardi, Giacomo 1798–1837. Italian poet. An invalid from his youth, he became a leading Italian lyricist. His poems, pessimistic in tone, include Canzoni and Canti.

Leopold I 1640–1705. Holy Roman Emperor (1658–1705), successor to his father Ferdinand III. His reign was marked by participation in the Austro-Turkish War (1682–99), the War of the Grand Alliance (1689–97), the third Dutch War (1672–78), and the start of the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14).

Leopold I 1676–1747. Prince of Anhault-Dessau (1693–1747). Leopold served Prussia as a field marshal in the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14) and the War of the Austrian Succession (1740–48).

Leopold I 1790–1865. First king of independent Belgium (1831–65). He refused the Greek throne before finally accepting that of Belgium. He was noted for his diplomacy, and his reign was marked by a period of peace and stability.

Leopold II 1747–92. Holy Roman Emperor (1790–92), successor to his brother, Joseph II. An enlightened despot, he repealed many of his brother's reforms, which were then precipitating rebellion in Hapsburg domains. He subsequently joined Prussia in the Declaration of Pillnitz (q.v.), a cause of the French Revolutionary Wars (1792–1802). He died just before war began.

Leopold II 1835–1909. King of Belgium (1865–1909), successor to his father Leopold I. He sent explorer H. Stanley to the Congo, which he later used to base his claim on the region. The Congo Free State was recognized to be under his personal control (1885) until reports of his ruthless exploitation of the natives forced the Belgian government to take it over (1908).

Leopold III 1901–. King of Belgium (1934–51), successor to his father, Albert I. He led the Belgian Army against the German invaders during WW I, surrendered (May 28, 1940), and was held prisoner until 1945. Opposition to his restoration after the war forced his abdication (1950).

Leopoldville See Kinshasa

Leo the Isaurian See Leo III

Leo the Philosopher See Leo VI

Leo the Wise See Leo VI

Leovigild d. 586. Visigothic king of Spain (568–86), successor to his brother, Athanagild. He warred successfully against the Suevi in the north and the Byzantines in the south and thus came to control most of what became modern Spain.

Lepanto, Battle of Naval victory (Oct. 7, 1571) for Christian allies of the Holy League over the Ottoman navy. Little more than a temporary setback for the Ottoman Turks, the battle marked the first major defeat of the Turks by Christian forces. The allied Christian fleet was formed after the Turks invaded (1570) Cyprus, controlled by Venice. It consisted of some 200 ships sent by Spain, Venice, and the pope. The fleet, commanded by John of Austria, engaged the Ottoman navy of some 200 ships, commanded by Ali Pasha, off Lepanto, Greece. In a matter of hours the Ottoman navy was destroyed and only about 40 ships escaped capture or sinking. The Turks rapidly rebuilt their navy (by 1572) and ultimately took Cyprus (1573).

Lepidus, Marcus Aemilius d. 77 BC. Roman statesman and consul (78 BC). As consul he opposed Sulla's reforms and tried unsuccessfully to reverse them. He marched on Rome (77) after being denied the consulship for 77 and, after losing in battle at Milvian Bridge was decisively defeated by Pompey.

Lepidus, Marcus Aemilus d. 13 BC. Roman statesman. With Mark Antony and Octavian, a member of the second triumvirate (43–36 BC) that ruled Rome after the assassination of J. Caesar. He was forced from power (36 BC) after attempting a revolt (in Sicily) against Octavian.

Lerdo de Tajada, Sebastián 1825–89. President of Mexico (1872–76). He succeeded B. Juárez as president and was overthrown by P. Díaz.

Lerma, Francisco Gómez de Sandoval y Rojas, duque de 1552?–1625. Spanish politician. Lerma was prime minister (1598–1618) to Philip II, over whom he exerted great influence. He expelled the Moriscos and was finally driven from office for financial corruption.

Lermontov, Mikhail Yurevich 1814–41. Russian poet and novelist. An influential Romantic, he is known for his novel A Hero of Our Time and such poems as The Demon, Borodino, and Ismail-Bey.

Le Sage, Alain René 1668–1747. French novelist and dramatist, an exponent of realism noted as the author of the novel Gil Blas and the play Turcaret.

Lesbos Greek island, located in the Aegean Sea. A Bronze Age civilization flourished there and the island was later settled by Aeolians (end of 2d millennium BC). It rose as a center of Greek culture (7th–6th cent. BC) and was home to the poets Sappho and Alcaeus and the philosopher Theophrastus.

lese majesty ⟨leze majesty⟩ A crime against the state or the ruler of a state. Important in medieval times, the concept can be traced back to the Roman republic, when it was used to refer to violations of basic laws of the state. During the time of the Roman Empire, the term was extended to cases involving acts against the emperor himself.

Lesotho ⟨formerly Basutoland⟩ Kingdom in South Africa, lying within the borders of the Republic of South Africa. The kingdom was formed (*c*1800) by elements of various Bantu peoples forced out of their homelands by the Zulus. These peoples defended the kingdom against the Zulus and later the Boers. It became a British protectorate in 1868 and a colony in 1884. After successfully resisting annexation by South Africa, Lesotho became an independent kingdom (Oct. 4, 1966).

Lespinasse, Julie de 1732–76. Hostess of a noted Parisian salon. She began in the literary salon of Madame Du Deffand and then opened her own (1764) with the philosopher J. d'Alembert as her leading guest.

Lesseps, Ferdinand Marie, vicomte de 1805–94. French diplomat and engineer. He originated the idea of the Suez Canal and directed its construction (1859–69). His Panama Canal project (begun 1881) ended in scandal and a French government inquiry.

Lessing, Doris 1919–. British author. Lessing's work, which reflects the political and social upheaval of the modern era, includes The Grass Is Singing, The Children of Violence, and The Golden Notebook.

Lessing, Gotthold Ephraim 1729–81. German critic, philosopher, and dramatist. Lessing introduced Shakespeare to German literature, assisted in the formation of the German national theater, published theological essays espousing freedom of thought, and wrote the plays Miss Sara Sampson, Minna von Barnhelm, and Nathan the Wise. Laokoon is among his critical works.

Le Tellier, Michel 1603–85. French statesman. As minister of war (1643–66), he organized the first French royal army and was appointed chancellor (1677–85) by Louis XIV.

Lethe In Greek mythology, a river in Hades that caused forgetfulness in those who drank from it.

Leto In Greek mythology, a daughter of the Titans. Hera, jealous of Leto's relationship with Zeus, sent the serpent Python to drive her away. Leto stopped at Delos, where she gave birth to Apollo and Artemis.

lettres de cachet French warrants. These secret letters were used to imprison or exile personal enemies of the king or nobility (from 17th cent.). They were outlawed by the National Assembly (1789).

Leucippus 5th cent. BC. Greek philosopher, thought by some to have originated the theory of atoms, usually credited to his pupil Democritus.

Leuctra, Battle of Battle (371 BC) in which the Spartans were decisively beaten by the military tactics of the Thebans, led by Epaminondas. The battle marked the beginning of the brief Theban ascendancy over Greece.

Leutze, Emanuel 1816–68. American painter, known for his Washington Crossing the Delaware.

Levant Term used for those countries on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, from Egypt to Greece. It sometimes also refers to the former French Levant states, Syria and Lebanon.

Levelers Extremist English Puritan sect and political group active (*c*1647–50) during the English Civil War and Commonwealth. Levelers favored total religious and political equality and advocated a written constitution, universal male suffrage, an end to the monarchy, and abolition of economic and social privileges. Unable to advance their cause in the Long Parliament (q.v.), Levelers organized followers in O. Cromwell's New Model Army. In the Putney debates (Oct. 1647), Levelers forced the army command to consider a proposed constitution, called Agreement of the People. It was rejected by Gen. H. Ireton and later mutinies (1649) by Levelers resulted in suppression of the group. Prominent Levelers included J. Lilburne, Richard Overton (fl. mid-17th cent.), and William Walwyn (fl. mid-17th cent.)

Leverrier, Urbain Jean Joseph 1811–77. French astronomer who, along with the Englishman J. C. Adams, discovered the planet Neptune (1846).

Leviathan Biblical sea monster variously depicted as a whale, snake, or crocodile. It usually symbolizes evil or destruction.

Lévi-Strauss, Claude 1908–. French social anthropologist famous for his works defining structural anthropology. His first major work was titled The Elementary Structures of Kinship.

Levites Ancient Hebrew religious functionaries. Drawn from the male population of the tribe of Levi, Levites were originally temple servants and later became teachers of the Law. The tribe of Levi is sometimes said to be named after Jacob's third son, by Leah. Three families make up the tribe of the Levites: the Gershonites, Merarites, and Kohathites.

Lewes, Battle of Battle (May 14, 1264) during the Barons' War (q.v.). The barons, led by S. de Montfort, defeated the royal army, captured both King Henry III and Prince Edward (later Edward I), and thereby forced concessions from the king.

Lewes, George Henry 1817–78. English philosopher, critic, and author. He founded The Fortnightly Review and wrote the Life of Goethe (1855). He lived with G. Eliot from 1854.

Lewis, Clive Staples 1898–1963. English author of The Screwtape Letters and the children's fantasies, the Chronicles of Narnia.

Lewis, John Llewellyn 1880–1969. American labor leader. He was president of the United Mine Workers of America (1920–60) and founder of the Committee for Industrial Organization (CIO) in 1935.

Lewis, Meriwether 1774–1809. American explorer. With W. Clark, he led the famous Lewis and Clark expedition (q.v.) to the Pacific Northwest.

Lewis, Percy Wyndham 1886–1957. British author and artist. He founded the vorticist magazine Blast (1914) with E. Pound, wrote satirical and autobiographical novels, and painted works in a variety of styles.

Lewis, Sinclair 1885–1951. American author. His satiric novels of American provincialism include Main Street, Babbitt, Arrowsmith, Elmer Gantry, and Dodsworth.

Lewis and Clark expedition Famous overland expedition (1804–06) in the US Far West. The expedition charted an overland route to the Pacific and provided valuable scientific and practical information about the largely unexplored region. Initiated by T. Jefferson and sponsored by the government, the expedition consisted of about 40 men under the leadership of M. Lewis and W. Clark. The party left from St. Louis (May 14, 1804) and followed the Missouri River to its headwaters (recruiting the Indian guide Sacajawea along the way), crossed the Continental Divide, and then followed in succession the Clearwater, Snake, and Columbia rivers to the Pacific Ocean. They built Fort Clatsop on the coast and, after spending the winter there, returned (Sept. 23, 1806) to St. Louis.

Lexington and Concord, Battle of Opening hostilities (Apr. 19, 1775) of the American Revolution (1775–83). The British governor of Massachusetts, Gen. T. Gage, sparked the battle by sending a column of infantrymen from Boston to destroy a colonial supply depot at Concord, Massachusetts. Word was sent ahead of the British, however, by P. Revere and others. The British were met at Lexington Green by 50 colonial militiamen (Minutemen), under Capt. John Parker (1729–75), and seven Americans were killed in a brief battle. The British continued to Concord and destroyed what supplies remained there. Part of the British force was attacked at Concord bridge by some 400 Minutemen, and the British began their retreat to Boston. Along the way the Minutemen, using guerilla tactics, harried the British column and eventually killed 273. American losses were 95.

Leyden See Leiden

Ley Juárez See Reforma, La

Ley Lerdo See Reforma, La

Leyte Gulf, Battle of ⟨Philippine Sea, Battle of⟩ Major WW II victory for the US in battle against the Japanese (Oct. 23–25, 1944). Considered one of the greatest sea and air battles, the victory enabled the US to reconquer the Philippines. The battle was provoked by US landings (Oct. 20) on Leyte, in the Philippines. The Japanese (in "Sho-Go," or Victory Operation) planned to draw the US 3d Fleet northward by means of a decoy fleet and to crush the US landing force in a three-pronged attack. One of the three Japanese attack elements was located and damaged (Oct. 23) by US subs. On Oct. 25, all three were engaged by naval and air units of the US 7th Fleet and were largely destroyed.

leze majesty See lese majesty

L'Hôpital, Michel de ⟨L'Hospital, ~⟩ *c*1505–73. French statesman, until 1568 chief counselor to Catherine de Médicis. He urged a policy of religious tolerance toward Protestants (Huguenots), won passage of the Edict of January (1562) granting them religious freedoms, and was dismissed (1568) during the Wars of Religion (1562–98).

Liao-yang, Battle of Japanese victory in battle (Aug. 25–Sept. 3, 1904) during the Russo-Japanese War (1904–05). The Russian Gen. A. Kuropatkin was forced to retreat after bitter fighting near this town in northeastern China.

Liaquat Ali Khan 1895–1951. The first prime minister (1947–51) of newly formed Pakistan. He was assassinated.

Libby, Willard Frank 1908–. American chemist who developed the radioactive carbon-14 dating method, an important research tool for archaeologists, anthropologists, and historians. He received the Nobel Prize in Chemistry in 1960.

Libby Prison Notorious Confederate prisoner-of-war camp in Richmond, Virginia, originally a tobacco warehouse. Conditions were bad, and many captured Union soldiers died there between 1863 and 1865.

Liber Ancient Roman god of wine and fertility. His female consort was Libera and he later became identified with Bacchus and the Greek Dionysius.

liberalism Generally, a philosophy that advocates maintaining the freedom of individuals from outside restraints. It is characterized by a belief in the fundamental goodness and rationality of mankind, and belief in continuing change as a means to perfect the order of things. Thus it often arises in opposition to conservatism. Fueled by ideas of the Enlightenment, liberalism flourished in the 18th–19th cents. as a movement toward greater personal liberty, toward restrictions on government powers, and toward such persuasive doctrines as laissez-faire economics. By the 20th cent., however, the focus of liberalism had been changed by disparity between industrialists' wealth and the lot of the worker. Thus in modern times, liberalism became concerned with freeing the individual from economic and social restraints. To do this, liberals have sought to institute government programs to provide basic protections for the individual, such as social security, welfare, and other minimum-maintenance programs. (See also Liberal party.)

Liberal party 1. British party that, with the Conservative party, was one of the two major parties in that country between 1832 and 1931. Formed from the Whig party after the Reform Bill of 1832, the Liberal party embraced many progressive social-reform causes including extension of the franchise and Home Rule for Ireland. At the same time, it favored laissez-faire capitalism and free trade. The party placed many prime ministers in office, such as W. Gladstone, H. Asquith, and, during WW I, D. Lloyd-George. The party declined from the 1920s vis-à-vis the Labour party because of its adherence to laissez-faire doctrines. It finally split in 1931 and thereafter became a minor party. A revival in the 1970s brought back to it the votes of about 15 percent of the electorate. 2. New York State party founded (May, 1944) by elements of the American Labor Party, who charged that the latter had become Communist-dominated. It has sometimes held the balance of power in elections between the major parties. From around 1970 it has been counterbalanced by the New York Conservative party. 3. Name given to a number of continental parties generally believing in laissez-faire capitalism and opposed to growing trends toward government regulation of the economy.

Liberal Republican party Short-lived party created (1872) by insurgent Republicans. It was formed largely in reaction to corruption in President U. Grant's first administration, and the party platform included civil service reform and a more moderate program of Reconstruction in the South. The party nominated (1872) H. Greeley for president and, though it had the support of the Democratic party, Greeley was easily beaten by U. Grant in his bid for a second term. The party disappeared shortly thereafter. Leaders included C. Sumner, C. Schurz, and C. F. Adams.

Liberal Union British political party formed (1886) by disaffected members of the Liberal party. They opposed the policies of W. Gladstone.

Liberia ⟨Republic of Liberia⟩ Republic located in coastal West Africa. The capital is Monrovia. Liberia was founded (1821) as a home for freed slaves by the American Colonization Society (q.v.). Between 1822 and the beginning of the American Civil War (1861–65), thousands of American Negro colonists were transported there and in 1847 Liberia became an independent republic.

The country's subsequent history in the 19th cent. was marked by clashes with native populations in the interior, loss of territory to European powers colonizing West Africa, a rebellion that resulted in overthrow of the government (1871), and a growing national debt. The government finally went bankrupt in 1909, though in following years new foreign loans and leases to the Firestone Company for a vast rubber plantation helped the national economy. In 1930, confirmed reports of slavery in Liberia forced the resignation of the government, though by 1936 slavery was effectively eliminated. During the long tenure (1944–71) of President W. Tubman, Liberia was opened to foreign investment, and exploitation of its natural resources was begun. William Tolbert, Jr., served as president (1971–80) until his overthrow by army sergeant Samuel Doe (Apr., 1980). Doe suspended the constitution and established military rule.

Liberius d. AD 366. Italian-born pope (AD 352–366), successor to Julius I. He was banished by Emperor Constantius II (355) for his stand against Arianism (q.v.), returned in 358 and later reaffirmed the Nicene faith.

liberty Freedom from restraint of choice or limitation of action, especially in reference to an individual. It is generally conceded that complete personal freedom (anarchy) is untenable and that, in a society, some restraints must be imposed on individuals by government or other outside authority. However, the character of government and the balance between restraints and liberties has been a cause of debate and rebellion throughout the evolution of human civilization. The Magna Carta, Declaration of Independence and Declaration of the Rights of Man, among others, are all expressions of the drive toward individual liberty, as are the philosophical writings of J. Locke and J. Rousseau.

Liberty, Sons of See Sons of Liberty

Liberty, Statue of See Statue of Liberty

Liberty Affair Incident in Boston harbor in which British customs officials seized (June 10, 1768) J. Hancock's sloop, Liberty, which was smuggling Madeira wine. The popular outcry caused the officials to take refuge and call for infantry support.

Liberty Bell Bell, symbolic in American history, which hung in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, from 1753. According to traditional accounts, it was rung on the signing of the Declaration of Independence (July 4, 1776) in Philadelphia. It cracked beyond repair in 1846.

Liberty Poles ⟨Liberty Trees⟩ In Colonial America, poles erected (1765–66) as symbols of opposition to unpopular British policies and officials. The first Liberty pole was located in Boston.

Liberty party First US political party (1840–48) organized to promote abolition of slavery. Led by James G. Birney (1792–1857) and Gerrit Smith (1797–1874), the party was formed (1840) in New York by members of the American Antislavery Society, who were opposed to the society's policy against political action. It nominated Birney as its presidential candidate (1840, 1844). In 1844 it indirectly helped elect J. Polk to the presidency by splitting antislavery support for the Whig party candidate, H. Clay. The party merged (1848) with antislavery Whigs and Democrats prior to the 1848 presidential election, forming the Free-Soil party (q.v.).

Liberty Trees See Liberty Poles

Libya Republic located in northern Africa, bordering Egypt on the west. Its capital is Tripoli. The region comprising modern Libya came under Ottoman control in the 16th cent. but maintained relative autonomy during the period 1711–1835. The Italians seized control of the region during war with the Ottomans in the early 1900s. After WW II Libya came under UN control (1949) and gained independence in 1951. Since 1969, when Muammar al-Qaddafi seized power, Libya has been a radical and revolutionary influence in the Middle East. Key dates in the history of Libya include:

7TH CENT. BC Phoenicians founded colonies in Tripolitania; region later became eastern part of Carthaginian domains.

7TH CENT. BC Cyrenaica settled by Greek colonists.

1ST CENT. BC Cyrenaica passed to Romans; made a province with Crete.

46 BC Romans conquered Tripolitania during Numidian War; annexed it to African province.

7TH CENT. AD Tripolitania and Cyrenaica overrun by Arab Muslims.

16TH CENT. Tripolitania and Cyrenaica conquered by Ottomans and merged into administrative regency of Tripoli.

1711 Ahmad Karamanli became dey of Tripoli; killed Ottoman governor and secured the governorship, thus established hereditary Karamanli rule of Tripoli (until 1835).

18TH–19TH CENT. Tripoli became center for pirates, chief source of revenue for the day; led to Tripolitan war with US (1801–05) and operations by European countries to destroy the pirates; Ottoman Empire resumed governorship of Tripoli (1835).

1911–12 Italo-Turkish War; Italy occupied northern Tripoli.

1912–14 Italy conquered the rest of Tripoli.

1930s Development of Libya began; influx of Italian colonists.

1934 Italy established Libya as a colony.

1940–43 WW II; Libya was site of fierce fighting during North Africa campaigns; after Axis forces were defeated (1943) in region, Libya came under Allied administration.

1949 Administration of Libya passed to UN (1949), which called for Libyan independence by 1952.

1951 Independence granted (Dec. 24); Libya became United Kingdom of Libya, a federated state composed of Cyrenaica, Tripolitania, and Fezzan, a southwest desert region.

1951–69 Idris I reigned as king of Libya.

1953 Libya joined the Arab League.

1953–54 Treaties for establishment of British and US military bases signed.

1955 Became member of the UN.

1958 Oil discovered in Libya; economic situation improved in following years.

1963 Government reorganized by royal decree; provincial governments abolished in favor of central government.

1964 Treaty with Britain terminated; British troops to be withdrawn.

1969 Military coup; Muammar al-Qaddafi seized power (Sept. 1) from King Idris I.

1969– Qaddafi in power as head of state; though he later relinquished some government posts, he retained ultimate control and aligned Libya with radical elements in Mideast and elsewhere.

1969 Unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Qaddafi (Dec.).

1970 Libya closed US bases; confiscated Italian and Jewish property.

1970 Unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Qaddafi (July).

1973 Qaddafi instituted purge of political opponents (Apr. 15).

1973 Qaddafi signed (Aug. 29) agreement with Egypt providing for unification of the two countries in prearranged stages; plan never enacted.

1973 Libya nationalized majority holdings of foreign oil companies in the country (Sept. 1).

1973 Relations with Egypt strained (Dec. 1) over Egypt's conduct of Arab-Israeli War.

1975 Major arms sale secured from Soviet Union; Russia agreed to supply Libya with nuclear reactor.

1977 Four-day border war with Egypt broke out (July 21); cease-fire arranged through mediation of Algerian President Houari Boumediène (July 24).

1979 Libyan troops sent in unsuccessful attempt to aid Ugandan dictator Idi Amin; Amin granted asylum in Libya.

1980 Formal agreement signed calling for unification of Libya and Syria (Sept. 10); plan subsequently tabled.

1980 Libyan troops intervened in Chad to end civil war there (Dec. 16).

1981 Libyan diplomats expelled (May 6) from the US for supporting terrorist activities.

1981 Two Libyan fighters shot down (Aug. 19) in dogfight with US fighters off the Libyan coast.

Lichnowsky, Karl Max, Fürst von 1860–1928. German diplomat. Unauthorized publication of a pamphlet he wrote describing his vain efforts to prevent the outbreak of WW I resulted in his ouster (1918) from the Prussian legislature.

Licinian Rogations See Licinius Calvus Stolo, Caius

Licinius d. AD 325. Roman emperor (AD 308–24) who ruled jointly with Galerius (AD 308–11) and who defeated Emperor Maximinus (314), thereby taking control of the East. He was defeated by Constantine (AD 324), exiled, and executed.

Licinius Calvus Stolo, Caius fl. 375 BC. Roman tribune. He is said to have introduced the Licinian Rogations, which advanced rights of the plebians.

Lidice Village in Czechoslovakia, near Prague. It was "liquidated" by the Germans (1942) in reprisal for the assassination of the Nazi governor, Reinhard Heydrich.

Lie, Jonas Lauritz Idemil 1833–1908. Norwegian novelist. His novels treat Norwegian life in a realistic way, as in The Pilot and His Wife and The Family at Gilje.

Lie, Trygve Halvdan 1896–1968. Norwegian statesman. The first secretary-general of the United Nations (1946–52), he resigned because of Russian objections to his support for UN participation in the Korean War.

Liebig, Justus, baron von 1803–73. German chemist. He established the first chemical teaching laboratory and was a founder of agricultural chemistry.

Liebknecht, Wilhelm 1826–1900. German Socialist and journalist. After participating in the Revolution of 1848, he lived in exile in England (1849–62) and worked with K. Marx. In 1869 he founded the Social Democratic Labor party.

Liechtenstein Small European principality located in the Alps between Austria and Switzerland. It was created in 1719 by the joining of Schellenberg and Vaduz counties in the Holy Roman Empire. It became independent of the German Confederation in 1866 and is a member of a Swiss customs union (1924).

Liège Belgian city (pop. 224,000). It is an industrial and transportation center located in eastern Belgium. In existence since the 6th century, it became a cultural center in the Middle Ages. Napoleon made it part of France from 1794 to 1815, when it was joined to The Netherlands by the Congress of Vienna. It joined the revolt of 1830 and was made part of Belgium. It was held by the Germans in WW I and WW II.

Ligne, Charles Joseph, prince of 1735–1814. Austrian field marshal. An adviser of Holy Roman Emperor Joseph II and friend of Catherine II of Russia, he is chiefly remembered for his correspondence with European dignitaries.

Ligny, Battle of Early battle (June 16, 1815) of the Waterloo campaign, fought in Ligny, Belgium, during the Napoleonic Wars (1803–15). Napoleon defeated the Prussian force under Marshal G. Blücher.

Liguria Historic region in northwestern Italy along the Ligurian Sea and including the Italian Riviera, the Maritime Alps, and the Ligurian Apennines. Conquered by the Romans (2d cent. BC), the region eventually came under Genoese control (by 16th cent.) and became part of Italy during its unification (1860).

Ligurian Republic French satellite state. Napoleon gave this name to the republic of Genoa in 1797 and incorporated it into France in 1805. It became part of Sardinia after Napoleon's fall.

Li Hung-chang 1823–1901. Chinese statesman. He commanded forces against the Taiping Rebellion (1861–64), founded the Chinese navy, and became the dominant figure in Chinese foreign affairs (from *c*1872). He worked to improve relations with the West and to modernize China.

Lilburne, John 1614?–57. English leader of the Leveler (q.v.) faction. Though imprisoned several times, he continued to distribute Puritan pamphlets and agitate for more democratic rule. In 1655, while in prison, he became a Quaker.

Li Li-san *c*1900–. Chinese Communist leader. He dominated the Chinese Communist party during the late 1920s. He was eventually replaced by Mao Tse-tung when his strategy of inciting urban labor rebellions (Li Li-san line) failed.

Lilith In Talmudic folkore, a female demon who was supposed to be Adam's first wife. She is a night creature, associated with child-killing and lust.

Liliuokalani 1838–1917. Queen of the Hawaiian Islands (1891–93). She succeeded her brother King Kalakaua and was deposed for trying to resist changes in the constitution.

Lima Peruvian capital city (pop. 2,833,600), port city, and a cultural and industrial center. Founded by F. Pizarro (1535), it became the capital of the Spanish Viceroyalty of Peru. It was badly damaged (1746) in an earthquake.

Lima, Saint Rose of See Rose of Lima, Saint

Liman von Sanders, Otto 1855–1929. German general. He commanded the Turkish armies at Gallipoli (1915) and forced the Allied withdrawal. As German commander in Palestine, he was defeated in 1918.

Lincoln US city (pop. 171,900), capital of Nebraska. Founded in 1864, it became the capital in 1867 and is a railroad and commercial center.

Lincoln, Abraham 1809–65. American national hero, 16th US president (1861–65), successor to J. Buchanan, and Union leader during the American Civil War (q.v.). Born to a poor family and raised on the Illinois frontier, he educated himself, worked at various jobs (his rail-splitting days are often remembered), and became a lawyer in 1836. Though he had been involved in politics in the 1830s and 1840s, his rise to prominence did not begin until he became embroiled in the slavery question (1850s). As a Republican (from 1856), he unsuccessfully opposed S. Douglas for the US Senate (1858). But in the seven now famous Lincoln-Douglas debates, held during that campaign, Lincoln established himself as a leader of the moderate opposition to slavery. Lincoln became the Republican presidential candidate (1860) and, with the Democratic party split over slavery, won the election. Southern states began seceding soon after his election and just over a month after he took office, hostilities between the North and South broke out at Fort Sumter and the Civil War began. In succeeding years, Lincoln instituted wartime measures, some of which were challenged; meddled in military matters and went through a succession of commanders, finally settling on U. Grant (1863); and maintained his steady, moderate course despite reverses in the war and bitter disputes between radical abolitionists and conservative factions. However, the Emancipation Proclamation (q.v.) and the Gettysburg Address (q.v.) are by far the best-known events connected with Lincoln's wartime administration. With the war going in the North's favor, Lincoln won reelection to a second term in 1864. Then came R. Lee's surrender and an end to the war. But, tragically, less than a week afterward Lincoln was shot and killed (Apr. 15, 1865) at Ford's Theater by J. Booth (q.v.).

Lincoln, Battle of ⟨Fair of Lincoln⟩ Royalist victory (May 20, 1217) which ended a rebellion by English barons in alliance with Prince Louis of France, pretender to the English throne. Some 400 knights led by the regent of King Henry III, William Marshal (earl of Pembroke), defeated approximately 600 Frenchmen and barons at the town of Lincoln.

Lincoln, Benjamin 1733–1810. American Revolutionary War army officer. He was forced to surrender Charleston, South Carolina, to the British (1780), served as secretary of war (1781–83), and put down Shays' Rebellion (1787).

Lincoln, Mary Todd 1818–82. Wife of A. Lincoln (m. 1842). After losing three of her four sons and seeing her husband shot, she was committed (1875) to an asylum. She was released the next year.

Lincoln, Robert Todd 1843–1926. American lawyer, son of A. Lincoln. He was secretary of war (1881–85), US minister to England (1889–93), and president of the Pullman Company (1897–1911).

Lincoln, Saint Hugh of See Hugh of Lincoln, Saint

Lindbergh, Ann Spencer Morrow 1907–. American author, wife of C.A. Lindbergh (m. 1929). Among her works are North to the Orient, Gift from the Sea, and The Unicorn and Other Poems.

Lindbergh, Charles Augustus 1902–74. American aviator, the first man to fly alone and nonstop across the Atlantic Ocean (May 20–21, 1927). Virtually unknown when he left the US aboard his plane Spirit of St. Louis, he was an international celebrity by the time he reached Paris. He married Anne Morrow (1929) and they lived quietly until their child was kidnapped and murdered (1932) in one of the most sensational crimes of this century. The public later turned against Lindbergh, however. An isolationist, he was convinced of the invincibility of Nazi air power and his speeches for the America First Committee against US intervention in WW II were called pro-Nazi. During the war, however, he distinguished himself by flying combat missions with the US air force.

Lines of Torres Vedras Three lines of defensive fortification in Portugal, extending from the Tagus River to the ocean. They were constructed to protect allied forces, under the Duke of Wellington, from French attack during the Peninsular War (1808–14). The lines were never seriously attacked and thereby halted the French invasion of Portugal.

Linggadjati Agreement ⟨Cheribon Agreement⟩ Agreement (Nov. 25, 1946) in which The Netherlands formally recognized Indonesia as the de facto government of Java, Sumatra, and Madura.

Linlithgow, Victor Alexander John Hope, 2d marquess of 1887–1952. British statesman who, as viceroy of India (1936–43), maintained British authority in India during the crucial early years of WW II.

Linnaeus, Carolus ⟨orig. Linné, Carl von⟩ 1707–78. Swedish botanist. Linnaeus is considered the father of modern botany, primarily for his system of classification and nomenclature of plants and animals. He published over 180 works during his lifetime; among them were Flora Lapponica, Systema Naturae, and Species Plantarum.

Linné, Carl von See Linnaeus, Carolus

Lin Piao 1907–71. Chinese Communist general and politician. After the Long March (1934–35), he became commander of Communist forces in the northeast against Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist army. He became heir apparent to Mao Tse-tung after replacing Liu Shao-ch'i (1966) as second-in-command of the Chinese Communist party. He died in a plane crash under suspicious circumstances.

Linton, Ralph 1893–1953. American anthropologist, author of The Study of Man, The Cultural Background of Personality, and The Tree of Culture.

Lipari Islands ⟨Aeolian Islands⟩ Group of volcanic islands north of Sicily. The legendary home of the wind god, Aeolus, they were used by the Fascists for holding political prisoners.

Li Po ⟨Li Tai Po⟩ *c*700–762. Chinese T'ang dynasty poet, considered one of China's greatest. A romantic, he is said to have gotten drunk, reached for the moon's reflection in a river, and drowned.

Lippi, Fra Filippo *c*1406–69. Italian Renaissance painter. He was under the patronage of Cosimo de Medici and did the frescoes in the cathedral choir at Prato.

Lippmann, Walter 1899–1974. US journalist and author. He wrote the influential political column Today and Tomorrow (1931–67) and several books, including Public Opinion.

Lisbon Portuguese capital city (pop. 829,900) and port. Originally settled by the ancient Iberians, it was taken by the Romans (205 BC), the Moors (AD 716) and by the Christian kings (AD 1147). It subsequently rose to prosperity (16th cent.) as the commercial center of the Portuguese colonial empire. It was badly damaged (1755) in a severe earthquake.

Lister, Joseph 1st Baron 1827–1912. English surgeon, founder of antiseptic surgery. After studying Pasteur's theories on bacteria, he developed (1865) the use of carbolic acid as an antiseptic.

Liszt, Franz 1811–86. Hungarian composer and pianist, foremost concert pianist of his day. He originated the symphonic poem form, of which Les Préludes and Mazeppa are examples. He revolutionized the sonata form by introducing the device of the leitmotiv. Among his many works for the piano are his Hungarian rhapsodies.

Li Tai Po See Li Po

Lithuania Former European state in the Baltic Sea region, located in what is now western USSR. Organized as a duchy (13th cent.) to resist attacks by the Livonian Brothers and the Teutonic Knights, Lithuania for a time became a powerful medieval state with domains extending to the Black Sea. It came into personal union with Poland (1386) by royal marriage and was forced by the threat of Russian domination (under Ivan IV) to accept the Union of Lublin (1569) with Poland. Russia gained control of Lithuanian territories by the three Partitions of Poland (18th cent.). Lithuania again became an independent state after the Baltic Wars of Liberation (q.v.), only to be annexed by the USSR (Aug. 3, 1940).

Little, Malcolm See Malcolm X

Little America US base in the Antarctic, on Ross Ice Shelf. It was established by R. E. Byrd (1928–30) as a base for his Antarctic exploration. He reestablished the base (1933, 1939) during subsequent expeditions.

Little Bighorn, Battle of ⟨Custer's last stand⟩ Famous massacre (June 25, 1876) of Gen. G. Custer and his cavalry unit by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians. Custer, leading the advance element of a large cavalry force sent against the Sioux, discovered an Indian camp on the Little Bighorn River near what is now Hardin, Montana. He launched an immediate attack on what he thought was a small force but the Indians, led by Chief Sitting Bull, had hidden the bulk of their warriors. When Custer advanced, they surrounded and massacred the entire force of over 250 men.

Little Entente Alliance between Czechoslovakia, Romania, and Yugoslavia formed by treaties (1920–21). The major aim of the alliance was to maintain boundaries of the three countries (as set by treaties after WW I) against German or Hungarian encroachments. The alliance proved ineffectual against the expansionist designs of A. Hitler, however. It ended when Germany, by the terms of the Munich Pact (1938), was permitted to occupy the Czechoslovakian territory of Sudetenland.

Little Parliament See Barebones Parliament

Little Rock US city (pop. 158,500), the capital of Arkansas. Founded in 1821, it was made the capital of Arkansas Territory that year and became the state capital (1836) when the territory became a US state. President D. Eisenhower sent federal troops to the city (1957) to enforce school desegregation.

Littre, Maximilien Paul Émile 1801–81. French philosopher and lexicographer, a leader of the positivist school. He is known for his Dictionary of the French Language.

Liturgical movement Movement among Christian churches to develop new interest for the church liturgy among their followers. Though rooted in the 19th cent., the movement in the Roman Catholic church was greatly advanced by the Second Vatican Council (1962–65), which introduced use of vernacular translations of Latin texts and fostered greater involvement in the services by the laity. Among Protestant churches, the movement focused on revising texts to eliminate archaic expressions and on changing the form of services.

Litvinov, Maxim Maximovich 1876–1951. Russian Communist diplomat. As commissar of foreign affairs (1930–39), he sought cooperation with Western nations against the Axis Powers. He was ambassador to the US (1941–43).

Li Tzu-ch'eng 1605–45. Chinese rebel leader instrumental in the collapse of the Ming dynasty (1644). He organized a rebel government, took Peking, and forced the remaining Ming forces into an alliance with the Manchus. The Manchus first defeated his forces and then took control of China for themselves.

Liu Shao-ch'i 1898–1974. Chinese Communist leader. A recognized authority on party organization, he was head of state (1959–68) and heir apparent under Mao Tse-tung. He was ousted during the Cultural Revolution.

Liutprand d. 744. Lombard king (712–744). His reign brought the Lombard kingdom to its greatest power. He centralized authority, instituted a just code of law, and conquered Byzantine territories in Italy.

Liverpool, Robert Banks Jenkinson, 2nd earl of ⟨Hawkesbury, Baron⟩ 1770–1828. English statesman. He was prime minister (1812–27) during the War of 1812 with the US and the last phase of the Napoleonic Wars.

Livia Drusilla *c*55 BC–AD 29. First Roman empress, wife of Augustus. She married Octavian (Augustus) in 38 BC, before he became emperor. She had two sons, Tiberius and Drusus (Germanicus) by her previous marriage, and she later conspired to ensure Tiberius' succession as emperor.

Livingston, Edward 1764–1836. American lawyer and statesman. A noted jurist in his day, he was secretary of state (1831–33) under President A. Jackson and formulated the president's reply (1832) to the nullification doctrine.

Livingston, Robert 1654–1728. Colonial leader in New York. Livingston had extensive land holdings, served in the New York provincial assembly (1709–11, 1716–25), and was secretary of Indian affairs (1695–1728).

Livingston, Robert R. 1746–1813. American statesman. A New York delegate to the Continental Congress, he served on the committee that drafted the Declaration of Independence. As Pres. T. Jefferson's ambassador to France, he helped negotiate the Louisiana Purchase. He later financed R. Fulton's steamboat, the Clermont.

Livingston, William 1723–90. American Revolutionary leader. Livingston served in the Continental Congress and became the first governor of independent New Jersey (1776), a post he held until his death.

Livingstone, David 1813–73. Scottish missionary and explorer. Arriving in Africa as a medical missionary (1841), Livingstone explored its interior, and his discoveries included Victoria Falls and the Zambezi River. He was feared lost on an 1866 expedition to the source of the Nile River. Found by H. Stanley (1871), he refused to leave Africa and died of disease while continuing his search for the Nile headwaters.

Livingstone, Philip 1716–78. American Revolutionary War leader and philanthropist. A moderate, he opposed the Stamp Act, signed the Declaration of Independence, and was a member of the Continental Congress from New York.

Livius Andronicus fl. 3d cent. BC. Roman poet, known as the founder of Roman drama. A freed Greek slave, he translated the Odyssey and Greek plays into Latin.

Livland See Livonia

Livonia ⟨Livland⟩ Former state located on the east shore of the Baltic Sea. Beginning in the early 13th cent., the Germanic Livonian Knights conquered the region from the native people, the Livs. These Christian knights formed a confederation out of their domains that flourished during the 15th cent. However, internal struggles among the knights and the spread of the Protestant Reformation weakened the state and, during the Livonian War (1558–83), the order disbanded (1561). Portions of the territory passed to or were conquered by Lithuania, Denmark, Poland, Sweden, and Russia. Russia gradually gained control of the region through conquests in the Second (Great) Northern War (1700–21) and Partitions of Poland (18th cent.).

Livonian Knights ⟨Brothers of the Sword, Order of the⟩ German religious order founded (1202) to conquer and Christianize Baltic lands. The order created Livonia (q.v.) from conquered territories. The order disbanded (1561) after being defeated by the Russians during the Livonian War (q.v.).

Livonian War Unsuccessful war (1558–82) waged by Russian Czar Ivan IV for control of Livonia and access to the Baltic Sea. Russian attacks against Livonia first led to the dissolution (1561) of the ruling order, the Livonian Knights (q.v.). Livonia was then divided among Poland, Lithuania, Sweden, and Denmark, but Russia continued its attempt to conquer the region. Initially successful, it suffered a series of losses to Poland's king, Stephen Bathory, and ultimately was forced (1582) to accept a peace settlement by which it renounced its claims over Livonia.

Livy 59 BC–AD 17. Great Roman historian. Sponsored by Emperor Augustus, Livy wrote the collection of 142 books known as the Annals of Rome, which cover the history of Rome from its founding in 753 BC to 9 BC. Thirty-five books are extant and fragments and summaries of all but two remain.

Li Yüan 565–635. Chinese emperor (618–27) and founder of the T'ang dynasty. An official in the Sui dynasty government, he led a revolt (617) that put him in power.

Llewelyn ab Gruffydd d. 1282. Welsh prince and ruler (1246–82), nephew and successor of David II. Though he sided with S. de Montfort in the unsuccessful Barons' War (1263–67), he nevertheless came to control most of Wales during Henry III's reign. Wars with Edward I, however, led to subjugation of Wales by the Treaty of Conway (1277).

Lloyd George, David, 1st earl of Dwyfor 1863–1945. Controversial, Welsh-born, British statesman and Liberal prime minister (1916–22). He first entered Parliament (1890) as a Liberal. As Chancellor of the Exchequer under H. Asquith, he proposed (1909) his famous People's Budget, which provided social insurance by taxing the wealthy. The bill brought on a major political crisis and cost the House of Lords its veto power (by the Parliament Act of 1911). In 1911 he sponsored legislation for health and unemployment insurance programs. After ousting Asquith, he became prime minister and, during his term of office, helped bring the US into WW I, played a major role in negotiating the Treaty of Versailles (1919), and set up the Irish Free State (1922).

Lloyd's Famous London insurance corporation founded in the late 17th cent. Its main business is marine insurance but it handles many other types of insurance risks on an international basis.

Lobachevsky, Nikolai Ivanovich 1793–1856. Russian mathematician. He was a founder of non-Euclidean geometry.

Lobengula See Matabele War

Locarno Pact Agreement signed (Oct. 16, 1925) at Locarno, Switzerland, by Germany and other European powers, guaranteeing the post-WW I borders of the Rhineland, Belgium, France, and Germany. A major step in Germany's reentry to postwar world affairs, the agreement was preceded by several treaties between individual signators and eventually led to Germany's acceptance into the League of Nations. The pact was denounced by A. Hitler and was finally broken when the Germans remilitarized (Mar. 7, 1936) the Rhineland. Other signators of the pact were Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, and Poland.

Locke, John 1632–1704. English philosopher who founded British empiricism. His doctrines on natural rights influenced the writing of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. In his Essay Concerning Human Understanding, he described the human mind and the process by which it acquires knowledge through the five senses. Natural rights, he believed, included the rights of property, the pursuit of happiness, and religious toleration. Locke held that governments were social compacts and should be based on natural laws. His philosophy greatly influenced the thinking of the 18th-cent. Enlightenment and provided a philosophical basis for the American and French revolutions.

Locofoco party See Locofocos

Locofocos ⟨Locofoco party⟩ Nickname for a faction (and short-lived party) of radical Jacksonian Democrats that appeared (1835) in the US. Largely a phenomenon of the Northeast, the Locofocos advocated an end to the national bank and other monopolies. Locofocos split (1835) with regular Democrats in New York and formed (1836) the Equal Rights Party. President M. Van Buren eventually took up many of their policies and the Locofocos rejoined the Democratic Party (by 1838).

Lod See Lydda

Lodge, Henry Cabot 1850–1924. American politician. He served as senator from Massachusetts (1893–1924) and, as a leading isolationist, headed opposition to US entry to the League of Nations.

Lodge, Henry Cabot, Jr. 1902–. American politician. He was senator from Massachusetts (1937–44, 1947–53), US representative to the UN (1953–60), and made an unsuccessful bid for the vice-presidency, running with R. Nixon (1960).

Lodi, Battle of French victory (May 10, 1796) over the Austrians in Italy, during the French Revolutionary Wars (1792–1802). Napoleon, commander of the French forces, distinguished himself during the battle and was nicknamed the "Little Corporal." In the battle, Napoleon attacked Lodi Bridge with 5,000 soldiers and forced the 10,000 Austrian defenders to retreat.

Loeben, Peace of See Campo Formio, Treaty of Logan, John Alexander 1826–86. Union general in the American Civil War, senator from Illinois (1871–77, 1879–86), and founder of Memorial Day (1868).

Logos Greek philosophical term used to describe the force of reason and order in the cosmos. The concept, advanced by Heraclitus (6th cent. BC), came to represent a link between God and man.

Lohengrin In German legend, the knight of the swan and the Holy Grail. He rescued a princess and married her on the condition that she never ask his true identity. When she finally asked, he left her forever.

Loisy, Alfred Firmin 1857–1940. French theologian who founded Modernism in the Catholic church. He was excommunicated for his views in 1908.

Loki In Norse mythology, the god of evil. He was punished for the murder of Balder but will lead his evil forces when the world ends.

Lollardry ⟨Lollardy⟩ English church reform movement that began (14th cent.) at Oxford. Some Lollard doctrines are said to have presaged those of the Reformation. Formed (late 14th cent.) by J. Wycliffe at Oxford, the movement spread throughout England. Persecutions began (1399) under Henry IV and, after two rebellions were suppressed (1414, 1431), the movement went underground, surviving until the rise of the 16th-cent. Reformation. Lollard doctrines, as set forth in their Twelve Conclusions (1395) and elsewhere, include: condemnation of the papacy; belief in primacy of the Scriptures; denial of transubstantiation; opposition to war; and condemnation of sacramentals, confession, pilgrimages, clerical celibacy, and other practices of the Catholic church.

Lollardy See Lollardry

Lombard League Alliance formed (1167) by Lombard cities in northern Italy against Holy Roman Emperor Frederick I (Barbarossa). Following attempts by Frederick to enforce his authority over the cities, they formed the league (with the support of Pope Alexander III) and successfully resisted Frederick's armies. By the Peace of Constance (1183), Frederick guaranteed the cities their freedom and the league ceased to be important. It was reactivated (1226) to defend against attacks by Holy Roman Emperor Frederick II. Cities in the league included Milan, Venice, Mantua, Padua, and Brescia.

Lombardo Italian architects and sculptors. Pietro Lombardo (*c*1435–1515) and his sons Antonio (*c*1458–1516) and Tullio (*c*1455–1532) worked on such noted Venetian structures as the Doge's palace, Dante's tomb, and the Church of Santa Maria dei Miracoli.

Lombards, Kingdom of Kingdom in Italy formed (6th cent.) by Germanic tribes known as the Lombards. Led by Alboin, these tribes migrated south and conquered (568–572) most of the north and parts of central and southern Italy. After a period of initial instability, the kingdom flourished (7th–8th cent.) with its center at Pavia. Frankish conquest of the kingdom was provoked by Lombard invasions of the Papal States. The Franks, under Pepin the Short, invaded Lombard domains (*c*751) to aid Pope Stephen II. When Lombard King Desiderius again attacked Rome (772), Charlemagne completely conquered the Lombard kingdom and ended its existence as an independent state.

Lombardy Leading industrial region of modern Italy. Once a Roman province, it became the center of the Lombard kingdom (q.v.). It passed to Charlemagne (774) and, in medieval times, its cities flourished as independent communes (see Lombard League). The region eventually came under control of the duchy of Milan (14th cent.) and was controlled by various powers before being absorbed into the unified kingdom of Italy (19th cent.).

Loménie de Brienne, Étienne Charles 1727–94. French statesman and ecclesiastic. As minister of finance, he convoked the States-General of 1789. He died in prison during the French Revolution.

Lomonosov, Mikhail Vasilyevich 1711–65. Russian scientist and author. He reformed the Russian literary language, bringing to it a more energetic, idiomatic style.

London Great Britain's capital city (pop. 7,028,200), located in southeastern England. One of the world's greatest cities, it is Britain's cultural and commercial center. London's history dates from Roman times and, in AD *c*60, the Roman settlement was attacked by Queen Boadicea (q.v.). After the fall of Rome, London received (AD 597) the Christian missionary St. Augustine. It was established as a city of some importance by AD 886, when Alfred the Great took it from the Danes and refortified it. London's growth began in the centuries following the Norman Conquest (1066) and, during the reign of Elizabeth I (16th cent.), it prospered as a commercial (with the rise of trading companies), political, and cultural center. The city later figured as a stronghold of Parliamentary forces in the English Civil War (1642–49), suffered the ravages of plague (1665), and was largely destroyed in the great fire of London (Sept. 2–5, 1666). Rebuilt, it rose to worldwide prominence as the seat of Britain's great colonial empire. Though it suffered some raids during WW I, London was a chief objective of German airborne raids in the Battle of Britain (q.v.) in WW II. Today London is the site of such famous structures as Westminster Abbey (q.v.), Buckingham Palace (q.v.), and the Tower of London (q.v.). (See also London, Treaties of and London conferences.)

London, Declaration of Proposed (1909) international regulations for naval warfare. The declaration was a result of the London Naval Conference (1908), attended by Great Britain and other European powers, the US, and Japan. It attempted to formalize wartime conventions for blockades, war prizes, contraband, and other matters. The declaration failed to win ratification by the participating nations and an attempt to gain voluntary compliance during WW I was rejected.

London, Jack ⟨London, John Griffith⟩ 1876–1916. American author of adventure stories, such as Call of the Wild, The Sea-Wolf, and White Fang.

London, John Griffith See London, Jack

London, Tower of See Tower of London

London, Treaties of 1. Treaty (Mar. 17, 1824) between The Netherlands and Britain defining their respective spheres of influence in Malaysia. The British gained control of Malacca. 2. Treaty (July 6, 1827) between Britain, France, and Russia, in which they agreed to force the Ottoman Turks and Greek independence fighters to accept mediation. The powers used military force to intervene after Turkey rejected the plan. 3. Treaty (Nov. 15, 1831) between major European powers, settling matters relating to the Belgian war for independence from The Netherlands. 4. Treaty (1832) between Britain, France, and Bavaria, granting the newly created Greek throne to Otto I. 5. Treaty (May 11, 1867) between major European powers, establishing Luxembourg as an independent and neutral state. 6. Treaty (Mar. 13, 1871) in which signators to the Treaty of Paris (1856) acceded to Russian demands to end the neutral status of the Black Sea. 7. Treaty (May 30, 1913) ending the first Balkan War. It stripped Turkey of its domains on the Balkan Peninsula. Disputes among Balkan states over division of this territory resulted in the Second Balkan War. 8. Secret treaty (Apr. 26, 1915) between Italy, Britain, France, and Russia, granting Italy territorial concessions in return for its entry in WW I. The lands included Trieste, south Tyrol, and part of Dalmatia.

London Bridge Bridge over the Thames River in London, England. Once a structure complete with stores and houses, it was damaged, redesigned, and rebuilt many times between 1176 and 1831. It was rebuilt again in the 1960s.

London Company London-based company of stockholders that joined with the Plymouth Company to found colonies in the United States under a charter given by James I (1606). The company established the Jamestown, Virginia, colony, the first permanent English settlement in America.

London conferences Meetings between representatives of international powers, held in London (19th–20th cents.). These conferences included that of 1830–31, which established Greek independence (1831) and attempted to resolve the war between the Belgians and Dutch over Belgian independence; 1838–39, which settled the division of The Netherlands and newly independent Belgium; 1852, which attempted to resolve conflicts between the Danes and the German Confederation over administration of Schleswig-Holstein; 1908, which resulted in the Declaration of London (q.v.) on naval armament; 1930 (London Naval Conference), which established regulations on submarine warfare and limited construction of new battleships; 1933, which unsuccessfully attempted international financial reforms to end the Great Depression; 1945, which saw the beginnings of the postwar rift between Russia and the other WW II Allies.

Long, Crawford Williamson 1815–78. American physician. He was the first physician to use ether in surgery (1842).

Long, Huey Pierce 1893–1935. Notorious American politician (called "the kingfish"). He was governor of Louisiana (1928–31) and US senator (1931–35), and was known as the leader of a corrupt political machine that controlled his state. He gained nationwide attention with his "Share-the-Wealth" plan.

Longchamp, William of d. 1197. English prelate and statesman. As chancellor to Richard I, he ruled the country while the king was on the Third Crusade (1190). Unpopular, he was ousted by Richard's brother, John (1191).

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth 1807–82. Famous American poet who wrote about the history and legends of America. Among his many popular poems are The Wreck of the Hesperus, The Village Blacksmith, Evangeline, The Song of Hiawatha, The Courtship of Miles Standish, and Paul Revere's Ride. He also wrote a translation of Dante's Divine Comedy.

Longinus *c*213–273. Greek philosopher. He advised Queen Zenobia, ruler of the eastern kingdom of Palmyra, to revolt against Rome. When the revolt failed, he was executed by Emperor Aurelian as a traitor. Longinus was long thought to be the author of On the Sublime.

Long Island, Battle of British victory (Aug. 27, 1776) over the Americans during the American Revolution. After evacuating Boston, the British (under Gen. W. Howe) occupied Staten Island. Intending to take New York City, some 20,000 British landed (Aug. 22) at Gravesend, on Long Island. After several days' delay, they engaged and defeated an equal number of American soldiers, under G. Washington, at Brooklyn Heights, Long Island. Washington withdrew (Aug. 29), first to Manhattan and then northward toward White Plains.

Long March Heroic march (1934–35) by the remnants of the Chinese Communist army during the Chinese Civil War. When Chinese Nationalists surrounded their base in southeast China, about 100,000 Communist soldiers broke out of the trap (Oct. 15, 1934). During their subsequent 6,000-mile march to a new base in Shensi province (northwest China), the Communists crossed rugged terrain and were harried by Nationalist forces. Mao Tse-tung became leader of the Chinese Communist party during the march (at Tsunyi, Jan., 1935), and, by the time the Communists reached Shensi (Oct., 1935), over half had died or been killed.

Long Parliament Name for the English Parliament that sat (Nov. 3, 1640–Mar. 16, 1660) during the English Civil War period. Called by Charles I to raise money, the Parliament refused, and civil war broke out soon after. After Charles's defeat, the parliament became the object (1648) of Pride's Purge (q.v.). Reduced to 60 members, it thereafter became known as the Rump Parliament. Later Charles I was tried and executed by the Parliament, which was twice dissolved for intervals by O. Cromwell and was succeeded by the Convention Parliament (q.v.).

Long Parliament of the Restoration See Cavalier Parliament

Longstreet, James 1821–1904. Confederate Army general in the American Civil War. His slowness to attack at Gettysburg (1863) is generally considered the reason for that Confederate defeat.

Longworth, Nicholas 1869–1931. American legislator. A congressman from Ohio, Longworth was Speaker of the House from 1925 to 1931.

Lon Nol 1913–. Cambodian military leader. He was premier (1966–67), and took control of the government after overthrowing Prince Sihanouk (1970). Reverses in the civil war with Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas eventually drove him from office (1975).

Lönnrot, Elias 1802–84. Finnish philologist who gathered the oral folklore of his country and published it in the Kalevala.

López, Francisco Solano 1826?–70. Dictator of Paraguay (1862–70). He warred unsuccessfully against Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay in the War of the Triple Alliance (q.v.) and was killed during fighting.

López, Narciso 1798–1851. Spanish-American soldier and revolutionary. He led three unsuccessful military expeditions against Spanish Cuba (1849, 1850, 1851), and was killed in the third.

López de Legaspi, Miguel d. 1572. Spanish explorer. He conquered the Philippines for the Spanish (1564) and founded the city of Manila (1571).

Lord Dunmore's War War (Jan.–Oct., 1774) between Shawnee Indians and the Virginia militia. It was prompted by white encroachments on Indian lands and Virginia's seizure of western Pennsylvania. The war, culminating in the Shawnees' defeat at the Battle of Point Pleasant (Oct. 10), opened Kentucky and the Ohio Valley to Colonial expansion.

Lorelei A cliff above the Rhine River in Germany where, according to legend, a siren lures sailors to their death by her singing.

Lorentz, Hendrik Antoon 1853–1928. Dutch physicist. He and Pieter Zeeman received the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1902 for their explanation of the Zeeman Effect, concerning electromagnetic radiation.

Lorenz, Konrad 1903–. Austrian zoologist. Lorenz established the discipline of ethology, the scientific study of patterns of animal behavior, especially as related to aggression. With Karl von Frisch and Nikolaas Tinbergen, he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine in 1973.

Lorenzini, Carlo See Collodi, Carlo

Los Alamos Site (and now a town) in New Mexico where the US government produced and tested atomic bombs. Opened in 1942 as part of the Manhattan Project (q.v.), the facility there constructed the world's first atomic bombs and conducted the earliest test explosion on July 16, 1945.

Los Angeles US city (pop. 2,966,700) located in southern California. Founded as a Spanish settlement (1781), it passed from Spanish to Mexican control and was captured (1846) by the US during the Mexican War (1846–48). Growth was rapid thereafter, as the gold rush, the arrival of railroads from the East (1870s, 1880s), and the discovery of oil (1890s) all brought waves of new settlers. From the early 1900s, Los Angeles has been famous as the center of the movie industry (see Hollywood).

Lost Battalion American army unit in WW I. Several American companies, led by Major Charles Whittlesey, were cut off by German forces in the Argonne Forest (Oct., 1918). They were rescued after heroically resisting German attacks for five days.

"lost colony" ⟨Roanoke Colony⟩ English settlement established (July, 1587) on Roanoke Island (now in North Carolina). The 117 colonists vanished mysteriously, leaving behind only the carved word "Croatan." The cause of the disappearance has never been discovered.

Lost Dauphin See Louis XVII

"lost generation" Name applied to a group of American writers whose lives and works were greatly influenced by the events of WW I. Among them were F. S. Fitzgerald and E. Hemingway. The term derives from G. Stein's remark, "You are all a lost generation," which Hemingway used as the epigraph to his novel The Sun Also Rises.

Lost Tribes of Israel Ten tribes of Israel that were exiled from there by the Assyrian king Sargon (*c*722 BC). Their fate is unknown, but several theories assert that they became the ancestors of various peoples, including the Anglo-Saxons, American Indians, and Ethiopians. The ten tribes were those of Asher, Dan, Ephraim, Gad, Issachar, Manasseh, Naphtali, Reuben, Simeon, and Zebulun. (See also Twelve tribes of Israel.)

Lot In the Bible, son of Haran, Abraham's brother. His wife was turned into a pillar of salt when disobeying God's warning not to look back at the destruction of Sodom.

Lotario di Segni See Innocent III

Lothair 835–869. Carolingian king of Lotharingia (855–869). The son of Lothair I (emperor of the West), he became involved in a lengthy dispute with Pope Nicholas I over his divorce and subsequent marriage to his mistress.

Lothair 941–986. Carolingian king of France (954–986), successor to his father, Louis IV. He was dominated throughout most of his reign by Hugh the Great and later by Archbishop Bruno of Cologne. His efforts to obtain control of Lorraine led to conflict with Holy Roman Emperor Otto II.

Lothair I 795–855. Carolingian emperor in title (840–855), a successor to his father, Louis I, and grandson of Charlemagne. His defeat at Fontenoy (841) marked the end of his attempts to reunite the Carolingian Empire under his rule. By the Treaty of Verdun (843), he became ruler of Lotharingia, the middle portion of the divided empire.

Lothair II 1075–1137. Holy Roman Emperor (1133–37). He was elected to succeed Henry V, and his was the first case in which an elective monarchy came to power over a rival, hereditary claimant.

Lotharingia Kingdom created by the division of the Carolingian Empire into three parts. Lotharingia (then also called Francia Media) was the middle of the three kingdoms established by the Treaty of Verdun (843) and was first ruled by Emperor Lothair I. At its greatest extent, it included what are now The Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, the region of Lorraine in France, and Italy. It was divided (870) by the Treaty of Mersen (q.v.).

Lotophagi See lotus-eaters lotus-eaters ⟨Lotophagi⟩ In Greek legend and the Odyssey, a people of Africa who ate the lotus plant, which caused forgetfulness and idleness.

Loudon, Gideon Ernst, Freiherr von See Laudon, Gideon Ernst, Freiherr von

Louis I ⟨Louis the Pious⟩ 778–840. Carolingian emperor (814–840), successor to his father, Charlemagne. His reign was marked by revolts by his sons over his plans to divide the empire among them. They deposed (and later restored) him twice, once in 830 and again in 833. His reign marked the end of the unified Carolingian Empire.

Louis I ⟨Louis the Great⟩ 1326–82. King of Hungary (1342–82) and Poland (1370–82). Louis conducted several wars against Venice, acquiring control of Dalmatia. He also drove the Turks and Tatars from his lands.

Louis I 1339–84. King of Naples (1382–84). Louis was the son of French king John II. Joanna I of Naples made Louis heir to Naples. He was overthrown by a rival claimant, Charles of Durazzo (Charles III).

Louis I 1786–1868. King of Bavaria (1825–48), son of Maximilian I. He made Munich a cultural center, but his conservative policies and his liaison with L. Montez led to his forced abdication during the Revolution of 1848.

Louis I 1838–89. Portuguese king (1861–89), successor to his brother Peter V. His reign was marked by political unrest and numerous changes of ministries. Under his rule, slavery was abolished in Portuguese colonies.

Louis II d. 875. Frankish king of what is now Italy (844–875), nominal emperor of the Carolingian empire. Louis spent most of his reign holding the invading Arabs in check in southern Italy.

Louis II ⟨Louis the Stammerer⟩ 846–879. Frankish king (877–879) of the West (France) Frankish kingdom, successor to his father, Charles II (the Bald).

Louis II 1377–1417. Claimant to the throne of Naples. The son of Louis I, he inherited his father's claim to the kingdom, though he actually held it only from 1390 to 1399. He was driven out by Lancelot.

Louis II 1506–26. King of Hungary and Bohemia (1516–26). Louis was the last of the Jagiello dynasty. He was unable to prevent the Turkish conquest of his Hungarian lands, and died at the Battle of Mohács.

Louis II 1845–86. King of Bavaria (1864–86), successor to his father, Maximilian II. He was the patron of R. Wagner, and he built extravagant palaces. Declared insane in 1886, he drowned himself.

Louis III *c*863–882. Frankish king (879–882) of the West (France), a son of Louis II. He ruled jointly with his brother Carloman, and turned back the Norman invasion at Saucourt (881).

Louis III 1403–34. Rival for the throne of Naples (1417–34). The son of Louis II, he fought Joanna II and her ally Alfonso V of Aragon for the throne. When Alfonso fell out with Joanna, she made Louis her heir (1421) instead.

Louis IV ⟨Louis d'Outremer⟩ 921–954. King of France (936–954), son of Charles III (the Simple) and successor to Rudolph. His reign was marked by strife with his vassal Hugh the Great.

Louis IV ⟨Louis the Bavarian⟩ 1287?–1347. Holy Roman Emperor (1328–47). Louis fought Frederick the Fair (1314–22) in order to secure his claim. Following defeat of Frederick, Pope John XXII still refused Louis the imperial crown. Pope John steadfastly opposed Louis in ensuing years, and in 1338 the German electors ruled against the papacy. They declared that their election of the emperor automatically conferred the imperial crown.

Louis V 967–987. King of France (986–987), successor to Lothair. The last Carolingian king of France, he was succeeded by Hugh Capet, founder of the Capetian (q.v.) line.

Louis VI ⟨Louis the Fat⟩ 1081–1137. King of France (1108–37), successor to his father, Philip I. He fought several wars with King Henry I over English territories on the Continent and strengthened royal authority.

Louis VII ⟨Louis the Young⟩ *c*1120–80. King of France (1137–80), successor to his father, Louis VI. He annulled his marriage to Eleanor of Aquitaine (1152), who subsequently married Henry II of England. This gave rise to Henry's claims to Aquitaine and a long series of wars between Louis and Henry. Louis aided Henry's sons in a revolt against their father (1173–74) but gained no territories from it.

Louis VIII 1187–1226. King of France (1223–26), successor to his father, Philip II. He invaded England at the invitation of the barons, then rebelling against King John (1216), but withdrew (1217) after the accession of Henry III eroded his support among them.

Louis IX ⟨Saint Louis⟩ 1214–70. King of France (1226–70), successor to his father, Louis VIII. His mother, Blanche of Castile, was his regent (to 1234) and, later, his close adviser. He was defeated and captured on the Seventh Crusade (q.v.) and settled territorial disputes with Henry III of England (by the Treaty of Paris, 1259). His reign was marked by a period of peace and prosperity.

Louis X 1289–1316. King of France (1314–16), successor to his father, Philip IV. He was forced to grant charters to the nobles to gain their support. He was dominated by Charles of Valois.

Louis XI 1423–83. French king (1461–83), successor to his father, Charles VII. As king, he succeeded in overcoming the rebellious nobles and thereby laid the basis for an absolute monarchy in France. Louis engaged in many revolts against his father, notably the Praguerie (1440), and, as king, succeeded in putting down a revolt (1465) by the League of the Public Weal (q.v.). He took Normandy from his brother Charles. In 1467 he began a long war with Charles the Bold (duke of Burgundy) and his allies Francis II (duke of Brittany) and English king Edward IV. Louis ultimately won Burgundy by the Treaty of Arras (1482), and, with the extinction of the Anjou line, also acquired their territories for the crown.

Louis XII 1462–1515. King of France (1498–1515), successor to his cousin Charles VIII, known as "the Father of the People" for his benevolent rule. His foreign policy was dominated by attempts to conquer parts of Italy in the Italian Wars (q.v.).

Louis XIII 1601–43. French king (1610–43), successor to his father, Henry IV. His reign was marked by the strong leadership of his ministers, Cardinal de Richelieu and J. Mazarin, who centralized royal authority and laid the foundation for absolutism in France. Rebellions by French Protestants (Huguenots) were quelled and France joined in the Thirty Years' War (from 1635).

Louis XIV ⟨The Sun King⟩ 1638–1715. French king (1643–1715), successor to his father, Louis XIII. Louis' reign marked the height of absolutism in France, and, by his expansionist policies, he embroiled the country in a costly series of wars. During Louis' minority, France was weakened by the ongoing Thirty Years' War (1618–48) and rebellions known as the Fronde (1648–53). Louis took power (1661) on the death of the powerful minister Cardinal Mazarin, continued the process of centralizing authority in his own hands, and fostered a period of commercial prosperity. With the royal finances restored and the army strengthened, Louis set out on the first of his wars to enlarge French domains, the War of Devolution (1667–78). This was followed by the Third Dutch War (1672–78), the War of the Grand Alliance (1689–97), and, finally, the War of Spanish Succession (1701–14). This last war left France seriously weakened financially. Within France, Louis' reign was marked by his arbitrary use of the lettre de cachet (q.v.), his growing intolerance of Protestants (Huguenots), which ended in his revocation (1685) of the Edict of Nantes (q.v.), and his support of Gallicanism (q.v.). Louis was a lavish patron of the arts, and his reign is sometimes referred to as the Augustan Age of French literature. He likewise maintained a splendid court (in part to keep the nobles in check) and built the magnificent palace of Versailles.

Louis XV 1710–74. French king (1715–74), successor to his great-grandfather, Louis XIV. Louis was a weak and (at his death) unpopular ruler. The financial difficulties that arose during his reign helped bring on the French Revolution (1789–99). Made king at five, he attained his majority in 1723. The government, however, was largely run (1726–43) by A. Fleury . Thereafter Louis was influenced by a succession of mistresses, notably Mmes. de Pompadour and Du Barry. Louis' reign was marked by: the War of Polish Succession (1733–35); acquisition of the duchy of Lorraine (1735); the War of Austrian Succession (1740–48); the disastrous Seven Years' War (1756–63), which cost France her Canadian and Indian colonies; suppression of the Jesuits (1764); dissolution of Parlement (1771); and a belated attempt at fiscal and legal reforms.

Louis XVI French king (1774–92), successor to his grandfather, Louis XV. He was overthrown during the French Revolution. Louis was an ineffective ruler and failed in attempts at fiscal and administrative reform, put forward by such ministers as A. Turgot and J. Necker, and was often opposed by Queen Marie Antoinette and the royal court. The extravagance of the court and French support (1778–81) for the American Revolution helped bring the government to near bankruptcy. Thereafter, Louis' reign was swept up in the events of the French Revolution, including: convening of the Assembly of Notables (1787) to approve new taxes; convening of the States-General (1789); legislative rebellion by the third estate and creation of the National Assembly (1789); the storming of the Bastille (1789), provoked by the king's ouster of Necker; transfer (1789) of the king and family from Versailles to Tuileries palace in Paris; an unsuccessful attempt at escape (1791) by the king and family; institution (1791) of a constitutional monarchy; establishment (1792) of the republic; trial and execution (1793) of Louis for suspected conspiracy with foreign powers.

Louis XVII 1785–95? Titular king of France during the French Revolution. The son of Louis XVI, he was imprisoned with the royal family in 1792.

After his father's execution, Louis was for a time the symbol of royalist hopes. He died in prison.

Louis XVIII 1755–1824. French king (1814–24), crowned after the fall of Napoleon. Following the outbreak of the French Revolution, he fled France (1791) and actively promoted counterrevolutionary plots. He was made king of France (1814), partly through the efforts of C. Talleyrand. His reign began the Restoration (1814–30) and included such events as the Hundred Days (1815) and the rise of the Ultraroyalists (q.v.).

Louis, Saint See Louis IX

Louis de Bourbon See Condé

Louis de Buade See Frontenac, comte de Palluau

Louis d'Outremer See Louis IV

Louise 1776–1810. Queen of Prussia, wife of Frederick William III. She is remembered for her courage in the face of Prussian defeats in the Napoleonic Wars.

Louise of Savoy 1476–1531. Mother of French king Francis I and regent during her son's Italian expeditions (1515–16 and 1525–26). In 1529, she negotiated the Treaty of Cambrai.

Louisiana State (pop. 4,204,000) in the US South, the 18th state. Louisiana and environs were claimed for France by LaSalle in 1682. The first settlement in Louisiana was New Orleans (founded 1718), and Louisiana passed to the US by the Louisiana Purchase of 1803. The Territory of Orleans became the state of Louisiana in 1812. Louisiana seceded (1861) from the Union during the Civil War, and was readmitted in 1868. The present state constitution was passed in 1921.

Louisiana Purchase US acquisition (May 2, 1803) of French-held territory extending westward from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains. The purchase doubled the size of the US and guaranteed use of the commercially important Mississippi River. The territory (at first French, then Spanish) reverted to French control (1800) after Napoleon conquered Spain. US president T. Jefferson, fearful that Napoleon might close New Orleans to US commerce, sent (Apr., 1803) R. Livingston to France to buy the city. Some weeks later, with J. Monroe taking part, negotiations were opened by French minister C. Tallyrand for the purchase of the whole Louisiana territory (over 800,000 sq. mi.). The agreement was signed in May (dated Apr. 30, 1803), and the total price, with interest, came to just over $27 million.

Louis Philippe ⟨Citizen King⟩ 1773–1850. King of the French (1830–48), successor to Charles X by the July Revolution (1830). Once a liberal supporter of the French Revolution, Louis Philippe lived in exile (from 1793) until the Restoration (1814–30). He joined the liberal opposition to the monarchy, and was later chosen king by A. Thiers, M. Lafayette, and other bourgeois leaders of the July Revolution. Though it began in a liberal spirit, his reign gradually became absolutist. Workers' rebellions, demands for enfranchisement of the lower bourgeoisie, and the struggles between Legitimists and Bonapartists eventually culminated in the February Revolution (1848). The king abdicated (Feb., 1848) and fled to England.

Louis the Bavarian See Louis IV

Louis the Child 893–911. Frankish king (899–911) of the East (Germany), successor to Arnulf. Louis was the last German Carolingian ruler. Invasions by the Magyars from the east eventually broke down the authority of the monarchy in the east.

Louis the Fat See Louis VI

Louis the German *c*804–876. Frankish king (843–876) of the East (Germany). He was allotted a portion of the divided Carolingian Empire by his father, Louis I. Louis joined with his brother, Charles the Bald, to block Lothair I's attempt to reunite the Carolingian Empire under his rule. Louis and Charles forced Lothair to accept the divided empire by the Treaty of Verdun (843).

Louis the Great See Louis I

Louis the Pious See Louis I

Louis the Stammerer See Louis II

Louis the Young See Louis VII

Louis the Younger d. 882. Frankish king (876–882) of the East (Germany), successor to his father, Louis the German. He expanded his domains by conquering western Lotharingia from Charles the Bald (876). He later acquired eastern Lotharingia.

Lourdes Town in southwestern France famous for its shrine at the spot where Saint Bernadette was said to have seen visions of the Virgin. Millions make pilgrimages there each year.

Lourenço Marques See Maputo

Louvois, Michel Le Tellier, marquis de 1639–91. French war minister. Under Louis XIV, he instituted reforms that made the French army the most powerful in Europe, encouraged and ruthlessly enforced the revocation of the Edict of Nantes (q.v.), and became notorious for the destructiveness of his armies during the War of the Grand Alliance.

Louvre Museum in Paris, France. The original structure was started by Francis I in 1546 and was added to by succeeding rulers. The vast art collection includes the Mona Lisa and the Venus de Milo.

Lovejoy, Elijah Parish 1802–37. American journalist and abolitionist martyr. He was killed in Alton, Illinois, defending his printing press against a proslavery mob. His death increased sympathy for the abolitionist cause.

Lovell, James Arthur, Jr. 1928–. US astronaut, crew member on the first manned flight to orbit the moon, the Apollo 8 mission (launched Dec. 21, 1968). He was also aboard the ill-fated Apollo 13 moon flight, aborted because of equipment malfunction.

Lowell, Amy 1874–1925. American poet and critic, a leader of the imagists. Her most famous poems are Lilacs and Patterns.

Lowell, Francis Cabot 1775–1817. American textile manufacturer. He was a founder of the Boston Manufacturing Co., the first factory to convert raw cotton into finished cloth.

Lowell, James Russell 1819–91. American poet, essayist, and critic. He was editor of the Atlantic Monthly and the North American Review and was an influential figure in 19th-cent. New England literary circles. Among his many works was The Bigelow Papers.

Lowell, Percival 1855–1916. American astronomer. He founded (1894) the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona, and predicted the discovery of the planet Pluto.

Lowell, Robert Traill Spence 1917–77. American poet. His works include In Lord Weary's Castle, Life Studies, The Dolphin, and Near the Ocean.

Lower Canada Name applied (1791–1841) to the Canadian region comprising present-day Quebec. Settled primarily by the French, it was joined with Upper Canada by the Act of Union (1841) and became known as Canada East. With the confederation of Canada (1867) it became the province of Quebec.

Lower Egypt Region of Egypt usually considered to include the Nile delta and valley north of latitude 30° N. A rich, fertile region, it was united with Upper Egypt by Egyptian king Menes (*c*3100 BC).

Lowie, Robert Harry 1883–1957. American anthropologist. He studied North American Indians and wrote the influential Primitive Society and Social Organization.

Loyalists ⟨Tories⟩ American colonists who remained loyal to Britain during the American Revolution (1775–83). Loyalists, often government officials and professionals, were centered in New York, Pennsylvania, Georgia, and the Carolinas. Loyalist raids, notably those by W. and J. Butler, roused bitter hatred toward them among the Colonial patriots and led to passage of laws confiscating their property. A large number of the Loyalists, seeking the protection of the British, migrated to Canada.

Lo-yang Historic city (pop. 750,000) in north-central China. Founded during the Chou dynasty, it was the capital of that dynasty (from 771 BC) and was the capital at various intervals of succeeding dynasties, including the Han, Northern Wei, and Sui.

Loyola, Saint Ignatious of See Ignatius of Loyola, Saint

Lübeck Historic city (pop. 240,000) and major port located in northeastern West Germany. Founded 1143, it became a free city in 1226. It rose as a commercial center of medieval Europe and was headquarters (from 1358) of the Hanseatic League (q.v.). The city declined in the 16th cent.

Lublin, Union of Agreement (July 1, 1569) between Poland and Lithuania, merging the two kingdoms into a federated state under a single monarch. King Sigismund II, king of Poland and Lithuania, pressured Lithuanian nobles into accepting formal unification, which lasted to the end of the 18th cent.

Lucan AD 39–65. Roman poet who wrote Bellum Civile (often called Pharsalia), on the civil war between Caesar and Pompey. He was compelled to kill himself when his part in a conspiracy against Nero was discovered.

Lucania Ancient region of southern Italy. Once inhabited by Greeks and Lucanians, it was devastated by wars with Rome in the 3rd cent. BC.

Lucaris, Cyril of See Jerusalem, Synod of Lucca Historic city (pop. 95,000) in north-central Italy. Founded by the Romans (2d cent. BC), it prospered from the 12th cent., when it became a free commune. The city was a center for the arts (12th–15th cents.), became a republic (15th cent.), and retained its freedom until the French conquest (1799). It became part of unified Italy in 1860.

Luce, Clare Boothe 1903–. American playwright and politician. Her plays include The Women, and Kiss the Boys Goodbye. She served as congresswoman from Connecticut (1943–47) and was ambassador to Italy (1953–56).

Luce, Henry Robinson 1898–1967. American publisher. He cofounded the weekly news magazine Time (1923), then founded Fortune (1930), Life (1936), and Sports Illustrated (1954).

Lucian fl. 2d cent. AD. Greek satirical author who wrote Dialogues of the Gods and Dialogues of the Dead.

Lucifer In Greek mythology, the planet Venus as the morning star. In the Bible, it is a name for Satan.

Lucilius, Gaius See Lucillius, Caius

Lucillius, Caius ⟨Lucilius, Gaius⟩ *c*180–102? BC. Latin poet. As the originator of Latin satire, he influenced Horace, Persius, and Juvenal.

Luckner, Felix, Graf von 1886–1966. German naval officer. He was known as the "Sea Devil" for his raids on commercial vessels during WW I. He destroyed more than $25 million worth of Allied shipping.

Lucrece ⟨Lucretia⟩ Legendary Roman matron known for her virtue. After being raped by Sextus Tarquinius, she killed herself. The incident was said to have provoked the Romans to revolt and drive out the Tarquin rulers.

Lucretia See Lucrece; Etruscans

Lucretius ⟨Titus Lucretius Carus⟩ *c*99–*c*55 BC. Roman poet. Lucretius is renowned for his work On the Nature of Things, which is a poetic treatment of the philosophies and scientific theories of Epicurus and Democritus.

Lucullus *c*110–56 BC. Roman general. Serving under Sulla, he defeated Mithridates VI and made other conquests in Asia Minor.

Luddites Bands of workingmen in England who attempted (1811–12, 1816) to destroy textile machinery. Fostered by low wages and unemployment, the movement began (1811) in Nottingham with night raids on textile factories to destroy equipment. The movement spread to other industrial areas, supposedly under the leadership of a mythical King Ludd (or Ned Ludd), and in 1812 harsh repressive measures were enacted to put an end to it. A brief resurgence of the movement was similarly dealt with.

Ludendorff, Erich von 1865–1937. German general. He was P. von Hindenburg's chief of staff during WW I and participated in A. Hitler's "beer-hall putsch" (1923). He was a fanatic in his Aryan racist views.

Ludford Bridge, Battle of See Roses, Wars of the

Luis See Louis

Luke, Saint Traditionally, author of the Third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. He is thought to have been a physician and was a companion of Saint Paul.

Lull, Ramon ⟨Lully, Raymond⟩ *c*1236–*c*1315. Catalan mystic and philosopher. He tried to convert the Muslims of North Africa to Christianity, and was said to have been stoned to death at Bougie.

Lully, Jean Baptiste 1632–87. French composer. He was composer to King Louis XIV and head of the Académie Royale de Musique. He developed the French overture form.

Lully, Raymond See Lull, Ramón

Lumière, Louis Jean and Auguste Marie Louis Nicolas 1864–1948, 1862–1954. French brothers who invented the cinematograph for photographing and projecting movies.

Lumumba, Patrice Hemery 1925–61. Political leader of Zaire (then called the Congo). He worked for its independence from Belgium and was its first prime minister (1960). He was murdered after being deposed in the unrest that followed independence.

Luna, Pedro de 1328–1423. Spanish ecclesiastic, antipope as Benedict XIII at Avignon (1394–1417) during the Great Schism. He proved able but was unwilling to relinquish his office to end the Great Schism. He was deposed (1417) by the Council of Constance (q.v.).

Lundy's Lane, Battle of ⟨Niagara, ~⟩ ⟨Bridgewater, ~⟩ Bloody but indecisive battle (July 25, 1814) during the War of 1812. Some 2,000–3,000 Americans, under Gen. W. Scott, advanced into southern Ontario, Canada, and at Lundy's Lane met 4,500 British soldiers, under Gen. Gordon Drummond. The battle raged into the night, when, with both sides exhausted, the Americans withdrew to Fort Erie.

Lunéville, Treaty of Treaty (Feb. 9, 1801) between Austria and France, ending Austria's participation in the French Revolutionary Wars. It provided for the division of territories in Italy. It also restored Pope Pius VII to Rome and Ferdinand IV to Naples.

Lusitania Ancient Roman province, including what is modern Portugal and part of western Spain. It was named for the Lusitani people, who resisted the Romans (2d cent. BC).

Lusitania British ship that was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine (May 7, 1915), with a loss of 1,195 lives. This incident was a factor in the US entry into WW I.

Lutetia ⟨Lutetia Parisiorum⟩ Roman name for what is now Paris, France.

Lutetia Parisiorum See Lutetia

Luther, Martin 1483–1546. German religious leader, father of the Protestant Reformation (q.v.) and founder of Lutheranism (q.v.). An Augustinian friar, he was ordained (1507), and subsequently was a professor (1511–46) at the University of Wittenberg, in Saxony. In ensuing years, he arrived at his fundamental doctrine of personal salvation through faith alone. This doctrine ultimately put him in conflict with the church practice (then widespread) of selling indulgences (q.v.), and, on Oct. 31, 1517, he nailed his famous Ninety-five Theses (q.v.) to the door of the church in Wittenberg to protest the practice. Thereafter Luther found wide support for his protest, refused to recant (1518), debated the Catholic

J. Eck (1519) in the famous but inconclusive Leipzig Debate, burned a papal bull condemning his views (1520), was thereupon excommunicated, and was called (1521) before the Diet of Worms (q.v.). During this period, he expanded the scope of reforms he sought, as set forth in three treatises: Address to the Christian Nobility of the German Nation, calling for German control of the German church; The Babylonian Captivity of the Church, attacking papal authority and denying the office of the priesthood as a link between God and man; and The Freedom of a Christian Man, reaffirming the doctrine of justification by faith alone. After the Diet of Worms ordered his arrest, Luther was given protection (1521–22) by the Elector Frederick III. He returned to Wittenberg, however, to try to prevent splits within the growing Reformation movement. The remainder of his years were spent in voluminous writing and in disputes with leaders of new sects spawned by his beliefs, including H. Zwingli and J. Calvin.

Lutheranism The branch of Protestant Christianity based on the teachings of M. Luther. Lutheranism stems from Luther's famous Ninety-five Theses (q.v.), which sparked the Protestant Reformation, though its doctrine is more conservative than that of Calvinist Reformed churches. Luther's doctrine stressed that man's salvation comes from faith alone, through the redeeming sacrifice of Jesus Christ; that the Scriptures constitute the one necessary guide to truth; and that the sacraments are valid only as aids to faith. The principal Lutheran statements of faith were the Augsburg Confession (q.v.), and Luther's two catechisms. These and other Lutheran documents were collected in the definitive Book of Concord (1580). Luther denied the sacrificial character of the Catholic Mass, and the Lutheran churches formed according to his doctrines abolished clerical celibacy, had communion administered under both kinds (bread and wine), and retained only the two sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The Lutheran churches, organized around individual local congregations, were at first established state churches in the German principalities. Lutheranism also became the established church in Denmark, Finland, Norway, and Sweden. The Prussian state attempted to merge Lutheran churches forcibly with Reformed churches and this led to the first free Lutheran church (1817). This was the typical form Lutheranism assumed in North America, where it was first brought to Manhattan by Dutch settlers (1625) and to Fort Christina (modern Wilmington, Delaware) by Swedish settlers (1638). (See also Luther, Martin; Reformation.)

Lutzen, Battle of 1. Swedish victory (Nov. 16, 1632) in Saxony during the Thirty Years' War (1618–48). Swedish king Gustavus II, in an effort to aid German Protestant allies, attacked and defeated the army of the Holy Roman Empire, led by Count A. Wallenstein. 2. Inconclusive battle (May 2, 1813) in the Napoleonic Wars (1803–15). Napoleon forced the allies to withdraw but did so at a cost of 20,000 casualties.

Luxembourg ⟨Luxemburg⟩ European grand duchy lying between Belgium, France, and Germany. Once a county of the Holy Roman Empire, it was made a duchy (1354) by Emperor Charles IV. It was subsequently ruled by the Spanish and Austrian Hapsburgs, was occupied by France (1794), and became a part of The Netherlands by the Congress of Vienna (1815). In 1867, it was declared a neutral, independent territory, although the Germans occupied it during WW I and WW II. Constitutional revisions (1948) ended Luxembourg's official neutral status.

Luxembourg, François Henri, duke of 1628–95. French general. He served under his cousin, the Great Condé, in the Fronde and led successful campaigns in Flanders during the War of the Grand Alliance (q.v.), defeating William of Orange at Steenkerke (1692) and Neerwinden (1693).

Luxemburg See Luxembourg

Luxemburg, Rosa 1870?–1919. German revolutionary. She was a founder of the Spartacus party (q.v.), which became the German Communist party. Arrested after WW I, she was murdered by soldiers.

Luynes, Charles d'Albert, duke of 1578–1621. French statesman. He was the favorite and chief adviser of Louis XIII and conspired with him to kill C. Concini and to exile Louis' mother, Marie de Médici. He worked to check the influence of nobles and Protestants.

Lvov Russian city (pop. 553,000) located in the Ukraine. Founded (1256) by a Ukrainian nobleman, it became an important medieval trading center. Austria assumed control of the city by the first Partition of Poland (1772), and, after serving as capital of the Ukrainian Republic (1918–1919), it was annexed by Poland (1921). Russia occupied it (1939), lost it to the Germans in WW II, and formally annexed it (1945).

Lvov, Prince Georgi Yevgenyevich 1861–1925. Russian statesman. A member of the first Duma (1905), he was head of the revolutionary Provisional Government from March to July, 1917. He resigned in favor of A. Kerensky.

Lyautey, Louis Hubert Gonzalve 1854–1934. French statesman and marshal. He was resident general of Morocco (1912–16, 1917–25), holding it against the Germans in WW I.

Lyceum Ancient Athenian school where Aristotle taught (founded 335 BC). He and his students were called Peripatetics because they strolled about the school grounds during lessons. The school declined soon after Aristotle's death.

Lycurgus In Greek tradition, the Spartan leader whose reforms of Spartan government and society created the characteristically militaristic Spartan way of life. He may have ruled in the 7th cent. BC.

Lydda ⟨Lod⟩ City in modern Israel mentioned in the Bible as the site of Peter's miracle. Traditionally, it is the home of England's patron saint, Saint George.

Lydia Ancient country of Asia Minor in what is now northwest Turkey. The tyrant Cyges founded the Mermnadae dynasty (685–546 BC), which built a powerful Lydian empire of great wealth. The Lydians are believed to have originated the use of coined money during this time. Croesus, the last ruler of independent Lydia, was defeated by Cyrus the Great of Persia (546 BC). Lydia later became a province under the Romans.

Lyell, Sir Charles 1797–1875. English geologist. He wrote Principles of Geology and Elements of Geology and was a leading exponent of uniformitarianism, the doctrine that the earth's surface was shaped by processes that continue to the present day.

Lyons City (pop. 457,400) in eastern France. Founded (43 BC) by the Romans, it was an early center of Christianity in Gaul. It was made part of the Holy Roman Empire (1032), saw the rise of the Waldenses (q.v.) in the 12th cent., and became part of French royal domains (1312). A center of the silk industry in the West from the 15th cent., Lyons suffered during the French Revolution. During WW II, it was a stronghold of the French Resistance.

Lyons, Councils of 1. First (13th ecumenical council): Called (1245) by Pope Innocent IV during his struggle with Holy Roman Emperor Frederick II. With Rome under siege by Frederick, the pope used the session to excommunicate and depose Frederick. 2. Second (14th ecumenical council): Called (1274) by Pope Gregory X to act on a pledge by Byzantine emperor Michael VIII to unite the Eastern church with the West. After concessions on the Filioque were made by delegates from the Greek church, the union was proclaimed. It was largely ignored, however, and was later repudiated by Andronicus II. The council also established procedures for election of the pope by cardinals, and ended the Interregnum by recognizing Rudolf I as Holy Roman Emperor.

Lyons, Joseph Aloysius 1879–1939. Australian statesman. He was a founder of the United Australia party (1931), and as prime minister (1931–39) brought about a period of economic stability.

Lysander d. 395 BC. Spartan military leader. He was admiral of the Spartan fleet that defeated Athens at Notium (407 BC) and that ended the Peloponnesian War by taking Athens in 404 BC.

Lysenko, Trofim Denisovich 1898–1976. Russian agronomist and biologist. As president of the Academy of Agricultural Sciences (1938–56, 1958–62), he tried to develop high-yield crops and to advance his unorthodox views of genetics.

Lysias *c*459–*c*380 BC. Greek orator and speech writer. His simple, unembellished and yet effective style had an important influence on Attic Greek prose.

Lysimachus *c*355–281 BC. Macedonian general under Alexander the Great. After Alexander's death, he took part in the Wars of the Diadochi (q.v.) and thereby became ruler of Thrace (and later Macedonia). He was killed in battle against Seleucus.

Lysippos See Lysippus

Lysippus ⟨Lysippos⟩ Greek sculptor in 4th cent. BC who changed the style of rendering the human figure, making the head smaller and the body more slender. He was a favorite of Alexander the Great.

M

Mabillon, Jean 1632–1707. French scholar. A Benedictine monk, he wrote De re diplomatica, which established the science of diplomatics, the study of historical sources.

Mabovitch, Goldie See Meir, Golda

Macao ⟨Macau⟩ Portuguese province (pop. 282,000) at the mouth of the Canton River in China. Settled by Portugal (1557), it was a major port until the rise of Hong Kong (19th cent.).

McAdoo, William Gibbs 1863–1941. American politician. As US secretary of the treasury (1913–18), he founded and was first chairman of the Federal Reserve Board (1913).

MacArthur, Douglas 1880–1964. American general. He was Allied commander of the Southwest Pacific during WW II and administrator of the Allied occupation of Japan. He was dismissed as commander of the UN forces in Korea by Pres. H. Truman (1951) after he publicly advocated a second drive into North Korea.

Macau See Macao

Macaulay, Thomas Babington 1800–54. English historian. His best-known work is The History of England from the Accession of James the Second.

McAuliffe, Anthony C. See Bulge, Battle of the

Macbeth d. 1057. Scottish king (1040–57). He killed his cousin Duncan to gain the throne and was himself killed and succeeded by Duncan's son Malcolm Canmore. His story was the basis for W. Shakespeare's play.

Maccabees ⟨Hasmoneans⟩ Family of Jewish rulers and patriots that ruled Palestine (2d-1st cent. BC). In reaction to suppression and persecution of Jewish religious observances by Seleucid king Antiochus IV, a Jewish priest named Mattathias (d. *c*166 BC) began (*c*168) a guerrilla war called the Revolt of the Maccabees. His third son, Judas Maccabeus (d. *c*161 BC), defeated Seleucid armies and expelled them (164) from Jerusalem. He then rededicated the Temple (commemorated by Hanukkah) and was killed during a subsequent Seleucid invasion. He was succeeded by his brother, Jonathan (d. 143 BC), who was successful against the Seleucids and became the Jewish high priest. Killed by the Seleucids, he was succeeded by Simon (d. 135 BC), who negotiated (142) independence for Judaea (southern Palestine) and was made high priest and governor. He was assassinated, and was succeeded by John Hyrcanus (d. 104 BC), his son, under whose rule Judaea reached its height. Later Judaean history was marked by the religious struggle between the Sadducees and the Pharisees. The last Maccabees to rule were the brothers Hyrcanus II (d. 30 BC) and Aristobulus II (d. 48 BC), who engaged in civil war against each other. The war was ended by the Roman general Pompey the Great, who conquered Jerusalem (63 BC), reduced Hyrcanus to religious rule, and established Roman political control over Judaea.

McCarthy, Eugene Joseph 1916–. US senator (1958–70). An opponent of the Vietnam War, he made an unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination (1967).

McCarthy, Joseph Raymond 1909–57. American politician. US senator from Wisconsin (1947–57). As chairman of the Senate's Government Operations Committee, he ruined many careers by accusing government officials (and others) of Communist affiliations. He was censured by the Senate in 1954. His tactics gave rise to the term "McCarthyism."

McClellan, George Brinton 1826–85. Union general in the American Civil War. Made commander in chief (Nov., 1861), he stopped the Confederate advance at Antietam but was removed from command (Nov., 1862) because of his reluctance to engage the enemy. In 1864 he was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the presidency.

McClernand, John Alexander 1812–1900. Union general in the American Civil War. He fought at the Battle of Shiloh and commanded the Vicksburgh Campaign (1863) until superseded by Gen. U. Grant, and relieved of command for insubordination.

McClure, Sir Robert John Le Mesurier 1807–73. British naval officer. As commander of a ship in an Arctic expedition (1850–54), he was the first to complete a Northwest Passage, culminating the long search for a sea route from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean by way of the Arctic.

McClure, Samuel Sidney 1857–1949. American editor and publisher. He established the first US newspaper syndicate (1884) and founded (1893) McClure's Magazine.

McCormick, Cyrus Hall 1809–84. American inventor and manufacturer. He designed the McCormick reaper (1831). His company merged with others to form the International Harvester Company.

McCormick, Robert Rutherford 1880–1955. American editor and publisher. As editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune (1920–55), he became a leader in conservative journalism. He opposed labor unions, the New Deal, and international involvement.

McCormick, Ruth Hanna 1880–1945. US politician. The daughter of M. Hanna, she served as Republican national committeewoman (1924–28) and congresswoman from Illinois (1929–31).

McCrae, John 1872–1918. Canadian physician and poet. A surgeon in the British Army in WW I, he wrote the famous poem In Flanders Fields.

McCulloch vs Maryland US Supreme Court decision (1819) confirming the powers of Congress to establish a federal bank. Chief Justice J. Marshall's ruling enhanced the powers of the federal government.

Macdonald, Alexandre 1765–1840. French general. He fought in the French Revolutionary Wars and was made marshal by Napoleon. He later served Louis XVIII.

Macdonald, Flora 1722–90. Scottish Jacobite heroine. She aided in the escape of Prince Charles Edward Stuart after his defeat at Culloden Moor (1746).

MacDonald, James Ramsey 1866–1937. English statesman, first British Labour party prime minister (1924, 1929–31, 1931–35).

Macdonald, Sir John Alexander 1815–91. Canadian statesman. He played a major role in the union of the Canadian provinces (1867) as the Dominion of Canada and was its first prime minister (1867–73, 1878–91).

Macdonough, Thomas 1783–1825. American naval officer. He defeated a superior British fleet (Sept. 11, 1814) on Lake Champlain in the War of 1812. His victory remains one of the great events of US naval history.

McDougall, Alexander 1731–86. American Revolutionary War general. He distinguished himself in the battles of White Plains and Germantown, and became commander of West Point (1780) after B. Arnold's plot to surrender West Point to the British failed. He was a member of the Continental Congress (1781–82, 1784–85).

MacDowell, Edward Alexander 1861–1908. American composer, known best for his symphonic poems and piano pieces.

McDowell, Irvin 1818–85. Union general in the American Civil War. He commanded at the first Battle of Bull Run (1861) and was superseded by Gen. G. McClellan. He was relieved of command after the second Battle of Bull Run (1862).

Macedonia European region on the Balkan Peninsula consisting of parts of Greece, Yugoslavia, and Bulgaria. Under Philip II (359–336 BC), ancient Macedon came to dominate Greece. Seat of the Macedonian Empire under Alexander the Great, it later was conquered by the Roman, Byzantine, and Ottoman empires. Various claims to the region led to the Balkan Wars (1912–13) and the division of the region, largely between Greece and Yugoslavia.

Macedonia, Kingdom of Ancient country located in northern Greece. Though the region was colonized by Greeks in the 8th cent. BC, Macedonia did not become a major power until the 4th cent. BC, when Philip II (q.v.) made his kingdom the dominant power in Greece. His conquests set the stage for the spectacular reign of his son, Alexander the Great (q.v.), who created a vast, but short-lived, Hellenistic empire (4th cent. BC) that extended as far east as India. Following Alexander's death (323), his generals fought against each other in the Wars of the Diadochi (q.v.) and eventually carved up that empire into a number of successor states. Macedonia proper, weakened by the wars, was restored (3d cent. BC) during the reigns of Cassander, Antigonus II, and Antigonus III. Under Philip V, however, it was defeated by Rome in the first two Macedonian Wars (q.v.). After the Third Macedonian War Rome divided up the kingdom and, in 146 BC, made it the first Roman province.

Macedonianism Religious heresy advanced by Macedonius (fl. AD 360), Bishop of Constantinople. It held that the Holy Spirit was not equal to the Father and the Son. Macedonianism was condemned by the Council of Constantinople (AD 381).

Macedonian Wars Four wars between the Kingdom of Macedonia (q.v.) and Rome that resulted in the complete domination of Greece by Rome. 1. First (214–205 BC): King Philip V (q.v.) allied himself with Carthage against Rome during the Second Punic War, and the resultant conflict with Rome was the First Macedonian War. The war ended to Philip's advantage. 2. Second (200–196 BC): This war was brought on by Philip V's attempts to expand his domains. The terms imposed by the victorious Romans were harsh and included subjugation by Rome and payment of tribute. 3. Third (171–168 BC): Philip's son, Perseus, provoked the third war with Rome by trying to expand Macedonian control in Greece. Rome defeated him and divided Macedonia into four republics. 4. Fourth (149–148 BC): The Romans this time put down a Macedonian revolt against their rule. Macedonia was thereafter reduced to a Roman province.

McGillivray, Alexander 1759–93. American Indian chief. A leader of the Creek Indians, he supported the British during the American Revolution. Later, with Spanish assistance, he successfully resisted American claims to Creek lands.

McGovern, George Stanley 1922–. American politician, US congressman (1957–61) and senator (1963–81) from South Dakota. A leader of the movement to end the Vietnam War, he was unsuccessful Democratic candidate for president (1972).

McGuffey, William Holmes 1800–73. American educator. He compiled the famous McGuffey Eclectic Readers, which were used in American schools for generations.

McHenry, Fort See Fort McHenry

Machado, Gerardo 1871–1939. Cuban political leader. As Cuba's president (1925–33), he attempted internal reforms, but his brutal suppression of opposition led to his downfall.

Machado de Assis, Joaquim Marie 1839–1908. Brazilian author, considered Brazil's greatest writer. His novels include Memórias póstumas de Braz Cubas, Quincas Borba, and Dom Casmurro.

Machiavelli, Niccolò 1496–1527. Italian statesman, author, and philosopher. A Florentine diplomat, he was imprisoned briefly by the Medici when they regained power (1512). After his release he turned to writing. His best-known work, The Prince, contains Machiavelli's thoughts on the methods by which a prince may acquire and make use of political power. It is thought that he used C. Borgia as the model for his cynical, ruthless prince.

Machu Picchu Ancient Incan city, located in the Andes mountains of Peru. First discovered (1911) by Hiram Bingham (1875–1956), it is one of the major pre-Columbian archaeological sites.

Mackenzie, Sir Alexander 1764?–1820. Canadian explorer. He charted the course of the Mackenzie River (1789) and made the first transcontinental journey across America north of Mexico (1793).

Mackenzie, William Lyon 1795–1861. Canadian journalist and political insurgent. He led an unsuccessful attempt (1837) to take over the government in Toronto

McKinley Tariff Act See Harrison, Benjamin

McKinley, William 1843–1901. Twenty-fifth US president (1897–1901), successor to G. Cleveland. He distinguished himself in the American Civil War, became a Republican congressman (1877–83, 1885–91) from Ohio and championed the establishment of high protective tariffs. He secured passage of the McKinley Tariff Act of 1890 but was defeated for reelection. Returning to Ohio, McKinley received the support of M. Hanna and the Ohio Democratic party, and became governor (1892–96). Chosen the Republican presidential candidate in 1896, he supported the party's gold platform and defeated the Democratic candidate, W. Bryan, who campaigned for free silver (q.v.). During McKinley's first term the US engaged in the Spanish-American War (q.v.), from which it emerged a world power and gained possession of Cuba and the Philippines. McKinley also presided over the annexation of Hawaii, and supported the Open Door policy in China. McKinley again opposed Bryan in the 1900 election and was reelected. He altered his stand on tariffs and began to support commercial reciprocity. He spoke on the subject at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo (Sept. 5, 1901), and the next day was shot by an anarchist, Leon Czolgosz. He died Sept. 14 and was succeeded by his vice-president, T. Roosevelt.

Mack von Leiberich, Baron Karl See Ulm, Battle of MacLeish, Archibald 1892–. American poet, three times winner of the Pulitzer Prize (1933, 1953, 1959). He served as an adviser to President F. Roosevelt and as librarian of Congress (1939–44).

McLuhan, Herbert Marshall 1911–. Canadian educator and author. He is noted for his books on the effects electronic media have on society. Among them are Understanding Media: The Extensions of Man and The Medium Is the Message: An Inventory of Effects.

MacMahon, Marie Edmé Patrice Maurice de 1808–93. French marshal and statesman. A monarchist, he was the second president (1873–79) of the French Third Republic (1870–1940).

Macmillan, Daniel and Macmillan, Alexander 1813–57; 1818–96. Scottish booksellers and publishers. They founded (1844) the publishing firm of Macmillan and Company.

MacMillan, Maurice Harold 1894–. British statesman. As prime minister (1957–63), he sought to improve relations with the US after the Suez Canal crisis, but failed to gain Great Britain's entry into the Common Market.

McNaughton, Andrew George Latta 1887–1966. Canadian army officer. He was commander of Canadian forces in England during WW II.

Macon, Nathaniel 1758–1837. American politician, US congressman (1791–1815) and senator (1815–28) from North Carolina. He was a strong supporter of T. Jefferson and states' rights.

Macon's Bill No. 2 See Embargo Act

Macready, William Charles 1793–1873. English actor and manager of Covent Garden theatre (1837–39) and of Drury Lane (1841–43). His rivalry with American actor Edwin Forrest (1806–72) sparked violence (May 10, 1849) at New York's Astor Place opera hall. In the ensuing riot more than 20 were killed.

McReynolds, James Clark 1862–1946. American jurist. Appointed associate justice to the Supreme Court (1914–41) by President W. Wilson, he was a strong opponent of the New Deal legislation.

Macrobius fl. AD *c*400. Latin author and philosopher. He wrote the Saturnalia, a series of dialogues.

Madagascar (Democratic Republic of ~; formerly Malagasy Republic) Island republic (pop. 8,740,000) located on Madagascar, off the southeast coast of Africa. Capital is Tananarive. First settled by Africans and Indonesians, Madagascar was discovered by the Portuguese (1500), and the French established tentative settlements on the island (1642 to late 18th cent.). Several independent kingdoms were once formed on Madagascar, but in the 18th cent. the Merina people began to establish their control over the island with British aid. During this period Christian missionaries and foreign trade were alternately encouraged and opposed by Merina rulers, until the reign (1868–83) of Queen Ranavalona II, who converted to Christianity. The last Merina ruler was Queen Ranavalona III (reigned 1883–96). The French declared a protectorate over Madagascar (1882), which was recognized by Britain and Germany (1890). The Merina resisted, heavy fighting broke out (1894–96), and the monarchy was abolished (1897). Madagascar was occupied by the British (1942) during WW II. In 1958 it became the Malagasy Republic, an autonomous state within the French Community, and on June 26, 1960, it became independent. Following the resignation of the president (1975) over continuing economic problems, Commander Didier Ratsiraka was installed (June, 1975) as president. Ratsiraka then began a program of nationalization.

Madero, Francisco Indalecio 1873–1913. Mexican president (1911–13). He was a leader in the revolution (1911) against Pres. P. Díaz. Unsuccessful as a reform president, he was arrested and murdered by order of V. Huerta.

Madison American city (pop. 170,600), capital city of Wisconsin. Founded in 1836, it is a major commercial and governmental center and seat of the University of Wisconsin.

Madison, Dolly 1768–1849. Wife of President J. Madison and famous Washington, D.C., hostess. Her letters and memoirs are a valuable source for early US history.

Madison, James 1751–1836. Fourth US president (1809–17), successor to T. Jefferson. An early opponent of British colonial policies, Madison served in the Virginia Convention (1776) and in the Continental Congress (1780–83), then served in the Virginia legislature (1784–86). As a delegate to the Annapolis Convention (q.v.) in 1786 he supported the call to convene the Federal Constitutional Convention (1787). There he became, with A. Hamilton, the leading force in the drafting of the Constitution. After the convention, he joined Hamilton and J. Jay in writing the Federalist Papers, which argued for adoption of the Constitution. As a congressman from Virginia (1789–97), he next supported establishment of the Bill of Rights and opposed the conservative policies followed by Hamilton and others. With T. Jefferson, he drafted the Virginia Resolutions (see Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions) in response to the Alien and Sedition Acts (q.v.). On Jefferson's election as president, Madison became secretary of state (1801–09). His support of a trade embargo against Britain (see Embargo Act) contributed to the outbreak of the War of 1812, which was fought during his terms as president (1809–17). Discontent with Madison's policies and his conduct of the war led in New England to the Hartford Convention (q.v.).

Madison, Marbury vs See Marbury vs. Madison

Madjapahit Empire See Majapahit Empire

Madoc (Madog) fl. 1170? Legendary Welsh prince said to have discovered America before C. Columbus.

Madog See Madoc

Mad Parliament See Oxford, Provisions of

Madras Indian city (pop. 2,469,400), located in southeastern India. Founded (1639) by the British East India Company, it is a major commercial and cultural center.

Madrid Capital city (pop. 3,520,300) of Spain and of Madrid province. Originally a Moorish fortress, it was captured (1083) by Alfonso VI of Castile and became the Spanish capital (1561) under King

Philip II. The scene of a revolt against the French (1808) during the Peninsular War, Madrid was a Loyalist stronghold against the forces of F. Franco during the Spanish Civil War until its fall (1939).

Madrid, Treaty of Treaty (Jan. 14, 1526) between Hapsburg emperor Charles V and his prisoner, French King Francis I, temporarily ending the Italian Wars (q.v.) between France and Spain. The treaty was never ratified, and Francis subsequently renounced its provisions.

Maecenas d. 8 BC. Roman statesman. He was adviser to Emperor Augustus and a noted patron of the arts. Among his friends were Horace and Vergil.

Maerlant, Jacob van *c*1235–*c*1300. A Flemish poet. He wrote didactic poetry, the most famous being Spiegel Historiael, an adaptation of Vincent of Beauvais' Speculum Historiale.

Maeterlinck, Maurice 1862–1949. Belgian symbolist poet and dramatist. His play Pelléas et Mélisande (1892) was the inspiration for C. Debussy's opera. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1911.

Mafia ⟨in recent times, Cosa Nostra⟩ Notorious crime organization that originated in Sicily. Currently active in the US, S. America, and elsewhere, the group is involved in illegal and quasilegal (business) ventures. The Mafia dates from the 13th cent. and operated in Sicily (18th–19th cent.) as autonomous bands of criminals. Noted for their use of terrorism, bloody vendettas, and vows of secrecy, the Mafia bands resisted government campaigns to suppress them (late 19th, early 20th cent.). The group spread to the US in the last years of the 19th cent. Using tactics of their forebears and aided by widespread evasion of the law during Prohibition, organized Mafia "families" built a nationwide crime syndicate that now dominates organized crime in the US.

Magdeburg, sack of Destruction (May 20, 1631) of the city of Magdeburg, now in East Germany, during the Thirty Years' War. Imperial forces under J. Tilly successfully stormed the city and killed its defenders. Fires broke out, and virtually the whole city was destroyed.

Magellan, Ferdinand *c*1480–1521. Portuguese navigator and explorer. Sponsored by Spanish king Charles I (later Holy Roman Emperor Charles V), Magellan set out (1519) to find a western sea route to the Molucca Islands (Spice Islands). He sailed the strait that bears his name, and discovered the Philippines. Though he died in the Philippines (1521), his expedition continued west, under J. Cano, becoming the first to circumnavigate the globe.

Magenta, Battle of French-Piedmontese victory (June 4, 1859) over Austria near Milan, Italy. The Austrian loss advanced the cause of Italian unity.

Magi Members of a priestly caste in ancient Persia. They became priests of the Zoroastrian religion and were considered wise men. The word "magic" comes from "magi." In Christian tradition, the Magi (or Three Kings) brought gifts to the newborn Jesus Christ. The three were Caspar, Melchior, and Balthazar.

Maginot, André See Maginot Line

Maginot Line Network of fortifications on the French-German frontier. Named for war minister André Maginot (1877–1932), who supervised its construction, it was supposedly impregnable to any German assault. During WW II the Germans bypassed the line, attacking through Belgium and thus rendering the line useless.

Magliabechi, Antonio 1633–1714. Italian bibliophile. He was court librarian (1673–1714) to Cosimo III de Medici, grand duke of Tuscany. His 30,000-volume library is now part of the National Library in Florence.

Magna Carta ⟨Magna Charta⟩ English charter, important in the development of British constitutional law and a symbol (mainly by later interpretations) of basic liberties. Angered by King John's heavy taxation and abuses of power, the barons and the church united to force him (by threat of civil war) to sign the document at Runnymede on June 19, 1215. Originally written to guarantee rights of the nobility, it contained provisions for church freedom, trial by jury, habeas corpus, and matters of minor import. John later attempted to void the charter and died in the resulting civil war. However, it was reaffirmed by his son, Henry III, in 1216, 1217, and 1225.

Magna Charta See Magna Carta

Magna Graecia Ancient Greek colonies in southern Italy. Established in the 8th cent. BC, they thrived in the 7th and 6th cents. BC, but soon after began their decline.

Magnesia, Battle of See Antiochus III

Magnetius See Mursa, Battle of

Magnus I ⟨Magnus the Good⟩ 1024–47. King of Norway (1035–47) and Denmark (1042–47), son of Olaf II. He succeeded Danish king Harthacanute (1042), thereby joining Norway and Denmark. He attempted to press Harthacanute's claim to the English throne but was unsuccessful.

Magnus VI 1238–80. Norwegian King (1263–80), son of Haakon IV. He established a comprehensive system of law in Norway.

Magnus VII 1316–73. King of Sweden (1319–63) and Norway (1319–55), successor to his grandfather Haakon V. A weak ruler, he lost the Norwegian crown to his son Haakon VI and the Swedish throne to his nephew Albert, duke of Mecklenburg (1340?–1412), who ruled as Albert III.

Magnus the Good See Magnus I

Magruder, John Bankhead 1810–71. Confederate general in the American Civil War. He defeated Gen. B. Butler at Big Bethel (June 1861) and later commanded Confederate forces in the Peninsular Campaign (1862).

Magyars People, living primarily in Hungary, who speak the Hungarian language of the Finno-Ugric family. Descended from nomadic peoples who migrated from the Urals (5th cent.), they also include groups living in Romania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, and the Ukraine.

Mahabharata One of the two great Sanskrit epics (with the Ramayana) of ancient India. The 18-book work, composed between 200 BC and AD 200, is a complex merging of Indian history and Hindu religious lore. The Mahabharata contains the Bhagavad-Gita, the most important single religious text in Hinduism.

Mahadi, Muhammad Ahmed ⟨Muhammad Ahmed⟩ 1843?–85. Muslim leader who claimed he was the Mahdi. He led a successful revolution against the Egyptian occupation of the Sudan, and defeated the British at Khartoum (1885).

Mahamaya See Buddha

Mahan, Alfred Thayer See Sea Power

Maharashtra, Kingdom of See Marathas, Kingdom of Mahavira ⟨Vardhamana⟩ *c*599–527 BC. Last of the 24 tirthankaras (saints) who founded the Indian religion of Jainism. He established a monastic order that practiced asceticism and respect for all life.

Mahayana A leading form of Buddhism, practiced in China, Japan, Korea, and Tibet, and noted for its more liberal treatment of Buddhist doctrine.

Mahdi In Islam, a leader who will appear at the end of the world to save true believers. Although this is not mentioned in the Koran, there have been several claimants to the title.

Mahican Indians ⟨Mohican ~⟩ North American Indian tribe that lived in the upper Hudson Valley. They were dispersed in the mid-17th cent. as a result of wars with the Mohawks. A number of Mohicans settled in Stockbridge, Mass.

Mahler, Gustav 1860–1911. Austrian composer and conductor. He is known best for his nine symphonies and his unfinished tenth symphony.

Mahmud II 1784–1839. Ottoman sultan (1808–39). During his reign, territory was lost to Russia, Syria was ceded to Egypt, and Greece became independent.

Mahone, William 1826–95. Confederate general in the American Civil War and US politician. As US senator from Virginia (1881–87), he was a powerful leader in Virginia politics after Reconstruction.

Mahrattas, Kingdom of See Marathas, Kingdom of Maia In Greek mythology, the eldest of the Pleiades, daughters of Atlas. She was the mother of Hermes by Zeus.

Maida, Battle of Battle (July 4, 1806) at Maida, southern Italy, during the Napoleonic Wars. Some 5,000 British troops under Gen. John Stuart defeated a French force led by Gen. Jean Reynier (1771–1814), thereby halting the French advance south.

Mailer, Norman 1923–. American writer, noted for his incorporation of factual material within a fictional framework. Among his books are The Naked and the Dead, The Deer Park, The Armies of the Night, and The Executioner's Song.

Maillol, Aristide 1861–1944. French artist. Originally a painter and tapestry designer, he became famous for his massive statues of female nude figures.

Maimonides ⟨Maimun, Moses ben⟩ 1135–1204. Spanish-born Jewish philosopher, considered one of the greatest influences on Jewish thought. He wrote a commentary on the Mishna, the Mishneh Torah, and a Guide for the Perplexed.

Maimun, Moses ben See Maimonides

Maine Northeastern US state (pop. 1,124,700), the 23rd state. The Maine coast had long been known to mariners of various countries, and the entire region was granted to the Plymouth Company in 1606. The first English settlement failed (1607), but there were several successful settlements by the time Maine was annexed to Massachusetts (1652). Conflict with the French and Indians slowed the area's development, and there was dissatisfaction with Massachusetts rule. Maine was admitted to the Union in 1820. The Aroostook War (q.v.) led to the Webster-Ashburton Treaty settling the US boundary with Canada.

Maine US battleship whose destruction in the harbor of Havana (Feb. 15, 1898) precipitated US entry into the Spanish-American War.

Maintenon, Françoise d'Aubigné, marquise de 1635–1719. Second wife of King Louis XIV of France. She was governess for his illegitimate children and married him morganatically (1685?).

Maipu, Battle of Battle (Apr. 5, 1818), near Santiago, Chile. Here J. de San Martin defeated Spanish royalist forces and gained independence for Chile.

Maitland, William 1528?–73. Scottish statesman. A supporter and adviser of Mary Queen of Scots, he worked for the unification of England and Scotland under her rule.

Majapahit Empire ⟨Madjapahit ~⟩ ⟨Modjopahit ~⟩ Hindu kingdom that flourished in Java (13-15th cents.). The Majapahit period is regarded as a golden age in the history of Java. The kingdom was centered in eastern Java, though its extent at the height of its power is uncertain. Founded (1292) by King Vijaya, the kingdom reached its zenith under Vijaya's grandson, King Hayam Wuruk (1350–89), and his minister Gajah Mada. Muslim states that emerged in northern Java conquered the Majapahit kingdom in the late 15th cent.

Majorian d. AD 461. Roman emperor of the West (AD 457–461). He became emperor with the support of Ricimer and worked to reform tax laws. After his defeat by Gaiseric (AD 460), he abdicated and was murdered on Ricimer's orders.

Makarios III ⟨Mouskos, Mihail Christodoulou⟩ 1913–77. Archbishop of the Orthodox Church of Cyprus. A leader in the enosis movement for union with Greece, he became first president of independent Cyprus (1959–77). His ouster in 1974 was followed by the crisis in Cyprus (q.v.) and his return to power that year.

Malacca ⟨Melaka⟩ Malayan state. Malacca has in turn been ruled by the Portuguese, Dutch, English, and Japanese. It became part of Malaysia in 1963.

Malachy, Saint 1095–1148. Irish archbishop and church reformer. He established territorial hierarchy in the Irish church and founded (1142) Mellifont, the first Cistercian abbey in Ireland.

Malagasy Republic See Madagascar

Malan, Daniel François 1874–1959. South African statesman. As prime minister (1948–54), he established apartheid laws for the separation of the races.

Malatesta Italian family which ruled Rimini and the area around it from the 13th to 16th cents. Prominent members were Malatesta da Verucchio (d. 1312), a leader of the Guelphs, and Sigismondo Pandolfo Malatesta (1417–68).

Malatesta, Sigismondo Pandolfo See Malatesta

Malawi ⟨ Republic of Malawi; formerly Nyasaland⟩ Republic in southeast Africa. First explored (1859) by D. Livingstone, the region was annexed by Britian (1891) as the British Central African Protectorate. Renamed Nyasaland, it became (1953) part of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Opposition to the Federation formed in Nyasaland, and it was abolished (1963). Nyasaland became independent as Malawi (1964) and became a republic (1966).

Malaya Peninsula of Southeast Asia, now divided between Malaysia and Singapore.

Malaysia Constitutional monarchy located in Southeast Asia. It is divided into two parts: West Malaysia, on the Malay peninsula, and East Malaysia, on the island of Borneo. Its capital is Kuala Lumpur. Key dates in the history of Malaysia include:

1511 Portugal occupied Malacca on the Malay peninsula.

1641 Dutch captured Malacca.

1786 British East India Company given rights to the island of Penang.

1800 Sultan of Kedah gave British rights to Province of Wellesley on the mainland.

1816 Siam, extending control into region, acquired Perah.

1819 Britain founded Singapore.

1821 Siam acquired Kedah.

1824 Treaty of London defined British and Dutch spheres of influence; Britain acquired Malacca; Straits Settlement created joint administration for Penang, Malacca, and Singapore.

1874 Pankor Engagement; marked beginning of British domination of Malay states following period of unrest, civil wars, and piracy.

1896 Federated Malay states created; British resident general named.

1909 Britain gained control of additional territory from Siam.

1940–45 Japan occupied Malaya for duration of WW II.

1946–48 Britain resumed control; created unpopular Union of Malaya (1946), replaced (Feb. 1, 1948) by Federation of Malaya.

1948–50 Communist insurrection ("The Emergency"); 500,000 Chinese residents resettled because most Communists involved were Chinese.

1957 Malaya gained independence; joined the British Commonwealth; admitted to UN.

1963 Singapore, Sabah, and Sarawak joined (Sept. 16) federation, establishing Federation of Malaysia; federation opposed by Indonesia, which mounted guerrilla war (1963–65).

1965 Singapore (with large ethnic Chinese population) seceded from the federation.

1969 Violence followed Chinese electoral gains; parliament suspended.

1970–76 Tun Abdul Razak in office as prime minister.

1976–81 Datuk Hussein bin Onn in office as prime minister.

1978 "Boat people" fleeing Vietnam poured into Malaysia.

1978 Official ban on "boat people" ended (Nov.) when several hundred drowned off Malaysian coast.

1981– Datuk Seri Mahathir bin Muhammad in office as prime minister.

Malchus See Porphyry

Malcolm III ⟨Malcolm Canmore⟩ d. 1093. Scottish king (1057–93), successor to Macbeth, whom he killed in battle. He gave refuge to Edgar the Aetheling and married Edgar's sister, Saint Margaret. He was killed on a raid into England.

Malcolm Canmore See Malcolm III

Malcolm X ⟨Little, Malcolm⟩ 1925–65. American black leader. A militant Black Muslim, he preached separation from whites, but later came to believe that blacks and whites might be able to live together. He became involved in a struggle within the Black Muslim movement and was assassinated.

Malebranche, Nicolas de See Cartesianism

Malenkov, Georgi Maksimilianovich 1901–. Soviet statesman and Communist leader. He became premier and party secretary (briefly, in 1953) after the death of J. Stalin (1953) but was forced to resign as premier, following a policy struggle with N. Khrushchev and others.

Malevich, Casimir See suprematism

Mali ⟨Republic of Mali; formerly French Sudan, Sudanese Republic⟩ Independent republic located in western Africa. Capital is Bamako. Many early African empires flourished in the region, including the Mali Empire, which reached its peak in the 14th cent., and the Songhai Empire of the 15th and 16th cents. A period of warfare and invasion ensued until the rise of new Muslim states (19th cent.). The French conquered much of the region by 1898, and Mali, as French Sudan, became part of French West Africa. Rising nationalism in the 20th cent. led to formation of the Sudanese Union, which soon became Mali's leading political party. Under Modibo Keita (1915–) the party campaigned for independence. In 1958 French Sudan became autonomous, within the French Community, as the Sudanese Republic, and in 1960 it became independent as the Republic of Mali. Keita, its first president, followed a Socialist course until his overthrow (1968). Gen. Moussa Traoré subsequently became head of state (1968–). In the early 1970s Mali was devastated by a severe drought and famine.

Malik Shah See Seljuks

Malinowski, Bronislaw 1884–1942. Polish-born anthropologist. He formulated the functional theory of social anthropology.

Mallarmé, Stéphane 1842–98. French poet. He was an early symbolist. His best-known poem, L'Après-Midi d'un faune, inspired C. Debussy's musical composition of the same name.

Mallon, Mary See Typhoid Mary

Malone, Edmund 1741–1812. English scholar and editor. He produced an important chronology of the works of W. Shakespeare and exposed the Shakespearean forgeries of W. Ireland.

Malory, Sir Thomas d. 1471. English author of the medieval prose romance Morte d'Arthur. This account of King Arthur and his Round Table is considered one of the greatest prose works in the English language.

Malpighi, Marcello 1628–94. Italian physician noted for his studies of anatomy and his early use of the microscope for animal and plant study.

Malplaquet, Battle of Battle (Sept. 11, 1709) of the War of the Spanish Succession. The allied army of English, Dutch, and Austrians under J. Churchill, duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene of Savoy, forced the French to withdraw. Casualties were so heavy, however, that the allies were obliged to halt their advance on Paris.

Malraux, André 1901–. French author and political figure. Active in the political struggles of his time, he used his experiences in such novels as La Condition humaine and L'Espoir.

Malta Independent island state in the Mediterranean, comprising the islands of Malta, Gozo, and Comino, and several islets. Occupied by the British from 1800, it was the scene of fierce bombing by the Germans and Italians during WW II. It became independent in 1964 and a republic (Dec. 13, 1974), within the British Commonwealth. British military presence was ended in 1979.

Malthus, Thomas Robert 1766–1834. English economist. His An Essay on the Principle of Population contended that population would always increase faster than means of subsistence.

Malvinas Islands Argentine name for Falkland Islands (q.v.).

Mamelukes Warrior class that provided rulers of Egypt from 1250 until the conquest by Ottoman Turks (1517). Of Asian stock, Mamelukes were first used as slaves and then as warriors by the Muslim rulers of Egypt. The Bahrite dynasty of Mameluke sultans (1250–1382) was founded by Aybak (d. 1257), and their rule was characterized by internal dissent and frequent rebellions. Nevertheless, the Bahrite Mamelukes halted the Mongol advance (1260) in Syria and crushed the powerful Assassin sect. During the bloody reign of the Burjite dynasty of Mamelukes (1382–1517), the Egyptians warred against Tamerlane, expelled Christian knights from Cyprus, and finally succumbed (1517) to the Ottoman Turks under Selim I. Under the Turks, the Mamelukes retained their lands and many government posts and eventually regained considerable autonomy. They retained power in Egypt until 1811, when they were virtually exterminated by the Egyptian ruler Muhammad Ali.

Mamun, al- 786–833. Seventh Abbassid caliph (813–33), son of Harun ar-Rashid and successor to his brother al-Amin. A Mutazilite, he tried to impose that sect's rationalistic beliefs on his subjects.

Managua Capital (pop. 398,500) and largest city of Nicaragua. Made capital (1857), it was largely destroyed by earthquake and fire (1931), and again by earthquake (1972).

Manassas, Battle of See Bull Run, Battle of

Manchu See Ch'ing

Manchukuo Puppet state established (1932) in Manchuria by the Japanese. Its nominal ruler was Henry Pu Yi, last Ch'ing emperor. It ceased to exist (1945) when Manchuria was returned to China after WW II.

Manchuria Major industrial region, northeastern China. Home of the Manchus, who established the Manchu (Ch'ing) dynasty in China (1644–1912), it has been the object of struggles between China, Russia, and Japan. Russia and Japan fought for control of it in the Russo-Japanese War (1904–05). Japan occupied Manchuria (1931–32) and set up the puppet state of Manchukuo (1932–45). Returned to China (1945), it became a Chinese Communist stronghold by 1948.

Mancini, Pasquale Stanislao 1817–88. Italian political leader. A liberal and anticlerical, he introduced numerous reforms. As minister of foreign affairs (1881–85) he negotiated the Triple Alliance (1882) with Austria and Germany.

Manco Capac d. 1544. Inca ruler. Kept prisoner by F. Pizarro, he escaped (1536), raised an army, and laid seige to Cuzco. Defeated, he continued to fight in the mountains, but was murdered by followers of another rebel leader, D. de Almagro.

Mandaeans ⟨Christians of Saint John⟩ Religious group of Iran and Iraq. They revere John the Baptist and place emphasis on the rite of baptism and fertility worship.

Mandarin Formerly, a Chinese imperial official. The dialect spoken by Chinese officials was known as Mandarin Chinese and in its modern form is the most widely used dialect in China.

mandate Designation for a colonial territory placed under the control of another power by the League of Nations. The system of mandates was used after WW I to provide for those former German and Turkish territories (including Iraq, Palestine, Syria, and Southwest Africa) that were deemed unable to govern themselves. Mandates still in effect in 1946 became UN trusteeships.

Mandeville, Sir John fl. 14th cent. English author. He wrote The Travels of Sir John Mandeville, a romanticized travel account that gained great popularity. It was based largely on the travels of such figures as M. Polo. Little is known of the author.

Manet, Édouard 1832–83. French artist. His paintings, such as Déjeuner sur l'herbe, influenced the development of impressionism. Manet painted realistic subject matter and developed a characteristic use of color and brush technique that challenged the then conventional academic style. His first showings met with protest and criticism from established art circles, but he was soon joined by other emerging impressionist painters of his day. His other noted works include Olympia, Bar at the Folies-Bergère, and At the Café.

Manfred *c*1232–66. Sicilian king (1258–66), natural son of Holy Roman Emperor Frederick II. He opposed papal authority over Sicily, but was killed in battle against the forces of Charles of Anjou, who claimed the throne.

Manhattan Project US project inaugurated (1942) to develop the atomic bomb during WW II. Placed (Aug., 1942) under command of Gen. Leslie R. Groves (1896–1970), the project scientists created the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction (at Chicago, Dec. 2, 1942) and exploded the first nuclear device (July 16, 1945) near Alamogordo, New Mexico. The project produced the bombs dropped on Hiroshima (Aug. 6) and Nagasaki (Aug. 9). By hastening the Japanese surrender it saved countless American lives, but its success ushered in a new age, in which total war is unthinkable.

Manichaeanism See Manichaeism

Manichaeism ⟨Manichaeanism⟩ Religious sect founded in 3d cent. AD Persia, on the teachings of Mani (fl. 3d cent.). It drew on Gnosticism, Zoroastrianism, and Christianity. Manichaeism was a dualistic religion which held the universe was divided into the forces of God and light and the forces of Satan and evil. Man had both, the spirit being light and goodness, the body itself being evil. The sect spread rapidly for a time, though by the 6th cent. it had largely disappeared in the West.

Manifest Destiny Historical expression used to justify US expansion in the 1840s. It held that America was chosen by God to establish its dominion from sea to sea, and was used to support American annexation of Texas and territories in the West and Mexico.

Manila Filipino city (pop. 1,438,300), former capital and leading city of the Philippines. The Battle of Manila Bay (q.v.) was fought here during the Spanish-American War. Manila was occupied by the Japanese during WW II.

Manila Bay, Battle of US naval victory (May 1, 1898) during the Spanish-American War, at Manila. The US fleet under Commodore G. Dewey completely destroyed the Spanish Pacific fleet, thereby securing the Philippines from Spanish control.

Manin, Daniele 1804–57. Venetian statesman. He helped to free Venice from Austrian rule. Made president of the Venetian republic (1848), he unsuccessfully opposed union with Sardinia. He led a valiant but fruitless struggle against Austrian forces until Venice's fall (Aug., 1849).

Man in the Iron Mask Anonymous French prisoner, held captive and masked in the Bastille from 1698 until his death in 1703. His identity remains unknown.

Manitoba Canadian province. First settled (17th cent.) by the Hudson's Bay Company, it was contested by the British and French in the French and Indian Wars, and was ceded to Britain by the Treaty of Paris (1763). It became a province in 1870.

Maniu, Iuliu 1873–1951. Romanian statesman. Leader of the Romanian National Peasants' party and prime minister (1928–30, 1932–33), he was convicted of treason (1947) by the Communists and died in prison.

Manlius Capitolinus, Marcus d. 384? BC. Roman consul (392 BC). Awakened one night by the cackling of geese, he discovered and repulsed an attack on Rome by the Gauls (390).

Manlius Imperiosus Torquatus, Titus fl. 4th cent. BC. Roman dictator and consul. He fought against the Gauls and Latins, and put his son to death for disobeying orders not to engage the enemy in single combat.

Mann, Horace 1796–1859. American educator. As the first secretary of the Massachusetts state board of education (1837–48), he developed theories and practices that greatly influenced the development of public education in the US.

Mann, Thomas 1875–1955. German novelist, considered one of the preeminent writers of the 20th cent. Awarded the Nobel Prize in 1929, Mann was forced to flee Germany (1933) by the rise of A. Hitler. He became a US citizen in 1944. Among his works are Death in Venice, The Magic Mountain, and Doctor Faustus.

Mann Act US law (1910) which prohibits the transportation of women across state lines for immoral purposes.

Mannerheim, baron Carl Gustav Emil von 1867–1951. Finnish military leader and statesman. He established the Mannerheim Line (q.v.) and commanded Finnish forces in the Russo-Finnish War. He later served as president of Finland (1944–46).

Mannerheim Line Finnish fortification across the Karelian Isthmus. Built under the direction of C. Mannerheim to prevent Soviet aggression, it fell to Russian forces (1940) in the Russo-Finnish War.

mannerism European art style of the 16th cent., characterized by exaggeration, and the disconcerting use of color, form, and spatial relationships. Arising as a reaction to High Renaissance art, it was in turn replaced by the baroque style.

Mannheim, Karl 1893–1947. German sociologist. His book Ideologie und Utopie explored the role of individual thought processes and their relation to social conflict.

manorial system ⟨Seigniorial system⟩ Medieval economic system in which a lord gave a peasant the right to tend land on his estate in return for a fixed payment. The system, derived from feudalism, flourished in Europe in the 11th-15th cents., and similar systems arose elsewhere, notably in Japan.

Mansard, François See Mansart, François

Mansart, François ⟨Mansard, François⟩ 1598–1666. French architect. He is noted for his incorporation of classical elements into baroque architecture. The mansard roof is named after him.

Mansfeld, Peter Ernst, Graf von 1580?–1626. Mercenary in the Thirty Years' War (1618–48). He supported the Protestants, notably Elector Palatine Frederick V.

Mansur ⟨Al Mansur⟩ d. 775. Second Abbasid caliph (754–75), successor to his brother Abu al-Abbas. He founded the city of Baghdad (762).

Mansur ⟨al-Mansur⟩ 934–1002. Regent of Córdoba under the caliph Hisham II. Assuming complete control, he led many victorious campaigns against Christian cities, and temporarily restored Ummayyad influence in Spain.

Mantegna, Andrea 1431–1506. Italian painter. One of the greatest artists of his day, he is especially noted for his frescoes in Padua, Milan, and Verona.

Mantua, Siege of French campaign (July, 1796–Feb., 1797) of Napoleon Bonaparte against an Austrian army besieged at Mantua, Italy. Napoleon held off four separate Austrian relief attempts, and Mantua ultimately surrendered (Feb. 2), leaving Napoleon virtual master of Italy.

Mantuan Succession, War of the Conflict during the Thirty Years' War in which France and the Hapsburgs both sought control of the Italian duchy of Mantua. The Treaty of Cherasco (Apr.

26, 1631) awarded the duchy to Charles of Nevers, a member of the French Gonzaga family.

Manu Hindu mythical figure, the first man, from whom all humanity descends. He was, by tradition, author of the Sanskrit code of law.

Manuel ⟨Manuel I Comnenus⟩ 1120–80. Byzantine emperor (1143–80), successor to his father John II. He hoped to rebuild the Roman Empire but was defeated by the Turks at Myriocephalon (1176).

Manuel I ⟨Emanuel I⟩ 1469–1521. Portuguese king (1495–1521), successor to John II. During his reign, Portugal became a major commercial power through the voyages of discovery of V. da Gama and P. Cabral.

Manuel I Comnenus See Manuel

Manuel II Palaeologus 1350–1425. Byzantine emperor (1391–1425), successor to his father John V Palaeologus. He sought aid from the kingdoms of Europe to fight the Turks but was unsuccessful. In 1422 he was forced to pay tribute to Murad II.

Manuel II 1889–1932. Portuguese king (1908–10), son of Charles I. He succeeded to the throne after his father and brother were assassinated and was deposed by the republican revolution.

Manx Language of the Goidelic group of the Celtic subfamily, once spoken on the Isle of Man but now practically extinct.

Manzikert, Battle of Byzantine-Turkish battle (1071) at Manzikert, now in Turkey. Some 70,000 Seljuk Turks destroyed an army of 40,000 under Byzantine emperor Romanus IV. The battle led to the fall of Asia Minor to the Turks.

Maoism Ideology of revolutionary communism developed by Mao Tse-tung. Mao's thinking is generally considered allied with, but distinct from, Russian communism. Mao early on perceived the value of mobilizing China's peasant class, ignored by traditional Marxists in favor of the proletariat as a source of revolution. By arousing a martial spirit (a fundamental element of Maoist doctrine), Mao succeeded in bringing Chinese peasants to revolution. Once in power, Mao turned away from the traditional Communist pathway to economic development. He opposed formation of a bureaucratic elite and instituted his Great Leap Forward (q.v.), which fostered labor-intensive, backyard industries. When this program failed, he again resorted to the martial spirit to purge the party of bureaucrats and elitists, this time with the disastrous Cultural Revolution (q.v.).

Maori Wars Wars (1860–72) between Maoris, native inhabitants of New Zealand, and British settlers seeking Maori lands on the North Island of New Zealand. As a result of the Maori King Movement, the natives on the North Island elected a king (1858) and adopted a general policy of refusing to sell native-owned lands to the settlers. A breach of that policy resulted in the first phase of the Maori Wars (1860–61), which ended in a truce. Officials of the British government provoked the second phase of fighting (1863–64), which embroiled the whole North Island in war. The settlers emerged victorious, only to find themselves in another war (1864–72) against more fanatical elements of the Maori tribes. Peace was finally established (1872), with large portions of Maori lands in the possession of the settlers. An earlier uprising (1843–48) is sometimes called the First Maori War.

Mao Tse-tung 1893–1976. Chinese Communist leader, founder and first chairman (1949–59) of the People's Republic of China. Born to a peasant family in Hunan province, Mao became a founding member of the Chinese Communist Party. After the split between the Nationalist Kuomintang and the Communists, Mao lead an abortive peasant revolt known as the Autumn Harvest Uprising (1927). Continuing to oppose the Kuomintang, Mao helped to set up the Kiangsi Soviet (q.v.) in southeastern China and became its chairman (1931). Nationalist military successes against the Communists forced the Red Army to make its famed Long March (q.v.) of some 6,000 miles to Shensi province in northwestern China (1934–35). There, Mao established Communist control in the region and began the long struggle against nationalist Kuomintang (see Chinese Civil War) and the invading Japanese (1937–45) during WW II. The last phase of the civil war with the nationalists broke out soon after WW II, and in 1949 the Communists established control over China.

Mao, who had become chairman of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) in 1935, became chairman of the new People's Republic of China (1949). In following years Mao sought to establish communism in China independently of the Russian model and sought to adapt Marxist ideology to Chinese society. During this period China entered the Korean War (q.v.). In order to build the Chinese economy, Mao instituted the Great Leap Forward (1958), a disastrous economic experiment that led to the rise of Liu Shao-ch'i (q.v) as chairman of the republic. Mao retained his position as chairman of the CCP. The struggle between Liu and Mao led to the Cultural Revolution (q.v.) in 1966, and by 1970 Mao was once again undisputed leader of China, remaining so until his death. Mao's writings, especially those dealing with the revolutionary movement and guerrilla tactics, achieved a tremendous influence in China and in other countries, especially among radicals in the developing nations.

Maputo ⟨formerly Lourenço Marques⟩ Capital of Mozambique and port city (pop. 750,000). Founded in the late 18th cent., it was incorporated in 1887 and began to develop after 1895, when railroad lines reached the city. It became the capital in 1907.

Maquis French guerrilla forces that fought against German occupation forces during WW II.

Mar, John Erskine, 1st earl of d. 1572. Scottish noble. He served as guardian of James VI, son of Mary Queen of Scots.

Mar, John Erskine, 2nd earl of 1558–1634. Scottish noble. He succeeded his father as guardian of Scottish king James VI (James I of England) and was treasurer of Scotland (1616–30).

Mar, John Erskine, 6th earl of 1675–1732. Scottish noble, known as "Bobbing John" for his changes of allegiance. He led the unsuccessful Jacobite rebellion of 1715, which sought to secure the English throne for James, the Old Pretender.

Marat, Jean Paul 1743–93. French Revolutionary leader. He edited the journal L'Ami du peuple, in which he waged a verbal war against the moderate Girondists. He was stabbed to death in his bath by C. Corday.

Maratha kingdom ⟨Mahrattas, ~⟩⟨Maharashtra, ~⟩ Kingdom in west-central India that rose to power in the period between the fall of the Mogul Empire and British conquest of India (*c*18th-19th cents.). A small state overshadowed by Mogul power in the early 17th cent., it was greatly expanded by the conquests (1647–80) of Sivaji. Following the death (1707) of the Mogul emperor Aurangzeb, the Marathas extended their control in the southern peninsula. Under Baji Rao, they defeated Mogul armies and (after 1739) took control of the government of the failing empire. With the death (1740) of Baji Rao, central control of the empire declined rapidly. From 1772, it was ruled by five chieftains in what was known as the Maratha Confederacy. The confederacy fell to the British (1818) in the Maratha Wars.

Maratha Wars Series of three wars (1775–1818) in India between the British and the Maratha Confederacy, resulting in the fall of the Maratha Confederacy and British domination in India. 1. The first war (1775–76, 1778–82) was ended by the Treaty of Salbai (1782), by which the British gained Salsette Island, near Bombay. 2. The second war (1803–05) was sparked by the granting of British protection to Peshwa Baji Rao II through the Treaty of Bassein (1802). 3. The third war (1817–18) was sparked by a British invasion of the Maratha Confederation in an attempt to defeat the Pindari tribes, which had been raiding the British territories. The war ended (1818) with the defeat and dissolution of the Maratha Confederation.

Marathon, Battle of Battle (490 BC) in which Athenian and Plataean forces under Miltiades defeated the Persian army of Darius I. This great battle of the Persian Wars (q.v.) ended the first Persian expedition against the Greek mainland.

Marbury vs Madison US Supreme Court decision (1803). Handed down by Chief Justice J. Marshall, it was the first decision to declare an act of Congress to be unconstitutional. It helped to establish the Supreme Court's right of judicial review over acts of Congress.

Marc Antony See Antony

Marcel, Etienne d. 1358. French leader. As provost of the merchants of Paris, he secured expanded powers for the States-General from King John II in exchange for funds to continue the Hundred Years' War. After John's capture by the English, he allied with Charles the Bad of Navarre against the dauphin (later Charles V), but was assassinated.

Marcel, Gabriel Honoré 1889–1973. French philosopher and writer, considered an early existentialist. His philosophy held that experience is more important than metaphysics.

Marcellus, Marcus Claudius *c*268–208 BC. Roman general. Five times consul of Rome, he was called "the sword of Rome." He conquered Syracuse (212 BC), and died while fighting against Hannibal.

Marches, the Mountainous region in central Italy. The region passed (8th cent.) to nominal papal control, but by the 10th cent. independent imperial provinces (marches) were established. Eventually (14th-17th cents.) restored to the Papal States, it joined the kingdom of Italy (1860).

Marchfeld, Battle of ⟨Dürnkrut, Battle of⟩ Battle (1278) at Dürnkrut, on the Marchfeld, Austria. Here Rudolph I, count of Hapsburg, defeated the Bohemian king Ottokar II.

March Laws ⟨April Laws⟩ Hungarian reform measures adopted during the 1848 Revolution. They provided for establishment of an independent Hungarian state under only nominal Austrian control. Austria refused to recognize the March Laws after it defeated the revolutionaries.

March on Rome Fascist insurrection (Oct.-Nov. 1922) led by B. Mussolini, by which Fascism came to power in Italy. Fascist forces threatened to seize power in Rome and elsewhere and began massing their followers for the insurrection, planned for Oct. 28. After King Victor Emmanuel III refused to declare martial law, Prime Minister Luigi Facta (1861–1930) resigned, crippling the Italian government. Mussolini then was asked (Oct. 29) to form a government by the king to avert a civil war. Mussolini's new government gave him (Nov. 25) dictatorial powers until Dec. 31, 1923.

March on Washington 1. Mass civil rights demonstration (Aug. 28, 1963). Some 200,000 blacks and their supporters, led by Dr. M. King, rallied in Washington, D.C., to press their demands for equal rights. During the rally, Dr. King uttered his famous words "I have a dream. . . ." 2. Mass antiwar demonstration (Nov. 15, 1969) held in Washington, D.C. Led by a coalition of moderate and radical antiwar groups, some 250–400,000 protesters gathered for a largely nonviolent demonstration to press their demands for an end to the Vietnam War. The demonstration marked the high point of Vietnam antiwar protest in the US.

Marcian AD *c*390–457. Eastern Roman emperor (AD 450–57), successor to Theodosius II. He refused to pay tribute to Attila the Hun, avoided wars, and assembled the Council of Chalcedon (451).

Marcion fl. AD 144. Early Christian who founded (AD 144) the heretical Marcionite sect. He said there were two Gods and rejected the Old Testament.

Marconi, Guglielmo, Marchese 1874–1937. Italian physicist. He pioneered wireless telegraphy and was the first to transmit radio signals across the Atlantic (1901).

Marcos, Ferdinand Edralin 1917–. President of the Philippines (1966–). Pursuing a policy of close ties with America and hostility to communism, he declared martial law (1972), and maintains strict authoritarian control of his country.

Marcus Antonius See Antony

Marcus Aurelius ⟨orig. Marcus Aurelius Antoninus⟩ AD 121–180. Roman emperor (AD 161–80) and famous exponent of Stoicism. Though he ordered persecutions of Christians, his rule was otherwise considered wise and humane. He ruled (161–169) with his brother Lucius Verus (d. 169) and was sole emperor thereafter. His reign was marked by his successes against rebellions and barbarian invasions (by Parthians, Germans, and others). In one such victory (AD 174) a German tribe was confused by a fierce thunderstorm and thus fell to the emperor's troops, thereafter called the "Thundering Legion." Marcus Aurelius is known best, however, for his great philosophical work, Meditations.

Marcuse, Herbert 1898–. German-born American political philosopher, known best for his studies of the failings of modern industrial society. His works, which influenced the radical intellectual movements of the 1960s, include One-Dimensional Man.

Marcus Vitruvius Pollio See Vitruvius

Marcy, William Learned 1786–1857. American politician. As US senator (1831–32) he made the remark "to the victor belong the spoils of the enemy" in defense of patronage. This gave rise to the term "spoils system."

Marduk Ancient Babylonian god. God of all Babylonia, he was also the leading god of the city of Babylon.

Marengo, Battle of Battle (June 14, 1800) in which the French under Napoleon defeated the Austrians under Baron Michael von Melas (1729–1806) at Marengo, Italy. The victory secured northern Italy for France during the French Revolutionary Wars.

Mareth Line German defensive line in Tunisia during WW II. Established by Field Marshal E. Rommel after the 1,500-mile retreat of the Afrika Korps across Libya, it was overcome by Allied forces (Mar., 1943).

Margaret 1353–1412. Queen of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, daughter of Danish king Waldemar IV. She married (1363) Norwegian king Haakon VI, overthrew Swedish King Albert (1389), and established (1397) the Kalmar Union. Though her nephew Eric VII of Pomerania (ruled 1389–1429) was nominal king, she held the power.

Margaret Maid of Norway 1283–90. Queen of Scotland (1286–90), and successor to Scottish king Alexander III. She was betrothed to Edward, son of English king Edward I. Her death resulted in civil war and Edward I's claim to the rule of Scotland.

Margaret of Angoulême See Margaret of Navarre

Margaret of Anjou 1430?–82. Queen consort to English king Henry VI (m. 1445). She was a leader of the Lancastrians against the Yorkists during the Wars of the Roses.

Margaret of Austria 1480–1530. Hapsburg princess, daughter of Emperor Maximilian I. She was regent of The Netherlands (1507–15, 1519–30) for her nephew Charles (later Holy Roman Emperor Charles V).

Margaret of Navarre ⟨Margaret of Angoulême⟩ 1492–1549. Queen consort (m. 1527) of King Henry II of Navarre and sister of French king Francis I. She took an active interest in religious reforms and the arts and was the author of the Heptaméron.

Margaret of Parma 1522–86. Natural Daughter of Holy Roman Emperor Charles V and mother of A. Farnese. She served ably as regent of The Netherlands (1559–67).

Margaret of Scotland, Saint d. 1093. Queen consort (*m. c*1070) of Scottish king Malcolm III and sister of Edgar Atheling. She helped to advance Roman Catholic church practices in Scotland.

Margaret of Valois 1553–1615. Queen of Navarre, daughter of French king Henry II, and wife (m. 1572) of Henry IV. Her marriage was annulled (1599), allegedly because of her promiscuity.

Margaret Tudor 1489–1541. Queen consort of Scottish king James IV (m. 1503) and daughter of English king Henry VII. Temporarily regent for her son James V, she lost the regency through her marriage (1514) to A. Douglas, 6th earl of Angus.

Marggraf, Andreas Sigismund 1709–82. German chemist. His discovery of sugar in beets (1747) contributed to the formation of the sugar industry.

Maria I 1734–1816. Portuguese queen (1777–1816), daughter of Portuguese king Joseph I, and wife (m. 1760) of Peter III. She and Peter secured the downfall of the hated minister S. Pombal and released many prisoners of his rule. She fled to Brazil (1807) after Napoleon's invasion of Portugal.

Maria II ⟨Maria da Gloria⟩ 1819–53. Portuguese queen (1826–28, 1834–53), daughter of Brazilian king Pedro I. Her reign was marked by civil strife, including civil war and the usurping of the throne by Miguel.

Maria Christina 1806–78. Queen consort of Spanish king Ferdinand VII. She prompted her husband to allow their daughter, Isabella, to succeed him, thus causing the Carlist Wars.

Maria Christina 1858–1929. Queen consort (m. 1879) of Spanish king Alfonso XII. While she served as regent (1886–1902) for their son Alfonso XIII, Spain lost the last of its empire in the Americas during the Spanish-American War.

Maria da Gloria See Maria II

Maria Luisa 1751–1819. Spanish queen, wife (m. 1765) of Spanish king Charles IV. She and her lover M. de Godoy actually ruled the country, ruined its finances, and set the stage for Napoleon's takeover (1808).

Mariamne d. 29 BC. Jewish princess, wife of Herod. She was executed by Herod after being falsely accused of adultery by Salome.

Maria Theresa 1717–80. Austrian archduchess and queen of Hungary and Bohemia (1740–80), consort (m. 1736) of Holy Roman Emperor Francis I. She succeeded her father Charles VI as ruler of Austrian Hapsburg domains by the law of pragmatic sanction. Her succession resulted in the War of the Austrian Succession (1740–48).

Marie 1875–1938. Romanian queen (1914–27), granddaughter of English queen Victoria, and wife (m. 1893) of Romanian king Ferdinand I. She helped persuade Ferdinand to join the Allies in WW I.

Marie Antoinette 1755–93. French queen (1774–93), wife of King Louis XVI (m. 1770), and an important figure in events leading to the French Revolution. She was the daughter of Austrian Holy Roman Emperor Francis I. Her unpopularity in France helped undermine the credibility of the monarchy. This was due in part to her Austrian heritage, her extravagance, her association with dissolute courtiers, and her influence over her indecisive husband. Her reputation became notorious in the prerevolutionary times, and scandals, often exaggerated or untrue, surrounded her (such as her supposed remark, "If they have no bread, let them eat cake," and involvement in the Affair of the Diamond Necklace). Removed (1789) with Louis from Versailles to the Tuileries palace, she was taken prisoner during the storming of Tuileries (1792). She was guillotined (Oct. 16, 1793) some months after Louis.

Marie de Médicis 1573–1642. Queen consort (m. 1600) of French king Henry IV of France and regent (1610–17) for their son, Louis XIII. She depleted the treasury and formed an alliance with Spain before being exiled by her son.

Marie Louise 1791–1847. Empress of France (1810–15), second wife (m. 1810) of Napoleon I, mother of Napoleon II, and daughter of Holy Roman Emperor Francis II.

Marie Thérèse of Austria 1638–83. Queen consort (m. 1660) of French king Louis XIV. Daughter of Spanish king Philip IV, she renounced her claim to the Spanish throne in return for a substantial dowry. Louis, claiming never to have received it, seized part of the Spanish Netherlands in the War of Devolution.

Marignano, Battle of Battle (Sept. 13–14, 1515) during the Italian Wars, at Marignano, Italy. Here the Franco-Venetian forces under French king Francis I defeated the forces of the Swiss Confederation, forcing the Swiss to retreat. The victory led to the French conquest of Milan.

Marinetti, Filippo Tommaso 1876–1944. Italian author. Considered the founder of futurism, he also supported fascism.

Marion, Francis *c*1732–95. American Revolutionary general, known as the Swamp Fox for his guerrilla tactics against the British in South Carolina.

Maritime Provinces Name for the Canadian Atlantic provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island.

Maritime Territory ⟨Primorski Krai⟩ Easternmost territory of the USSR. Vladivostock, its capital, is eastern terminus of the Trans-Siberian railway.

Maritsa River, Battle of the Decisive Ottoman victory (Sept. 26, 1371) over Serbia, at Maritsa River, near Adrianople. A force of 70,000 Serbs led by King Vukâsin attempted to halt Turkish expansion in the Balkans, but were overwhelmed by an inferior Turkish force, under Murad I.

Marius, Gaius *c*155 BC–86 BC. Roman general. He fought with distinction in Africa and in Gaul, and served as consul seven times between 108 and 101.

Mark, Saint ⟨John Mark⟩ Apostle and traditional author of the Second Gospel. He was a companion to saints Paul and Barnabas.

Markiewicz, Constance Georgine Gore-Booth, Countess 1876–1927. Irish nationalist. Sentenced to death for her role in the Easter Rebellion (1916), she was released in 1917. The first woman to be elected to the British Parliament (1918), she declined her seat, and later served in the Dail Eireann.

Marlborough, John Churchill, 1st duke of 1650–1722. English general, noted for his victories during the War of the Spanish Succession. Instrumental in putting down the rebellion by the Duke of Monmouth (1685), he shifted his allegiance from James II to William III during the Glorious Revolution (1688) and commanded William's forces against rebels in Ireland (1689–91). Out of favor (1692), he was restored under Queen Anne, who was an intimate friend of his wife, the Duchess of Marlborough. He won great fame for his service in the War of the Spanish Succession, notably in the battles of Blenheim (1704), Ramillies (1706), Oudenarde (1708), and Malplaquet (1709). Out of favor (1711) when Queen Anne switched allegiance to A. Masham, he was again restored under King George I.

Marlowe, Christopher 1564–93. English dramatist and poet, considered England's greatest pre-Shakespearean playwright. Among his plays are Tamburlaine, Dr. Faustus, The Jew of Malta, and Edward II. He also appears to have written parts of W. Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus and Henry VI. He wrote numerous poems, among them "The Passionate Shepherd to His Love."

Marmont, Auguste Frédéric Louis Viesse de 1774–1852. Marshal of France who served with Napoleon. His surrender of Paris (1814) forced Napoleon to abdicate.

Marmousets Advisers to French King Charles V, who, though reliable, were unpopular with the nobility because of their humble origins. They also served for a time under Charles VI.

Marne, Battle of the 1. Allied victory (Sept. 5–9, 1914) over German forces advancing on Paris during WW I. The battle marked the failure of the German Schlieffen Plan. The Germans, commanded by Gen. Alexander von Kluck (1846–1934), marched toward Paris with little opposition until they reached the Marne River. French Gen. J. Joffre rushed his troops out of Paris to the river and there attacked the Germans. Though the battle itself was indecisive, the Germans ultimately withdrew. 2. Allied victory (July 15–Aug. 7, 1918) over German forces during WW I. The battle marked the turning point of WW I in favor of the Allies. German forces, under Gen. E. Ludendorff, attacked (July 15) Allied positions near Reims and crossed the Marne River to the west of it. French Gen. F. Foch counterattacked (July 18) and forced the Germans to retreat.

Marnix, Philip van See Breda, Compromise of Maronites Lebanese religious community. Formed (7th cent.) during the Monothelitism controversy, they were attacked by the Druses (19th cent.), and subsequently became autonomous under French protection.

Marprelate Controversy Pamphlet war (1588–89) waged by anonymous Puritans against the Anglican church. The original pamphlets were directed against Bishop John Whitgift (1530?–1604) and the authoritarianism of the Anglican church. They were attributed to a pseudonymous author, "Martin Marprelate," and were not sanctioned by Puritan leaders. The Anglicans replied with pamphlets of their own, and in the early 1590s government suppression of the Marprelate pamphleteers succeeded in ending the controversy. The author (or authors) of the pamphlets is still unknown.

Marquand, John Phillips 1893–1960. American author, noted for his novels dealing with upper-class life in New England. His novel The Late George Apley was awarded a Pulitzer Prize (1938).

Marquette, Jacques 1637–75. French missionary explorer. He and Louis Jolliet (1645–1700) discovered and charted the course of the Mississippi River (1673).

Mars Ancient Roman god of war, identified with the Greek god Ares. He was the father of Romulus and Remus.

Marsaglia, Battle of See Grand Alliance, War of the Marseilles French city (pop. 912,100), in southeastern France on the Mediterranean Sea. Settled by Greeks (*c*600 BC), it is France's second largest city and a major port.

marshal Military rank. Marshal denotes the highest army rank in such countries as Britain, France, Germany, Russia, and China. It derives from the Frankish word for the keeper of the king's horses.

Marshall, George Catlett 1880–1959. American general and statesman. He was army chief of staff during WW II. As secretary of state (1947–49) he originated the postwar European Recovery Program (Marshall Plan). He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize (1953).

Marshall, James Wilson 1810–85. American pioneer. His discovery (Jan. 1848) of gold at J. Sutter's mill in California led to the Gold Rush of 1849.

Marshall, John 1755–1835. American jurist. A Federalist, and one of the American diplomats involved in the XYZ Affair, he was elected to Congress (1799) and served as secretary of state (1800–01). He was appointed by J. Adams to the Supreme Court as chief justice (1801–35). Marshall's decisions in such cases as Marbury vs Madison and the Dartmouth College case helped to establish the Supreme Court's right of judicial review and also helped to strengthen the authority of the federal government.

Marshall, Thomas Riley 1854–1925. American politician, vice-president of the US (1913–21) under W. Wilson. He is remembered for his remark, "What this country needs is a really good five-cent cigar."

Marshall, Thurgood 1908–. American jurist. As head of the legal staff of the NAACP, he successfully argued before the Supreme Court the landmark civil rights case Brown vs Board of Education of Topeka (1954). He became the first black to be appointed to the Supreme Court (1967–).

Marshall Islands Pacific islands, since 1947 part of the US Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. Scene of heavy fighting during WW II, they were later the site of US nuclear weapons tests.

Marshall Plan ⟨European Recovery Program⟩ US program (1948–52) that successfully aided the recovery of Western European nations after WW II. Outlined (1947) by US Secretary of State G. Marshall, the program provided massive economic aid (more than $12 billion) and a basis for integration of European economies. The program, also aimed at containing the rising influence of Communist parties in war-torn Europe, was accepted by Western European nations (also Turkey and Iceland). The US Congress, by the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948, created the Economic Cooperation Administration (ECA) to administer the program. The participating countries in turn created (1948) a coordinating agency, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (renamed the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development). The program was completed in 1952.

Marsilius of Padua d. *c*1342. Italian political philosopher. His Defensor pacis held that political (and ecclesiastical) power comes from the people. This concept had an immense influence on medieval political philosophy.

Marston Moor, Battle of First significant victory (July 2, 1644) of the parliamentary forces over the Royalists during the English Civil War. The Royalists under Prince Rupert were decisively defeated by forces under O. Cromwell, T. Fairfax, and others, near York.

Marsyas In Greek mythology, Phrygian figure who unsuccessfully challenged Apollo to a musical contest. He played the lute, and Apollo the lyre.

Martel, Charles See Charles Martel

Martens, Frederick ⟨Martens, Fyodor Fyodorovich⟩ 1845–1909. Russian diplomat. An authority on international law, he served as arbitrator at many conferences, including the Hague Conferences. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize (1902).

Martens, Fyodor Fyodorovich See Martens, Frederick

Martha In the Bible, the sister of Mary and Lazarus of Bethany. She is a symbol of the active life, whereas Mary symbolizes the contemplative life.

Martí, José 1853–95. Cuban writer and patriot. Founder (1892) of the Cuban Revolutionary party, he was killed by Spanish forces in Cuba.

Martial AD *c*40–*c*104. Roman poet. He is noted for his witty epigrams, which became the models for the contemporary epigram.

Martignac, Jean Baptiste Sylvère Gay, vicomte de 1778–1832. French statesman. He was minister of the interior (1828–29) under French king Charles X, but his policies of compromise with liberals alienated the king. He was replaced by Charles with the royalist J. Polignac.

Martin I, Saint d. 655. Pope (649–55). He convoked the Lateran Council (649), which condemned Monothelitism. For opening the controversy to debate he was banished to the Crimea by Byzantine Emperor Constans II.

Martin IV d. 1285. Pope (1281–85). His excommunication of Byzantine emperor Michael VIII caused a break between the Eastern and Western churches.

Martin V ⟨Colonna, Oddone⟩ 1368–1431. Catholic pope (1417–31). Martin's unanimous election at the Council of Constance ended the Great Schism. He was less successful in his reconciliation attempts with the Eastern church and in controlling the Hussites.

Martin, Saint AD *c*316–397? French bishop of Tours (*c*371), and patron saint of France. He founded the monastery at Marmoutier and was noted for his piety.

Martin vs Hunter's Lessee See Story, Joseph

Marvell, Andrew 1621–78. English poet. One of the leading satirists of his day, he is known for his wit and lyricism in such poems as To His Coy Mistress.

Marwan II See Muslim Civil Wars

Marx, Karl 1818–83. German economist and philosopher, considered the founder and premier theorist of modern socialism and international communism. Marx studied at the universities of Bonn and Berlin but abandoned law to take up the study of history and philosophy. Adopting elements of the philosophies of G. Hegel and L. Feuerbach, among others, Marx became an ardent supporter of socialism. He became editor of the Rheinische Zeitung in 1842, but his radicalism led to the paper's suppression (1843). Moving to Paris, Marx met F. Engels, who became his friend and collaborator, and with whom he wrote The German Ideology, which dealt with Marx's concept of dialectical materialism (q.v.) as the operating human force in human history. Joining the Communist League (1847), Marx wrote (with Engels) what has become known as the Communist Manifesto.

The failure of the 1848 revolutions in Europe led Marx to move to London (1849), where he spent the remainder of his life in poverty, only partly eased by the efforts of Engels and others. Marx made a prodigious study (at the British museum) of the principles of capitalism and wrote his massive work, Das Kapital, which remained unfinished at his death. Marx was a leading figure in the establishment of the First International (q.v.). His writings, especially the Communist Manifesto and Das Kapital, greatly influenced the radical movements of the late 19th and early 20th cents., notably the Russian Communist movement headed by N. Lenin. His writings form a theoretical foundation for modern Communist ideology and embody an important and controversial system of political and economic thought.

Marx, Wilhelm 1863–1946. German statesman. As chancellor (1923–24) he supported acceptance of the Dawes Plan for war reparations. He served again as chancellor (1926–28).

Marx Brothers US movie and stage comedians. The best-known brothers were Groucho (Julius, 1895–1977), Harpo (Arthur, 1893–1964) and Chico (Leonard, 1891–1961). Their classic slapstick films include Animal Crackers and Duck Soup.

Marxism Collective term applied to the political, economic, and social theories advanced by K. Marx and F. Engels in such works as the Communist Manifesto and Das Kapital. Marx's theories greatly influenced the Socialist movement of the late 19th cent. and are considered the theoretical foundation for modern international communism. In his writings, Marx advanced the doctrine of dialectical materialism, the idea that the history and structure of civilization have been determined by economic systems operating during each stage of development. As each system developed, he asserted, new economic forces arose and inevitably led to the system's replacement. Thus feudalism was replaced by capitalism, and capitalism was fated to be replaced by socialism and, ultimately, communism.

A key element of Marxist doctrine is the view of all history as the history of class struggle, of the ruling elite pitted against the working class. According to Marx, this would eventually lead to crisis, in which the working class would rise up against the capitalist order, seize the means of production, and establish communal ownership through a "dictatorship of the proletariat." With the abolishment of the ruling class, all class struggle, hence all history, would come to an end. Finally, when a rational economic system was evolved, the structure of the political state would wither away.

Marx's theories had a profound influence on the development of Socialist movements and were the basis for the Bolshevik political movement led by N. Lenin. The Bolsheviks' success in establishing the first Communist state in Russia (1917) contradicted Marx's conviction that the first Communist uprising would take place in a modern industrialized nation. The massive political bureaucracy created under Lenin, and J. Stalin, also contradicted Marxist doctrine. Subsequent modifications of capitalism, such as the workers' vastly higher standard of living and the rise of a managerial class, have also brought some of Marx's principal tenets into question. Nonetheless, Marxism as a body of political thought remains, in name if not in practice, the official political dogma of the world's Communist nations.

Mary Mother of Jesus and principal saint of the Roman Catholic church. There are many biblical references to her and these include: her betrothal to Joseph, a carpenter of Nazareth; the annunciation of the birth of Jesus; Mary's visit to her cousin, Elizabeth, mother of John the Baptist; the birth of Jesus and purification at the Temple; the arrival of the Magi and the journey to Egypt; and her presence at the crucifixion. Church dogma relating to Mary includes the doctrines of Mary, the Virgin Mother; Mary, the Mother of God; Mary's freedom from original sin (Immaculate Conception); and Mary's assumption directly into heaven (the Assumption).

Mary See Mary Queen of Scots

Mary 1867–1953. Queen consort (m. 1893) of English king George V. She was the mother of kings Edward VIII and George VI.

Mary I ⟨Mary Tudor⟩ ⟨Bloody Mary⟩ 1516–58. English Queen (1553–58), daughter of Henry VIII and Catherine of Aragon. Her marriage (1554) to Spanish King Philip II caused great opposition. She briefly reestablished Roman Catholicism in England (1555–59) and persecuted Protestants.

Mary II 1662–94. English queen (1689–94), daughter of James II. After James was forced into exile by the Glorious Revolution (1688), Mary became joint sovereign with her husband William of Orange (William III).

Maryland US Middle Atlantic state (pop. 4,216,400), the 7th state. English king Charles I granted the colony to G. Calvert, 1st Baron Baltimore (1632), and it was first settled (1634) by Catholics and Protestants seeking religious freedom. Its northern border is the Mason-Dixon line, drawn (1767) to settle a boundary dispute with Pennsylvania. During the US Civil War Maryland remained in the Union but its citizens fought on both sides. One of the war's major engagements was fought here at Antietam (1862).

Maryland, McCulloch vs See McCulloch vs Maryland

Mary Magdalen ⟨Mary Magdalene⟩ Biblical disciple of Jesus, who cast out the evil spirits possessing her. She witnessed both Jesus' crucifixion and his resurrection.

Mary Magdalene See Mary Magdalen

Mary of Burgundy 1457–82. Duchess of Burgundy, daughter of Charles the Bold and heiress to The Netherlands. Her marriage (1477) to Maximilian of Austria (later Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I) gave the Hapsburgs control of The Netherlands.

Mary of England ⟨Mary of France⟩ ⟨Mary Tudor⟩ 1496–1533. Queen consort (1514–15) of French king Louis XII and daughter of English king Henry VII. She was the grandmother of Lady Jane Grey.

Mary of France See Mary of England

Mary of Guise 1515–60. Queen consort (m. 1538) of Scottish king James V. The daughter of C. de Lorraine, 1st duke of Guise, she was regent (1554–59) for her daughter Mary Queen of Scots. She was removed from the regency for her opposition to J. Knox.

Mary of Modena 1658–1718. Queen consort (m. 1673) of English king James II of England. The birth (1688) of her son, James Francis Edward, ensured a Catholic succession and provoked the Glorious Revolution.

Mary Queen of Scots ⟨Stuart, Mary⟩ 1542–87. Scottish queen (1542–68), a Catholic of the Stuart family and a celebrated beauty. Her life was marked by controversy and intrigue. She was named queen shortly after birth. Her early life was spent in France. She returned (1561) to Scotland and married (1565) her unpopular cousin, Lord Darnley, to strengthen her claims to the English throne. The couple became disaffected and, after her husband's murder, generally attributed to the Earl of Bothwell, she married Bothwell (1567). This led to a Scottish revolt, Mary's forced abdication (June 15, 1567), and her escape to England (1568). As an heir to the throne and a threat to Queen Elizabeth, Mary was kept under guard in England. After several plots by Catholics to overthrow Elizabeth in favor of Mary, Mary was implicated in a scheme by A. Babington and was beheaded. Mary's son became King James I.

Mary Tudor See Mary of England

Masaccio 1401–28? Italian painter, one of the leading figures in Italian Renaissance painting. His works influenced many later artists, including Michelangelo and Raphael.

Masada Israeli fortress on a mountain overlooking the Dead Sea. It was the last Zealot stronghold against Rome (AD 66–73). Here the Zealots withstood a two-year Roman siege, but, faced with imminent defeat, virtually all chose death over capture by the Romans.

Masaniello 1620–47? Neopolitan insurrectionist. A fisherman, he led a successful revolt against Spanish rule in Naples. He was murdered soon after.

Masaryk, Jan 1886–1948. Czech statesman and diplomat. He became (1940) foreign minister in the government in exile in London during WW II, and remained in office after the Communist takeover (1948). Soon afterward, he allegedly committed suicide.

Masaryk, Thomas Garrigue 1850–1937. A founding father of Czechoslovakia and its first president (1918–35). He was a leader of pro-Slovak interests in the Austro-Hungarian Empire and fled the country at the outbreak of WW I. With E. Beneš, he organized a de facto government of Czechoslovakia, which won the support of the Allies. When independent Czechoslovakia was formed after WW I, Masaryk was elected president (1918, 1920, 1927, 1934) and instituted a major land-reform program.

Mashhad See Meshed

Masinissa *c*238–149 BC. Numidian king in East Africa. He switched allegiance (*c*206 BC) from Carthage to Rome in the Second Punic War and was rewarded with Carthaginian territory.

Maskelyne, Nevil 1732–1811. English astronomer. He published the Nautical Almanac and introduced the determination of longitude by the moon's position.

Mason, Charles See Mason-Dixon line

Mason, George 1725–92. American Revolutionary statesman. A member of the Constitutional Convention (1787), he refused to sign the Constitution because of its compromise on slavery and its provision for strong federal government. The changes he called for influenced the drafting of the Bill of Rights.

Mason, John 1586–1635. English colonist. A founding member (1629) of the Laconia Company, he founded New Hampshire.

Mason-Dixon line Boundary line between Maryland and Pennsylvania surveyed (1763–67) by Charles Mason (1730–87) and Jeremiah Dixon (fl. 1763–67). Once the line between free and slave states, it is now the traditional border between the North and South.

Masora ⟨Massorah⟩ Hebrew text of the Old Testament. Compiled (mainly *c*6th–*c*10th cents.) by Hebrew scholars (Masoretes), the work represents an effort to reconstruct the Hebrew Old Testament in its original form. The Masora contains critical notes and a system for the proper pronunciation of the text.

Maspero, Gaston 1846–1916. French Egyptologist. He established the French Institute of Oriental Archaeology, discovered the royal mummies at Dayr al-Bahri (1881), and directed many excavations.

Massachusetts Northeast US state (pop. 5,737,000), the 6th state. The first permanent settlement was founded by the Pilgrims at Plymouth (1620). The Massachusetts Bay Company governed the colony (1629–84), which included the province of Maine. Massachusetts became a leader in the Colonial resistance to British rule and was the site during the American Revolution of the battles of Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill (1775). The state constitution was adopted in 1780 and Massachusetts became a state in 1788.

Massachusetts Bay Company English colonizing company chartered (1620) by English king Charles I. Originally intended for trade, it was used by the Puritans to establish a theocracy in Massachusetts. Its charter was annulled (1684).

Massacre of Amritsar Massacre (Apr. 13, 1919) at Amritsar, India. There, troops under British command fired on unarmed Indian nationalist protesters, killing some 400 and wounding about 1,200. The massacre did much to strengthen the anti-British movement in India.

Massacre of Glencoe Massacre (Feb. 13, 1692) of the Scottish Macdonald clan by the rival Campbell clan. The Campbells, led by J. Campbell and J. Dalrymple, 1st earl of Stair, were sent to Glencoe to secure the Macdonalds' oath of allegiance to English King William III. Instead, the Campbells killed some 38 Macdonalds.

Massacre of Saint Bartholomew's Day Massacre of French Protestants (Huguenots) that started in Paris (Aug. 24, 1572) and marked the beginning of renewed fighting in the Wars of Religion (q.v.). The massacre was a result of the continuing religious and political rivalry between Protestants and Catholics (led by the Guise family). The Guise family and Catherine de Médicis, mother of King Charles IX, sought to check the rising influence of Adm. G. Coligny, a Protestant. When an attempt to assassinate Coligny failed (Aug. 22), Catherine persuaded King Charles to order the death of Huguenot leaders then in Paris for the wedding of Henry of Navarre (later Henry IV). Following the initial bloodshed (Henry of Navarre and Prince de Condé escaped death), a general massacre of Protestants broke out in Paris and spread to the countryside. Thousands were killed by the time the persecution was halted in October.

Massacre of Vassy See Guise, François of Lorraine, 2d duke of Guise

Massasoit *c*1580–1661. Chief of the Wampanoag Indians. He signed (1621) a treaty of friendship with the Plymouth colonists and aided the settlers in their first years in New England. His son was King Philip.

Massena, André 1758–1817. French general. He served under Napoleon Bonaparte. His defeat of the Russians at Zurich (1799) saved France from invasion.

Massenet, Jules 1842–1912. French composer. He is known best for his operas Manon and Le Cid.

Massorah See Masora

Mastai-Ferretti, Giovanni M. See Pius IX

Masters, Edgar Lee 1879–1950. American poet, known best for his Spoon River Anthology, a collection of epitaphs exploring the lives of the former residents of a small midwestern town.

Masudi d. 956. Arab historian. He wrote the 30-volume Annals, a history of the world. It was abridged as Meadows of Gold and Mines of Gems.

Matabele War Brief war (July 1894–Jan. 1895) between British colonial forces in South Africa and the Matabele tribes. The Matabele, an offshoot of the Zulu tribes, had settled in their Rhodesian homelands by *c*1837. Hostilities with white settlers broke out into open war (July 1894) between the British South Africa Company and the Matabele, led by Lobengula (1870–94). The British quickly won the war and thereafter governed the Matabele territory. One final rebellion by the Matabele in 1896 was unsuccessful.

Mata Hari ⟨Zelle, Margaretha Geertruida⟩ 1876–1917. Dutch dancer and spy. She was executed by the French after being found guilty of spying for the Germans during WW I.

Match King See Kreuger, Ivar

Mater et Magistra See John XXIII

materialism Philosophical doctrine. Materialism as a theory has existed in various forms from ancient times among the Greek Epicureans to present-day communism (dialectical materialism). Essentially, materialism argues that all aspects of reality (including consciousness) can be explained in terms of bits of matter, or their motion. It is opposed to philosophical idealism and is often in conflict with religion, because it places "matter" over "mind." Materialist philosophers include D. Diderot, T. Hobbes, K. Marx and F. Engels.

Mather, Cotton 1663–1728. American Puritan minister and author, son of I. Mather. One of the leading religious and intellectual figures of his day, he is noted for his involvement in the Salem witchcraft trials (1692).

Mather, Increase 1639–1723. American Puritan minister, son of R. Mather. He was pastor of North Church, Boston (1664–1723) and president of Harvard College (1685–1701). His Cases of Conscience Concerning Evil Spirits helped to stem the witchcraft hysteria of the 1690s.

Mather, Richard 1596–1669. English Puritan minister. He emigrated to Massachusetts in 1635 and was the pastor of Dorchester until his death. He helped to draft the Cambridge Platform (1648).

Mathew, Theobald 1790–1856. Irish temperance missionary. A Capuchin priest, he campaigned for temperance in Ireland, England, and the US.

Mathura See Muttra

Matilda 1046–1115. Countess of Tuscany, a supporter of the papacy in its conflict with the Holy Roman Emperors. It was at her castle that Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV did penance to Pope Gregory VII (1077).

Matilda ⟨Maud⟩ 1102–67. Holy Roman Empress, as wife (m. 1114) of Henry V. Daughter of English king Henry I, she was, by her second husband, Geoffrey of Anjou (m. 1128), the mother of the future English king Henry II.

Matisse, Henri 1869–1954. French artist. A leader of the art movement known as fauvism, he is noted for his use of bold primary colors.

matriarchy Social system in which family descent is traced through the mother's lineage. Such societies have been observed in Pacific islands, African tribes, and in some American Indian cultures.

Matsuoka, Yosuke 1880–1946. Japanese statesman. As foreign minister (1940–41) he helped establish the Axis alliance with Germany and Italy (1940).

Mattaniah See Zedekiah

Matteo da Bascio See Capuchins

Matteotti Crisis Crisis (1924) that marked the beginning of B. Mussolini's Fascist dictatorship in Italy. The incident began with a stinging denunciation of the Fascists (May 30) before the Chamber of Deputies, delivered by Socialist deputy Giacomo Matteotti (1885–1924). Matteotti was then kidnapped (June 10) and killed by Fascist thugs. A massive popular reaction against Fascists ensued and opposition deputies walked out in protest (the Aventine Secession). The deputies, however, proved unable to oust Mussolini. He thereupon seized the opportunity to establish the political controls by which he became dictator.

Matthew, Saint One of the twelve Apostles of Jesus. He was originally a tax collector, but little else is known of his life. He is the traditionally acknowledged author of the First Gospel.

Matthew of Paris See Paris, Matthew

Matthias 1557–1619. Holy Roman Emperor (1612–19), son of Maximilian II and successor to his brother Rudolf II. His failure to establish an accord between Catholics and Protestants resulted in the Thirty Years' War.

Matthias, Saint Christian apostle. Matthias was chosen by lot to replace Judas Iscariot as one of the twelve Apostles of Jesus.

Matthias Corvinus 1443?–90. Hungarian king (1458–90). He waged war against the Turks and Holy Roman Emperor Frederick III, and was a patron of Renaissance culture.

Maud See Matilda

Maugham, William Somerset 1874–1965. English author, known best for his novels and short stories. His novels include Of Human Bondage and The Moon and Sixpence.

Maupassant, Henri René Albert Guy de 1850–93. French author, considered a master of the short story.

Maupeou, René Nicolas de 1714–92. French chancellor (1768–74) under Louis XV. In an attempt to reform the government, he dissolved the Parlement (1771), but it was restored under Louis XVI.

Maurepas, Jean Frédéric Phélippeaux, comte de 1701–81. French statesman, minister of state under French king Louis XV. He was banished (1749) for offending Mme. de Pompadour. He returned (1774) under Louis XVI and aided the American colonies against Britain during the American Revolution.

Mauretania ⟨Mauritania⟩ Ancient region of northwest Africa, comprising parts of present-day Morocco and Algeria. It fell under Roman influence and was formally annexed (AD 42). It fell to the Vandals AD *c*429.

Mauriac, François 1885–1970. French author. He is known best for his novels dealing with Roman Catholicism, among them The Desert of Love and Thérèse. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature (1952).

Maurice *c*539–602. Byzantine emperor (582–602), successor to Tiberius II. An able and successful ruler, he made peace with Persia and defeated the Avars but was murdered by mutinous troops under Phocas.

Maurice 1521–53. Duke (1541–47) and elector (1547–53) of Saxony. He gained the electoral title by aiding Holy Roman Emperor Charles V against the Schmalkaldic League. He later supported the German Protestant princes against Charles.

Maurice of Nassau 1567–1625. Prince of Orange (1618–25), son of William the Silent. He drove the Spanish from the United Provinces and concluded (1609) a 12-year truce with Spain.

Mauritania ⟨Islamic Republic of Mauritania⟩ Independent state located in northwest Africa on the Atlantic coast. Its capital is Nouakchott. Mauritania is largely a desert region, and many of its people (among them Arabs, Berbers, and Moors) are nomadic. It gained independence in 1960 after nearly a hundred years of French rule. Key dates in the history of Mauritania include:

11TH CENT. Almoravide movement established among the Muslim Berbers.

14TH–15TH CENT. Mali Empire dominated southeast Mauritania.

15TH CENT. Portuguese navigators explored coast.

FROM 17TH CENT. European traders active in region.

1860s France gained control of southern Mauritania.

1903 Became French protectorate ruled by colonial government in Senegal.

1904 Became part of French West Africa.

1920 Became a colony of French West Africa, separate from Senegal.

1946 Became French overseas territory.

1957 Nouakchott became administrative center.

1958 Became autonomous republic within the French Community.

1960 Fully independent under Makhtar Ould Daddah (Nov. 28).

1961 Joined UN; Morocco, which claimed Mauritania, objected. Mauritania occupied the southern part of Spanish Sahara (Morocco took the north); the Polisario Front, a Saharan independence group, opposed takeover.

1978 Bloodless coup ousted longtime president Makhtar Ould Daddah; military provisional government set up.

1979 Lt. Col. Muhammad Mahmoud Ould Louly installed as head of state.

1979 Fighting with Morocco, over part of former Spanish Sahara, ended (Aug.); Mauritania withdrew from the region.

1980 Military junta installed Lt. Col. Mohamed Khouna Ould Haidala as head of state; he remained in power into the early 1980s.

Mauritius ⟨Île de France⟩ Island country in the Indian Ocean. Discovered (16th cent.) by the Portuguese, it was held in turn by the Dutch (1598–1710), French (1715–1810), and British (1810–1968). It gained independence on Mar. 12, 1968.

Maurocordátos, Aléxander See Mavrocordátos, Aléxander

Maury, Matthew Fontaine 1806–73. American naval officer and hydrographer. He charted the Atlantic, Pacific, and Indian oceans and wrote Physical Geography of the Sea, the first modern oceanographic work.

Maurya Empire Ancient Indian empire (fl. 4th–2d cent. BC) of the Maurya dynasty rulers. The first great Indian empire, it united nearly the whole Indian subcontinent (and part of Afghanistan) and saw the development of a flourishing native Indian culture. The empire was founded by Chandragupta I, who overthrew (*c*322 BC) the ruler of the Magadha kingdom in eastern India and conquered (*c*305) domains of Seleucus Nicator to the west. The kingdom reached its greatest expansion under the rule of Asoka, who added to conquests made by his predecessor, Bindusara (*d. c*272). Asoka established Buddhism as the state religion. Following his reign, the empire entered into decline and by *c*185 had broken up into petty kingdoms. (See also India [322–185 BC].)

Mausolus d. 353 BC. Persian satrap, ruler of Caria (376–353 BC). He is known for his monumental tomb at Halicarnassus, known as the Mausoleum.

Mavrocordátos, Aléxander ⟨Maurocordátos, Aléxander⟩ 1791–1865. Greek statesman. He was a leader in the revolution against Turkey (1821), president of the first national assembly (1822), and twice premier.

Maxentius d. AD 312. Roman emperor (AD 306–312). Maxentius became emperor after his father, Emperor Maximian, and Emperor Diocletian abdicated. Maximian supported him against Severus. After a quarrel, however, Maximian refused to help him against Constantine, who defeated him in battle (312) at Milvian Bridge (q.v.).

Maximian d. AD 310. Roman emperor with Diocletian (AD 286–305). He ruled the empire in the West until his abdication (305). He later helped his son Maxentius to become emperor, then broke with him and supported Constantine.

Maximilian 1832–67. Austrian archduke and emperor of Mexico (1864–67). Unpopular with the Mexicans, he was opposed by B. Juárez. Supported for a time by French troops sent by Napoleon III, he refused to abdicate after their withdrawal (1867), and was captured and shot.

Maximilian I 1459–1519. Holy Roman Emperor (1493–1519), successor to his father Frederick III. He greatly expanded the hereditary Hapsburg domains, often at the expense of the interests of the Holy Roman Empire. Prior to his accession, he added Burgundian lands (Burgundy, The Netherlands, and Luxembourg) to Hapsburg possessions by his marriage (1477) to Mary of Burgundy. Burgundy was lost (by the Treaty of Arras, 1483) in wars with the French, and Maximilian undertook the Italian Wars (1494–1559) to regain Burgundian lands there. Though Switzerland was able to win (1499) independence from the empire, Maximilian added Hungary and Bohemia to the Hapsburg possessions by the marriage (1516) of his grandson and granddaughter to heirs of King Ladislaus II. He also ensured Hapsburg succession in Spain by the marriage of his son Philip to heiress Joanna (Charles V was their son).

Maximilian I ⟨Maximilian the Great⟩ 1573–1651. Duke (1597–1651) and elector (1623–51) of Bavaria. He was a key founder (1609) of the Catholic League, which opposed the Protestant Union in the Thirty Years' War (1618–48).

Maximilian I 1756–1825. King (1806–25) and elector (1799–1806) of Bavaria. He gained the crown by allying himself with Napoleon and ruled as an enlightened monarch. He championed Bavarian independence and opposed the unification of Germany.

Maximilian II 1527–76. Holy Roman Emperor (1564–76), successor to his father, Ferdinand I. A nominal Catholic, he was tolerant of the Protestants in his realm. He concluded a truce (1568) with Turkish sultan Selim II.

Maximilian II 1811–64. Bavarian king (1848–64), successor to his father, Louis I. His reign was liberal and devoted to the arts and learning. He tried to form a union of small German states led by Bavaria to balance the influence of Austria and Prussia.

Maximilian the Great See Maximilian I

Maximin d. AD 238. Roman emperor (AD 235–238). He spent much of his reign campaigning against the invading Germans. He was assassinated by his own soldiers.

Maximin d. AD 313. Roman emperor (AD 308–313). He persecuted the Christians and attempted to revitalize paganism. He was defeated by Licinius.

Maximus d. AD 388. Roman emperor of the West (AD 383–388). He defeated Gratian and drove Valentinian II from Italy. He was defeated and put to death by Eastern emperor Theodosius I.

Maxwell, James Clerk 1831–79. Scottish physicist. He is noted for his A Treatise on Electricity and Magnetism and for his important theory of electromagnetic radiation. He has been ranked with I. Newton in his contributions to modern science.

Maya Group of related Central American Indian tribes, living in the Yucatan peninsula, southern Mexico, Guatemala, and Belize. The origin of the Maya is uncertain, but by the 1st millennium BC they had already begun to establish an advanced culture. The Mayan civilization was based on agriculture, and each community retained political independence under the rule of a local hierarchy of priests and political chieftains. Mayan cities centered around royal houses and religious temples built on pyramidal structures. The Maya devised an extremely accurate calendar, a vigesimal (base 20) number system, a complex pantheon of gods and religious ceremonies, and a system of hieroglyphic writing that has yet to be deciphered. Their culture is noted for its advances in the arts, architecture, astronomy, and mathematics. Their cities included Chichén Itzá, Uxmal, and Mayapán, which formed the League of Mayapán (13th cent AD). The league was rent by civil war, and the cities eventually abandoned. Mayan civilization had passed its peak by the time of the Spanish conquest (16th cent.) The Spanish accelerated the Mayan decline, abolished much of the Mayan religion, and destroyed virtually all of the Mayan records. A few survive, such as the Dresden Codex (q.v.) and the Popol Vuh (q.v.), a later text based on original Mayan sources.

Mayaguez* Incident Seizure (May 12, 1975) of the US cargo ship Mayaguez by Cambodian authorities. Within two weeks after US forces were evacuated from Vietnam, Cambodians boarded the Mayaguez and took 39 crewmen hostage. President G. Ford ordered their rescue, during which 38 Americans were killed.

Mayakovsky, Vladimir 1893–1930. Russian poet, leading poet of the Russian Revolution. Among his best-known poems are A Cloud in Trousers and The Backbone Flute, both written before the revolution.

Mayapán, League of See Maya

Mayenne, Charles de Lorraine, duc de 1554–1611. French general, brother of Henry of Guise. He headed the Catholic League against French king Henry IV but refused to place the Spanish Catholic infanta Isabella on the throne.

Mayflower English ship upon which the Pilgrims sailed from England to Plymouth, Massachusetts (Sept.–Nov. 1620). The Pilgrims arrived off Cape Cod in November, and landed at Plymouth Dec. 26. (See also Pilgrims.)

Mayflower Compact An agreement, signed (Nov. 21, 1620) by the Pilgrims aboard the ship Mayflower. By it the settlers agreed to form a "civil body politic," which would form a government with binding laws. It was the basis for the government in Plymouth.

May Fourth Movement Mass movement in China (early 20th cent.) sparked by intellectuals who sought government reform and modernization of Chinese society. The movement, beginning as early as 1915, was precipitated by the government's inability to check Japanese expansionism. But among intellectuals it fostered a broad attack on traditional Chinese society and culture and helped to introduce Western ideologies. The intellectual movement was translated to mass protests by the events of 1919. The post-WW I Versailles Peace Conference transferred (Apr. 28) German concessions in Shantung province, China, to Japan. Some 3,000–5,000 students in Peking began (May 4) a series of mass protests against the decision, and over the weeks these spread to other cities and spawned a boycott of Japanese goods. China subsequently refused to sign the Treaty of Paris, but more important results were the rising political power of intellectuals, the further decline of traditional culture, the spread of the vernacular in written Chinese, and greater freedoms for women. Among the leading figures in the movement were Ch'en Tu-hsiu and Hu Shih.

Mayo, Charles Horace and William James 1865–1939; 1861–1939. American surgeons. They established the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, and founded (1915) the Mayo Foundation for Medical Education and Research.

Mazarin, Jules ⟨Mazarini, Giulio⟩ 1602–61. French cardinal and statesman. He succeeded (1642) Cardinal Richelieu as minister of France under King Louis XIII and remained powerful during the regency of Anne of Austria.

Mazarin Bible First known book printed (c1455) from movable type. Printed by J. Gutenberg, it was so named for its discovery (1760) in the library of Cardinal Mazarin.

Mazarini, Giulio See Mazarin, Jules

Mazepa, Ivan Stepanovich 1644?–1709. Cossack hetman (leader) in the Russian Ukraine. He fought with the Swedes under Charles XII against Russia, but was defeated at Poltava (1709).

Mazurian Lakes, Battles of the Military campaigns on the Russian front during WW I. 1. Battle (Sept. 9–14, 1914) in which the Germans drove the Russians from East Prussia, inflicting casualties of 125,000 (against some 10,000 German casualties). 2. Battle (Feb. 7–21, 1915) in which the Germans attempted a knockout blow at Russia. They inflicted 200,000 Russian casualties, but without decisive results.

Mazzini, Giuseppe 1805–72. Italian revolutionary and political writer. He campaigned for a united Italy under a republican government, founded the Young Italy Movement (1831), and was a leader in the short-lived Roman republic of 1849. He aided Garibaldi in his efforts to unify Italy and later refused to take part in the monarchical government established in 1861.

Mboya, Thomas Joseph See Mboya, Tom

Mboya, Tom ⟨Mboya, Thomas Joseph⟩ 1930–69. Kenyan political leader. A leader in the Kenyan independence movement, he held several ministerial positions in the government of J. Kenyatta before being assassinated.

Mc For names beginning with Mc, see under Mac

Mead, George Herbert 1863–1931. American philosopher. He emphasized the importance of language in social interaction. His Mind, Self, and Society was published posthumously.

Mead, Margaret 1901–78. American anthropologist, noted especially for her studies of the people and cultures of Oceania. Her books included Coming of Age in Samoa, Growing Up in New Guinea, and Male and Female.

Meade, George Gordon 1815–72. Union general in the American Civil War. He fought with distinction at Antietam (1862), Fredericksburg (1862), and Chancellorsville (1863), and defeated Gen. R. E. Lee at Gettysburg (1863).

Meany, George 1894–1980. US labor leader. Originally a plumber, he rose to become (1952) president of the American Federation of Labor (AFL) and of the AFL-CIO (1955).

Mecca Saudi Arabian city (pop. 366,800), the birthplace of Muhammad (570) and the Holy City of Islam. It is the site of the Great Mosque and the Kaaba. Mecca was conquered by the Ottoman Turks (1517), the Wahabis (1803–13), and Ibn-Saud (1924), who founded Saudi Arabia. (See also Muhammad.)

Mecklenburg Former East German state (until 1952) and historic region on the Baltic. First settled in the 6th cent., it became (14th cent.) a duchy within the Holy Roman Empire. Divided (1701) into Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz, it was reunited (1934).

Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence American declaration (May 20, 1775) severing ties with Britain, said to have been made by the citizens of Mecklenburg, North Carolina. Although these citizens did adopt anti-British resolutions around that time, the declaration is probably not authentic.

Medea Mythological Greek sorceress. She helped Jason to obtain the Golden Fleece from her father, Aeëtes, king of Colchis.

Media Ancient Asian country of indeterminate boundaries in what is now roughly northwestern Iran. Under Cyaxares, Media won its independence from the Assyrian Empire, taking much of its territory. The Persian king Cyrus conquered (*c*550 BC) Media from Astyages, and it remained a part of the Persian Empire until the time of Alexander the Great.

Medici Italian family, rulers of Florence (15–18th cents.) and world-famous patrons of the arts who transformed Florence into a treasure house of European art. Though the family can be traced back to the 12th cent., the huge family fortune was founded by Giovanni di Bicci de' Medici (1360–1429). From his sons stem the two major branches: the Elder Branch, by Cosimo (1389–1464); and the Younger Branch, by Lorenzo (1395–1440). The Elder Branch controlled Florence by means of influence until 1531, when Alessandro (1511–37) became hereditary duke. On his death the extinct Elder Branch was replaced by the Younger. It ruled Florence until the death of Gian Gastone (1671–1737). Prominent members of the family include Pope Leo X, Pope Clement VII, Pope Leo XI, Catherine de Médicis, and Marie de Médicis.

Medici, Alessandro de' 1511–37. Duke of Florence (1532–37). Made duke by his father-in-law, Holy Roman Emperor Charles V, he was hated for his tyrannical rule. His assassination by L. de' Medici ended the Elder Branch of the Medici line.

Medici, Cosimo de' 1389–1464. Florentine ruler and banker. He used his wealth and influence to encourage the arts and scholarship.

Medici, Cosimo I de' 1519–74. Duke of Florence (1537–69). Although a cruel ruler, he increased the wealth and size of his territories, and defeated and incorporated Siena (1555). He was made duke of Tuscany (1569).

Medici, Cosimo II de' 1590–1620. Grand duke of Tuscany (1609–21), successor to his father, Ferdinand I de' Medici. He was a patron of Galileo.

Medici, Ferdinand I de' 1549–1609. Grand duke of Tuscany (1587–1609). He strengthened the duchy.

Medici, Gian Gastone de' 1671–1737. Grand duke of Tuscany (1723–37). He was the last male member of the Medici family. After his death the now impoverished duchy passed to Francis of Lorraine, later Holy Roman Emperor Francis I.

Medici, Giovanni Angelo de' See Pius IV

Medici, Giovanni de' ⟨Bande Nere, Giovanni delle⟩ 1498–1526. Italian general known as John of the Black Bands. He fought for both sides in the Italian Wars and was mortally wounded in battle.

Medici, Giovanni de' See Leo X

Medici, Giulio de' See Clement VII

Medici, Ippolito de' 1511–35. Italian cardinal. He and his cousin, Alessandro de' Medici, ruled Florence under Pope Clement VII. While on a mission to Holy Roman Emperor Charles V he died, possibly poisoned by order of Alessandro.

Medici, Lorenzo de' 1449–92. Florentine statesman known as "the Magnificent." Son of P. de' Medici, he ruled Florence (1478–92) and was a noted writer and patron of the arts.

Medici, Lorenzo de' 1492–1519. Duke of Urbino (1516–19) and son of P. de' Medici. His tomb in Florence was created by Michelangelo. He was the father of Catherine de Médicis.

Medici, Piero de' 1414–69. Florentine merchant prince, successor to his father, C. de' Medici, as ruler of Florence. The father of L. de' Medici, he was known as "the Gouty" because of his ill health.

Medici, Piero de' 1471–1503. Florentine merchant prince, son of L. de' Medici (the Magnificent). He ruled Florence (1492–94) until expelled by Savonarola during the invasion of Tuscany by French king Charles VIII.

medieval See Middle Ages

Medieval Inquisition See Inquisition (1)

Medina Saudi Arabian city (pop. 100,000). It holds the tomb of Muhammad and is Islam's second most holy city. Muhammad made his hegira (flight) here from Mecca in 622. It was ruled successively by the Ottoman Turks, Egyptians, Wahabis and again by the Turks until taken by Ibn-Saud (1924).

Medina-Sidonia, duke of See Spanish Armada

Mediterranean Sea World's largest inland sea, between southern Europe, North Africa, and western Asia. A number of the world's oldest civilizations developed in the Mediterranean region.

Medusa In Greek mythology, one of the Gorgons. She had hair of snakes and a gaze that transformed onlookers into stone. She was slain by Perseus. Chrysaor and Pegasus sprang from her blood.

Megalopolis Ancient Greek city. Founded (*c*370 BC) in Arcadia as an anti-Spartan outpost, it was destroyed (222 BC) by Cleomenes III.

Mégara Town in central Greece. The ancient capital of Megaris, it prospered under the Dorians and was the birthplace of Euclid.

Megarian school of philosophy A Greek philosophy founded by Euclid of Megara. It held that good was a single quality, though known by different names.

Megiddo, Battle of Battle (Sept. 19, 1918) of WW I at Megiddo, now in Israel. Here the British under Gen. Edmund Allenby (1861–1936) defeated the Ottoman Turks and began their northward thrust through Palestine. The Ottomans were forced to sign an armistice the next month.

Mehemet Ali See Muhammad Ali

Meigs, Fort See Fort Meigs

Meiji See Mutsuhito

Meiji restoration Period of modernization and Westernization in Japan (1868–1912). During this period Japan developed its industry and became a world power. The period began with restoration of power to the emperor, Mutsuhito (reign name, Meiji), after the centuries-long rule by Tokugawa shoguns. The emperor abolished feudalism (1868–69), made Tokyo capital (1869), modernized government administration (1885), and acceded to a new constitution (1889). The government thereafter consisted of an upper and lower (elected) house, a premier, and a group of elder statesmen (Genro). During this period, which ended (1912) with Meiji's death, Japan engaged in the Sino-Japanese War (1894–95) and Russo-Japanese War (1904–05).

Mein Kampf Political publication by A. Hitler. Written by Hitler during his imprisonment after the Munich Putsch, it outlined National Socialism and its program for German expansion and world domination.

Meir, Golda ⟨Mabovitch, Goldie⟩ ⟨Myerson, Goldie⟩ 1898–1978. Israeli political leader and prime minister (1969–1974). She was a founder of Israel, and as prime minister she made a concerted though unsuccessful effort to achieve peace in the Middle East. The Fourth Arab-Israeli War was fought during her administration.

Meitner, Lise 1878–1968. Austrian physicist. With O. Hahn she discovered protoactinium, and accomplished uranium fission (1938) with Hahn and Fritz Strassman (1902–).

Melaka See Malacca

Melanchthon, Philip 1497–1560. German religious scholar. He worked with Luther, published the Loci Communes (1521), setting forth Reformation principles, and wrote the Augsburg Confession. He attempted to moderate differences between Catholics and Protestants in order to avoid war and played a significant role in reforming the German educational system.

Melas, Baron Michael von See Marengo, Battle of Melba, Dame Nellie ⟨Armstrong, Helen⟩ 1861–1931. Australian operatic soprano. One of the most popular opera singers of her day, she appeared throughout Europe and the US.

Melbourne, William Lamb, 2d Viscount 1779–1848. British statesman. As prime minister (1834, 1835–41) he was a friend and adviser to the young Queen Victoria. His wife, Lady Caroline, had an affair with Lord G. Byron.

Melchior See Magi

Melchisedec See Melchizedek

Melchites Christian group of the Middle East headed by the patriarch of Antioch. They are in communion with the pope, but their rites are performed in Arabic.

Melchizedek ⟨Melchisedec⟩ Biblical king and priest of Salem. He blessed Abraham, who gave him tithes. He is considered a precursor of a Christ figure.

Meleager Mythological Greek hero, son of Calydonian king Oeneus. He killed the boar that Artemis had sent to ravage his country because his father had not sacrificed to her.

Melfi, Constitutions of See Constitutions of Melfi

Melissus of Samos See Eleatic school

Mellon, Andrew William 1855–1937. American financier. As secretary of the treasury (1921–32), he introduced (1920) tax reforms that helped reduce the national debt. He donated his art collection and gave funds to form the National Gallery of Art.

Melpomene See Muses

Melville, Andrew 1545–1622. Scottish Presbyterian scholar and successor to J. Knox. He improved the Scottish universities, wrote much of the Second Book of Discipline, and was sent to the Tower of London (1607–11) by English king James I for his criticisms of the Anglican church.

Melville, Herman 1819–91. American author, known best for his classic novel Moby Dick. Melville used his experiences as a seaman (1841–44) in such books as Typee, Omoo, Mardi, Redburn, and White Jacket. After a period of popularity and literary success, Melville drifted into a life of anonymity and spent his later years as a customs official in New York City (1866–85). He died virtually unknown, but today is considered one of America's great writers.

Memnon In Greek mythology, Ethiopian king, son of Eos (Dawn). He fought against the Greeks in the Trojan War and was killed by Achilles. Zeus made him immortal.

Memphis American city (pop. 646,000), the largest city in Tennessee. A major port on the Mississippi, it was founded (1819) by A. Jackson and others. It fell (1862) to Union forces during the Civil War and was a major Union supply center during the war.

Memphis Capital of the Old Kingdom of ancient Egypt, located at the apex of the Nile delta. It was said to have been established by Menes and was dedicated to the god Ptah.

Menahem *d. c*738 BC. King of Israel (*c*744–738 BC). He killed Shallum for the throne and ruled cruelly. He paid tribute to Assyria for protection.

Menander 342?–291? BC. Greek comic dramatist. He was considered the best of the New Comedy writers and wrote more than 100 plays, which were based on love plots.

Mencius 371?–288? BC. Chinese Confucian philosopher who had a major role in the development of Confucianism. He is called the second sage, after Confucius. His Book of Mencius states that man is innately good, holds family duty to be the foundation of society, and stresses the need for rulers to be concerned for the common people. The book later became a classic Confucian text.

Mencken, Henry Louis 1880–1956. American journalist and critic noted for his iconoclastic criticisms of literature and middle-class American life. Among his works is the classic study The American Language.

Mendel, Gregor Johann 1822–84. Austrian biologist. An Augustinian monk, he conducted his experiments on hybrid plants in his monastery garden. He formulated Mendel's Law on dominant and recessive genes, and discovered the male cell's role in fertilization. His studies, ignored in his lifetime, were later rediscovered and form the basis for modern genetics.

Mendeleev, Dmitri Ivanovich See Mendelejeff, Dmitri Ivanovich

Mendelejeff, Dmitri Ivanovich ⟨Mendeleev, ~⟩ ⟨Mendeleyev, ~⟩ 1834–1907. Russian chemist. He formulated the periodic law and established a table for the classification of the elements.

Mendeleyev, Dmitri Ivanovich See Mendelejeff, Dmitri Ivanovich

Mendelssohn, Jakob Ludwig Felix ⟨Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Felix⟩ 1809–47. German composer, grandson of M. Mendelssohn. He was one of the leading composers of the 19th cent.

Mendelssohn, Moses 1729–86. German Jewish philosopher. He advocated assimilation of the Jews into the German culture and was the model for G. Lessing's play Nathan the Wise.

Mendes-France, Pierre 1907–82. French statesman. A Radical Socialist, he was premier (1954–55) when France declared an armistice with Indochina. He was forced from office because of his liberal policy toward Algeria.

Mendoza, Antonio de 1490?–1552. Spanish colonial administrator and first viceroy of New Spain (1535–50). His 15-year administration was just and fair to the Indians and helped stabilize the Mexican territory.

Mendoza, Pedro de 1487?–1537. Spanish soldier and explorer. Commissioned by Holy Roman Emperor Charles V to colonize the Rio de la Plata area, he founded Buenos Aires (1536).

Menelaus Mythical Greek king of Sparta. He was the husband of Helen, whose abduction was the cause of the Trojan War. He fought under his brother, Agamemnon.

Menelik II 1844–1913. Ethiopian emperor (1889–1913). He crushed an Italian invasion attempt (1895–96), expanded Ethiopia's territory, and worked to modernize his empire.

Menendez de Aviles, Pedro 1519–74. Spanish sailor and colonizer. Menendez founded St. Augustine, Florida (1565), and led the massacre (1565) of French Huguenot colonists at Fort Caroline, Florida.

Menes fl. 3100 BC. Egyptian king. He united Upper and Lower Egypt and founded the 1st dynasty. He also is said to have founded the ancient capital of Memphis.

Menkure ⟨Mycerinus⟩ *fl. c*2500 BC. Egyptian king of the 4th dynasty. He built the smallest of the three pyramids at Giza.

Mennonites Protestant Christian sect. Mennonites, now most numerous in the US and Canada, believe in adult baptism, refuse to bear arms, and seek a simplified existence free of worldly concerns. The sect originated in Europe as an outgrowth of the Anabaptists and was largely formed aound the work of the Dutch reformer Menno Simons (1496–1561), for whom it is named. The elements of the Mennonite doctrine were set forth (1632) in the Dordrecht Confession of Faith. Mennonite settlements were founded in America as early as 1683. The Mennonite church has split into many smaller sects, including the Amish sects.

Menotti, Gian-Carlo 1911–. Italian composer. His operas have been extremely popular in the US, to which he emigrated in 1927. He is twice winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Music (1950, 1955).

Mensheviks Russian revolutionary party. The Mensheviks, opposed to N. Lenin's Bolsheviks, sought to form a party of the masses (rather than a revolutionary elite), believed there was a necessary transition period before creating the socialist state, and were willing to work with bourgeois elements during this time to achieve their goal. The Mensheviks were formed by a split (caused by N. Lenin, 1903) in the Russian Social Democratic Workers' party and were first led by L. Martov (1873–1923). The Social Democratic party was permanently split into two factions in 1912 and thereafter the Mensheviks were often divided by internal dissent. They dominated the provisional government of Russia after the February Revolution of 1917 (q.v.), were ousted from power by the Bolsheviks in the October Revolution (q.v.), and were officially suppressed by the Bolsheviks after 1922.

Menshikov, Aleksandr Danilovich 1672–1729. Russian field marshal and statesman. Adviser to Peter the Great, he helped secure the throne for Peter's widow, Catherine I. He ruled Russia during her reign.

Mentor In Greek mythology, a friend of Odysseus and tutor to his son Telemachus. His name has come to mean "wise adviser."

Mentuhotep II ⟨Nebhapetre⟩ Egyptian king (2060–10 BC), a ruler of the 11th dynasty. His reign marked the ascendancy of Thebes and under his leadership Upper, Middle, and Lower Egypt were reunited (*c*2039 BC).

Menzies, Robert Gordon 1894–. Australian statesman. As prime minister (1939–41, 1949–66) he followed a pro-American, anti-Communist policy.

Mephistopheles Personification of the devil who figured in the medieval German legend of J. Faust. Faust is said to have sold his soul to him. Mephistopheles appears in works by C. Marlowe, J. Goethe, and T. Mann.

Merarites See Levites

mercantilism Economic policy and theory that dominated European financial and governmental thinking from the 16th–18th cents. It argued that governmental regulation of a nation's industry and trade was necessary; that exports were preferable to imports or to equal trade; that large populations and armies were beneficial to a nation; that a country's true wealth was determined by its possession of gold and silver. Mercantilism was attacked by Adam Smith in Wealth of Nations (1776), a book advocating the laissez-faire (q.v.) doctrines that replaced mercantilism in the 18th cent.

Mercator, Gerardus ⟨Kremer, Gerhard⟩ 1512–94. Flemish cartographer. He invented the Mercator projection (1568) for navigator's maps and started work on a great atlas, which was finished (1594) by his son.

Merchants Adventurers English company (1407–1807) established by merchants dealing in foreign trade. Their major market, until 1564, was in the Spanish Netherlands, where finished English cloth was in demand.

Merchants of the Steelyard In medieval England, German merchants of the Hanseatic League (q.v.). They conducted their trading operations out of the Steelyard, a section of London along the Thames that served as English headquarters of the league. Special privileges granted these merchants (by royal order) aroused resentment among the English. But the privileges were continued because the trade was economically valuable. With the rise of the English carrying trade in the 16th cent., the German merchants ceased to be important and Queen Elizabeth expelled them (1598).

Merchant Staplers See Company of the Merchants of the Staple Mercia, kingdom of Ancient Anglo-Saxon kingdom comprising much of central England. Settled (6th cent.) by Angles, it was overcome and divided (886) by invading Danes in the east and Alfred of Wessex in the west.

Merciless Parliament ⟨Wonderful Parliament⟩ In English history, the parliamentary session (1388) which impeached five of King Richard's supporters on broadly construed charges of treason. The incident stemmed from Richard's ongoing struggle for power with Parliament and forced him to take a more moderate course for some years.

Mercury Ancient Roman god of commerce, identified with the Greek god Hermes.

Meredith, George 1828–1909. English novelist, noted for his intellectual and psychological novels. Among his best-known novels are The Ordeal of Richard Feverel, The Egoist, and The Amazing Marriage.

Merezhkovsky, Dmitri Sergeyevich 1865–1941. Russian novelist and critic. He wrote the trilogy of historical novels Christ and Antichrist, and was an influential figure in the Russian religious and intellectual movements of the early 20th cent.

Mergenthaler, Ottmar 1854–99. German-born American inventor of the Linotype machine. Patented in 1884, it greatly advanced the printing industry.

Mérimée, Prosper See Bizet, Georges

Merlin Magician and sage of Celtic mythology and Arthurian legend. He was counselor to King Arthur and his father, Uther Pendragon.

Mermaid Tavern Historical English meeting place in London. The Friday Street Club regularly gathered there. Its members included W. Shakespeare, B. Jonson, and J. Donne.

Merneptah *d. c*1223 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (*c*1236 BC–*c*1223 BC), successor to his father Ramses II. He repelled an invasion by the Libyans. The earliest mention of Israel is on one of the steles commemorating this victory. It is thought the Exodus occurred during his reign.

Merope Name of several women of Greek mythology, including (1) one of the Pleiades, the wife of Sisyphus and (2) the foster mother of Oedipus.

Merovech See Merovingians

Merovingians Frankish dynasty and empire (5th–8th cents.) in Western Europe. The dynasty was founded (5th cent.) by the kings of the Salian Franks, one of whom was Merovech (reigned 448–457). The rise of the Merovingians from their kingdom on the Rhine began with the rule of Clovis I (481–511). He united the Salian and Ripuarian Franks, accepted Christianity (496), and, by his conquests, created a vast empire that included most of Gaul. His empire was divided by his four sons at his death, united again by Clotaire I (reigned 558–561) and redivided into Austrasia (q.v.), Neustria (q.v.), and Burgundy (under Austrasian control). Merovingian territories were briefly united again under the rule of Clotaire II and Dagobert I (613–639, inclusive). Already weakened by the many bitter internal wars, the Merovingian rulers after Dagobert lost all real power to the noblemen. Called the "do-nothing" kings, these kings ruled in name only and the mayors of the palace (supposedly in the king's service) held actual power. Charles Martel greatly expanded his power as mayor of the palace, and his son, Pepin the Short, finally overthrew the last Merovingian king, Childeric III, in 751. He thus founded the Carolingian Empire (q.v.). (See also France [481–751].)

Merrimack See Monitor* and *Merrimack

Mersen, Treaty of Treaty (870) dividing Lotharingia, one of the three kingdoms formed by division of the Carolingian Empire in 843. The treaty, formulated on the death (869) of Lotharingian king Lothair, was signed by Charles II ("the Bald") and Louis the German (all three were sons of Louis I). Lotharingia lay between Charles' kingdom of the Western Franks and Louis' kingdom of the Eastern Franks, and the two monarchs divided the territory between themselves. Thus a common border was established between the two kingdoms, later to become the states of France and Germany.

Meshed ⟨Mashhad⟩ Iranian city, capital of Khorasan province. An agricultural and trading center and a place of pilgrimage, it contains the shrine of Imam Ali Riza, a Shi'ite Muslim religious figure.

Mesolithic See Stone Age

Mesopotamia Historic region located in what is now Iraq. An important center of early civilization, the area is the fertile plain surrounding the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. The earliest towns in the region were located in the north (5th millennium BC), though the first important cultures eventually rose in the south, notably Sumer (q.v.). There followed the dynasty of Ur (q.v.), the Akkadian Empire (q.v.), the first and second Babylonian Empires (q.v.), and the Assyrian Empire (q.v.). Thereafter the region succumbed to other powers, beginning with the Persians, Macedonians, and Romans.

Messenia Ancient Greek region in the Peloponnesus, and site of the present Messinias. Its citizens frequently rebelled against Sparta's domination, notably in the Messenian Wars (q.v.).

Messenian Wars Two wars (*c*735–*c*715 BC, *c*650–*c*600 BC) waged by Sparta against Messenia. The first led to Spartan victory over Messenia. The second, prompted by an uprising in Messenia, was a prolonged struggle and ended with complete Spartan domination of Messenia.

Messerschmitt, Willy 1898–. German aviation designer and manufacturer. He founded the Messerschmitt aircraft manufacturing works and built planes for the Luftwaffe during WW II.

Messiaen, Olivier-Eugène-Prosper-Charles 1908–. French composer and organist. His work is noted for its originality and religious mysticism.

Messiah ⟨Messias⟩ In religion, especially Christianity and Judaism, a redeemer who would come from God to save humanity. In Islam, the Mahdi is a messianic figure.

Messias See Messiah

Messina Italian city, capital of Messina province,

Sicily. Founded (8th cent. BC) by settlers from Chalcis, it was destroyed by the Carthaginians (396 BC) and later rebuilt by rulers of nearby Syracuse. Thereafter, it figured in the struggles between the tyrants of Syracuse and the Carthaginians. Messina allied itself with Rome (264 BC) and this brought on the First Punic War between Rome and Carthage. It was later taken by the Goths, Byzantines, and Arabs, before being taken by the Normans, who made it part of their kingdom of Sicily. Centuries later, the capture of Messina during WW II marked the fall of Sicily to the Allies (1943).

Metacomet See Philip (d. 1676) metaphysical poets Group of 17th-cent. English lyric poets whose works were noted for their contrasting imagery and intellectual brilliance or wit. The term was coined by S. Johnson, and a leading figure of the group was J. Donne.

Metaurus, Battle of the Battle (207 BC) of the Second Punic War, at the Metaurus River, northeast of Rome. Roman forces under the consuls Marcus Livius Salinator and Claudius Nero decisively defeated the Carthaginians under Hasdrubal, thus saving Rome from invasion and assuring Hannibal's eventual defeat.

Metaxas, John ⟨Metaxas, Yanni⟩ 1871–1941. Greek general and statesman. A royalist, as premier (1936–41) he assumed dictatorial powers. He repelled the Italian invasion of Greece (1940) during WW II.

Metaxas, Yanni See Metaxas, John

Metchnikoff, Èlie 1845–1916. Russian microbiologist and zoologist. He discovered that certain blood cells engulf foreign bodies, a process called phagocytosis. For his work in immunology he was awarded, with P. Ehrlich, the Nobel Prize for Physiology and Medicine (1908).

Metellus Macedonicus, Quintus Caecilus d. 115 BC. Roman general. He gained Roman victories in Macedonia and Greece. As censor (131 BC), he advocated compulsory marriage to increase the birthrate.

Metellus Numidicus, Quintus Caecilius d. 91? BC. Roman general. He defeated the Numidians under Jugurtha (109 BC) but was exiled for opposing the reforms of Lucias Appuleius Saturninus.

Metellus Pius, Quintus Caecilius *d. c*63 BC. Roman general who served under Sulla. He was commander of the war in Spain against Sertorius and consul (80 BC) with Sulla.

Methodism Protestant Christian religious movement in Britain and America, based largely on the teachings of J. Wesley. The movement began (1729) in Oxford, England, when Wesley, his brother Charles (1707–88), G. Whitefield, and others began to hold meetings for religious study. Adopting elements advanced by the Moravian church, the group began a program of evangelism, and by their actions were barred from participation within the Church of England. Whitefield, opposing Wesley's support of the doctrines of J. Arminius, separated from the group (*c*1741) and formed the Calvinistic Methodists. In 1784 Wesley ordained Thomas Coke (1747–1814) and F. Asbury superintendents of the movement in America, which had grown steadily through the 18th cent. After Wesley's death (1791), the movement in Britain formally separated from the Church of England as the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Methodist factions formed in both America and Britain in the 19th cent., and some subsequently were rejoined. A merger of churches in the US (1939) formed the Methodist Church. This in turn joined (1968) with the Evangelical United Brethren Church to form the United Methodist Church, the largest Methodist group in the world.

Methodius, Saint See Cyril and Methodius, Saints

Methuselah Biblical figure, son of Enoch. He was the longest-living patriarch, said to have lived 969 years.

Methven, Battle of See Robert I

Metternich, Prince Klemens Wenzel Nepomuk Lothar von 1773–1859. Austrian statesman, the leading European statesman (1815–48), whose conservative policies helped maintain political stability in post-Napoleonic Europe. As Austrian foreign minister (1809–48), he helped form the Quadruple Alliance, which finally defeated Napoleon (1813). Thereafter he sought to maintain the balance of power in Europe and to preserve the stability of the monarchies against liberal movements. He made Austria the dominant power in the German Confederation, helped create the Holy Alliance, took part in formulating the Carlsbad Decrees, and was a leading figure at the congresses of Vienna (1814–15), Troppau (1820), Laibach (1821), and Verona (1822). Metternich was forced out of power by the liberal revolutions of 1848, brought on in part by the repressive measures he advocated to maintain order.

Mexican Revolution Period of political and social turmoil in Mexico following the overthrow (May, 1911) of P. Díaz by F. Madero. Madero subsequently headed a popular movement that sought to implement reforms in Mexico. But his rule was ineffective and he was in turn overthrown and murdered (Feb., 1913) by Gen. V. Huerta. Huerta's reactionary rule led to revolts headed by V. Carranza, F. Villa, and E. Zapata, and he was forced from office (1914). Carranza became president, though his rule was challenged by Villa and Zapata, who continued armed resistance. Villa's raid into the US (Mar. 1916) provoked a US expedition into Mexico, headed by Gen. J. Pershing, but Villa successfully evaded it. Under Carranza, Mexico established the Constitution of 1917, which called for separation of church and state, agrarian reform, and nationalization of foreign holdings and mineral rights. Reform came slowly, however, and Mexico remained politically volatile for many years.

Mexican War War (May, 1846–Feb., 1848) between the US and Mexico. It resulted in US acquisition of vast territories in the West, including California, Nevada, Utah, New Mexico, and Arizona. The war was a result of US expansionist policies and accumulated tensions between the two countries. Following admission (1845) of Texas (which had rebelled against Mexican rule) to the Union, relations with Mexico became strained. The US attempted to buy California and New Mexico, but J. Slidell's mission failed. President J. Polk then ordered US troops into disputed territory along the Rio Grande (July, 1845). The Mexicans responded in kind and, on Apr. 25, 1846, fighting broke out between the two armies. The US declared war (May 12, 1846), but by this time US forces under Gen. Z. Taylor had already forced the Mexicans to retreat across the Rio Grande. Gen. S. Kearny invaded New Mexico (June–Aug. 1846), secured it for the US, and then entered California (Dec., 1846), which had already been taken over for the US by Pacific Naval Commander John Drake Sloat (1781–1867) and Capt. J. Frémont. Meanwhile US forces under Taylor and others pushed into Mexico. Taylor won an important victory over A. de Santa Anna (now Mexican president) at the Battle of Buena Vista (Feb., 1847). Gen. W. Scott landed some 12,000 US troops at Veracruz (Mar., 1847), took the city, and began the march to Mexico City. Scott won a rapid succession of victories at Cerro Gordo, Contreras, and Chapultepec (a fortress defending Mexico City), and entered Mexico City on Sept. 14, 1847. The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (q.v.) brought the war to an end and, among its other provisions, provided for the purchase of captured Mexican territory for $15 million.

Mexico Republic, the southernmost country of North America. Its capital is Mexico City. The region comprising Mexico saw the rise and development of a number of indigenous civilizations, among them the Toltec, Maya, and Aztec. Conquered (16th cent.) by the Spanish and made part of the viceroyalty of New Spain, Mexico became independent in 1821. Since then its history has been marked by periods of political struggle, notably the Mexican Revolution (q.v.), which laid the basis for modern Mexican society. Key dates in the history of Mexico include:

8TH–11TH CENT. Toltecs flourished in central Mexico.

14TH–15TH CENT. Aztecs flourished in Mexico.

1517 Francisco Fernández de Córdoba explored Yucatán; was first European to explore region.

1519–21 H. Cortés began conquest of Mexico.

1528 Juan de Zumarraga became first bishop of Mexico; in subsequent years the Roman Catholic church forcibly Christianized native Indians and gained great landholdings in Spanish Mexico.

1535 Viceroyalty of New Spain created; Mexico City established as capital amid ruins of Aztec capital of Tenochtitlán.

16TH CENT. Repartimiento system established: Spaniards given title to vast tracts of lands and native Indian peoples living on them; gave rise to oppressive system of forced labor and helped preserve social divisions between Spanish landowners, Indians, and mestizos (racially mixed persons).

1540s Spanish explored and laid claim to modern US Southwest region, including California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas.

1541 Mixton War, unsuccessful Indian revolt against Spanish rule.

1680 Pueblo Rebellion, Indian revolt in New Mexico that halted Spanish colonization in that region for a decade.

1786 Reforms enacted by Viceroy Jose de Gálvez to end long-standing corruption and abuses of power by Spanish colonial government.

1808 Army of French emperor Napoleon occupied Mexico; Joseph Bonaparte made king.

1810 Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla issued (Sept. 16) the Grito de Dolores, a call to rebellion to secure social and economic equality; Indians and mestizos rose in revolt.

1810 Hidalgo y Costilla marked his first victory at the Battle of Celaya.

1811 Rebel force under Hidalgo y Costilla crushed by Spanish royalists at Calderón Bridge (Jan. 17).

1813–14 Congress of Chilpancingo proclaimed (1813) a constitutional republic; main rebel forces defeated (1814) by royalist general A. de Iturbide; V. Guerrero carried on guerrilla war.

1820 Spanish Revolution of 1820; conservatives in Mexico (former royalists) decided in favor of independence from Spain.

1821 Guerrilla leader V. Guerrero and conservative general A. de Iturbide formulated (Feb.) Plan of Iguala, calling for Mexican independence as a monarchy.

1821 Spain recognized Mexican independence by the Treaty of Córdoba (Aug. 24).

1822–24 De Iturbide seized power and declared himself emperor (1822); overthrown (1823) by Antonio López de Santa Anna; republic declared and Guadalupe Victoria became its first president (1824–29).

1833–36 Santa Anna in office as president.

1836 Santa Anna humiliated by Texas revolution; lost the presidency.

1838 Pastry War: brief conflict with France.

1839–44 Santa Anna returned to power.

1845–48 Mexican War fought against US; defeated, Mexico lost California and the Southwest to US; Santa Anna ruled and commanded armies (1846–47).

1853–55 Santa Anna ruled as dictator; overthrown by a liberal revolution (begun 1854) led by Benito Juárez and others.

1854–76 La Reforma, period of liberal reforms.

1857 New liberal constitution adopted.

1858–61 War of Reform; Juárez served as provisional president; nationalized church property (1859) and began policy of reform in Mexico.

1861 Juárez elected president; policies of reform led to resentment by conservatives and European intervention; France moved to establish colonial empire in Mexico.

1863 French invaders defeated Mexican forces at the Battle of Puebla (May 17); Mexico City captured soon after.

1864–67 Austrian archduke Maximilian ruled as emperor of Mexico.

1865–67 French withdrew troops from Mexico (1865); Juárez forces launched successful campaign against Maximilian, who was captured and executed.

1867–72 Juárez in office as president; put down revolts; succeeded at his death by Sebastián Lerdo de Tejada.

1876 P. Díaz overthrew S. Lerdo de Tejada.

1876–1911 Díaz in power (except 1880–84); promoted economic development, but favored rich landowners at expense of poor; peonage increased and church again came back in favor.

1911 Mexican Revolution began (May) with overthrow of P. Díaz by F. Madero.

1913 F. Madero overthrown and murdered (Feb.) by Gen. V. Huerta.

1914 Vera Cruz incident; US Marines occupied the city (Apr.–Nov.).

1914 V. Huerta forced from office by uprisings led by V. Carranza, F. Villa, and E. Zapata.

1914–20 Carranza served as president; restored order but there was continued resistance by F. Villa and E. Zapata.

1915 Gen. A. Obregón defeated F. Villa at the Battle of Celaya.

1916 F. Villa's raid on Columbus, New Mexico, led to US military expedition into Mexico; Villa evaded capture.

1917 Constitution established; provided for separation of church and state; communal lands restored to Indians; labor and other reforms.

1920–24 Gen. Á. Obregón overthrew Carranza (1920) and served as president.

1924–28 Plutarco Elias Calles served as president.

1928 Obregón reelected president; assassinated before he could take office.

1929 Calles founded National Revolutionary party, Mexico's most powerful political party.

1934–40 L. Cardenas served as president; instituted many reforms; improved lot of Indians, distributed lands under ejido system, nationalized railroads, and expropriated foreign oil holdings.

1940–46 Manuel Avila Camacho served as president; followed more conservative domestic policy; brought Mexico into WW II against the Axis (1942).

1945 Became a member of the UN.

1946 National Revolutionary party renamed the Institutional Revolutionary party.

1946–52 M. Alemán served as president; worked at modernization of agriculture and improvement of living conditions.

1948 Became a member of OAS.

1952–58 Adolfo Ruiz Cortines in office as president.

1958–64 Adolpho López Mateos in office as president.

1964–70 Gustavo Díaz Ordaz in office as president; reforms enacted to aid poor, including seizure of some large estates.

1970–76 Luis Escheverría Alvarez in office as president; promoted ties with underdeveloped Third World countries.

1976–82 José López Portillo in office (Dec. 1) as president; increased Mexican oil output and thereby eased economic problems; world oil glut in 1981 brought new economic crisis.

1981 Portillo met with US President R. Reagan to discuss growing problem of illegal Mexican aliens in US; new US immigration program to be established.

1982 Portillo devalued the peso as economic problems worsened.

1982 Mexican-owned banks nationalized (Sept.) as economic crisis worsened.

Mexico City Capital (pop. 8,988,200) and largest city of Mexico. Originally the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlán, it was captured (1521) by H. Cortés during the Spanish conquest of Mexico, and became the capital of New Spain (1521–1821). It was captured (1821) by rebels during the war for independence and later by Gen. W. Scott (1847) during the Mexican War.

Meyer, Adolf 1866–1950. Swiss-born American psychiatrist. He originated the term "mental hygiene" and held that the cure of mental illness lay in dealing with the whole personality.

MGB See GPU

Miani, Battle of British victory (Feb. 17, 1843) over the forces of the mirs of Sind. The British victory led to annexation of most of Sind into British India.

Micah ⟨Micheas⟩ Old Testament prophet, author of the book of Micah, the sixth of twelve books of the minor prophets.

Michael Archangel of the Christian, Jewish, and Muslim religions. He is represented as leading the angels in the battle against evil spirits.

Michael 1596–1645. Russian czar (1613–45), founder of the Romanov dynasty. His election ended the Time of Troubles. During his reign Russia made peace with Sweden and Poland.

Michael 1921–. Romanian king (1927–30, 1940–47), son of Carol II. He overthrew the dictatorship of I. Antonescu (1944) and supported the Allies in WW II. He was forced into exile by the Communist takeover (1947).

Michael I ⟨Michael I Rhangabe⟩ *d. c*845. Byzantine emperor (811–813). He supported the orthodox faith against the iconoclasts.

Michael I Rhangabe See Michael I

Michael II d. 829. Byzantine emperor (820–829). He took the throne after his supporters assassinated his predecessor, Leo V. He was tolerant of both sides in the religious dispute between iconoclasts and orthodoxy.

Michael III 839–867. Byzantine emperor (842–867), last of the Amorian-Phrygian line. The controversy over iconoclasm was ended during his reign (843). He warred successfully against the Arabs and Slavs.

Michael VIII ⟨Michael Palaeologus⟩ 1224–82. Byzantine emperor (1259–82). He recovered Constantinople (1261) from the Latins and formed a union with Pope Gregory X against Charles of Anjou. Its failure led to the massacre called the Sicilian Vespers (1282).

Michael the Brave d. 1601. Romanian prince of Walachia (1593–1601). He captured and declared himself prince of Transylvania (1599) and Moldavia (1600), thereby uniting Romania under his rule. His realm was divided after his death, but he is considered a Romanian national hero.

Micheas See Micah

Michelangelo (Buonarroti) 1475–1564. Italian artist, one of the towering figures of the Italian Renaissance. A gifted poet, painter, and sculptor, he is celebrated for such masterpieces as his statues of David and Moses, and the Pietà (1497). His painting of the Sistine Chapel took four years to complete (1508–12).

Michelet, Jules 1798–1874. French historian. He wrote the Histoire de France, an emotional and nationalistic work.

Michelin, André and Édouard 1853–1931; 1856–1940. French industrialists. Brothers, they invented and produced removable pneumatic tires and established the Michelin tire company.

Michelson, Albert Abraham 1852–1931. American physicist. He measured the speed of light, using an interferometer of his own design. The results of the Michelson-Morley experiment, conducted with Edward Williams Morley (1838–1923), contributed to A. Einstein's theory of relativity. He was awarded the Nobel Prize (1907).

Michener, James Albert 1907–. American author. He was awarded a Pulitzer Prize (1948) for his Tales of the South Pacific. Among his novels are Hawaii and Centennial.

Michigan State in the north-central US (pop. 9,258,300), the 26th state. Michigan was first explored and settled by the French (17th cent.). It was ceded to Britain after the French and Indian War (1754–63), and was scene of the Indian revolt known as Pontiac's Rebellion (1763–66). It was ceded to the US (1783) and became part of the Northwest Territory (1787). After settlement of a boundary dispute with Ohio, Michigan became a state in 1837.

Mickiewicz, Adam 1798–1855. Polish poet. A romantic and patriot, he is known best for the epic Pan Tadeusz.

Micon *fl. c*460 BC. Greek painter and sculptor. He collaborated with Polygnotus on The Greeks and the Amazons and the mural on the Stoa Poikile at Athens.

Midas Mythical Greek king of Phrygia. Dionysus granted him the ability to turn whatever he touched to gold.

Middle Ages Period in European history (*c*5th–15th cents.) between the fall of the Roman Empire and the discovery of the New World by Columbus (1492). It was the transition period from the ancient cultures to those of the modern world, and its beginning phase is sometimes referred to as the Dark Ages (q.v.). The Middle Ages were marked by the rise of the church, by the spread and collapse of feudalism, and by the formative stages of many of the modern European states.

Middle East Term denoting the countries of southwestern Asia and northeastern Africa, including parts of Turkey, Syria, Israel, Jordan, Iraq, Iran, Lebanon, all of the Arabian peninsula, Egypt, and Libya.

Middle English Name given the language of medieval England and also a period in English literature (*c*1100–*c*1500). Middle English language replaced Old English and can be divided into three developmental periods: Early Middle English (*c*1100–*c*1250); Central Middle English (*c*1250–*c*1400); and Late Middle English (*c*1400–*c*1500). Middle English literature includes works by W. Langland, Sir T. Malory, G. Chaucer, and J. Gower.

Middle Kingdom Period in ancient Egyptian history, lasting from the latter half of the 11th dynasty to the 12th dynasty (*c*2000 BC–*c*1786 BC). It followed the First Intermediate Period, began with the rule of Amenemhet I and ended with the rule of Amenemhet IV. Egypt enjoyed commercial prosperity during this period, which also saw rule of the pharaohs as feudal lords, the transfer of the capital from Thebes to Ithtowe, the conquest of lower Nubia, and a golden age of Egyptian literature and arts. The Middle Kingdom was followed by the Second Intermediate Period and the coming of the Hyksos.

Middleton, Thomas 1570?–1627. English dramatist. He wrote tragedies and satirical comedies on the mores of his time, usually in collaboration. Among his works are Women Beware Women and The Changeling.

Middle West ⟨Midwest⟩ American geographical designation, the collective name for the north central states of the US.

Midgard In Old Norse mythology, the middle earth, the home of the human race. It was formed by the body of the giant, Ymir, the first living creature.

Midhat Pasha 1822–84. Turkish statesman. As grand vizier (1872, 1876–77), he was instrumental in obtaining the first constitution (1876) for the Ottoman Empire.

Midianites Biblical nomadic tribe of northern Arabia, related to the Israelites through Abraham. Moses married the daughter of the Midian priest Jethro.

Midrash An interpretation of Hebrew Scriptures, using rabbinical commentaries.

Midway, Battle of US naval victory over the Japanese (June 3–6, 1942), during WW II. The battle was fought by carrier-based planes on both sides and marked the turning point for the US in the Pacific War. A Japanese task force, assembled to take US-held Midway Island, was intercepted (June 3) off Midway by aircraft of a US carrier force. The Japanese counterattacked with their aircraft, and the battle raged until June 6. Japanese losses included three carriers, 275 planes, one heavy cruiser, and three destroyers. US losses included one carrier, 150 planes, and a destroyer.

Mieris, Frans van 1635–81. Dutch painter, known for his small genre and portrait paintings.

Mies van Der Rohe, Ludwig 1886–1969. German-American architect. He was director of the Bauhaus in the 1930s. As professor of architecture (1938–58) at the Illinois Institute of Technology, he pioneered construction of functional glass-and-steel buildings.

Mifflin, Thomas 1744–1800. American Revolutionary leader. He was quartermaster general in the Revolutionary army and was involved in the Conway Cabal. He was first governor of Pennsylvania (1790–99).

Miguel 1802–66. Pretender to the Portuguese throne, son of John VI. An absolutist, he contested the succession of his brother Pedro, and later of Pedro's daughter Maria. He renounced his claim in 1834 after having ruled from 1828. (See also Portugal [1828–33].)

Mikhailovich, Draja 1893?–1946. Serbian soldier. He led a guerrilla force against German occupation during WW II, then fought against the Communists. He was executed by Tito's forces.

Mikoyan, Anastas Ivanovich 1895–1978. Russian Communist statesman. A member of the Central Committee (1923–1978), he held cabinet positions under J. Stalin and N. Khrushchev and was chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (1964–65).

Milan 1854–1901. Prince (1868–82) and king (1882–89) of Serbia. By allying with Russia in the Russo-Turkish Wars, he gained Serbia's independence (1878) from the Ottoman Empire.

Milan Italy's financial center and second largest city (pop. 1,706,300), capital of Lombardy and of Milano province. A Gallic city, it was conquered by Rome (222 BC) and later by the Huns and Goths. Under the Visconti as dukes of Milan (1349–1447), the city reached its peak of importance. Subsequently held by the Spanish, French, and Austrians, it was incorporated into Italy in 1860.

Milan, Edict of See Edict of Milan

Milan Decree Decree issued (Dec. 17, 1807) by Napoleon, as part of the Continental System. It stated that ships trading with Great Britain lost their neutrality.

Miletus Ancient Greek city in Caria now in Turkey. Once a prosperous Ionian seaport, it led in the Ionian revolt against Persia (*c*499 BC). The Persians sacked the city (494 BC).

Milhaud, Darius 1892–1974. French composer, a pioneer in the use of polytonality. His works include the opera Christophe Colomb and the ballet La Création du Monde.

military-industrial complex Collective term for the US defense establishment, including arms development, manufacturing and procurement. At the end of his term of office, President D. Eisenhower warned against its growing power and it continues to wield great influence, especially in promoting costly new weapons systems. During the Vietnam War the military-industrial complex was the target of numerous protests. The end of the war and the cutback in defense contracts during the late 1970s curtailed its power for a time.

Militia Ordinance Bill passed (1642) by the English Parliament that caused the break between Parliament and King Charles I, just prior to the start of the English Civil War (1642). Following Charles' attempt (Jan., 1642) to seize five members of the House of Commons, Parliament passed the Militia Ordinance, giving it control over the militia. Charles rejected (Mar.) the measure, and his supporters in Parliament joined him at York. The Rump Parliament at London then delivered (June 2) its Nineteen Propositions, which included the ordinance, to the king.

Mill, James 1773–1836. British philosopher, historian, and economist. He adopted and contributed to the principles of his friend J. Bentham, the founder of utilitarianism. He wrote a History of British India.

Mill, John Stuart 1806–73. British philosopher and political economist, son of J. Mill. He further developed the utilitarian doctrines established by J. Bentham and the elder Mill, and formulated principles of inductive reasoning. His works include A System of Logic and On Liberty.

Millais, Sir John Everett 1829–96. English painter. He was a founder (1848) of the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood. His works include the controversial Christ in the House of His Parents.

Millay, Edna St. Vincent 1892–1950. American poet, one of the leading poets of the 20th cent. She was awarded the Pulitzer Prize (1923) for The Ballad of the Harp Weaver.

millennialism Christian belief in the millennium, a period of 1,000 years before the end of the world during which Christ and the saints will rule on earth.

millennium Period of one thousand years. In Christianity, the millennium refers to the time when Jesus will reappear and rule on earth.

Miller, Arthur 1915–. American playwright, twice winner of the Pulitzer Prize (1950, 1956). His plays include Death of a Salesman, The Crucible, and A View from the Bridge.

Miller, Henry 1891–1980. American author. His books Tropic of Cancer and Tropic of Capricorn, banned in the US until the 1960s because of their sexual content, influenced the development of modern literature and helped to break traditional literary barriers.

Miller, William 1782–1849. American religious leader. As founder of the Second Adventists, or Millerites, he predicted the Second Coming of Christ in 1843. His movement evolved into the Adventist church (q.v.).

Millerand, Alexandre 1859–1943. French statesman. He was minister of war (1912–13, 1914–15) and president of France (1920–24). He was forced from office by a coalition of the political left.

Milligan,* ex parte US Supreme Court decision (1866) that military tribunals could judge civilians only in the absence of civil courts. The decision limited presidential, congressional, and military powers over civilians in wartime.

Millikan, Robert Andrews 1868–1953. American physicist, noted for his work on the photoelectric effect and for measuring the charge on the electron. He was awarded the Nobel Prize (1923) and discovered cosmic rays (1925).

Mill Springs, Battle of Union victory (Jan. 19, 1862) over the Confederates in the American Civil War, at Mill Springs, Kentucky. The battle was the first major Union victory in the West.

Milne, Alan Alexander 1882–1956. English author, famous for his children's books, Winnie-the-Pooh and The House at Pooh Corner.

Milner, Alfred Milner, 1st Viscount 1854–1925. British statesman. He was a high administrator in South Africa (1897–1905), and his inflexible stand furthered tensions leading to the South African (Boer) War (1899–1902).

Milo 95–47 BC. Roman politician. His rivalry with Clodius led to Clodius' murder and Milo's exile to Massilia. Milo's advocate, Cicero, too afraid to speak at his trial, later published his oration Pro Milone.

Milon See Milo of Croton

Milo of Croton ⟨Milon⟩ fl. late 6th cent. BC. Greek athlete, renowned for his wrestling skill and feats of strength at the Olympic and Pythian games.

Milos See Milosh

Milosh ⟨Milos⟩ 1780–1860. Serbian prince

(1817–39, 1858–60) and founder of modern Serbia. He led the revolt against the Turks and was named hereditary prince (1827). He founded the Obrenović dynasty.

Miltiades d. 489 BC. Greek general. As commander of the Athenian forces, he defeated the Persians at Marathon (490 BC).

Milton, John 1608–74. English poet. Milton began his career as a poet while still at Cambridge University. Though acclaimed for his pastoral poem Lycidas, he spent much of his time writing essays supporting the movement to reform the Church of England. His support of the Commonwealth caused him political trouble after the Restoration. Though blind from 1652, Milton dictated the works for which he is known best, Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained.

Milvian Bridge Roman bridge, constructed (109 BC) over the Tiber as part of the Flaminian Way. Here Constantine defeated Maxentius (AD 312) and thus became sole ruler in the Western Roman Empire. Here, too, he saw the vision of a cross in the sky that led him to adopt Christianity. Constantine soon after brought about toleration of Christianity in the empire.

Minamoto Yoritomo 1147–99. Japanese shogun (1192–99), founder of the Kamakura shogunate. He participated in the rebellion against the Taira clan and later set up the feudal system, the shogunate, by which Japan was ruled until the 19th cent.

Minden, Battle of Battle (Aug. 1, 1759) between the French and allied Prussian and British troops during the Seven Years' War (1756–63). Some 45,000 Prussian and British soldiers routed 60,000 French soldiers in this battle at Minden (now located in West Germany).

Mindon Min 1814–78. Burmese king (1853–78) and founder of Mandalay. During his reign he was forced to grant large concessions to the British.

Mindszenty, Jozseph 1892–1975. Hungarian Roman Catholic clergyman, primate of Hungary (1946–74). Arrested (1948) for treason, he was freed during the 1956 revolution, then took asylum in the US embassy until 1971, when he left Hungary.

Minerva Ancient Roman goddess of handicrafts and the arts. She was identified with the Greek goddess Athena.

Ming Dynasty of native Chinese emperors (1368–1644) who greatly expanded the Chinese empire. Under its rulers the empire came to include all or parts of Vietnam, Burma, Turkistan, Korea, and Mongolia. Hung-Wu, founder of the dynasty, came to power (1368) and ousted (by 1371) the Mongols of the Yüan dynasty. During the long reign of the Ming emperors the Chinese civil service system was reinstituted; Confucianism was state-supported; exploratory voyages (1405–33) as far west as Arabia were made; European settlements were established (16th cent.) at Canton and Macao; Christian missionaries arrived; and the arts, especially ceramics and architecture, flourished. A succession of weak rulers, heavy taxes, and dissent among factions in government led to peasant revolts and the fall of the dynasty (1644) to the Ch'ing (Manchu) dynasty.

Ministry of All Talents See Grenville, William Wyndham

Minnesota North-central US state (pop. 4,077,200), the 32d state. First explored by the French (17th cent.), it became an important fur-trading region. The part of Minnesota east of the Mississippi was part of the Northwest Territory, and that west of the Mississippi was ceded to the US by the Louisiana Purchase (1803). Minnesota was admitted to the Union (1858) and fought for the Union in the Civil War. It was a center for the growth of the Granger movement, and also for the Populist party movement of the 1890s.

Minoan civilization Bronze Age culture that developed on Crete (*c*3000 BC–1000 BC). One of the ancient Greek Aegean civilizations, it was for a time a major maritime power in the Mediterranean. By 1500 BC the Minoans had a well-developed written language and had become skilled in working ceramics and bronze. The Minoan capital at Cnossus with its luxurious palace, was twice destroyed (and rebuilt) in the second millennium BC, possibly by earthquakes and/or invasions by the Myceneans. The palace was destroyed a last time (*c*1400) and, soon after, the Minoan civilization disappeared. This civilization is generally divided into three periods: Early Minoan (*c*3000 BC–*c*2200 BC); Middle Minoan (*c*2200 BC–*c*1500 BC); and Late Minoan (*c*1500 BC–*c*1000 BC). The Mycenaean civilization predominated after the fall of the Minoans.

Minos In Greek mythology, the son of Zeus and Europa, and the king of Crete. His wife, Pasiphaë, was the mother of the Minotaur.

Minotaur In Greek mythology, a monster with a bull's head and a man's body. It was kept in a labyrinth on Crete and King Minos sacrificed Athenian youths to it. Theseus, one of its intended victims, killed the creature.

Minseito Japanese political party formed in 1927. A centrist party, it had ties with Japanese business interests and sought better relations with the West. The Minseito, formed from the earlier Kenseito party, was a major party in the years before WW II. The party was dissolved in 1940 after the militarists came to power. A new Democratic party formed after WW II absorbed much of the Minseito party's membership.

Minsk Russian city (pop. 1,262,000), capital of the Belorussian Soviet Republic and an industrial center (since late 19th cent.). Its rise began in the 11th cent. and, after being joined to Lithuania (1326), it flourished as a commercial center (15th cent.). Control of Minsk passed to Poland (1569) and then to Russia (1793). It was occupied by the Germans in both WW I and WW II and was largely destroyed in the latter war. It was recaptured by the Russians in 1944.

minstrel In medieval Europe, a musician, singer, juggler, or other kind of entertainer. While many traveled, others were employed as court entertainers.

Minuit, Peter *c*1580–1638. Dutch colonial governor of New Netherland who purchased Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 worth of trinkets in 1626. He founded New York City (then New Amsterdam) by building a fort at the south end of the island. Later, in Swedish service, he founded New Sweden (1638) on the Delaware.

mir Peasant community in Russia. The mir was self-governing until the 17th cent. and thereafter controlled peasant lands in its locality. The mirs were abolished (1917) after the Russian Revolution.

Mirabeau, Honoré Gabriel Riquetti, comte de 1749–91. French revolutionary politician. Imprisoned by his father during his reckless youth, he later became a popular and powerful orator in the early days of the revolution. In the National Assembly he unsuccessfully advocated establishment of a constitutional monarchy.

Mirabeau, Victor Riquetti, marquis de 1715–89. French political economist, father of H. Mirabeau. His physiocratic philosophy was set forth in The Friend of Man, or Treatise on the Population.

Miramón, Miguel 1832–67. Mexican general. Miramón opposed the leader of liberal forces, B. Juárez, and served as chief marshal to Emperor Maximilian, with whom he was captured and executed.

Miranda, Francisco de 1750–1816. Venezuelan revolutionary. He fought the Spanish, briefly gained Venezuelan independence (1810), and ruled with dictatorial powers. He was forced to surrender to the counterattacking Spanish (1812) and died in prison.

Miriam In the Bible, sister of Moses and Aaron. She led the song of Miriam.

Miró, Joan 1893–1974. Spanish artist. A surrealist painter, he used pure colors and abstract shapes in his fantasies, such as Dog Barking at the Moon.

Mirza Ali Muhammad See Bab, The

Mise of Amiens Arbitrated agreement by which the Provisions of Oxford (q.v.) were annulled (Jan. 23, 1264). English king Henry III, after disputes with his barons, took the question of the provisions to French king Louis IX for mediation. Louis ruled in favor of Henry.

Mishima Yukio ⟨Kimitake Hiraoka⟩ 1925–70. Japanese writer best known for his novels concerning the conflict between Eastern and Western cultural influences in Japanese life. The decline of Japanese values and traditions is the major theme of his last work, The Sea of Fertility.

Mishna Collection of Jewish oral laws, divided into six orders: seeds (Zeraim), festivals (Moed), women (Nashim), damages (Nezikim), sacrifices (Kodashim), purifications (Tohorot). With commentaries included in the Gemara, it constitutes the Talmud (q.v.).

Mississippi US state in the Southeast, (pop. 2,520,600), the 20th state. The first settlement was established at Biloxi by the French in 1699. The area was held by the British and the Spanish after 1763 and was ceded to the US in 1783. The Mississippi Territory was created in 1798 and included the present states Mississippi and Alabama. The western section became the state of Mississippi in 1817, and its constitution was adopted in 1890. It was the second state to secede in the American Civil War (1861) and was readmitted in 1870. Mississippi was a focal point of the drive to win civil rights for blacks during the 1960s.

Mississippi Bubble See Mississippi Scheme

Mississippi Scheme ⟨Mississippi Bubble⟩ Plan to exploit the lower Mississippi valley and other French colonial territories. French comptroller general J. Law bought up (1717) colonization rights to the Mississippi Territory and in subsequent financial manipulations won control over other French possessions. His Mississippi Company, which attempted to finance the French national debt in 1720, promoted a speculative boom that ended in financial disaster (Oct., 1720).

Missouri State (pop. 4,346,300) in the central US, the 24th state. J. Marquette and Louis Jolliet first explored the area (1673, 1683), which was claimed by the French as part of the Louisiana Territory. In 1803, it became part of the US by the Louisiana Purchase (q.v.), and the Missouri Territory was created in 1812. The dispute over whether to admit territories as slave states resulted (1820) in the Missouri Compromise (q.v.), and Missouri was admitted as a slave state in 1821. The present constitution was adopted in 1945.

Missouri Compromise US legislation passed (1820–21) to maintain the balance between slaveholding and free states. This compromise between the proslavery South and the abolitionists in the North was largely engineered by Rep. H. Clay. It remained in force until replaced (1850) by the Compromise of 1850, which established the doctrine of popular sovereignty (q.v.). The issue was first raised (1819) when Missouri applied for admission to the union as a slave state. With states then equally balanced (11 each) between slave and free, the Senate rejected the measure (Feb., 1819). The final compromise measure (passed Mar., 1820), however, provided for the admission of Maine as a free state, Missouri as a slave state, and banned slavery in the Louisiana Purchase territory north of Arkansas. Separate legislation requiring the Missouri constitution to guarantee rights of Negro freedmen (Mar., 1821) held up admission of Missouri until Aug., 1821.

Mistral, Frédéric 1830–1914. French poet. He was a founder of the Félibrige, an association for the promotion of the Provençal language, and wrote a Provençal-French dictionary.

Mitchell, Margaret 1900–49. American novelist, who wrote one book, Gone With the Wind, an immediate and lasting success. She won the Pulitzer Prize (1937).

Mitchell, William Lendrum 1879–1936. American army general and pilot. He advocated creation of an independent air force and increased use of air power in wartime. He was court-martialed (1925) for his criticism of military leadership.

Mithra In Persian mythology, the god of light and wisdom. Mithraism (q.v.) spread into the Roman Empire and rivaled Christianity until the 3rd cent.

Mithradates VI ⟨Mithridates VI⟩ *c*131 BC–63 BC. King of Pontus (120–63 BC). He waged the three Mithradatic Wars (q.v.) against the Romans and was finally defeated by Pompey.

Mithradatic Wars 1. First (88–84 BC). War between Mithradates VI, king of Pontus, and Rome. Taking advantage of unrest in the Roman province of Asia and the upheavals brought about by the Social War (91–88 BC), Mithradates overran the province. While the struggles for power continued at Rome, Roman armies, under L. Sulla, met Mithradates' armies (87) in Greece. By the battles of Chaeronea (86) and Orchomenos (85), Sulla forced the invaders out of Greece and later (84) forced Mithradates to give up all his conquests. 2. Second (83–81 BC). War between Mithradates VI and Rome. The Romans, under Murena, attacked Cappadocia and Pontus. It ended with the restoration of territories Mithradates lost during the war. 3. Third (74–63). War between Mithradates VI, his son, and Rome. Mithradates' son, Armenian king Tigranes I, took over Cappadocia and Syria. Roman consul L. Lucullus won early victories against Mithradates and Tigranes (73) but was forced to break off fighting (68) when his troops mutinied. Under command of Pompey (66–63), the Romans completed the conquest and annexed Pontus to the Asian province.

Mithraism Major religion of the ancient world, widespread within the Roman empire shortly before adoption of Christianity (3d cent. AD). Roman Mithraism, which in some ways resembled Christianity, was concerned with the battle between good and evil, and held out the promise of immortality to its followers. Worship of the god Mithras flourished in Persia (5th cent. BC) and subsequently spread throughout the Mediterranean world. In Greece it became one of the Mystery religions and in Rome it flourished by the 2d cent. AD. With the official adoption of Christianity, Mithraism was suppressed in the Roman empire and soon disappeared.

Mithridates VI See Mithradates VI

Mitre, Bartolomé 1821–1906. Argentine statesman and general. Mitre helped to overthrow J. de Rosas (1861) and became president (1862–68). He succeeded in uniting the country and brought about a period of prosperity.

Mitterand, François 1916–. French president (1981–). A Socialist, Mitterand won a clear victory over former President V. d'Estaing and, in subsequent elections for the National Assembly, his party's candidates won by wide margins. In office, Mitterrand increased taxes to business and the wealthy and raised the minimum wage by 10 percent.

Mnemosyne In Greek mythology, the goddess of memory, daughter of Titans Uranus (heaven) and Ge (earth). She was mother of the nine Muses by Zeus.

Moabites Ancient Semitic people from the Transjordan plateau east of the Dead Sea. Their kingdom, Moab, is mentioned in the Old Testament. It ceased to exist after conquest by the Assyrians (8th cent. BC).

Moabite stone Ancient inscriptions. This ancient slab dates from 850 BC. Written by the Moabite Mesha in Hebrew, it describes his victory against Israel.

Mobile Bay, Battle of Union victory (Aug. 5, 1864) in a naval battle during the American Civil War (1861–65). Seeking to neutralize the Confederate port at Mobile Bay, Union land forces attacked (Aug. 3) and captured forts at the entrance to the bay. The Union fleet, commanded by Admiral D. Farragut, then broke through a minefield, entered the bay (Aug. 5), and forced the Confederate fleet to surrender. It was during this battle that Farragut uttered his famous order to continue the attack, "Damn the torpedoes."

Mobutu Sese Seko ⟨Mobutu, Joseph Désiré⟩ 1930–. President (1967–) of the Republic of Zaire (formerly the Congo).

Moctezuma See Montezuma

Model Parliament Two representative bodies that figured in the development of the British Parliament. 1. Assembly convened (1265) during the Barons' War (1263–67) by S. de Montfort. Present were two citizens (burgesses) from each city and two knights from each shire in England. 2. Assembly convened (1295) by King Edward I. Representatives of the higher clergy, knights, burgesses, and lower clergy attended.

Modena, Mary of See Mary of Modena

modern art Revolution in Western art that began in the late 19th cent. with impressionism (q.v.) and continues into the present with such schools as abstract expressionism (q.v.) and Op art (q.v.). The art is generally characterized by the unconventional use of color, imagery, spontaneity, and the artist's personal vision of the subject matter.

Modernism Modern religious movement (19th–20th cents.) that interpreted traditional Christian doctrines in a way believed more compatible with the teachings of modern philosophy and the findings of modern science. A school of thought of this name among Roman Catholics was condemned as heretical by Pope Pius X (1907).

Modernismo Movement among Spanish poets. It began in Latin America (late 19th cent.) with publication of Azul (1888), a collection by R. Dario. The movement that grew out of this work was largely a rebellion against the Romantic and naturalistic traditions in Spanish poetry and involved exotic imagery and unconventional meter and rhythm.

Modestinus, Herennius *fl. c*250 BC. Roman jurist. Modestinus was a student of Ulpian and was one of Rome's most distinguished and influential judges.

Modigliani, Amedeo 1884–1920. Italian modernist painter and sculptor. He is known for his characteristic elongation of form and use of muted color in his paintings.

Modjopahit Empire See Majapahit Empire

Moesia Ancient province of the Roman Empire (from AD 15), situated in what is today southern Serbia and northern Bulgaria. It was later divided into Upper and Lower Moesia.

Mogul ⟨Mughal⟩ Muslim dynasty that ruled in India from the 16th to 19th cents. The Mogul Empire was at its height from the 16th to the early 18th cents. and was noted for its efficient administrative organization and for its great contributions in the fields of art, architecture, and literature. The Mogul Empire was founded by Baber, who established Mogul power in India by victory in the battle of Panipat (1526). Baber (ruled 1526–30) was succeeded by his son Humayun (ruled 1530–56). Other notable Mogul rulers were Akbar (ruled 1556–1605), who greatly expanded Mogul power; Jahangir (ruled 1605–27), his son; Shah Jahan (ruled 1628–58), who expanded Mogul power into the Deccan by conquering Bijapur and Golconda, and who built the Taj Mahal at Agra; and Aurangzeb (ruled 1658–1707), under whose rule the Mogul Empire reached its height and began its decline. Aurangzeb was unable to halt the rising strength of the Marathas, and after his death (1707) the empire began to divide into a group of provinces. In the 18th cent. British influence in the region also began to increase, and the empire was further weakened. Its last ruler, Bahadur Shah II (ruled 1837–57) was emperor in title only. After the failure of the Indian Mutiny (1857), he was deposed by the British and the empire ceased to exist.

Mohács, Battle of Battle (Aug. 29, 1526) in which Sulayman I of Turkey defeated and killed Louis II of Hungary. This led to more than 150 years of Turkish domination in Hungary.

Mohammed See Muhammad

Mohegan Indians North American Indian tribe important in Colonial New England. Following the Pequot War (q.v.), the Mohegans became a powerful tribe in southern New England. The tribe gradually sold off its lands to white settlers and thereafter lived on a reservation in Connecticut.

Mohican See Mahican Indians

Moholy-Nagy, László 1895–1946. Hungarian painter, designer, photographer, and teacher. He taught at the Bauhaus school (1923–29) in Germany and founded a school of design in Chicago (1939).

Moki See Hopi Indians

Molay, Jacques de 1243?–1314. Last grand master of the Knights Templars (q.v.). Philip IV of France had Molay and his followers arrested (1307) for heresy in a move to break the order's power. Molay confessed under torture, then recanted, and was burned at the stake.

Moldavia Historic former principality now located in modern Romania. It won independence from the Hungarian monarchy (*c*1349) and resisted the Ottoman Turks until the 16th cent. Thereafter it remained under their control until after the Russo-Turkish War (1828–29). By the Treaty of Adrianople, Moldavia came under the protection of Russia, though it continued to recognize Turkish suzerainty. Following the Crimean War (1853–56), Moldavia became largely independent and, in 1861, it formally united with neighboring Wallachia to form the modern state of Romania (q.v.).

Molech ⟨Moloch⟩ Ancient Canaanite deity, worshiped during the reigns of kings Ahaz and Manasseh. Children were sacrificed to him.

Molière ⟨pseud. of Jean Baptiste Poquelin⟩ 1622–73. Great French playwright. Originally an actor, Molière headed his own touring company. However, he is remembered for his brilliant comedies that satirized the characters and society of his times. Among his many works are Tartuffe, The School for Husbands, The School for Wives, The Doctor in Spite of Himself, and The Misanthrope.

Molina, Luis 1535–1600. Spanish Jesuit who wrote Concordia liberi arbitrii cum gratiae donis. In it he articulated his doctrine of Molinism, which sought to reconcile free will and divine grace.

Molinism See Molina, Luis

Molinos, Miguel de 1640–97. Spanish priest who founded quietism (q.v.), spiritual passiveness. In 1685, he was condemned by the Inquisition and died in prison.

Molly Maguires Irish-American terrorist group active (1860s–1870s) in the Pennsylvania coalmining regions. Reacting against poor working and living conditions there, this secret group intimidated and murdered mine company officials and engaged in acts of sabotage. Pinkerton detectives suppressed the group in 1877.

Molnár, Ferenc 1878–1952. Hungarian novelist and playwright. He wrote the novel The Paul Street Boys and the plays Liliom and The Swan.

Moloch See Molech

Molotov, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich ⟨orig. Skriabin, ~⟩ 1890–. Russian statesman. As foreign minister, he was chief Russian spokesman for international affairs during and after WW II. A hard-line Stalinist, he tried unsuccessfully to depose N. Khrushchev (1957) and was expelled from the Communist party (1964).

Moltke, Helmuth von 1800–91. Prussian field marshal. As chief of the general staff (1858–88), he was responsible for Prussian successes in the war against Denmark (1864), the Austro-Prussian War (1866), and the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71).

Moltke, Helmuth von 1848–1916. German army chief of general staff (1906–14). He changed the Schlieffen Plan (q.v.) at the outbreak of WW I, thereby weakening the offensive against France and prolonging the fighting.

Mommsen, Theodor 1817–1903. German historian known for his History of Rome. He received the Nobel Prize for literature in 1902.

Momos See Momus

Momus ⟨Momos⟩ Greek mythical figure, the personification of censure, ridicule, insult, and humiliation.

Monaco Independent principality located near the border between France and Italy on the Mediterranean coast. Believed to have been settled by the Phoenicians, it became an independent state in the 13th cent. It was annexed by France (1793–1814), came under the protection of Sardinia (1815–60), and was ceded back to France (1860), which restored its sovereignty under French protection. A constitution was promulgated in 1911 and the current one was adopted in 1962. The principality has been ruled by Prince Rainier III (1923–) since 1949.

monarchianism Christian heresy (2d–3d cents. AD). It held that God the Father and Jesus are one, as opposed to two beings in one person. Two forms of Monarchianism developed, dynamic and modalistic, both of which were opposed by the church.

monasticism Religious movement in which individuals seek spiritual perfection by living apart from the general society. Monks generally live communally in their monasteries (though in some monastic movements they live as hermits). Their lives are strictly regulated by the monastic rule (often ascetic) and worship is the central focus of their existence. Monasticism has been a part of various religions, including Christianity (Western and Eastern), Hinduism, Buddhism, Islam, and Jainism. In the Western Christian church, monasticism generally arose (6th cent.) and acquired its characteristic form from the teachings of St. Benedict. Thereafter, monasticism spread throughout Europe and spawned many important orders (see Benedictines, Carthusians, and Cistercians). Further, these orders were of great importance as centers of learning in an otherwise unstable medieval European society and, by their work as copyists, preserved many of the ancient classics.

Monck, George, 1st duke of Albemarle ⟨Monk, ~⟩ 1608–70. English general. A Royalist at the outbreak of the English Civil War, he was captured by the Parliamentarians (1644). After the fall of Charles I, he served under O. Cromwell in fighting in Ireland and Scotland. He later played a central role in making arrangements for the restoration of the monarchy under Charles II.

Mondale, Walter Frederick 1928–. US vice-president (1977–81) under President J. Carter. He was early identified with liberal Democratic politics in Minnesota and became US senator (1964–77) from the state.

Mondrian, Piet 1872–1944. Dutch artist. He was a founder of the De Stijl movement in abstract art and developed an abstract style called neoplasticism.

Monet, Claude 1840–1926. French artist, a founder of impressionism (q.v.). Noted especially for his many landscapes, Monet developed a characteristic style using color to emphasize the effects of light. Among his many important works are Water Lilies, Haystacks, and Rouen Cathedral.

Mongkut See Chakkri dynasty

Mongol Empire Great Asian empire founded (13th cent.) by the Mongol conqueror Genghis Khan (q.v.). After uniting the Mongol tribes under him (1206), Genghis Khan invaded northern China and subdued Korea. He next led his fierce bands westward, conquered Khorezm, the region of modern Iran and Iraq, and part of Russia, and raided northern India. On his death in 1227, Genghis' son Ogadai became the imperial ruler (great khan), and each of his other sons ruled a part of the empire (khanate). In the west, Mongols under Batu Khan conquered Russia and there established (1241) the Khanate of the Golden Horde (q.v.), or Kipchak Empire, that ruled Russia until the 15th cent. In Persia, the Mongol conqueror Hulagu Khan established the Il-Khan dynasty, which ruled there (1258–1353). Kublai Khan became great khan in 1260 and moved the Mongol capital to China, where he built a splendid city. He founded the Yüan dynasty, which ruled China until the rise of the Ming dynasty (1368). Under Tamerlane (reigned 1360–1405), the Mongols of the Timurid (q.v.) Empire, in central Asia, rose to importance for a time. Finally the Mongol conqueror Baber established the Mogul (q.v.) dynasty in India (1526–1707). From the 15th cent., however, the history of the empire was one of decline and power struggles between tribal factions. Finally Mongolia itself was conquered by the Manchus (17th–18th cents.).

Mongolia Historic region located in east-central Asia, to the north of China proper. It is divided today between the Mongolian People's Republic (Outer Mongolia) and Inner Mongolia, now part of China. From ancient times it was the home of nomadic peoples who regularly threatened the Chinese Empire from the north. The region rose to prominence in the 13th cent. as the seat of Genghis Khan's Mongol Empire (q.v.). The decline of the Mongol Empire brought Chinese control over both Inner (southern) and Outer (northern) Mongolia (by the 17th cent.). Outer Mongolia regained its independence (1921) as the Mongolian People's Republic (q.v.). The Japanese captured parts of Inner Mongolia in the 1930s, during the Second Sino-Japanese War, but these territories were restored to China following WW II.

Mongolian People's Republic ⟨formerly Outer Mongolia⟩ Republic located between north-central China and the USSR, in east-central Asia. This part of the historic region of Mongolia (q.v.) became an independent kingdom under the "Living Buddha" during the Chinese Revolution of 1911. The Chinese reoccupied the territory (1919) but were driven out by White Russians (1921) at the close of the Russian Civil War. Russian Communist troops in turn drove out the White Russians, and Mongolia was proclaimed an independent state under the Living Buddha. After the death of the Living Buddha, Mongolia was proclaimed a republic (1924) and came under the control of Communists. Imposition of the Communist system and persecution of Buddhist priests resulted in the exodus of priests, leading thousands of followers and much livestock, to China (Lama Rebellion, 1932). Mongolia entered into a formal alliance with the USSR in 1936 and remains a Soviet satellite state in modern times. It was admitted to the UN in 1961 and supported the Soviets in their ideological conflict with the Chinese (from the 1960s). A 20-year friendship treaty with the USSR was signed in 1966 and an agreement for Soviet economic aid was completed in 1970.

Mongols Nomadic Asian people. They rose to importance in the 13th cent. under Genghis Khan, who founded the vast Mongol Empire (q.v.). His descendants founded successor states, such as those of the Chinese Yüan dynasty, the Russian Golden Horde, the Timur Empire and the Mogul Empire. Present-day Mongolia is divided between Russia (Outer Mongolia) and China (Inner Mongolia).

Monitor* and *Merrimack Two ironclad warships during the American Civil War that fought the first battle (Mar. 9, 1862) between armored warships. The Union Monitor, commanded by Lt. John L. Worden (1818–97), and the Confederate Merrimack, then named the Virginia and commanded by Lt. Catesby Jones (1821–77), engaged in battle at Hampton Roads, Virginia. After an inconclusive battle, both ships withdrew and never fought again. The Monitor foundered and sank (Dec., 1862) and the Merrimack was destroyed (May, 1862) to prevent its capture.

Monmouth, Battle of ⟨Monmouth Courthouse, ~⟩ Indecisive battle (June 28, 1778) during the American Revolution (1775–83). British troops, then retreating from Philadelphia under Gen. H. Clinton's command, were being pursued by Gen. G. Washington's forces. Washington ordered an attack on the British rear at Monmouth, New Jersey. But the action was mishandled by Gen. C. Lee and only the arrival of Washington's main force prevented defeat. That night the British withdrew and eventually arrived safely in New York. Casualties numbered 300 to 400 on both sides.

Monmouth, James Scott, duke of 1649–85. English nobleman, illegitimate son of Charles II and rival of the duke of York (later James II) for the throne. The favorite of anti-Catholic factions in England, he became involved in the Rye House Plot (q.v.). After the accession of James II, Monmouth attempted a rebellion against him. Monmouth's small force was defeated at Sedgemoor (July 6, 1685) and he was beheaded.

Monmouth Courthouse, Battle of See Monmouth, Battle of

Monmouth's Revolt See Monmouth, James Scott, duke of

Monnet, Jean 1888–. French political economist and statesman. He drafted the Monnet Plan (1947) for the rebuilding of postwar French economy, the Schuman Plan that resulted in the European Coal and Steel Community, and headed the Action Committee for the United States of Europe (from 1956).

Monocacy, Battle of American Civil War battle (July 9, 1864) fought near Frederick, Maryland. Some 6,000 federal troops, under Gen. L. Wallace, were defeated by the 14,000-man army of Gen. J. Early. The action, however, delayed Early's advance on Washington and thus gave Gen. U. Grant time to strengthen the capital's defenses.

Monophysitism Controversial doctrine of the early Christian church contending that Jesus had but one nature (divine) and not two (human and divine). The concept had its beginnings in 4th-cent. Apollinarianism and developed as a reaction to the extreme dualism of Nestorianism. Monophysitism was denounced as a heresy by the Council of Chalcedon (AD 451), though the council's attempt to formulate a compromise doctrine failed. Proponents of Monophysitism, such as Eutyches, continued the dispute and a schism soon developed between the Western church and the Monophysite Eastern Church. The schism was officially ended (519) by Emperor Justin I, who upheld the Council of Chalcedon. Nevertheless Monophysites persisted and, though persecuted, eventually formed the Coptic, Jacobite, and Armenian churches (all Monophysite).

monotheism Religious doctrine. Monotheism holds that there is only one God, as opposed to polytheism, which recognizes many gods. For the history of the world's major monotheistic religions, see Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

Monothelitism Controversial doctrine of the early Christian church contending that Jesus had two natures (human and divine) but only one will (divine). The doctrine was a 7th-cent. attempt to provide an acceptable compromise to the dispute over Monophysitism. It was put forward (622) and promulgated (638) as official doctrine within the Byzantine Empire by Heraclius I. The compromise, however, created a furor. Opposed by popes in the Western church, Monothelitism was condemned (649) by a Lateran Council called by Pope Saint Martin I. Emperor Constans II seized and exiled the pope in retaliation and it was not until the accession of Constantine IV (668) that attempts were made to settle the controversy. Constantine called the Third Council of Constantinople (680), which subsequently denounced the doctrine as a heresy. Monothelitism, though briefly revived (711–13), thereafter died out.

Monroe, James 1758–1831. Fifth US president (1817–25), successor to J. Madison. Monroe distinguished himself during the American Revolution and he was wounded in the Battle of Trenton. After the war he was elected to the Virginia legislature (1782) and the Continental Congress (1783–86). A supporter of states' rights, he opposed the centralized government set up by the Constitution. As US senator (1790–94), he supported T. Jefferson against the Federalists. He served (1794–96) as US minister to France and as governor of Virginia (1799–1802). Appointed (1802) special envoy to France, he helped R. Livingston negotiate the Louisiana Purchase (1803). He served as secretary of state (1811–17) and of war (1814–15) under President J. Madison, and succeeded Madison as president (1817). He was reelected handily in 1820. His terms in office saw the Seminole War, US acquisition of Florida from Spain (1819), passage (1820) of the Missouri Compromise (q.v.), and issuance (1823) of what is now called the Monroe Doctrine (q.v.). His years as president were called the Era of Good Feeling (q.v.) and were marked by significant westward migrations. Monroe supported the colonization of Liberia, whose capital, Monrovia, is named for him.

Monroe, Marilyn ⟨Baker, Norma Jean⟩ 1926–62. American actress and famous sex symbol of American film. Major films include Bus Stop, Some Like It Hot, and The Misfits.

Monroe Doctrine Guiding principle of US foreign policy in North and South America (19th–20th cents.). Enunciated by President J. Monroe (Dec. 2, 1823), the new policy declared that the US would henceforth oppose European powers in any attempt to colonize or interfere with affairs of states in the Americas. It also restated the US policy of nonintervention in European affairs (and existing European colonies). The declaration was prompted by Russian expansionist policies in Alaska and the possible takeover of newly independent South American states. Restated by Pres. J. Polk (1845, 1848), the doctrine was largely ignored by European powers in the 19th cent. Pres. T. Roosevelt added the Roosevelt Corollary (1904) in response to the Venezuela Claims (q.v.) incident, thus including possible US intervention to maintain the peace in any South American country. Increasing resentment by South American nations toward US domination in the 20th cent. has led to greater US involvement in such multilateral organizations as the OAS. Exceptions to this trend include the Cuban Missile Crisis and US intervention in the Dominican Republic (1965).

Monrovia Capital city (pop. 171,700) of Liberia, founded by the American Colonization Society (q.v.) for freed slaves (1822) and named for J. Monroe. It is a major African seaport on the Atlantic.

Montagnards See Mountain, the

Montaigne, Michel Eyquem de 1533–92. Great French essayist. A courtier to French King Charles IX and once the mayor of Bordeaux, Montaigne was noted for his three books of essays. In them he revealed a spirit of humanism, skepticism of knowledge, and mastery of style. He greatly influenced French and English literature.

Montalembert, Charles Forbes, count of 1810–70. French political leader and historian. A leader of liberal Catholics, he was editor of the newspaper L'Avenir and an opponent of Emperor Napoleon III.

Montana State (pop. 786,700) in the US Northwest, the 41st state. Montana was acquired (1803) by the US in the Louisiana Purchase (q.v.) and first explored by Lewis and Clark in their expedition of 1804–06. Fur traders set up trading posts in succeeding years, and the discovery of gold in 1852 resulted in several mining settlements. In 1864, the Montana Territory was organized, and after wars with the Sioux Indians (including the Battle of Little Bighorn) the territory saw an increase in ranching. The coming of the railroads brought new settlements and, in 1889, Montana became a state. A new constitution was adopted in 1973.

Montanism Christian movement (2d cent. AD), which was started in Phrygia by Montanus (fl. 2d cent.) and his followers, the illuminati. Extreme ascetics who said the end of the world was near, Montanists believed Montanus' teachings to be divine prophecies and held their sect to be superior to the orthodox church. The movement was largely suppressed in the 2d cent., though it persisted until the 9th cent. in some areas.

Montcalm, Louis Joseph de 1712–59. French general. He was commander of the French forces in Canada during the French and Indian War (q.v.). He successfully defended French territories against the British until his defeat and death at the Battle of the Plains of Abraham.

Monte Carlo Town and world-famous resort in the Mediterranean principality of Monaco. It is noted for its gambling casino, opened in 1861 and now operated by the government (since 1967).

Monte Cassino See Benedictines

Montecuccoli, Raimondo, count of See Montecucculli, Raimondo, count of Montecucculli, Raimondo, count of ⟨Montecuccoli, ~⟩ 1609–80. Italian-born general of the Holy Roman Empire. A brilliant tactician, he was successful in the Thirty Years' War and against the Turks (1664) and the French (1672–75).

Montefiore, Sir Moses Haim 1784–1885. British Jewish leader and philanthropist. He was sheriff of London (1837) and traveled throughout Europe and the Middle East trying to alleviate the oppression of Jews.

Montejo, Francisco de *c*1479–*c*1548. Spanish conquistador who took part in the conquest of Mexico under H. Cortés.

Montemagno, Bernardo dei Paganelli di See Eugene III

Montenegro Former independent kingdom located in what is now southern Yugoslavia. A mountainous region, it was first settled by Serbs (1389) after their homelands were conquered by the Turks. They warred against the Turks in the 18th and 19th cents. (allied with Russia) and after the Russo-Turkish War (1876–78) secured recognition of independence. Montenegro figured in the Balkan Wars (q.v.), supported Serbia in WW I, and joined the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes after WW I. It was a center of resistance under J. Tito during WW II and became part of Yugoslavia in 1946.

Montesquieu, Charles de Secondat, baron de la Brède et de 1689–1755. French political philosopher. His most important work was The Spirit of Laws, which theorized on the way external conditions determine the form government takes and advocated the balance of power between government and individuals.

Montessori, Maria 1870–1952. Italian educator. She was the first woman recipient of a medical degree in Italy and originated the Montessori system of children's education (based on self-motivation and spontaneity).

Monteverdi, Claudio 1567–1643. Italian composer. His first madrigals were published when he was 15, and he went on to compose works that are important in the early history of opera. Among them are Orfeo and L'Arianna.

Montevideo Uruguayan capital city (pop. 1,500,000). It was founded (1726) by the Spanish. Its early history was marked by rivalry between colonial powers for its control. Made capital of Uruguay in 1830, it again suffered during the civil wars of that century. Its port was opened in 1901.

Montez, Lola 1818–61. Irish adventuress. As mistress of Louis I of Bavaria, she antagonized the Jesuits with her liberalism and was forced to leave (1848). She died in the US.

Montezuma ⟨Moctezuma⟩ 1480?–1520. Aztec emperor (*c*1502–20). A despotic and unpopular ruler, he was taken hostage by the Spanish under H. Cortés. He was killed during the Aztec uprising against the Spanish (June, 1520).

Montfort, Simon de *c*1160–1218. Norman crusader. He led the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.) in southern France and was killed at the siege of Toulouse.

Montfort, Simon de, earl of Leicester 1208–65. English statesman and soldier. Formerly an adviser to Henry III and leader of his forces during revolts in Gascony, Montfort broke with the king and became leader of the barons during the Barons' War (q.v.). Following his victory at Lewes (1264), he became virtual ruler of England and summoned the Model Parliament (q.v.). He was finally defeated and captured at the Battle of Evesham (q.v.).

Montgolfier, Jacques Etienne 1745–99. French inventor. He and his brother, Joseph Michel, designed and constructed the first practical balloon. It was inflated with hot air and first ascended (unmanned) in 1783.

Montgomery Alabama city (pop. 178,200). Incorporated in 1819, it became an important river port and state capital (1847). The Confederacy was formed here (Feb., 1861) at the start of the American Civil War, and it served as the first capital of the Confederate States (until May, 1861). It was captured by the Union in 1865.

Montgomery, Bernard Law, 1st viscount Montgomery of Alamein 1887–1976. Noted British field marshal during WW II. He defeated Rommel's forces at el-Alamain in Africa (1942) and forced their surrender (1943), took part in the invasion of Sicily (1943) and Italy, and played a major role in the Normandy invasion (1944) and subsequent Allied drive to Germany.

Montgomery, Richard 1738–75. Irish-American Revolutionary War general. He was second-in-command of the Montreal expedition and was killed while attacking Quebec.

Monticello T. Jefferson's Virginia estate, located near Charlottesville, Virginia. Designed by Jefferson, it was completed in 1772. He and his family are buried here. It became a national monument in 1926.

Montini, Giovanni Battista See Paul VI

Montmorency, Anne, duke of 1493–1567. Marshal (1522) and constable of France (1537). He served in the Italian Wars under Francis I. Under Charles IX, he fought in the Wars of Religion and was killed in battle.

Montmorency, Mathieu, baron of *c*1174–1230. Constable of France (1218). He served under Philip II and under Louis VIII against the English and supported the regency of Blanche of Castile.

Montpensier, Louise d'Orléans, duchess of 1627–93. French princess and soldier. Niece of Louis XIII, she commanded rebel troops in the Fronde of the Princes (q.v.) and saved the Great Condé's army at the Battle of the Faubourg Sainte-Antoine (1652).

Montreal Canadian city (pop. 2,798,000) and important river port. First settled by the French (1642), it became a fur-trading center and starting point for expeditions of the Canadian interior. It passed to the British (1760) and was occupied by American colonials (1775–76) during the American Revolution. Its growth in the 19th cent. began with completion of canals to the Great Lakes and it was capital of Canada (1844–49).

Montreux Convention Agreement (July 20, 1936) revising the Straits Convention of 1923. It abolished the International Straits Commission and gave Turkey authority to close the Dardanelles to shipping during wartime.

Montrose, James Graham, 5th earl and 1st marquess of 1612–50. Scottish general. Originally a Covenanter, Montrose supported Charles I during the English Civil War (1642–49). He won important victories in Scotland before being decisively defeated at Philiphaugh.

Monts, Pierre du Guast, comte de 1560–1630. French explorer. Monts was S. de Champlain's patron. Together they explored the St. Lawrence River and the American coast to Cape Cod. Monts founded the first French colony at Port Royal (1605).

Mooney, Thomas J. 1883–1942. American radical labor leader. Mooney and Warren Billings (1893–1973) were convicted for the bombing at the San Francisco Preparedness Parade (July 22, 1916) in which ten were killed. His death sentence was commuted (1918) and both were pardoned (1939).

Moore, George Edward 1873–1958. British philosopher. A friend of B. Russell, Moore was a realist whose major work, Principia Ethica, opposed philosophical idealism.

Moore, Henry 1898–. British artist and sculptor, he is an internationally known sculptor, noted for the characteristic organic form of his sculptures. He also completed a famous series of drawings of bomb shelter scenes during WW II.

Moore, Sir John 1761–1809. British general, noted for his service during the Peninsular War (1808–14). He led his troops on a famous retreat through the mountains to La Coruña, where he defeated the French. He was mortally wounded in the battle.

Moore's Creek Bridge, Battle of Battle (Feb. 27, 1776) during the American Revolutionary War, fought near Wilmington, North Carolina. Colonial patriots defeated a Loyalist force of 1,800 men and thereby checked British plans for occupation of North Carolina.

Moors Originally, a mixed Arab and Berber people living in the Roman province of Mauretania. They became (8th cent. AD) zealous converts to Islam and, led by Tarik (ibn Ziyad), invaded the Iberian peninsula (711). There they conquered the Visigoths and ranged into France, where their advance was checked (732) by C. Martel at Poitiers. All of Spain, save the northern Christian part, was subsequently constituted as a Muslim caliphate under Abd ar-Rahman I. With its capital at Córdoba, the caliphate prospered and many centers of commerce and Muslim culture were established. The government, however, was weak and fell to the Almoravids (1086) and then the Almohads (1174). The Moors were slowly driven from the Iberian peninsula in the Reconquista, the Christian reconquest (11th–15th cents.), and many Moors resettled in (North) Africa. Those that remained in Spain were persecuted under the Inquisition and were finally expelled (1609). The term "Moors" sometimes refers to Muslims in general.

Moral Re-armament ⟨Buchmanism⟩ ⟨Oxford Group⟩ International evangelistic organization begun by Frank Buchman (1878–1961) in 1922. The movement is nondenominational and aims at a spiritual revitalization of the individual and attainment of the four moral absolutes: purity, unselfishness, honesty, and love. The movement has been most successful among Protestant denominations.

Morat, Battle of Battle (June 22, 1476) in the war between the Swiss Confederation and Burgundy (1474–76). Some 35,000 Swiss infantrymen routed 20,000 mercenaries in the service of Charles the Bold of Burgundy at this town (now in western Switzerland). Charles was forced to retreat.

Moravia Historic region and former kingdom, located in what is now central Czechoslovakia. Moravia was settled by the Slavs (6th cent.), rose to become a powerful kingdom (Great Moravia) in the 9th cent. and was converted to Christianity by Cyril and Methodius (863). It was taken by the Magyars (10th cent.) and then became part of the kingdom of Bohemia, ruled by the Hapsburgs. In 1918 it was made part of Czechoslovakia and, with Silesia, formed the province of Moravia and Silesia (1927). Taken by Germany during WW II, the region was restored in 1945.

Moravia, Alberto ⟨Pincherle, Alberto⟩ 1907–. Italian writer, Moravia's novels of alienation in the modern world include The Indifferent Ones, The Conformist, and The Woman of Rome.

Moravian Church ⟨Renewed Church of the Brethren⟩ ⟨Unitas Fratrum⟩ A small Protestant evangelical denomination founded (*c*1457) by a group of Hussites. Persecution of the Unitas Fratrum, as it was first called, began (*c*1460) and eventually drove its members out of Bohemia and Moldavia. But a few of the Moravians were left when, in 1727, the church was revived in Saxony. From this new Moravian community at Herrnhut, the church began sending out missionaries to the Americas, Africa, and Asia. From 1735, they founded new Moravian settlements in America. Most members of the church now live in the US.

Moray, James Stuart, 1st earl of See Murray, James Stuart, 1st earl of

Morazan, Francisco See Central American Union

More, Sir Thomas 1478–1535. English author, statesman, and Roman Catholic saint. More wrote his famous Utopia and served as lord chancellor (1529–32) to Henry VIII. His refusal to endorse Henry's Act of Supremacy (q.v.), creating the Church of England, led to his resignation and eventual execution.

Morea See Peloponnesus.

Moreau, Jean Victor 1763–1813. French general. He supported Napoleon in the coup of 18 Brumaire and, as one of Napoleon's generals, won the signal victory at the Battle of Hohenlinden (1800).

Napoleon grew jealous and had him banished in 1804. Moreau died fighting for the Royalist cause against Napoleon.

Morelos y Pavón, José María 1765–1815. Mexican priest and hero of the movement for independence from Spain. He fought under and then succeeded M. Hidalgo y Castilla and was successful in his early campaigns against the Spanish. He was later captured and shot, however.

Moreno, Mariano 1778–1811. Argentine revolutionary and intellectual leader. His publications attacking the Spanish colonial administration set the stage for the revolution (May, 1810) that ousted the Spanish viceroy. As a member of the revolutionary government, he established the national library and the government newspaper.

Morfontaine, Treaty of See Adams, John

Morgan, Daniel 1736–1802. American Revolutionary War general. Morgan defeated the British at the Battle of Cowpens (1781). After the war, he quelled the Whiskey Rebellion (1794) and served in Congress (1797–99.)

Morgan, Sir Henry 1635?–88. Welsh buccaneer. Morgan was a privateer in English service; his daring acts of piracy had the tacit approval of the British government and included brutal attacks on Spanish possessions in the Caribbean. He became lieutenant governor of Jamaica in 1674.

Morgan, John Hunt 1825–64. Confederate general. Morgan was known for his daring raids (1862) behind Union lines in Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio. Finally captured, he escaped and was later killed at Greenville, Tennessee.

Morgan, John Pierpont 1837–1913. American financier and a leading figure in the early 20th-cent. financial world. The son of J. S. Morgan, he reorganized some of the major US railroads, took over US government financing after the Panic of 1873, and in 1901 financed formation of the United States Steel Corporation. He became the target of congressional investigations into money trusts in 1912.

Morgan, Junius Spencer 1813–90. American financier. Morgan's British-based firm, J. S. Morgan and Company, lent $50 million to France during the Franco-Prussian War.

Morgan, Thomas Hunt 1866–1945. American scientist. Hunt won the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine in 1933 for his work with the fruit fly (Drosophila), which confirmed the action of chromosomes and genes in heredity.

Morganfield, McKinley See Waters, Muddy

Morgarten, Battle of Decisive victory (Nov. 15, 1315) of the Swiss Confederation over the Austrian Hapsburgs. The Austrians, under Leopold I, invaded the canton of Schwyz, a member of the confederation. They were ambushed in Morgarten Pass and some 1,500 Austrians were killed.

Morgenthau, Henry Jr. 1891–1967. US statesman. As treasury secretary (1934–45) under President F. Roosevelt, he supervised America's WW II economy, including massive taxation and government spending programs.

Moriscos Moriscos were Moors in Spain who were forcibly converted to Catholicism after 1492. Many practiced Islam secretly, however, and all were deported in 1609.

Morison, Samuel Eliot 1887–1976. American historian, writer, and teacher. Morison won Pulitzer prizes for Admiral of the Ocean and John Paul Jones. Among his many other works is The Growth of the American Republic (with H. Commager).

Morley, Edward Williams See Michelson, Albert Abraham

Mormons ⟨Latter-Day Saints, Church of Jesus Christ of⟩ Religious denomination founded (1830) in New York. Mormonism is characterized by an emphasis on revelation, the interdependence of spiritual and daily life, and concern for the church community. Mormons were noted as polygamists until the practice was banned (1890). The church was founded by J. Smith after he translated into the Book of Mormon the golden tablets he said were delivered to him in a revelation. In 1831 Smith moved the church to Ohio, then to Missouri (1831), and was driven to Illinois (1839). There Smith was killed (1844) by an angry mob. Under B. Young the Mormons moved west and settled (1847) Salt Lake City, Utah. After Utah became a US territory (1850), friction between Mormon and non-Mormon settlers developed and led to the Mormon War (1857). Mormons, however, were in firm control of the territory when it became a state (1896) and since then have spread their faith worldwide.

Mormon War ⟨Utah War⟩ Hostilities (1857–58) between Mormon settlers in Utah and US government troops. When a non-Mormon was appointed by the US government as governor of the Utah Territory (1857), Mormon governor B. Young instituted martial law. US troops, sent there to restore order, were fired upon by Mormons in sporadic raids that lasted until a peace was negotiated (June, 1858). The federal appointee then replaced Young as governor.

Mornay, Philippe de, seigneur du Plessis-Marly 1549–1623. French diplomat and Protestant (Huguenot) leader during the Wars of Religion. Mornay wrote tracts in support of the Protestant cause and reconciled the Protestant leader, Henry of Navarre (later Henry IV), with the Catholic king Henry III.

Morny, Charles, duc de 1811–65. French statesman. He helped organize the coup (Dec. 1851) that made his half-brother, Napoleon III, dictator of France.

Moro, Aldo 1916–78. Italian statesman and prime minister (1963–68). As prime minister, he formed a coalition government with the Socialists, though Italy's serious economic problems prevented him from instituting reforms he wanted. He was premier (1974–76) and was kidnapped (Mar., 1978) and killed by left-wing terrorists.

Morocco Kingdom located on the northwest coast of Africa at the entrance to the Mediterranean Sea. Its capital is Rabat. In the 8th cent. Morocco was the base for the Arab conquest of Spain. After the Moors were expelled from Spain (15th cent.), Morocco came under attack by Spain and Portugal. In the late 19th cent., Morocco became the object of rivalry among the European imperial powers, and both Spain and France established (1912) protectorates there. Morocco was reestablished as an independent kingdom in 1956. Key dates in the history of Morocco include:

1ST CENT. BC Kingdom of Mauretania in region of modern Morocco constituted as Roman province of Mauretania.

5TH CENT. AD Vandals conquered region.

LATE 7TH CENT. Arabs entered Morocco; introduced Islam to Berbers in region.

8TH CENT. Berbers and Arabs launched invasion of Spain.

c788–900 Idris I and descendants established Morocco as unified and independent kingdom.

11TH CENT. Almoravides conquered region, ending period of tribal rule and strife between Umayyad and Fatimid Muslim factions.

12TH CENT. Almohades conquered the Almoravides.

16TH CENT. Spain and Portugal conquered coastal Morocco.

1554 Saadian (first Sherifian) dynasty founded in Morocco.

1578 Portuguese ended attempts to conquer Morocco following defeat in Battle of the Three Kings (Aug. 4).

1660 Alawite (second Sherifian) dynasty founded.

17TH–19TH CENT. Alawites reconquered much of Morocco; kingdom became center for Barbary pirates.

1822–59 Abdu-r-Rahman reigned; attempted to expand influence into Algeria; was defeated by French, who had invaded Algeria.

1860 Spain invaded Morocco.

1880 Madrid Conference; major powers agreed to respect Morocco's independence; agreement proved short-lived as commercial rivalries intensified.

1906 France and Spain received authority over Moroccan internal affairs at the Algeciras Conference (Jan.–Apr.).

1911 Germany challenged French hegemony in Morocco in the Agadir Incident (July); forced to concede French and Spanish hegemony.

1912 France and Spain established protectorates over Morocco; France received the bulk of the territory (Mar. 30); Spain established (Nov. 27) Spanish Morocco and a Southern Protectorate that became part of Spanish Sahara; Tangier became an international zone.

1921–26 Rif War, unsuccessful revolt against colonial rule, led by Abd-el-krim.

1936 In Spanish Morocco, F. Franco began revolt that marked the beginning of the Spanish Civil War.

1937 Unsuccessful nationalist revolt against French rule.

1942 WW II; Morocco occupied (Nov.) by Allies.

1952 Nationalist Istiglal party declared illegal by French authorities.

1953 Sultan Sidi Muhammad, who supported the Moroccan nationalist movement, deposed by the French.

1955 Sidi Muhammad restored as sultan by the French as unrest spread in Morocco.

1956 France gave up its protectorate (Mar.); Spain renounced its protectorate over Spanish Morocco (Apr.); Morocco was awarded international zone of Tangier (Oct.).

1957 Sidi Muhammad became Moroccan King Muhammad V.

1958 Spain surrendered its Southern Protectorate to Morocco.

1961 Muhammad V died (Feb. 26); succeeded by his son Hassan II.

1962 Hassan II issued constitution establishing parliamentary government in Morocco.

1965 Political turmoil in Morocco came to a head; Hassan II declared state of emergency (June) and assumed personal rule.

1969 Ifni ceded to Morocco by Spain.

1970 New constitution approved (July 25); five-year state of emergency ended.

1971 Unsuccessful attempt to overthrow government (July 10).

1972 King Hassan's proposed constitution approved in nationwide vote (Mar. 1).

1972 Unsuccessful assassination attempt against Hassan II (Aug.).

1975 Some 350,000 Moroccans took part in a march into Spanish Sahara (Nov. 6–9) to press claim that northern section belonged to Morocco; fighting between Moroccans, Mauritanians, and Algerians over region continued; cease-fire established in 1981.

1977–78 Moroccan troops fought in Zaire against guerrilla forces.

Morpheus Greek god, a son of Hypnos, god of sleep. Morpheus brought dreams of human beings, as opposed to animals or symbols.

Morrill, Justin Smith 1810–98. American legislator. Morrill was a founder of the Republican party in Vermont, served 43 years (1855–98) in both houses of Congress, and established land grant colleges by the Morrill Act (1862).

Morrill Act See Morrill, Justin Smith

Morris, Gouverneur 1752–1816. American statesman. Morris was a member of the Continental Congress (1778–79) and the Constitutional Convention (1787), and put the draft of the Constitution in final form. He planned the decimal system of coinage used in America and was minister to France (1792–94).

Morris, Lewis 1671–1746. Colonial jurist and statesman. Morris was chief justice of New York, was instrumental in the separation of New York and New Jersey (1738) into two colonies, and served as New Jersey's first governor (1738–46).

Morris, Robert 1734–1806. American financier and patriot. A signer of the Declaration of Independence, he was called the "financier of the Revolution." He controlled government financing efforts, including those for the army. He later served as a US senator (1789–95) and died in debt.

Morris, William 1834–96. English poet, Socialist, and decorative artist who was an important figure in the Victorian era. Early in his career he was active in the decorative arts and crafts. His major collections of poetical works include The Defence of Guenevere and Other Poems, The Life and Death of Jason, The Earthly Paradise, and Three Northern Love Songs. He also wrote prose romances, such as News from Nowhere and The Well at the World's End.

Morse, Jedidiah 1761–1826. American geographer. Morse was a minister whose geography textbooks earned him the name "father of American Geography." His son was S. Morse.

Morse, Samuel Finley Breese 1791–1872. An American painter and inventor. Morse was a portrait painter who developed the telegraph (from 1832) and the Morse code.

Mortimer, Edmund de, 3d earl of March and 1st earl of Ulster 1351–81. English nobleman. Edmund's marriage to Philippa, daughter of Edward III's son, formed the basis to the York (q.v.) family claim to the English throne.

Mortimer, Edmund de, 5th earl of March and 3d earl of Ulster 1391–1425. English nobleman. Edmund was heir presumptive of Richard II. He was jailed after Henry IV took the throne. Released by Henry V, Mortimer served Henry faithfully, resisting plots to put himself on the throne.

Mortimer, Roger de, 1st earl of March 1287?–1330. English nobleman. Roger and Queen Isabella, his lover, deposed (1327) and murdered her husband, Edward II, and ruled England together. Isabella's son, Edward III, had him tried and executed.

Mortimer, Roger de, 4th earl of March and 2d earl of Ulster 1374–98. English nobleman. The son of E. de Mortimer, he was declared heir presumptive by the childless Richard II, but died in battle. His great-grandson became Edward IV.

Mortimer's Cross, Battle of Battle (Feb. 2, 1461) during the Wars of the Roses (q.v.), Edward, Duke of York, defeated the House of Lancaster. He proclaimed himself king as Edward IV, though the Lancastrians continued to contest his power.

mortmain From the French word for "dead hand," mortmain implies perpetual ownership of land, especially by a church. Such land was exempt from taxes and, from feudal times in England, efforts were made to limit or ban such holdings and figured in the conflict between church and state.

Morton, James Douglas, 4th earl of *c*1516–81. Scottish nobleman. Morton was lord chancellor (1563–66) to Mary Queen of Scots. He participated in the deaths of her secretary David Rizzio (1566) and her husband, Lord Darnley. He later forced her abdication (1567) and flight to England.

Morton, Thomas fl. 1622–47. English colonial trader. Morton was an Anglican and a fur trader who came into conflict with the early Puritan settlers in New England. They had him arrested and exiled several times.

Morton, William Thomas Green 1819–68. An American dental surgeon. Morton demonstrated the use of ether for surgical anesthesia (1846) and gained general acceptance for its use in medicine. C. Long was the first to use ether in surgery (1842).

Mosaddegh, Muhammad 1880–1967. Iranian statesman. As premier (1951–53), he nationalized Iran's oil industry (1951). This move alienated the West. Amid a major political crisis in Iran, he forced (1953) the shah to flee the country. However, the shah had Western support and soon forced Mosaddegh out of power.

Mosby, John Singleton 1833–1916. Confederate ranger. During the American Civil War Mosby led a small group called "Mosby's Rangers." They specialized in swift, daring raids behind Union lines, and effectively harassed Union military operations.

Moscow Capital city (pop. 7,831,000) of the USSR, located in west-central USSR. One of the world's major cities, it is the Soviet Union's largest city and its commercial and cultural center. Inhabited from Neolithic times, Moscow was first mentioned as site of a village in 1147. It became the seat of the grand dukes of Moscow and was, from the 14th cent., seat of the metropolitan (later called the patriarch) of the Russian Orthodox Church. Moscow was destroyed several times by the Tatars but rose to defeat the Tatars and gain dominance over all of Russia. In 1547, Grand Duke Ivan IV first took the title "czar of Russia." Czar Peter I moved Russia's capital to St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) in 1712. Moscow was virtually destroyed by fire (1812) during Napoleon's occupation and subsequent retreat. It became capital of the USSR (1918) after the Russian Revolution, and was the prime objective of the German invasion (1941) during WW II. The Kremlin (q.v.) is located there.

Moscow Conferences World War II meetings between the Allies (Britain, Russia, and the US) to discuss war and postwar strategies. In the first (1941), America and Britain agreed to lend-lease aid for Russia, and in the second (1942) they discussed the creation of a second European theater of war. At the third meeting (1943), they agreed to the formation of the United Nations, and at the fourth (1944) they discussed the problems of Poland, Bulgaria, and Yugoslavia. A 1947 conference (including France) was less successful in deciding the postwar status of Germany.

Moscow Declaration Agreement (Oct. 30, 1943) by the Soviet Union, Britain, the United States, and China on the need to establish an international peace-keeping organization. It was one of the preliminary agreements that led to formation of the UN.

Moseley, Henry Gwyn Jeffreys 1887–1915. English physicist. By his research on the X-ray spectra of elements, he made important discoveries concerning atomic structure, including the link between atomic number and the charge of its nucleus.

Moses fl. c14th–13th cent. BC. Great Hebrew prophet and religious leader. Knowledge of his life is based on biblical accounts, according to which he was raised in the Egyptian court. He fled Egypt after intervening between an Egyptian and a Hebrew slave and, after becoming a shepherd, received his call from Yahweh (God) to rescue the Hebrews. He returned to Egypt and, demanding that the pharaoh (possibly Ramses II) release his people, caused the plagues of Egypt. Moses finally led his people out of Egypt (see Exodus) and across the desert to Mt. Sinai, where he received the Ten Commandments. He then led the Hebrews on the 40-year journey to the Holy Land (Canaan), during which there was much hardship and dissent. When the Hebrews reached the edge of the Holy Land at the Jordan river, Moses climbed Mt. Pisgah to view it and then disappeared. Moses is traditionally regarded as the author of the first five books of the Old Testament (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy), known collectively as the Pentateuch.

Moses, Anna Mary Robertson ⟨Moses, Grandma⟩ 1860–1961. American painter. She took up painting in her seventies and quickly established herself as an American folk artist.

Moses, Grandma See Moses, Anna Mary Robertson

Moslem See Muslim

Mosley, Sir Oswald Ernald 1896–. British politician. He founded (1932) the British Union of Fascists. He conducted an anti-Jewish campaign and supported the Nazis, which resulted in his confinement from 1940 to 1943.

mosque Islamic temple, traditionally built facing Mecca and generally including an open courtyard and a minaret (tower). The first mosques were patterned after Muhammad's courtyard at Medina. Among the many famous mosques are the Dome of the Rock (q.v.) and the Blue Mosque in Istanbul.

most-favored-nation clause Provision in treaties for international trade. It stipulates that the two participating nations will grant each other all commercial concessions (such as favorable import duties) that have been extended to other nations.

Most Serene Republic of San Marino See San Marino

Mother Lode Popular name of the gold-bearing region located in the western Sierra Nevada Mountains of California.

Mo Ti See Mo-tzu

Mott, Lucretia Coffin 1793–1880. American feminist and abolitionist. Together with E. Stanton she organized the first US women's rights convention at Seneca Falls, New York (1848).

Mo-tzu ⟨Mo Ti⟩ 470?–391? BC. Chinese philosopher. Mo-tzu taught that people should love each other as they love their own families. For a time this doctrine of universal love rivaled the popularity of Confucianism.

Moultrie, William 1730–1805. American Revolutionary War general. Moultrie defeated a British attack at Sullivan's Island (now Fort Moultrie) and was taken prisoner in the fall of Charleston (1780). He later served as governor of South Carolina.

Mountain, the ⟨Montagnards⟩ French extremist faction in the National Convention (q.v.) during the French Revolution. They were so named because they occupied a raised part of the legislative hall. They opposed (and eventually defeated) the more moderate Girondists (q.v.). They eventually took control of the Jacobins and became the controlling force behind the Reign of Terror (q.v.). Principal figures in the group were M. Robespierre and G. Danton.

Mountain Meadows massacre Massacre of 137 settlers (Sept., 1857) in Utah, provoked by disputes between Mormon and non-Mormon settlers in Utah. Mormons were charged with inciting the attack, carried out by a mixed band of Paiute Indians and white settlers, apparently led by Mormon John D. Lee (1812–77). Their victims were only passing through Utah on their way to California, and only a few children were spared. Lee was tried and executed (1877).

Mount Athos Mountain located in northeastern Greece. It is noted as the site of numerous monasteries of the Orthodox Eastern Church, the first of which was founded there *c*963.

Mountbatten, Louis, 1st earl Mountbatten of Burma 1900–79. British admiral and statesman. As supreme Allied commander in Southeast Asia (1943–46), Mountbatten defeated the Japanese in Burma. He was last viceroy of India (1947) and chairman of the chiefs of defense staff (1959–65). He was assassinated by Irish terrorists.

Mount Rushmore Mountain in the Black Hills of western South Dakota. The heads of T. Jefferson, A. Lincoln, G. Washington, and T. Roosevelt, carved out of the face of the mountain by G. Borglum, are a national monument.

Mount Sion See Zion

Mount Vernon Virginia estate of G. Washington from 1747 until his death in 1799. It is the burial place of the Washington family and is located near Alexandria, Virginia.

Mousgorgsky, Modest Petrovich See Musorgsky, Modest Petrovich

Mouskos, Mihail Christodoulou See Makarios III

Mozambique ⟨People's Republic of Mozambique, formerly Portuguese East Africa⟩ Independent state located in coastal southeast Africa. Its capital is Maputo. It gained independence in 1975 after nearly five centuries of Portuguese colonial rule. Key dates in Mozambique's history include:

10TH CENT. Arabs and Swahili traders settled coastal region.

1498 Vasco da Gama visited region.

1505 Portuguese began colonization.

16TH–17TH CENT. Portuguese gradually took control of the interior; prazeros (owners of large estates) forced natives to work lands.

FROM MID-17TH CENT. Slave trade flourished.

1752 Colonial government established.

1891 Treaty established border between Mozambique and British territories.

1910 Status changed from province to colony.

1917 Firm control by Portugal over native population secured after nearly two decades of fighting.

1951 Mozambique became a Portuguese overseas province.

EARLY 1960S Reform laws passed; ended forced labor and improved conditions for native blacks.

1963 National Front for the Liberation of Mozambique (FRELIMO) organized.

1964–74 War for independence; FRELIMO guerrillas slowly gained control of much of Mozambique.

1974 New Portuguese military government arranged cease-fire in Mozambique (July); agreed to independence for Mozambique.

1975 Independence granted (June 25); President Samora Moises Machel, a Maoist, took office and remained in power into the early 1980s. Marxist government established.

1976 Mozambique closed border with white-ruled Rhodesia.

1980 Reopened border after native blacks came to power in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia).

Mozarabs Christians in Muslim Spain (8th–11th cents.) who adopted the Muslim language and culture while retaining their Christian faith. They lived in largely autonomous communities.

Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus 1756–91. Great Austrian musical genius of the classical period who composed works in every genre. He began composing when he was five and went on a concert tour through Europe at age six. His most famous operas are The Marriage of Figaro and Don Giovanni. In spite of the brilliance of his many symphonies, concertos, and his last opera, The Magic Flute, he died in poverty.

Muawiya d. 680. He once served as Muhammad's secretary and later became governor of Syria. In the first Muslim Civil War (q.v.), he contested the succession of Ali to the caliphate and, after Ali's death (661), deposed his successor, Hasan. Muawiya thus founded the Umayyad (q.v.) dynasty.

Mubarak, Hosni Egyptian president (1981—), successor to A. Sadat on his assassination. By his visit (June, 1982) to Saudi Arabia, Mubarak established the first high-level contact with that country since the split between Egypt and its Arab neighbors over the Camp David accords.

muckrakers In US journalistic history, reporters who exposed corruption in business and politics during the early 1900s. They included I. Tarbell, L. Steffens, and U. Sinclair.

Mudd, Samuel Alexander See Booth, John Wilkes

Mudéjar Name for the Spanish Muslims (later called Moriscos) who were allowed to remain in Spain after the Christian reconquest of Muslim territories there. They lived in protected communities and developed a unique artistic style, which influenced Spanish architecture. They were forced to leave Spain in 1614.

mufti Muslim lawyers who advise judges on Islamic law. Their opinion papers are called futwa and are binding in matters of marriage, divorce, and inheritance.

Mughal See Mogul

mugwumps In US history, Republicans who deserted (1884) party presidential candidate J. Blaine to support Democrat candidate G. Cleveland, who was subsequently elected.

Muhammad 570?–632. Arabian prophet and religious leader, founder of Islam (q.v.). The son of Abdallah, a merchant of Mecca, Muhammad was raised by his uncle after his father's early death. At the age of 24, Muhammad married Khadija, a prosperous widow many years his senior; of their children only one, Fatima, had children. Muhammad became a successful merchant in Mecca. However, he came to feel called upon by God to preach among the Arabian people, to dispel their ignorance and superstition, and to provide the Arab world with its own prophet. According to Islamic teaching, he was favored by a revelation from God through the archangel Gabriel.

At first Muhammad preached only to a small circle, including members of his family, Ali, his son-in-law, and Abu Bakr, his friend. He taught that there was one true God, and that key elements of the struggle toward God's mercy were fasting, almsgiving, and prayer. After several years he felt called upon to preach in public, but his exhortations against the pagan rituals practiced in Mecca made him many enemies. An attempt on his life was planned in 622 but Muhammad was warned and fled to Yathrib, later called Medina. This flight, known as the Hejira, traditionally marks the beginning of the Muslim era.

At Medina, Muhammad found increased support and made many new converts. He continued to elaborate his teachings and accounts of his revelations, which formed the basis of the Koran (q.v.). However, the growing strength of Islam brought Muhammad into conflict with the Meccans. Muhammad's followers defeated a superior Meccan force at Badr (624) but were defeated at Uhud (625). The strength of Islam continued to rise, however, and in 630 Muhammad marched into Mecca leading 10,000 faithful. At Mecca he instituted the tradition of the pilgrimage. He spent his last years at Medina in the company of his several wives, among them his favorite, Aisha (Ayeshah), daughter of Abu Bakr. By his death virtually all of Arabia had come under the control of Islam and the theocratic state (see Caliphate, Empire of) he had established.

Muhammad II 1430–81. Ottoman sultan (1451–81), called the Conqueror, successor to his father, Murad II. He captured Constantinople (1453), bringing the Byzantine Empire to an end. He made Constantinople his capital, and took Greece, most of Serbia, and the Aegean Islands.

Muhammad IV 1641–92. Ottoman sultan (1648–87), son of Sultan Ibrahim, who had been deposed and murdered. Order was restored under the viziers of the Kuprili family (after 1656). He was unable to prevent Algerian independence (1669), however, and he was deposed after military reverses in the Austro-Turkish War (q.v.).

Muhammad V 1844–1918. Ottoman sultan (1909–18). He succeeded his brother, Abdul-Hamid II, who was overthrown by the Young Turks. Muhammad's reign saw the loss of most of the Ottoman Empire's European possessions in the Balkan Wars (q.v.) and its ruinous WW I alliance with the Central Powers.

Muhammad VI 1861–1926. Last Ottoman sultan (1918–22), successor to his brother, Muhammad V. He came to power at the close of WW I, submitted to the harsh terms of the Treaty of Sèvres (q.v.), and was deposed (Nov. 3, 1922) by the Turkish nationalist K. Atatürk, who established the republic.

Muhammad Ahmad See Mahadi, Muhammad Ahmed

Muhammad Ali ⟨Mehemet Ali⟩ ⟨Muhammad Ali Pasha⟩ 1769–1849. Egyptian viceroy (1805–48), considered the founder of the modern Egyptian state. After unsuccessfully opposing Napoleon in Egypt, he became viceroy of Egypt, then under Ottoman rule. He massacred Mameluke (q.v.) leaders in Egypt and thereby established undisputed power, defeated the Wahabis in Arabia (by 1818), invaded the Sudan, sent troops to aid the Ottoman sultan in the War of Greek Independence (q.v.), and went to war against the sultan (in Syria). By his victories against the sultan, he gained (1841) virtual independence for Egypt under nominal Ottoman suzerainty. The viceroyalty of Egypt was made hereditary.

Muhammad Ali Pasha See Muhammad Ali

Muhammad of Ghor See Taraori, Battles of

Muhammad Reza Shah Pahlevi 1919–80. Shah of Iran (1941–79), successor to his father, Reza Shah Pahlevi. He succeeded after his father was deposed by British and Soviet military intervention and, amid nationalist unrest, was forced to leave the country briefly in 1953. He was restored with US and British help and subsequently attempted to promote social and economic reforms. Criticized for his pro-Western policies and brutal treatment of dissenters, he was forced out of Iran (Jan. 16, 1979) by a Muslim fundamentalist revolution in Iran that brought Ayatollah Khomeini to power. In ill health and resisting attempts to return him to Iran for trial (notably the hostage crisis), the former shah died in exile in Egypt.

Muhlenberg, Frederick Augustus Conrad 1750–1801. American clergyman. Muhlenberg served in the Continental Congress (1779–80) and was a member (1789–97) and first speaker of the House of Representatives.

Muhlenberg, Heinrich Melchior 1711–87. German-American clergyman. He organized (1748) the first Lutheran synod in America and is regarded as the founder of American Lutheranism.

Muhlenberg, John Peter Gabriel 1746–1807. American clergyman, soldier, and politician. Muhlenberg served as brevet major general in the American Revolution, and was later a congressman and senator from Pennsylvania.

Mukden Incident Incident (Sept. 18, 1931) used by Japan as a pretext for its invasion of Manchuria. Following an attempt to sabotage the Japanese-controlled South Manchurian Railway, Japanese troops occupied (Sept. 18) nearby Mukden. With the arrival (Sept. 21) of more troops from Korea, the Japanese army began to actively take over the territory. Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist armies, then occupied in civil war with the Communists, were unable to oppose the Japanese, and by February conquest of Manchuria was complete. Thereupon the Japanese created (Feb. 18) the puppet state of Manchukuo (q.v.).

Müller, Hermann 1876–1931. German statesman and political leader in the Weimar Republic. He was chancellor (1920, 1928–30) and, during his second term, negotiated the Young Plan (q.v.) and brought an end to French occupation of the Rhineland (1929).

Muller, Johannes See Regiomontanus

Muller, Johannes Peter 1801–58. German physiologist and anatomist. Muller was famed for research in such fields as physiology, pathology, and comparative anatomy.

Mumford, Lewis 1895–. American educator, author, and social critic. Mumford's works range from city planning to cultural history and treat the larger thesis that humanity must counter dehumanizing tendencies of the modern technological world. This is to be accomplished by restoring cultural emphasis on human and moral values. Among his notable works are Technics and Civilization, The City in History, and The Pentagon of Power.

Munda, Battle of Battle (Mar. 17, 45 BC) that marked the end of resistance within the Roman Empire to J. Caesar's rule. Following Caesar's victory at Thapsus, Pompey's sons, Gnaeus Pompey (75?–45 BC) and Sextus Pompey (75–35 BC), organized a rebellion against Caesar in the Roman province of Spain. Though outnumbered, Caesar met and defeated the rebel force at Munda, an ancient town in southern Spain. It was Caesar's last military victory.

Munich City (pop. 1,314,000) located in southern West Germany, in a commercial and manufacturing center. Founded in 1158, it became (1255) the seat of the dukes of Bavaria (Wittelsbach line), capital of the kingdom of Bavaria (1806), and an important cultural center (19th cent.). In the next century, Munich became headquarters of A. Hitler's National Socialist (Nazi) movement, the scene of the Munich Putsch (q.v.) and the Munich Pact (q.v.). Rebuilt after suffering heavy damage in WW II, Munich was the site of the 1972 Summer Olympics, at which 11 Israeli athletes were killed by Palestinian terrorists.

Munich Agreement See Munich Pact

Munich Pact ⟨~ Agreement⟩ Pact (Sept. 30, 1938) between Germany and other European powers providing for the German annexation of the western Czechoslovakian territory of Sudetenland. A. Hitler had entered into a dispute with Czechoslovakia earlier in 1938 over the territory, which was predominantly German. After several months of negotiations between the major powers, a complex plan for the phased occupation of the territory was worked out and agreed to (at Munich) by Germany, France, Great Britain, and Italy. The pact was rendered meaningless when Hitler invaded (Mar., 1939) Czechoslovakia.

Munich Putsch ⟨Beer Hall Putsch⟩ A. Hitler's unsuccessful attempt (Nov. 9, 1923) to seize power in Bavaria and, ultimately, to take control of the Weimar Republic. As leader of the National Socialist (Nazi) party, Hitler joined with the extremist Gen. E. Ludendorff in a badly organized attempt to incite a right-wing revolution in Munich. Hitler had hoped to capitalize on Germany's severe economic crisis, but his plan soon failed. Arrested and tried, Hitler was sentenced to five years in prison. He served only eight months and during this time wrote his seminal work, Mein Kampf (q.v.).

Muñoz Marin, Luis 1898–. Puerto Rican statesman and governor (1948–64). He founded (1938) the Popular Democratic party and, as the first elected governor, implemented social and economic reforms.

Munsey, Frank Andrew 1854–1925. American publisher, who bought and consolidated competing newspapers and magazines. Among his holdings were the New York Sun and the New York Herald.

Münster, Sebastian 1489–1552. German theologian and geographer. Münster edited a Hebrew Bible and wrote (1544) Cosmographia, the first detailed geography of the world written in the German language.

Münzer, Thomas *c*1489–1525. German radical reformer, often considered to be among the Anabaptists. Münzer saw the Protestant Reformation as a social and political revolution, as well as a religious revolt. He broke with M. Luther and became a leader in the Peasants' War (q.v.). He was captured and beheaded.

Murad I 1326?–89. Ottoman sultan (*c*1360–89). By his conquests, he made the Byzantine Empire a vassal state, consolidated Ottoman control over Anatolia, extended Ottoman domains into the Balkans, and established (1362) the Ottoman capital at Edirne (formerly Adrianople). He laid the foundations of the administrative system of the later Ottoman Empire and formed the military corps known as the Janissaries (q.v.).

Murad II 1403–51. Ottoman sultan (1421–51). He overcame rival claimants to the throne and, by 1425, had firm control of the empire. He took Salonika (1430) in northern Greece during a war with Venice and won important victories at Varna (1444) and Kosovo (1448) in fighting against the Hungarians and Poles.

Murad IV *c*1612–40. Ottoman sultan (1623–40). By means of brutal force, he broke the power of rebellious military leaders (including those of the Janissaries), restored the authority of the central government, and successfully concluded a war with Persia, in which he captured Baghdad (1638).

Murad V 1840–1904. Ottoman sultan (1876), successor to his uncle, Abd al-aziz. He was declared insane after three months and was deposed in favor of his brother Abd al-Hamid II.

Murasaki Shikibu *c*978–*c*1031. Japanese writer. She wrote Tales of Genji, one of the first great novels written in Japanese.

Murat, Joachim 1767–1815. French marshal and king of Naples (1808–15). Murat was one of Napoleon's most able cavalry commanders and distinguished himself in Napoleon's Italian, Egyptian, Peninsular, and Russian campaigns. He helped Napoleon seize power in the coup of 18 Brumaire and again joined him in the Hundred Days' campaign.

Muratori, Ludovico Antonio 1672–1750. Italian historian. As archivist and librarian at Modena, he discovered early Christian writings (AD 2d cent.) that listed the books of the New Testament.

Murdoch, Jean Iris ⟨Bayley, J. O.⟩ 1919–. British novelist and philosopher. Murdoch's writings include the novels A Severed Head and The Flight from the Enchanter.

Muret, Battle of Victory for the French Catholic nobles (Sept., 1213) during the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.). Forces of the noblemen of northern France, led by S. de Montfort, decisively defeated those of the Albigensian leader Raymond VI at this town in southern France. Raymond's ally, King Pedro II of the Spanish kingdom of Aragon, was killed in the battle. Spanish influence in southern France was thus ended.

Murfreesboro, Battle of See Stones River, Battle of Murillo, Bartolomé Esteban 1617?–82. Spanish baroque painter. Murillo was noted for his portraits and religious subjects, including the Vision of St. Anthony. He was a founder and first president of the Seville Academy (1660).

Muromachi period ⟨Ashikaga period⟩ In Japanese history, the period in which the Ashikaga shoguns ruled (1338–1578). Their capital was located at Kyoto. Though the era was marked by the rise of the power of feudal lords and frequent warfare (especially in the first and last centuries), it nevertheless saw commercial prosperity, increased foreign trade, contacts with China, the predominance of Zen Buddhism, and a cultural flowering.

Murphy, Frank 1893–1949. American politician and associate justice of the Supreme Court (1940–49). Known for his liberalism, he delivered a dissenting opinion opposing the confinement of Japanese-Americans during WW II.

Murray, James 1722–94. British general and colonial administrator. He distinguished himself in the Seven Years' War (1756–63), served as governor of Quebec (1760), Canada (1763–66) and Minorca (1774–82).

Murray, Sir James Augustus Henry 1837–1915. Scottish-born English lexicographer. Murray became editor (1879) of the Oxford English Dictionary (completed 1928), editing over half of it himself and establishing its organization.

Murray, James Stuart, 1st earl of ⟨Moray, ~⟩ *c*1531–70. Scottish nobleman. A Protestant, he at first supported the rule of his sister, the Catholic Mary Queen of Scots. Later, however, his support of the Calvinist J. Knox resulted in a break with Mary and Murray's unsuccessful attempt (1565) at rebellion. After Mary's fall from power (1567), he became regent, resisted her attempts to regain power, and promoted the Protestant Reformation in Scotland.

Murrone, Pietro del See Celestine V, Saint

Murrow, Edward Roscoe 1908–65. Noted American broadcast journalist. Murrow was renowned for his vivid WW II radio reports from England. He pioneered television journalism with his programs See It Now and Person to Person.

Mursa, Battle of Battle fought (Sept. 28, AD 351) during the Roman civil wars. Roman emperor Constantius II, with an army of 40,000, defeated the usurper Magnetius, leading some 50,000 troops, in a bloody battle at Mursa (now in Yugoslavia). Combined losses totaled 25,000 men.

Mursilis I See Hittite Empire

Muscovy Company ⟨Russia Company⟩ English joint-stock trading company founded in 1555. The company enjoyed a monopoly on the Russian trade until 1698.

Muses Collective name for nine mythical Greek goddesses. They were daughters of Zeus and patronesses of the arts: Clio (history), Euterpe (music), Thalia (comedy), Melpomene (tragedy), Terpsichore (dance), Erato (love poems), Polymnia (sacred poems), Urania (astronomy), and Calliope (eloquence and epic poems).

Muslim civil wars Political upheavals that significantly altered the course of Muslim history. The first (656–61) was caused by the assassination of Uthman, the third caliph, and involved a struggle for the caliphate between Ali (600?–661), fourth caliph, and Muawiya leader of the Umayyads (q.v.). Ali was assassinated and Muawiya thereupon established the Umayyad dynasty of caliphs. This event marked the beginning of the long Umayyad rule and also caused the fundamental schism within the Islamic world: the Shi'ites (q.v.) supported Ali (and his successors) as the only rightful heirs to the caliphate, while the orthodox Sunni (q.v.) Muslims supported the Umayyads. The second (683–92) was caused when Abd Allah ibn az-Zubayr sought the caliphate after the death of Yazid I (d. 683). The civil war ended with the defeat and death of az-Zubayr and the rise of Marwan II (d. 750) as unchallenged leader of the Muslim world. A third civil war divided the Abbasid caliphate after the death (809) of Harun al-Rashid. The struggle was initiated by his son al-Amin (785?–813), his designated successor, and another son, Abd Allah al-Mamun (786–833), who was proclaimed caliph in Persia. The war ended (813) with al-Amin's defeat and death and the ascendancy of al-Mamun. A final civil war (1008–31) in Córdoba, Spain, ended with the elimination of the Umayyad caliphate in Spain (1031).

Muslim League ⟨orig. All-India Muslim League⟩ Political organization founded (1906) in India. Formed by Aga Khan III for the protection of Muslim's rights, the group broke away from the predominantly Hindu Indian National Congress and demanded (1940) a separate Muslim state. Led by (Muhammad Ali) Jinnah, it won the creation (1947) of Pakistan and became the dominant political party in the new state. The league had split into factions by the 1960s and declined after the 1970 elections.

Musorgsky, Modest Petrovich ⟨Moussorgski, ~⟩ 1839–81. Russian composer. He is best known for his opera, Boris Godunov, and his piano suite, Pictures at an Exhibition.

Mussolini, Benito 1883–1945. Italian Fascist dictator and WW II ally of A. Hitler. The preeminent leader of Italian Fascism, he organized the first Fascist group (1919) and party (1921). He orchestrated the Fascist militia's march on Rome (Oct. 1922) and by it became head of the Italian government. Thereafter his rule was marked by the institution of his dictatorship and the following events: the Matteoti Crisis (1924); abolition of parliamentary government (1928); the Lateran Treaty (1929); the Italo-Ethiopian War (1935–36); intervention in the Spanish Civil War; occupation of Albania (1939); and participation and defeat in WW II. Ousted from power (1943), he headed a German-backed opposition government until his execution in 1945.

Mutanabbi, al- 915–965. Great Arab poet, author of collected poems known as the Divan.

Mutasim, al- See Abbasid

Mutsuhito ⟨reign name, Meiji⟩ 1852–1912. Japanese emperor (1867–1912), successor to the shogun rulers of Japan. His reign is known as the Meiji Restoration (q.v.). It saw the end of feudalism and the transformation of Japan into a modern industrial state. He introduced many reforms, including a judicial code, a constitution (1889, providing for a legislature), and the Western calendar (1873). In addition to extensive Westernization, his reign was marked by the Satsuma Rebellion (1877), the Sino-Japanese War (1894–95) and the Russo-Japanese War (1904–5).

Muttra ⟨Mathura⟩ This city, located in north-central India, is the reputed birthplace of Krishna. It is one of the seven sacred Hindu cities.

Muwatallis See Hittite Empire

Mycale, Battle of Greek naval victory (Sept., 479 BC) over the Persians in the Aegean. With the victory at Plataea it was instrumental in ending the Persian invasion of Greece.

MVD See GPU

Mycenae Ancient Greek city, once located in northeastern Greece. It was the center of the Mycenaean civilization (q.v.).

Mycenaean civilization Ancient Aegean civilization that flourished on the Greek mainland (*c*1600–1200 BC). The Mycenaeans entered Greece from the north in *c*2000 BC. They were in regular contact with Minoans (q.v.) on Crete, and they incorporated many elements of Minoan civilization into their own culture. The period of their cultural and commercial domination of the region lasted from 1400 to 1100 BC, when the Dorian Greeks displaced the Mycenaeans. The epics of Homer are now regarded as giving a vivid picture of Mycenaean civilization at its height.

Mycerinus See Menkure

Myconius, Oswald See Basel, Confession

Myerson, Goldie See Meir, Golda

Mylae, Battle of Important Roman victory in a naval battle (260 BC), off southern Italy against the Carthaginians in the First Punic War (264–241 BC).

Myrdal, Gunnar 1898–. Swedish economist and sociologist. Myrdal's An American Dilemma (1944) was an important study of racial problems and their effect on American democracy. He received the Nobel Prize in Economics in 1974.

Myriocephalon, Battle of Decisive battle (1176) in wars between the Byzantines and Seljuk Turks. Byzantine forces under Murad I Comnenus attempted to recapture territory then occupied by the Turks. The Turks, under Kilij Arslan II, overwhelmed them at a mountain pass near the Myriocephalon fortress in Phrygia. The victory established the Turks in Anatolia.

Myrmidons Mythical Greek tribe. This warlike group from Thessaly was led by Achilles in the siege of Troy.

Myron 5th cent. BC. Greek sculptor. Myron was renowned for his statues of athletes in action, the most famous of which was his Discus Thrower (Discobolus).

Mysia See Pergamum

Mysore Wars Series of four wars (1767–99) fought in India against British rule. In 1761 the Muslim leader Haidar Ali (1722–82) seized power in Mysore and began to increase his control over the region. He waged the first war (1767–69) against the East India Company, but gained little. In the second war (1780–84), he fought the British with French aid. Upon his death (1782) his son Sahib Tipu (d. 1799) became ruler and continued the struggle. In the third war (1790–92), Tipu was defeated by the British under Lord C. Cornwallis and lost half his territory. The fourth war (1799) ended in the death of Tipu and restoration of the native monarchy in Mysore.

Mysteries Ancient religious cults that supplemented the official Greco-Roman paganism. The best-known Mystery cults were the Eleusinian (q.v.), Orphic (q.v.), and Dionysiac. They usually included initiation into secret "knowledge," including rites of purification and the reenactment of sacred dramas.

mysticism Religious doctrine. Mysticism is the belief that a person can attain direct communication with God through spiritual, intuitive, or transcendental means. This communion of a person's spirit with God results in a feeling of being at one with the universe and is often accompanied by spiritual ecstasy. Mysticism has been an element in many religions, including Christianity.

N

Nabataeans Ancient Arabian people. The Nabateans were a Semitic people who lived on the trade route between Syria and Arabia. This strategic position enabled them to become wealthy by charging trade duties. The Roman emperor Trajan put an end to Nabataean autonomy in AD 105 and formed the Roman province Arabia Petraea.

Nabis Group of French artists of the 1890s, including Pierre Bonnard (1867–1947) and M. Denis, who derived their name from the Hebrew word for prophet. They are characterized by their use of bold colors over flat areas and a common dislike of impressionism (q.v.).

Nabokov, Vladimir 1899–1977. Russian-born American writer. Nabokov is best known for his novels Lolita and Pale Fire, his vivid and expressive style, and his often bizarre subject matter.

Nabonidus d. 583? BC. Last king of Babylonia (*c*556–538 BC). Nabonidus coruled with his son Belshazzar. He allied himself unsuccessfully with Croesus of Lydia against Cyrus the Great of Persia.

Naboplassar fl. 7th cent. BC. Babylonian king (625–605 BC). He ended Assyrian control of Babylonia and thus founded (625) the Chaldaean Empire. He warred against Necho II of Egypt.

Naboth Old Testament figure. When Naboth would not give King Ahab his vineyard, Ahab's wife, Jezebel, had him slain. The term "Naboth's vineyard" is thus used to describe property wrongfully coveted by another.

Nabu ⟨Nebo⟩ Middle Eastern mythical god. Nabu was the god of learning and patron of writing in both the Assyrian and Babylonian cultures, and hence was the patron of priests and scribes.

Nadab In the Old Testament, the son of Aaron. He was a priest slain with his brother Abihu for offering "strange fire" in sacrifice (Leviticus 10).

Nader, Ralph 1934–. US lawyer and consumer advocate. His publication Unsafe at Any Speed (1965), attacking the auto industry, not only prompted legislation on auto safety but launched him on a highly active career as a consumer advocate and critic of government.

Nader Shah See Nadir Shah

Nadir Shah ⟨Nader Shah⟩ 1688–1747. Shah of Persia (1736–47). Originally a soldier, he usurped the throne, successfully warred with the Turks, sacked Delhi and Lahore, and seized the Koh-i-noor diamond and the Peacock Throne. He is considered the last of the great Asian conquerers.

Näfels, Battle of Battle in the Austrian-Swiss Wars, fought on April 9, 1388. The Swiss ambushed and defeated the much larger Austrian invasion force at this central Swiss town. It helped lead to a 20-year truce that virtually assured the independence of the Swiss cantons under the Holy Roman Empire.

Nagano, Osami 1880–1947. Japanese admiral. Nagano ordered and organized the 1941 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor (q.v.), which brought America into WW II. He was indicted as a war criminal and died while on trial.

Nagarjuna AD *c*150–*c*250. Indian Buddhist philosopher. Nagarjuna founded the Madhyamika (Middle Path) school of Buddhism, and was especially noted for his concept of "emptiness."

Nagasaki Japanese city (pop. 421,100), one of Japan's most important ports and a steel and shipbuilding center. Much of it was destroyed by the second atomic bomb, dropped Aug. 9, 1945, which ended WW II.

Nagoda Compromise agreement (Sept., 1868) by which Croatia was rejoined with Hungary in the Austro-Hungarian Dual Monarchy. Croatia, independent of Hungary since 1848, was granted a large measure of autonomy in return for accepting union with Hungary and a governor named by Hungary. The agreement remained in force until WW I.

Naguib, Muhammad 1901–. Egyptian general and political leader. He took part in the Egyptian revolution (July 23, 1952) that deposed King Farouk I and became premier of the new, military regime. In 1954 he was removed from power and replaced by G. A. Nasser.

Nagy, Imre 1896–1958. Hungarian Communist premier. Nagy was premier (1953–55) but was forced out by Soviet pressure. He was recalled during the 1956 Hungarian Revolution (q.v.) but was executed when the USSR put down the rebellion.

Nagyvarad, Peace of Short-lived agreement concluded on Feb. 24, 1538, dividing Hungary between Ferdinand of Hapsburg and John Zápolya, who contended for the Hungarian throne following the death of King Louis II (1526) at the Battle of Mohacs.

Nahas Pasha, Mustafa el- 1876–1965. Egyptian politician. He led the nationalist Wafd party (q.v.) and was prime minister five times between 1928 and 1952.

Nairobi Capital and largest city (pop. 818,000) of Kenya. It is linked by road to the rest of the country and is particularly famous for Nairobi National Park, a major wildlife sanctuary. Beginning as a waterhole for the pastoral Masai tribe, Nairobi became the capital of the British East African Protectorate in 1905.

Naismith, James A. 1861–1939. American athletic director. While a physical education instructor, Naismith invented the game of basketball in 1891.

Nakaz See Instruction of Catherine the Great

Namur, sieges of Important battles fought at Namur in south-central Belgium, at the confluence of the Meuse and Sambre rivers. 1. In the War of the Grand Alliance (q.v.), Namur resisted for 26 days before surrendering on June 5, 1692, to a French force that lost 2,600 men against twice that number of casualties in the city. On Sept. 1, 1695, the Dutch retook Namur after a two-month siege, losing 18,000 men to half that number of French casualties. 2. In WW I, 37,000 Belgian defenders held out for five days against 100,000 Germans before surrendering on Aug. 25, 1914.

Nanak 1469–1539. Indian religious leader and founder of the Sikhs (q.v.). Born a Hindu, he came to regard some Hindu practices and beliefs as superstitious, especially when compared to those of the Muslims, by whom he was influenced. He founded the Sikhs as a bridge between the two religions.

Nanking Chinese city (pop. 1,420,000), located in east-central China on the Yangtze River and serving several times as China's capital. It was the seat of the puppet government (1938–45) established by the Japanese after their capture of the city in 1937, which was followed by the brutality known as "the rape of Nanking." Sun Yat-sen is buried there.

Nansen, Fridtjof 1861–1930. Norwegian explorer and statesman who promoted the separation of Norway from Sweden. His arctic expeditions furnished much valuable information about the North Pole. He won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1922 for Russian relief work.

Nantes, Edict of See Edict of Nantes

Naphtali Son of Jacob. He was the father of one of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Its territory was located near the Sea of Galilee.

Napier, John 1550–1617. Scottish mathematician. Napier invented the logarithm. He introduced Napier's rods for use in counting and decimal points for writing fractions.

Napier of Magdala, Robert Cornelis, 1st Baron 1810–90. British soldier. Napier fought in the Sikh Wars (q.v.) and the Indian Mutiny, captured Magdala in Ethiopia, and was commander in chief in India (1870–76).

Naples Italian city (pop. 1,225,300) located in southwestern Italy, on the Bay of Naples. It is one of Italy's busiest ports. Settled *c*600 BC by Greeks, Naples has been successively dominated by Romans, Byzantines, Muslims, Normans, Goths, Austrians, and the French. Mount Vesuvius stands nearby, as do the excavations of ancient Pompeii (q.v.) and Herculaneum. The famous San Carlo Opera House has functioned there since 1737.

Naples, kingdom of Former kingdom in Italy. The kingdom of Naples, often united with Sicily, dominated southern Italy from the Middle Ages until 1860. Roger II unified the region and declared himself king of Sicily and Apulia (1130). Because the area was of strategic naval and commercial importance, it became the focus of frequent power struggles. At various times the region was ruled by the Normans, the Hohenstaufens, the Angevins, the Spanish, and the Bourbons. Napoleon overthrew the latter, renaming Naples the Parthenopian Republic (1799). The Bourbons were restored by Admiral H. Nelson later that year but were routed again by Napoleon in 1806. The Bourbons again resumed the throne in 1816, renaming it the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies (q.v.). The area was united with the rest of Italy by G. Garibaldi (1860).

Napoleon I ⟨Napoleon Bonaparte⟩ 1769–1821. Emperor of the French (1804–14). One of the great conquerors of all time and a gifted administrator as well, Napoleon created a short-lived French empire that included virtually all of continental Europe. By his conquests, he helped to spread liberal reforms instituted in France and thereby affected the subsequent development of modern Europe. Napoleon was born in Corsica, became an artillery officer in the French Army (1785), and served with the republican army during the French Revolutionary Wars (q.v.). Napoleon was given command of the republican army in Italy (1796). He quickly reorganized the units under his command into an effective fighting force, and his Italian campaign (1796–97) was overwhelmingly successful.

Napoleon's campaign in Egypt (1798–99) proved disastrous. At the same time, France's armies on the Continent suffered serious reverses, and the revolutionary government was on the verge of collapse. Napoleon returned to France and, with the aid of his brother, Lucien Bonaparte, and Joseph Sieyes, overthrew the Directory (Nov. 9, 1799). Napoleon was given dictatorial powers as head of the Consulate (q.v.). He consolidated his position and from 1800 to 1802 brought the French Revolutionary Wars to a successful conclusion.

In following years he instituted reforms in education, law—notably the Code Napoleon (q.v.)—and government. He also restored relations with the church (1801), severed during the French Revolution. Napoleon seized on the opportunity presented (1804) by an assassination plot against him (by G. Cadoudal and others) and made himself emperor. He was crowned by the pope (Dec. 2) at Paris. With the empire (q.v.) thus established, Napoleon set about creating a nobility and a court. He ultimately named rulers to various states (notably Spain, Holland, Naples, and Sweden). But when he made himself king of Italy (1805), the British (already at war with him) and other powers organized against him and the Napoleonic Wars (q.v.) broke out.

Napoleon enjoyed his greatest military successes during these wars (notably at the Battle of Austerlitz), and by about 1808 he had extended French control throughout the Continent. But his invasion of Russia proved disatrous. Napoleon marched into Russia (June, 1812) with some 500,000 troops and hardly managed to escape (Nov., 1812) with fewer than 50,000 troops. The defeat cost Napoleon his empire. One by one former allies joined the coalition of powers against him and by Mar., 1814, the Napoleonic Wars had come to a close. Napoleon abdicated (Apr. 11, 1814) and was exiled to the island of Elba.

Napoleon's final defeat did not come until 1815, however. In that year he returned to France and triumphantly entered Paris (Mar. 20). Thus began his famous Hundred Days (q.v.) in which he attempted to reestablish his empire. Defeated utterly at Waterloo, Napoleon again abdicated (June 22, 1815) and lived out the rest of his life in exile on the island of St. Helena.

Napoleon II 1811–32. Titular king of Rome. He was the son of Napoleon and Marie Louise. After his father's 1815 abdication, he was brought to his mother's land, Austria, where he remained a virtual prisoner until he died of tuberculosis. He was used as a pawn by C. von Metternich in bargaining with France.

Napoleon III 1808–73. Emperor of the French, nephew of Napoleon I and son of L. Bonaparte. After two unsuccessful attempts to seize power, he was elected French president in 1848. He proclaimed himself emperor in 1852 and inaugurated the Second Empire (q.v.). His foreign and domestic policies were popular until 1860, when he was forced to liberalize his government. He was captured during the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71), deposed, and died in exile.

Napoleonic Code See Code Napoleon

Napoleonic Wars Wars fought (1803–15) by Napoleon I of France against various European powers. The Napoleonic Wars followed an earlier series of wars (1792–1802), the French Revolutionary Wars (q.v.). The French Revolutionary Wars had helped bring Napoleon to power and made France the most powerful nation on the European continent. But Napoleon was unable to match the British navy, and the British remained a continuing threat to his dominance of Europe. Mutual distrust finally resulted in declaration of war (1803) between France and Britain and, in the years following, various coalitions of European states tried unsuccessfully to defeat Napoleon. Napoleon soon extended his French empire across nearly all of continental Europe. But his ill-fated invasion (1812) of Russia, a former ally, proved to be his undoing. Defeated (1814), Napoleon was forced into exile. He returned to power briefly during his famous Hundred Days (q.v.), only to meet his final defeat at Waterloo. Key events in the Napoleonic Wars include:

1803 Britain and France again at war (May); British, suspicious of Napoleon's designs, refused to evacuate Malta (by the Treaty of Amiens) and thus provoked war.

1803 British, with superior navy, captured French overseas colonies; Napoleon, with superior land army, cut British trade with continental Europe and began assembling forces to invade Britain.

1804 British secured informal agreement with Russia for coalition against Napoleon.

1804 French empire proclaimed; Napoleon crowned himself emperor (Dec. 2).

1805 Napoleon proclaimed himself King of Italy and annexed Genoa and the Ligurian Republic; brought Austria into coalition against France.

1805 Third Coalition formed; Russia joined Britain (Apr. 11) and Austria then joined both (Aug. 9); Spain allied itself with France.

1805 Battle of Trafalgar: Adm. H. Nelson destroyed (Oct. 21) the 33-ship combined Spanish-French fleet; Nelson killed but Napoleon's invasion of Britain henceforth impossible.

1805 Battles of Ulm (Oct. 20) and of Austerlitz (Dec. 3): Napoleon crushed superior Austrian-Russian forces.

1805 Treaty of Pressburg: Austria yielded Venice and Dalmatian coast to France, and Tirol and Vorarlberg to Bavaria (Dec. 26); Austria forced out of the coalition.

1806 Joseph Napoleon installed as king of Naples (southern Italy); former Bourbon rulers forced to flee to Sicily, where the British gave them protection.

1806 Confederation of the Rhine, composed of German states organized by Napoleon, formally ended the Holy Roman Empire.

1806 Napoleon created the kingdom of Holland.

1806 British halted attempted French invasion of Sicily at the Battle of Maida (July 4).

1806–12 Russo-Turkish War; Ottoman Turks turned against the Russians at French urging.

1806 Fourth Coalition: Prussia, now allied with Russia, declared war on France (Oct. 8).

1806 Napoleon was victorious over superior Prussian armies at Jena-Auerstadt (Oct. 14); Napoleon occupied Berlin, the Prussian capital.

1806–12 Napoleon instituted Continental System, forbidding all to trade with Britain; established by Berlin Decree (Nov. 21, 1806).

1807 Battle of Eylau proved inconclusive (Feb. 8) as Russians attempted to aid Prussia.

1807 Napoleon defeated a large Russian force at the Battle of Friedland in East Prussia; victory led to the Treaties of Tilsit. (June 14).

1807 Treaties of Tilsit; Russia made an ally of France, and Prussia forced to join Continental System (July 7–9), among other concessions.

1807 Grand Duchy of Warsaw created by Napoleon.

1807 Napoleon created the kingdom of Westphalia from Prussian and Hanoverian lands.

1807 British attacked Copenhagen (Sept.); Denmark declared war against Britain.

1807 Treaty of Fontainebleau (Oct. 27); Spanish government allowed French troops to cross Spain to invade Britain's ally Portugal.

1807 Portugal occupied by French; Portuguese court removed to Brazil (Nov.).

1807 Orders in Council issued (Nov.-Dec.) by British, instituting a blockade of Napoleonic Europe.

1807 Milan Decree issued (Dec. 17) by Napoleon; ships that dealt with Great Britain lost their neutrality.

1808 Revolt by Spanish at Aranjuez (Mar.) led to dismissal of Godoy and abdication of Charles IV (May).

1808 Napoleon appointed his brother, Joseph, king of Spain (June); French troops occupied Madrid (July 20); Spanish rebelled and sent the French into retreat.

1808 Congress of Erfurt (Sept.); meeting between Napoleon and Russian czar Alexander I to reaffirm alliance.

1808–14 Peninsular War; Napoleon led a new invasion of Spain, while the British invaded Portugal; in the long campaign that followed, the French were finally driven out of Portugal and Spain.

1809 Fifth Coalition; Austria, allied with Britain, renewed the war on land in the east (Apr.).

1809 Napoleon defeated Austrian forces at Battle of Abensberg-Eckmühl (Apr. 23).

1809 Napoleon annexed the Papal States.

1809 Napoleon suffered his first major military defeat at the Battle of Aspern-Essling in Austria (May 21–22).

1809 Napoleon victorious in the bloody Battle of Wagram in Austria; prevented formation of new coalition against him (July 5–6).

1809 Pope Pius VII arrested (July) by Napoleon; the pope had excommunicated him for annexing the Papal States.

1809 Peace of Schönbrunn concluded by Napoleon with Austria; France gained some 32,000 square miles of Austrian territory (Oct. 14).

1810 Napoleon married Marie Louise, daughter of Austrian emperor Francis II, after divorcing Josephine.

1810 Napoleon annexed Holland.

1810 Czar Alexander I withdrew from the Continental System (Dec. 31).

1812 War of 1812, between the US and Britain, broke out (June 18); US Commerce had suffered as a result of French and British harassment of neutral shipping; war against Britain lasted to 1815.

1812 Napoleon assembled some 600,000 men in the Grand Army and invaded Russia (June 24); Russians, led by M. Kutuzov and Prince Barclay de Tolly, adopted scorched-earth policy as they retreated eastward before Napoleon's army.

1812 Battle of Borodino (Sept. 7); narrow victory for Napoleon; enabled Napoleon to march unopposed into Moscow (Sept. 14).

1812 Russians burned Moscow (Sept. 15–19).

1812 Napoleon remained at Moscow (Sept.–Oct.), waiting for Russians to come to terms; his overtures rejected.

1812 Napoleon ordered the retreat from Moscow (Oct. 19); Grand Army harassed by Russian forces throughout the retreat.

1812 Onset of the Russian winter hampered French retreat; cold weather, constant attacks by Russians, and lack of supplies seriously weakened Napoleon's army; French suffered heavy losses.

1812 Berezina River Crossing (Nov. 26–28); Napoleon's forces suffered heavy losses while crossing this Russian river; French retreat became a rout. Napoleon abandoned his troops and made for Paris (Dec. 5); only some 30,000 of his troops survived his retreat.

1813–14 War of Liberation; Prussia, Russia, Sweden, Austria, and Britain eventually participated in defeating Napoleon.

1813 Prussia, again allied with Russia, declared war on France (Mar.).

1813 Napoleon defeated (May 2) Prussians and Russians at the Battle of Lutzen, in Saxony.

1813 Battle of Bautzen; Russians and Prussians defeated by Napoleon (May 20–21).

1813 Sixth Coalition; Austria joined allies (Aug. 12); for the first time, Napoleon now faced Austria, Britain, Prussia, and Russia at the same time.

1813 Napoleon won his last major battle, at Dresden; fought against allied Austrian, Russian, and Prussian troops (Aug. 27).

1813 Battle of the Nations: the allies defeated Napoleon at Leipzig (Oct. 16–19).

1813–14 Invasion of France by the allies (Dec.); Paris occupied (Mar. 31).

1814 Napoleon abdicated (Apr. 11); Louis XVIII restored to French throne; Napoleon exiled to Elbe.

1814 Treaty of Paris formally ended hostilities after Napoleon's defeat; terms not harsh (May 30); boundaries restored to what they were in 1792; some colonies restored.

1814–15 Congress of Vienna in session; restored legitimate monarchs in Austria, Prussia, Spain, and in Italian kingdoms; created the kingdom of The Netherlands, kingdom of Poland (ruled by Russia), and the German Confederation; reestablished independent Switzerland; reached agreement to hold regular congresses to maintain peace.

1815 Hundred Days; Napoleon returned to Paris (Mar. 20) from exile and attempted to reestablish his empire (Mar.-June).

1815 King Louis XVIII fled and the French rallied to Napoleon; Napoleon instituted a liberal constitution; forced to fight by a new coalition against him, he invaded Belgium (June).

1815 French forces victorious at the Battle of Quatre Bras (June 16).

1815 Battle of Waterloo fought; marked Napoleon's final defeat (June 18).

1815 Abdication of Napoleon (June 22); Napoleon exiled to St. Helena in the south Atlantic; Louis was restored.

1815 Treaty of Paris formally ended hostilities after Napoleon's defeat; France submitted to loss of territories, payment of an indemnity, and occupation by allied armies (Nov. 20).

Nara Japanese city and prefecture (pop. 210,000), located on Honshu just north of Osaka. Nara is one of Japan's most historic and religious centers and was the first permanent capital of Japan. It has a 53-foot-high statue of Buddha, the largest in the world. It is also the resting place of Jimmu Tenno, the first Japanese emperor.

Narcissus Mythical character. Indifferent to the love of Echo, he was doomed by Nemesis to fall in love with and pine away for his own image, which he saw reflected in a pool.

Narodniki ⟨Populists⟩ Russian populist movement of the 19th century which advocated land for the peasants. Prevented by the police from active work in the villages, adherents of the movement formed a secret Land and Liberty society in 1876; the latter became dominated by its terroristic wing, the People's Will, which, in 1881, assassinated Czar Alexander II.

Narottama See Norodom

Narragansett Indians North American Indians whose language was of the Algonquian-Wakashan stock and who occupied present-day Rhode Island. One of their chiefs sold R. Williams the land on which he founded Providence. They were allied with the colonists in the 1637 Pequot War (q.v.) but declined in power along with other Indians after the 1638 King Philip's War (q.v.).

Narses AD *c*478–*c*573. Byzantine general and statesman. Narses conquered the Ostrogoths (q.v.) under Totila in AD 522. He served as prefect of Italy from 554 to 567, when he was removed by Justin II.

Narvaez, Ramon Maria 1800–68. Spanish general and statesman. He was a strong military supporter of Isabella II against the Carlists, and later overthrew B. Espartero. With brief intervals, he served as Isabella's premier from 1844 to 1851 and several times thereafter.

Naseby, Battle of English Civil War battle fought near Naseby in central England on June 14, 1645. Charles I's Cavalier army of around 7,000 engaged the Puritans' newly organized New Model Army (q.v.) of about 14,000 men, commanded by Sir T. Fairfax, with O. Cromwell commanding the cavalry. The Puritans routed the Cavaliers, whose infantry (some 3,500) were killed or captured.

Nash, Ogden 1902–71. American writer. Nash was best known for his humorous and satirical verses and for the lyrics of the Broadway musical One Touch of Venus.

Nash, Thomas See Nashe, Thomas

Nashe, Thomas ⟨Nash, Thomas⟩ 1567–1601. English dramatist and satirist, a master of scurrilous invective, Nash's anti-Puritanism plunged him into the Marprelate Controversy (q.v.). He and co-writer B. Jonson were imprisoned for their play The Isle of Dogs.

Nashville American city (pop. 455,700), the capital of Tennessee. It is a river port, as well as an agricultural and industrial city. It was founded 1779 and became state capital in 1843. The Hermitage, the residence of A. Jackson, is there.

Nashville, Battle of American Civil War battle. On Dec., 15–16, 1864, the Union army of Gen. G. Thomas defeated the Confederates, in the last major battle of the Civil War. Union losses were 400 killed and 1,740 wounded against total Confederate losses of around 15,000.

Naso, Publius Ovidius See Ovid

Nassau Former German duchy. Located in central West Germany, Nassau occupied parts of the present Hesse and Rhineland-Palatinate. It contributed future rulers to The Netherlands and Luxembourg, including the line of William I (the Silent) of Orange, who was also the ancestor of kings of England. Nassau was incorporated into Prussia (1866) after the Austro-Prussian War (q.v.).

Nassau Bahama city (pop. 120,000), located on New Providence Island in the Caribbean, and the capital of the Bahama Islands. Its healthful, temperate climate has made it an international tourist attraction. It was founded in the 1600s and for a period was a rendezvous for pirates.

Nassau, John Maurice of See John Maurice of Nassau

Nassau, Maurice of See Maurice of Nassau

Nasser, Gamal Abdel 1918–70. Egyptian statesman. Nasser assisted the 1952 coup d'état that ended the monarchy. He also ousted Gen. M. Naguib (1954), naming himself prime minister. He was elected and served as president of Egypt (1956–58) and of the United Arab Republic (1958–70). Strongly Muslim and nationalistic, he seized control of the Suez Canal (1956) provoking the Suez crisis (q.v.), established an alliance with the USSR, and fought the June, 1967, war against Israel. During his tenure he was the foremost symbol of Arab nationalism and resistance to Western domination.

Natal South African province, located in the eastern coastal region. Inhabited by the Zulus, it was discovered by V. da Gama in 1497 and was settled by the Boers in 1837 after their Great Trek. It became a British colony (1843) and, after the Boer War, it became part of South Africa (1910).

Nathan Biblical figure, a Hebrew prophet who lived during the time of Solomon and David. He rebuked David for the abduction of Bathsheba with a parable ("Thou art the man"), and his advice saved the kingdom for Solomon.

Nathanael Biblical figure. Nathanael was a disciple of Jesus and is believed to be an alternate name for Bartholomew, one of the Twelve Apostles.

Nation, Carry 1846–1911. American temperance crusader. Brandishing an ax, she smashed saloons, and endured countless beatings and over thirty arrests for her temperance movement activities (q.v.).

National Assembly The legislative assembly into which the States General constituted themselves June, 1789, during the French Revolution. The aim was to prepare a constitution (hence it is also called the Constituent Assembly). The National Assembly ultimately brought about creation of a constitutional monarchy (1791) and was superceded by the Legislative Assembly. (See also French Revolution [1789–91].)

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) Organization formed in 1909 to counteract the lynching of blacks by whites. Its first black leader was W. E. B. DuBois. Today it conducts legal and political civil rights activities. In the 1970s, with a membership of more than 400,000 in more than 1,500 local units, it maintained its position as the leading US civil rights organization. It was primarily responsible for bringing about the landmark 1954 US Supreme Court antisegregation decision Brown vs Board of Education of Topeka (q.v.).

National Convention French legislative body (Sept. 21, 1792–Oct. 25, 1795), successor to the Legislative Assembly (q.v.) during the French Revolution. Convened after the suspension of King Louis XVI, the National Convention established the republic and condemned Louis to death. It came under the control of the Jacobins, and then of M. Robespierre, who promoted the Reign of Terror (q.v.). The Thermidorian reaction in the Convention brought this bloody period to an end. The National Convention was replaced by the Directory (q.v.).

National Covenant Bond or engagement instituted by Scottish Presbyterians (Feb. 28, 1638) to observe and maintain their 1581 Confession of Faith. It was the result of England's King Charles I's efforts to impose the English liturgy upon the Scots. (See also Covenanters.)

National Front for the Liberation of the South See National Liberation Front

nationalism Political or social movement in which an individual's primary loyalty is given to the state. Arising with the formation of modern nation-states, nationalism became a major influence in the history of Europe in the 17th and 18th cents. Later it became a driving force in movements by national groups against imperial rule, such as in Ireland (19th cent.) and colonial states in Africa and Asia (20th cent.). Extreme nationalism also contributed to the rise of Fascism in Italy and National Socialism (Nazism) in Germany.

Nationalist China See Taiwan

National Labor Union See labor unions

National Liberation Front ⟨National Front for the Liberation of the South⟩ ⟨NLF⟩ Political and military organization formed (Dec. 20, 1960) to overthrow the South Vietnamese government and reunite North and South Vietnam. Reacting to abuses under the Diem regime in the South, both Communist and non-Communist Vietnamese joined the NLF, though the organization was clearly dominated by Communists. During the Vietnam War (q.v.), the NLF military forces, the Vietcong, proved highly successful in guerrilla operations against US and South Vietnamese forces. The NLF established a provisional rebel government in June, 1969, and secured the final conquest of the South in 1975.

National Prohibition Act See Volstead Act

National Republican party US political party (*c*1825–*c*1836). National Republicans were supporters of J. Q. Adams and nominated him in 1828 to oppose A. Jackson. In 1832, the party nominated H. Clay to oppose Jackson, and, after Clay's defeat, it went into decline. Party members included those connected with business, farm, and labor interests who supported high tariffs and a national bank. By 1836 they had merged with other anti-Jackson forces to create the Whig party (q.v.).

National Road ⟨Cumberland Road⟩ Major US highway to the Old Northwest, linking Cumberland, Maryland, and St. Louis, Missouri. Construction began with federal financing in 1811, and by 1833 the road extended to St. Louis. The highway was of major importance in settlement of the American West.

National Security Act US legislation enacted on July 24, 1947 (and amended on Aug. 10, 1949) that unified the US armed services, with joint chiefs of staff, under a single department headed by a secretary of defense at cabinet level. It established within the executive office of the president the National Security Council, with the president, vice-president, secretaries of state and defense, and others designated by the president as members. And it authorized and established the US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

National Socialism ⟨Nazism⟩ Political movement in Germany, the German counterpart of fascist movements that arose in Europe and elsewhere after WW I. National Socialism shared with other fascist movements the characteristics of extreme nationalism, militarism, determination to create a totalitarian state, formation of an elitist class, unswerving obedience to a single leader, and nationalistic expansionism. A. Hitler, leader of the German fascists, outlined many of the doctrines of National Socialism in his book, Mein Kampf. Racism was a particularly strong element in the German movement and centered on a fanatical belief in the existence of a "master race," composed of Germanic peoples.

It was the duty of the master race, Hitler preached, to dominate the world and eliminate so-called inferior races (particularly Jews and blacks). Hitler and others used this master race theory skillfully to play on popular fears (of Jews, of Communists) and to arouse German nationalistic spirit at a time when Germany was in the midst of political and economic crisis. Indeed, HItler's fanatical rhetoric (and effective political organization) won a large following for the National Socialism movement and gave Hitler control of the government. But his fanaticism had horrifying consequences. His militant nationalism led directly to WW II and the loss of millions of lives in bloody combat. His attempts to impose the "final solution" to purify the races led to mass extermination of millions of Jews and others (see Holocaust) in concentration camps. Germany's defeat in WW II effectively ended the National Socialism movement. (See also Nazi party; fascism.)

National Socialist German Workers' party See Nazi party

National Union Convention ⟨Arm-in-Arm Convention⟩ Meeting (Aug. 14–16, 1866) in Philadelphia of supporters of President A. Johnson to organize opposition to Radical Republicans (q.v.). Its candidates were soundly defeated by Radical Republicans in the 1866 congressional elections.

National Workshops See February Revolution

Nation of Islam See Black Muslims

Nations, Battle of See Leipzig, Battle of Nations League of International organization (1919–46) formed to maintain peace and security in the post-WW I world. Though the league generally failed in its aims during the 1930s, it provided a foundation for the UN organization that succeeded it. Provided for by the Paris Conference of 1919 (largely due to US President W. Wilson's efforts) and the Treaty of Versailles (1919), the league consisted of a secretariat, council, assembly, and the Permanent Court of International Justice. Original members included the WW I Allies and neutral nations, which were later joined by other nations. The US, however, did not join because of isolationist sentiment in Congress. This and the provision for unanimous assent in both the assembly and council seriously weakened the league. Though it was generally successful in social and economic matters, it failed to effectively promote disarmament. Then, beginning with Japan's occupation of Manchuria (1931), the inability of the league to prevent armed aggression became apparent. Other wars of aggression by Japan, Italy, and Germany followed in the 1930s and with the outbreak of WW II, the league collapsed. It was officially dissolved Jan., 1946.

naturalism Modern philosophical movement that seeks to explain all phenomena in natural, empirical terms, rejecting any metaphysical or supernatural casuality. The literary movement of the same name aims to present human life in similar objective, empirical terms, rejecting free will and spiritual factors, and is best exemplified in the novels of E. Zola.

natural rights Philosophical concept. Natural rights are inherent rights that cannot be taken away by a government. They are expressed in the Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Declaration of Independence (qq.v.), and, in the writings of such thinkers as J. Locke and T. Paine.

Navaho Indians ⟨Navajo Indians⟩ American Indian tribe of the Athapascan family of Indian languages. Originally nomadic, they settled in the American Southwest in the 17th cent. They pillaged settlements until subdued by K. Carson (1863–64), who destroyed their sheep and fruit trees. They were granted a 3.5 million-acre reservation in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah in 1878. By the 1970s they numbered more than 120,000 and hence were America's largest Indian tribe.

Navajo Indians See Navaho Indians

Navarino, Battle of Naval battle in the Greek War of Independence, fought on Oct. 20, 1827, in the Peloponnesian harbor of Navarino (now Pylos). Britain, France, and Russia sent 24 ships to the aid of Greece after the Turkish sultan Mahmud II had secured the help of an Egyptian fleet under Ibrahim Pasha to help quell the Greek revolt. The Egyptian-Turkish ships were bottled up in the harbor and more than 50 were sunk, with an allied loss of only 300 men against defenders' casualties of over 4,000. This was the last pitched battle fought between wooden sailing ships.

Navarre, kingdom of Spanish province. It was originally a Basque kingdom on both sides of the Pyrenees; the Spanish portion was annexed by Ferdinand the Catholic in 1515, while the French part was incorporated into France when Henry III of Navarre became Henry IV of France (1589). The historic kingdom reached its apex when its king, Sancho III, married the heiress of Castile and ruled over most of Christian Spain (1000–35).

Navarre, Margaret of See Margaret of Navarre

Navas de Tolosa, Battle of Las Important victory (1212) for the Spanish over the Almohads (North African Muslims) during the Christian reconquest of Spain. The Spanish, led by King Alphonso VIII of Léon and Castile, overwhelmed the Almohads on the plain of Las Navas de Tolosa in southern Spain.

Navigation Acts English legislation (14th and 19th cents.) designed to limit carrying trade to ships of England and English colonies. The first Navigation Act was passed in 1381 but could not be implemented because of a lack of ships. The era of an effective act dates from 1651, when a law aimed primarily at Dutch shipping began the practice of "enumerating" goods that could be shipped to England or its possessions only in their own ships. It contributed to the outbreak of the first Dutch War (1652–54). Enforcement of the acts, especially the 1664 act, by which English colonies could receive European goods shipped only via England, also contributed to unrest in the American colonies. These laws were especially effective during the 17th and 18th cents., and English carrying trade tonnage increased during this period. The acts were all eventually repealed (1849 and 1854).

Nayler, James 1618–60. English Quaker leader. His followers acclaimed him in the words, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Israel," as he rode into Bristol (1656). He was then imprisoned, pilloried, whipped, and branded for blasphemy (1656) in spite of his explanation that they were only worshiping the "Christ within him."

Nazareth Israeli city. Nazareth, in lower Galilee, is revered as the town in which Jesus spent his formative years. Its major industries today are tourism, agriculture, and textiles.

Nazi party ⟨National Socialist German Workers' party⟩ German political party, the instrument of A. Hitler's rise to power and the organ through which he exercised totalitarian control of the German state (1933–45). Founded (1919) as the German Worker's party, it was renamed and reorganized by Hitler along paramilitary lines (by creating the SA, or Nazi storm troops). He took complete control of it in 1921, and, with the aid of H. Goering, R. Hess, and (later) P. Goebbels, began to establish the Nazi themes (see National Socialism) of belligerent nationalism, anticommunism, and anti-Semitism. Hitler's first attempt (1924) to take power, the Munich Putsch (q.v.), failed, and, after a short jail term, he returned to lead the party. The decisive factor in the rise of the Nazi party was the economic collapse and Depression that began in 1929. The Nazis made significant gains in the Reichstag elections of 1930 and 1932, and, in Jan., 1933, Hitler was appointed chancellor. The Reichstag Fire (q.v.), in Feb., 1933, gave Hitler the pretext to suppress the Communists and other opponents. In late 1933, Hitler established the corporative state and made the Nazis the official ruling party. Then, by his Blood Purge (q.v.) of certain elements of the Nazi party, he established (1934) totalitarian control of the party and the state. Thereafter the party's history, marked by its involvement in WW II and the staggering loss of human life, was that of Germany until 1945. Among the organs of the Nazi party were the SS (Black Shirts, q.v.); the SD (Security Service), for espionage and control of the concentration camps; the Gestapo (q.v.); and the Hitler Youth organization.

Nearchus fl. 324 BC. Macedonian general. Nearchus was a friend of Alexander the Great and commanded a fleet of his on a voyage from the Indus River to the Persian Gulf in 325–324 BC. He later wrote an account of his journey.

Near East Term sometimes applied to the areas around the eastern Mediterranean, the southwestern parts of Asia, and northeast Africa. Today it is more often designated as the Middle East (q.v.).

Nebhapetre See Mentuhotep II

Nebo See Nabu

Nebraska State in the central US, the 37th state (pop. 1,570,000). The Spanish and French first visited the area, which was included in the Louisiana Purchase (q.v.) of 1803. Lewis and Clark explored the region, and fur traders set up the first settlements. It became a territory through the Kansas-Nebraska Act (q.v.) in 1854, and obtained its present boundaries in 1863. The Homestead Act (1862) and the railroad brought settlers and farmers, and, in 1867, it was admitted as a free state. The state constitution was adopted in 1875.

Nebuchadnezzar *c*630–562 BC. King of Babylon (605–562 BC), successor to his father, Nabopolassar. In 586 BC, he destroyed Jerusalem while putting down a revolt there and exiled most of its inhabitants to Babylon (Babylonian captivity, q.v.). He rebuilt most of the temples in his land and made Babylon, with its Hanging Gardens (q.v.), one of the most beautiful cities in the ancient world.

Necho d. 593 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (609–593 BC) of the 26th dynasty. After the fall of Ninevah (612 BC), he sought to aid the Assyrians against the Babylonians and conquered Syria and Palestine, defeating Josiah at Megiddo (608 BC). But he was himself defeated by Nebuchadnezzar at Carchemish in 605 BC. His defeat spelled the doom of Assyria. Forced to retire to Egypt, he repulsed an attempted invasion and later commissioned a Phoenician naval expedition that apparently circumnavigated Africa.

Necker, Jacques 1732–1804. Swiss-born French statesman and financier. As director of finances and the treasury in prerevolutionary France he tried but failed to restore fiscal soundness to the old regime. He was one of those who recommended calling the States General (q.v.), and his dismissal by Louis XVI was one of the causes of the seizure of the Bastille on July 14, 1789. His daughter was the writer Mme. G. de Staël.

Neerwinden, Battle of See Grand Alliance, War of the Nefertiti *c*1372–50 BC. Egyptian queen. She was the wife of Ikhnaton and influenced his religious reforms. A famous limestone bust depicting her head, found in 1912, is now in the Berlin Museum.

Negro Ethnic and racial term. Negro, meaning "black," is the name given by ethnologists to the brown-skinned peoples who originated in the regions of Africa south of the Sahara. From the 16th to 19th cents., European colonial powers used Negroes taken from Africa as slaves in their colonies. The movement to end slavery (q.v.) began in the late 17th cent. and was largely completed in the 19th cent (see abolition). During the civil rights movement (q.v.) of the 1960s in the US, the term "black" came into general use in preference to "Negro."

Nehemiah fl. 5th cent. BC. Ancient Jewish leader. He obtained permission from the Persians as governor extraordinary of Judaea to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem (444 BC). He also instituted religious reforms that became characteristic features of postexilic Judaism, as recounted in the Old Testament Book of Nehemiah.

Nehru, Jawaharlal 1889–1964. Indian statesman, a leader in the movement for India's independence, and India's first prime minister (1947–64). Nehru studied in England and was admitted to the bar (1912). Returning to India, he joined (1919) the nationalist movement for Indian independence from Britain led by M. Gandhi. With Gandhi's help, he became president (1929) of the Indian National Congress, and was reelected three times. During WW II he refused to support the British war effort and was imprisoned. When Indian independence was granted (1947), he became prime minister and minister of foreign affairs. He adopted a policy of nonalignment in international matters and promoted a domestic program of industrialization and socialization. He sought reorganization of the separate Indian states along linguistic lines. His administration was marked by conflict with Pakistan over Kashmir and by a Chinese invasion of India (1962).

Nehru-Liaqat Pact See Delhi Pact

Nekhtnebf I Ancient Egyptian pharaoh (380–361 BC) and founder of the 30th dynasty. He decisively repelled a Persian invasion force (374 BC).

Nelson, Horatio Nelson, Viscount 1758–1805. English admiral and national hero. His ships destroyed the French fleet (1798) at the Battle of the Nile (q.v.), stranding Napoleon's army in Egypt. At Trafalgar (q.v.), in 1805, his fleet annihilated a numerically superior French-Spanish fleet, ending Napoleon's hopes of subduing Britain. Nelson was killed at Trafalgar. He is celebrated by the Nelson Column in Trafalgar Square, London.

Nemea, Battle of See Corinthian War

Nemesis Greek mythical goddess. Nemesis was the avenging goddess of just retribution.

Nemirovich-Danchenko, Vladimir Ivanovich 1858–1943. Russian author and director. Together with Stanislavsky, he founded the Moscow Art Theater, which influenced European and American as well as Russian theater standards.

neoclassicism ⟨classic revival⟩ Artistic and architectural movement. The classic revival centered in Europe and America in the late 18th and early 19th cents. It was based on a reappreciation of the cultures of Greece and Rome. Examples of its architecture are the Washington Monument and the US Capitol.

Neolithic See Stone Age

Neoplatonism Philosophical school developed especially by Plotinus in Alexandria and Rome in the 3rd cent. AD. Based on Plato's teachings and containing elements of Oriental philosophy and mysticism, it was the last of the great pagan schools of thought. It taught belief in the One, a comprehensive deity, who gave the Logos (divine word) to individuals through emanation. Porphyry and Iamblichus were important exponents of Neoplatonism. Its influence declined after Justinian closed the Academy at Athens in AD 529, but it influenced both medieval and modern philosophy.

Neoptolemus Greek mythological warrior. Also called Pyrrhus, he was the son of Achilles and a hero of the Trojan War, in which he slew Priam at the altar of Zeus. He was later slain by Orestes at Delphi.

Neo-Pythagoreanism Philosophical movement that developed in the 1st cent. AD. It incorporated elements of the philosophy advanced (6th cent. BC) by Pythagoras, greatly emphasizing the mystical elements while borrowing from Jewish and Hellenistic philosophy.

Nepal Independent Himalayan kingdom situated between Tibet in the north, and India in the south and west. Located in Nepal is Mt. Everest, the highest peak in the world. Nepal's population includes a number of ethnic groups, among them the Sherpas, noted as mountain climbers and guides, and the Gurkhas, who became renowned as fighters in the British army. The Gurkhas gained prominence in Nepal, and in the 18th cent. invaded Tibet. Their invasion was defeated (1792) by the Tibetans and Chinese, and a subsequent treaty favored Tibet. A Gurkha invasion of India led to war (1814–16) with Great Britain. Again defeated, the Gurkhas were obliged by treaty to withdraw to roughly what has become Nepal's southern border. Great Britain affirmed Nepal's independence by treaty (1923). Nepal was ruled by a monarchy until 1951, when a constitutional monarchy was established. India maintained considerable influence in Nepal until the 1960s, when Nepal began to establish relations with China as well. A Sino-Nepalese treaty (1961) defined Nepal's border with Tibet. The country has been ruled since 1972 by King Birendra Bir Bikram Shah.

Neptune Roman mythical god. Neptune was the god of the sea and corresponds to the Greek god Poseidon. He is represented with a beard and carrying a trident.

Nerchinsk, Treaty of Agreement signed in 1689 between czarist Russia and the Manchu Empire of China involving trade concessions and territorial disputes. Russia gained trade access to Peking but lost her Amur Basin trading outposts. It was China's first settlement with a European power, and it governed basic Russo-Chinese relations until the mid-19th cent.

Nero ⟨Claudius Caesar⟩ AD 37–68. Roman emperor (AD 54–68), successor to Claudius I, who had married Nero's mother, Agrippina II, great-granddaughter of Augustus. His reign went well until his cruelty, vanity, and instability surfaced and he murdered his mother (AD 59) and his wife (AD 62). He blamed the Christians for the fire that destroyed much of Rome (64) (for which he was popularly believed responsible), and he began their persecution. He rebuilt the city, creating the mammoth Golden House (q.v.) as his palace. A plot against Nero (Pisonian conspiracy led by Gaius Piso) was uncovered in AD 65 and led to widespread execution, resulting in the deaths of Seneca and Lucan, among others. In 68, the legions and the Praetorian Guard revolted, and Nero committed suicide.

Neruda, Pablo 1904–73. Chilean poet and diplomat. A surrealist, he was an influential Spanish-language poet. Among his works are Twenty Love Poems and a Song of Despair, A New Decade, and Toward the Splendid City. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1971.

Nerva AD *c*30–98. Roman emperor (AD 96–98). He was consul in AD 71 and 90, was banished by Domitian, but succeeded to the throne after the latter's murder. He was a just ruler who accomplished reforms in laws and taxation; he adopted Trajan to be his successor.

Nervi, Pier Luigi 1891–1979. Italian architect and engineer. Nervi pioneered the use of "ferrocement," concrete-reinforced steel. Among his many well-known designs are the UNESCO building (Paris), the George Washington Bridge Bus Terminal (New York), and the Olympic Stadium (Rome).

Nesselrode, Karl Robert, Count 1780–1862. Russian statesman and diplomat. Guiding czarist foreign policy for some 40 years, he strongly favored the Holy Alliance (q.v.). He dispatched Russian troops to crush the Hungarian revolt of L. Kossuth (1849), but was unable to avert the Crimean War (q.v.).

Nestorianism Christian movement (5th cent. AD) that held Jesus Christ had two distinct personalities—divine and human—linked by a moral union. Advanced by Nestorius, this view was condemned by the Council of Ephesus (AD 431), which held that Jesus had both human and divine natures but was one person. Though Nestorianism declined in the West, it spread through the Middle East, Persia, India, and China, and there reached its height (7th–10th cents.) in the form of the Nestorian church. The church rapidly declined in these regions (13th and 14th cents.) following the failure of the Crusades and the ensuing persecution by Tamerlane of Christians in the East. Some Nestorians rejoined the Roman Catholic church (16th cent.) and became known as Chaldaeans.

Netherlands, The ⟨Kingdom of The Netherlands⟩ Country located in northwestern Europe on the coast of the North Sea. Its capital is Amsterdam; seat of government, The Hague. Originally part of the Carolingian Empire, the region of The Netherlands first passed to the Holy Roman Empire, and then to the personal domains of the Hapsburg family. The Netherlands at this time formed the northern part of the Low Countries (q.v.). The Netherlands gained independence (as the United Provinces) in the 16th cent. and in the 17th cent. formed a great commercial empire. Dutch culture also flourished in this period. In the 18th cent., Dutch power declined as a result of rivalries and wars with England and France. The modern kingdom of The Netherlands was created in 1815. Key dates in the history of The Netherlands include:

4TH–8TH CENT. Area subdued by the Franks; conversion to Christianity under Charlemagne.

9TH CENT. Break-up of the Carolingian Empire; area passed into the eastern (German) possessions of Lothair I, and hence eventually became a part of the Holy Roman Empire.

14TH–15TH CENT. Low Countries, including present-day Belgium, Luxembourg, and The Netherlands, came under the rule of the dukes of Burgundy.

1477 Marriage of Mary of Burgundy to Archduke Maximilian of Austria (May); this brought the Low Countries under the control of the Hapsburg family.

1555 Hapsburg Holy Roman Emperor Charles V presented the Low Countries to his son King Philip II of Spain.

1550s–60s Calvinism began to make inroads in the prosperous northern provinces—the area of the present-day Netherlands.

1560s Spanish attempted to impose Inquisition and thereby gain firm control over Low Countries, then agitating for more freedom.

1568 Revolt, led by William I the Silent, broke out in the northern provinces.

1572–74 Spanish driven out of the Low Countries.

1576 Pacification of Ghent; Low Countries united under William I's leadership.

FROM 1578 Spanish reconquered southern provinces of the Low Countries and reestablished Catholicism there.

1579 Union of Utrecht brought together the seven northern provinces (most of the present-day territory) as the United Provinces of The Netherlands; southern provinces became the Spanish Netherlands.

1581 Dutch declared independence from Spain by the Act of Abjuration (July 26).

1584 William of Orange assassinated; succeeded by his son Maurice of Nassau.

1585 England joined the United Provinces in the struggle against Spain.

1602 Dutch East India Company founded as a colonial trading company that would be the basis of the Dutch overseas empire.

1609–22 Twelve Years' Truce concluded with Spain; assured de facto independence to the United Provinces.

1618–48 The Low Countries became the principal theater of the Thirty Years' War.

1619–67 Dutch took control of Cape of Good Hope, Java, Sumatra, and the other islands of the Malay Archipelago (modern Indonesia).

1621 Dutch West India Company founded for colonizing and trade in the New World.

c1636 Dutch seized Ceylon and Malacca from the Portuguese.

1648 Treaty of Westphalia; Spain recognized the independence of the United Provinces at the end of the Thirty Years' War.

17TH CENT. Golden Age of Dutch culture, especially art and philosophy.

1652–54 First Dutch War with England, stemming from commercial rivalries.

1652–72 J. de Witt served as head of state.

1664–67 Second Dutch War with England; colony of New Amsterdam (later New York City) was lost but possession of Surinam was confirmed.

1667–68 War of Devolution; Netherlands invaded by France; Netherlands joined Triple Alliance against Louis XIV of France, thereby forcing Louis to end the War of Devolution.

1672–78 Third Dutch War; Louis XIV of France invaded the United Provinces; his French advance was halted when Dutch opened dikes around Amsterdam (1672); French driven out by 1673.

1672 William III of Orange made stadholder (ruler) of the United Provinces during the Third Dutch War; came to power after J. de Witt was murdered for attempting to negotiate with French invaders.

1688–97 War of the Grand Alliance; Dutch opposed France.

1689 William III of Orange became king of England.

1701–14 War of the Spanish Succession; Dutch opposed France.

1715 Treaty of Barrier established forts along Dutch border to contain France.

1747 William IV of Orange became hereditary stadholder (ruler), displacing republican party that had ruled from 1702.

1794 United Provinces overrun by French during French Revolutionary Wars.

1795–1806 Batavian Republic established by French revolutionaries.

1806–10 Kingdom of Holland established by Napoleon, who made his brother Louis its king.

1810 United Provinces annexed by France after King Louis was overthrown.

1815 Kingdom of The Netherlands formed by the Congress of Vienna; house of Orange provided rulers; part of Austrian Netherlands (roughly modern Belgium) joined to kingdom; the other part became the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

1815–40 William I reigned.

1830–31 Revolt in former Austrian Netherlands (1830); independent Belgium created.

1839 London Conference recognized Belgian independence.

1840–49 William II reigned.

1848 New liberal constitution promulgated.

1849–90 William III reigned; rapid industrialization of The Netherlands and spread of unions accompanied period of commercial prosperity.

1873–1904 Achinese War; Dutch colonial forces pacified northern Sumatra.

1890–1948 Wilhelmina reigned.

1899 First International Peace Conference held at The Hague; convened to resolve rules of war and the question of arms limitations.

1907 Second International Peace Conference; unsuccessful in resolving arms limitation; agreements reached on other aspects of land and sea warfare.

1914–18 WW I; Netherlands remained neutral.

1940 WW II; German surprise invasion (May); Rotterdam destroyed by air attacks.

1940–45 German occupation; reign of terror instituted by Germans; mass executions used in retaliation for resistance by Dutch underground; nearly all Dutch Jews killed in concentration camps.

1945 The Netherlands became a member of the UN.

1948–80 Queen Juliana reigned, following abdication of her mother, Queen Wilhelmina.

1949 The Netherlands became founding member of NATO.

1949 Indonesia granted its independence after a four-year war.

1954 Surinam and Netherlands Antilles granted political equality with The Netherlands.

1957 Became a member of newly organized European Economic Community.

1963 Dutch ceded the western half of New Guinea ("West Irian") to Indonesia.

1975 Surinam granted independence (Nov. 25), leaving the Netherlands Antilles as the only remaining possession of the once vast Dutch Empire.

1976 Queen Juliana's husband, Prince Bernhard, disgraced in scandal over dealings with Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

1980 Queen Beatrix crowned (Apr. 30), following the abdication of her mother, Queen Juliana.

Netherlands, Spanish and Austrian Region corresponding approximately to modern Luxembourg and Belgium. The region came under control (15th cent.) of the Hapsburgs as part of their domains known as the Low Countries (Netherlands, Belgium, and Luxembourg). The northern provinces of the Low Countries gained independence as the United Provinces (later called The Netherlands) during the revolt of 1581. The southern part remained under control of the Spanish Hapsburgs and thenceforth became known as the Spanish Netherlands. In 1714, however, the area was ceded to Austria by the Peace of Utrecht. It was called the Austrian Netherlands from that time until it was conquered by the French (1794), during the French Revolutionary Wars. In 1815, after Napoleon's downfall, the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg was created from a part of this territory and the remainder was united with The Netherlands. But the union was short-lived and, following a rebellion against The Netherlands, independent Belgium was formed (1831).

Neuilly, Treaty of This treaty between Bulgaria and the Allies was signed Nov. 27, 1919, after WW I. Bulgaria ceded lands to Yugoslavia, Greece, and Romania, paid reparations, and limited its army to 20,000 men.

Neumann, John von 1903–57. Hungarian-born American mathematician. Neumann worked on the atomic bomb, designed computers, and cowrote The Theory of Games and Economic Behavior.

Neustria Western part of the Merovingian Frankish kingdom, located in what is now northwestern France and including Paris. Formed by Clovis I (6th cent.) when he divided his domains among his descendants, Neustria was involved in dynastic wars with the neighboring Frankish kingdom of Austrasia (q.v.). The continuing struggle between the monarchs permitted the mayors of the palace to exercise real power, and, in 687, the Austrasian mayor of the palace, Pepin of Heristal, permanently united Neustria with Austrasia. (See also Merovingians.)

Neutrality Act Act of the US Congress approved on August 31, 1935, and amended in 1936, 1937, and 1939. The aim of this legislation was to keep the US out of war by prohibiting the sale or transport of war goods or the travel of Americans in belligerent countries or on belligerent carriers. These acts had become a dead letter even before the US entry into WW II in 1941.

Neutral Nation North American Indians inhabiting the northern shore of Lake Erie. This branch of the Iroquois attempted to remain neutral in the Huron-Iroquois War. But in 1649, when some Hurons joined them, the Iroquois Confederacy destroyed them all.

Neuve-Chapelle, Battle of British offensive (Mar. 10–13, 1915) on the Western Front during WW I. Under the over-all command of British field marshal Sir John French, the British unleashed one of the war's first mass artillery barrages against German positions around the town of Neuve-Chapelle in northern France. British forces then took the town, but their offensive was soon contained by the Germans.

Neva, Battle of the Battle fought July 15, 1240 on the Neva River, near what is now Leningrad, in which Alexander, prince of Novgorod, decisively defeated a Swedish invasion. For this he received the surname Nevsky.

Nevada US western state (pop. 799,184), the 36th state. Although the area was crossed by many on their way to California, it was first really explored by J. C. Frémont (1843–45). It was ceded to the US by Mexico (1848) after the Mexican War (q.v.) and became part of the Utah Territory (1850). The discovery of gold and silver in the Comstock Lode resulted in several new settlements, and Nevada became a separate territory in 1861. In 1864, it adopted its present constitution and was admitted to the Union. Mostly semi-arid, the state is noted for its mineral wealth and legalized gambling.

Neville, Ralph, 1st earl of Westmorland 1364–1425. English nobleman. Neville supported his brother-in-law Henry IV against Richard II (1399) and put down the revolts of H. Percy, in 1403, and Richard Scrope (1350–1405), in 1405. His grandsons were kings Edward IV and Richard III.

Neville, Richard, earl of Warwick 1428–71. English nobleman, grandson of Ralph Neville. Called "the Kingmaker," he aided the Yorks in the Wars of the Roses (q.v.), but turned against Edward IV. He was killed aiding George, duke of Clarence.

Neville's Cross, Battle of English victory in the English-Scottish wars, fought near Durham, England, on Oct. 17, 1346. David II of Scotland invaded England while Edward III was in France, but the English overwhelmed the invaders with archers and spearmen. David himself was captured and held for ransom.

New Amsterdam Dutch colonial settlement in present-day New York State. The Dutch colonized the area at the mouth of the Hudson River (1624–64). It served as the capital of New Netherland until it was captured by Britain (1664) and renamed New York.

Newburgh Letters See Armstrong, John

New Brunswick Eastern Canadian province (pop. 709,100), one of the Maritime Provinces. Although explored in 1525 by the Portuguese, it was settled by the French under S. de Champlain and the sieur de Monts in 1604. Under the French, the area of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick was called Acadia (q.v.), and when the British gained control after the French and Indian Wars (q.v.), both territories were known as Nova Scotia. Many Loyalists from New England settled there after the American Revolution, and it became a separate province in 1784. In 1867, it joined with other provinces to form the Dominion of Canada. The province is known for its agriculture, forests, and fishing.

Newcastle, Thomas Pelham-Holles, duke of 1693–1768. English prime minister. Newcastle's weakness during the Seven Years' War (q.v.) with France forced his resignation in 1756, but he returned the next year in a political coalition with W. Pitt. He was ineffective in office but skilled in the use of patronage in gaining majorities for Pitt, R. Walpole, and others.

New Church See Church of the New Jerusalem

New Deal Name for the program of sweeping social and economic reforms initiated (1933–39) by US Pres. F. Roosevelt during the Depression years. The fundamental premise of the New Deal, that federal government intervention to protect the social and economic welfare of the people was justified, represented a major shift in US government policy and resulted in a trend toward social reform legislation that continued long after the Depression years. Nevertheless, the rapidly worsening Depression demanded new solutions. When Roosevelt took office (1933), he called a special session of Congress which (during Roosevelt's famous Hundred Days) enacted a plethora of reform legislation. Among the measures passed were the Emergency Banking Relief Act (Mar. 9), to prevent the complete collapse of the US banking system; the act creating the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) (Mar. 31), to provide 250,000 jobs; the act abandoning the gold standard (Apr. 19); the Agricultural Adjustment Act (AAA) (May 12), to provide farm subsidies; the act creating the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) (May 18); the Home Owners Refinancing Act (June 13); and the National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA) (June 16), to aid business and labor. Reform measures passed after the Hundred Days included the repeal of Prohibition (Dec. 5, 1933); the act creating the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) (June 6, 1934); and the act creating the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) (June 28, 1934). This completed what is traditionally considered the First New Deal (1933–34). Roosevelt's Second New Deal (1935–39) was marked by still more reform legislation and by growing judicial and political opposition to his programs. The Supreme Court struck down some of Roosevelt's programs (AAA, NIRA) in the years 1935 to 1937 and this gave rise to Roosevelt's abortive plan to "pack" the court with his appointees (1937). But the great bulk of New Deal legislation remained in force. Among the reforms of the Second New Deal were the act creating the Works Progress Administration (WPA) (Apr. 8, 1935), that ultimately employed 8.5 million Americans; the National Labor Relations Act (July 5, 1935), guaranteeing workers the right to organize and bargain collectively; the Social Security Act (Aug. 14, 1935); and the Fair Labor Standards Act (June 25, 1938), guaranteeing a 40-hour work week and minimum wage. Despite initial opposition, much of the New Deal legislation has survived and has been added to in succeeding generations. The impact of these reforms on modern American society and politics has been enormous.

New Economic Policy Russian Communist economic policy that allowed limited free enterprise such as small businesses and sale of surpluses by peasants. Instituted by N. Lenin in Mar., 1921, to relax tensions and gain support for the regime, it followed the earlier period of "war communism" characterized by forced requisitions of goods, confiscation of capital, nationalization, etc. The NEP was replaced by the first Five-Year Plan (q.v.) in 1928.

New Empire See New Kingdom

New England Name given to the northeastern area of the United States. It includes the states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

New England Confederation Confederation formed in 1643 between the colonies of Massachusetts Bay, Plymouth, Connecticut, and New Haven. It was formed to provide for common interests and defense. The first experiment in federation in America, it was dissolved with the revocation of the Massachusetts charter in 1684.

Newfoundland Island off the eastern coast of Canada, which with Labrador forms the tenth Canadian province (pop. 583,600). It was discovered in 1497 by J. Cabot and became the major fishery, which it remains today. It became a province in 1949.

New France North American territory colonized by France (*c*1600–1763). The major settlements were in Canada, along the St. Lawrence, with Montreal and Quebec as the principal ones. Part of Maine and sections along the Mississippi and Great Lakes basins were also settled and claimed.

New Freedom US political term. It was coined for the presidential campaign of W. Wilson, the winning candidate (1912). It called for a renewed emphasis on individual economic initiative and competition.

New Frontier US campaign term employed by J. F. Kennedy during his presidency (1961–63) to encourage a spirit of challenge and greater opportunity to the American people.

Newgate Once a London guardhouse, Newgate became a famous prison and an execution site from the 15th cent. It was the scene of many riots and fires before it was demolished in 1902.

New Granada New Granada was a Spanish colonial viceroyalty in South America. It included what is now Colombia, Equador, Panama, and Venezuela. Originally part of the viceroyalty of Peru, it was created as the separate viceroyalty of New Granada in the 18th cent.

New Guinea, Territory of See Papua New Guinea

New Hampshire Northeastern US state. One of the New England states (pop. 920,610), the 9th state. It was originally explored by Martin Pring (1603); the first settlements were at Dover and Portsmouth. The area was governed by Massachusetts (1641–43), and, even when made a separate colony (1679), New Hampshire was under the Massachusetts governor until 1741. In 1782, it gave up its claim to Vermont, and the population increased as lumber camps were established. The first colony to declare its independence, New Hampshire became a state in 1788 and adopted its constitution in 1792. It was one of the cradles of the Industrial Revolution in the US. Its early presidential primary makes the state an important arena for aspiring presidential candidates, and national electoral trends often become evident there.

New Hampshire Grants Land claimed by both New York and New Hampshire colonies. E. Allen and his Green Mountain Boys (q.v.) established its independence as Vermont in 1777.

New Harmony See Harmony Society

Ne Win, U ⟨Thakin Shu Maung⟩ 1911–. Burmese military and political leader. As a military commander he played a leading role in achieving Burma's independence from Britain (1948). In 1962 he overthrew the government of U Nu and established a military junta that dominated Burmese politics in the next decades. He remained in power until 1981.

New Jersey US eastern state (pop. 7,364,200), the 3d state. The Dutch and Swedes established the first colonies in the region, which was taken by the English in 1664. It was under proprietary rule until it was made a royal province in 1702. It was ruled by the governor of New York until 1738. In 1776, New Jersey declared itself a state and was the scene of several important battles in the American Revolution, especially at Princeton and Trenton. It ratified the US Constitution in 1787 and adopted its present state constitution in 1947. It is a major industrial region and transportation hub.

New Jerusalem, Church of the See Church of the New Jerusalem

New Kingdom ⟨New Empire⟩ Period of ancient Egyptian history (1580–1085 BC), which included the 18th–20th dynasties. The New Kingdom began after the overthrow of the Hyksos (q.v.). Thebes was made capital. The pharaohs centralized power in their own hands and by their conquests brought the Egyptian empire to its greatest extent (parts of Asia included). During this period such pharaohs as Thutmose I and Thutmose III proved themselves great conquerors. Many temples were built and the pharaoh Ikhnaton briefly established a monotheistic religion in Egypt. After the reign of Ramses III (*c*1198–67), the priests at Thebes gained power and thus brought about ancient Egypt's decline. The New Kingdom was followed by a period of domination by various foreign peoples that led finally to the reduction of Egypt to a Roman province. (See also Egypt [1580–1085 BC].)

Newman, John Henry 1801–90. English churchman and writer. He was a founder of the Oxford movement (q.v.), which sought closer correspondence between the beliefs and practices of Christian antiquity and those of the Church of England. He held in his Tract 90 (1841) that the Thirty-Nine Articles (q.v.) of the Church of England were consistent with Catholicism. His own bishop repudiated this position, however, and Newman converted and was received into the Catholic church (1845). His spiritual autobiography, Apologia pro vita sua (1864), is considered a masterpiece both of Christian apologetics and English literature. He was made a cardinal in 1879.

New Mexico US state in the Southwest (pop. 1,300,000), the 47th state. Originally inhabited by the Pueblo and Apache Indians, the area was first explored by the Franciscan missionary Fray Marcos de Niza (d. 1558) in 1539 and then by Francisco Vasquez de Coronado (1510–54), who discovered the Grand Canyon while in search of a fabled golden city, Quivira. The early Spanish settlements were destroyed by the Indians but reestablished by 1692. The region was a province of Mexico until it was ceded to the US (1848) in the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (q.v.). Terminus of the Santa Fe Trail (q.v.) and later the railroad, it became a territory in 1850 but remained troubled by the Indian conflict and disputes between ranchers and homesteaders. It became a state and passed its constitution in 1912. In 1943 the US established its atomic research facility at Los Alamos, and the first atomic bomb was exploded at the White Sands Proving Ground on July 16, 1945.

New Model Army English parliamentary army that successfully concluded the English Civil War. It was originally commanded by Sir T. Fairfax but later came under the leadership of O. Cromwell. It was organized by Parliament (1645) to replace the private armies of parliamentarians. By the Self-Denying Ordinance of April, 1645, parliamentary leaders were supposed to be denied commands. Cromwell was the notable exception, and, in fact, by its success the highly trained New Model Army became his power base, eclipsing even Parliament.

New Nationalism US political ideology promoted by T. Roosevelt during his unsuccessful presidential campaign against W. Wilson (1912). Emphasizing a paternalistic approach, Roosevelt's program called for a strong federal government to institute social reforms and protect human rights.

New Netherland Dutch colony in America. Captured by the British in 1664, it was divided into New York and New Jersey. The first permanent Dutch settlement was Fort Orange on the Hudson (now Albany, New York), established in 1624; New Amsterdam (later New York City) was founded soon after.

New Orleans American city (pop. 557,500). New Orleans is the largest city in Louisiana. Located at the mouth of the Mississippi River, it is a major American port. Settled by the French (*c*1718), it was ceded to the US with the Louisiana Purchase in 1803 and served as Louisiana's capital (1812–49).

New Orleans, Battle of American victory in the War of 1812 (q.v.), fought near New Orleans on Jan. 8, 1815, two weeks after the Treaty of Ghent (q.v.) ending the war. Gen. A. Jackson, unaware the war had been ended, lost only eight killed and thirteen wounded, in the battle, while killing over two thousand British, including their commander, Sir Edward Pakenham (1778–1815). The battle restored American prestige and vaulted Jackson to fame.

New Spain Spanish viceroyalty (1535–1821) consisting of Mexico, what is now the US Southwest, and Central America south to Panama. Spain's possessions among the Caribbean Islands, Florida, and the Philippines were also once administered at part of the viceroyalty. New Spain ceased to exist after Mexico won its independence (1821).

New Sweden Swedish colonial settlement. New Sweden was Sweden's only American colony. It was located in present-day Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware. Founded in 1638, it was absorbed by the Dutch (1655), after its conquest by P. Stuyvesant.

New Testament The Christian portion of the Bible, relating to the life and teachings of Jesus Christ and the activities and teachings of some of the apostles chosen by Jesus to carry on his work. It consists of 27 books: 4 accounts of the life of Jesus, called "Gospels" ("good news"), ascribed to Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John; an account of the activities of the apostles, especially Paul; 21 epistles, or letters, written in apostolic times and ascribed to Paul, Peter, James, John, and Jude; and an apocalypse, or The Book of Revelations, ascribed to John. The earliest books of the New Testament are thought to have been written around AD 50. Although some say that parts were written later, current scholarship tends to accept the tradition that all of the books were written in the second half of the 1st cent. The canon, or list of approved New Testament books, was not approved by the Catholic church until the 4th cent. A festal epistle of St. Athanasius of Alexandria (AD 367), as well as a contemporary decree of Pope St. Damasus in Rome (381), constitute the evidence that the canon had finally been fixed in its contemporary form. Although the New Testament authors wrote according to no established plan, Christians have traditionally believed they were inspired and divinely protected from error in what they wrote.

New Thought American philosophical and religious movement. "New Thought," an outgrowth of transcendentalism (q.v.), was popular in America in the late 19th and early 20th cents. It stressed optimism, idealism, and the mind's creative power.

Newton, Huey See Black Panthers

Newton, Sir Isaac 1642–1726. English mathematician and physicist. During 1664–66, his university, Cambridge, was closed because of plague, and Newton in this time discovered laws of motion and universal gravitation, calculus, and the variations of the light spectrum. His findings were published in the Principia (1687) and Opticks (1704). Today Newton and Leibniz share the credit for the discovery of calculus, but Newton's laws of motion and universal gravitation are considered among the greatest syntheses in the history of human thought. They dominated science until replaced by the theory of A. Einstein in the 20th cent. Newton was the greatest and culminating figure of the 17th-cent. scientific revolution, and was president of the Royal Society from 1703 until his death. In his last years he turned to theology and alchemy.

New York Middle Atlantic state (pop. 18,557,300) of the US and the 11th state. Originally inhabited by the Algonquian and Iroquois Indians, the area was first explored (1524) by Giovannida Verrazano (1485–1528) and H. Hudson (1609). The Dutch established the New Netherland colony (1624), which was taken by the English in 1664 and granted to the duke of York. During the American Revolution, the British held New York City, and several important battles were fought in the territory. New York became a state in 1788 and adopted its current constitution in 1894. Called the Empire State, New York is highly industrialized throughout, yet has a rich agriculture with orchards and vineyards. The completion of the Erie Canal (1825) as well as the building of railroads (from 1831) made New York the principal locus of east-west travel and commerce in the 19th and early 20th cents.

New York City US port city (pop. 7,071,000) in southeastern New York State, one of the world's great cities. The area was visited by H. Hudson (1609), and the city's history began with the establishment (1624) of the Dutch colony of New Netherland. New Amsterdam, at the tip of Manhattan Island, was its capital. Manhattan was, according to traditional accounts, bought by P. Minuit for $24 in trinkets (1626). During the Dutch Wars, the British captured the colony (1664) and renamed it New York, after the duke of York. Development of the city (given a royal charter, 1686) began under British rule. However, local government was at times harsh and provoked unrest, including Leisler's Rebellion (q.v.) of 1689–91. During the American Revolution, the British captured (1776) New York City and used it as a base of operations until the end of the war. The city was nearly destroyed by fires during the occupation, but by 1790 it was already the country's largest city.

New York City was first capital of the US (1785–90) and President G. Washington was inaugurated there (Apr. 30, 1789). The opening of the Erie Canal (1825) made the city a center of transportation to the Great Lakes region and, although much of the city was destroyed by fire in 1835, it underwent a new period of growth. By the mid-1800s it was the nation's leading port. During the American Civil War it was the scene of bloody Draft Riots (1863). After the war, New York City was rapidly industrialized and became the port of entry for millions of immigrants (arriving until the early 1900s), many of whom stayed in the city's slum districts (such as Hell's Kitchen) and worked in its factories. In 1898 the city limits were expanded beyond Manhattan to include the boroughs of the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and Staten Island. The early 1900s marked the beginning of the construction of the modern city. The first skyscrapers went up, bridges were constructed, and work on the vast subway system began. By the 1920s New York City was not only a booming commercial and financial center but was also being transformed into a world metropolis.

New York school See abstract expressionism

New Zealand Island country in the South Pacific, composed of North Island, South Island, and numerous smaller islands. The capital is Wellington. First discovered (1642) by the Dutch captain A. Tasman, it was visited several times (1769–77) by J. Cook, and was first settled by the British (1840). That year saw the signing of the Treaty of Waitangi (Feb. 6, 1840), by which the Maoris maintained possession of their land but acknowledged British sovereignty. Friction between the colonists and Maoris led to the Maori Wars (q.v.) and subjugation of the Maoris in the 1870s. In 1852 New Zealand was divided into six provinces and granted self-government. It became a dominion (1907), and by the Statute of Westminster (1931) became independent. However, New Zealand did not ratify the statute until the 1940s. New Zealanders distinguished themselves in combat during WW I, WW II, and the Vietnam War.

Ney, Michel 1769–1815. French marshal. Ney, long a supporter of Napoleon, urged him to abdicate after the disastrous losses of the Napoleonic Wars. After briefly serving Louis XVIII, Ney again joined Napoleon during the Hundred Days, was defeated with him at Waterloo (q.v.), and was executed.

Nez Percé Indians American Indian tribe of the Sahaptin-Chinook linguistic family. They occupied the northwestern part of America before they were overrun by gold prospectors in the 1860s and 1870s. This led to an unsuccessful revolt by their Chief Joseph in 1877.

Ngo Dinh Diem 1901–63. Vietnamese political leader and prime minister (1954–63). Following the French defeat in Indochina, he emerged as the strong man in South Vietnam, and seemed to have built a solid regime as virtual dictator, enjoying US support. But his authoritarianism and favoritism to Catholics rather than Buddhists led to growing unrest among Communists and non-Communists alike in South Vietnam. He was overthrown in a military coup in 1963 that was engineered with apparent US complicity. He was murdered after being overthrown.

Nguyen Cao Ky 1930–. South Vietnamese military and political leader. He served as commander of the US-backed South Vietnam air force (1963–65). In 1967 he became vice-president under Nguyen van Thieu, whom he unsuccessfully attempted to oppose in the 1971 elections. He emigrated to the US after South Vietnam's defeat (1975).

Nguyen dynasty Vietnamese dynasty, founded (1802) by Nguyen Anh (d. 1820). The dynasty nominally ruled after the French occupation of Indochina, until 1945.

Nguyen That Thanh See Ho Chi-minh

Nguyen van Thieu 1923–. South Vietnam (Republic of Vietnam) political leader. President (1967–75) during the years of major US involvement in the Vietnam War, he was unable to check the Communist advance following the US withdrawal in 1973. He resigned and went into exile after the fall of South Vietnam.

Niagara, Battle of See Lundy's Lane, Battle of Niagara movement Organization of American black intellectuals and professionals, organized (1905) by W. E. B. Du Bois and others to advance black civil rights. Largely ineffective, the movement dissolved in 1910, and some members, including Du Bois, joined in forming the NAACP.

Nibelungenlied This Middle High German epic poem (early 13th cent.) is by an unknown author. It is taken from the oral tradition of Siegfried and involves the gold of the Nibelungen, an evil family. The modern operatic tetralogy the Ring, by R. Wagner, is based on the saga.

Nicaea Ancient city. Nicaea, now Iznik, Turkey, was founded in the 4th cent. BC. Across the Bosporus from Constantinople, it was the site of important Catholic church councils (AD 325 and 787) before its capture by the Turks (1330).

Nicaea, Councils of Councils of the Catholic church, both held in the ancient city of Nicaea, across the Bosporus from present-day Istanbul. 1. (1st ecumenical): Convened in AD 325 by the Roman emperor Constantine, it condemned Arianism (q.v.) and established the Nicene Creed (q.v.). 2. (7th ecumenical): Convened by the Byzantine empress Irene (AD 787) to consider the question of Iconoclasm, raised when her predecessor, Leo III, issued a decree forbidding the "worship" of images (726). The council decided that images could be venerated but not worshiped. It was the last council recognized as ecumenical by both Eastern and Western churches.

Nicaea, Empire of State founded (1206) by Theodore Lascaris (d. 1222) to the southeast of Constantinople and lasting until 1261. It was one of the small states formed by the Byzantines after the crusaders conquered Constantinople and set up the Latin Empire of Constantinople (q.v.). It was from Nicaea that the Byzantines launched the successful military conquest of the Latin Empire (1261). The Byzantine Empire was reestablished under Michael VIII.

Nicaragua Independent state located in Central America. Its capital is Managua. Nicaragua's main exports are cotton, coffee, and sugar cane. It is Central America's largest, but most sparsely populated, country and has a long history of dictatorship and political repression.

1522 First visited by Spaniards under Gil Gonzalez Davila; settlements established.

16TH–19TH CENT. Ruled under captaincy general of Guatemala.

1821 Declared independence from Spain.

1821–25 Became part of De Iturbide's Mexican empire.

1825–38 Joined Central American Federation.

1838 Liberals (based in the city of León) and conservatives (in Granada) fought for control; liberals declared Nicaraguan independence and withdrew from the federation.

1848 Britain seized San Juan del Norte in move to control Mosquito Coast.

1855 Capital established at Managua, between León and Granada.

1855 American filibuster William Walker was employed by liberals to head army; captured and sacked Granada.

1856 Walker became president of Nicaragua.

1856–57 Walker seized holdings of C. Vanderbilt in Nicaragua; Vanderbilt backed conservatives, forcing Walker to flee.

1863–93 Conservatives in control of the government.

1893–1909 Liberal revolt brought José Santos Zelaya to power; ruled as dictator.

1907 Zelaya attempted to revive Central American Federation; warred against Honduras and El Salvador; Central American Conference ended hostilities.

1909 Conservatives overthew Zelaya with US support.

1912 Unsuccessful coup; US Marines occupied Nicaragua (1912–25).

1927–33 Marines reoccupied Nicaragua after internal strife resumed; compromise negotiated between factions ended immediate crisis.

1937–56 Anastasio Somoza García, National Guard general, overthrew the government and established military dictatorship.

1939 Constitution revised; Somoza, reelected, visited US and obtained aid.

1947 A. Somoza defeated in elections by Leonardo Arguello; but Somoza became chief of National Guard and forced Arguello to resign.

1956–67 Luis Somoza ruled after his father was assassinated.

1960 Border dispute with Honduras settled; International Court of Justice ruled against Nicaragua.

1967–72 Maj. Gen. Anastasio Somoza-Debayle became president following the death of Luis Somoza.

1972 Somoza-Debayle resigned (May 1) from presidency; interim government to rule until 1974 elections; Somoza retained control of the country.

1972 Earthquake devastated (Dec. 23) Managua.

1973 Somoza-Debayle declared martial law after leftists kidnapped 14 officials.

1974 Somoza-Debayle resigned from army; won presidential election.

1978 Widespread rioting (Jan. 10) in Managua after leading opponent of Somoza-Debayle was assassinated.

1978 National strike (Jan. 23–30) renewed antigovernment unrest.

1978 Sandinista guerrillas seized (Aug. 22) National Palace.

1979 Sandinista guerrillas began (May) civil war; Somoza-Debayle ordered massive bombings, alienating many civilians; resisted American and OAS appeals to step down.

1979 Somoza-Debayle resigned, fled country (July 17); Sandinista guerrillas entered Managua, took control of government, capping seven-week civil war.

1979 Country ruled by five-member junta, including two non-Sandinistas.

1981 Nicaragua charged with supplying arms to Salvadoran rebels; US president R. Reagan suspended aid (Jan.).

Nicator, Demetrius See Demetrius II.

Nicene Creed ⟨Niceno-Constantinopolitan Creed⟩ This is the summation of the basic tenets of Christianity, accepted by Roman Catholicism, Eastern Orthodox, Anglican and most other Protestant churches. It was drawn up at the Council of Nicaea (AD 325) in order to state the true faith of the church as against the beliefs advanced by Arianism (q.v.). But a few elements were added later by the First Council of Constantinople (381), when it assumed substantially the form in which it is recited today. The filioque clause (q.v.) was added still later in the West (from the 9th cent.). Though sanctioned by the authority of the Roman Catholic church, the filioque has always been rejected by the Eastern church.

Niceno-Constantinopolitan Creed See Nicene Creed

Nicephorus I d. 811. Byzantine Emperor (802–811). He deposed the empress Irene, whom he had served as treasurer. He arranged boundary treaties with Charlemagne (803, 810) establishing the boundaries between the Eastern and Western empires. He was killed by invading Bulgarians.

Nicephorus II ⟨Nicephorus II Phocas⟩ *c*913–969. Byzantine emperor (963–969). His continuous warfare and heavy taxes made him unpopular. He was murdered by his wife, Theophano, and her lover, his nephew John Tzimisces, who succeeded him as John I.

Nicephorus II Phocas See Nicephorus II

Nicholas I, Saint *c*825–867. Pope (858–867). Nicholas mediated both secular and religious matters. He prevented the divorce of Lothair of Lorraine and supported St. Ignatius of Constantinople against Photius for the see of Constantinople. He upheld the right of bishops to appeal to Rome over their archbishops. He was one of the popes traditionally called "the Great."

Nicholas I 1796–1855. Czar of Russia (1825–55). Acceding despite the Decembrist Conspiracy (q.v.), Nicholas suppressed the Polish uprising (1830–31) and helped Austria subdue Hungary (1849). His attempt to expand into Ottoman domains led to the Crimean War (q.v.).

Nicholas I 1841–1921. Prince and king of Montenegro. He obtained European recognition of Montenegro's independence in the 1878 Treaty of Berlin. He opposed the union of Montenegro with Serbia into Yugoslavia and was deposed in 1918.

Nicholas II 1868–1918. Last Russian czar (1894–1917), successor to his father, Alexander III. An ineffective and autocratic ruler, Nicholas was greatly influenced by his wife Alexandra, who was in turn dominated by Rasputin (q.v.). Russia's defeat in the Russo-Japanese War (1904–05) led to the Revolution of 1905 (q.v.), and Nicholas was forced to establish a duma (1906). He took command of the army in WW I (1915), leaving Alexandra (with Rasputin) to govern. Under Alexandra, government at home became chaotic and this, with failures in the war, led to the Russian Revolution of 1917 (q.v.). Nicholas and his family were shot by revolutionaries (1918).

Nicholas III ⟨Orsini, Giovanni Gaetani⟩ d. 1280. Pope (1277–80). Nicholas successfully managed to keep civil rulers such as Charles I of Anjou and Rudolf I of Germany from interfering in church affairs. His efforts to effect a reunion with Constantinople ultimately failed.

Nicholas V ⟨Parentucelli, Tommaso⟩ 1397–1455. Pope (1447–55). Nicholas ended a schism when antipope Felix V submitted to him. He was a patron of the arts and is the virtual founder of the Vatican library.

Nicholas V ⟨antipope⟩ See Rainalducci, Pietro

Nicholas, Saint fl. 4th cent. Catholic bishop of Myra in Lycia. Though little is known of his life, he is the subject of many legends and is the patron of Russia, Greece, Sicily, children, and sailors. Legend has transformed his generosity into the Christmas character "Santa Claus," a corruption of his name.

Nicholas of Cusa 1401–64. German humanist and scholar, and from 1448 Roman Catholic cardinal. He worked for monastic reform, and carried out extensive diplomatic missions for Nicholas V. He proposed the hypothesis that the earth revolves around the sun before Copernicus and calendar reform a century before the Gregorian reform. He attacked decadent scholasticism in De Docta Ignorantia, "Of Learned Ignorance" (1440).

Nicias d. 413 BC. Athenian statesman and general during the Peloponnesian War. Nicias defeated the Spartans and Corinthians (427–426 BC) and made peace with Sparta (421). He opposed the siege of Syracuse (415) but was made commander along with Alcibiades and Lamachus. The expedition proved a disaster, and he was captured by the Syracusans and executed.

Nicodemus New Testament figure. Since Nicodemus was a member of the Sanhedrin, he visited Jesus secretly at night. He helped to bury him after the crucifixion.

Nicopolis, Battle of Decisive victory (Sept. 25, 1396) by Ottoman Turks over a European army of crusaders. King Sigismund of Hungary organized the crusaders in a response to the Turkish threat to Constantinople. The Turks, under Sultan Bayazid I, overwhelmed the crusaders at Nicopolis in Bulgaria, thus ending any effective European resistance to Ottoman expansion. Thousands were killed and some 10,000 taken prisoner. Only Tamerlane's invasion saved Europe from further Turkish conquests at this time.

Niebuhr, Reinhold 1892–1971. American Protestant theologian. He advanced his theory of applied Christianity in such books as Moral Man and Immoral Society and The Nature and Destiny of Man. Niebuhr preached "conservative idealism" against facile American optimism, emphasizing the reality of sin in human affairs.

Niemcewicz, Julian Ursyn 1757–1841. Polish writer and patriot. He aided T. Kosciusko in the 1794 Polish revolt and was jailed with him. He was exiled in 1831 for additional revolutionary activity.

Niemoller, Friedrich Gustav Emil Martin 1892–. German anti-Nazi theologian. Originally a Nazi advocate, he opposed Hitler's takeover of the Lutheran church. He spent the years 1937–45 in a concentration camp.

Nien Rebellion Chinese revolt. The Nien, a secret society of rebel guerrillas, staged uprisings from 1853 against the Ch'ing dynasty during and after the Taiping Rebellion (q.v.). They were destroyed in 1868.

Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm 1844–1900. German philosopher who proposed new values in place of what he regarded as the decadent slave morality of Christianity in Beyond Good and Evil (1886). One of his new values involved the "superman" who would achieve by asserting a "will to power." Nietzsche developed this idea in Thus Spake Zarathustra (1883–85). He predicted the "death of God" in his Joyful Wisdom (1910), among other works. His ideas influenced the Nazis, although Nietzsche was an anti-state individualist and not anti-Semitic.

Niger ⟨Republic of Niger⟩ Independent state located in west-central Africa in the Sahara region. Its capital is Niamey. The country is largely arid, and most of the population is engaged in subsistence farming. A drought (1968–75) almost devastated the country. Key events in the history of Niger include:

16TH CENT. Songhai Empire controlled large parts of the territory.

16TH CENT. Bornu Empire established by Berbers after the fall of the Songhai Empire.

19TH CENT. Fulani tribe gained southern part.

1884–85 Conference of Berlin placed Niger within French sphere of influence.

1893 Sudanese warriors destroyed Bornu Empire.

1896 Became part of French West Africa.

1922 Became separate colony within French West Africa.

1926 Niamey replaced Zinder as capital.

1946 Became a member of the French Union; gained limited self-government.

1958 Became an autonomous republic in the French Community.

1959 Constitution adopted.

1960 Withdrew from French Community, proclaiming complete independence (Aug. 3).

1960–74 Hamani Diori in office as first president.

1968–75 Drought brought severe economic problems and famine; US relief (1974) aided recovery.

1974 Military coup (Apr. 15); Lt. Col. Seyni Kountché suspended constitution, ruled by decree.

1976 Kountché formed civilian-dominated government; Kountché remained in power into the early 1980s.

Nigeria ⟨Federal Republic of Nigeria⟩ Independent state located in western Africa on the Gulf of Guinea. Its capital is Lagos. The land is rich in oil, making Nigeria among the wealthiest of African nations. Originally populated by such tribes as the Hausa, Fulani, Yoruba, and Ibo, Nigeria was for many years a British colony until 1960.

15TH CENT. Portuguese visited region; slave trade established.

1795–96 Mungo Park explored the Nigerian interior.

1830–31 Richard and John Lander explored the interior.

1861 Britain took control of Lagos; began expanding control in region.

1886 Royal Niger Company chartered; gained control of all trading companies on the Niger River and in the north.

1885 Britain established supremacy over southern Nigeria at the Conference of Berlin.

1897 Kingdom of Benin added to Nigeria.

1900 Protectorate established over southern Nigeria; northern sector pacified and established as a separate protectorate.

1914 Colony and protectorate of Nigeria established by British; economic development began.

1947 Britain granted constitution giving native Nigerians more involvement in government.

1954 New constitution granted after 1947 and 1951 constitutions proved unworkable.

1960 Nigeria became independent (Oct. 1); Abubaka Tafawa Balewa became prime minister (1960–66).

1963 Nigeria became a republic.

1963–66 Bitter disputes between tribal groups and regional governments.

1966 Balewa and other officials killed (Jan.) in coup by Ibo army; Major Gen. Johnson Ironsi became head of military government; abolished constitution.

1966–75 Lt. Col. Gowon in power after coup (July) by Hausa army; Supreme Military Council reigned.

1966 Muslim Hausa tribe massacred (Sept.) Christian Ibos in the north; Ibos fled to eastern region.

1967 Eastern region withdrew (May) from the federation of Nigeria to become Biafra; bloody civil war ensued.

1970 Biafra surrendered (Jan. 12) to Nigerian government troops, ending nearly three years of war.

1973–74 Famine devastated the area.

1975 Increasing unrest resulted (July 29) in bloodless coup; Muritala Rufai Muhammad installed as head of government.

1976 Muhammad assassinated by seven officers who failed in coup attempt; Supreme Military Council chose Lt. Col. Olusegun Obasanjo as president.

1977 Local government councils elected National Constituent Assembly.

1978 Ban on political parties, in effect since 1966, lifted.

1979 Alhaji Shehu Shagari in office; first civilian president in over a decade. Shagari remained in office into the early 1980s.

Nightingale, Florence 1820–1910. English nurse. Nightingale introduced strict standards of sanitation to army hospitals during the Crimean War (q.v.) and founded a training school for nurses. She was the first woman to receive the Order of Merit.

nihilism Nineteenth-century movement among the Russian intelligentsia that advocated the overthrow of all order and authority. Given its name in the novel by I. Turgenev, Fathers and Sons (1861), the movement embraced both those who wanted to overthrow existing governments by force and terror and those who sought to throw off personal moral restraints.

Nijinsky, Vaslav 1890–1950. Russian ballet dancer and choreographer. Nijinsky revolutionized dance as a member of S. Diaghilev's Ballet Russe. He choreographed such classics as The Afternoon of a Faun and The Rite of Spring.

Nijmegen, treaties of Series of European treaties. France ended the Dutch Wars (1672–78) with The Netherlands and Spain by these treaties, signed in the Dutch town of Nijmegen (1678–79). The Netherlands regained all its conquered territories, while France gained Franche-Comte, Artois, and towns in Flanders from Spain.

Nika Riot Riot and abortive revolt (532) in Constantinople. The Blues and Greens (q.v.), two popular parties in the Byzantine Empire, were normally opposed to each other. But they united to demand that Emperor Justinian oust two hated officials. Justinian complied but this failed to appease what had become an angry mob. In the ensuing riot, Constantinople was burned, the empress Theodora thwarted an attempt to overthrow her husband, and the emperor's general, Belisarius, restored calm by slaughtering some 30,000 rioters. The incident marked the end of popular party power in the empire.

Nike ⟨Victoria⟩ Greek goddess. She was the winged goddess of victory in both war and athletic events. The Nike, or Winged Victory of Samothrace (3d cent. BC), in the Louvre in Paris is one of the best-known ancient works of art. It was discovered on the Greek island of Samothrace in 1863.

Nikolsburg, Treaty of Treaty concluded on Dec. 12, 1621, between Ferdinand II of Austria and Gabriel Bethlen, king of Hungary (1619–21) during the Thirty Years' War (q.v.) Hungarian Protestants' rights were guaranteed by the Hapsburgs, and Ferdinand regained the Hungarian crown, renounced by Bethlen.

Nikon 1605–81. Russian patriarch. Nikon was patriarch of the Russian Orthodox church (1652–66). His reforms and resistance to state interference led to widespread opposition and to his removal. His reforms were eventually adopted.

Nile, Battle of the See Aboukir, Battle of Nimitz, Chester William 1885–1966. American five-star admiral. Nimitz commanded the US Pacific Fleet during WW II and received the Japanese surrender aboard his ship, the battleship Missouri. He was chief of naval operations (1945–47).

Nin, Anaïs 1903–77. American writer. Nin was famed for her letters and diaries as well as such fiction as Under a Glass Bell and Ladders of Fire.

Nine-Power Treaty Two treaties resulting from the Washington Conference (Nov. 12, 1921–Feb. 6, 1922). The first (Feb. 4, 1922) guaranteed China its territorial sovereignty. The second (Feb. 6, 1922) gave it authority to set trade tariffs. The conference was attended by the US, Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, Portugal, Italy, Japan, and China.

Nineteen Propositions A group of demands presented (1642) by the Long Parliament (q.v.) to Charles I of England. Charles rejected these demands, designed to limit his rule, and this led to the English Civil War (q.v.) The propositions included demands that the Parliament be allowed to choose ministers, control the army, and enforce the laws against Catholics.

Ninety-five Theses Martin Luther's historic document posted on the church door in Wittenberg, Germany, on Oct. 31, 1517, a date that is now considered the beginning of the Protestant Reformation. The theses not only protested the selling of indulgences in the Roman Catholic church, but advanced Luther's opinions on doctrines of the faith, which proved to be unacceptable to church authority. Originally the theses were posted only to invite debate from other Catholic theologians. They later came to be considered the inauguration of the Reformation.

Nineveh Ancient city. Nineveh was the capital of the Assyrian empire, located near modern Mosul, Iraq. Sennacherib and Ashurbanipal greatly contributed to its glory by their buildings and sculptures. The fabulous royal library of Nineveh was organized by Ashurbanipal (q.v.). The city fell to a coalition of Babylonians, Medes, and Scythians in 612 BC. Its fall is celebrated in the Old Testament book of the prophet Nahum.

Ninth Crusade See Crusade, Ninth

Niobe Greek mythical queen of Thebes. Niobe boasted of her six sons and six daughters, who were then killed by Apollo and Artemis. She fled to Mount Sisyphus, where she wept till she was turned to a weeping stone image by Zeus.

Nirvana In Buddhism and Hinduism (qq.v.), Nirvana represents the final state of bliss and freedom to which all aspire. In Hinduism it involves release from the perpetual cycle of rebirths. In Buddhism it is the state achieved by enlightenment (knowledge) in which the individual is released from all desire, anger, or pain. Some sages hold it to be equivalent to extinction or annihilation of the personality. The Sanskrit word refers to the going out of a flame after the exhaustion of its fuel.

Nixon, Richard Milhous 1913–. Thirty-seventh US president (1969–74), successor to L. Johnson. After practicing law for five years, Nixon served in the navy during WW II. He began his political career in 1946 with his election as a Republican to Congress. As a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, he gained national attention through the investigation of A. Hiss. In 1950 he was elected to the Senate and in 1952 was elected vice-president under D. Eisenhower. As vice-president (1953–61) he made numerous trips abroad. In Venezuela (1958) he was nearly trapped in violent demonstrations, and while visiting Russia (1959) he participated in the Kitchen Debates (q.v.) with N. Khrushchev.

Chosen Republican candidate for president (1960), he was defeated by J. Kennedy and, following his defeat (1962) for the governorship of California, he retired to private life. In 1968 he again received the Republican presidential nomination, this time defeating the Democratic candidate (H. Humphrey). As president, Nixon began the withdrawal of US troops from Vietnam, but the order to invade Cambodia (1970) and Laos (1971) provoked widespread protest. In foreign policy, Nixon sought to ease tensions between the West and the Communist bloc through a policy of detente (q.v.), and he visited China in 1972 to mark the US reapproachment with the Communist state. That year he was reelected, defeating the Democratic candidate G. McGovern in a landslide. Nixon obtained a cease-fire with North Vietnam (1973) effectively ending US participation in the Vietnam War (q.v.). Soon after his reelection, however, revelations concerning the Watergate affair (q.v.) began to emerge. His vice-president, S. Agnew, was forced to resign (1973) and was succeeded by G. Ford. Nixon was in turn forced to resign (Aug. 9, 1974) under threat of impeachment. He was succeeded by Ford, who granted him a pardon. (See also United States [1968–74].)

Niza, Fray Marcos de See New Mexico

Nkrumah, Kwame 1909–72. Ghanaian statesman. Nkrumah led strikes against British domination of Ghana, which achieved independence under his leadership. He later became its first prime minister (1951) and president (1960).

NKVD See GPU

NLF See National Liberation Front

Noah Old Testament patriarch. Because of his goodness, God spared Noah, his family, and two animals of each specie from the Deluge. God instructed Noah to build the Ark as a refuge, as recounted in the Book of Genesis.

Noailles, Maurice, duc de 1678–1766. Marshal of France under Louis XV. He distinguished himself in the wars of the Austrian, Polish, and Spanish succession (qq.v.).

Nobel, Alfred Bernhard 1833–96. Swedish inventor and industrialist. Nobel invented dynamite, though he was a pacifist. With his fortune he established the coveted Nobel prizes, awarded yearly to scientists, writers, and peacemakers.

Nobile, Umberto See Amundsen, Roald

nobiles See patricians

Nobility, Charter to the See Charter to the Nobility

Nod, Land of See Land of Nod

Nogi, Maresuke, Count 1849–1912. Japanese general. He fought in the Sino-Japanese War (q.v.), captured Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese War (q.v.), and outflanked the Russians at Mukden.

nominalism Philosophical doctrine, important in medieval times, which held that universals (abstractions) do not exist and that only specific objects have real existence (ie., a man exists but humanity, the abstract concept of all men, does not or is unknowable). Nominalists thus opposed the scholastic philosophers and challenged fundamental tenets of Christian theology (ie., the Holy Trinity was unknowable). The philosopher Roscellinus (d. after 1220) is said to have held the nominalist view in the extreme form. An intermediate position (Conceptualism) held that universals exist in the mind as concepts but have no substantive reality in the world outside the mind. This middle position was adopted by William of Ockham (q.v.).

Nominated Parliament See Barebones Parliament

Nonconformists Term used to describe those who decline to subscribe to the established state religion. It came into use in English history to describe those Protestants who rejected the established Church of England, particularly those who separated from it around the time of the 1660 Restoration (q.v.) of the monarchy and passage (1662) of the Act of Uniformity (q.v.). It has been applied to Baptists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Methodists, and Unitarians, as well as independent groups such as the Brownists, Quakers, and Plymouth Brethren. In Scotland this term, or "dissenters," was used to refer to those who separated from the established Presbyterianism, and included the Anglicans.

Noncooperation movement Indian protest movement organized between Sept., 1920 and Feb., 1922 by M. K. Gandhi as a reaction to a British Amritsar Massacre (q.v.) in 1919. The movement involved boycotting British institutions and goods. An outbreak of violence brought the movement to an end though Gandhi later used nonviolent protests (satyagraha) against the British to gain India's independence.

Nonpartisan League US alliance of farmers formed in 1915. Its purpose was to apply political pressure to achieve the farmers' demands for state control of storage and distribution centers. It spread rapidly through the wheat belt from Wisconsin to Washington and the Southwest. It declined after WW I.

Nonproliferation Treaty Treaty (July 1, 1968) in which nuclear powers agreed to prevent the spread of nuclear-weapons technology to nations that did not then possess such capabilities. The treaty was signed by the US, Britain, USSR, and numerous other nonnuclear countries. Reports of new weapons-development programs persist, however, notably in Pakistan, Libya, and South Africa.

Nootka Sound controversy In 1789 Spain and Britain almost went to war over Nootka Sound, a natural harbor on the coast of Vancouver Island. The Nootka Sound Convention of 1790 granted both nations fishing and settlement rights and ended Spain's exclusive claims to the west coast of North America.

No Popery Riots See Gordon Riots

Nordenskjold, N.A.E. See Northeast Passage

Nordlingen, battles of 1. Decisive victory for the Holy Roman Empire (Sept. 5–6, 1634) during the Thirty Years' War (1618–48). A combined force of Imperial and Spanish troops, led by Archduke Ferdinand (later Ferdinand III), routed a Swedish force near this Bavarian town. The victory forced France to join the war (May, 1635) and ended Swedish influence in southern Germany. 2. Victory for the French (Aug. 3, 1645) during the Thirty Years' War (1618–48). French troops, led by the Great Condé, defeated a combined force of the Holy Roman Empire and Bavaria at Nordlingen. The victory was gained at great cost, however, and brought about a lull in fighting.

Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray, 1st duke of *c*1366–99. English nobleman. Norfolk was a "lord appellant" who dominated Richard II from 1387 to 1389. Uneasy after Richard regained power, he quarreled with Bolingbroke (later Henry IV) and both he and Bolingbroke were banished.

Norman Conquest English historical period inaugurated in 1066. One of the formative eras in English history, it began with the defeat of the English king Harold II by William the Conqueror, duke of Normandy, at the Battle of Hastings (q.v.). Thereafter the customs, laws, and language of the Normans were introduced in England. William replaced the English nobles with his Norman followers and established the feudal system in England.

Normandy Historic region of France on the English Channel. The Norseman Rollo was proclaimed the first duke of Normandy by Charles III of France (911). Duke William (the Conqueror) united Normandy with England by his conquest of England in 1066. It was taken by France under Philip II in 1204, retaken by England in 1417, and again by France in 1450. The beaches of Normandy were the scene for the Allied invasion during WW II (1944). Rouen is the historic capital.

Normandy invasion ⟨Operation Overlord⟩ World War II Allied invasion. On D-Day, June 6, 1944, Allied land, naval, and air troops invaded the northern shores of Nazi-held France. They established beachheads (Utah, Omaha, Gold, Juno, Sword) in five key areas by the next day, opening the area for other Allied troops. The invasion signaled the beginning of the end of the Nazi war effort. The invasion, the largest amphibious landing in history, was overseen and executed by Gen. D. Eisenhower, and some 800,000 combat troops had been massed in Britain for the operation. Over 4,000 ships, under the command of British admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, were used in the invasion; and about 5,000 fighters and almost 6,000 bombers were used to provide air support. British Field Marshal B. Montgomery was in command of Allied ground forces during the invasion.

Normans See Norsemen

Norns Norse mythical goddesses. The Norns were three Fates who wove the web of life: Urth (past), Verthandi (present) and Skuld (future).

Norodom ⟨Narottama⟩ 1834–1904. Cambodian king (1860–1904) who brought an end to his country's independence by accepting a French protectorate (1864).

Norodom Sihanouk 1922–. Cambodian king (1941–55). Following the French withdrawal from Indochina (1954), he established the People's Socialist Community, abdicated the throne in favor of his father (Prince Norodom Suramarit) and became prime minister. He became head of state again after his father's death (1960) but was unsuccessful at maintaining neutrality during the Vietnam War and was overthrown in 1970 by a rightist coup.

Norris, Frank 1870–1902. American writer. Norris was a naturalist and was influenced by E. Zola. His works include McTeague, The Octopus, and The Pit, and often intended to expose corruption and exploitation.

Norris, George William 1861–1944. American legislator. Norris was both a congressman (1903–13) and senator (1913–43). He opposed US entry into WW I, established the Tennessee Valley Authority (q.v.), and introduced the 20th (Lame Duck) Amendment to the Constitution, which was enacted in 1933.

Norsemen ⟨Northmen⟩ ⟨Normans⟩ Scandinavian Vikings who, from the 8th cent., raided and colonized such diverse territories as England, Ireland, France, and Russia. Vikings also colonized Iceland and Greenland and even visited "Vinland" (North America). Norseman from what is now Denmark were called Danes and attacked England as early as 787. The major assault by Norsemen on France came *c*845. In 912, French king Charles III gave the Norseman Rollo the area around Rouen. This was the beginning of the duchy of Normandy. Later, Christianized Normans of Normandy established (10th cent.) kingdoms in southern Italy and Sicily and, under William the Conqueror, invaded and conquered England (1066). In Russia, the Norsemen were known as Varangians, and one of them, Rurik, established at Novgorod (862) the dynasty that ruled in Russia until 1598. In the same period, strong rulers such as Harold I and Canute began to organize Norse homelands into the Scandinavian nations of Norway, Denmark, and Sweden.

North, Frederick, 2d earl of Guilford and 8th Baron North 1732–92. English statesman. Lord North was George III's prime minister (1770–82) during the American Revolution. His acquiescence to the king's harsh policies in the years leading up to the American Revolution led to the loss of the American colonies. He did not fully support the war and remained in office at the king's insistence until 1782 and the British defeat at Yorktown.

North Africa Geographical designation. This term identifies the African countries south of the Mediterranean and north of the Sahara desert. It generally includes Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, and, sometimes, Egypt.

North Africa, campaign of Series of military actions in North Africa (1940–43) during WW II. Following Italy's entry into the war (1940), Italian forces began an invasion of Egypt (Sept., 1940). The British counterattacked (Dec.) and drove them back some 500 miles into Libya (Feb., 1941). This brought German intervention and two major German offensives. Gen. E. Rommel, commanding the Afrika Korps, attacked the British (Apr., 1941) and advanced into Egypt. The British counterattacked and drove Rommel back through Libya to El Agheila (Jan., 1942). Rommel opened a new counteroffensive (May, 1942) and again pushed into Egypt. The turning point came (Oct., 1942) in the Battle of El Alamein (q.v.). The British, now under command of B. Montgomery, forced Rommel to retreat. Outwitting British attacks, he fell back to southern Tunisia. New Allied forces, commanded by Gen. D. Eisenhower, landed in the west (Nov., 1942) in Algeria. They pushed into Tunisia and guaranteed the German defeat, but only after heavy fighting. When the Axis forces finally surrendered (May, 1943) more than 250,000 troops were taken prisoner. The Axis defeat in North Africa was a major victory for the Allies.

Northampton, Battle of See Roses, Wars of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization ⟨NATO⟩ Alliance formed after WW II by the Atlantic nations of Europe and North America to counter potential Soviet bloc threats. The treaty was originally signed Apr. 4, 1949, and members included Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, and the United States. Greece and Turkey joined in 1952 and West Germany in 1955.

North Carolina State (pop. 5,874,500), in the US Southeast, the 12th state. Sir W. Raleigh's colony on Roanoke Island (1580s) was unsuccessful, and the region was granted by Charles II to eight members of his court. It reverted to the court in 1729 and became a royal colony. During the American Revolution, the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence (q.v.) was drawn up (1775) calling for independence. North Carolina was the scene of fighing in the American Revolution and ratified the US Constitution in 1789 and relinquished its claims to Tennessee in 1790. During the Civil War, it seceded in 1861 and rejoined the Union in 1868. The present amended state constitution was adopted in 1868. North Carolina leads the nation in the production of tobacco, textiles, and furniture.

Northcliffe, Alfred Charles William Harmsworth, Viscount 1865–1922. English journalist and publisher. He was considered the most successful publisher in English history, having either founded or salvaged such papers as the Daily Mail, the London Observer and the London Times.

North Dakota North central US state (pop. 652,700), the 39th state. The French explorer Pierre de la Verendrye and his sons explored the region in the mid-1700s, and the fur trade brought in others. The US acquired half of the area with the Louisiana Purchase (1803) and the other half from the British in 1818. In 1861, the Dakota Territory was formed, including North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Wyoming, but it was sparsely settled until the late 1800s because of the conflict with the Indians. North Dakota adopted its constitution and became a state in 1889. It is one of the world's premier wheat-growing regions.

Northeast Boundary Dispute US-Canadian border controversy. Due to the vagueness of the 1783 Treaty of Versailles, the border between Maine and New Brunswick was unclear. Several points were clarified in the Jay Treaty and the Treaty of Ghent (qq.v.) After the Aroostook War (q.v.), America and Britain decided to settle the matter permanently through the Webster-Ashburton Treaty of 1842 (q.v.).

Northeast Passage Sea route to the Pacific along the northern coasts of Russia and Siberia. Navigators attempted to open such a route from the 16th cent. but it was not opened until 1878–79, when N. A. E. Nordenskjold (1832–1901) of Sweden accomplished this. The Soviet Union today maintains the route with the help of icebreakers and patrol planes.

Northern Expedition Military campaign in China (1926–28) conducted by the nationalist Kuomintang and led by Chiang Kai-shek. Planned by Sun Yat-sen, the operation was launched (1926) to overcome the warlords, local military rulers who were preventing establishment of an effective central government. The nationalists quickly won control of the south and, as the campaign proceeded, the historic purge of Communists from the Kuomintang began (Apr. 1927). Peking was captured (June 1928) and, with the capital secured, Chiang Kai-shek became ruler of a unified China. His authority was never secure, however, and after the Chinese Civil War (q.v.) the Communists finally gained control of China (1949).

Northern Ireland ⟨Ulster⟩ Division (pop. 1,540,000) of the United Kingdom, located in northeastern Ireland. The capital is Belfast. It includes six of the nine counties of the historic English province of Ulster and hence is frequently called Ulster. The English seized much of the land in the area (17th cent.) after suppressing a rebellion in Ireland. Ulster was subsequently settled by English and Scottish Protestants. The political rivalry between Catholics and Protestants (the latter comprising the majority of the population) dates to the 19th cent. and W. Gladstone's proposal for Home Rule (q.v.) in Ireland. The Protestants, fearing Catholic domination from the south, opposed Home Rule. The Government of Ireland Act (1920) established Northern Ireland as a separate province, but the Republic of Ireland refused to acknowledge the division. Frequent clashes continued which, in the late 1960s, erupted into civil war between a wing of the IRA and a Protestant group, the Ulster Defense Association. In 1972 Britain assumed control of government in Northern Ireland. Subsequently, a coalition of Northern Ireland's Social Democratic and Labour parties gained control of a reconstituted assembly, formed an 11-member Northern Ireland Executive, and planned a Council of Ireland, which would seek cooperation between Catholic and Protestant factions. Continued terrorism by both the IRA and Protestants hampered efforts to resolve the conflict, and a general strike in Ulster (May, 1974) led to resumption of governmental control by Britain. The bloody terrorist war continued in the 1980s.

Northern Rhodesia ⟨Zambia⟩ African country. Located in south-central Africa, this was the former name of Zambia from 1911 to its establishment as a republic (1964). The name comes from the British empire-builder C. Rhodes.

Northern Sung See Sung

Northern Territories Australian region. This is a sparsely settled area of northern Australia bounded by the Timor and Arafura seas on the north and Queensland on the east. Its chief industries are mining and cattle raising.

Northern War (First) War (1655–60) between Sweden and Poland and its allies (Austria, Denmark, and Russia) sparked by Sweden's attempt to expand its Baltic domains. Swedish king Charles X invaded Poland and won a major victory at Warsaw (1656) before being forced to withdraw. In 1658, Charles invaded Denmark and nearly captured Copenhagen. The war with Poland was formally ended (1660) by the Treaty of Oliva (q.v.) and the Treaty of Copenhagen with Denmark, in which Sweden gained Danish territory in southern Sweden.

Northern War ⟨Great ~⟩ War fought (1700–21) by Sweden under Charles II and Russia under Peter I (the Great). Russia was supported by Denmark, Saxony, Poland, Prussia, and Hanover. The original belligerants (Russia, Poland, and Denmark) sought to break Swedish hegemony in the Baltic region. Charles prolonged the war by proving a far better warrior than expected, but Sweden was ultimately defeated. The Northern War, concurrent with the War of the Spanish Succession in southern Europe, marked the rise of Russian power in the Baltic.

1699 Peter I of Russia, Frederick IV of Denmark, and Augustus II of Poland and Saxony joined in secret alliance against Sweden.

1700 Poland invaded Swedish Livonia; Denmark invaded Schleswig.

1700 Denmark forced out of the war by Charles's surprise invasion near Copenhagen; Treaty of Travendal signed (Aug.).

1700 Charles defeated Russia at Narva (Nov. 30); broke Polish seige of Riga.

1701–02 Charles invaded Poland, took Warsaw and Cracow; fighting continued in Poland for next few years.

1704 Charles forced election of Stanislaus I as rival king of Poland (to Augustus).

1706 Charles pursued Augustus into Saxony; forced Augustus to withdraw from the Russian alliance; Stanislaus recognized as Polish king by the Treaty of Altranstadt.

1706 Russian czar Peter occupied Ingermanland and Livonia.

1707 Charles attacked Russia, invading the Ukraine.

1708 Russians defeated Swedish support troops at Lesnaya (Oct.).

1709 Russia defeated the Swedes' main army at Poltava; Charles fled to Bessarabia, in the Ottoman Empire.

1709 Augustus II invaded Poland, expelled Stanislaus; Russia, Denmark, Poland, and (soon after) Hanover, Saxony, and Prussia then began the conquest of Sweden's Baltic territories.

1710 Ottoman sultan declared war on Russia at Charles' urging.

1711 Russia launched unsuccessful attack against the Ottomans; forced to sign Treaty of the Pruth, relinquishing Azov; Ottomans ceased hostilities.

1714 Charles returned to Sweden; continued the futile struggle against the full coalition.

1718 Charles invaded Danish Norway; was killed in action.

1718 Frederick I of Sweden began peace negotiations with all belligerents except Russia.

1719 First Treaty of Stockholm signed (Nov.); Sweden ceded Bremen and Verdun to England-Hanover.

1720 Second Treaty of Stockholm signed (Feb.); Sweden sold parts of Pomerania and the port of Stettin to Prussia.

1720 Treaty of Fredericksbourg (June) restored Danish conquests to Sweden.

1721 War ended by Treaty of Nystad with Russia; Sweden ceded Livonia, Estonia, part of Karelia, and Ingermanland to Russia; retained Finland.

North German Confederation An alliance of 22 German states north of the Main River under the leadership of Prussia. Formed (1866) after the Austro-Prussian War (q.v.), it succeeded the German Confederation (q.v.) which had been dominated by Prussia's rival, Austria. The new confederation lasted between 1866 and 1871, when Prussian minister O. von Bismarck achieved his goal of creating a unified empire of all German states under Prussian domination (and excluding Austria). Bismarck thereby created the modern German state.

Northmen See Norsemen

Northumberland, earls of See Percy

Northumberland, John Dudley, duke of *c*1502–53. English soldier and politician. He ruled England during the minority of Edward VI and persuaded him to transfer the throne from Mary and Elizabeth I to his own daughter-in-law, Lady Jane Grey. He was subsequently beheaded.

Northumbria, kingdom of Anglo-Saxon kingdom of England, formed by uniting the kingdoms Deira and Bernicia. During the 7th cent., the kingdom accepted Christianity and became the major power in England. Mercia gradually became more powerful, but the entire York area was overrun and ruled by the Danes, until they were beaten by Harold II of England (1066).

North West Company Canadian fur-trading company founded in 1783. It carried on a vigorous and often violent competition with the Hudson's Bay Co. until a merger of the two in 1821.

Northwest Ordinances Legislation passed (1784–87) under the Articles of Confederation to settle the state of western territory (the Northwest Territory, q.v.) ceded to the central government by the states after the American Revolution. The principal ordinance was passed on July 13, 1787, and is sometimes called the Ordinance of 1787; it established territories and provided the conditions under which they could become states. It also provided for education, religious freedom, and land division, and it prohibited slavery in the territories as well. This legislation was the most significant accomplishment of the government under the Articles of Confederation.

Northwest Passage Sea route from the Atlantic to the Pacific through the Arctic above North America. From the 16th cent. on, the quest for such a passage gave enormous impetus to the exploration of the North American Arctic, but the actual existence of such a route was not demonstrated until the 1850s, and it was not traveled by a commercial ship until the ice-breaking tanker SS Manhattan accomplished the feat in 1969.

Northwest Territory ⟨Old Northwest⟩ Region that was the first US territory, comprised of the present states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and part of Minnesota. The area was first explored by French traders and missionaries and was taken by the British in the French and Indian Wars (1763). The Treaty of Paris (1783), ending the Revolution, gave the land to the US. Territorial government was established by the Northwest Ordinance (1787) and the area was divided (1800) into the Indiana Territory and Northwest Territory (including then only Ohio and some adjoining regions).

Norton Thomas See Sackville, Thomas, 1st earl of Dorset

Norway ⟨Kingdom of Norway⟩ Kingdom located in northern Europe and occupying the western part of the Scandinavian peninsula. Long a seafaring people, Norwegians were among the Scandinavian Norsemen who raided Europe and colonized Iceland and Greenland between the 9th and 11th cent. Norway was united with neighboring powers for much of its history. From the 14th to 19th cent. it was under Danish control and during the 19th cent. it passed to Sweden. Norway gained independence in 1905 and today possesses one of the world's great merchant marine fleets. Key dates in Norwegian history include:

9TH CENT. Mountain valleys and fjords of Norway divided into local fylker (counties) ruled by petty kings.

860–933 Harold I (the Fairhaired) reigned; conquered and unified most of Norway by 872 and became its first king; also conquered Orkneys and Shetlands.

860–1000 Vikings from Norway intensified seaborne conquests; colonization of Iceland (874), Normandy (911), and Greenland (974).

935–961 Haakon I reigned; briefly reunited kingdom, divided since Harold's death.

995–1000 Olaf I reigned; Christianity introduced; defeated and killed at Svöld in fighting against Sweden and Denmark.

1000 Norway divided between Denmark and Sweden after Olaf's defeat.

1016–28 Olaf II reigned after ending foreign rule; Christianity established; aroused opposition of nobles.

1028 King Canute (of England and Denmark), aided by disaffected nobles, conquered Norway.

1035–47 Magnus I reigned, following Canute's death; ruled as king of Norway and Denmark (from 1042).

1184–1202 Sverre reigned in Norway; gained throne after period of dynastic warfare; created strong monarchy with support of peasants; asserted supremacy of monarchy over church and thereby provoked Crosier War (1196–*c*1202) against bishops and followers.

1217–63 Haakon IV reigned; Norway enjoyed peace and prosperity; Greenland and Iceland united with crown (1262).

1263–80 Magnus VI reigned; prosperity continued; Magnus instituted administrative and ecclesiastical codes.

1319–43 Magnus II of Sweden inherited Norwegian throne; forced to abdicate in 1343.

1343–80 Haakon VI reigned.

1380–87 Margaret of Denmark, Haakon's wife, exercised real power in Norway as regent for her son, Olaf V.

1387–97 Margaret held power in both Norway and Denmark after her son died without heirs.

1389–97 Margaret conquered Sweden with the aid of disaffected nobles.

1397 Kalmar Union formed; united Denmark, Norway, and Sweden under one crown; Norway subsequently dominated by Denmark.

14TH CENT. Black Death (plague) ravaged Norway.

1523 Sweden withdrew from Kalmar Union; for the next three centuries. Norway, governed as a Danish province.

1534–59 Christian III of Denmark reigned. Lutheranism introduced as Norwegian state religion.

1814 Treaty of Kiel; Denmark, an ally of the defeated Napoleon, was forced to cede Norway to Sweden.

1815 Swedish army forced Norway to accept Sweden's Charles XIII, but Norway was recognized as an independent kingdom united with Sweden through the king.

1821 Norwegian Storting (parliament) abolished the Danish-created nobility.

AFTER 1850 Golden Age of Norwegian literature and music, with such writers as H. Ibsen and K. Hamsun and such composers as E. Grieg.

1884 Norwegian government made responsible to the Storting, despite Swedish opposition.

1905 Union with Sweden dissolved by Storting (Aug.) after conflict over separate consular service to assist growing Norwegian merchant fleet; ratified by Sweden (Oct.).

1905–57 Haakon VII reigned as king of Norway.

1914–18 Norway neutral in WW I.

1920s Labor party (Socialist) rose as dominant power in Norwegian politics; much social legislation passed in 1930s.

1940 WW II; Nazi Germany invaded and occupied Norway (Apr. 8–9), a neutral.

1940–45 German occupation; V. Quisling, head of Norwegian Nazis, took over government while the king set up government in exile in Britain.

1945 Norway became charter UN member.

1945–51 E. Gerhardsen (Labor party) in office as prime minister; brought about Norway's rapid postwar economic recovery.

1949 Norway became founding member of NATO.

1955–65 Gerhardsen again in office as prime minister; retirement and social welfare programs instituted.

1957– King Olaf V reigned.

1965 Labor party out of power in Norway for first time in three decades.

1971 Scandal forced resignation of prime minister Per Borten's government (Mar.).

1972 Entry into the EEC rejected by voters.

1972 Lars Korvald installed as new prime minister; government crisis over rejection of European Economic Community (EEC) membership ended.

1973 Prime Minister Trygve Bratteli installed following resignation of Lars Korvald.

1976 Government set up national oil company in the wake of North Sea oil discoveries.

1981 Gro Harlem Brundtland became first woman prime minister of Norway.

1981 Käre Willoch, a conservative, in office as prime minister following ouster of the Labor Party.

Noske, Gustav 1868–1946. German politician. As minister of defense he surpressed many radical insurrections, most notably the Berlin Spartacus Revolt (1919). He resigned after the 1920 Kapp Putsch (q.v.).

Nostradamus ⟨Notredame, Michel de⟩ 1503–66. French physician and astrologer. His symbolic rhymes have come to be regarded by some as prophecies for the world's future and its ending.

Notredame, Michel de See Nostradamus

Notre Dame de Paris Cathedral begun in 1163 regarded as a classic example of Gothic architecture. One of the best-known churches in the world, its twin towers were completed around 1245, and it was finally completed in the 14th cent. and restored in the 19th. V. Hugo used it as the setting of his famous romantic novel of the same name (1831).

Notus Greek god of the south wind, son of Astraeus and Eos.

Novara, Battles of 1. Battle in which a 13,000-man Swiss army, fighting on behalf of the League of Cambrai (q.v.), defeated (June 6, 1513) a 10,000-man French army commanded by Louis de la Tremoille (1460–1525). Fighting near Novara in the Italian Piedmont, the Swiss pikemen suffered heavy casualties but inflicted 50 percent casualties on La Tremoille. The defeat forced French king Louis XII to withdraw from Italy. 2. Battle in which 100,000 raw troops of Sardinia-Piedmont were defeated (Mar. 23, 1849) by a numerically inferior but better trained army of Austrian regulars near Novara. The battle was fought during the Italian war of independence. Field Marshal J. Radetzky inflicted the crushing defeat that led to Charles Albert's abdication and saddled Piedmont-Sardinia with a 65-million-franc indemnity.

Nova Scotia One of the Maritime Provinces of eastern Canada (pop. 856,100). Originally inhabited by Algonquian Indians, the area may have been explored by J. Cabot (1497). The French founded the first settlement in 1605, but there was constant conflict with the English for control of the area known as Acadia (q.v.). In 1755, England gained control and expelled the French Acadians; the incident was described in H. W. Longfellow's Evangeline. Many US Loyalists and Scottish immigrants settled there, and the colony of Nova Scotia entered the Canadian Confederation in 1867. The province is noted for fishing, forestry, mining, and tourism.

Novatian fl. AD 250. Early Christian heresiarch and antipope. A Roman priest, he denied that those Christians who had lapsed during the persecution of Decius (AD 250) could be readmitted to the church. When Pope Cornelius (251–53) decreed indulgence towards the lapsed, Novatian started his own rigorist sect that lasted until the 6th cent.

November Insurrection Unsuccessful Polish rebellion (1830–31) against Russian domination of the Congress Kingdom of Poland (q.v.). It began (Nov. 29, 1830) after the French July Revolution and rebels seized control of Warsaw. Czar Nicholas was deposed as king of Poland (Jan. 25, 1831) and the numerically superior Russian army advanced into Poland (Feb.). The Russians attacked Warsaw (Sept.) after several battles and the Polish army withdrew to Prussia, where it surrendered (Oct. 5).

November Revolution See October Revolution

Novgorod Russian city (pop. 128,000). Novgorod, located in northwest Russia, is one of Russia's oldest cities. Its position on the trade route made it a major commercial and cultural center. The foundation of the Russian state dates from 862 when the inhabitants of Novgorod asked Rurik to rule them. At its height in the 14th cent., Novgorod boasted rich fairs, factories, and churches. It came under the control of Moscow in 1478. It was a member of the Hanseatic League (q.v.). Its churches and museums suffered at Nazi hands in WW II.

Noyes, John Humphrey 1811–86. American religious reformer. In 1848, Noyes established the Oneida Community (q.v.), which believed in the "perfectionism" of man through communion with Jesus, the practice of polygamy, and communal living.

Nubia Ancient region of northeastern Africa that was for many centuries ruled by Egypt. By the 8th century BC, Nubia had become independent and conquered Egypt. The Negro tribe Nobatae formed the next powerful kingdom of the area and converted to Christianity. After the Muslim takeover (14th cent.), the area became divided into small states.

Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty See Nonproliferation Treaty

Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty Treaty signed in Moscow (Aug. 5, 1963) between the US, Britain, and the USSR, banning nuclear-weapons tests in the atmosphere, in outer space, and under water. It provided for no international enforcement machinery, nor, since France did not sign, did it include all nuclear powers.

nullification The states' rights doctrine in US history holding that a state had the authority to remedy federal abuses of power by nullifying federal laws within its borders. The Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions (q.v.) of 1798–99 had argued that the union was a voluntary compact and that the federal government had no authority not specifically delegated to it by the Constitution. The issue of a protective tariff, which hurt the South, brought the conflict to a head in the 1820s, and the theory of nullification was articulated (1824) by J. C. Calhoun. His home state, South Carolina, passed an Ordinance of Nullification (1832), declaring the federal tariff act invalid. A. Jackson obtained a force bill allowing him to use military force to collect the tariff in Charleston but, through the efforts of H. Clay, sought a compromise tariff. South Carolina then rescinded its nullification (1833). The issue was not raised again until 1861, when South Carolina seceded from the Union, precipitating the American Civil War (q.v.). The Union victory in the war ultimately settled the issue by establishing federal supremacy over the states.

Numa Pompilius *c*715–672 BC. Legendary second king of Rome. Numa is thought to have succeeded Romulus, to have established religious and civil laws, and to have been loved for his wisdom.

Numidia Ancient North African country, situated roughly in modern Algeria. Masinissa became ruler after allying himself with Rome in the Punic Wars (q.v.) and was the leader during Numidia's golden age. Under King Juba I, Numidia fell to Rome (46 BC) but enjoyed a long period of prosperity until the invasion of the Vandals in 428. It was later conquered by the Muslims.

Nunez Vela, Blasco d. 1546. First Spanish viceroy of Peru (1544–46), sent to enforce the "New Laws" of B. de Las Casas. He antagonized nearly everybody and a revolt against the "New Laws" led by G. Pizarro brought about an altercation in which the viceroy murdered a man. He was arrested, and executed when he tried to raise forces to quell the rebellion and avoid trial in Spain.

Nuremberg See Nürnberg

Nureyev, Rudolf 1938–. Russian ballet dancer. Nureyev defected from Russia in 1961 and became in the West a major international ballet star.

Nurhachi 1559–1626. Manchurian tribal chief and founder of China's Ch'ing (Manchu) dynasty (1644–1912). After uniting Manchuria, he began the conquest of the Chinese empire, which his son, Dorgon, completed.

Nürnberg, Religious Peace of See Religious Peace of Nürnberg

Nürnberg Laws Two racial laws passed by the German Nazi party on Sept. 15, 1935. German Jews were denied German citizenship and forbidden to marry or have sexual relations with non-Jews.

Nürnberg Standstill See Religious Peace of Nürnberg

Nürnberg Trials War-crimes trials held after WW II in Nuremberg, Germany, for the purpose of trying leaders of the Nazi party. Authorized by the Allies' London Agreement (Aug. 8, 1945), the trials were conducted by a special international tribunal. Twenty-four Nazi leaders were indicted, including H. Göring, W. Keitel, J. von Ribbentrop, A. Rosenberg, R. Hess, and H. Schacht. The tribunal held 403 public sessions (Nov. 20, 1945–Oct. 1, 1946), heard hundreds of witnesses, and utilized captured German documents to prove the charges of war crimes and crimes against peace and humanity (notably the slaughter of the Jews). Twelve defendants were sentenced to be hanged, while the others were either imprisoned or acquitted. Two defendants, including H. Göring, committed suicide. The trials were controversial, but the tribunal argued that all the violations were of international laws recognized prior to WW II and that Nazi crimes against the Jews required a unique response.

Nyasaland See Malawi

Nyerere, Julius 1922–. First president of the United Republic of Tanzania (from 1964). He founded the Tanganyika National Union political party (1954), became the first prime minister and then president when Tanganyika became independent (1961), and effected the union of Tanganyika and Zanzibar as Tanzania (1964).

nymph Greek mythical female divinities. These beautiful maidens were identified with nature; there were wood nymphs, tree nymphs, sea nymphs, and mountain nymphs.

Nyssa, Saint Gregory of See Gregory of Nyssa, Saint

Nystad, Treaty of Treaty concluded between Russia and Sweden in 1721 ending the Northern War (q.v.). Sweden retained Finland but ceded Livonia, Estonia, Ingria, and part of Karelia to Russia, and Russia obtained her "window" on the Baltic.

O

OAS See Organization of American States

Oates, Titus 1649–1705. English conspirator who caused a flurry of anti-Catholic hysteria and judicial murder of 35 Catholics with his fabricated story of the Popish Plot (q.v.) to kill Charles II so the Catholic James II could succeed. He was convicted of perjury in 1685 and imprisoned, but was freed and pensioned after the Glorious Revolution (q.v.) in 1688.

Oath, Charter of See Charter of Oath

Oath of Strasbourg Oath sworn (842) by Charles II (the Bald) and Louis II (the German) confirming their joint alliance against their brother, Emperor Lothair I. One of the versions in which this oath was recorded is considered to be the earliest written example of the French language.

Obed Old Testament figure. Obed was the son of Ruth and Boaz and the grandfather of King David.

Obote, Milton See Amin, Idi

Obregón, Álvaro 1880–1928. Mexican general and president (1920–24). Obregón supported V. Carranza against V. Huerta, F. Villa, and E. Zapata, but eventually deposed Carranza. As president, he advocated education and land reforms and improved relations with the US.

O'Brien, William Smith 1803–64. Irish revolutionary. The Protestant O'Brien first supported the cause of Irish independence in Parliament. When his Young Ireland group later failed in an 1848 insurrection, he was sentenced to death, but was banished instead.

O'Casey, Sean 1884–1964. Irish playwright. O'Casey is best known for his satiric tragicomedies written for the Abbey Theatre (q.v.). They include The Shadow of a Gunman, Juno and the Paycock, and The Plow and the Stars.

Occam, William of See Ockham, William of occultism Supernatural belief in unseen, extraordinary forces that cannot be explained by ordinary scientific means. Occult fields include astrology, alchemy, spiritualism, and theosophy.

Oceania ⟨Oceanica⟩ Pacific Islands. This is the collective name for the thousands of islands in the central and South Pacific Ocean. Ethnically they are divided into Australasia, Melanesia, Micronesia, and Polynesia.

Oceanica See Oceania

Ochs, Adolph S. 1858–1935. American publisher. Ochs fought yellow journalism (q.v.) in his newspapers the New York Times, which he converted into a world-famous newspaper dedicated to objective reporting, the Chattanooga Times, and the Philadelphia Times Ledger. He financed the Dictonary of American Biography.

Ockham, William of ⟨Occam, ~⟩ *c*1285–*c*1349. English Franciscan philosopher. He opposed the Aristotelian realism of T. Aquinas, holding that universal ideas exist only in the thinking mind. He is remembered for his principle of economy in thought, called "Ockham's Razor." In philosophy he was a nominalist whose ideas contributed to the decline of scholasticism (q.v.) and eventually to the Protestant Reformation.

O'Connell, Daniel 1775–1847. Irish political leader. Nicknamed "The Liberator," O'Connell attempted to gain Irish freedom through political agitation. He founded the Catholic Association (1823) and was first Catholic lord mayor of Dublin (1841) since the reign of James II. His election to Parliament in 1828 provoked the passage of the Catholic Emancipation Act (q.v.) to enable him to take his seat without the usual oaths. He supported the Whigs in Parliament and tried to break up the union of Britain and Ireland. Losing support in later years, he died a broken man in Italy.

O'Connor, Frank ⟨O'Donovan, Michael⟩ 1903–66. Irish writer. O'Connor's short stories illuminate many aspects of Irish life. He directed for the Abbey Theatre and translated Gaelic literature into English.

O'Connor, Rory Roderick 1116?–98. Last high king of Ireland (1166–75). O'Connor was king of Connaught before he seized the high kingship (1166). He was forced to submit (1175) to Henry II of England in the Treaty of Windsor (q.v.).

Octavia d. 11 BC. Roman matron. Octavia was the beautiful and virtuous sister of Augustus and wife (from 40 to 30 BC) of Marc Antony, and kept peace between them for a time. Antony deserted her for Cleopatra.

Octavia AD 42–62. Roman empress. Octavia was the daughter of Claudius and the wife of Nero, who divorced her. She was exiled and executed because of the jealousy of Nero's third wife, Poppaea.

Octavian See Augustus

Octavian See John XII

Octavianus, Gaius Julius Caesar See Augustus

Octavius, Gaius See Augustus

October Manifesto Manifesto issued on Oct. 30, 1905, by Russian czar Nicholas II. Issued in response to the Russian Revolution of 1905 (q.v.), it guaranteed civil liberties and called for establishment of a duma, which would have the power to confirm all legislation. The manifesto would have turned the Russian government into a constitutional monarchy, but it was only partially enacted.

October Revolution ⟨November Revolution⟩ The coup d'état of Oct. 24–25, 1917 (new style, Nov. 6–7), by which the Bolsheviks (q.v.), under the leadership of N. Lenin, took control of the Russian Revolution (q.v.). The revolution began with the February Revolution (q.v.), the abdication of Czar Nicholas II (March 15, 1917), and the formation of a provisional government dominated by Socialists (eventually headed by A. Kerensky). In April, however, Lenin and other Bolshevik leaders returned to Russia. They called for Russia's withdrawal from WW I and establishment of a program of land distribution, and managed to gain increasing support. On the night of Nov. 6–7 (old style, Oct. 24–25), supported by Red Guards and the sailors of Kronstadt, the Bolsheviks, led by L. Trotsky, seized all government buildings and the Winter Palace in Petrograd. The Council of People's Commissars was then set up, with Lenin as chairman, and the Communist regime in Russia began. (See also Union of Soviet Socialist Republics [1917]; Russian Revolution.)

Octobrists ⟨Union of October 17⟩ Russian conservative political party. It sought enactment of constitutional reforms based on the October Manifesto (q.v.) issued by Czar Nicholas II. Formed in 1906, the party was dissolved during the 1917 Russian Revolution.

Oda Nobunaga 1534–82. Japanese military leader, son of Daimyo. He was the first Japanese commander to arm his troops with muskets. With his allies Hideyoshi Toyotomi and Ieyasu, he unified most of Japan.

Oder-Neisse Line Polish-German frontier established by the USSR, Great Britain, and the US at the 1945 Potsdam Conference (q.v.). Poland was compensated at Germany's expense for the Soviet acquisitions on her eastern border. These controversial borders were not recognized by West Germany until 1971.

Odescalchi, Benedetto See Innocent XI

Odets, Clifford 1906–63. American playwright. Odets reflected a strong social conscience in such plays as Waiting for Lefty, Awake and Sing, Golden Boy, and The Country Girl.

Odo See Eudes

Odoacer ⟨Odovacar⟩ AD *c*435–493. German chieftain and mercenary in Roman service who deposed the last Western Roman emperor, Romulus Augustus, in AD 476. A member of the Sciri or Rugian tribe, he was the virtual ruler of Italy until assassinated by an Ostrogothic king, Theodoric, acting for the Byzantines.

O'Donnell, Leopoldo 1809–67. Spanish general and statesman. O'Donnell supported Isabella II against the Carlists (q.v.), overthrew B. Espartero, and served several times as premier.

O'Donovan, Michael See O'Connor, Frank

Odo of Lagery See Urban II

Odovacar See Odoacer

Odysseus ⟨Ulysses⟩ Greek mythical king and warrior. His adventures in the Trojan War were related in Homer's Iliad, and his long trip back to Ithaca recounted in Homer's Odyssey. He was noted for his wisdom and cunning and for being "never at a loss."

Odyssey See Iliad and Odyssey

Oecolampadius, Johannes 1482–1531. German theologian and reformer. He helped D. Erasmus edit the Greek New Testament, but came under M. Luther's influence (1522). He carried the Reformation to Basel, later siding with U. Zwingli. He drafted the First Confession of Basel (1531).

Oedipus Greek mythical king. Oedipus was abandoned in infancy when an oracle predicted that he would kill his father, Laius, king of Thebes, and marry his mother, Jocasta. He survived and unwittingly returned to fulfill the prophecy by killing Laius, encountered as a stranger at a crossroads, and going on to Thebes, where he married Laius' widow, Jocasta. He blinded himself when he discovered his crimes.

Oenone Greek mythical nymph. Oenone, wife of Paris, was a skilled healer. When Paris deserted her for Helen, and was mortally wounded at Troy, Oenone refused him aid. She committed suicide after his death.

Offa d. 796. King of Mercia (757–796). Offa made his kingdom the most powerful in Anglo-Saxon England. He introduced the coinage system used in England for centuries thereafter, and negotiated (with Charlemagne) the first commercial treaty in English history.

Offenbach, Jacques 1819–80. German-born French composer. Offenbach created a popular, elegant style of French operetta, but is today best remembered for his full-scale opera Tales of Hoffmann.

Og Biblical king of Bashan. Og was an Amorite of huge size. He was defeated by the Israelites on their entrance into Canaan.

Ogadai 1185–1241. Mongol ruler (1229–41), successor to his father, Genghis Khan. He conquered northern China (1234) and sent armies, under Batu Khan, westward into Russia, where they sacked Kiev (1240) and thereby ended Russian resistance. The armies then overran Poland and Hungary, and only Ogadai's death prevented their advance into Western Europe. Ogadai built the Mongol capital city of Karakorum.

Oglesby, Richard J. See Grand Army of the Republic

Oglethorpe, James Edward 1696–1785. English philanthropist. Oglethorpe was involved with penal reform and the treatment of debtors. He founded the American colony of Georgia (1733) as an asylum for debtors.

OGPU See GPU

O'Higgins, Bernardo 1778–1842. Chilean soldier and statesman. He became leader of the revolutionary forces in Chile (1813) and helped defeat the Spaniards at Chacabuco (q.v.) in 1817. He was named supreme dictator and proclaimed Chilean independence on Feb. 12, 1818. He was the first president of Chile, until 1823, when he was deposed for his reforms. He died in exile in Peru.

Ohio State (pop. 10,797,500) in the north central US, the 17th state. Prehistoric Mound Builders inhabited Ohio, and the Erie and Iroquois Indians were later major tribes there. La Salle claimed the region for France, but the British gained control in the French and Indian War (1754). It was ceded to the US after the American Revolution in the Treaty of Paris (1783). Ohio became part of the Northwest Territory in 1787, and Marietta was its first settlement (1788). It became a state in 1803, and adopted its present constitution in 1851.

Ohio Company Organization of Virginia and Maryland colonists interested in western settlement. A British royal charter in 1749 granted it 200,000 acres around the forks of the Ohio River. Activities of the company helped provoke the French and Indian War (q.v.), since it encroached on territory then claimed by France. The company was the first organized American Colonial effort to settle territory west of the Alleghenies.

Ohio Company of Associates American Colonial settlers. New Englanders formed this settlement group in Boston (1786). The next year they purchased and colonized the land that became the city of Marietta, Ohio, under the Northwest Ordinance of 1787.

Ohm, Georg Simon 1787–1854. German physicist. His research into electrical current resistance resulted in the formation of Ohm's law, the basic law of current flow. The unit measure of electric resistance, the ohm, was named in his honor.

Ojibwa Indians North American Indian tribe. Also called the Chippewa, the Ojibwa were a major branch of the Algonquin Indians, and lived in the Great Lakes region. They supported the French in their many colonial wars against the English, but sided with Britain against America in the American Revolution and the War of 1812. They were known for their pictograph form of writing.

Okinawa Japanese island. Okinawa was the scene of a bloody WW II battle between America and Japan (Apr. 1–June 21, 1945). America won despite casualties of some 48,000, one-third of them fatal. The Japanese lost some 110,000 of their 120,000-man garrison before surrendering on June 21, 1945. Okinawa remained under US military control until May, 1972, when it was returned to Japan.

Oklahoma US state (pop. 3,025,300) in the Southwest, the 46th state. Originally inhabited by various tribes of Plains Indians, the area was explored by the Spanish and French, beginning in the 16th cent. It became part of the US with the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 and, as the Indian Territory (q.v.), was made the home of displaced Indians. Agitation by land-hungry settlers opened the territory for settlement in 1889. The Indian Territory and the western section known as the Oklahoma Territory merged to form the state of Oklahoma in 1907, and the state constitution was adopted in that year.

Oklahoma City US city (pop. 403,200). Located in the central part of Oklahoma, it was settled during the 1889 land rush. It became the state capital in 1910.

Okubo, Toshimichi 1832?–78. Japanese statesman. Okubo, a member of the Satsuma clan, played a major role in restoring the emperor (1868) (Meiji Restoration) and westernizing Japan. He opposed his kinsmen's 1877 Satsuma rebellion and was assassinated by them the next year.

Okuma, Shigenobu, Marquis 1838–1922. Japanese statesman. Okuma opposed the feudal aristocracy of H. Ito, supported constitutional reforms, served as prime minister (1898, 1914–16), and founded Waseda University (1892).

Olaf I *c*963–1000. King of Norway (995–1000). He tried to convert Norway to Christianity, and commissioned Leif Ericson to carry Christianity to Greenland. He was killed in battle against the Danes and the Swedes, who then divided his lands.

Olaf II *c*995–1030. King of Norway (1015–28). Olaf attempted to unite Norway religiously and politically but provoked internal dissension instead. He was deposed and killed at the Battle of Stiklestad. He is the patron saint of Norway, and completed the Christianization of the country begun by Olaf I.

Olaf V 1903–. King of Norway (1957–). Olaf served as commander in chief of the Norwegian armed forces against the Nazi occupation of Norway in WW II. He returned to Norway in 1945.

Old Believers Russian religious dissenters within the Russian Orthodox church who opposed the liturgical reforms made by Nikon, patriarch of Moscow (1652–58). Persecuted through the 17th and 18th cents., they split into several sects, some of which still exist and are now officially recognized.

Oldcastle, Sir John d. 1417. English soldier and leader of Lollardry (q.v.) He performed valuable military service for Henry IV in Wales. His devotion to the teachings of J. Wycliffe led to his condemnation for heresy. Shakespeare's character Sir John Falstaff may have been modeled on him.

Old Catholics Schismatic Catholic sect that was formed in Germany in protest against the dogmatic definition of the pope's infallibility issued in 1870 by the First Vatican Council (q.v.). The group acquired a bishop consecrated by a Dutch Jansenist bishop in Holland. Mass was said in the vernacular and priests were allowed to marry. The Old Catholics established intercommunion with the Church of England in 1931.

Old Delhi See Delhi

Oldenbarneveldt, Jan van 1547–1619. Dutch statesman. Oldenbarneveldt aided William the Silent in driving Spain from The Netherlands and helped negotiate the Treaty of Utrecht (q.v.) He was executed by religious opponents.

Old English Language of the early period (5th–11th cents.) in the development of modern English. It was essentially the language of the 5th-cent. Teutonic invaders of England (Celtic influence was minimal) and had four dialects: Northumbrian, Mercian, Kentish, and West Saxon. The literature of the Old English period is predominantly West Saxon and dates primarily from the reign of Alfred the Great. The best-known work from this period is the epic poem Beowulf.

Old Ironsides ⟨Constitution⟩ Famous US warship, a 44-gun frigate. Built (1798) for service against French privateers, it saw action during the Tripolitan War and during the War of 1812. In the latter war, the ship was victorious in battle against the British ships Guerrière (Aug. 19, 1812) and Cyane and Levant (Feb. 20, 1815). The ship was rebuilt in 1833, 1877, and 1925 and was the subject of O. W. Holmes' poem Old Ironsides.

Old Kingdom ⟨Pyramid Age⟩ One of the three great divisions of ancient Egyptian history (with the Middle and New kingdoms), the period during which the great pyramids were built. Generally this period may be taken to include dynasties 3d–6th, though sources vary (1st–6th and 3d–8th are also given). Dates vary as well, though *c*2700–*c*2200 BC is a good guideline. The Egyptian capital was at Memphis. Among the notable rulers of this period are Zoser, Snefru, Khufu, Menkaure, and Pepi.

Old Northwest See Northwest Territory

Old Testament Christian term for the older, Hebrew portion of the Bible. It begins with an account of the creation of the world, recounts the calls by God to such figures as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and David, and through them treats the covenant established by God with the Jewish people. It also promises the coming of the Messiah. The Jews adopted the present canon of approved books (considered inspired) around AD 100. They divided them into: 1. The Law, consisting of the Pentateuch, or first five books: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. 2. The Prophets, another group of books: Joshua, Judges, I and II Samuel, I and II Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the Twelve (Minor) Prophets. 3. The Writings (Hagiographa), consisting of heterogeneous books: Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and I and II Chronicles. This Jewish version was based on the Masora (q.v.). The Christians used a different canon, based on a 3rd-cent. BC Greek translation called the Septuagint (q.v.). They considered the following additional books (regarded by the Jews only as pious writings) to be inspired Scripture: Tobias, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, and I and II Maccabees. The Christian canon was approved in the 4th cent. AD and stabilized in the Latin Vulgate (q.v.). At the Reformation, the books not included in the Jewish canon were set aside by the Protestants as uninspired Apocrypha (q.v.). The so-called higher criticism of the 19th cent. tended to impugn both the authorship and historicity of the books of the Old Testament. Later research, including archaeological evidence, goes further toward confirming religious traditions, but there is no general agreement concerning Old Testament authorship and chronology. A series of editors and sacred authors from the 10th cent. BC no doubt composed the books from written and oral traditions. However, in both Christian and Jewish religious traditions, the belief is that God protected them from error in communicating these texts.

Oleg d. 912. Early Russian ruler. He was a Viking (Varangian) leader and the reputed founder of Kievan Russia. Oleg expanded his realm of Novgorod, inherited from Rurik, to include Kiev, which then became the capital of a Kievan-Novgorodian state (882). His treaties with the Byzantine Empire (907, 911) opened Russia to Greek Christian and cultural penetration.

Oliva, Peace of Treaty between Poland and Sweden (May 3, 1660) ending the First Northern War. King John II of Poland renounced his claim to the Swedish throne and ceded Livonia. West Prussia was confirmed as Polish, but the sovereignty of the elector of Brandenburg over it was recognized.

Olivares, Gaspar de Guzman, conde de 1587–1645. Spanish statesman. He was prime minister to Philip II (1621–43), but his policies of constant warfare and heavy taxation led to revolts by Catalonia and Portugal, and he was removed.

Olivier, Lord Laurence 1907–. English actor. Olivier is considered one of the world's great actors of stage and screen. Among his many notable films are Hamlet and Richard III.

Ollivier, Émile 1825–1913. French statesman. Napoleon III called upon him to help create the "Liberal Empire," which instituted many reforms. However, Ollivier's decision to lead France into the Franco-Prussian War (1870) forced his dismissal.

Olmütz, Punctation of See Erfurt Parliament; Revolutions of 1848

Olney, Richard 1835–1917. American statesman. As attorney general (1893–95), he broke the Pullman strike (q.v.), and, as secretary of state (1895–97), he declared that America had the right to arbitrate the Venezuala Boundary Dispute (q.v.).

Olympia Ancient Greek plain. Olympia was a religious center and site of festivals and athletic contests honoring Zeus. It was the site of the Olympic games (q.v.), and its statue of Zeus by Phidias was one of the ancient Seven Wonders of the World (q.v.).

Olympiad Greek time measurement. An Olympiad was the four-year period between Olympic games, each Olympiad being marked from the beginning of the games. The first Olympiad was reckoned to have begun in 776 BC.

Olympian In Greek mythology, one of twelve gods who dwelt on Mount Olympus. These included Zeus and his wife, Hera; Zeus' brothers, Poseidon and Pluto; his sister, Hestia; and the children of Zeus—Ares, Hermes, Apollo, Hephaestus, Athena, Aphrodite, and Artemis.

Olympias d. 316 BC. Macedonian queen. She was the wife of Philip of Macedon, and the mother of Alexander the Great, over whom she had great influence. She executed Alexander's successor, Antipater, and was in turn executed by Antipater's son, Cassander.

Olympic games Religious athletic games. These ancient Greek games were held (776 BC–AD 393) at Olympia once every four years and were called an Olympiad (q.v.) to honor Zeus. They were revived in 1896, and are now held in a different world city every four years.

Olynthus Ancient Greek city. Olynthus was a coastal city and frequent target of Athens and Sparta. It was destroyed by Philip II of Macedon in 347 BC.

Omaha Beach ⟨Bloody Omaha⟩ WW II beachhead. One of the five landing points used during the Allied invasion of France on D-Day (June 6, 1944). The American forces landing at this point suffered the fiercest resistance.

Oman Oil-rich Middle Eastern sultanate (pop. 890,000) on the southeastern Arabian Peninsula, on the Arabian Sea. It was ruled by the Portuguese (1508–1648) and by the Turks (1659–1741) before being taken by the founder of the present ruling family from Yemen, Ahmad ibn Said. Oman developed strong ties with Great Britain (18th cent.) and was the most powerful Arab state in the early 19th cent. Sultan Qabus bin Said deposed his father in 1970, promising to use oil revenues for modernization.

Omar ⟨Umar⟩ 581–644. Second Muslim caliph. A father-in-law of the prophet Muhammad, he at first opposed Islam, but was converted by 618. He chose Abu Bakr as the first caliph to succeed to the authority of the prophet (632), and succeeded him (634). During his caliphate, Arab armies advanced into Syria, Egypt, and Persia. He established the administration and taxation of the subsequent empire.

Omar Khayyám fl. 11th cent. Persian poet, astronomer, and mathematician. Khayyám reformed the Muslim calendar and wrote an algebra textbook. However, he is best known for his epigrammatic poems The Rubáiyát, especially as translated into English (1859) by Edward FitzGerald (1809–83).

Omdurman, Battle of British defeat and capture of the Mahdist capital at Omdurman, in the central Sudan (Sept. 2, 1898). An Anglo-Egyptian force of about 26,000, led by Sir (later Lord) H. Kitchener, defeated a poorly armed Mahdist force of 40,000 and destroyed the state established by the Mahdi (q.v.) in 1881. It began British dominance in the Sudan.

Omphale Greek mythical queen. Omphale was queen of Lydia. The Delphic Oracle forced Hercules to serve her for three years to atone for his murder of the sons of Neleus, king of Pylos. She dressed him in women's clothes and made him spin wool with her maids.

Omri *d. c*874 BC. King of Israel (887–875 BC). Omri moved the capital of Israel to Samaria and had close ties to the Syrians. He married his son Ahab to Jezebel, a Phoenician.

On See Heliopolis

Oñate, Juan de *d.*1624? Spanish explorer. Oñate took possession of much of the American Southwest for Spain, and was first governor of what is now New Mexico.

Oneida Community Religious commune in America in 19th cent. It was established by J. H. Noyes, a Perfectionist, in New York State (1847). It practiced communal living, and permitted polygamy. In 1881, it was reorganized as a joint stock company and its social experiments were abandoned.

O'Neill, Eugene Gladstone 1888–1953. American playwright. O'Neill won the Nobel Prize in Literature (1936). Beyond the Horizon won the first of his three Pulitzer Prizes. Other works include Anna Christie, Long Day's Journey into Night, and The Iceman Cometh.

O'Neill, Shane *c*1530–67. Irish chieftain. O'Neill fought for the chieftainship against his British-backed illegitimate half brother, Matthew. Though Shane won acknowledgment from Elizabeth I, he turned against England, was defeated, and was slain by a rival clan.

Ontario East-central Canadian province (pop. 8,600,500). The area was first explored by the French (early 17th cent.), although settlement (by Britain and France) was delayed because of wars with the Iroquois Indians. British claims to the region were upheld by the Treaty of Paris (1763), and Ontario was joined to the province of Quebec (1774). Loyalists from the US settled there during the American Revolution, and battles were fought there during the War of 1812. Ontario and Quebec entered the Dominion of Canada as separate provinces in 1867.

Op art ⟨optical art⟩ Artistic style of the 20th cent. characterized by repetition of form and specific color combinations to create the illusion of movement.

OPEC See Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries

Open Door International diplomatic term applied to the policy of a country that trades with all other nations on an equal basis. The term was first used in the 1890s by the US, which sought to trade with China at a time when such nations as Britain, Russia, France, Japan, Italy, and Germany all demanded special trade concessions from the Chinese. The policy was advanced (1899–1900) to the major nations by US secretary of state J. Hay. Hay declared it to be in effect in 1900.

Operation Dragoon See Anvil, Operation

Operation Overlord See Normandy invasion

Operation Sea Lion See Britain, Battle of

Opium War Name given two 19th-cent. wars between China and European powers. 1. The first war (1839–42) began when China attempted to enforce its ban on the importation of opium and seized British-owned opium in Canton. Britain soon defeated China and forced it to cede Hong Kong to Britain, open several ports to British trade, and pay an indemnity. 2. The second war (1856–60) began after Chinese boarded the British ship Arrow. France joined Britain in a new war against China. Soon defeated, China agreed to the Treaty of Tientsin (1858), which opened a number of new ports to European trade and secured rights of interior travel in China, rights for Christian missionaries, residence in Peking for foreign diplomats, and legalization of the opium trade. China's opposition to the agreements led to new conflict and the occupation (1860) of Peking and burning of the imperial summer palace. The conflict ended with the Conventions of Peking (1860), which granted still further concessions.

Oporto ⟨Porto⟩ Portugal's second largest city (pop. 335,700). Dating to Roman times, it was captured by the Moors (716) and recaptured by the Christians (997). It has long been a center of republican and revolutionary thought.

Oppenheimer, J. Robert 1904–67. American physicist. He was a leading figure in the Manhattan Project (q.v.) and made important contributions to the construction of the first atomic bomb, but after WW II he became a leading advocate of civilian and international control of atomic energy.

oprichniki See Ivan IV

Ops Ancient Roman goddess of the harvest, plenty, and fertility. The wife of Saturn, she is identified with the Greek goddess Rhea.

optical art See Op art

Optimates See Cato the Younger oracle Ancient Greek religious prophet. Oracles were priests and priestesses who gave the gods' answers to questions posed by humans. The most famous oracle was dedicated to Apollo at Delphi.

Orange Free State South African province. First settled (1820s) by the Boers, it was annexed by Britain (1848). It became independent (1854), but continued conflict in the region led to the Boer War (1899–1902) and its reannexation. It became part of the Union of South Africa in 1910.

Orangemen Irish Protestant political group. It was founded in 1795, and its members sought to maintain Protestant dominance over the Catholics in Ireland.

Oranges, War of the Brief war (1801) in which France and Spain invaded and defeated Portugal. After Portugal's surrender, the country was divided between France and Spain.

Orcus Ancient Roman god. He ruled the underworld and the dead, and is identified with the Greek god Hades.

Order of Preachers See Dominicans

Order of Saint Benedict See Benedictines

Order of the Garter Order of knighthood in England founded by King Edward III and formally established in 1350. The order was originally limited to 26, including the king, but its membership was enlarged by later kings. According to tradition, its motto, Honi soit qui mal y pense (roughly, Shame on him who thinks evil of it) is a remark attributed to Edward III. While dancing with a countess, he picked up a garter she had dropped, and, returning it to her, made the comment to bystanders.

Order of the Golden Fleece Order of knighthood founded (1430) by Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy. Through intermarriage with the Hapsburg family, the order passed to Spain and Austria. It takes its symbol from Jason and the Argonauts.

Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem See Knights Hospitalers

Ordinance of 1787 See Northwest Ordinances

ordonnance cabochienne See Cabochiens

Oregon US state (pop. 2,632,700) in the Northwest, the 33d state. It was first explored (16th cent.) by Spanish, British, and Russians, who set up fur-trading posts along its coast. Robert Gray (1755–1806) claimed the area along the Columbia River for the US (1792), and the Lewis and Clark expedition explored farther inland in 1805. As part of the Oregon country, it was held jointly by England and the US from 1818 until England gave up its claims (1846). Oregon's constitution was adopted in 1857, and it was admitted to the Union in 1859.

Oregon Question Dispute between Britain and the United States over the US-Canadian northwest border. The Convention of 1818 had provided for joint occupation west of the Rockies between 42° and 54° 40′. A treaty (June, 1846) established the border along the 49th parallel.

Oregon Trail American pioneer route stretching from Independence, Missouri to the Columbia River in Oregon. It was one of the main paths of pioneer travel to the West from the 1840s to the 1870s and extended for some 2,000 miles through the wilderness.

Orestes Greek mythical figure. He was the son of Clytemnestra and Agamemnon, and the brother of Iphiginea and Electra. He slew his mother and her lover, Aegisthus, to avenge their murder of his father.

Orestes d. AD 476. Roman general. He used barbarian help in deposing (AD 475) Western Roman emperor Julius Nepos and installing his own son Romulus Augustulus the last emperor of the Western Roman Empire.

Organization of African Unity Organization of independent African states, established (1963) to promote African unity and mutual cooperaiton in defense and development.

Organization of American States ⟨OAS⟩ International organization, founded (1948) to promote military, economic, and cultural cooperation. Its member nations include the United States and most of the nations of Latin America. Cuba was expelled from the OAS in 1962.

Organization of Central American States Central American association, organized (1951) to promote regional and economic unity. Its member states include Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua.

Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ⟨OPEC⟩ International group formed (1960) to promote the interests of countries that supply the world market with oil. When the group was founded, member nations were largely at the mercy of the great international oil companies, which controlled all-important (in times of plentiful supply) systems of distribution and marketing. But as oil consumption began to outstrip production in the late 1960s, producing countries began to get the upper hand. By cutting back their production, OPEC members found they could effectively force the great industrial powers to pay any price for oil they demanded. The huge price increases it put into effect (Dec., 1973) signaled the ascendancy of OPEC as a dominant force in the world oil industry. Membership now includes oil-producing countries in the Middle East, Africa, and South America. An oversupply of oil developed in the early 1980s, forced OPEC members to agree to reduced prices and production quotas.

Orgetorix d. 60? BC. Helvetian chieftain at the time of J. Caesar's Gallic Wars (q.v.).

Oriental canon law Ecclesiastical laws concerning the government of Eastern Christian churches. Rudimentary collections of such laws can be traced back to the 5th cent. AD, and a major compilation, important to the canon law of the Eastern Orthodox church, was completed by Photius *c*880. The various churches in the East do not share a common code of canon law.

Origen AD 185?–254? Christian philosopher. Origen wrote over 800 works seeking to explain and justify Christianity in terms of Greek thought, especially Neoplatonism and Stoicism. He instituted biblical textual criticism at his famous school in Alexandria.

Orion Greek mythical figure. A giant hunter, he was the subject of several legends. At his death he was transformed into the constellation Orion.

Oriskany, Battle of Battle (Aug. 6, 1777) of the American Revolution, in northern New York State. American militiamen under Gen. Nicholas Herkimer (1728–77) were ambushed and defeated by British troops led by Barry St. Leger (1737–89) as the Americans were attempting to relieve Fort Stanwix (now Rome, New York).

Orlando, Vittorio Emmanuele 1860–1952. Italian statesman. As premier (1917–19), he was one of the "Big Four" at the Versailles Peace Conference (1919), which formally ended WW I.

Orléanists French supporters of King Louis Philippe of the Orléans branch of the Bourbon line. Louis Philippe came to the throne after the July Revolution (1830). The Orléanists supported his monarchy against both republican and Bonapartist forces.

Orléans The cadet (younger) branch of the French Valois and Bourbon royal houses. The line has played a leading role in French history. The title "duke of Orléans" was first given (1344) to Philippe (1336–75), son of Valois French king Philip VI. In 1392, King Charles VI gave the title to his brother Louis, a key figure in the struggles between the Armagnacs and Burgundians (q.v.). Other members included Charles of ~, a cocommander at the Battle of Agincourt (q.v.) and father of French king Louis XII; Philippe I of ~, son of King Louis XIII and brother of King Louis XIV; his son, Philippe II of ~, regent of France during the minority of King Louis XV; Louis Philippe Joseph of ~, who sided with the revolutionists during the French Revolution; and his son, French king Louis Philippe. Louis Philippe Albert of ~ (1838–94) became count of Paris; and his son, Louis Philippe Robert of ~, became pretender to the French throne upon extinction (1883) of the elder Bourbon line.

Orléans, Charles, duke of 1391–1465. French prince and poet, son of Louis, duke of Orléans. He tried to avenge the murder of his father by joining the Armagnacs against the Burgundians. He was captured in the Battle of Agincourt (1415) and taken to England. Ransomed in 1440, he spent the rest of his life as a literary personage.

Orléans, Gaston, duke of 1608–60. French prince, son of French king Henry IV and younger brother of Louis XIII. He was involved in several unsuccessful conspiracies against Cardinal Richelieu, and was exiled (1652) from Paris for leading the Fronde.

Orléans, Louis, duke of 1372–1407. French nobleman, chief counselor to his brother, French king Charles VI. Louis' conflict with his uncle, Philip the Bold of Burgundy, precipitated the long power struggle between the Armagnacs and the Burgundians. He was killed by Philip's son John the Fearless.

Orléans, Louis Philippe Albert, duke of See Orléans

Orléans, Louis Philippe Joseph, duke of 1747–93. French revolutionary. In 1789, he and other liberal nobles joined the third estate. He changed his title to "Citizen Égalité," and voted for the execution of his cousin Louis XVI. His son became King Louis Philippe.

Orléans, Louis Philippe Robert, duke of 1869–1926. French nobleman, pretender to the French throne during the Third Republic.

Orléans, Philippe I, duke of 1640–1701. French nobleman and soldier. The brother of King Louis XIV, he fought in the Dutch Wars and won the Battle of Cassel. He founded the house of Bourbon-Orléans.

Orléans, Philippe II, duke of 1674–1723. French nobleman and soldier. He was successful in the War of the Grand Alliance and the War of the Spanish Succession. As regent for King Louis XV (1715–23), he presided over the failure (1720) of the Mississippi Scheme (q.v.).

Orléans, Siege of Historic siege of Orléans, France, (Oct., 1428–May, 1429) by the English during the Hundred Years' War. The English, supporting the claims of English king Henry VI to the French throne, laid siege to Orléans, controlled by the supporters of the French dauphin Charles VII. The English brought the city to near surrender when Joan of Arc, who had gained the permission of Charles to raise an army, entered the city and lifted the siege. The English defeat marked the turning point in the Hundred Years' War.

Orleans, Territory of See Territory of Orleans

Orlov, Grigory See Catherine II

Ormonde, James Butler, 2d duke of 1665–1745. Anglo-Irish soldier. A grandson of the first duke, he served as lord lieutenant of Ireland and as commander in chief (1711–14) during the War of the Spanish Succession. Impeached (1715) under George I, he fled to the Continent and joined the Jacobites.

Ormonde, James Butler, 12th earl and 1st duke of 1610–88. Anglo-Irish statesman. He was the principal Irish supporter of the Stuarts during the English Civil War and was twice lord lieutenant of Ireland after the Restoration.

Orozco, José Clemente 1883–1949. Mexican painter, considered one of the 20th-cent. masters of the mural and fresco. Many of his works depict scenes from the Mexican Revolution.

Orpheus Mythical Greek musician. He was permitted to lead his dead wife, Eurydice, from Hades, providing he did not look back at her during their return trip. He looked back, and she vanished forever.

Orphic Mysteries Ancient Greek cult. Dating to the 6th cent. BC, it was said to have been founded by Orpheus. Its adherents followed an ascetic code of life.

Orsini Roman family that from the 12th cent. held great political and religious power in Rome and Italy. Its members included popes Celestine III, Nicholas III, and Benedict XIII. It supported the Guelph faction in the long struggle between the Guelphs and Ghibellines (q.v.).

Orsini, Giovanni Gaetani See Nicholas III

Ortega y Gasset, José 1883–1955. Spanish philosopher and writer. His books made him the most influential author of pre-Franco Spain. One of his best-known works is Revolt of the Masses.

Orthodox church of Russia Largest of the Orthodox Eastern churches. The origins of the Russian church go back to the introduction of Christianity in Russia by Byzantine missionaries. Christianity was made the state religion of Kiev in 988 and the church was governed from Constantinople. In 1439 the Union of Florence briefly reunited Russian Christians with the Roman Catholic church; soon after failure of the union, the Russian church declared itself autocephalous (autonomous and independent). The patriarchate of Moscow was given formal status in 1589, but in 1712 Czar Peter the Great abolished the patriarchate and put the church under strict state control. The patriarchate was reestablished just before the Russian Revolution of 1917 but, during both Lenin's and Stalin's regimes, the church suffered severe persecutions. In 1943, as part of Stalin's new policies during WW II, the church was revived and encouraged to expand. The church endured yet another period of persecutions (1959–64) under N. Khrushchev. In the 1960s, the church opened relations with the Roman Catholic church (following the Second Vatican Council) and joined the World Council of Churches.

Orthodox Eastern church Collective name for the family of Christian churches that exist largely in the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and Russia. All the Orthodox churches accept the authority of the first seven ecumenical councils of the Catholic church but do not accept later councils. They also do not recognize the authority of the Roman Catholic pope as supreme head of the church nor the practice of mandatory celibacy for priests. The origins of the Orthodox church can be traced to the late Roman Empire. As the empire weakened and was divided into the Western Empire and the Eastern Empire, so too did the early Christian church suffer a growing division.

The Western church developed along Latin lines and adapted Roman political and civil patterns, while the Eastern church retained a traditional Greek heritage. The separation between the two parts of the Christian world occurred slowly from the 5th to 11th cents. and became a complete schism in 1054, when Pope Leo IX excommunicated Michael Cerularius, patriarch of Constantinople, and all his followers. The primary disagreement between the Eastern and Western churches was the incorporation of the term filioque, meaning "and from the son," into the Nicene Creed. The introduction of the filioque occurred in the Western church after centuries of controversy over the nature of the Holy Trinity, the supremacy of the Father, and the nature of the Son as a being with a divine and human nature. The Eastern churches also refused to accept the spiritual supremacy of the pope, as they do not recognize one person as the leading spiritual figure.

Eastern churches are largely autonomous, and the major divisions of the church are known as patriarchates. Chief among these are the patriarchates of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem, all formed in the early history of the Christian church. From these, through missionary work and emigration, sprang numerous other Orthodox churches in Eastern Europe. The greatest of these was the Orthodox church of Russia (q.v.), which was originally governed through the patriarchate of Constantinople. It became an independent patriarchate in 1589. In recent years there have been renewed efforts at reconciling the Roman and Orthodox churches, and several Orthodox representatives were invited as observers to the Second Vatican Council (q.v.). (See also Roman Catholic church for history to 1054.)

Orwell, George ⟨Blair, Eric Arthur⟩ 1903–50. British novelist, essayist, and critic, one of the leading political writers of his day. He is known best for his novels Animal Farm and 1984.

Osborne, John James 1929–. English playwright, considered the leading "angry young man" of British drama. His plays include Look Back in Anger and The Entertainer.

Osborne, Thomas, 1st earl of Danby 1631–1712. English statesman. He served under King Charles I, but his staunch Anglicanism led him to oppose James II. He arranged the marriage of Princess Mary to William of Orange.

Oscar I 1799–1859. King of Norway and Sweden (1844–59). Oscar pursued liberal policies. He championed fiscal and penal reforms and freedom of the press.

Oscar II 1829–1907. King of Sweden (1872–1907) and Norway (1872–1905). During his reign, Norway severed its union with Sweden (1905). Oscar was a noted writer and a patron of the arts.

Osceola *c*1800–38. Seminole Indian leader. He conducted a successful guerrilla campaign against US forces in the Second Seminole War (1835–37). Arriving for a truce talk, he was arrested and imprisoned. He died soon after.

Osei Tutu d. 1712. West African leader, founder and first ruler of the Ashanti nation. The nation was created from a confederacy of West African kingdoms in what is now Ghana.

Osiris Ancient Egyptian god. Osiris brought agriculture and civilization to earth. Killed by his envious brother Set, he then became god of the underworld.

Osler, Sir William 1849–1919. Canadian-born British physician, noted for his studies of blood platelets and his numerous books on medical history. His Principles and Practice of Medicine has long been a leading reference work.

Oslo Capital and leading city (pop. 461,400) of Norway. Founded (*c*1050) by King Harold III, it was destroyed by fire (1624), then rebuilt as Christiania, and renamed Oslo in 1924. It was occupied by the Germans (1940–45) during WW II. Oslo was the site of the 1952 Olympic games.

Osman I ⟨Othman I⟩ 1259–1326. Turkish leader, founder of the Ottoman Empire. Declaring himself emir (*c*1299), Osman greatly extended his holdings, largely through conquest of territory from the Byzantine Empire.

Osmeña, Sergio 1878–1961. Filipino statesman. Osmeña was vice-president (1935–44) when the Philippines fell to Japan in WW II. He fled with President M. Quezon, whom he succeeded as president (1944–46).

Ostend Manifesto Document formulated (Oct., 1854) at Ostend, Belgium, calling for US acquisition of Cuba. Drawn up by the US ministers to France (John Y. Mason, 1799–1859), Great Britain (J. Buchanan), and Spain (P. Soule), it suggested that Cuba should be taken by force if necessary. It caused such an uproar that Secretary of State W. Marcy disavowed it.

ostracism Greek political banishment imposed by Athenians on those disrupting local stability. The banishment lasted ten years.

Ostrogoths ⟨East Goths⟩ Germanic tribe. The Ostrogoths were the eastern tribes of the Goths, the Visigoths being their western counterparts. They were believed to have originated in southern Russia. After being conquered by the Huns (AD *c*370), they joined with them against the Visigoths and pushed westward into the Roman Empire. After Attila's death (AD 453), many Ostrogoths settled in Hungary. Others continued into Italy, where their leader, Theodoric, defeated Odoacer and became king (493). They were finally subjugated by the Byzantine general Narses (552) and were absorbed into other cultures.

Oswald, Lee Harvey See Kennedy, John F.

Oswiu See Oswy

Oswy ⟨Oswiu⟩ d. 670. Northumbrian king (*c*642–670). By war or marriage, he united most of England under him. He advanced Christianity in England and, at the Synod of Whitby (q.v.), favored Roman religious practices over the Celtic.

Othman I See Osman I

Otho I See Otto I

Otho, Marcus Salvius AD 32–69. Roman emperor (AD 69). Otho helped Galba overthrow Nero. Subsequently he overthrew Galba and proclaimed himself emperor. After ruling for three months, he was in turn defeated by Vitellius.

Otis, James 1725–83. American Colonial statesman. Otis resigned his office of advocate general in Massachusetts (1756–61) after refusing to enforce the Writs of Assistance. He later served in the Stamp Act Congress.

Ottawa Canadian capital city (pop. 626,000). Founded in 1827, it was designated as the capital (1858) by Queen Victoria.

Ottawa Indians North American Indian tribe. A branch of the Algonquian linguistic family, they lived north of the Great Lakes. They sided with the French in the French and Indian Wars, and later with the British in the American Revolution and the War of 1812. The Indian leader Pontiac was an Ottawa Indian.

Otterburn, Battle of See Douglas family

Otto I ⟨Otto the Great⟩ 912–973. German king (936–973) and Holy Roman Emperor (962–973). Otto became king at the end of a period in which the east Frankish kingdom—created by the Treaty of Verdun (q.v.)—had broken up into petty states. Central authority was then beginning to reemerge under the leadership of the kingdom of Saxony. As German king, Otto succeeded in extending his authority over rebellious German dukes by force of arms and by using the church to strengthen his rule ("Ottonian" system). He further reinforced his position by defeating the invading Magyars (955) and by subduing the Slavs (960). He intervened in the west Frankish kingdom (France) over possession of Lorraine and in 951 marched into Italy and assumed the title king of the Lombards. In 961, he again invaded Italy to aid Pope John XII against Berengar II. The pope crowned Otto emperor (962), a title that had lapsed at the end of the 9th cent., and concluded an agreement to regulate relations between the pope and the emperor. Otto's coronation is thus usually taken as the beginning of the Holy Roman Empire (q.v.) and its long, often troubled alliance with the church. In 963, Pope John turned against Otto, fearing he had become too powerful. Otto deposed John, installed Leo VIII as pope, and soon after suppressed a revolt by the Romans. After Leo's death in 965, the Romans again revolted and Otto was forced to invade Italy again (966–972).

Otto I ⟨Otho I⟩ 1815–67. Greek king (1832–62). The son of Louis I of Bavaria, he was selected to be the king of Greece by the London Conference, after the War of Greek Independence. Autocratic and ambitious, he was unpopular and was finally deposed.

Otto I 1848–1916. Bavarian king (1886–1913), successor to his brother Louis II. He became insane in 1872, and his uncle Luitpold served as his regent (1886–1912). He was deposed by parliament and Luitpold's son became Louis III.

Otto II 955–983. Holy Roman Emperor (973–983) and German king (961–983), successor to his father, Otto I. He repulsed attacks from Bavaria and Denmark but was badly defeated by the Arabs in southern Italy (982).

Otto III 980–1002. Holy Roman Emperor (996–1002) and German king (983–1002), successor to his father, Otto II. He installed his cousin as Pope Gregory V and his tutor as Pope Sylvester II. He attempted to make Rome his capital but was forced out. He was preparing to retake the city when he died.

Otto IV 1182?–1218. Holy Roman Emperor (1209–15) and German king. He contested the throne with Philip of Swabia, and became emperor after Philip's death. He was excommunicated for attacking Italy, and Frederick II was made rival king (1212). Otto was defeated by French king Philip II at Bouvines (1214), and was deposed (1215).

Ottocar I ⟨Ottocar, Premysl I⟩ ⟨Ottokar I⟩ d. 1230. Bohemian king (1198–1230). Otto car won Bohemia's autonomy from Philip of Swabia (1198).

Ottocar II ⟨Ottocar, Premysl II⟩ ⟨Ottokar II⟩ d. 1278. Bohemian king (1252–78). He added Austria, Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola to his empire but failed to become Holy Roman Emperor. He opposed Holy Roman Emperor Rudolf I and was defeated and killed at the Battle of Marchfeld.

Ottocar, Premysl See Ottocar

Ottokar See Ottocar

Ottoman Empire Former empire established in the 13th cent. by the Osmanli (Ottoman) Turks. Formed from the territories once ruled by the Seljuk Turks, the empire expanded its holdings at the expense of the Byzantine Empire. The Ottoman conquest of Constantinople (1453) marked the end of the Byzantine Empire. The Ottomans then advanced into Europe, creating an empire that stretched from the Balkans (southeast Europe), across the Near East and into North Africa. By the early 18th cent. the empire began to disintegrate, and during the 19th cent. the Eastern Question (q.v.) became a major concern of European powers. The empire was finally dismembered at the end of WW I. (For subsequent history, see Turkey.) Key dates in the history of the Ottoman Empire include:

c1299–1326 Osman I reigned; founded Ottoman Empire in northwest Anatolia by absorbing neighboring states as the power of the Seljuk Turks declined; attacked domains of Byzantine Empire.

1326 City of Bursa, conquered by Osman, became first capital of Ottoman Empire.

1326–59 Orkhan reigned as second Ottoman ruler; expanded control over western Anatolia, taking Byzantine and neighboring Turkmen states; began Ottoman expansion in the Balkans (southeast Europe).

1359–89 Murad I reigned; empire rapidly expanded eastward into Byzantine domains and westward into Balkans; Byzantines forced to recognize Ottoman suzerainty.

1361 Ottomans conquered Adrianople; city subsequently became capital of the empire.

1371 Murad I decisively defeated the Serbs (Sept. 26) at the Battle of Maritsa River, near Adrianople.

1386 Battle of Konya; Turkmen states, allied to halt Ottoman expansion eastward, defeated by Murad I.

1389 Christian Slavs defeated (June) at the Battle of Kosovo, now in southern Yugoslavia; Ottoman advance in Balkans continued.

1389–1403 Bajazet I reigned; continued Ottoman advance in Balkans, arousing Europeans against him; his annexation of Turkmen states in Anatolia ended in ruinous conflict with Tamerlane.

1391–98 Bajazet blockaded Constantinople.

1394 Salonika captured.

1395–96 Bajazet invaded Hungary; defeated force of Hungarian, French, English, Polish crusaders at Nicopolis (1396), in Bulgaria.

1402 Tamerlane invaded the empire; Bajazet defeated at the Battle of Ankara (July) and taken captive.

1413–21 Muhammad I reigned after struggle to reunite empire.

1421–51 Murad II reigned: expansion of empire renewed.

1444 Battle of Varna fought (Nov. 10); Murad II destroyed invading Hungarian army, thus maintaining control of Eastern Europe.

1451–81 Muhammad II reigned; called "the Conqueror," he greatly expanded Ottoman domains.

1453 Ottomans captured Constantinople and thus ended the Byzantine Empire; Ottomans made Constantinople their capital.

1456 Ottoman siege of Belgrade lifted after victory by Hungarian J. N. Hunyadi.

1456–58 Serbia subjugated and annexed to empire.

1461 Trebizond Empire, a remnant of Byzantine Empire in Greece, conquered; Ottomans extended control over Greece.

1463–79 First major war with Venice, which the Turks won.

1468 Albania conquered after series of defeats at the hands of Scanderbeg.

1475 Tatar khanate of Crimea forced to recognize Ottoman suzerainty.

1480 Ottomans established foothold in southern Italy with capture of Otranto.

1480–81 Siege of Rhodes, last Christian stronghold in eastern Mediterranean; Turks repulsed.

1512–20 Selim I reigned; in addition to his conquests, Selim I proclaimed himself successor to the Muslim Arab caliphs; Ottomans thus became leaders of the Muslim world.

1514 Selim I victorious (Aug. 23) over a Persian army at the Battle of Chaldiran in Armenia.

1515 Selim annexed parts of Persia.

1516 Syria conquered.

1517 Selim I conquered Egypt.

1518 Algiers conquered.

1520–66 Suleiman I reigned; made notable legal reforms, encouraged arts and greatly expanded empire; also built up Ottoman navy.

1521 Belgrade conquered.

1522 Rhodes conquered.

1526 Battle of Mohacs; Turkish victory over Hungarian king Louis II; eventually led to Turkish domination of Hungary.

1529 Turks laid siege to Vienna; forced to withdraw.

1530s Ottomans conquered Iraq and other territories from Persia.

1535 Alliance with France against Hapsburgs formed; continued in subsequent centuries.

1540 Ottoman control extended into southern Hungary.

1541 Buda taken; much of Hungary fell under Ottoman rule.

1551 Ottomans conquered Tripoli.

1566–74 Selim II reigned; Cyprus conquered and Tunisia reconquered; reign marked by beginning of decline in sultan's powers as the Muslim clergy and Janissaries gained strength.

1571 Battle of Lepanto, victory of the Christian Holy League over the Ottoman navy; marked first check of Ottoman expansionism.

1571 Cyprus conquered from Venice.

1574–95 Murad III reigned; parts of Armenia conquered, taken from Persia.

1591–1606 Fifteen Years' War fought with Austria.

1603–17 Ahmed I reigned; empire weakened by Treaty of Szitvatorok (1606); commercial concessions granted to European powers.

1605–23 Persians warred against Ottomans, finally capturing Baghdad.

1620–21 Poles victorious at Battle of Chocim.

1623–40 Murad IV reigned; reconquered territories lost to Persia and captured Baghdad (1638); decline of empire, due to corruption, maladministration, and internal unrest, accelerated after his death; grand viziers rose to power.

1645–64 War with Venice in which weakness of Ottoman Empire was revealed.

1676–81 Russo-Turkish War; Russians gained most of Turkish Ukraine.

1682–99 Austro-Turkish War fought; Ottomans lost Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia, Slavonia, Dalmatia, and Podolia.

1695–96 Russo-Turkish War; Russians captured Azov.

earlier success of Persia in Transcaucasus (1730).

1710–11 Russo-Turkish War; Ottomans attacked Russia, regaining Azov as the Northern War raged in the Baltic region.

1736–39 Russo-Turkish War; Russians retook Azov.

1743–46 War with Persia proved indecisive; earlier success of Persia in Transcaucasus (1730).

1768–74 Russo-Turkish War; Russians victorious and greatly increased influence in Crimea; Russians established as protectors of Christians in Ottoman domains; war ended by Treaty of Kuchuk Kainarji.

1787–92 Russo-Turkish War; Russia generally successful in war, caused by its annexation of the Crimea (1783).

1789–1807 Selim III reigned; forced to abdicate during a revolt caused by his attempts at reform.

1806–12 Russo-Turkish War; Russia acquired Bessarabia

1808–39 Mahmud II reigned; attempted to reestablish power of sultanate.

1821–31 Greek War of Independence; Ottomans lost Greek domains.

1826 Convention of Akkerman signed (Oct. 7); Serbia granted autonomy; Russia to oversee autonomy of Moldavia and Walachia.

1826 Revolt of the Janissaries quashed; their power broken.

1828–29 Russo-Turkish War; Russia penetrated deeply into the Balkans.

1831–33 War with Egypt; Muhammad Ali of Egypt gained Syria; European powers intervened to halt further conflict.

1839–61 Abdul-Mejid reigned; his reforms were opposed by Muslim reactionaries; continued existence of Ottoman state largely dependent on European powers.

1839–40 Ottomans unsuccessfully attacked Egyptians in Syria; Europeans forced Egyptian ruler Muhammad Ali to return Syria to Ottomans; Muhammad Ali made hereditary ruler of Egypt, under Ottoman suzerainty.

1853–56 Crimean War; European powers opposed Russia's expansion into Ottoman domains; Eastern Question became major diplomatic concern in following years.

1861–76 Abd-al-Aziz reigned; liberal movement led by Midhat Pasha gained momentum during his rule; Midhat played key role in his overthrow.

1875 Bosnia and Herzegovina rebelled against Ottoman rule; uprisings led to Serbo-Turkish War (1876–78).

1876 Bulgarian Horrors; Christians massacred.

1876–78 Serbo-Turkish War; Serbs joined rebels in Bosnia and Herzegovina and declared war on the Ottomans; conflict merged with the Russo-Turkish War.

1877 Midhat Pasha secured passage of constitution establishing parliamentary rule in the empire; parliament soon dissolved by sultan Murad V.

1877–78 Russo-Turkish War; victorious Russians advanced to just outside Constantinople.

1878 Congress of Berlin; Russian gains in Russo-Turkish War reduced but Ottomans nevertheless lost much of the Balkans.

1883 British took control of Egypt.

1894–96 Massacres of rebellious Armenians.

1897 Greco-Turkish War fought (Apr.–May) with Greece over control of Crete; Turks gained several victories and Greece accepted an armistice.

1908 Rebellion by Young Turks forced restoration of constitutional government.

1908 Bulgaria became independent; Bosnia and Herzegovina passed to Austro-Hungarian empire.

1911–12 Italo-Turkish War; Italy gained Tripoli and the area that became Libya.

1912–13 Balkan Wars; Ottoman rule in Europe virtually ended.

1913 Young Turks, led by Enver Pasha, seized control of government.

1914–18 Ottomans joined Central Powers during WW I; Arab revolts and Allied drive from Egypt through Palestine further reduced Ottoman power; Allied victory guaranteed the ultimate dissolution of the empire.

1918–22 Muhammad VI, last Ottoman sultan, reigned.

1920 Treaty of Sèvres signed with Allies; formally ended existence of Ottoman Empire; Turkish nationalists refused to recognize treaty.

1922 Muhammad VI overthrown by nationalists; Republic of Turkey established.

Otto of Freising d. 1158. German historian and bishop of Freising. The uncle of Holy Roman Emperor Frederick I, he is known best for The Two Cities, a history of the world to the year 1146.

Otto the Great See Otto I

Oudenaarde, Battle of ⟨Audenarde, ~⟩ Allied victory over the French (July 11, 1708) during the War of the Spanish Succession, at Oudenaarde, now in Belgium. Some 80,000 allied troops under J. Churchill, duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene of Savoy defeated about 100,000 French under the command of Louis Joseph, duke of Vendôme.

Ourique, Battle of See Alfonso I, king of Portugal

Outer Mongolia See Mongolia

Outer Space Treaty Treaty sponsored (1966) by the UN. Signed (1967) by more than sixty nations, it sought to control the use of outer space for military purposes and promoted international cooperation in space activities.

Overland Trail Name applied to any of several routes used by American pioneers to travel to the West from the Mississippi in the 19th cent. It applies especially to the Oregon Trail (q.v.)

Overton, Richard See Levelers

Ovid ⟨Naso, Publius Ovidius⟩ 43 BC–AD 18. Roman poet, considered one of the great poets of antiquity. Among his many works are The Art of Love, Metamorphoses, and Fasti. After his banishment by Augustus (AD 8), he wrote Tristia, poems of exile.

Owen, Robert 1771–1858. British manufacturer and reformer. A successful textile manufacturer, he instituted reforms in child employment, education, health, and hygiene. His progressive ideas were adopted by several experimental communities, including one at New Harmony, Indiana (q.v.).

Owens, Jesse 1913–80. American athlete, a black who won four gold medals for the US at the 1936 Olympics at Berlin. His outstanding performance was a severe blow to A. Hitler's myth of Aryan supremacy.

Oxenstierna, Count Axel Gustavsson 1583–1654. Swedish statesman. He virtually ruled Sweden for King Gustavus II during the Thirty Years' War, and served as guardian for Queen Christina.

Oxford, Provisions of See Provisions of Oxford

Oxford and Asquith, Herbert Henry, 1st earl of See Asquith, Herbert Henry, 1st earl of Oxford and Asquith

Oxford Group See Moral Rearmament

Oxford movement Movement among 19th-cent. Anglican clergymen at Oxford University to renew the faith and worship of the Church of England (q.v.) by returning to early Christian sources. The movement sought to establish that the Anglican church was a branch of the ancient undivided Catholic church by virtue of apostolic succession, and did not derive ecclesiastical authority from king or parliament. It also sought to revive ancient Catholic teachings. The movement is usually dated from 1833, when J. Keble preached an Oxford sermon on England's "national apostasy." J. Newman edited and wrote many of a series of pamphlets, Tracts for the Times, propagating the movement's ideas and inspiring the name Tractarians for its adherents. The third principal leader was E. Pusey, who inspired another name, Puseyites, for the group. The movement is considered to have ended (1845) with the conversion of Newman and some other members to Catholicism, but its main themes and ideas have continued to influence the Church of England.

Oxmal See Uxmal

Ozaki, Yukio 1859–1954. Japanese statesman. A newspaper editor and leading liberal, he was elected to every diet between 1890 and 1952. He advocated universal suffrage and opposed militarism and was jailed during both world wars.

P

Paasikivi, Juho Kusti 1870–1956. Great Finnish statesman, prime minister (1918, 1944–46) and president (1946–56). As both prime minister and president he pursued a policy of appeasement toward Russia as the only way to ensure Finnish independence.

Pacem in Terris See John XXIII

Pacific, War of the War (1879–84) between Chile and the neighboring states of Bolivia and Peru. The war erupted over disputed coastal territories located along the border between Chile and Bolivia. Chile first occupied the Bolivian coastal province of Antofagasta (from Feb. 14, 1879), and then Peru was drawn into the conflict. Chile declared war on them both (Apr., 1879) and, after completing its occupation of Bolivia's coastal territory, attacked Peru. Chile made extensive conquests in Peru and finally occupied the capital city of Lima in Jan., 1881. With the Peruvian government on the verge of collapse, Peru and Chile signed (1883) the Treaty of Ancon (q.v.), by which Chile won mineral-rich Peruvian lands. Chile and Bolivia then signed the Treaty of Valparaiso (Apr. 4, 1884), by which Bolivia ceded its entire coastline to Chile.

Pacification of Ghent Religious truce and union (Nov. 8, 1576) agreed to by Protestant and Catholic provinces of the Spanish Netherlands, then in rebellion against rule by the Spanish Hapsburgs. The agreement was intended to put aside religious differences between the Calvanistic (northern) provinces and the Catholic (southern) provinces for the purposes of driving out Spanish troops sent to put down their revolt. This document was followed (1879) by the Union of Utrecht (q.v.), by which the northern provinces declared complete independence.

Pacific Islands, Trust Territory of the UN trust territory administered by the US. Capital is Saipan. It consists of the Caroline, Marshall, and Mariana (except Guam) island groups. German possessions until WW I, the islands became Japanese territories by League of Nations mandate (1922). They were taken by the US during WW II and became US trust territories in 1947.

Pacific Scandal Canadian political scandal (1873). Prime Minister J. Macdonald was charged with awarding the contract for the Canadian Pacific Railway to a syndicate headed by Sir Hugh Allan, in return for campaign contributions by Allan. The scandal contributed to the downfall of Macdonald's Conservative administration.

Pacific Treaty, Four-Power See Four-Power Pacific Treaty

pacifism Ethical, philosophical, or moral opposition to war or violence. Pacifism may take the form of either individual or organized action. Its development has been greatly influenced by religion, and doctrines of nonviolence may be found in the teachings of Buddhism, Christianity, and Judaism, as well as in the tenets of such sects as Quakers and Mennonites. In modern history, pacifism was a factor in M. Gandhi's policies of nonviolent resistance against British rule in India, in the civil rights movement in the US (1950s and early 1960s), and, for a time, in the opposition to the US conduct of the Vietnam War.

Pact of Halepa ⟨Khalepa, Treaty of⟩ After quelling an insurrection in Crete, the ruling Turks through this pact granted (Oct., 1878) Greek Christians on the island a majority of seats in the assembly, as well as a large measure of self-government.

Pact of Paris See Kellogg-Briand Pact

Pact of Steel Treaty (May 22, 1939) between Germany and Italy, confirming the German-Italian alliance. The treaty obligated each to enter any war in which the other was engaged. Thus Italy joined A. Hitler in WW II (June 10, 1940) and ultimately broke the treaty by reaching a separate peace with the Allies on Sept. 3, 1943.

Paderewski, Ignace Jan 1860–1941. Polish pianist, composer, and patriot. A world-famous pianist, Paderewski donated much of his fortune made from piano concerts to Polish charities. He served briefly as Poland's prime minister in 1919.

Padilla, Juan de 1490–1521. Spanish revolutionary. Padilla led a revolt by the Communeros (q.v.) against Holy Roman Emperor Charles V but was captured and executed.

Padua Historic city (pop. 235,000), located in northern Italy. A rail and commercial center, it has many historic buildings, adorned with works by Giotto, Titian, Donatello, and others. Mentioned as early as 302 BC, it later flourished under Roman control. It rose to prominence again (11th–13th cents.) as a free commune. The city passed to Venice (1405–1797) and played a role in the unification of Italy. The University of Padua was a noted intellectual center in medieval times.

Padua, Marsilius of See Marsilius of Padua

Padua, Saint Anthony of See Anthony of Padua, Saint

Paean Greek god. Paean was the god of healing and the physician to the other gods.

Paeonius fl. 5th cent. BC. Greek sculptor. Paeonius is thought to have sculpted the famed statue of Nike (Winged Victory) that was discovered in 1875.

Páez, José Antonio 1790–1873. Venezuelan revolutionary and statesman. He aided S. Bolívar in the fight for South American independence from Spain. Later, however, he led the movement to separate (1831) Venezuela from Bolívar's Great Colombia (q.v.). Páez was president (1831–35, 1839–43) and dictator (1861–63) of Venezuela.

Paganini, Niccolò 1782–1840. Great Italian violinist and composer. Paganini revolutionized violin technique, making extensive use of harmonics.

Pagerie, Marie Joséphine Rose Tascher de la See Joséphine

Paget, Sir James 1814–99. British surgeon. He discovered the parasite that causes trichinosis and was noted for his work on cancers and bone diseases.

Pahlavi ⟨Pehlevi⟩ Iranian branch of the Indo-European languages. Pahlavi was the middle stage (3d–10th cent. AD) in the evolution from the old to modern Persian language and was the official language of the Sassanid dynasty.

Paine, Thomas 1737–1809. English-born American patriot, pamphlet writer, and political theorist. He emigrated to America in 1774 and quickly became active in the revolutionary cause. His famous pamphlet Common Sense (Jan. 1776) argued for independence from Britain and his series of pamphlets, The Crisis (1776–83), advanced the patriot cause during the war years. Returning to England, he wrote The Rights of Man in support of the French Revolution. Convicted of treason in England, he went to France and took part in the revolution, until he was imprisoned (1793–94) during the Reign of Terror. While there he wrote The Age of Reason, promoting deism (q.v.). Returning to the US (1802), he was met with disfavor and died in obscurity.

Painlevé, Paul 1863–1933. French mathematician and statesman. Painlevé promoted aviation in France and served twice as premier (1917, 1925). He was renowned for his writings on higher mathematics.

Paiute Indians North American Indian tribe, a branch of the Shoshone tribe. They were divided into the northern Paiute (in parts of California, Oregon, and Nevada) and the southern Paiute (in parts of Nevada, Utah, and Arizona). The Ghost Dance religion arose among the Paiutes during the late 19th cent.

Paix des Dames See Cambrai, Treaty of

Pakenham, Sir Edward See New Orleans, Battle of

Pakistan ⟨Republic of Pakistan⟩ Muslim state bordering northwestern India in southern Asia. Its capital is Islamabad. The early history of Pakistan was largely that of India, and it was not until 1947 that the modern state was created (by the partition of India into Hindu and Muslim homelands). Muslim Pakistan once also included a separate area (East Pakistan), bordering on northeastern India. The two were governed as one nation until 1971, when the eastern part gained independence as Bangladesh. The Indus Valley in Pakistan long served as a route for invading India and was crossed by the Aryans, Persians, Arabs, and Turks. Key dates in the history of Pakistan include:

2500–c1500 BC Indus Valley civilization flourished in Pakistan; succumbed to Aryan invaders.

AD 700–900 Muslim Arabs conquered northwestern India (including Pakistan).

c1200 Turkish invaders occupied Bengal; converted Hindus to Islam.

16TH–19TH CENTS. Eastern (Bangladesh) region controlled by Indian (Muslim) Mogul Empire.

1730s Persia captured western region.

18TH CENT. Afghanistan ruled Sind and Punjab in west.

1780–1839 Sikhs (under Ranjit Singh) ruled the Punjab.

1840s British, expanding their domains in India, began conquest of region of Pakistan (proper); captured Sind and Punjab but were unable to completely subdue tribes in region.

1901 Britain created North-West Frontier Province of India to administer Pakistan (proper).

1906 Nationalist Muslim League founded as Indian nationalist movement, dominated by Hindus, failed to hold Muslim support.

1930 Concept of Muslim nation separate from India promulgated by Muhammad Iqbal.

1940 Muhammad Ali Jinnah demanded creation of Muslim state in areas of large Muslim population in India.

1947 Britain created India and Pakistan as separate independent states (Aug. 15).

1947 Capital established at Karachi; Jinnah in office as first governor-general (1947–48); Liaquat Ali Khan in office as first prime minister (1947–51).

1947–48 Violence between Hindus and Muslims in India and newly created Pakistani states resulted in migrations by millions between Hindu and Muslim-controlled lands.

1948–49 India-Pakistan War over Kashmir.

1951 Prime minister Liaquat Ali Khan assassinated.

1955 West Pakistan reorganized into new administrative districts; eastern region officially named East Pakistan.

1956 Constitution adopted; Pakistan became member of the British Commonwealth.

1956–58 Iskander Mirza in office as first president.

1958–69 Army general Muhammad Ayub Kahn held power as head of state; given dictatorial powers (1958) in wake of continuing economic problems and unrest.

1959 Islamabad made capital.

1965 India-Pakistan conflict over Kashmir and Rann of Kutch.

1968–69 Strikes and riots in East Pakistan led to Ayub Khan's resignation; Gen. Agha Muhammad Yahya Khan installed; declared martial law.

1970 Elections for National Assembly to write new constitution; East Pakistan separatist movement (Awami League) gained majority.

1971 Yahya canceled assembly, banned Awami League.

1971 Bangladesh (East Pakistan) declared independence (Mar. 26).

1971 Bloody civil war (Mar.–Dec.) between Pakistan and Bangladesh; India joined fighting (Dec.) in support of Bangladesh and invaded West Pakistan; Pakistan surrendered (Dec. 16).

1971–73 Ali Bhutta took control as president of Pakistan.

1976 Pakistan and India resumed diplomatic relations.

1978 Military coup (July 5) following contested election.

1978– Gen. Muhammad Zia ul-Haq in office as military-backed president; suppressed political opposition; opposed Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

1981 US military aid program approved.

1982 Zia continued ban on political activity and postponed scheduled 1982 elections.

Palaemon Greek god, a sea god who was the special protector of ships. He corresponds to the Roman god Portunus.

Palaeologus Byzantine ruling dynasty. This Greek family ruled the Byzantine Empire from 1261 to 1453, when the Turks brought the empire to an end. Emperor Michael VIII became the first ruler of the line when he ousted the crusader kings of the Latin Empire of Constantinople and thereby restored the Byzantine Empire. The last ruler of the family, Constantine XI, was killed defending Constantinople against the Turks. The family became extinct in the 16th cent. Byzantine rulers were:

Michael VIII	1261–82
Andronicus II	1282–1328
Michael IX (co-ruler)	1295–1320
Andronicus III	1328–41
John V	1341–47
John VI	1347–54
John V	1354–76
Andronicus IV	1376–79
John V	1379–91
John VII (co-ruler, 1398–1412)	1390
Manuel II	1391–1425
John VIII	1425–48
Constantine XI	1449–53

Palaeologus, Constantine See Constantine XI

Palamedes Greek mythical hero. Palamedes is considered the inventor of numbers, measures, coinage, and the alphabet. He also fought in the Trojan War.

Palatinate Historic region located in southwestern West Germany, consisting of the Lower Palatinate (in the state of Rhineland-Palatinate) and the Upper Palatinate (in Bavaria). The areas were in the control of the counts palatine, a title given (1156) by Emperor Frederick I to his brother, Conrad, whose descendants became electors palatine (1356) and the leading princes of the Holy Roman Empire. The region passed to the Wittelsbach (q.v.) family (1214–1777), underwent many divisions and unifications, and was ravaged during the Thirty Years' War (1618–48) and the War of the Grand Alliance (1689–97). A part of the Palatinate was ceded to France for a time (1801–15) but was recovered after Napoleon's fall.

pale A specified district that is subject to certain restrictions or to a separate governing body. The Pale in Ireland (12th–16th cents.) centered around Dublin, was ruled by England, and lasted until conquest of Ireland was complete. The Pale of Settlement was created (1792) by Russian empress Catherine II as the only region in which Russian Jews were allowed to settle and travel. It initially consisted of territories ceded by Poland and was greatly enlarged in subsequent years. It was eliminated by the Russian Revolution of 1917.

Pale of Settlement See pale

Paleolithic See Stone Age

Palermo stone Inscribed stone, part of a year-by-year record of events of Egyptian dynasties I-V (3d–2d millennium BC). It is an important source of historical information for this period.

Palestine Historic region on the east coast of the Mediterranean, including modern Israel and the part of Jordan east of the Jordan River. Palestine is considered a Holy Land by the Jews, Christians, and Muslims, and the historic center of the region is Jerusalem. Palestine, inhabited since very ancient times, is the scene of many of the events recounted in the Bible. The region was controlled by various powers of the ancient world, though it remained a Jewish homeland until late in the Roman era. Palestine subsequently fell to the Muslims (7th cent. AD) and Jerusalem, already a holy city to the Jews and Christians, became a Muslm holy city as well. Palestine remained in Muslim hands until the 20th cent., though by the end of the 19th cent. Jews had already begun again to colonize the region. The movement to create a Jewish homeland in Palestine after WW I resulted in serious clashes between Arabs and Jews there. The conflict between Arabs and Israelis continued after creation of Israel in 1948 and contributed to Mideast instability into the 1980s. (For history of the region after 1948, see Israel.) Dates prior to 500 BC are in many cases approximate. Key events in the history of Palestine include:

3D MILLENNIUM BC Formation of towns and cities in region.

c2100 BC Amorites, a Semitic people, invaded region.

c18TH–16TH CENT. BC Hyksos invasion; Egypt ruled by Hyksos.

16TH?–13TH? CENT. BC Hebrews believed to have arrived in Palestine; time of the Patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; Hebrews settled variously (in modern Israel, Jordan, and northeast Egypt).

c1500–c1450 BC Egyptians, led by Thutmose III, conquered Palestine after driving out Hyksos; region known as Canaan.

14TH CENT. BC Egyptians lost control over Palestine during the reign of Ikhnaton.

EARLY 13TH CENT. BC Egyptian king Ramses II reestablished control over Palestine during wars with the Hittites.

c1270?–c1230? BC Exodus; Moses led the Hebrews enslaved in Egypt out of Egypt to the edge of the promised land (Canaan) in Palestine.

1231 BC Egyptian king Merneptah attacked Hebrews in Canaan (probably those already living there).

c1230? Joshua, leading the Hebrews (Joseph tribes), crossed the Jordan River and conquered Canaan; Jericho believed to be first city they conquered.

c1200 BC Invasions by Sea Peoples occupied Egypt, breaking its hold on Palestine; Philistines, one of the Sea Peoples, settled on southern coast of Palestine.

11TH CENT. BC Philistines began expanding into domains of the Israelites.

c1028?–1013? BC Saul became king of the Israelites; formerly led by Judges, tribal leaders, the Israelites were forced to unite by the increasing pressure from the Philistines; after early victories, Saul was defeated and died at Mount Gilboa.

1013–973 BC David reigned; as leader of the tribe of Judah conquered the Philistines, established the Israelite capital at Jerusalem, and conquered the Moabites, Ammonites, and Edomites; established unified kingdom of Israel; put down revolts by Absalom and Sheba.

973–933 BC Solomon reigned; kingdom further expanded and a thriving commerce developed; renowned for the splendor of his court, Solomon built many buildings and constructed the first Temple at Jerusalem.

933 BC Rehoboam succeeded Solomon; refused to lessen heavy taxes imposed on northern tribes during Solomon's reign.

933 BC Jeroboam led the Ten Tribes of Israel in a revolt against Rehoboam; formed the northern Kingdom of Israel; capital at Samaria.

933 BC Rehoboam formed the kingdom of Judah (in the south) from the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; conducted wars against kingdom of Israel.

c874–853 BC Ahab reigned as king of Israel in the north; his reign marked by wars with Assyria and rise in worship of Canaanite god Baal, promoted by Jezebel, Ahab's wife; time of Elijah's struggle against Baal-worship.

842–816 BC Jehu reigned as king of Israel; led revolt against Baal-worship and slew (843) Ahaziah, king of Judah, and Jehoram, king of Israel; gained control over kingdom of Judah; massacred Baal-worshipers, including Jezebel; paid tribute to Assyrians.

780–740 BC Uzziah reigned as king of Judah; kingdom of Judah reached height of its power; time of prophet Isaiah began in last years of Uzziah's reign.

732?–722 BC Hoshea reigned as last king of Israel; assassinated Pekah and seized power; allied Israel with Egypt and thus brought on the Assyrian conquest.

731–727 BC Ahaz reigned in Judah; allied Judah with Assyria against Israel and Syria; lost Judah's independent status.

722 BC Kingdom of Israel in north destroyed by Assyrian king Sargon; capital of Samaria taken after long seige; Israelites of the north exiled from their lands and thus became the Ten Lost Tribes; colonies of Aramaeans settled northern kingdom.

720?–692? BC Hezekiah reigned as king of Judah; rebelled unsuccessfully against rule of Assyrian king Sennacherib.

c640–609 BC Josiah reigned as king of Judah; decline of Assyrian power gave him relative autonomy; Book of Law discovered in the Temple at Jerusalem (c622); gave rise to Deuteronomic Reform, in which foreign cults were purged, the Temple was dedicated solely to worship of Yahweh, and worship was concentrated at Jerusalem.

609 BC Josiah killed at the Battle of Megiddo during fighting with the Egyptians; Egyptian king Necho took control of the kingdom of Judah.

605 BC Nebuchadnezzar defeated the Egyptians at the Battle of Carchemish; kingdom of Judah passed to the Babylonians.

598 BC Revolt against Babylonian rule failed.

597–586 BC Zedekiah reigned as last king of Judah; installed by the Babylonians, he rebelled (588–586) and was defeated; Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the Temple and city of Jerusalem and carried off many of the Judahites to Babylon; kingdom of Judah ceased to exist.

586–538 BC Babylonian captivity ended by Persian defeat of Babylonians; Cyrus the Great permitted Jews to return to Palestine.

538–332 BC Persians ruled Palestine; region administered as part of the satrapy of Syria; districts (under own governors) included Judah, Samaria, and others.

516 BC Second Temple at Jerusalem completed, formally ending the captivity and reestablishing a center of Jewish worship.

458? BC Ezra became religious leader of the Jews; established the Law (Torah) as central to Judaism and the Jewish community.

FROM 445 BC Nehemiah, governor of Judaea, rebuilt city and its walls; introduced reforms.

c428 BC Samaritans built their own temple at Mount Gerizim, north of Jerusalem, as a result of Jews' opposition to their sect.

332 BC Alexander the Great conquered Palestine.

323–198 BC Ptolemies, Macedonian rulers of Egypt, controlled Palestine; Greek influences reached Palestine.

198–168 BC Seleucids controlled Palestine, following campaigns of Antiochus III.

2D CENT. BC Nabateans began expanding into Syria as Seleucid power waned; eventually ruled domains that bordered on Palestine; became Roman allies by 1st cent. BC.

EARLY 2D CENT. BC First appearance of the Pharisees, who upheld both the oral tradition and the written Law of the Torah.

175–163 BC Antiochus IV reigned as Seleucid ruler; declared Judaism illegal and began persecution (168) that sparked revolt by the Maccabees in Palestine.

168 BC Mattathias, a Jewish priest, began revolt of the Maccabees in Palestine.

c164 BC Judas Maccabeus expelled the Seleucids from Jerusalem after defeating their armies; rededicated the Temple at Jerusalem (commemorated by Hanukkah).

164–161 BC Judas continued wars, even though Seleucids granted Jews religious freedom; he was killed in fighting.

161–143 BC Jonathan Maccabeus continued wars against Seleucids; killed in battle.

142 BC Simon negotiated independence of Judaea.

142–135 BC Simon served as high priest and governor of the newly independent Jewish national state, Judaea; assassinated.

135–104 BC John Hyrcanus reigned; Judaea reached its height.

104 BC Aristobulus I reigned; adopted title of king and conquered part of (modern) Lebanon.

103–76 BC Alexander Jannaeus reigned; supported the Sadducees and persecuted the Pharisees.

76–67 BC Salome Alexandra reigned; the widow of Alexander Jannaeus, she favored the Pharisees during her reign.

67–63 BC Civil war between Aristobulus II and John Hyrcanus II; Romans under Pompey intervened and took control of Judaea.

63 BC–AD 67 Palestine administered as part of the Roman province of Syria.

63 BC–AD 395 Romans controlled Palestine.

40–37 BC Antigonus, Aristobulus' son, led abortive revolt (with Parthian support) against Roman rule; executed (37 BC).

37–4 BC Herod the Great ruled Palestine under Roman authority; practiced Judaism and promoted Hellenism; became ruthless and cruel toward end of reign.

8?–6? BC Jesus of Nazareth born; raised as a Jew.

4 BC Massacre of the Innocents; Herod ordered all infants in Bethlehem murdered.

4 BC–AD 39 Herod Antipas ruled Galilee under Roman authority; married his niece, Herodias, and was thus criticized by John the Baptist; ordered execution of John at behest of Salome.

AD 26–36 Pontius Pilate, Roman procurator of Judaea, alienated the Jews.

AD 27? Jesus baptized by John the Baptist; Jesus began his public ministry in which he spread his teachings and aroused the opposition of the Pharisees.

AD 30 Last Supper; Jesus arrested at Jerusalem as a threat to religious and political authorities; Herod Antipas refused to pass judgment on Jesus and returned him to Pontius Pilate, who acceded to demands and ordered Jesus' execution.

AD 30 Jesus crucified at Jerusalem; his martyrdom and the subsequent missionary work by his disciples marked the beginning of the Christian era.

AD 36 Pontius Pilate recalled to Rome; subsequent Roman procurators continued to alienate Jews.

AD 66–73 First Jewish revolt; Zealots, a radical Jewish faction, rose against Roman rule; Romans retook Jerusalem and destroyed the Temple (AD 70); Jerusalem destroyed and Jewish state dissolved.

AD 132–135 Second Jewish revolt; led by S. Bar Kokba, the Jews failed to end Roman rule; Emperor Hadrian built Aelia Capitolina on site of Jerusalem and refused to allow Jews to live there; thereafter Jews remained centered in Mideast until medieval times, when large numbers of them migrated to Europe.

4TH CENT. AD Palestine made a center of Christianity after Romans ended persecutions of Christians; many Jews left the region and settled elsewhere in Mideast.

5TH–7TH CENT. Palestine under Byzantine rule.

614 Persians conquered Palestine.

628 Byzantine Emperor Heraclius recovered Palestine.

640 Muslim Arabs completed conquest of Palestine; subsequently became Muslim Holy Land.

691 Dome of the Rock built in Jerusalem by Muslims; became site of Muslim pilgrimage.

9TH–11TH CENT. Palestine controlled by the Fatimids, Muslims based in Egypt and rivaling the Abbasid caliphs for control of the Muslim world; Christians and Jews in Palestine persecuted; control of Palestine contested by other Muslim factions.

11TH–13TH CENT. Era of the Crusades; European Christians briefly established control over the Palestinian Holy Land.

1099–1291 Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem; Christian kingdom in Palestine founded during the First Crusade; the kindgom ceased to exist after Acre fell (1291) to the Mamelukes (Muslim rulers of Egypt).

13TH–16TH CENT. Mamelukes controlled Palestine.

16TH–20TH CENT. Ottoman Turks ruled Palestine; after defeating the Mamelukes (1516) the Ottomans administered Palestine as a part of the province of Syria; general decline of region continued.

1831 Muhammad Ali, Ottoman viceroy of Egypt, seized Palestine in rivalry with Ottoman sultan; Egyptians held region until 1840; led to period of settlement by Europeans, notably Jews.

1870 European Jews began colonization of Palestine; first Jewish settlement founded (1878).

FROM 1882 Russian Jews, fleeing the pogroms in Russia, began arriving in Palestine.

1897 Zionist movement founded for creation of a Jewish national state in Palestine; Ottoman government turned down Zionist plan, though Zionists actively supported colonization by Jews (from 1906).

1917 British occupied Palestine during the course of their offensive against the Ottoman Turks in WW I.

1917 Balfour Declaration (Nov. 2); British, at the urging of Zionist leaders, declared support for creation of Jewish national state in Palestine.

1920 Britain received preliminary approval from League of Nations for its mandate in Palestine; plan for creation of Jewish state approved.

1921 Anti-Jewish riots by Palestinian Arabs, then the majority population in Palestine.

1922 British League of Nations mandate over Palestine and Transjordan approved.

1922 British White Paper recommended that Jewish state exist within Palestine; proposed limits on immigration by Jews.

1923 Transjordan split off from Palestine; organized as an autonomous state.

1928 Rioting between Arabs and Jews over the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem.

1929 Widespread attacks by Arabs against Jews.

1930 British White Paper recommended limiting Jewish immigration and banning new purchases of land by Jews.

1930s Immigration of Jews to Palestine increased manyfold as Nazi persecutions in Germany began; opposition to British rule in Palestine mounted among Arabs and Jews alike as situation became increasingly intractable.

1936 Widespread riots by Arabs against Jews.

1936–37 Jews formed underground armies in response to Arab attacks; Haganah (1936) adopted solely defensive policy; Irgun Zvai Leumi conducted retaliatory raids (1937) against Arabs and eventually fought British forces as well.

1937 Peel Commission Report; recommended partitioning Palestine into Jewish, Arab, and British sectors.

1937–39 Period of near open war and terrorism with Arabs, Jews, and British battling for control.

1939 British White Paper abandoned partition scheme in favor of limiting Jewish immigration and land purchases; eventual independence to be granted; outbreak of WW II brought temporary halt to serious violence.

1945 Arab League formed.

1945–47 Waves of illegal immigrants entered Palestine as horrors of the Nazi Holocaust created new pressure for creation of Jewish national state; intense fighting between Jews, Arabs, and British.

1947 London Conference; British unable to solve Palestinian problem, put question before UN.

1947 UN approved (Nov.) plan to partition Palestine into Jewish, Arab, and International (Jerusalem) zones; Arabs denounced plan; renewed fighting in Palestine.

1948 State of Israel created as British occupation force completed withdrawal; immediately attacked by Arabs in first Arab-Israeli War.

Palestine Liberation Organization ⟨PLO⟩ Arab political and terrorist organization. Founded in 1964, the PLO is made up of various Arab guerrilla groups dedicated to reclaiming Palestinian homelands now occupied by Israel. The group has been involved in a bitter guerrilla war with the Israelis, and their activities have contributed greatly to Mideast instability in recent times. Their activities have included airplane hijackings, terrorist bombings, massacres of Israeli civilians, and skirmishes with Israeli military forces. The PLO actively supported Muslims in the civil war with Christians in Lebanon and used Lebanon as a staging area for raids on Israel until the Lebanese War (see Lebanon [1982]). Since 1964 the PLO has been headed by Yasir Arafat (1929–), whose guerrilla organization (Al Fatah) dominates the PLO. The PLO was formally recognized by the UN in 1974.

Pali Indo-European language. Thought to be the language of Buddha, Pali is still employed in the liturgical literature of Buddhists in Sri Lanka, Burma, and Thailand.

Palikao, Charles Guillaume Cousin-Montauban, count of 1796–1878. French general. His title was bestowed after his victory at Palikao while on an Anglo-French military expedition in China (1860). He briefly served as premier (1870) during the collapse of the French Second Empire.

Palladianism Architectural style developed during the Renaissance by A. Palladio. It incorporated elements of classical Roman architecture. Palladianism was influential in England (17th–18th cents.) and was introduced there by I. Jones.

Palladio, Andrea 1508–80. Famous Italian architect of the Renaissance. Palladio rebelled against excessive ornamentation, adapted classic Roman styles, and created the style known as Palladianism. He is considered the founder of modern Italian architecture.

Palladium Sacred image of Athena in Greek religion. It was said that Zeus caused it to protect the city of Troy. It was stolen by Odysseus and Diomedes, after which Troy fell to the Greeks.

Pallas Mythical Greek giant who, according to one legend, was killed by Athena when he tried to rape her.

Pallas Athena See Athena

Palmerston, Henry John Temple, 3d Viscount 1784–1865. British statesman who played an important role in foreign affairs in the 19th cent. He served as secretary of war (1809–28), foreign minister (1830–34, 1835–41, 1846–51), and prime minister (1855–58, 1859–65). A Whig party member, he played a role in arranging Belgian independence (1831), orchestrating European intervention against Muhammad Ali to prevent the break-up of the Ottoman Empire (1841), the Affair of the Spanish Marriages (1846), the Don Pacifico Affair (1850), and the overthrow of French Emperor Napoleon III. His terms as prime minister were marked by British involvement in the Crimean War (1853–56) and the Indian Mutiny (1857–58) and by Britain's neutral support for Italian unification and its stance in the American Civil War.

Palmyra ⟨Tadmor⟩ Ancient Syrian city. Palmyra was supposedly founded by Solomon and was an important trade center after its takeover by Rome. It subsequently became the nucleus of a powerful, quasi-independent eastern empire under Roman domination. The ambitions of its queen, Zenobia, led to destruction of the city (AD 273) by Aurelian.

Palo Alto, Battle of First major battle of the Mexican War (1846–48), fought at this Texas city on May 8, 1846. American forces under Gen. Z. Taylor defeated the Mexican army in the first of several successful engagements against it.

Pan Greek god. Half man and half goat, Pan was considered the god of fertility and nature.

Pan-African congresses International conferences to promote interests of black peoples and nations. Blacks from America and the West Indies met in London in 1900 to protest white oppression in Africa. W. Du Bois emerged as a leading figure here and in the subsequent meetings of 1919, 1921, 1923, and 1927. The congress in 1945 called for independence of all African states from colonial powers.

Panama (Republic of Panama) Independent state in Central America, located on the Isthmus of Panama that connects Central and South America. Its capital is Panama City. Panama is bisected by the Panama Canal Zone, currently under US jurisdiction. Panama was ruled by Spain until 1821 and was part of Colombia until independence was proclaimed in 1903, following a successful revolution. Key events in Panama's history include:

1502 Columbus visited the coastal region on his fourth voyage.

1513 V. de Balboa, Spanish governor, explored the region; crossed the isthmus to the Pacific Ocean.

1519 P. Arias de Villa founded Panama City.

16TH CENT. Region administered as part of the viceroyalty of Peru; main route to rich Spanish colonies in Peru passed across the Isthmus of Panama.

1717 Administrative control passed to viceroyalty of New Granada.

1821 Joined Colombia in revolt against Spain; was governed subsequently as part of Colombia.

1881 F. de Lesseps began construction of Panama Canal; his company went bankrupt (1889), however.

1903 Colombia refused US rights to build canal; US backed Panamanian revolt against Colombia gained Panama its independence.

1903 Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty concluded between US and newly independent Panama; established the US-controlled Panama Canal Zone; canal construction began (1904).

1904 Constitution adopted.

1914 Panama Canal opened (Aug. 15).

1939 New treaty provided for equal rights and responsibilities in the Canal Zone.

1941 Pro-German president Harmodio Arias ousted and exiled.

1968 Dr. Arnulfo Arias elected president; overthrown by military coup; two-man junta reigned; overthrown by Gen. Omar Torrijos, head of the National Guard.

1969–78 Demetrio Basilio Lakas Bahas in office as military-backed president; Gen Torrijos held real power.

1972 New constitution promulgated; National Assembly established.

1977 US and Panama signed treaty (Sept. 7) giving Panama control of canal in 1999.

1978– Aristides Royo in office as president.

1978 US Senate approved transfer of Canal Zone to Panama.

1981 Gen. Torrijos, de facto military ruler, killed in plane crash.

1982 President Aristides Royo resigned (July 30) as disunity between factions mounted; Ricardo de la Espriella made president.

Panama Canal Man-made waterway extending 51 miles across the Isthmus of Panama in Central America. Originally proposed as early as Spanish colonial times and actively pursued by the US since about the mid-1800s, the canal was begun (1881) by the Frenchman F. de Lesseps (builder of the Suez Canal). De Lesseps's firm went bankrupt (1889) as a result of construction problems and outbreaks of tropical disease. The US again took an interest in the project and settled a long dispute with the British over US control of the proposed canal (by the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty, 1901). The US for a time considered a canal through Nicaragua, but under President T. Roosevelt made arrangements to take over the French project in Panama. Colombia (then in control of Panama) refused to ratify a treaty for construction of the canal. The US soon after supported a revolution in Panama. Panama gained independence (Nov., 1903) and on Nov. 17 the US concluded the Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty with the new government. Construction work began in 1904 and was completed under the supervision of Col. G. Goethals by 1914. In recent times Panama sought control of the canal and the US agreed (1978) to effect the transfer in 1999.

Panama Canal Zone Area of Panama, extending five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, and administered by the United States from 1903. The US Senate, after a heated controversy, enacted (1978) legislation to return the canal to Panama in 1999.

Panama City Capital city (pop. 439,400) of Panama, located at the southeastern terminus of the Panama Canal. Founded in 1519 by Pedrarius, it was destroyed by the buccaneer H. Morgan, rebuilt in 1673, and designated capital in 1903.

Panama Scandal Scandal (1892) involving the government of the French Third Republic and the failed French Panama Canal Company. The company, in financial trouble because of mismanagement and corruption, floated a new loan in 1888. To get approval from the Chamber of Deputies for the loan, the company's directors bribed many of the deputies. An investigation some years after the company failed (1889) revealed the bribery and toppled the government.

Pan-American conferences ⟨Inter-American ~⟩ Meetings (from 1826) held between various South American states and the US to discuss mutual economic and defense concerns. Conferences up to 1889 (1826, 1847, 1856, 1864) were concerned largely with matters of defense. The First International Conference of American States (1889–90), largely initiated by the US, established what became the Pan-American Union (q.v.) and led to treaties covering trade, arbitration of disputes, and international administrative matters. Additional conferences in 1936, 1938, 1939, 1940, and 1945 worked out mutual-defense agreements. In 1948, the Ninth International Conference formed the Organization of American States (q.v.).

Pan American Union Organization founded in 1890 and composed of republics in North and South America. The union promoted technical, commercial, and cultural interchange among its member nations. It became part of the Organization of American States on formation of that body in 1948.

Pandit, Vijaya Lakshmi 1900–. Indian diplomat. Sister of J. Nehru, she led the Indian delegation to the UN and served as ambassador to both Russia and the US.

Pandora The first woman in Greek mythology. Given a box the gods warned must never be opened (Pandora's box), she nevertheless became curious and looked inside. By so doing, she released all the evils upon the world. Only hope remained in the box.

Pan-Germanism German nationalist movement, organized in 1894. It called for the political unification of all German-speaking people. The movement was used to justify Germany's expansionist policies and after WW I figured in A. Hitler's National Socialist program.

Pangkor Engagement British agreement (Jan., 1874) with the local ruler of Perak, a state in northern Malaya. In exchange for accepting a British resident with authority, the Perak chief was assured of British support. The treaty led to the eventual British domination of the Malay states.

Panic of 1837 US financial panic that begin in the spring of 1837, shortly after President M. Van Buren took office. A land speculation boom in the West during A. Jackson's administration was fueled by the many banknotes of inflated value issued by state banks. Jackson's Specie Circular (issued 1836) required payment for public lands (in the West) in hard currency, and thus undermined the value of these notes. A financial collapse followed in 1837, first in the western land market and then spreading to commodities and other markets.

Panic of 1869 See Black Friday

Panic of 1873 US financial panic (sometimes also called Black Friday) that began on Sept. 18. It was caused by the failure of Jay Cooke and Company, a financial house that had marketed federal bonds during the Civil War.

Panic of 1893 US financial panic brought on by a withdrawal of British investment capital from the US. British capital had fueled a boom in railroad building in the late 19th cent. A worldwide Depression, however, caused British investors to withdraw from the American market and resulted in a collapse of the railroad boom and a flow of gold out of the US. President G. Cleveland sought repeal of the Sherman Silver Purchase Act (q.v.) as a remedy, which he won (1893).

Panipat, Battles of Three battles fought by the Moguls at Panipat, in India. 1. On Apr. 20, 1526, Baber and his force of some 2,000 Moguls defeated the Afghans and thus established the Mogul dynasty that ruled until 1761. 2. On Nov. 3, 1556, the third Mogul emperor, Akbar the Great, headed an army of 20,000 and defeated a much larger force of Hindus. 3. On Jan. 14, 1761, the Afghan Emperor Ahmad Shah Durrani defeated an army of Marathas during his invasion of India; left Indian kingdoms weakened and paved the way for the British takeover.

Pankhurst, Emmeline Goulden 1857–1928. British feminist, who founded (1903) the Women's Social and Political Union to promote woman suffrage. A militant, she was frequently jailed. English women received the vote just before her death.

Panmunjom Korean village where peace was negotiated (1951–53) between UN forces and the North Koreans and Chinese during the Korean War (1950–53). The village is located just south of the 38th parallel. The armistice ending the war was signed there July 27, 1953.

Pannonia Ancient Roman province. Pannonia was located south of the Danube River and included parts of what are now Austria, Hungary, and Yugoslavia. The territories were conquered by the Roman Empire in AD 9.

Pan-Slavism Slavic unity movement. This movement arose in the 19th cent. and stressed the common culture and history of the various Slavic peoples, then divided between Austrian and Ottoman empires. Pan-Slavism figured in Russian imperial policy, contributed to the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish War (1877–78), and was a factor in Russia's alliance with Serbia against the Austrians in the years before WW I.

Pantaléon, Jacques See Urban IV

pantheism Religious term for the belief that God and the universe are one. Pantheism has been a factor in both religion (notably Hinduism, in which Brahman is all things in the universe) and philosophy.

Pantheon Roman temple. Built by Agrippa (27 BC) at Rome to honor all gods, it was rebuilt (2d cent. AD) by Hadrian. It is now a Christian church (from 609).

Paoli, Pasquale 1725–1807. Corsican patriot. Paoli rebelled against Genoese and, later, French domination of Corsica. As governor (1755–69, 1791–93) he instituted political reforms. He drove out the French with British help (1794).

papacy The system of government of the Roman Catholic Church, which is headed by the pope (bishop of Rome), who is considered the successor to St. Peter and vicar of Christ. The pope is considered infallible by the Roman Catholic Church in matters of faith or morality and is head of independent Vatican City. Early popes played an important role in the spread of the Christian church and in resolving the many doctrinal disputes of that era. In medieval times popes were the central figures in the great struggles for power between the church and European monarchs. Later they instituted the Catholic Reformation (q.v.) and, gradually forced to relinquish their secular powers, came to focus on spiritual concerns. In modern times, the popes have been especially active in adapting the church to the rapidly changing modern world (see Second Vatican Council). (See also Roman Catholic Church; Papal States.)

Papal States Former territory over which the pope had direct temporal rule (756–1870). The size of the territory varied throughout its history but at its greatest extent it included a wide swath across central Italy. From the 4th cent. the pope had control of lands in Rome (the Patrimony of St. Peter) but the existence of the sovereign state is dated from the Donation of Pepin (756). Pepin the Short, in return for papal recognition of his accession as king of the Franks, aided the pope against the invading Lombards and donated lands taken from them (around Ravenna) to the pope. The popes remained sovereign during the Middle Ages but real control of the territories was frustrated by feudal nobles and struggles with the Holy Roman emperors (11th–14th cents.). While the papacy was located at Avignon during the Babylonian captivity, effective control passed to the local nobles. From the 15th to 18th cents., the popes gradually established central authority and brought papal domains to their greatest extent. The Papal States were conquered by Napoleon (1796) and restored to the pope by the Congress of Vienna (1815). Almost all papal domains were lost during the unification of Italy (1860) and, in 1870, Italian king Victor Emmanuel II seized Rome as well. The pope thereupon declared himself a "prisoner" in the Vatican and the Roman Question over rights to the Papal States was not resolved until the signing of the Lateran Treaty (1929).

Papareschi, Gregorio See Innocent II

Papen, Franz von 1879–1969. German politician. As P. Hindenburg's chancellor, he facilitated the rise of the Nazi party by lifting the ban on their paramilitary troops and later helped bring A. Hitler to power.

Paphlagonia Ancient country in Asia Minor. Bounded on the north by the Black Sea, it was absorbed by Rome in 65 BC.

Papineau, Louis Joseph 1786–1871. French-Canadian political leader. He stirred his followers in Lower Canada to rebellion against British rule (1831), shortly before the revolt led by W. Mackenzie broke out. He escaped to the US, then returned in 1844.

Papinian d. AD 212. Roman jurist. The friend and counselor of Emperor Severus, he was considered one of the great Roman jurists. He was executed by Caracalla.

Pappus fl. AD *c*300. Greek mathematician. His book Synagogue (Collection) records the teachings of earlier mathematicians whose original works have been lost.

Papua New Guinea ⟨formerly New Guinea, Territory of⟩ Country consisting of the eastern part of New Guinea and adjacent islands. Capital is Port Moresby. Europeans reached New Guinea in the 15th cent. and the southeastern part of the island became (1884) the British protectorate of British New Guinea. It came under control of Australia (1905) and was renamed Papua. The northeastern part of the island was incorporated into the German possession of German New Guinea (1884) and was known as Kaiser-Wilhelmsland. Occupied (1914) by Australia during WW I, it became an Australian mandate (1920) as the Territory of New Guinea. In 1949 Papua and the Territory of New Guinea were merged, and became independent (Sept. 16, 1975) as Papua New Guinea.

papyrus Reed plant once widely cultivated by the ancient Egyptians and used by them to make writing paper.

Paracelsus ⟨Hohenheim, Philippus Aureolus Theophrastus Bombastus von⟩ 1493–1541. Swiss alchemist and physician. Paracelsus defied ⟨then⟩ conventional ideas of medicine and introduced the use of particular chemicals to cure specific diseases.

Paraclete See The Holy Ghost

Paraguay ⟨Republic of Paraguay⟩ Landlocked country located in the south-central part of South America. Its capital is Asunción. Since its independence in 1811, Paraguay has been ruled almost continuously by a succession of dictators.

1526–29 Sebastian Cabot explored Paraguay for Spain.

1538 Asunción founded.

1608 Jesuit order established in region.

1617 Hernando Arias de Saavedra set up separate administrations for Paraguay and Argentina.

1721–35 Revolt of the comuneros; independence from Spain sought.

1767 Jesuits expelled.

1776 Region became part of the viceroyalty of the Rio de la Plata.

1811 Paraguay independent after bloodless rebellion against Spain.

1814–40 J. Francia ⟨El Supremo⟩ in power as first of three early dictators; instituted harsh rule.

1844–62 Carlos Antonio López in power as dictator.

1862–70 Francisco Solano López succeeded his father.

1864–70 War of the Triple Alliance against Uruguay, Brazil, and Argentina; over a million Paraguayans killed.

1870 New constitution promulgated.

1932–35 Chaco War with Bolivia over border region.

1935–38 Buenos Aires Peace Conferences granted most of Chaco region to Paraguay.

1940–48 Higinio Moringio in power as dictator.

1948 Juan Natalicio González elected president.

1949 Revolts ⟨Jan.–Apr.⟩ against Gonzáles and his successor; Federico Cháves assumed power.

1949–54 Cháves in power.

1953 Cháves reelected.

1954 Cháves ousted by military coup.

1954– Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in power; suppressed opposition during his long reign that continued into the early 1980s.

1965 Stroessner relaxed siege imposed when he took power; exiles returned.

1967 Constitution revised.

1978 Work begun on Itaipú dam and hydroelectric power plant ⟨the world's largest⟩; joint project with Brazil to be completed 1988.

Parcae See Fates

Parentucelli, Tommaso See Nicholas V

Paris ⟨Alexander⟩ In Greek mythology, son of Trojan king Priam and Hecuba. Abandoned as a baby because a prophecy warned he would bring the destruction of Troy, Paris was raised by shepherds. Paris returned to Troy and was then chosen to mediate a dispute between Aphrodite, Athena, and Hera over possession of the Apple of Discord. He gave it to Aphrodite, who in turn helped him abduct the Spartan beauty Helen, wife of King Menelaus. This sparked the Trojan War and conquest of Troy.

Paris France's capital city ⟨pop. 2,296,900⟩, located in north-central France. One of the great cultural and intellectual centers of the world, Paris is the commercial and industrial hub of France. Originally a Gallic village, it was conquered by J. Caesar ⟨52 BC⟩ and prospered under Roman influence. Paris became the capital of several Merovingian kings, notably Clovis I. Hugh Capet, duke of Paris, became king of France ⟨AD 987⟩, and under his influence and that of his successors the city became the capital of France, and a center of trade, learning, and culture. French King Louis XIV moved the capital to Versailles ⟨1682⟩. Paris was a site of struggle between the Armagnacs and Burgundians (q.v.) during the Hundred Years' War, and was occupied by the English ⟨1420–36⟩. It was the center of the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day (q.v.) in 1572. Paris played a major role in the French Revolution and was occupied by allied armies ⟨1814⟩ after the fall of Napoleon. It was also the scene of the revolutions of 1830 and 1848. During the Franco-Prussian War ⟨1870–71⟩ it was occupied by the Germans, and subsequently became the site of the Commune of Paris (q.v.). The Germans made an unsuccessful drive to capture Paris during WW I but occupied the city ⟨1940–44⟩ during WW II. In 1968 Paris was the scene of severe political disorder. It was the site of the US-Vietnam peace negotiations ⟨1968–73⟩.

Paris, Commune of See Commune of Paris

Paris, Congress of See Congress of Paris

Paris, Matthew ⟨Matthew of Paris⟩ d. 1259. Noted English writer of Latin chronicles of the 13th cent. A monk of St. Albans, he wrote Chronica Majora, a history of the world to 1259, and Historia Anglorum, a history of England.

Paris, Treaty of 1. Treaty ⟨1229⟩ between French king Louis IX and the nobleman Raymond VII of Toulouse, ending the last of the fighting sparked by the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.). Louis gained the county of Toulouse and agreed to certain marriage arrangements. 2. Treaty (Feb. 10, 1763) between Britain, France, and Spain ending the Seven Years' War (1756–63) and the subsidiary French and Indian War in the colonies. The treaty marked the ascendancy of Britain as the leading colonial power. By its terms Britain received French holdings in Canada, America (east of the Mississippi), Grenada, the Grenadines, and Senegal. Britain received Florida from Spain and returned Cuba and the Philippines to Spain, while Spain got all of the Louisiana Territory west of the Mississippi from France. Britain gave France Guadeloupe, Martinique, Miquelon, and St. Pierre. Britain also restored some French possessions in India. 3. Treaty (Sept. 3, 1783) between the US, Britain, and other European powers ending the American Revolution (1775–83). It was negotiated by B. Franklin, J. Jay, and J. Adams for the US. By its terms Britain recognized US independence, US boundaries were fixed (at the Mississippi in the West), Spain reacquired Florida and Minorca from Britain, and France got Senegal and Tobago. The US was granted fishing rights in areas off the British-Canadian coast and was to prevent abuses against former loyalists. 4. Treaty (May 30, 1814) between France and the allied powers who had defeated Napoleon. The terms of the treaty were not harsh and included a return of France to her borders of 1792, restoration to France of most of her colonies taken by Britain, and the loss of Malta to Britain. No indemnity was imposed and a congress was to be held at Vienna to work out final arrangements. 5. Treaty (Nov. 20, 1815) between France and the victorious European allies after Napoleon's defeat at the end of his Hundred Days (q.v.). Harsher terms were imposed and included a large indemnity, a return to the borders of 1790, and payment of expenses for an army to occupy northern France. 6. Treaty (Mar. 30, 1856) between Russia and the allies (Ottoman Turks, Britain, France, and Sardinia) ending the Crimean War. Russia returned Kars and regained Sevastopol, ceded the mouth of the Danube and part of Bessarabia, and abandoned claims to protect Christians within the Ottoman empire. The Black Sea was declared neutral. 7. Treaty (Dec. 10, 1898) between the US and Spain ending the Spanish-American War (1898). In return for $20 million, Spain gave up Cuba and ceded to the US the territories of the Philippines, Guam, and Puerto Rico.

Paris Peace Conference Conference (1919–20) of Allied leaders at the end of WW I to determine peace terms to be imposed on Germany and the other Central Powers—Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey. It resulted in the Treaty of Versailles (signed, with protest by Germany June 28, 1919), the Treaty of Saint-Germain (signed by Austria, Sept. 10) and the Treaty of Neuilly (signed by Bulgaria, Nov. 27). At the outset of the conference (Jan. 18, 1919) Allied leaders met in the Council of Ten (two representatives for each of five powers) to oversee the activities of a number of commissions charged with various aspects of the settlements (reparations, territorial questions, the League of Nations, etc.). G. Clemenceau served as president of the council. By Mar., 1919, however, a Council of Four had been formed to direct the peace conference. This council consisted of Clemenceau (France), D. Lloyd George (Britain), V. Orlando (Italy), and W. Wilson (US). A major deadlock was broken (Apr. 7) when Wilson threatened to leave the conference, and compromises on such issues as the status of the Rhineland and Danzig were reached. The League of Nations Covenant was approved (as part of the Treaty of Versailles) by the conference Apr. 28, 1919. The conference closed (Jan. 16, 1920), leaving terms of treaties with Hungary and Turkey unresolved.

Park Chung Hee 1917–79. South Korean president (1963–79). He rose to power through the military and participated in the 1961 military coup against the civilian government. Elected president in 1963, he subsequently consolidated his power and instituted a police state in Korea. During his administration, border clashes with North Korea subsided, the economy improved, Korean officials were implicated (1976–77) in charges of attempting to bribe US congressmen, and the US announced plans (1977, never implemented) to withdraw troops stationed there. Park was assassinated (Oct. 26, 1979).

Parker, Dorothy 1893–1967. American writer. Noted for her acerbic wit, she wrote short stories such as Big Blonde, screenplays such as A Star Is Born, and poetry collections such as Enough Rope and Death and Taxes.

Parker, Sir Hyde 1739–1807. British admiral. Parker's second in command at the Battle of Copenhagen (q.v.), H. Nelson, was in charge of actual fighting (1801). In a famous incident during the battle, Nelson ignored Parker's order to withdraw and went on to victory. Nelson replaced Parker as commander soon after.

Parker, Capt. John See Lexington and Concord, Battle of Parkes, Sir Henry 1815–96. Australian statesman. Parkes fought to end the practice of transporting British criminals to Australia. He was also active in promoting free trade and educational and civil service reforms.

Parkman, Francis 1823–93. American historian. Parkman lived with the Sioux, traveled the Oregon Trail, and wrote many works on American history, including The California and Oregon Trail, A Half-Century of Conflict, and Montcalm and Wolfe.

Parlement A French royal court under the Ancien Régime. There were parlements in Paris and 14 provincial cities. They combined the functions of a department of justice and appellate court, had no legislative powers, but did enjoy a certain "right of remonstrance" against royal acts.

Parlement, Fronde of the See Fronde

Parliament Legislative assembly. In Britain, Parliament consists of the reigning monarch, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons. Power rests largely with the House of Commons, the monarch being sovereign in name only and the House of Lords having lost much of its power in 1911. The prime minister is elected from the Commons. British Parliament, the oldest surviving parliament, provided the model for parliaments that were established in British dominions throughout the world. The origins of the British Parliament can be traced to the 13th-cent. royal feudal council, the Curia Regis, which gave rise to the House of Lords and to the irregular assemblages of the knights and burgesses, which gave rise to the House of Commons. Though a forerunner of Parliament (King Edward III's Model Parliament) was convened in 1295, the basic structure of Parliament did not appear until the 14th cent. Thereafter, Parliament began a long struggle for supremacy over the English monarchs, usually relying on its control of finances to force concessions. This struggle resulted in the English Civil War (q.v.), in which Parliament deposed (and executed) the king and then some years later reinstituted the monarchy.

Parliament finally established its supremacy over the monarchs by the Glorious Revolution (q.v.) of 1688, and thereafter the monarchs' involvement in government steadily diminished. In the 18th cent., Sir R. Walpole established the prime minister as effective head of government, and in the 19th cent. the party system was firmly rooted in Parliament. The ascendancy of the House of Commons came in 1911 when, after a political crisis, the House of Lords lost its veto power over legislation (Parliament Act).

Parliament, An Admonition to the See Admonition to the Parliament, An Parliament Act British act (1911) by which the House of Lords lost its veto power over parliamentary legislation. It was passed amid a political crisis caused by the opposition by the House of Lords to a proposed tax on the wealthy to fund a social insurance program. The bill was advanced (1909) by D. Lloyd George.

Parma, Margaret of See Margaret of Parma

Parmenides fl. 5th cent. BC. Greek philosopher. Parmenides was a founder and leading member of the Eleatic school. He taught that all being was one reality and that change and motion were but illusions of the senses.

Parnassians French school of poetry prominent during the 19th cent. Parnassians sought technical perfection and emotional detachment in their works, in reaction to the Romantic movement. Noted members of this school include Charles Leconte de Lisle (1818–94), S. Prudhomme, José-María de Heredia (1842–1905), and P. Verlaine.

Parnassos See Parnassus

Parnassus ⟨Parnassos⟩ Mountain located in central Greece. The ancient Greeks believed it to be the favorite haunt of Apollo, the Muses, and Dionysus.

Parnell, Charles Stewart 1846–91. Leading figure in the Irish Home Rule movement in the late 19th cent. He was elected to Parliament (1875) as a Home Rule advocate, became president of the Irish National Land League (1879), and figured prominently in agitation against landlords in Ireland. Though reaction to violent acts by Irish terrorists grew stronger (i.e., Phoenix Park murders), Parnell managed to maintain his position, used his controlling votes to oust and then restore (1886) the Liberals, and forced introduction of the unsuccessful Irish Home Rule Bill (1886). He fell from power after becoming involved in a scandal (1890–91) over an associate's wife.

Parses See Parsis

Parsifal ⟨Perceval⟩ Knight of Arthurian legend. His search for and discovery of the Holy Grail was a spiritual journey that was portrayed most notably in Parzival, a 13th-century poem by Wolfram von Eschenbach.

Parsis ⟨Parses⟩ Followers of Zoroastrianism in India. They migrated to India (*c*8th cent.) from Persia to escape persecution by the Muslims. In modern times they are centered around Bombay.

Parson's Cause Dispute over salaries paid to Anglican ministers in the Virginia colony during the year 1758. In that year, the colony instituted a measure that effectively reduced ministers' pay. It was struck down (1759) by the king, and the ministers subsequently sued for back pay for 1758. In the most famous of these cases, the young lawyer P. Henry defended (1763) Hanover Parish against its minister.

Parthenon Greek temple of the goddess Athena, protectoress of Athens. Built (447–432 BC) during the reign of Pericles, it was one of the greatest works of Greek Doric architecture. The structure was built on the Athenian acropolis by Ictinus and Callicrates, under supervision of the sculptor Phidias. The Parthenon was converted to a Christian church (5th cent. AD) and then to a Muslim mosque (1458). It was damaged (1687) during an attack by the Venetians on the Turks, then in control of the region. Parts of it (the Elgin Marbles) were later removed to the British Museum.

Parthenopean Republic Short-lived Italian republic. The French set up this republic after conquering the kingdom of Naples (Jan. 1799) during the French Revolutionary Wars (1792–1802). It was retaken by the British, under H. Nelson, soon afterward (June, 1799) and the Bourbon rulers were restored.

Parthia Ancient Asian country, located in what is now modern Iran. The territory was part of the Assyrian, Persian, Macedonian, and Seleucid empires before Arsaces founded the Parthian kingdom (247 BC). At its peak (1st cent. BC), the Parthian Empire extended from the Euphrates River to the Indus River and from the Oxus River to the Indian Ocean. Its decline began with defeats by the Romans (39–38 BC). The empire was taken over (AD 226) by Ardashir I, founder of the Sassanidae Empire.

Partisans Yugoslav guerrilla resistance organization that joined the Allies during WW II in fighting the Axis powers. Led by the Yugoslav Communist J. Tito, the Partisans were an effective fighting force and set up an opposition government in Yugoslavia.

Partition(s) of Poland Three successive divisions of Polish territories in the 18th cent. that resulted in complete dismemberment of Poland. 1. First ~. Russian victories in the Russo-Turkish War of 1768 put it in a position to expand into the region of the Danube, a possibility strongly opposed by Austria. To avert war between Russia and Austria, Prussia proposed that Russia expand into Poland instead. (Poland, torn by a civil war, was unable to resist.) Russia, Austria, and Prussia agreed (Aug. 5, 1772) on the plan and each annexed parts of Poland that together amounted to one-third of Polish domains. 2. Second ~. Liberal reforms enacted in Poland led to the formation of the Confederation of Targowica (1792) by conservative reactionaries. They asked for help to restore conservative rule, and both the Russians and Prussians invaded Poland. Russia and Prussia then instituted (Jan. 23, 1793) the second partition, leaving only the central part of Poland intact. 3. Third ~. The Poles, led by T. Kosciusko, revolted (1794) against the second partition, and Russia and Prussia put down the rebellion. Austria, Prussia, and Russia thereupon agreed to divide (Oct. 24, 1795) the remaining territory, with the major share going to Russia.

Pascal, Blaise 1623–62. French scientist and philosopher. Pascal invented the syringe, barometer, hydraulic press, and digital calculator. He contributed to the theory of probability, atmospheric pressure, and differential calculus. He converted to Jansenism (c1654).

Paschal II d. 1118. Italian-born pope (1099–1118), successor to Urban II. His reign was marked by continuing struggles over the Investiture Controversy (q.v.), first with Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV, then with Emperor Henry V.

Pashitch, Nikola See Pašić, Nikola

Pašić, Nikola ⟨Pashitch, Nikola⟩ 1846–1926. Serbian statesman. He founded and led the Radical party in Serbia and served several times as premier. He was Yugoslavia's first premier (1921–26).

Pasiphae Greek mythical queen, wife of Minos, king of Crete, and mother of both Ariadne and the Minotaur.

Passarowitz, Treaty of Treaty (July 21, 1718) between the Ottoman Empire and Austria and Venice, ending wars (from 1716) with Austria and Venice. Venice ceded its possessions in the Peloponnesus and Crete to the Ottomans. They in turn ceded the Banat of Temesvar, parts of Bosnia and Serbia, and Lesser Walachia to Austria.

Passchendaele, Battle of See Ypres, Battles of Passy, Frédéric 1822–1912. French economist. Passy was a founder of the International League for Permanant Peace (1867). He was co-winner, with J. Dunant, of the first Nobel Peace Prize (1901).

Pasternak, Boris Leonidovich 1890–1960. Russian author. Pasternak's Doctor Zhivago won the Nobel Prize for Literature (1958) and the condemnation of Russian Communists. Threatened with exile, he was forced into seclusion.

Pasteur, Louis 1822–95. French chemist whose work led to the germ theory of disease. He discovered the process of pasteurization while studying fermentation in wine, vinegar, and beer. He also found a cure for two kinds of silkworm disease and used vaccination against anthrax in sheep (1881) and against rabies (1885). He headed the French Pasteur Institute for the study of rabies and other diseases.

Paston Letters Correspondence and documents of the English Paston family written during the 15th cent. They are valuable sources of information about English society during that period.

Pastor, Tony (~, Antonio) 1837–1908. American theater impresario. Pastor helped make vaudeville a respectable family entertainment. Among his star performers were Lillian Russell and Weber and Fields.

Pastry War Brief struggle (1838–39) between France and Mexico over the damages suffered by a French pastrycook during Mexico's civil disturbances. Mexico's refusal to make amends resulted in the French blockade of Veracruz and bombardment of San Juan de Ulúa (Oct. 27, 1838). By a treaty (Mar. 9, 1839), Mexico agreed to pay French claims.

Patagonia Located primarily in Argentina, a semi-arid plateau in the southernmost part of South America.

Patay, Battle of Important French victory (June 18, 1429) during the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453). Amid the general French offensive inspired by Joan of Arc, a French force under La Hire surprised and routed some 5,000 English troops under John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury. This battle, fought at Patay in north-central France, led to the French victory in the north and made possible the crowning of Charles VII at Rheims a month later.

Patel, Vallabhbhai 1875–1950. Indian statesman. A nationalist under M. Gandhi, he took part in organizing the nonviolent demonstrations against British rule and in arranging the independence and partition of British India. He was first deputy minister of independent India (1947–50); his organizational skills were important in molding the diverse elements of India into a unified state.

Pater, Walter Horatio 1839–94. English critic and essayist noted for his devotion to ideal form and beauty, and the technical mastery of his literary style. Among his works are Studies in the History of the Renaissance, and Marius the Epicurean.

Paterson, William 1658–1719. Scottish financier. He founded and directed the Bank of England (1694–95). He formulated the ill-fated Darien Scheme (q.v.).

Pathé, Charles 1863–1957. French film executive. Pathé introduced T. Edison's kinetoscope to French theater audiences and pioneered (1909) the use of newsreels and screen magazines.

Pathet Lao ⟨Lao Country⟩ Laotian Communist political and military organization. Formed in 1950, the group fought the French in the 1950s, later participated in a Laotian coalition government, and, from 1961, fought a bitter civil war against the US-backed Laotian government. With the withdrawal of US forces from Southeast Asia, the Laotian government forces surrendered and the Pathet Lao took control (1975).

Pathfinder, the See Frémont, John Charles

Paton, Alan Stewart 1903–. South African writer and statesman. He wrote Cry the Beloved Country about his country's racial problems and helped organize the Liberal party (1953) to oppose apartheid.

patriarch Religious title. The term first referred to such early Old Testament fathers as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc. The word was later used to denote bishops with jurisdiction over other bishops. The early Christian church recognized three original patriarchates, or administrative divisions: Rome, Antioch, and Alexandria. The patriarchates of Constantinople and Jerusalem were added in the 4th and 5th cents.

patricians Members of the Roman upper class. The patricians represented the wealthy, educated, privileged classes of ancient Rome. For many years only they could hold public office. By the 3rd cent. BC, however, this distinction between the patricians and the plebeians (lower class) was eliminated. Members of the new ruling aristocracy, composed of both patricians and office-holding plebeians, were called nobiles.

Patrick, Saint AD *c*385–461. Christian missionary and saint. Though much of his life is shrouded in legend, Patrick is credited with converting the Irish from paganism to Christianity. Thus he is called the Apostle of Ireland.

Patrimony of St. Peter See Papal States

Patroclus Greek mythical hero of the Trojan Wars. A friend of Achilles, Patroclus borrowed his armor and, after fighting bravely, was slain by Hector. Achilles returned to battle and avenged his friend's death by slaying Hector.

patronage See spoils system

Patterson, Eleanor Medill ⟨Gizycka, Eleanor M.⟩ 1884–1948. American editor, newspaper publisher, and writer. Among the newspapers she had an interest in were the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News, and the Washington Times-Herald.

Patterson, Joseph Medill 1879–1946. American newspaper publisher. In 1919 Patterson founded the New York Daily News, the first successful American tabloid.

Patton, George Smith, Jr. 1885–1945. American general, noted tank corps commander during WW II. A controversial figure, he took part in the North Africa campaign, took Palermo (1943) in the invasion of Sicily, and led his 3d Army across Europe and into Czechoslovakia. He relieved Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge (q.v.).

Paul 1901–64. Greek king (1947–64), successor to his brother, George II. During his reign, Greece maintained a pro-Western stance and resisted Communist attempts to take over the country.

Paul I 1754–1801. Russian emperor (1796–1801), successor to his mother, Catherine II. On gaining the throne, he reversed many of his mother's reforms, alienated the nobility by taking steps to centralize power and, by his inconsistent foreign policy, managed to isolate Russia during the period of the French Revolutionary Wars. He was assassinated Mar. 23, 1801.

Paul II ⟨Barbo, Pietro⟩ 1417–71. Italian-born pope (1464–71), successor to Pius II. He quarreled with French King Louis XI over the Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges (q.v.) and vigorously opposed Bohemian King George of Podebrad for his toleration of the Hussites. Paul was also a noted patron of the arts.

Paul III ⟨Farnese, Alessandro⟩ 1468–1549. Italian-born pope (1534–49), successor to Clement VII. He sanctioned (1540) the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), initiated the Catholic Reformation (q.v.), and called the Council of Trent (1545). He was a noted patron of the arts.

Paul IV ⟨Carafa, Gian Pietro⟩ Italian-born pope (1555–59). Though he succeeded in curtailing church corruption, his extreme orthodoxy negated his achievements in the Catholic Reformation. He organized the Roman Inquisition and thereby instituted a reign of terror, provoked war between France and the Spanish Hapsburgs, denounced the religious accommodation of the Peace of Augsburg (q.v.), and instituted the Jewish ghetto in Rome (1555).

Paul V ⟨Borghese, Camillo⟩ 1552–1621. Italian-born pope (1605–21). He put Venice under a papal interdict (1606), though he ultimately lost his attempt to assert papal power there. He also had disputes with the French over Gallicanism (q.v.) and the English over King James I's oaths of allegiance to the crown.

Paul VI ⟨Montini, Giovanni Battista⟩ 1897–1978. Italian-born pope (1963–78), successor to John XXIII. Paul continued the Second Vatican Council, begun by John XXIII. But his reaffirmation of the traditional ban on birth control sparked dissension within the church.

Paul, Saint d. AD 67. Christian missionary and saint. Originally a Pharisee called Saul of Tarsus, he persecuted Christians until a vision and a miracle converted him. He then became a zealous missionary to the Gentiles and a founder of many churches. His epistles (letters) to his followers are included in the New Testament. He is believed to have been executed in Rome by Nero. His writings greatly influenced subsequent church doctrine.

Paulicians Heretical Christian sect. Centered mostly in Asia Minor (7th–11th cents.), they were gnostic and dualistic in doctrine, and rejected the authority of the Old Testament.

Pauling, Linus Carl 1901–. American biochemist. Pauling won a Nobel Prize in Chemistry (1954) for his theory of chemical bonding and a Nobel Peace Prize (1962) for his opposition to nuclear warfare.

Paullus, Aemilius ⟨Paulus, ~⟩ *c*229–169 BC. Roman general and consul during the Third Macedonian War. Paullus conquered the Inguani people of Liguria and later defeated Perseus of Macedonia (168 BC) at the Battle of Pydna, thereby ending the Macedonian War.

Paul of Aegina 7th cent. AD. Alexandrian physician whose great work was a compilation of the medical knowledge of his day.

Paul of Samosata fl. AD 260–272. Christian theologian who evolved a theory of monarchianism. He denied the Trinity and held that Jesus was but a mortal man empowered by God. His teachings were subsequently condemned by the church.

Paul the Deacon *c*725–799? Lombard priest and historian whose history of the Lombards is a valuable source of information about this Germanic people.

Paulus, Aemilius See Paullus, Aemilius

Pausanias *d. c*466 BC. Spartan general. He was the victorious commander (479) at the Battle of Plataea (q.v.) during the Persian Wars. Later charged with aiding Themistocles in a scheme to take power in Sparta, he took sanctuary in the temple of Athena and there starved to death.

Pausanias fl. AD 174. Greek geographer. His Descriptions of Greece is an important source of information on ancient Greek culture and topography.

Pavia, Battle of 1. Battle (AD 476) in which the German chieftain Odoacer (q.v.) defeated the forces defending the last Western Roman emperor, Romulus Augustus, at Pavia (now in northern Italy). Odoacer subsequently deposed the emperor (Sept. 4, 476) and thus brought the Western Roman Empire to an end. 2. Siege of the city of Pavia (773–774), then the Lombard capital. Frankish king Charlemagne responded to requests for aid from the pope, then being threatened by the Lombards, and drove the Lombard king Desiderius within the city walls. Desiderius finally surrendered in June, 774, and Charlegmagne made himself king of the Lombards. 3. Major defeat for the French (Feb. 24, 1525) during the Italian Wars (1494–1559). The French army of 28,000 soldiers, led by King Francis I, was decimated by some 23,000 troops serving Holy Roman Emperor Charles V (of the Spanish Hapsburg line). Francis was captured and later forced to submit to the Treaty of Madrid (q.v.).

Pavlov, Ivan Petrovich 1849–1936. Russian physiologist and psychologist. Pavlov is most famous for his studies on conditioned reflexes. He received a Nobel Prize in Medicine, 1904.

Pavlova, Anna ⟨Pavlovna⟩ 1882–1931. Famous Russian ballet dancer. Pavlova danced in the Ballet Russe and later formed her own company. Her great roles were in Giselle and The Dying Swan.

Pax Roman goddess of peace. She corresponds to the Greek Irene.

Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act American protective tariff. This 1909 bill raised some tariffs on foreign imports to protect American industries. Opposition to it by farmers figured in W. Wilson's victory in the presidential election of 1912.

Paz, Octavio 1914–. Mexican poet and diplomat. A major Latin American poet, he has published collected poems, including La estación violenta, and essays, including the The Labyrinth of Solitude.

Paz Estenssoro, Victor 1907–. Bolivian political leader and president (1952–56, 1960–64). A founder of the National Revolutionary Movement (MNR) in 1941, he became president when the MNR took power (Apr. 1952). During his term, he instituted many sweeping reforms, including granting Indians the vote, expropriation of the tin mines, and redistribution of farmlands. He was overthrown by the military (Nov., 1964).

Pazzi conspiracy Abortive plot (Apr. 26, 1478) by the Pazzi family to depose Lorenzo de' Medici and family from power in Florence. The plot was backed by Pope Sixtus IV, who wanted to put his nephew in power. The conspirators wounded Lorenzo and killed his brother, Guiliano, but this action provoked a popular uprising against them. Thus the Medicis remained in power.

Peace Commission of 1778 See Carlisle Commission

Peace of See under names inverted, as in Pyrenees, Peace of the

Peachtree Creek, Battle of See Atlanta Campaign

Peale, Charles Willson 1741–1827. American painter and naturalist. Peale is best known for his portraits of G. Washington and other Revolutionary era figures.

Pea Ridge, Battle of See Elkhorn Tavern, Battle of

Pearl Harbor Hawaiian harbor and US naval installation, located on the island of Oahu. A treaty (1887) gave the US rights to the harbor as a coaling port and the naval station was established there (1908). The harbor is best remembered, however, for the Japanese sneak attack there Dec. 7, 1941. While US-Japanese negotiations were under way in Washington, over 100 carrier-based Japanese aircraft conducted a devastating surprise attack on the harbor. With nearly the whole US Pacific fleet moored there, Japanese bombers damaged or sank 19 ships, destroyed almost 200 airplanes, and killed over 2,000 servicemen. The raid brought a declaration of war and US entry into WW II the next day.

Pearse, Patrick Henry 1879–1916. Irish writer and patriot. Pearse promoted the use of the Gaelic language. He commanded rebel forces in the Easter Rebellion (1916) and was named president of the provisional rebel government. He was captured and executed by the British.

Pearson, Lester Bowles 1897–1972. Canadian politician. Actively involved with the UN, Pearson won a Nobel Peace Prize (1957) for his mediation of the 1956 Arab-Israeli War. He served as Canada's Liberal party prime minister (1963–68).

Peary, Robert Edwin 1856–1920. American explorer. Peary led the first expedition to reach the North Pole (1909), as well as other earlier expeditions in Greenland. His observations and writings were of considerable scientific importance in the study of arctic regions.

Peasants' Revolt Popular uprising in England (1381) over a variety of grievances, including the poll tax and the Statute of Labourers (1351), which held down wages of a work force then decimated by the plague. Led by Wat Tyler, the rebels marched on London, took the Tower of London and beheaded the Archbishop of Canterbury. During a meeting (June 14, 1381) at Mile End, the rebels forced King Richard II to make concessions, including an end to serfdom, forced labor, and restrictions on trade. Tyler was killed at London soon afterward, however, and the revolt collapsed. Richard then rescinded the Mile End concessions.

Peasants' War Revolt (1524–26) by the peasants and townsmen in southern Germany and Austria against the repressive policies of the nobles and clergy. Inspired in part by the Reformation and the teachings of such leaders as M. Luther and H. Zwingli, the peasants and poor townspeople formed armies to force religious and political concessions demanded by such rebel leaders as T. Münzer. Luther denounced the movement, and it was ruthlessly crushed (May 1525) in Germany. In Austria the disorders lasted until 1526.

Pease, Edward See Fabian Society

Pecci, Gioacchino See Leo XIII

Pedersen, Knut See Hamsun, Knut

Pedrarias See Arias de Ávila, Pedro

Pedro See also Peter

Pedro I 1798–1834. First emperor of Brazil (1822–31). Pedro declared Brazilian independence from Portugal (Sept. 7, 1822) and accepted a liberal constitution (1824). Later forced to abdicate to his son, Pedro II, he returned to Portugal, ousted King Miguel and restored his daughter, Maria II.

Pedro II 1825–91. Emperor of Brazil (1831–89), successor to his father, Pedro I. A man of great learning, he worked for reform. The abolition of slavery in Brazil, effected with his support in 1888, was widely opposed by landowners. A republic was declared (Nov. 15, 1889) and he died in exile

Peel, Sir Robert 1788–1850. British statesman, prime minister (1834–35, 1841–46), and founder of the Conservative party (q.v). A Tory member of Parliament (from 1809) in his early years, he effected a return to the gold standard, instituted criminal law reforms, and established the London police department (called "bobbies" after him). After his first ministry fell, he saw the need for reform, issued his Tamworth Manifesto, and formed the Conservative party. During his second ministry, he introduced an income tax and repealed the Corn Laws (q.v.). The latter action brought down his government (1846).

Pegasus In Greek mythology, a winged horse born from the blood of the slain Medusa. When Bellerophan attempted to ride him to heaven, Pegasus was changed to a constellation.

Péguy, Charles 1873–1914. French poet. A noted Catholic supporter of A. Dreyfus, Péguy combined religious and Socialist thought. Among his works are Le Mystère de la charité de Jeanne d' Arc and Eve.

Pehlevi See Pahlavi

Peiping See Peking

Peipus, Battle of Lake ⟨Battle of Lake Chudskoye⟩ Decisive battle (1242) between the Russians, led by Prince Alexander Nevski of Novgorod, and the Livonian knights. The invading army of Germanic knights, attempting the conquest of Novgorod, were attacked and defeated by Alexander in a battle fought on the ice-covered Lake Peipus.

Peirce, Charles Sanders 1839–1914. American philosopher. Peirce founded the school of Pragmatism (q.v.), later developed by W. James. He regarded logic as the keystone of all philosophy and knowledge.

Peking ⟨Peiping⟩ Capital city (pop. 8,500,000) of the People's Republic of China. The nation's cultural, educational, political, and transportation center, it is located on the site of several earlier cities, dating to the 1st millennium BC. As Cambuluc (Khanbalik), it was Kubla Khan's capital (13th cent.). Renamed Peking, it was China's capital from 1421 to 1912. In 1860 Peking was occupied by British and French troops and in 1900 it was the site of the Boxer Rebellion (q.v.). In 1928 its name was changed to Peiping. Occupied by the Japanese (1937–45) before and during WW II, it was capital of a Japanese puppet government. It was taken by the Communists (1949), who reestablished it as China's capital and renamed it Peking. Under the Communists, Peking was greatly expanded and improved. Located in Peking is the Forbidden City (q.v.), the former imperial residence.

Peking, Treaty of Treaty (Nov. 2, 1860) in which China and Russia settled the frontier border between Sinkiang and Turkestan. China also gave Russia a coastal territory, now the site of Vladivostok.

Pelagianism Christian heresy (5th cent.) as taught by the British monk Pelagius (AD *c*354–420?). It held that people can choose good over evil and that there is no original sin, which eliminated the need for baptism. This was in opposition to St. Augustine's claims for the necessity of grace for salvation, and Pelagius was excommunicated (418).

Pelagius See Pelagianism

Pelagius I d. 561. Italian-born pope (556–61), successor to Vigilius. Before becoming pope, he opposed Emperor Justinian's edict (544) against Nestorianism. Reconciled, he became pope and was given temporal control in Rome by Justinian.

Peleus Mythical Greek king of the Myrmidons in Thessaly and the father of Achilles. He took part in the Calydonian hunt.

Pelopidas d. 364 BC. Theban general. Pelopidas recovered Thebes from Spartan control (379 BC), commanded the elite Theban corps, the Sacred Band, at Leuctra and in other battles. He later served under Epaminondas.

Peloponnesian League Confederation of Greek city-states organized and dominated by Sparta (6th cent. BC) as a military alliance.

Peloponnesian War, first See Greece (460–445 BC)

Peloponnesian War ⟨second ~⟩ ⟨Great ~⟩ War (431–404 BC) between Sparta and Athens (and respective allied city-states) for control of Greece. Before the war Sparta held sway over most of the city-states of inland Greece (through the Peloponnesian League), while Athens controlled the Delian League, a maritime empire extending out over the Aegean. Sparta had a superior land army and Athens had a powerful navy. The two city-states had long been rivals and the intricate system of alliances with other city-states meant that even local conflicts could erupt into a general war. Though Athens entered the war with the riches of the Delian treasury to support its war effort, Sparta ultimately emerged victorious. Athens never regained its former power, and Sparta for a time became the undisputed power in ancient Greece. Key dates in the Peloponnesian War are:

435 BC Dispute between Corcyra and Corinth broke out; Corinthians defeated at the Battle of Leucimne.

433 BC Corcyra formed an alliance with Athens as Corinth, a Spartan ally, prepared to attack.

433 BC Corinthians attacked and Corcyreans were saved from defeat by Athenian intervention; Athenians forced the Corinthians to relinquish control of a colony, Potidaea.

432 BC Revolt by Potidaea put down by Athenians.

432 BC Trade embargo against Megarians further antagonized members of Sparta's Peloponnesian League (432 BC); Athens accused of breaking Thirty Years' Peace; Sparta reluctantly declared war.

431–421 BC Archidamian War, the opening phase of the war; Athenians planned to avoid land war (by remaining inside city walls) while using their navy to disrupt commerce and raid coastal towns of Peloponnesian League; Sparta planned to invade Attica each year to provoke Athenians to land battle.

431 BC Spartans advanced into Attica.

430–428 BC Plague swept Athens, decimating the population and killing the Athenian leader Pericles; Cleon succeeded.

c429 BC Athens attacked and destroyed Potidaea, which had risen against Athenian hegemony.

428 BC Athenians suppressed rebellion on Lesbos.

425 BC Athenians occupied Pylos.

424–422 BC Spartans led by Brasidas conquered Amphipolis and other cities in the north (424 BC); Athens decisively defeated in attempt to regain Amphipolis, and both Cleon and Brasidas died.

421 BC Nicias succeeded as ruler of Athens, secured short-lived truce (Peace of Nicias) marking end of first phase of conflict.

418 BC Battle of Mantineia; Sparta victorious over Mantineia, an Athenian ally.

415 BC Alcibiades contested Nicias' rule in Athens; convinced Athenians to mount campaign against the rich city of Syracuse (in Sicily) to resolve local dispute; massive Athenian fleet assembled, to be led by Alcibiades and Nicias.

415 BC Alcibiades recalled to Athens to answer charges of sacrilege; fled to Sparta and helped them against Athens; Nicias in sole command of expedition against Syracuse.

415–413 BC Syracuse decisively defeated Athenians, led by Nicias; staggering losses seriously weakened Athens.

412 BC Alcibiades took command of Spartan fleet (financed by Persia) and sailed on Athens; led to general uprising against Athens and establishment of the Four Hundred, an oligarchy, in Athens.

410 BC Alcibiades rejoined Athenians; defeated Spartan fleet at Cyzicus.

407 BC Spartan navy, led by Lysander, defeated Athenian fleet at Notium; led to final exile of Alcibiades from Athens.

406 BC Athenian fleet under Conon defeated the Spartans in the Battle of Arginusae.

405 BC Spartans destroyed the Athenian navy at the Battle of Aegospotami, the closing naval battle of the war.

405–404 BC Spartans laid siege to Athens by land and by sea; Athens forced to surrender but was spared destruction by the Spartans; Delian League broken up and government of the Thirty Tyrants imposed on Athens.

Peloponnesus Peninsula of Greece forming the southern part of the country. It is almost completely separated from mainland (central) Greece by the Gulf of Corinth. In ancient times, its major cities included Sparta and Corinth. The region was also called Morea.

Pelops Mythical Greek king. Killed by his father, Tantalus, and served to the gods for their dinner, Pelops was restored to life by the gods when they discovered Tantalus' crime. The Peloponnesus was named for Pelops.

Pemberton, John See Big Black River, Battle of

Pembroke, William Marshal, 1st earl of d. 1219. English nobleman. He served under the English kings Henry II, Richard I, and John. As regent for Henry III, he ended (1217) the barons' revolt begun when King John revoked the Magna Carta.

penal laws General term for the body of English laws promulgated in the 16th and 17th cents. against Roman Catholics in Britain and Ireland. An outgrowth of the English Reformation, penal laws included acts that denied Catholics the right to worship, hold public office, vote, and own land. Many of the acts were passed during the reigns of Henry VIII and Elizabeth I. The laws were overturned by the Catholic Emancipation Act (1829) and other subsequent acts.

penates See lares and penates

Pendergast, Thomas Joseph 1872–1945. American politician. Pendergast virtually ruled the Democratic party in Missouri and aided the early career of H. Truman. His power was broken by a tax-evasion conviction (1938) and subsequent imprisonment.

Pendleton Civil Service Act US law (Jan. 16, 1883) passed to end political influence and corruption in the hiring of federal government workers. Public pressure for reform had been mounting for some years. After the assassination (1881) of President J. Garfield (by a disgruntled office-seeker), this act, sponsored by Senator George H. Pendleton (1825–89), was passed. The act established civil service exams and hiring by merit and created the Civil Service Commission.

Penelope Mythical Greek matron, wife of Odysseus, mother of Telemachus, and symbol of the faithful wife. During her husband's long absence in the Trojan War, she rejected potential suitors by promising to wed when done with her weaving. She unraveled it each night.

Peninsular campaign Unsuccessful attempt (1862) by Union forces to take Richmond, Virginia, during the American Civil War. Gen. G. McClellan landed his troops on the peninsula between the York and James Rivers (Apr. 1862). McClellan, with about 100,000 men, planned to lay siege to Yorktown, the center of Confederate lines across the peninsula. However, Confederate Gen. J. Johnston withdrew (May 3) toward Richmond, and Union armies advanced to positions around White House Landing (May 16), some twenty miles from Richmond. With his forces occupying both sides of the Chickahominy River, McClellan awaited the arrival of I. McDowell, who was to march south overland from Fredericksburg. But Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, leading only 18,000 troops, blocked McDowell's forces in the Shenandoah Valley and after defeating them at Winchester, forced McDowell to withdraw back across the Potomac (May 24). On May 31, Gen. Johnston unsuccessfully attacked the south wing of McClellan's forces at Seven Pines (q.v.) and he was seriously wounded. Finally, R.E. Lee launched attacks on Union lines for seven straight days (the Seven Days' Battles), striking at Mechanicsville (June 26), Gaines's Mill (June 27), Savage's Station (June 29), Frayser's Farm (June 30), and Malvern Hill (July 1). McClellan withdrew his forces (July 11) soon after, suffering some 16,000 casualties to almost 21,000 for the Confederates.

Peninsular War Series of military campaigns (1808–14) conducted by British, Portuguese, and Spanish forces against the French in the Iberian Peninsula during the Napoleonic Wars. The Peninsular War was prompted by the French invasion of Portugal (Nov., 1807) following Portugal's refusal to join Napoleon's Continental System (q.v.). The French army, under Andoche Junot (1771–1813), forced Portuguese King John VI to flee to Brazil. Meanwhile, French forces under Joachim Murat (1767?–1815) invaded Spain and occupied Madrid (Mar. 23, 1808). Spanish King Charles IV had been deposed, and the new ruler, King Ferdinand VII, was in turn deposed by Napoleon. A rebellion in Madrid (May 2) was ruthlessly crushed by Murat, and Napoleon named his brother J. Bonaparte king of Spain (June 15). In August a British army landed in Portugal. Under A. Wellesley (later duke of Wellington), the British defeated the French at Vimeiro (Aug. 21), forcing Junot to negotiate the convention of Cintra (Aug. 30), by which the French agreed to evacuate Portugal with British assistance. The British then invaded Spain. They were led by Sir John Moore (1761–1809). Napoleon returned to Spain and seized Madrid in December, and the French, under Soult, forced Moore's retreat. The British were evacuated at Coruña (Jan. 16, 1809) after a fierce battle in which Moore fell mortally wounded. Saragossa was taken by the French (Feb. 21, 1809). In April, Wellesley again forced the French out of Portugal and invaded Spain. He defeated the French at Talavera (July 28), but was again forced back into Portugal. The contest continued back and forth until 1812, when Wellesley defeated the French at Salamanca (July 22, 1812) and occupied Madrid for several months. Assuming command of all allied forces in the area, Wellesley again defeated the French at Vitoria (June 21, 1813) and began the invasion of France. The British put Bayonne under siege and defeated the French at Toulouse (Apr. 10, 1814). The Peninsular War came to an end with Napoleon's abdication (Apr., 1814).

Penitent Thief See Good Thief

Penn, William 1644–1718. English religious leader and founder of Pennsylvania. A Quaker, he obtained rights to Pennsylvania (1681), intending to establish a colony based on religious and political freedom. He planned Philadelphia, visited the area, and established friendly relations with the Indians.

Pennsylvania Middle Atlantic state of the US (pop 11,866,700), the 2nd state. Sweden formed the first settlement on Tinicum Island in 1643, but the Dutch (1655) and then the English (1664) took control of the region. The Quaker W. Penn was granted a royal charter in 1681 and established a liberal government guaranteeing religious freedom. Pennsylvania played an important role in the American Revolution and Philadelphia was the center of the new US government (1790–1800). A boundary dispute with Maryland was settled with agreement on the Mason-Dixon Line (1784). Pennsylvania became a state in 1787 and adopted its constitution in 1873.

Penry, John 1559–93. Welsh Puritan. He was convicted and executed for writing (under the pseudonym Martin Marprelate) Puritan tracts that caused the Marprelate Controversy (q.v.).

Pentapolis In ancient times a group of five city-states.

Pentateuch See Moses

Pentecostal churches Protestant fundamentalist churches that profess baptism with the Holy Spirit, a religious experience that may endow one with the ability to prophesy, speak in tongues, or heal by faith.

People's Budget See Lloyd George, David, 1st earl Lloyd-George of Dwyfor

People's Charter See Chartism

People's Council See Volksraad

People's Republic of China See China

Pepi I fl. *c*2343?–*c*2294 BC. Ancient Egyptian ruler of the 6th dynasty. He built many monuments and founded Memphis.

Pepi II fl. *c*2294–*c*2200 BC. Ancient Egyptian king, successor to his father, Pepi I. His reign, the longest in recorded history, was apparently about 94 years. He built the pyramid at Saqqara, near Cairo.

Pepin I d. 838. King of Aquitaine (817–838). The son of Louis the Pious, he joined his brother Charles the Bald in wars against their father.

Pepin of Heristal d. 714. Ruler of the Franks (687–714). He became mayor of the palace (680) of the Frankish kingdom of Austrasia and subsequently defeated the mayor of the palace of Neustria (687). Though he kept the Neustrian king on the throne, Pepin was effectively ruler of both states. He was father of Charles Martel and grandfather of Charlemagne.

Pepin of Landen See Carolingians

Pepin the Short 714?–768. First Carolingian king of the Franks (751–768). He and his brother Carloman succeeded their father, Charles Martel. Pepin ruled Neustria as mayor of the palace under Childeric III, who was then nominal king of all Franks. When Carloman retired to a religious life, Pepin forced Childeric into a monastery, and had himself crowned (751) as king of the Franks. In return for papal consent to his crowning, he protected Rome from the Lombards and turned over conquered Italian territories (including the Exarchate of Ravenna) to the pope in what is called the Donation of Pepin (756). These lands formed the basis for the Papal States.

Pepys, Samuel 1633–1703. English administrator and famous diarist. His diary (1660–69) provided a vivid account of the English Restoration period.

Pequot War War (1636–37) between British colonists and Pequot Indians in Connecticut. Friction between colonists and Indians had been building for some years and the murder (1636) of a colonist on Block Island was blamed on the Indians. In retaliation, the colonial militia and their Indian allies raided and burned the Pequot settlement at Mystic, Connecticut, and slaughtered almost all its 600 inhabitants. The few survivors were hunted down and likewise killed.

Perceval See Parsifal

Percier, Charles See Fontaine, Pierre François Leonard

Percy, Algernon, 10th earl of Northumberland 1602–68. English statesman. Percy attempted to reconcile Charles I with the Parliament. Though he eventually supported Parliament in the English Civil War, he opposed Charles' execution.

Percy, Henry, 1st earl of Northumberland 1342–1408. English nobleman. Percy assisted Henry IV in ousting Richard II. However, he later joined with his son Henry (Hotspur) Percy in an attempt to overthrow Henry (1403).

Percy, Sir Henry ⟨Hotspur⟩ 1366–1402. English nobleman. With his father, Henry Percy, 1st earl of Northumberland, he helped bring Henry IV to power and later distinguished himself in battle against the Scots. He fell out with Henry, however, and joined (1403) with his father and others against Henry. He was killed in battle at Shrewsbury.

Percy, Thomas, earl of Worcester *c*1344–1403. English nobleman. A son of H. Percy, earl of Northumberland, he helped bring Henry IV to power. He then joined his family in revolt (1403) against Henry and was executed.

Percy, Thomas, 7th earl of Northumberland 1528–72. English nobleman. Percy, a Catholic, plotted (1569) to invade England, rescue the Catholic Mary Queen of Scots, and end the Protestant rule of Elizabeth I. The plan failed and he was beheaded.

Perdiccas d. 321 BC. Macedonian general and regent of the empire after the death (323 BC) of Alexander the Great. Perdiccas was killed by his troops while leading a military expedition into Egypt against another of Alexander's generals, Ptolemy. (See also Diadochi.)

Pereira, Nuno Alvares 1360–1431. Portuguese general and hero who figured in King John's victory against the Castilians at the Battle of Aljubarrota (q.v.).

Peretti, Felice See Sixtus V

Pérez, Antonio 1534?–1611. Spanish politician and intriguer, secretary to Spanish King Philip II. He apparently turned Philip against Juan de Escovedo, secretary to the governor of the Spanish Netherlands, and arranged Escovedo's murder. Philip later prosecuted Pérez, who escaped to the Spanish kingdom of Aragón and raised an abortive revolt (1590–91) against Philip.

Pérez de Ayala, Ramón 1880–1962. Spanish writer, one of the leading Spanish novelists of this century. His works include Balarmino and Apolonio, The Peace of the Path, and Tiger Juan.

Pérez Jiménez, Marcos 1914–. President of Venezuela (1952–58). An army colonel, he took part in the military coup of 1948, was part of the provisional government, and then became president. He ruthlessly suppressed opposition and was later convicted of corrupt practices. He was overthrown (Jan., 1958).

Perga, Apollonius of See Apollonius of Perga

Pergamum Ancient city in northern Asia Minor, the capital of the kingdom of Mysia and one of the greatest cultural centers of the Hellenistic civilization. Pergamum was governed by the Attalid dynasty and under them became the center of a great empire. The rulers Attalus I (d. 197 BC), Eumanes II (d. 160 BC), and Attalus II (d. 138 BC) allied themselves with Rome against the Seleucids and Syrians and thereby expanded the domains of Mysia to include most of Asia Minor. The city flourished as a cultural and commercial center of Asia, and a great library was founded there. Attalus III, who died (133 BC) without heirs, bequeathed Mysia to the Romans. They subsequently reorganized the kingdom into the province of Asia with Pergamum as its capital.

Peri, Jacopo 1561–*c*1633. Italian composer. Peri participated in writing what is generally considered the first true opera, Dafne (*c*1597). The work is now lost.

Periander d. 585 BC. Tyrant of Corinth (625–585 BC). His reign was harsh, but Corinth enjoyed commercial prosperity and a cultural flowering under his rule. He is one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece.

Pericles *c*495–429 BC. Athenian statesman and general, a member of the Alcmaeonidae family. Pericles secured the ostracism of his two chief enemies, Cimon and Thucydides, and thereafter became the leader of Athens. He ended war with Persia (448), asserted Athenian domination over member states of the Delian League, and arranged a truce with Sparta (445). In this period of peace, Pericles strengthened the Athenian navy and completed fortifications at Athens and Piraeus, instituted reforms that strengthened the Athenian democracy, patronized the arts, and embarked on a great program of building that glorified Athens with such structures as the Parthenon and the Propylaea. He figured in the events that resulted in the Peloponnesian War (q.v.), was ousted from power soon after it began, but was restored shortly before his death.

Perier, Casimir Pierre 1777–1832. French statesman. Perier led the opposition to Charles X, was prime minister (1831–32) to Louis Philippe, and restored order in France following the upheavals of 1830.

Permanent Court of Arbitration See International Court of Justice

Permanent Court of International Justice See International Court of Justice

Perón, Juan Domingo 1895–1974. Argentine president (1946–55, 1973–74) and nationalist. Perón began his career in the army and became minister of war and vice-president (1945). During the early part of his presidency, he and his wife Eva were popular with the workers and were able to make many economic and political changes, in a reform program called the peronismo. His regime became increasingly totalitarian and anticlerical, however, and he was deposed (Sept. 1955). He lived in Spain until his brief return to power in 1973.

Perón, María Estela Martínez de ⟨Isabel Perón⟩ 1931–. President of Argentina (1974–76). The second wife (m. 1961) of J. Perón, she was his vice-president (1973–74) and succeeded him after he died in office. She was ousted by a military coup.

Perón, María Eva Duarte de ⟨Evita⟩ 1919–52. Argentine political leader, the wife of President J. Perón (m. 1945). Popular with the masses, she wielded great political power during her husband's first term. She effected many reforms, including voting rights for women.

peronismo See Perón, Juan Domingo

Perrault, Charles 1628–1703. French poet whose collection of Mother Goose fairy tales for children is world famous. He also precipitated the great literary dispute (called the "quarrel of the ancients and moderns") with his poem The Age of Louis the Great (1687), in which he placed authors of his own age above the great figures of classical times.

Perry, Matthew Calbraith 1794–1858. American naval officer. Perry commanded a US naval mission that forced Japan to accept a treaty opening her ports to Western trade (1854).

Perry, Oliver Hazard 1785–1819. American naval officer and hero of the War of 1812. He defeated the British at the Battle of Lake Erie and is remembered for reporting his victory with "we have met the enemy and they are ours."

Persephone Greek goddess of fertility, daughter of Zeus and Demeter. Pluto abducted her and confined her to the underworld. She was eventually allowed to return for eight months of each year, spending the other four months (thus winter) in the underworld.

Persepolis Ancient Persian city. Persepolis was a capital of the Achaemenid rulers. It was sacked by Alexander the Great (*c*330 BC).

Perseus Greek mythical hero who slew the Medusa with weapons given him by the gods. He then rescued and married Andromeda.

Perseus *c*212–166 BC. Macedonian king (179–168 BC), successor to his father, Philip V. His attempts to restore Macedonian hegemony in Greece led to the Third Macedonian War (q.v.) with Rome and his defeat at the Battle of Pydna (q.v.). He was the last Macedonian king.

Pershing, John Joseph 1860–1948. American general. He won notable victories in the Philippines during the Spanish-American War, led the unsuccessful expedition against F. (Pancho) Villa (1916–17) in Mexico, and commanded the American Expeditionary Force (q.v.) during WW I.

Persia Historic empire of ancient origins centered in modern Iran and at times extending well into southwest Asia. The modern successor state to this empire is Iran. Persia began its rise to prominence in about the 7th cent. BC and by the 6th cent. BC had become the dominant power of the ancient Near Eastern world. After the 5th cent. BC, the power and fortunes of the empire rose and fell. Persia was conquered variously, notably by the Macedonian Greeks and the Muslims, and its vast domains were greatly reduced. Persia nevertheless developed a distinctive culture which drew on Greek, Muslim, and other influences. After a long period of control by Arab Muslims and Turkic peoples, Persia again emerged in the 16th cent. as an independent empire. Modernization began in the early 20th cent., and in 1935 Persia was officially renamed Iran. (For subsequent history, see Iran.) Key dates in the history of Persia include:

c1500 BC Medes and Persians migrated to the Iranian plateau.

c700 BC Achaemenes founded Persian kingdom and the Achaemenid dynasty of Persian kings; kingdom was dominated by Media until 6th cent. BC.

c628–c551 BC Zoroaster lived; founded Zoroastrianism, which became the religion of Persia in following centuries.

c600–559 BC Cambyses I reigned; his son was Cyrus the Great.

558–529 BC Cyrus (the Great) reigned; established Persian dominance over Media and Elam and greatly expanded Persian power and territory; borrowed freely from Assyrian and Babylonian cultures.

546 BC Cyrus conquered Lydia in Asia Minor.

539 BC Cyrus conquered Babylonia; Babylonian captivity of the Jews ended.

529–522 BC Cambyses II reigned; murdered his brother Smerdis to secure his power and then pursued successful campaign to conquer Egypt; a false Smerdis seized throne (522) and Cambyses died on return from Egypt.

522–486 BC Darius I (the Great) reigned after seizing power from the false Smerdis; put down revolts within the empire and reorganized domains into satrapies, or administrative districts; instituted effective communications system using horses; extended empire into northern India and ranged into Europe.

499–479 BC Persian Wars; Darius and his successor Xerxes failed in their attempt to subjugate the Greeks, though Persia continued to influence affairs of Greek city-states in subsequent years.

486–465 BC Xerxes I reigned; lost Persian Wars and fell into dissolute life at Susa; decline of empire began; Xerxes assassinated.

464–425 BC Artaxerxes I reigned; put down revolt in Egypt (460–454 BC), permitted Jews to worship at Judaea, kept Persia out of the Peloponnesian War in Greece.

405 BC Egypt successfully revolted against Persian rule.

404–359 BC Artaxerxes II reigned; rule plagued by many revolts; royal palace at Susa rebuilt.

401 BC Great rebellion by Cyrus the Younger, satrap of Asia Minor; led army against Artaxerxes II; Cyrus defeated and killed at battle of Cunaxa; famous retreat by Greek soldiers (under Xenophon) who had fought for Cyrus.

359–338 BC Artaxerxes III again subjugated Egypt (343 BC) after initial unsuccessful campaigns.

336–330 BC Darius III reigned; failed to halt advance of Alexander the Great.

334 BC Darius defeated by Macedonian Greeks under Alexander at Battle of Granicus.

333 BC Battle of Issus: Alexander again defeated Darius.

331 BC Darius decisively defeated at Battle of Gaugamela; long rule of Achaemenid dynasty ended; Darius fled to Bactria.

330 BC Darius assassinated in Bactria.

323–281 BC Wars of the Diadochi; Alexander's generals warred for control of his empire after his death; most of Persia came under Seleucid rule.

312–64 BC Seleucid dynasty, established by Seleucid I, ruled over much of ancient Persian Empire; at its height it included Babylon, Persia, Syria, Bactria, and part of Asia Minor, though control was weak and domains were gradually reduced to Syria; Seleucids introduced Hellenic (Greek) culture to Persia.

3D CENT. BC Bactria overthrew Seleucid rule; became independent kingdom.

247 BC–AD 224 Parthian Empire founded (south of Caspian Sea) by Arsaces I; after overthrowing Seleucid rule, Parthians dealt with nomadic invasions from northeast and successfully blocked eastward advance of Romans; Parthians pushed their empire westward to Mesopotamia.

64 BC Last of Seleucid domains (Syria) conquered by Romans under Pompey; Persia (proper) under Parthian rule.

AD 224–640 Sassanid dynasty reigned in Persia; empire at its greatest extent reached Indus Valley in east and Mesopotamia in west; Persian culture flourished; many buildings and roads constructed.

AD 226–241 Ardashir I reigned; established Zoroastrianism as state religion; built many cities.

AD 241–272 Shapur I reigned; a successful conqueror, he gained parts of Asia Minor and in wars with Rome took Syria and part of Mesopotamia; captured Emperor Valerian.

AD 293–302 Narses reigned; lost substantial territory to the Roman Empire.

AD 309–379 Shapur II reigned; regained much of the territory lost to the Romans by Narses.

AD 399–420 Yazdegerd I reigned; Christians in Persian domains persecuted.

531–579 Khosru I reigned; Sassanid Empire brought to its greatest extent through successful wars against Byzantines (in time of Justinian and Justin II); reformed administration; literature flourished.

590–628 Khosru II reigned; warred against the Byzantines; initially successful, he occupied Egypt and threatened Constantinople; defeated by the Byzantine Heraclius (622–628).

632–651 Yazdegerd III, last Sassanian ruler, reigned; Persian Empire conquered by the Arabs and absorbed into the Caliphate Empire; Islam introduced into region in place of Zoroastrianism.

819–999 Samanid dynasty in power, native Persian dynasty ruling over Transoxania and Khorasan (in northeast Iran) under nominal control of the Muslim caliphs; Persian culture flourished.

999–1186 Ghaznavid dynasty reigned; this Turkish dynasty took control of much of Samanid Empire (west of river Oxus) and extended empire eastward, eventually embracing Afghanistan and part of India.

11TH–14TH CENT. Seljuks, Muslim Turks, dominated the domains of the Empire of the Caliphate, including Persia.

13TH–16TH CENT. Mongol conquests; Empire of the Caliphate fell to the Mongols (1258); there followed a period of rule by Mongols, Timurs, and Turkmen.

1501–24 Ismail reigned after establishing new Persian Empire; founded Safavid dynasty; established Shi'ite Islam as state religion.

1501–1736 Safavid dynasty in power; engaged in long series of wars with Ottoman Turks and Uzbeks.

1586–1629 Abbas I (the Great) reigned; regained Persian territories lost in wars with Ottoman Turks and Uzbeks; captured Baghdad (1623); encouraged art, trade, and public works.

1722–30 Afghan interlude; Persia under control of Afghans after being defeated by Mir Mahmud.

1724 Russia and Turkey seized portions of Persian Empire.

1730 Nadir Kuli defeated Afghans and forced them from Persia.

1736–47 Nadir Shah reigned; recaptured Persian territories from Russia and Ottoman Empire; invaded India (1738–39).

1794–97 Agha Muhammad reigned as shah; founded Kajar dynasty (ruled 1794–1925); reign noted for its cruelty and repression.

1797–1835 Fath Ali reigned as shah; power of the shah declined as both Russia and Britain sought to dominate Persia; Persia began to lose territories; signed disadvantageous treaty of Gulistan with Russia (1813).

1828 Persia ceded lands in Armenia to Russia by the Treaty of Turkmanchay, following Russo-Turkish War of 1826–28.

1856–57 War with Britain; seizure of Persian lands by Afghanistan provoked war with Afghanistan; Britain interceded, defeated Persia, and forced it to recognize Afghan independence.

1901 Britain was granted oil concession; discovery of oil led to increased rivalry between Britain and Russia over Persia.

1906 Shah Muzaffar-ed-Din established first Persian majlis, or national assembly; liberal constitution drawn up.

1907–09 Muhammad Ali reigned as shah; attempted forcibly to overthrow the constitution (1909) and was deposed.

1909–25 Ahmed Shah reigned; last of the Kajar dynasty.

1914–18 WW I; Persia occupied by British and Russian forces.

1919 Persia signed agreement giving Britain control over Persia while recognizing Persian independence; agreement repudiated in 1921.

1920 Became a member of the League of Nations.

1921 British began withdrawing troops from Persia.

1921 Reza Khan became prime minister by a coup (Feb. 21).

1921 Treaty with the Soviets; Soviets agreed to withdraw from Persia.

1925 Ahmed Shah deposed by majlis (Oct. 31); Prime Minister Reza Khan made shah (Dec. 13).

1925–41 Reza Shah Pahlevi reigned; began modernization and Westernization of Persia.

1935 Persia renamed Iran (Mar. 21).

Persian Wars Series of military campaigns conducted by the Persians against the Greeks, beginning in 499 BC. The wars were sparked by a revolt of the Ionian Greeks against Persian rule (499). The cities of Athens and Eretria aided the Ionian Greeks, but the revolt was crushed (494) by Persian king Darius. Darius then sent a large force to punish Athens and Eretria. The Persians took Macedon and Thrace (492), but their fleet was badly damaged by storms and they were obliged to withdraw. A second expedition occupied Eretria, but while attempting to advance upon Athens, the Persians were defeated at Marathon (q.v.) in 490, by an Athenian force led by Miltiades.

Darius gathered a massive third expeditionary force, but died (486) before it could move against Greece. The expedition was conducted by his son and successor, Xerxes I, who landed in Greece in 480. The Persians were delayed at Thermopylae (q.v.) by a small Spartan force under Leonidas, and although the Persians took Athens, their navy was destroyed at Salamis (q.v.) in 480. Xerxes returned to Persia but left an army in Greece under Mardonius. The Greek victory over Mardonius at Plataea (479) and destruction of the Persian fleet at Mycale that year marked the end of Persia's military campaigns against mainland Greece. After 479, sporadic fighting between the Greeks and Persians continued until a peace was concluded (c449). The wars between Persia and the Greek city-states resulted in the decline of Persian power and the rise of Greek power.

Persius (Flaccus, Aulus Persius) AD 34–62. Roman satirical poet. Persius was a Stoic whose works attacked the loose moral standards of his day. His works, published posthumously, were a great success.

Peru (Republic of Peru) Country located in western South America. Its capital is Lima. Peru was the center of the vast Inca Empire conquered (16th cent.) by the Spanish. From the mid-16th cent. until Peru achieved independence, Lima was the seat of Spanish rule in South America. Peru was also a major source of silver and gold. Since independence, Peru has had a history of political instability. Key dates in Peruvian history include:

12TH CENT. Incas, "people of the sun," settled around Cuzco.

15TH CENT. Extensive empire carved out by the Incas; included most of Peru and Ecuador and parts of neighboring countries; centered in Cuzco.

c1530–32 Civil war between Atahualpa and Huascar, sons of the Inca ruler Huayna Capac (ruled 1487–1525); Huascar defeated and executed by Atahualpa, who became sole ruler.

1532 Spanish conquistador F. Pizarro arrived; seized and imprisoned Atahualpa and collected a huge ransom in gold and silver.

1533 Atahualpa executed by Pizarro; Cuzco captured; Indian peoples subsequently forced to work in mines and on Spanish lands, under system called encomienda.

1535 Lima founded by Pizarro.

1536–44 Manco Capac, new Inca emperor, led unsuccessful revolts against the Spanish.

1537–38 Warfare between the Spanish conquerors; Pizarro defeated forces led by P. Alvarado and Diego de Almagro; Almagro executed.

1541 Assassination of Pizarro by supporters of Almagro.

1542 Vaca de Castro, representing the Spanish crown, restored order among the Spanish rulers.

1542 Lima made center of Spanish rule and capital of viceroyalty of Peru, eventually including all of Spanish South America except Venezuela.

1542 "New Laws for the Indies," inspired by B. de las Casas, promulgated; designed to alleviate the hardship of the forced labor imposed on the Indians by the Spanish.

1544–48 Pizarro's brother, Gonzalo, led revolt against the New Laws; though he was defeated, the laws were subsequently not enforced.

1718 Viceroyalty of Peru reduced in size by creation of viceroyalty of New Granada.

1776 Peruvian territory further reduced by creation of the viceroyalty of Rio de la Plata.

1781 Tupac Amuru's Incan revolt against Spain failed; he and his family executed.

1808 Napoleon conquered Spain; led to rise of independence movements throughout South America.

1821 Peruvian independence proclaimed at Lima (July 28), though Spanish royalist forces had not yet been completely defeated.

1822 Guayaquil Conference (July); S. Bolívar took over leadership of South American independence movement from J. San Martín.

1824 Battle of Ayacucho (Dec. 9); Bolívar secured Peruvian independence by decisively defeating Spanish royalists.

1836–39 Peru and Bolivia united in a confederation; opposed by Chile, the confederation was defeated at the Battle of Yungay and broken up.

1844–62 Gen. Ramón Castilla in office as president (except 1850–55); his administration marked by economic development and stability.

1864–66 War with Spain; Spain attacked Peru after Peru failed to meet financial obligations; Spanish driven out.

1860 Republican constitution adopted.

1879 Peru's independence formally recognized by Spain.

1879–84 War of the Pacific; Peru lost valuable mineral-rich lands to Chile; government nearly bankrupt after war.

1883–1929 Tacna-Arica Controversy; prolonged territorial dispute with Chile; ultimately resolved along lines suggested by US president H. Hoover.

1908–30 Augusto Leguía in power as dictator (except 1912–19); promoted further economic development.

1924 V. Haya de la Torre founded the radical APRA party.

1933–39 Gen. Oscar Benavides ruled as dictator.

1939–45 Manuel Prado y Ugarteche in office as president.

1945–48 President José Luís Bustamante y Rivero in office after first free elections in many years; overthrown by military after split with APRA party.

1948–56 Gen. Manual Odría in office.

1963–68 Fernando Belaúnde Terry in office after elections run by military.

1968 Belaúnde Terry ousted; inflation and refusal to take over American-owned oil fields blamed.

1968–75 Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado in power; head of a revolutionary military government aiming at "democratizing" Peruvian society.

1970 50,000 people killed in earthquake in northern Peru.

1975 Military quelled rioting in Lima (Feb.) that resulted from police strike.

1975 Gen. Francisco Morales Bermuúdez ousted Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado from presidency in bloodless coup (Aug. 29).

1978 Unrest resulted from sharp rise in food prices after government imposed austerity measures (May).

1979 Peru's financial situation greatly improved by austerity measures and greater returns on exports (including oil); foreign loans repaid.

1980 Fernando Belaúnde Terry installed as president, ending over a decade of military rule.

1981 Cease-fire ended border clashes with Ecuador (Feb.); agreed to international arbitration of dispute.

Perugino *c*1445–1523. Italian painter. Perugino assisted in the decoration of the Sistine Chapel and was the teacher of Raphael.

Peruzzi, Baldassarre 1481–1536. Italian architect and painter. Peruzzi was appointed an architect of St. Peter's Cathedral after Raphael's death. He was noted for his work on the Palazzo Massini at Rome.

Pestalozzi, Johann Heinrich 1746–1827. Swiss educational reformer. Pestalozzi was concerned with the education of deprived children. His use of concrete experience, as opposed to rote learning, in teaching still influences educational theory today.

Pétain, Henri Philippe 1856–1951. French marshal. Though a hero at Verdun in WW I, Pétain collaborated with the Nazis and became head of the French Vichy government during WW II. He was imprisoned for life after the war.

Peter d. AD 64? Apostle, pope, and saint. According to the Bible Peter, a fisherman of Galilee was originally known as Simon. He was chosen by Jesus to be the first leader (pope) of his disciples. During Jesus' crucifixion, Peter denied knowing him, an act that Jesus had predicted and that Peter bitterly repented. After word of Jesus' ascension to heaven, Peter actively sought converts, and is believed to have been crucified, head downward, in Rome by Nero. In the Roman Catholic church, he is considered the first pope.

Peter I ⟨Peter the Great⟩ 1672–1725. Russian czar (1682–1725), successor to his father, Alexis. Peter's reign was dominated by his efforts to modernize and Westernize Russia. He brought Russia into the European sphere, created the first Russian navy, took measures to control the nobility, improved the position of women, reduced the power of the clergy, and imported Western technology.

Other events of his reign included Russo-Turkish Wars,and the Northern War with Sweden (1700–21). He also created a new capital city, St. Petersburg, on the Baltic.

Peter I 1844–1921. King of Serbia (1903–18) and king of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (1918–21). Peter supported a constitutional monarchy and expanded Serbian domains in the Balkan Wars (q.v.). His son, Alexander, was his regent from 1914.

Peter II 1648–1706. King of Portugal (1683–1706), successor to Alfonso VI. Peter concluded the treaty of Lisbon (Feb., 1683), by which Spain recognized Portugal's independence, and failed in his attempt to keep Portugal out of the War of the Spanish Succession.

Peter II 1715–30. Czar of Russia (1727–30), successor to Catherine I. Only 11 at his accession, he was manipulated by the Dolgoruki family. They arranged the arrest of Catherine's former adviser, A. Menshikov, and moved the capital (1728) to Moscow.

Peter II 1923–70. King of Yugoslavia (1934–45), successor to his father, Alexander, and Yugoslavia's last king. He fled after the Nazi invasion (1941) and while still in exile was deposed (Nov., 1945) in favor of a republic headed by J. Tito.

Peter III 1717–86. King of Portugal (1777–86). He was crowned with his niece, Maria I, and the two ruled jointly. Both were unfit for rule, however, and the government was run by others.

Peter III 1728–62. Czar of Russia (1762), successor to his aunt, Elizabeth. Soon after taking power, Peter removed Russia from the Seven Years' War and alienated both the church and the nobles. His wife thereupon conspired in his overthrow (June 9, 1762) and succeeded him as Catherine II (the Great). Peter was killed a short time later.

Peter IV 1319?–87. King of Aragon (1336–87). He put down a revolt by Aragonese nobles and later revoked the privileges granted to them by Alfonso III.

Peter V 1837–61. King of Portugal (1853–61), successor to Maria II. He ended slavery in Portuguese territories (1858), promoted education and the beginnings of industrialization. His reign was troubled by outbreaks of cholera and yellow fever epidemics.

Peter Lombard *c*1100–*c*1160. Italian bishop and theologian. Lombard wrote the Books of Sentences, a compilation of early Christian theology that dealt primarily with the nature of the sacraments.

Peterloo massacre Demonstration that was suppressed at St. Peter's field, in England (Aug. 16, 1819). Some 60,000 demonstrators, petitioning for parliamentary reform and repeal of the corn laws (q.v.), were dispersed by a cavalry charge. The action killed six, while injuring more than 400. Popular outrage fueled the drive for reform.

Peters, Carl See Tanganyika

Petersburg Campaign Concluding action of the American Civil War, fought (June, 1864–Apr., 1865) at Petersburg, Virginia. After the Battle of Cold Harbor, Gen. U. Grant maneuvered around Confederate lines for an attack on Petersburg, which defended the nearby Confederate capital of Richmond. Grant's advance elements were stalled by a small Confederate force under Gen. P. Beauregard, giving Gen. R. Lee time to move up his troops. The battle for Petersburg thereupon degenerated into a long siege and months of grueling trench warfare. Outnumbered, short of supplies, and plagued by desertions, the Confederates held out for ten months before their resistance was broken. After their victory at the Battle of Five Forks (q.v.), the Union armies finally breached Confederate lines the next day (Apr. 2). Gen. Lee began his retreat along the Appomattox River that night and the Union forces took both Petersburg and Richmond (Apr. 3). Lee was forced into final surrender at Appomattox Courthouse (q.v.) on Apr. 9.

Peter the Cruel 1334–69. King of Castile and León (1350–69). Peter was frequently challenged by his illegitimate half-brother Henry of Trastamara, who finally defeated and killed him.

Peter the Great See Peter I

Peter the Hermit *c*1050–1115. French religious leader. By his preaching, he won over thousands to the First Crusade (q.v.) and led one of the ill-equipped bands of zealous citizens to Byzantium. His followers were largely wiped out in the early stages of fighting in Asia Minor.

Petite Chouannerie See Chouans

Petition of Right English parliamentary act (May, 1628), a part of the power struggle between Charles I and Parliament. Prompted by Sir E. Coke, it was intended to stop abuses of power by Charles and included an end to arbitrary arrest and imprisonment, the quartering of soldiers in civilian homes, taxation without parliamentary approval, and the use of martial law in peacetime. Charles agreed to it (June, 1628) in return for money grants he needed to prosecute his foreign wars, then promptly violated it. Nevertheless, the petition is important in English constitutional law.

Petöfi, Sándor 1822–49. Hungarian poet and national hero. Petöfi's many patriotic poems encouraged the Hungarian revolt (1848). He apparently died in battle during the revolt.

Petra Ancient city, located in what is now Jordan. Once the capital of the Nabataeans, it was taken by the Romans in AD 106. The city nevertheless continued as a trade center until the rise of Palmyra displaced it.

Petrarca, Francesco See Petrarch, Francesco

Petrarch, Francesco ⟨Petrarca, Francesco⟩ 1304–74. Italian Renaissance poet and scholar, Petrarch was one of the greatest scholars and lyric poets of his age and proved to be a major influence in spreading Greek ideals, humanism, and other elements of early Renaissance thought. His sonnets, songs, and madrigals in honor of Laura, his ideal woman, greatly influenced Renaissance poetry.

Petrie, Sir William Matthew Flinders 1853–1942. British archaeologist. Petrie developed many archaeological research techniques and conducted many excavations in Egypt, Palestine, and elsewhere.

Petrograd See Leningrad

Petronius ⟨Petronius Arbiter⟩ d. AD *c*66. Roman satirist. His self-indulgent love of luxury made him social arbiter at Nero's court. He is believed to have written Satyricon, which humorously depicted the vulgar sensuality of his times.

Petronius Arbiter See Petronius

Petrović, George See Karageorge

Phaedra Mythical Greek princess. Though she was the wife of Theseus, she made advances to his son Hippolytus. Rebuffed, she accused him of rape. He was executed and she committed suicide.

phalanx Greek infantry formation. A phalanx consisted of parallel rows (usually eight) of soldiers in a solid block. It was used with great success for many centuries by the Greeks. The Romans, however, overcame the Greek phalanxes in the Macedonian Wars.

Phansigars See Thugs

Pharaoh Title of Egyptian kings. The title, meaning "the great house," was bestowed on all kings of ancient Egypt from the time of the New Kingdom.

Pharisees Ancient Jewish religious and political party that began in the 2nd cent. BC. Pharisees emphasized strict observance of the oral as well as the written laws (the Torah), as opposed to their opponents, the Sadducees, who taught only the written law. Reference to them in the New Testament as hypocrites pertains only to those who did not live up to their own strict standards. The Pharisees disappeared after destruction of the Temple (AD 70), but both Orthodox Judaism and Christianity were influenced by their beliefs.

Pharsalus, Battle of Decisive victory (Aug. 9, 48 BC) for J. Caesar over his rival Pompey at this Greek town in Thessaly. Caesar's force of 20,000 was outnumbered more than two to one, but his tactical genius turned the tide. Pompey lost some 15,000 casualties while Caesar's army suffered about 1,200. Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was murdered. This eliminated Caesar's most powerful opponent to his seizing of power in Rome.

Pheidias See Phidias

phenomenology Philosophical school developed by E. Husserl. Its followers attempted to suspend preconceived notions about the natural world in order to understand and describe events (phenomena) from within the conscious mind. Phenomenology influenced the development of existentialism.

Phidias ⟨Pheidias⟩ *c*500–*c*432 BC. Famed Athenian sculptor. Phidias was in charge of art and public works in Athens under Pericles. Phidias is believed to have been in charge of sculptures for the Parthenon (q.v.) and to have executed noted statues of Athena and Zeus.

Philadelphia Historic city (pop. 1,688,200) in Pennsylvania. A major port on the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, it is a commercial, cultural, and industrial center. It began as a Swedish colony (1640s), becoming a Quaker colony (1681) under William Penn. It grew rapidly and became the dominant cultural center in Colonial times. In Philadelphia the Continental congresses met, the Declaration of Independence was signed in Independence Hall (1776), and the U.S. Constitution was adopted in 1787. It was US capital (1790–1800) and state capital (1790–99).

Philadelphia Convention See Constitutional Convention

Philadelphus, Ptolemy II See Ptolemy II

Philaret, Vasily Drosdov See Edict of Emancipation

Philby, Harold Adrian Russell ⟨Kim Philby⟩ 1912–. British intelligence officer who doubled as a Soviet spy (1933–51). As secretary of the British embassy in Washington (1949–1951) he dispatched vital information concerning the US Central Intelligence Agency. In 1963 he escaped to the Soviet Union.

Philip Name of two saints of the early Christian Church: Philip the Apostle of Jesus, and Philip who was a deacon and evangelist in Samaria and Ethiopia.

Philip ⟨~ the Arabian⟩ AD 204?–249. Roman emperor (244–49). A soldier under Gordian III, Philip executed him, made himself emperor, and ended war with Persia. He presided over the millennial celebration of the founding of Rome. He was overthrown by one of his soldiers, Decius.

Philip ⟨Metacomet⟩ d. 1676. The son of Massasoit, he was the leader of Indians in New England during King Philip's War (q.v.). He was killed in battle.

Philip I (of Portugal) See Philip II (of Spain)

Philip I 1052–1108. Capetian king of France (1060–1108), successor to Henry I. Throughout his reign Philip struggled to prevent the union of England and Normandy, which would overpower France. He was excommunicated by Urban II for disavowing his first marriage and remarrying. His conflict with the church lasted until 1104.

Philip I ⟨Philip the Handsome⟩ 1478–1506. Duke of Burgundy, king of Castile (1506), and founder of the Spanish Hapsburg line. The son of Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I, he succeeded (1482) as Duke of Burgundy (including The Netherlands) and then married Joanna, daughter of Spanish king Ferdinand II. Later, Philip forced Ferdinand to recognize (1506) his claim to the throne of Castile (as Joanna's husband) but died soon thereafter. Philip's son eventually succeeded in Spain, however, and then became the great Hapsburg Holy Roman Emperor Charles V.

Philip II 382–336 BC. Macedonian king (359–336 BC), whose conquest of Greece laid the foundation for the great Macedonian empire established by his son, Alexander the Great. From 357 BC, Philip embarked on his program of expansion by war and alliances and defeated his last opponents in Greece (Athens and Thebes) in the Battle of Chaeronea (338 BC). He was killed while preparing to invade Persia.

Philip II ⟨Philip Augustus⟩ 1165–1223. French king (1179–1223), successor to his father, Louis VII. Philip was the first powerful Capetian king and more than doubled his domains by conquering parts of Flanders and by taking English possessions on the Continent (Angevin domains). Philip at first involved himself in intrigues between English king Henry II and his sons, Richard and John. Next, he and Richard (then king) embarked on the Third Crusade. They quarreled, and Philip returned and unsuccessfully attempted to take Richard's lands on the Continent. During John's reign, however, Philip finally conquered (1204) Normandy, Brittany, Anjou, Maine, and Touraine. Then, by his victory (1214) at the Battle of Bouvines (q.v.), he established France as a major power. He also instituted administrative reforms and allowed prosecution of the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.).

Philip II 1527–98. King of Spain (1156–98) and Portugal (1580–98, as Philip I). He succeeded his father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles V, to the Spanish throne and had earlier received from him the Spanish Netherlands, Milan, Naples, and Sicily. Philip married English Queen Mary I (1554) and, after her death (1558), was refused by Elizabeth I. Under Philip, Spain emerged as the dominant power in Italy after the Italian Wars (q.v.) and enjoyed victories against the Ottoman Turks, notably the Battle of Lepanto (1571). But Philip's efforts to defend Catholicism (sometimes combined with his political aims) led to trouble at home and abroad. Within the empire, persecutions by the Inquisition were increased, resulting in harsh treatment of the Moriscos (q.v.) and a revolt in the Spanish Netherlands. The latter ended in the independence of the United Provinces. Philip's conflicts with Protestants in other countries brought war against England and the disastrous defeat of the Spanish Armada (q.v.), which resulted in the decline of Spain as a military power. He also involved Spain in the French Wars of Religion, which, combined with his other foreign wars, seriously weakened the finances of the empire.

Philip III ⟨Philip the Bold⟩ 1245–85. King of France (1270–85), successor to his father, Louis IX. He died during the retreat from an unsuccessful attack on the Spanish kingdom of Aragon.

Philip III 1578–1621. King of Spain (1598–1621), successor to his father, Philip II. Philip also ruled Naples, Sicily, and Portugal (as Philip II), though he was content to let his favorites do the actual governing. The Moriscos (q.v.) were expelled during his reign, in 1609.

Philip IV ⟨Philip the Fair⟩ 1268–1314. Capetian king of France (1285–1314), successor to his father, Philip III. Philip's reign was marked by his successful struggle against the church. Early in his reign, Philip's need for money to prosecute foreign wars caused him to impose a tax on the clergy. Pope Boniface VIII opposed the tax (1296) but was soon forced to concede. Philip next arrested a bishop and thereby renewed the dispute with Boniface. To resolve the matter, Philip convened (1302–03) a council of nobles, clergy, and others (the first French States General). When Boniface answered by threatening Philip with excommunication, Philip had him arrested. Boniface died soon afterward and Philip secured the election of Pope Clement V. Thereafter, Clement cooperated with Philip, moved the papacy to Avignon (1309, see Babylonian captivity), and condemned the Knights Templars (whose great wealth Philip confiscated). During his reign Philip engaged in wars with England (1294–1303) and Flanders (1302–04).

Philip IV 1605–65. Spanish king (1621–65), successor to his father, Philip III. His reign was marked by his willingness to let his ministers govern and by Spain's decline as a European power.

Spain's involvement in the Thirty Years' War (1618–48) proved costly. During the war, Portugal won its independence (1640), Catalonia revolted and was occupied by France, and the Union of Utrecht (q.v.) won recognition of its independence (1648). Spanish involvement in the French war of the Fronde, ended by the Peace of the Pyrenees (q.v.), cost Spain further losses.

Philip V 238–179 BC. Macedonian king (221–179 BC), successor to Antigonus III. He joined the Achaean League in a successful war against Sparta and the Aetolian League. But his alliance with Hannibal during the Second Punic War against Rome brought Roman retaliation in the First Macedonian War (q.v.). Later efforts to expand his domains provoked renewed Roman military action against him and the Second Macedonian War (q.v.) ended in his defeat.

Philip V *c*1294–1322. French king (1317–22) who succeeded on the death of the infant king, John I. The Salic Law (q.v.) was invoked to legitimize Philip's succession over the rightful female heir, an infant named Joan. Philip strengthened local militias and instituted other administrative reforms.

Philip V 1683–1746. Spanish king (1700–46), successor to Charles II, and first Bourbon king of Spain. His succession resulted in the War of the Spanish Succession (q.v.) and loss of territories by the Peace of Utrecht (q.v.). Philip's early attempts to retake lost territories in Italy failed when the Quadruple Alliance (q.v.) was formed against him. His later involvement in the Wars of the Polish Succession and Austrian Succession, however, won Naples, Sicily, Parma, and Piacenza for Spain.

Philip VI 1293–1350. French king (1328–50), successor to Charles IV, and first king of the Valois line. The Salic Law (q.v.) was invoked to allow Philip to succeed over rival claimants. His reign was marked by the beginning of the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453) and the outbreak of the Black Plague (1348–49) in France.

Philip Augustus See Philip II

Philip of Swabia *c*1177–1208. German king (1198–1208) of the Hohenstaufen line and successor to Holy Roman Emperor Henry VI. Philip was never crowned emperor and his reign was spent overcoming the opposition of his rival for the crown, the Guelph leader Otto IV. He was murdered soon after the struggle had been resolved.

Philippi, Battle of Victory for the Second Roman Triumvirate of Antony, Lepidus, and Octavian (Augustus) over Brutus and Cassius, assassins of Caesar. The battle began on Oct. 27, 42 BC, near the Macedonian city of Philippi, between forces of around 100,000 on each side. Cassius was defeated by Antony and, believing a rumor that Brutus had also lost, committed suicide. The combined triumvirate force then defeated Brutus' forces on Nov. 16, and he committed suicide. The outcome helped ensure Octavian's accession as emperor.

Philippics Two series of historic orations. Demosthenes denounced Philip II of Macedon as a threat to Athens in a series of orations known as "philippics." The term was later applied to Cicero's denunciation of M. Antony before the Roman Senate.

Philippine Insurrection US-Filipino war (1899–1902), an outgrowth of the Philippine Revolution (q.v.) and the Spanish-American War. Filipino leader E. Aguinaldo refused to accept the Treaty of Paris (1898), by which Spain ceded the Philippines to the US, and continued to fight for Filipino independence. Aguinaldo was captured (1901) and the war ended a year later.

Philippine Revolution Filipino war for independence from Spain (1896–98). Sparked by the execution of J. Rizal (Dec. 30, 1896), the war was led by E. Aguinaldo. After the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, Aguinaldo helped US Commodore G. Dewey occupy Manila (1898) and established a provisional government. However, the Treaty of Paris (1898) ceded the Philippines to the US, and Aguinaldo led the Philippine Insurrection (q.v.) against US control.

Philippines (Republic of the Philippines) Republic composed of over seven thousand islands in the South Pacific. Its capital is Quezon City. The Philippines were ruled by Spain from the 15th to the late 19th cent. and by the US after the Spanish-American War. The Philippines became fully independent in 1946. Key dates in Philippine history include:

1521 F. Magellan, representing Spain, discovered the Philippines.

1542 Islands named in honor of Prince Philip, later Philip II of Spain.

1564–1571 M. de López de Legaspi completed conquest of islands for Spain.

1571 Manila founded.

1583 Audiencia (colonial supreme court) established.

1600s Wars with the Dutch, then expanding their East Indies holdings.

1600s–1800s Moros (native tribe) active as pirates.

1756–63 Seven Years' War in Europe; Manila occupied by British (1762–63).

19TH CENT. Muslims (Moors) raided the Philippines.

1892 Rise of the nationalist movement; secret society, led by Dr. José Rizal, demanded increased native involvement in government.

1896 Existence of Katipunan, society for complete independence, discovered (Aug.); armed revolt against Spanish began.

1896 Dr. Rizal, not associated with Katipunan, executed (Dec.); became martyr.

1896–98 E. Aguinaldo led revolt against Spain.

1898 Spanish-American War between US and Spain; G. Dewey defeated Spain at Manila Bay (May 1); US gained control of Philippines by Treaty of Paris (Dec. 10), ending the war.

1898 US established military rule (Dec.).

1899–1902 Philippine Insurrection; Aguinaldo fought US, headed short-lived rebel government.

1901 Civilian government authorized by Spooner Amendment.

1902–04 William Howard Taft served as governor-general; Philippine Commission became governing body.

1903 US resolved Friar Lands Question by purchasing church-owned lands for resale to peasants.

1916 Jones Law provided for elected legislature.

1934 Tydings-McDuffie Act, creating transitional commonwealth government leading to Philippine independence.

1935 Constitution approved by Filipinos.

1935–42 Manuel Quezon y Molina in office as first president; commonwealth established (Nov. 15, 1935).

1942–45 WW II; Philippines occupied by Japan after defeating US-Filipino forces at Bataan and Corregidor.

1944 US Gen. D. MacArthur landed (Oct.) at Leyte Gulf.

1945 Manila liberated (Feb.).

1946 Full independence (July 4).

1946–48 Manuel Roxas y Acuna in office as president.

1946–54 Communist-backed Hukbalahap guerrillas, who had fought the Japanese, continued guerrilla warfare; capture of their leader, L. Taruc, broke the rebellion.

1954 Philippines joined Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

1965– Ferdinand Marcos in office as president; his administration continued in power into the 1980s, despite considerable opposition.

1969 Marcos reelected in violent campaign; rioting followed the election.

1972 Martial law instituted (Sept.) to combat terrorism; thousands subsequently killed as government troops attempted to restore order.

1973 Marcos promulgated new constitution; country to be ruled by martial law; Marcos to remain in power indefinitely.

1976 Earthquake hit Mindanao; 8,000 people dead.

1976 Truce reached with Muslim rebels on Mindanao, ending several years of serious rebellion.

1978 Elections for National Assembly held; first since martial law was imposed.

1981 Martial law ended (Jan. 17); many restrictions remained in force.

1981 Plebiscite approved constitutional changes.

1981 Marcos won reelection; opposition refused to take part in the election.

Philippine Sea, Battle of the Major US victory (June 19, 1944) over the Japanese during WW II. Provoked by the US invasion of the Mariana Islands, the Japanese organized a large naval attack force (including nine carriers) to fight against the US task force protecting the Marianas landing operation. Primarily a battle between carrier-based aircraft, it turned into a rout, known as "the Marianas Turkey Shoot." The Japanese lost 400 planes and three aircraft carriers, and the US firmly established naval superiority in the Pacific.

Philip the Arabian See Philip

Philip the Bold See Philip III; Burgundy

Philip the Fair See Philip IV

Philip the Good 1396–1467. Duke of Burgundy (1419–67). By various means, Philip doubled the size of his holdings and established Burgundy as a powerful kingdom. Involved in rivalry with France, he formed an alliance with England against France by the Treaty of Troyes (1420). He eventually made peace with French king Charles VII in the Treaty of Arras (1435). He founded the Order of the Golden Fleece (q.v.).

Philip the Handsome See Philip I

Philip the Magnanimous ⟨~ of Hesse⟩ 1504–67. Landgrave of Hesse and German Protestant leader. He was a leader in the struggle against the Catholic Holy Roman Emperor Charles V and organized the Schmalkaldic League (q.v.) of German Protestants (1531).

Philistines Ancient people from the Aegean who settled in Palestine (*c*12th cent. BC). They were skilled iron workers and frequently fought the Israelites. In modern times, "philistine" means an uncultured person.

Phillips, Wendell 1811–84. American reformer. He was associated with W. Garrison in the crusade for the abolition of slavery, and later campaigned for woman suffrage, labor reform, and prohibition.

Philo ⟨Philo Judaeus⟩ *c*20 BC–AD 50. Jewish philosopher. Philo was famous for his synthesis of Greek philosophy with biblical theology. He stressed God's perfection and established the concept of Logos (q.v.).

Philoctetes Mythical Greek warrior, the recipient of Hercules' bow and arrows after his death. Philoctetes killed Paris with these weapons and thus helped bring about the fall of Troy.

Philo Judaeus See Philo

Philomela Mythical Greek princess. She was raped by her brother-in-law, Tereus, and he cut out her tongue to prevent her from telling. She embroidered the story and sent it to her sister, Procne. In revenge, Procne then killed her son by Tereus and fled with Philomela.

Philometer, Ptolemy VI See Ptolemy VI

Philo of Alexandria See Philo

Philopater, Ptolemy IV See Ptolemy IV

Philostratus ⟨Philostratus the Elder⟩ *fl. c*217. Greek sophist. He wrote the Life of Apollonius and Lives of the Sophists.

Philostratus the Elder See Philostratus

Phinees See Phinehas

Phinehas ⟨Phinees⟩ Biblical figure, the grandson of Aaron and his successor as high priest of the Jews.

Phips, Sir William 1651–95. Massachusetts colonial governor (1692–94). Phips commanded New England colonial forces during King William's War (q.v.). He appointed a commission on witchcraft but disbanded it when his own wife was accused. He was recalled to England.

Phnom Penh ⟨Pnom Penh⟩ Cambodian capital city (pop. 300,000?). Believed to have been founded in the 14th cent., it was the Khmer capital after the fall of Angkor and became capital (1867) of French-occupied Cambodia. It was a loyalist stronghold in the civil war (1970–75) with the Khmer Rouge and was almost constantly under siege during that time. After the Khmer victory (Apr. 17, 1975), the city's population was forcibly relocated. The Vietnamese captured the city (Jan. 7, 1979) during its war against the Khmer regime.

Phocas d. 610 Byzantine emperor (602–10), successor to Maurice by his overthrow. He persecuted the Monophysites and Jews and was overthrown (610) by Heraclius.

Phocis Region of ancient Greece, located in central Greece. The Oracle of Delphi and Mount Parnassus were within its boundaries. It was the focus of the three Sacred Wars (q.v.).

Phoebe In Greek mythology, a Titan and the mother of Leto and grandmother of Artemis. She was associated with the moon.

Phoebus Apollo See Apollo

Phoenicia Ancient name applied to the narrow coastal region bordering the eastern Mediterranean roughly contiguous with modern Lebanon. The Phoenicians were related to the Canaanites and had established themselves as traders and sailors by the 25th cent. BC. They early came under the influence of the Egyptians, with whom they traded. Although never a unified country, Phoenicia saw the rise of several important cities, notably Byblos, Sidon, Tyre, and Tripoli. Phoenician traders founded settlements throughout the Mediterranean, such as on the islands of Rhodes and Cyprus and at Utica and Carthage. Later, Phoenicia gained independence as Egyptian power began to decline around the 12th cent. BC. During this period Phoenician traders ranged widely through the Mediterranean. It is thought they may have also traveled along the western coast of Africa and possibly as far north as Cornwall. The Phoenicians were known for their metalwork and glasswork, woven cloth, and fabric dyed with a color known as Tyrian purple. Their greatest innovation, however, was their alphabet, which was adopted by the Greeks and eventually replaced the older system of hieroglyphic writing. Phoenicia came under Persian domination in the 6th cent. BC and was conquered by Alexander the Great in the 4th cent. BC. Under Macedonian rule much of the region was hellenized and Phoenician culture underwent a decline. Phoenicia ceased to exist when the area was incorporated into the Roman province of Syria (AD 64).

Phoenix Capital city (pop. 764,900) of Arizona, a resort and manufacturing center. Incorporated in 1881, it became capital of the territory (1889) and then of the state (1912). The Salt River dam (completed 1911) provided electric power and irrigation water for farming. The city underwent a boom during WW II as the site of three military airfields.

Phoenix Park murders Irish terrorist murders. On May 6, 1882, the British secretary of Ireland, Lord Frederick Cavendish, and his undersecretary, Thomas Henry Burke, were stabbed to death in Dublin's Phoenix Park. The Invincibles, a terrorist offshoot of the Fenians, claimed responsibility. Noted Irish leader C. Parnell was cleared of charges that he was involved in the murders.

Photius *c*820–891. Byzantine scholar and patriarch of Constantinople (858–867, 877–886). Photius rose to prominence when he was chosen to replace St. Ignatius during the iconoclastic controversy. When his election was challenged by Pope

Nicholas I, Photius retaliated by contesting the pope's right to rule in the East. Though Photius was replaced by St. Ignatius, he had already created the beginnings of the schism that was to permanently divide the church. Condemned at the Fourth Council of Constantinople (869), Photius was reconciled with the West and was reinstated as patriarch after St. Ignatius' death. He was, however, forced to resign the office by Byzantine emperor Leo VI.

Phrygia Ancient country of Asia Minor, located in what is now central Turkey. The country prospered from the 8th to 6th cent. BC and two of its kings were supposed to have been the legendary Gordius and Midas. It came under Lydian domination (7th cent.) and thereafter was ruled by various powers.

Phrynichus fl. c512–476 BC. Athenian poet and playwright, the first to put women characters in Greek plays. He was fined for writing Capture of Miletus because it reminded Athens of the loss of that city.

Phthah See Ptah

Phyfe, Duncan c1768–1854. Scottish-born American furniture maker. His designs were neoclassic (and, later, Empire style) and highly prized for their fine workmanship.

physiocrats French intellectuals (18th cent.) who developed the first complete system of economics. Led by François Quesnay, they emphasized that land was the ultimate source of all wealth, advocated a single tax on it, extolled free trade and laissez-faire, and stressed the importance of natural laws.

Piaget, Jean 1896–1980. Swiss psychologist. Piaget is best known for his studies in child psychology, notably on the sequential stages of a child's intellectual development.

Piast Polish dynasty. The Piasts were Poland's first dynasty, ruling from the 11th cent. to 1370, when they were replaced by the Jagiello line. Branches of the family, however, continued in Bohemia for several more centuries.

Picard, Jean 1620–82. French astronomer. Picard accurately measured the degree of a meridian of the earth. He established the Paris Observatory.

Picasso, Pablo Ruiz 1881–1973. Spanish artist and sculptor, one of the most important artists of this century. His early career is generally divided into periods: blue (from 1901), rose (from 1905), and cubist (from 1907). With G. Braque, Picasso is considered the founder of cubism (q.v.) and in 1907 painted his famous early cubist work, Les Demoiselles d'Avignon. In the 1920s, some of his works took on a surrealistic tone and foreshadowed the agony portrayed in his Guernica, commemorating the destruction of the town during the Spanish Civil War. Experimenting with various media and styles in his later years, he continued working until his death.

Piccard, Auguste 1884–1962. Swiss-born Belgian physicist. Piccard is noted for both his balloon ascents into the stratosphere and his deep-sea explorations in a bathyscaphe he designed.

Piccolomini, Aeneas Silvius See Pius II

Pichincha, Battle of Ecuadorian victory (May 24, 1822) over Spanish colonial forces. The Ecuadorians, under A. de Sucre, defeated the Spanish at Pichincha volcano, near Quito, and thereby gained Ecuadorian independence.

Picken, Andrew See Pickens, Andrew

Pickens, Andrew ⟨Picken, Andrew⟩ 1739–1817. American Revolutionary hero. Pickens served notably in the battles of Cowpens and Eutaw Springs, and captured Augusta, Georgia (1781). He later served in Congress (1793–95).

Pickering, Edward Charles 1846–1919. American astronomer and physicist. Pickering invented the meridian photometer and pioneered stellar photometry and spectroscopy at the Harvard Observatory.

Pickering, Timothy 1745–1829. American politician. Pickering served as G. Washington's adjutant general in the American Revolution and later held Cabinet posts under Washington and J. Adams. A Federalist and a member of the Essex Junto (q.v.), he strongly opposed the War of 1812.

Pickett, George Edward 1825–75. Confederate general in the American Civil War. He is known best for "Pickett's charge" at the Battle of Gettysburg (q.v.), a brave but futile charge on Union forces across a half mile of broken ground.

Pickford, Mary ⟨Smith, Gladys Mary⟩ 1893–1979. American actress, star of silent films such as Pollyanna. She was cofounder of the film production company United Artists.

Pico della Mirandola, Giovanni Conte 1463–94. Italian Renaissance philosopher. He published 900 theses that combined Christianity with Platonic thought.

Picquart, Georges 1854–1914. French general. Picquart's ardent defense of Capt. A. Dreyfus in the Dreyfus Affair (q.v.) led to his own imprisonment. He was later exonerated and became war minister (1906–09) under G. Clemenceau.

Picquigny, Truce of Agreement signed (1475) at Picquigny, France. By its terms English king Edward IV agreed to withdraw his army from France in return for a cash settlement and an annual pension.

Picts Ancient people of Scotland. They frequently invaded Roman-held Britain and established a kingdom in Scotland that flourished in the 8th cent.

Pied Piper of Hamelin Legendary figure who used his magic pipe, first, to rid the town of Hamelin of rats, and then, when the townspeople refused to pay his fee, to lure away the children. The legend may have been based on the exodus of children during the Children's Crusade (q.v.).

Pierce, Franklin 1804–69. US president (1853–57), the fourteenth, successor to M. Fillmore. A Democrat from New Hampshire, he was a US representative (1833–37) and senator (1837–42) and fought in the Mexican War. In 1852, he was nominated for the presidency by the Democrats to break a deadlock. After defeating Gen. W. Scott, the Whig candidate, he sought to reconcile opposing Democratic factions on the slavery issue by appointing Cabinet officials from both North and South. Pierce adopted a generally unsuccessful policy of foreign expansion, and his request for a program by which the US could acquire Cuba from Spain resulted in the Ostend Manifesto (q.v.). This caused such a furor that his administration disavowed it. During his term of office the US made the Gadsden Purchase (q.v.) from Mexico, and the Kansas-Nebraska Act (q.v.) was passed (1854). This act, with its doctrine of popular sovereignty, led to Bleeding Kansas (q.v.), which further strained relations between North and South in the years before the Civil War. Pierce's policies made him vastly unpopular, and he retired to New Hampshire at the close of his term.

Pieria Ancient Greek district, located in north Thessaly. The site of Mount Olympus, it was also the legendary birthplace of Orpheus and the Muses.

Piero della Francesca *c*1420–92. Italian Renaissance painter. One of the great Italian Renaissance artists, he is renowned for his religious frescoes, including the series The Story of the True Cross.

Pietism Religious movement that began in reaction to the doctrinal orthodoxy of German Lutheranism in the 17th and 18th cents. The leader of this reform was P. Spener, whose book Pia desideria encouraged study of the Bible and a spiritual rebirth within the church. Pietism influenced the Moravian and Methodist churches. The movement continued under Spener's successor, August Francke, but declined after Francke's death (1727).

Pietro, Guido di See Angelico, Fra

Pike, Zebulon Montgomery 1779–1813. American general and explorer. Pike explored much of western America and discovered Pike's Peak, Colorado. He was killed leading a successful attack on York (now Toronto, Canada) during the War of 1812.

Pilgrimage of Grace Uprising (1536–37) in northern England which began (Oct., 1536) in protest against the abolition of papal authority and suppression of the monasteries by King Henry VIII. Some 35,000 Catholic demonstrators were persuaded to disband. Another uprising followed (Jan. 1537), but its leaders were executed and northern England was placed under martial law.

Pilgrims English religious Separatists, and others, who sailed aboard the Mayflower to Plymouth Rock (Dec. 21, 1620) and founded the first New England colony. Originally, the Separatists opposed the doctrines of the established Church of England and founded an independent congregation. Around 1607 some of them emigrated to Holland to escape harassment and persecution. The experiment in Holland did not prove satisfactory, and the group then negotiated with a London stock company for a charter that would enable them to go to America. In Sept., 1620, 102 passengers embarked on the Mayflower for the voyage. Some of the group, including J. Alden and M. Standish, were non-Separatists (called Strangers), hired to protect the stock company's interests. Before landing they signed the Mayflower Compact (q.v.), which provided for a government by the will of the majority. The name Pilgrim Fathers, as applied to them, comes from an 1820 commemorative speech by D. Webster.

Pillars of Hercules Mythical name given to the promontories at the Mediterranean (eastern) entrance of the Strait of Gibraltar. They are generally identified with the Rock of Gibraltar in Europe and Jebel Musa in Africa.

Pillnitz, Declaration of Statement issued (Aug. 27, 1791) at Pillmitz, now in East Germany, by Austrian emperor Leopold II and Prussian king Frederick William II declaring their willingness to restore French king Louis XVI, provided other European sovereigns agreed. Both monarchs knew that Britain would not agree, so the declaration was empty. However, it caused much resentment in France and helped bring on the French Revolutionary Wars.

Pillow, Gideon Johnson 1806–78. Confederate general in the American Civil War. Pillow's escape from Fort Donelson (q.v.) before its surrender to Union forces led to his suspension from command.

Pilsudski, Joseph 1867–1935. Polish general and politician. A lifelong fighter against Russia for Polish independence, he was repeatedly imprisoned and exiled. After declaring Poland a republic (1918) and becoming its first president, he dominated Polish politics, both in and out of office, into the 1930s.

Pincherle, Alberto See Moravia, Alberto

Pinckney, Charles 1757–1824. American statesman. As a member of the Constitutional Convention, he submitted a draft of the Constitution, and a number of its elements were incorporated into the final document. He later served in Congress, as governor of South Carolina, and as US minister to Spain.

Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth 1746–1825. American statesman. As special envoy to France (1797) he became involved, with E. Gerry and J. Marshall, in the XYZ Affair (q.v.). He was twice the unsuccessful Federalist candidate for president (1804, 1808).

Pinckney, Thomas 1750–1828. American politician and diplomat. As special envoy to Spain (1794–95) he negotiated a treaty (1795) that established American-Spanish borders in North America and secured American navigation rights on the Mississippi River.

Pindar 522?–443 BC. Greek lyric poet who gave his name to the Pindaric ode of English verse. His major works are the Epinicia, odes to the victors of the Olympic, Pythian, Isthmian, and Nemean athletic games. Of these, 44 complete odes survive.

Pinel, Philippe 1745–1826. French physician. Pinel advocated humane treatment of the mentally ill. His views and methods completely changed the long-standing approach to mental illness.

Pinkerton, Allan 1819–84. Scottish-born American detective who formed America's first detective agency (1850). Pinkerton foiled an assassination plot against A. Lincoln (1861) and operated an espionage ring against the Confederates.

Pinochet Ugarte, Augusto 1915–. Chilean military leader and president (1973–). As commander in chief of the army he directed the successful coup against his predecessor, President S. Allende (Sept., 1973).

Pinter, Harold 1930–. English playwright. Pinter's tense, highly personal work includes the plays The Birthday Party, The Caretaker, and The Homecoming.

Pinzon, Martin Alonso d. 1493. Spanish navigator. Pinzon was co-owner of the ships Niña and Pinta. He commanded the Pinta during Columbus' 1492 expedition.

Pinzon, Vicente Yanez fl. 1492–1509. Spanish explorer and navigator. Pinzon commanded the Niña on Columbus' first voyage to America (1492). He later voyaged to Brazil and the Amazon estuary (early 1500).

Pippi, Giulio See Romano, Giulio

piracy Robbery on the high seas, committed for private gain. In ancient times, Phoenicians preyed on shipping in the Mediterranean. In the Middle Ages, Vikings attacked ships in the Baltic, and Moors also engaged in piracy. The decline of Ottoman power in the Mediterranean led to the rise of the Barbary States (q.v.), whose support of piracy led to conflict with European powers and the US (see Tripolitan War) in the 19th cent. The formation of standing navies and international laws has eliminated most piracy.

Piraeus Athenian seaport. Built (5th cent. BC) by Themistocles, it is the port of Athens and the leading Greek seaport. It was heavily damaged by the Germans during WW II.

Pirandello, Luigi 1867–1936. Italian dramatist. His powerful, realistic plays, among them Six Characters in Search of an Author, had a major influence in 20th-cent. drama. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1934.

Pisa, Council of Roman Catholic church council. It was called (1409) to heal the papal schism that had resulted in the naming of two rival popes, Gregory XII in Rome and Benedict XIII in Avignon. The council deposed both and elected a third pope, Alexander V. Far from ending the schism, the council complicated matters by establishing three papal claimants. The Council of Constance (1414–18) ultimately forced all three to resign and elected Martin V.

Pisa, Leaning Tower of See Leaning Tower of Pisa

Pisano, Nicola and Giovanni *c*1220–84; 1245–1314. Italian sculptors. Nicola founded a school of sculpture at Pisa which influenced later Renaissance art. His son Giovanni perpetuated his work in Siena.

Pisistratus *c*605–527 BC. Tyrant of Athens (560–556, 554–527 BC). Pisistratus established Athenian hegemony in Ionia, sponsored extensive public building, passed important land laws, and commissioned a definitive edition of Homer.

Piso, Gaius Calpurnius d. AD 65. Roman politician. A prominent plebeian, he was robbed of his wife by the emperor Caligula. He later plotted against the emperor Nero and killed himself when his plot was discovered.

Piso, Lucius Calpurnius Piso Caesoninus d. after 43 BC. Roman politician, father-in-law of J. Caesar. As consul (58 BC), he took part in the banishment of Cicero, and later attacked him in some of his best-known orations in the Roman Senate.

Pissarro, Camille 1830–1903. French impressionist painter. One of the most influential impressionists, he is noted for his paintings of street scenes.

Pitman, Sir Isaac 1813–97. English inventor of a shorthand system. His phonetic system of shorthand became one of the world's most used and adaptable systems.

Pitt, William (the Younger) 1759–1806. British prime minister (1783–1801, 1804–06), son of W. Pitt the Elder. Pitt led Britain through the French Revolutionary and early Napoleonic Wars. Pitt entered Parliament in 1781 and by 1783 was in effective control of the government as prime minister. He attempted to reorganize government finances in order to reduce the national debt, lowered customs duties, revised the British East India Company's role in India's government (1784), created Upper and Lower Canada by his Constitution Act (1791), and organized Britain (and various foreign coalitions) for war after the start of the French Revolutionary Wars. Seeking a solution to the Irish problem, he sought a union with Ireland and passage of a Catholic Emancipation act. The union was effected (1800), but King George refused to allow passage of the act and Pitt resigned (1801). He returned (1804) to form his second ministry after the outbreak of the Napoleonic Wars and organized the Third Coalition against Napoleon (1805). He died that year. A revived Tory party formed under his leadership.

Pitt, William (the Elder), 1st earl of Chatham 1708–78. British statesman, and noted orator, called "the Great Commoner." His vigorous foreign policies, during the Seven Years' War (1756–63), led to French defeats in India, Africa, and North America, and to Britain's emergence as the world's greatest colonial power. He entered Parliament in 1735 and, called by George II to serve as secretary of state, he effectively became the prime minister (1756–61) for most of the war in which Britain stripped France of most of its colonial empire. He formed a new ministry (1766–68), but was forced to resign because of poor health.

Pitt-Rivers, Augustus Henry Lane-Fox 1827–1900. British pioneer archaeologist. A career army officer, he made extensive excavations on his large estate in Wiltshire, emphasizing total site excavation and careful stratigraphic comparisons.

Pittsburg Landing, Battle of See Shiloh, Battle of Pius II ⟨Aeneas Silvius Piccolomini⟩ 1405–64. Pope (1458–64), successor to Calixtus III, a famous Renaissance humanist before becoming a priest. As pope he condemned conciliarism.

Pius IV ⟨Giovanni Angelo de' Medici⟩ 1499–1565. Pope (1559–65), successor to Paul IV. He convened (1562) the third and most important session of the Council of Trent, and made permanent the Catholic Reformation by ratifying the council's decrees (1564).

Pius V ⟨Ghislieri, Michele⟩ 1504–72. Pope (1566–72), successor to Pius IV, and saint. As pope he put into effect the decrees of the Council of Trent and encouraged the common defense of Christendom against the Turks.

Pius VI ⟨Giovanni Angelo Braschi⟩ 1717–99. Pope (1775–99), successor to Clement XIV. He opposed the assaults on church authority of both Austrian Josephinism and the French revolutionary Civil Constitution of the Clergy. He was taken as a prisoner to France by Napoleon (1798) after Papal domains were conquered in the French Revolutionary Wars.

Pius VII ⟨Barnaba Gregorio Chiaramonte⟩ 1740–1823. Pope (1800–23), successor to Pius VI. He signed the Concordat of 1801 with Napoleon and took part in his coronation (1804). His later opposition to Napoleon led to French annexation of the Papal States (1809). Pius excommunicated Napoleon but became the emperor's virtual prisoner.

Pius IX ⟨Mastai-Ferretti, Giovanni Maria⟩ 1792–1878. Pope (1846–78), successor to Gregory XVI. His reign was the longest in Catholic history. During his pontificate the Papal States and Rome passed to Italy (1870). He defined the dogma of the Immaculate Conception (1854) and presided over the First Vatican Council (1869–70).

Pius X ⟨Giuseppe Sarto⟩ 1835–1914. Pope (1903–14), successor to Leo XIII, and saint. His pontificate saw the separation of church and state in France and Portugal. He condemned religious Modernism in his encyclical Pascendi Dominici Gregis.

Pius XI 1857–1939. Pope (1922–39), successor to Benedict XV. He was noted for his efforts to secure world peace. As pope he negotiated the Lateran Treaty (1929) with B. Mussolini, which made Vatican City an independent state. He denounced fascism, communism, and racism and encouraged missionary work.

Pius XII 1876–1958. Pope (1939–58), successor to Pius XI. Elected pope on the eve of WW II, he worked to relieve the suffering caused by the war. After the Allied victory, however, he was criticized by many for not doing enough to prevent persecution of the Jews. He strongly opposed the rise of communism and excommunicated several East European leaders.

Pizarro, Francisco *c*1476–1541. Spanish conquerer of the Incas of Peru. He first went to the New World in 1509, and accompanied V. de Balboa when the latter discovered the Pacific Ocean (1513). With D. de Almagro, he explored (1522–

26) the west coast of South America, then returned to Spain (1528) to prepare for the conquest of Peru. In 1531, with fewer than 200 men, he enticed the Inca chieftain Atahualpa into his hands by treachery, extracted an enormous ransom from him, and later had him executed (1533). He then captured the city of Cuzco, and the conquest of Peru was completed. Pizarro founded Lima (1535). In 1537–38, he came into conflict with Almagro and his followers, and he ordered Almagro beheaded. Pizarra was later assassinated by Almagro's followers (1541).

Pizarro, Gonzalo *c*1506–48. Spanish conquistador. He was the half-brother of F. Pizarro and was involved in the conquest of Peru. He became governor of Quito, and later led an unsuccessful revolt against the New Laws protecting the Indians.

Place, Francis 1771–1854. English social reformer. A tailor, he fought successfully against the anti-union Combination Acts. In 1822, he published one of the earliest birth-control tracts.

Plain, the In the French Revolution, the amorphous, moderate party that occupied the lower seats in the National Convention chamber. It was distinguished from the more radical representatives of the Mountain (q.v.), who occupied the higher seats.

Planck, Max 1858–1947. German physicist. He originated (1900) the modern quantum theory (q.v.), which revolutionized modern physics. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1918.

Plan de Iguala ⟨Plan of Three Guarantees⟩ Proclamation issued (Feb. 24, 1821) during the Mexican Revolution by the revolutionary Gen. A. Iturbide. It set forth three fundamental objectives of the drive for independence from Spain and was named for the city in which it was issued. Iturbide ignored the plan after he became emperor of Mexico (1822). The objectives were complete independence from Spain, designation of the Roman Catholic church as the state church, and equal rights for all Mexicans.

Plan of Three Guarantees See Plan de Iguala

Planudes Maximus *c*1260–*c*1330. Byzantine scholar. A learned monk, he was noted for this theological work on the procession of the Holy Spirit and for his editing of the Greek Anthology of poetry.

Plataea Ancient city in east-central Greece. It allied itself with Athens against the Persians and was the site of a decisive Greek victory (479 BC) in the Persian Wars (q.v.).

Plato 427?–347 BC. Ancient Greek philosopher, one of the great philosophers of all time. Born to a leading Athenian family, he was originally named Aristocles but was given the name Plato because of his broad shoulders. Little is known of his life. He became a pupil of Socrates, whose ideas and use of the dialectic (Socratic method) in pursuing truth later played an important role in Plato's writings. After Socrates' trial and execution (399 BC), Plato left Athens and traveled to Megara and, it is thought, to Egypt, Italy, and Syracuse. At Syracuse he was unsuccessful in trying to convert Dionysius the Elder to his idea of a state ruled by a philosopher-king. (He later returned to Syracuse to tutor Dionysius the Younger, but did not succeed in instilling his ideas into the youthful ruler.) Plato returned to Athens (388 BC) and founded the Academy (q.v.), an institution devoted to the investigation of scientific and philosophical truth, which flourished until the 6th cent. AD, when it was closed by Justinian.

Plato taught at the Academy until his death. Among his pupils were Aristotle, and Xenocrates. Plato is known best, however, for his writings, among them the Republic, Apology, Symposium, Phaedo, Meno, and the Laws. All of his writings take the form of dialogues, and many of them contain the character of Socrates as a leading figure. They are noted for their use of the dialectic, the technique of questioning all beliefs and assumptions in an attempt to come to a larger or more general truth or conception of reality. Plato's system of philosophy was based on the concept of a body of unchangeable and archetypal Ideas, of which the world's objects or appearances are mere approximations. The greatest of these Ideas was the Idea of the Good. The quest for the Good would ultimately lead man to harmony with the state and the universe. Plato's writings had enormous influence in the growth of Western civilization, and his writings retain a position of eminence in both Western philosophy and Western literature. In addition, his writings provide the primary source of knowledge of Socrates' teachings.

Platonism Philosophical school or tradition based on the writings of Plato. Platonism is founded on Plato's concept of reality as a body of eternal and unchangeable Ideas. Objects and other things perceived by the senses are only approximations of the more perfect Ideas and, therefore, approximations of ultimate reality. The primary Idea in the Platonic system is the Idea of the Good. Platonic thought attempted to demonstrate the path by which man could come into moral and esthetic balance with society, the state, and the universe. From Plato's writings numerous philosophical schools developed, and Platonism as a general philosophical movement had a major influence on the development of Western culture. It influenced the early Christian church, played a major role in the intellectual life of the Middle Ages, and also helped shape the intellectual and artistic development of the Renaissance.

Platt, Thomas Collier 1833–1910. US senator (1881) and New York State political boss. He helped T. Roosevelt become governor (1898) and vice-president (1900).

Platt Amendment US legislative provisions concerning Cuba, named for Connecticut senator Orville Platt (1827–1905) and added to the army appropriations bill of Mar. 2, 1901. It attempted to govern US relations with Cuba by forbidding Cuba to make any treaty limiting the island's independence or to incur excessive foreign debt. The US was accorded naval-base rights and the right to intervene. To end US occupation, Cuba agreed to these conditions, but abrogated them in 1934.

Plautus *c*254–184 BC. Roman writer of comic plays. His comedies, in expressive, idiomatic Latin, greatly influenced later European writers.

plebeians ⟨plebs⟩ In Roman history, the general body of citizens, as opposed to the aristocratic patricians. Originally excluded from all officeholding, by 287 BC (see Rome [287 BC]) they had achieved virtual political equality, although social distinction continued to be maintained.

plebs See plebeians

Plehve, Vyacheslav Konstantinovich 1846–1904. Czarist Russian official. He pursued forced Russification of minorities, organized pogroms against the Jews, and favored war against Japan to forestall internal tensions. He was finally assassinated.

Pleiad ⟨Pléiade⟩ Name given to several groups of seven poets, including (1) the tragic poets who wrote in Alexandria (*c*280 BC) under Ptolemy II Philadelphus, and (2) the 16th-cent. French Renaissance poets led by P. de Ronsard.

Pléiade See Pleiad

Pleiades In Greek mythology, the seven daughters of Atlas, who were changed into the constellation of the same name.

Plekhanov, Georgi Valentinovich 1857–1918. Russian Marxist theorist and revolutionary leader. A collaborator of N. Lenin up to 1903, Plekhanov later allied himself with the Mensheviks and unsuccessfully attempted reunification with the Bolsheviks.

Plessy* vs *Ferguson See segregation

Plimsoll, Samuel 1824–98. British member of Parliament (1868–80) and social reformer. He worked for the welfare of British sailors and inspired maritime regulations and reforms. The Plimsoll line, marking the limit to which a ship may be loaded, is named for him.

Pliny (the Elder) AD 23–79. Roman naturalist. His Historia naturalis, an encyclopedic study of plant and animal life, was long a standard authority. He died while investigating the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

Pliny (the Younger) AD 62?–*c*113. Roman statesman and author, son of Pliny the Elder. He held various Roman government offices, including that of consul (AD 100), and is noted for a series of letters describing the life of his times.

PLO See Palestine Liberation Organization

Plotinus AD *c*205–270. Neoplatonist philosopher. Plotinus formulated an original philosophy that influenced many later systems of thought, including Christian philosophy and 19th-cent. German idealism.

Plutarch AD 46?–*c*120. Greek biographer and essayist. He was born in Chaeronea, Boeotia, and spent most of his life there, although he visited Rome and also maintained ties with Delphi, where he was a priest of Apollo (after AD *c*95). He is known best for his series of parallel biographies, Parallel Lives. In each book of this series he eulogized the life of a great Greek and that of a comparable Roman figure. Of these paired biographies, 46 survive, and they are an important source for knowledge of the ancient world. They have greatly influenced modern literature.

Pluto Ancient Greek god of the underworld, also known as Hades. The husband of Persephone, he was known by the Romans as Orcus or Dis.

Plymouth Brethren Christian sect. Founded (Dec., 1828) in Dublin and (1830) in Plymouth, England, it has spread especially in English-speaking countries. Congregationally organized, the Brethren hold to fundamental Scripture and recognize no special ministry or priesthood.

Plymouth Colony English colony established (1620) on the coast of Massachusetts by the Pilgrims. Originally granted a patent to settle in Virginia, the colonists, upon arrival in New England, drew up the Mayflower Compact, which formed a government based on majority rule and acknowledged the authority of the English crown. The first Thanksgiving Day (1621) was celebrated by the colony in gratitude for a harvest after a winter of terrible privation. The colony joined (1643) the New England Confederation, and became (1691) part of the colony of Massachusetts.

Pnom Penh See Phnom Penh

Pobyedonostzev, Konstantin Petrovich 1827–1970. Czarist Russian official. As tutor to czars Alexander III and Nicholas II and as a jurist and official, he promoted autocracy, Russification of minorities, and the supremacy of the Orthodox church.

Pocahontas *c*1595–1617. Indian woman and American folk heroine. The daughter of Indian chief Powhatan, she befriended colonists at the Jamestown, Virginia, settlement and is said to have prevented the Indians from killing Captain J. Smith. Her marriage to settler J. Rolfe helped keep peace between the Indians and Virginia settlers.

Podebrad, George of See George of Podebrad

Podmore, Frank See Fabian Society

Poe, Edgar Allan 1809–49. American writer, one of the leading figures of American literature. He was orphaned in childhood, served in the army, and then was enrolled at West Point (1830). Subsequently expelled, he embarked upon his career as a writer. He became a leading critic as editor of the Southern Literary Messenger and other publications, and his stories and poems gained wide notice. Poe's life, however, was marked by tragedy and failure, augmented by poverty and drink, and he died (1849) in Baltimore under mysterious circumstances. Many of his works, among them the poems The Raven and Annabel Lee and the tales The Fall of the House of Usher and The Murders in the Rue Morgue, have become classics of American literature. His "tales of ratiocination" have been called the origins of the modern mystery story.

Poggio ⟨Bracciolini, Gian Francesco Poggio⟩ 1380–1459. Italian Renaissance humanist and scholar. Poggio rediscovered numerous manuscripts of Roman authors, among them works by Cicero, Lucretius, and Quintilian.

pogrom Attack on minority groups carried out with the connivance or toleration of the authorities. "Pogrom" is derived from the Russian word for riot or devastation. Pogroms against Jews began in Russia in 1881 following the assassination of Czar Alexander II and continued sporadically until the Russian Revolution.

Poincaré, Jules Henri 1854–1912. French mathematician and scientist. His work on the theory of functions made advancements possible in physics. He was also well known for explaining science to the public.

Poincaré, Raymond 1860–1934. French president (1913–20) and three times premier (1912–13, 1922–24, 1926–29). A conservative nationalist, he ordered France's occupation of the Ruhr (1923) after Germany failed to pay war reparations.

Poinsett, Joel Roberts 1779–1851. American diplomat and statesman. He represented the US on missions to Latin America, served in Congress (1821–25), and was secretary of war (1837–41) under President M. Van Buren. He opposed nullification and the growing southern movement toward secession.

Point Four Program US foreign-policy program aimed at providing technical assistance to underdeveloped countries. Named for the fourth point in President H. Truman's 1949 inaugural address, it was eventually integrated into the over-all US foreign-aid program.

Poison Affair French court scandal. In 1679, an investigation revealed that vast segments of the French population patronized female fortune-tellers for black masses and poisons as well as for prophecy. Many such fortune-tellers were arrested and executed, among them one Mme. Monvoison, who was burned in 1680. Her daughter charged that King Louis XIV's mistress, Mme. de Montespan, was one of her mother's clients and had obtained potions to secure the king's love and do away with her rivals. Though the charges were never proved, the executions ceased.

Poitiers, battles of Two decisive battles fought near this city in west-central France. 1. ⟨Tours, Battle of⟩ Important battle (732) that helped end the Muslim invasion of Frankish domains. The Muslims, led by Abdu-r-Rahman, had overrun Aquitaine and were threatening Tours. To protect the city, the Frankish mayor of the palace, Charles Martel, intercepted the Muslim forces near Poitiers, defeated and killed Abdu-r-Rahman, and thereby forced the Muslims to retreat. 2. Major victory (Sept. 19, 1356) for the English at the close of the first part of the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453). Edward the Black Prince had been conducting a raid into central France when his force of 7,000 men was intercepted near Poitiers by a 16,000-man army under French king John II. In the subsequent battle, English archers and lightly equipped infantrymen outmaneuvered and badly mauled the superior French force. King John was captured and 2,000 French knights were killed. John was ultimately forced to submit to the Treaty of Brétigny (q.v.).

Poitiers, Diane de See Diane de Poitiers

Poland Republic located in central Europe. Its capital is Warsaw. The kingdom of Poland dates to the late 10th cent. and reached its height of power and prestige in the 16th cent. Dismembered (18th cent.) by Austria, Prussia, and Russia, it was reestablished as a republic (1918) at the end of WW I, but was overrun (1939) by Germany and the Soviets at the opening of WW II. After WW II the reconstituted government of Poland fell under Soviet domination and in 1952 a new constitution established Poland as a people's republic, within the Soviet sphere of influence. Key dates in the history of Poland include:

c840–1370 Piast dynasty ruled in Poland, after gaining control over Slavs in region.

992–1025 Boleslaus reigned; first to designate himself Polish king; negotiated the Peace of Bautzen (1018); established Christianity.

1102–38 Boleslaus III reigned; kingdom divided at his death.

1177–94 Casimir II reigned; reunited most territories; established a senate and advanced peasants' rights.

1200s Mongols invaded Poland (1240) and broke up kingdom; Teutonic Knights moved into the north; Germans and Jews began to colonize Polish domains.

1320–33 Ladislaus I reigned; reestablished Polish kingdom and warred against Teutonic Knights.

1333–70 Casimir III, last Piast ruler, reigned; greatly increased Polish power and prestige in Europe.

1370–82 Polish crown passed to Hungary during reign of Louis I of Hungary.

1386–1434 Ladislaus Jagiello reigned as Ladislaus II; founded Jagiello dynasty.

1386–1572 Jagiello dynasty ruled Poland; greatly expanded Polish domains and fostered a period of great cultural flowering.

1401 Treaty of Vilnius with Lithuania laid basis for union in 1569.

1410 Battle of Tannenberg fought by Poles and Lithuanians against Teutonic Knights; halted Knights' eastern advance.

1434–44 Ladislaus III reigned; died fighting the Ottoman Turks at Battle of Varna (1444).

1447–92 Casimir IV reigned; defeated Teutonic Knights in a long war (1454–66) and gained Pomerania and West Prussia.

1467 Casimir IV convened first Polish Sejm (diet).

1505 Nobles forced Polish monarchy to recognize powers of Sejm to legislate; Sejm composed of aristocrats and clergy.

1548–72 Sigismund II, last Jagiello king, reigned.

1558–82 Livonian War fought; S. Báthory gained several victories over Russia; Poland gained territory in Livonia and forced Russia to renounce its claims.

1565 Catholic Reformation began in Poland.

1569 Union of Lublin; Poland and Lithuania united under a single crown; union remained in effect until 18th cent.

1572 Nobles gained complete control of government on the death of Sigismund II; got power to elect monarch; liberum veto, giving any member of Sejm right to veto legislation, later weakened government and was finally abolished (1791).

1575–86 Stephen Báthory reigned; conducted war against Russia.

1587–1632 Sigismund III reigned; briefly held Swedish crown (1592–98) and after being deposed began series of wars between Poland and Sweden.

1587–1668 Vasa dynasty reigned.

c1613 Poles invaded Russia during Time of Troubles; marked new attempt to conquer Russia.

1618 Truce of Deulino halted fighting against Russia; Poles retained conquered lands.

1618–48 Thirty Years' War; Poland joined fighting against the Protestants.

1620–21 Poles victorious over the Ottoman Turks at the Battles of Chocim.

1648–68 John II Casimir reigned; Poland, its power declining, faced a Cossack rebellion in the Ukraine, an invasion by Charles X of Sweden (1655), and invasion by the Russians; Poles, however, managed to stave off total defeat.

1655–60 First Northern War with Sweden; by Peace of Oliva (1660) Polish King John II renounced his claim to the Swedish throne, lost northern Livonia.

1667 Treaty of Andrusov ended Thirteen Years' War with Russia; Poland ceded eastern Ukraine.

1682–99 Poland joined Austria in the Austro-Turkish War; Polish King John III Sobieski defeated the Ottoman Turks at Vienna (1683).

1700–21 Northern War; Poland ravaged during war as Russians and Swedes set up rival kings.

1733–35 War of the Polish Succession fought; led to succession of Augustus III as King of Poland.

1764–95 Stanislaus II elected king with the help of Russia and Prussia; dominated by Catherine II of Russia.

1768 Confederation of Bar formed to oppose Russian domination; defeated in 1772.

1772 First Partition of Poland; one-third of Polish domains annexed by Russia, Austria, and Prussia.

1791 New constitution promulgated as Polish national spirit arose; liberum veto abolished.

1792 Confederation of Targowica formed by conservative reactionaries.

1793 Second Partition of Poland; Russia and Prussia invaded Poland to restore conservatives to power; annexed further territories, leaving only central Poland.

1794–95 T. Kosciusko led unsuccessful revolt (1794) against partition; Russia, Prussia, and Austria divided the remaining Polish domains in Third Partition and thus eliminated the Polish state.

1807 Napoleon I established grand duchy of Warsaw by Treaty of Tilsit.

1815 Congress Kingdom of Poland created by Congress of Vienna; Russian czar was king.

1830–31 Russian Czar Nicholas I surpressed November Revolution, Polish uprising.

1863–64 Unsuccessful January Insurrection against Russian domination of Poland; program of Russification and industrialization begun.

1916 Central Powers established (Nov.) an independent kingdom of Poland during WW I.

1918 Republic of Poland proclaimed (Nov.) in wake of Central Powers' defeat in WW I; Joseph Pilsudski named chief of state.

1919 Treaty of Versailles; gave Poland Polish Corridor (strip of land to Baltic) and Polish Prussia; Gdańsk made a free city; border with Russia disputed.

1920 Russo-Polish War fought (Apr.–Oct.); sparked by Polish advances into the Ukraine.

1921 Treaty of Riga; Russia conceded substantial territories in the Ukraine.

1921 Republican constitution promulgated.

1926 Pilsudski seized power in military coup (May 12); became virtual dictator of Poland until his death in 1935.

1939 A. Hitler demanded cession of free city of Gdańsk and concessions in Polish Corridor to Danzig (Mar.); Germany and Poland entered diplomatic crisis that led to opening of WW II.

1939 Germany invaded Poland (Sept. 1), beginning WW II; USSR attacked Poland (Sept. 17); partition accord signed (Sept. 28) between USSR and Germany.

1939–45 German occupation; six million Poles killed in massacres and extermination camps; Jewish population of three million decimated; millions of others consigned to forced labor.

1941 Germany launched invasion of Russia (June); occupied Russian-held Poland.

1943 Katyn Massacre disclosed by Germans; mass grave of 10,000 Polish soldiers (captured by Soviets, 1939) discovered; Germans blamed Soviets; Polish government in exile broke off relations with Soviets.

1944 Warsaw Uprising (Aug.–Oct.); Polish underground captured Warsaw but was finally crushed by Germans, as Soviet forces waited outside Warsaw.

1945 Polish Government of National Unity established (June 28) at Lublin.

1945 Curzon Line recognized as border with Russia.

1945 Potsdam Conference; former German territory to Oder-Neisse Line (including Gdańsk) put under Polish control.

1945 Poland joined the UN.

1946 Unicameral Sejm adopted by referendum.

1947 Communist leader Boleslaw Beirut elected president (Feb. 5) by Polish Sejm.

1949 Soviet field marshal Konstantin Rokossovski made Polish minister of defense (Nov. 7).

1952 New constitution instituted Soviet-style government.

1953 Cardinal Wyszinski, Polish primate, arrested as government opposition to Roman Catholic church mounted.

1955 Poland became a founding member of the Warsaw Pact.

1956 Poznan Riots (June) by industrial workers suppressed; brought Wladyslaw Gomulka to power.

1956–70 Wladyslaw Gomulka (1905–82) in office as head of United Workers (Communist) party; brought end to repression and persecution of Catholics; denounced Stalinist terrorism and halted collectivization of agriculture; by 1960s, however, began reinstituting repression.

1970 Nonaggression treaty with West Germany signed (Dec. 7) by Polish government.

1970 Workers rioted (Dec. 15) in Gdańsk and other cities over announced sharp increases in food prices.

1970–80 Edward Gierek in power (Dec. 20) as Communist party first secretary, following resignation of Wladyslaw Gomulka.

1976 Workers struck (June 25) to protest major increases in food prices.

1979 Pope John Paul II, a native of Poland, visited Poland (June 2–11) on first visit by a pope to Marxist state.

1980 Shipyard strike in Gdańsk quickly spread to other areas in northern Poland (Aug. 14); government reshuffled while negotiations with striking workers continued; government approval of right to strike and right to form unions independent of the Communist party finally ended strike (Aug. 31).

1980 Stanislaw Kania became party secretary, succeeding the ailing Edward Gierek (Sept. 6).

1980 Newly formed independent unions organized into national federation called Solidarity (Sept. 24), led by Lech Walesa.

1981 Strike called by Solidarity for five-day work week ended after government agreed to demands (Jan. 31).

1981 100,000 workers in southern Poland went on a ten-day strike to protest corruption in local government (Feb. 6).

1981 Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski became chairman of the Council of Ministers (Feb. 9); new strikes broke out.

1981 Millions of workers participated in four-hour general strike over various grievances (Mar. 27).

1981 Polish parliament voted (Apr. 10) to ban strikes for two months; Solidarity vowed to strike if its security was threatened.

1981 Polish government narrowly averted bankruptcy when Western nations made new arrangements for repayment of loans (Apr. 27).

1981 Premier Jaruzelski became leader of Poland's Communist party, replacing S. Kania (Oct. 18).

1981 Government declared a state of emergency (Dec. 13); imposed martial law and began a crackdown against Solidarity which included arrests of thousands of union leaders; Solidarity movement broken and government in firm control by early 1982.

1982 Polish parliament disbanded Solidarity (Oct.), banned future national union federations, and limited right to strike; moves marked effective end of Solidarity movement.

Poland, Congress Kingdom of See Congress Kingdom of Poland

Poland, Partitions of See Partitions of Poland

Polano, Pietro Soave See Sarpi, Paolo

Pole, Edmund de la, earl of Suffolk *c*1472–1513. English aristocrat, Yorkist claimant to the throne. He sought Austrian help to make good his claim but was beheaded on the accession of King Henry VIII.

Pole, John de la, earl of Lincoln *c*1464–87. English aristocrat, Yorkist claimant to the throne. Recognized as heir by his brother-in-law, King Richard III, he led an army from Ireland against Henry VII but was killed.

Pole, Michael de la, 1st earl of Suffolk *c*1330–89. English chancellor (1383–86). He was a trusted adviser of King Richard II, who advanced his family's fortunes and made him earl of Suffolk. He was finally brought down by his enemies and condemned for treason by Parliament.

Pole, Reginald 1500–58. English Catholic cardinal, archbishop of Canterbury (1556–58). A cousin of the Tudors, he broke with King Henry VIII but returned to help Henry's daughter Queen Mary I (Mary Queen of Scots) in her unsuccessful attempt to restore Catholicism.

Pole, William de la, 4th earl and 1st duke of Suffolk 1396–1450. English political leader. He became the principal minister to King Henry VI during the Hundred Years' War, and negotiated Henry's marriage (1445) to Margaret of Anjou. His attempts to secure peace with France led to his impeachment, exile, and murder.

Polianov, Treaty of See Deulino, Truce of Polignac, Auguste Jules Armand Marie, prince de 1780–1847. French royalist statesman. Strongly Catholic in sympathy, he became the principal minister to King Charles X. His ordinances (1830) dissolving the chamber of deputies and muzzling the press led to the July Revolution (q.v.) and Charles' downfall.

polis A Greek city-state (q.v.).

Polish Corridor Territory along the Baltic awarded to Poland by the Treaty of Versailles (1919). Since it divided East Prussia from the rest of Germany, it was the cause of great friction between Poland and Nazi Germany. The dispute led ultimately to the German invasion of Poland and the opening of WW II.

Polish Succession, War of the War (1733–38) fought to settle the disputed succession to the Polish throne after the death of Polish king Augustus II. Poland, with the support of France, Spain, and Sardinia, sought the succession of Stanislaus I Leszczynski. Russia and Austria supported the accession of Frederick Augustus II, elector of Saxony, as Augustus III. The war ended with the Treaty of Vienna (1735, ratified 1738), by which France acknowledged the accession of Augustus III, and Leszczynski, who abandoned his claim to the throne (1736), received the duchy of Lorraine, which was to revert back to France upon his death. The Spanish ceded Parma and Piacenza to Austria but kept the kingdom of Naples and Sicily.

Politburo Soviet governmental body. The Politburo is the policy-making and administrative arm of the Communist Party of the USSR and therefore of all Soviet Russia. The first Politburo was created by the Bolsheviks shortly before the 1917 revolution, and included N. Lenin, L. Trotsky, and J. Stalin. After the revolution the Politburo was dissolved, but it was reestablished in 1919. Stalin abolished it in 1952, replacing it with the Presidium. The Politburo was restored in 1966. It generally includes 11 or 12 members, and its meetings are secret.

Politian, Angelo Ambrogini 1454–94. Italian Renaissance humanist. One of the finest classical scholars of the classical revival, he also wrote outstanding vernacular poetry and the first secular play in Italian (1475).

Polk, James Knox 1795–1849. US president (1845–49), the eleventh, successor to J. Tyler.

During his term of office the US fought the Mexican War (q.v.) and thereby greatly expanded its territories in the West and Southwest. A Jacksonian Democrat and staunch supporter of American expansionism, Polk was nominated for president as a "dark horse" candidate to break the deadlocked 1844 Democratic convention. Campaigning on the slogan "Fifty-four Forty or Fight" (the Oregon Territory boundary then being disputed with Britain), he defeated H. Clay in a close election. During his term of office, Polk reestablished an independent Treasury, lowered tariffs through the Walker Tariff Act (1846), successfully negotiated the Oregon Territory boundary dispute, and acquired the Western and Southwestern territories from Mexico.

Polk, Leonides 1806–64. American Episcopal bishop and Confederate general. A graduate (1827) of West Point, he resigned his commission to become a missionary and became first bishop of Louisiana (1841–61). When the American Civil War broke out, he became a Confederate general and was killed in action.

Pollaiuolo, Antonio 1429?–98. Florentine Renaissance artist. Especially noted for his bronze statues, Pollaiuolo also pioneered the study of human anatomy through dissection.

Pollock, Paul Jackson 1912–56. American painter. Viewing art as expression rather than illustration, he became the leading practitioner of abstract expressionism.

Pollux See Castor and Pollux

Polo, Marco 1254?–1324? Venetian traveler in China. His book known in English as The Travels of Marco Polo was one of the earliest and most important sources of Western knowledge of Asia. Born into a Venetian merchant family, he accompanied (1271) his father and uncle on a trip across central Asia. They reached Peking and the court of the Mongol emperor Kublai Khan (1275). Polo became a favorite of the emperor and performed missions for him. He returned to Europe via Persia (1292) and arrived in Venice in 1295. Captured by the Genoese in a sea battle and imprisoned in Genoa, he dictated his fabulous memoirs to a fellow prisoner.

Poltava, Battle of Victory (July 8, 1709) of the forces of Russian czar Peter I over Sweden's king Charles XII, at Poltava, Ukraine during the Northern War. An army of some 50,000 Russians destroyed the entire 20,000-man invading Swedish army, except for some 1,500 who fled south into Turkey with Charles. The battle marked the emergence of Russia as a great European power and ended Sweden's position as a military power.

Polyanov, Peace of Treaty (1634) between Russia and Poland. By its terms Poland received Smolensk in return for Polish recognition of Michael as czar. Michael inaugurated the Romanov dynasty, which ruled Russia until 1917.

Polyblus 203?–*c*120 BC. Greek historian. Deported to Rome, he conceived the idea of his great history, relating in 40 books (of which five survive) the conquest of the Mediterranean world by the Romans.

Polycarp, Saint AD *c*70–156? Greek bishop of Smyrna, Asia Minor. A disciple of Saint John the Apostle and the mentor of Saint Irenaeus, he was a leading figure in the establishment of early Christian theology.

Polycrates *d. c*522 BC. Greek tyrant of Samos (*c*535–522 BC). Polycrates gained Samian naval eminence in the Aegean. He sent a fleet of 40 ships commanded by his political foes to aid the Persians against Egypt, but they combined with Spartans in an unsuccessful attempt to depose him. He was eventually lured to the mainland and executed by a Persian satrap.

Polymnia See Muses

Polyphemus Mythical Greek monster, a cyclops. In Homer's Odyssey, he kept Odysseus and his men prisoners in his cave. They got Polyphemus drunk and blinded him, thus securing their escape.

polytheism Belief in many gods, as opposed to the monotheism of Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. In polytheism, each god tends to become identified with a function, such as fire, storm, death, etc., and each tends to become personified.

Pombal, Sebastião José de Carvalho e Mello, marquês de 1699–1782. Portuguese statesman. He organized the reconstruction of Lisbon after the great earthquake of 1755. As chief minister (1756–77) he introduced reforms and reduced the power of the Inquisition, but his harsh, authoritarian, and anticlerical rule earned him great enmity.

Pomerania Historic European region on the Baltic Sea. Originally occupied by Slavs, the area has been overrun, split up, and ruled by several countries, including Prussia, Poland, and Sweden. Many of the leading cities, such as Danzig, were once prominent in the Hanseatic League. Most of Pomerania was restored to Poland after the Potsdam Conference (1945).

Pomerania, Eric of See Eric VII

Pompadour, Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, marquise de 1721–64. Royal mistress of French king Louis XV. Through her intelligence and beauty she exercised great influence over the king and French policies. She was an outstanding patron of the arts.

Pompeii Ancient Roman city. Situated at the foot of Mount Vesuvius near modern Naples, it was damaged by an earthquake (AD 63), and then completely covered over by the eruption of Vesuvius (AD 79). Rediscovered (1748), it has become a major source of our knowledge of Roman civilization.

Pompeius, Sextus ⟨Pompey the Younger⟩ *c*75–35 BC. Roman commander. A son of Pompey the Great, he continued to fight against Caesar's forces after Pompey's death (48 BC). He occupied Sicily and attempted to cut off Rome's grain supply. Eventually defeated (36 BC), he fled to Asia Minor but was captured and killed.

Pompey 106–48 BC. Roman general and statesman. Pompey gained important victories in Africa, Italy, Spain, and Gaul, and won for himself the title Magnus ("the Great"). He defeated Lepidus (77 BC), Sertorius (76 BC), and Spartacus (72 BC). In 70 BC he was elected consul along with Marcus Licinius Crassus. Pompey cleared the Mediterranean of pirates and consolidated Rome's Asian possessions. Together with Crassus and J. Caesar, he formed the First Triumvirate (61 BC). The rivalry between Caesar and Pompey remained submerged during Pompey's marriage to Caesar's daughter Julia but intensified after her death (54 BC). In 49 BC, Caesar crossed the Rubicon, invaded Italy, and defeated Pompey at Pharsalus (48 BC). Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was murdered.

Pompey the Younger See Pompeius, Sextus

Pompidou, Georges Jean Raymond 1911–74. French premier (1962–68) and president of the Fifth Republic (1969–74). A wartime protégé of C. de Gaulle, he later became prominent as both banker and politician, and helped draft the constitution of the Fifth Republic.

Ponce de León, Juan *c*1460–1521. Spanish explorer. He founded the oldest settlement in Puerto Rico (1508–09), and discovered Florida (1513), supposedly in quest of a mythical "fountain of youth."

Poncelet, Jean Victor 1788–1867. French mathematician. While a war prisoner in Russia following Napoleon I's campaign, he developed the foundations of modern projective geometry.

Pondicherry Former French colony on the southeast coast of India. Founded in 1674, it was the object of fighting during 18th-cent. colonial wars between Britain and France.

The colony remained in French hands until 1954 (when it was ceded to India), the last remnant of extensive domains lost to the British in the 18th cent.

Poniatowski, Prince Józef Anton 1763–1813. Polish military leader. He fought with distinction against Russia (1792) and took part in the Polish revolt (1794) led by T. Kosciusko. He later became commander in chief of the duchy of Warsaw (1807) under Napoleon, and fought and died during Napoleon's Russian campaign.

Pontiac *c*1720–69. Ottawa Indian chief who organized the Great Lakes Indian tribes in a nearly successful uprising known as Pontiac's Rebellion (q.v.).

Pontiac's Conspiracy See Pontiac's Rebellion

Pontiac's Rebellion ⟨Pontiac's Conspiracy⟩ 1763–66. American Indian uprising against the British after the French and Indian Wars. Pontiac, an Ottawa Indian chief, realized that the British were far less friendly to Indians than the defeated French. He enlisted the support of the tribes of the Great Lakes region and conducted a series of raids on British settlements. Though these attacks were brilliantly planned and executed, superior British weaponry forced Pontiac to sue for peace. The uprising was ended by a treaty of amity (July 25, 1766).

Pontius Pilate fl. AD 26. Roman procurator of Judaea. By "washing his hands" of ultimate responsibility, he allowed the crucifixion of Jesus.

Pontus Ancient country of northeastern Asia Minor, on the Black Sea, in what is now Turkey. It was founded by Mithradates II (*c*3d cent. BC), and reached its height under the reign of Mithradates VI. The Pontic Empire was not strong enough, however, to withstand the Romans. Pompey occupied Pontus (66 BC), and it was subsequently made a Roman province.

pony express Mail delivery system between St. Joseph, Missouri, and Sacramento, California (inaugurated Apr. 3, 1860). The horse and rider system required more than 150 horse-changing stations to enable relay riders to cover the distance in eight to ten days. The pony express was phased out after the first telegraph service to San Franciso began (Oct. 24, 1861).

Poole, William Frederick 1821–94. American librarian. A director of public libraries in Boston, Cincinnati, and Chicago, he devised (1848) the first periodical index, Poole's Index to Periodical Literature.

Pop art Art movement (late 1950s to early 1970s) in which subject matter was taken from the popular culture and included reproductions of such things as comic strips and well-known commercial products. It evolved as a reaction against the cultural pretensions Pop artists saw in other art movements. Andy Warhol (1930–) was one of its leading proponents.

pope See papacy

Pope, Alexander 1688–1744. English poet and satirist. A master of the heroic couplet and one of the great poets of his age, Pope expressed the ideas of his time in such graceful and polished works as his Essay on Man. Among his other works were Essay on Criticism, The Rape of the Lock, and The Dunciad.

Pope, John 1822–92. Union general in the American Civil War. Pope fought with distinction on the Mississippi but was disastrously defeated at the second Battle of Bull Run (1862).

Popish Plot Fictitious English plot fabricated (1678) by T. Oates. According to Oates, Catholics had formed a conspiracy to assassinate English king Charles II. The wave of hysteria caused by Oates' allegations led to the persecution and killing of many Catholics.

Popol Vuh Quiché Indian (Mayan) manuscript of the 16th cent. Written by a converted Quiché and based on traditional Indian documents and lore, it is an important source for ancient Mayan mythology and culture.

Poppaea Sabina d. AD 65. Wife (m. AD 62) of the Roman emperor Nero. She is said to have persuaded Nero to kill his former wife, his own mother, and the philosopher Seneca. Nero is said to have kicked her to death.

Popular Front Political coalitions in Europe formed by liberals, moderates, Socialists, and Communists during the 1930s. These coalitions were aimed at blocking the then growing Fascist movement, and Popular Front coalitions gained control of governments in France and Spain during the 1930s. (See also France [1936]; Second Republic [Spanish].)

popular sovereignty ⟨squatter sovereignty⟩ Pre-Civil War US political doctrine. It held that the settlers of territories had the right to decide whether they would enter the Union as free or slave states. The doctrine was supported by Sen. S. Douglas and was incorporated into the Compromise of 1850 and the Kansas-Nebraska Act (q.q.v.). Opponents of the plan called it "squatter sovereignty," and it proved to be a failure in settling the slavery question. It led to serious conflicts in the territories, notably Bleeding Kansas (q.v.).

Populist party American political party that attempted to challenge the major parties during the 1890s by allying an agrarian coalition with labor and other interests. From the 1870s, when farm prices began to decline, American farmers sought to advance their interests through groups such as the Granger movement, the Greenback party, and the Farmers' Alliances. By 1892 the Populist party was formed. It advocated free coinage of silver and expansion of the currency; lowering of transportation costs by nationalization of the railroads; a graduated income tax; direct popular election of senators; and an eight-hour working day. The party nominated J. Weaver for president in 1892, and he received more than a million votes. The party made further gains in the 1894 congressional elections. Because of a convergence of interests in free silver, the party supported the Democratic candidate, W. Bryan, in 1896. After Bryan's defeat, the party rapidly declined as a political force. Some of the elements of its platform were later enacted by the major parties.

Populists See Narodniki

Poquelin, Jean Baptiste See Molière

Porphyrogenitus, Constantine See Constantine VII

Porphyry ⟨Malchus⟩ AD *c*233–*c*304. Greek Neoplatonic philosopher. A disciple and biographer of Plotinus, he also wrote 15 books of anti-Christian polemics, Adversus Christianos.

Porson, Richard 1759–1808. English classical scholar. He produced outstanding critical editions of such classical writers as Aeschylus and Euripides.

Port-au-Prince Haitian capital (pop. 745,700). Founded (1749) by French planters, Port-au-Prince has become the chief port as well as the cultural center of Haiti.

Porter, Cole 1893–1964. American composer and lyricist. Porter's lyrics and arresting tunes for such musical shows as Can Can and Kiss Me Kate made him one of the leading popular composers of his day.

Porter, David 1780–1843. American naval officer. He served in the Tripolitan War, and, as captain of the Essex during the War of 1812, captured the Alert, the first British warship taken in the war.

Porter, David Dixon 1813–91. American admiral. Son of D. Porter. During the American Civil War, he commanded Union forces on the Mississippi and in the Atlantic blockade, and he contributed to the Union victories at New Orleans (1862) and Vicksburg (1863).

Porter, Horace 1837–1921. American general and diplomat. During the American Civil War, he served as aide-de-camp to Gen. U. Grant (1864–65). He later served as secretary to Pres. Grant (to 1872), US minister to France (1897–1905), and as a US delegate to the Hague Conference (1907).

Porter, Katherina Anne 1890–1980. American writer, considered a master of the short story. She is also the author of an acclaimed novel, Ship of Fools.

Porter, William Sydney See Henry, O.

Portland, William Bentinck, 1st earl of 1649–1709. Dutch-born English statesman. He negotiated the marriage (1677) of William of Orange (King William III) to Mary, daughter of the duke of York (later James II). He accompanied William to England (1688), was created 1st earl of Portland, and fought for William at the Battle of the Boyne (1690). He negotiated the Treaty of Ryswick (1697).

Porto See Oporto

Porto Rico See Puerto Rico

Portsmouth, Treaty of Treaty concluded (Sept. 5, 1905) between Russia and Japan at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, ending the Russo-Japanese War. By its terms Russia recognized Japan as the dominant power in Korea and ceded Port Arthur, the Liao-tung Peninsula, and southern Sakhalin Island to Japan. Both powers agreed to restore Manchuria to China.

Portugal ⟨Portuguese Republic⟩ Country located on the west coast of the Iberian peninsula in southern Europe. Its capital is Lisbon. Portugal emerged as an independent state (12th cent.) during the reconquest of the Muslim-held Iberian peninsula by Spanish Christians. From the 15th to 16th cent., the Portuguese created a formidable overseas colonial empire in Asia, Africa, and South America. The Portuguese were soon eclipsed by the other European powers, however. The monarchy was overthrown in 1910. After a period of unstable republican government, A. Salazar came to power (1932) and began his long rule. His death was followed by a period of instability and return to republican government (1976). Key events in Portuguese history include:

5TH–8TH CENT. AD Region, under Roman control (from 1st cent. BC), was later occupied by Visigoths.

711 Moors (Muslims) conquered Visigoths and took control of entire Iberian peninsula.

9TH CENT. Gradual reconquest of region from Muslims begun by Spanish Christians.

1095 County of Portugal given to Count Henry of Burgundy by Alfonso VI of Castile; was dowry of his illegitimate daughter Teresa.

1128 Alfonso I Henriques, son of Henry of Burgundy, seized power in the county; had himself crowned king after defeating the Moors at the Battle of Ourique (1139).

1143 Treaty of Zamora granted Portugal independence from Spain; Alfonso I recognized as king.

1179 Pope Alexander III recognized Portugal as an independent kingdom.

1223–48 Alfonso II reigned; he convened first Cortes.

1248–79 Alfonso III reigned; instituted administrative reforms and promoted commerce.

1250 Algarve in the south finally conquered from the Moors, bringing the Portuguese mainland to its present-day limits.

1256 Lisbon, recaptured from the Moors in 1147, became the Portuguese capital.

1294 King Diniz signed a commercial treaty with Edward I, the first of a long series of English-Portuguese pacts.

1385 Battle of Aljubarrota ended long series of wars with the Spanish kingdom of Castile; Portuguese victory assured Portugal's continued independence.

1385–1433 John I reigned; marked beginning of Portuguese exploration and colonization; wars against the Muslims in North Africa.

1386 Treaty of Windsor allied Portugal permanently with England; John I married to Philippa, daughter of John of Gaunt.

1415 Conquest of Ceuta in Africa from the Moors; Portuguese subsequently expanded control in Morocco.

1418 Prince Henry the Navigator began exploration of the African coast.

1427 Azores discovered and opened to colonization.

1460 Cape Verde Islands and the coast of Guinea became Portuguese colonies; death of Prince Henry the Navigator.

1488 Africa's Cape of Good Hope rounded by Bartholomew Diaz.

1494 Treaty of Tordesillas (June 7) signed with Spain; provided for division of newly discovered lands in Americas, Africa, and Asia.

1496 Jews expelled from Portugal; exodus of middle class and highly educated Jews weakened Portugal.

1497–98 V. da Gama opened up trade route from Portugal to India, providing the foundation for Portuguese Empire.

1500 Brazil claimed by Pedro Alvares Cabral.

1510 A. de Albuquerque occupied Goa, the best port on India's west coast; Goa was a Portuguese colony for over 450 years.

1511 Albuquerque conquered Malacca on Malay peninsula; Portuguese first of European colonial powers to reach China.

1512–13 Occupation of the Moluccas (islands of Indonesia).

1521–57 John III reigned; Portugal reached its height; influence expanded in Brazil, India, Macao, and Moluccas.

1536 Inquisition established.

1578 Battle of Alcazarquivir in Morocco; Sebastian, son of John III, killed with the flower of Portuguese nobility (Aug. 4); kingdom permanently weakened.

1580 Succession disputed after Sebastian's brother, Cardinal Henry, died; Philip II of Spain invaded and conquered Portugal.

1580–1640 Sixty Years' Captivity saw Portugal ruled as Spanish province; Portuguese seaborne empire declined.

1580–98 Spanish King Philip II reigned as Philip I.

c1636 Dutch seized Ceylon and Malacca from the Portuguese; other Asian possessions lost.

1640 Portuguese successfully rebelled against Spanish rule and regained independence.

1640–56 John IV reigned; founded Braganza line; drove Dutch out of Brazil.

1640–1910 Braganca line in power.

1663 Battle of Ameixial (June 8); Portuguese defeated Spanish invaders.

1668 Treaty of Lisbon; Spain recognized Portuguese independence.

1701–14 War of the Spanish Succession; Portugal participated after 1703.

1703 Treaty of Methuen (Dec. 27) gave Portuguese wines preference in England in return for preferential treatment of English textiles.

1750–77 Marquês de Pombal effectively ruled Portugal as minister to Joseph I; introduced Enlightenment ideas, strengthened monarchy at expense of nobles and church, sought to revitalize declining commerce and agriculture.

1755 Lisbon earthquake destroyed the city and killed thousands.

1777–1816 Maria I reigned; Pombal's reforms rescinded, bringing on renewed slow decline of the kingdom.

1801 War of the Oranges; Portugal conquered and divided by France and Spain.

1807 Napoleon's armies marched on Portugal; royal family fled to Brazil; Peninsular War began in following year.

1811 Portugal at last cleared of French troops. Royal family remained in Brazil.

1815 Brazil became a kingdom separate from Portugal, united by the crown.

1816 John VI succeeded to the thrones of both Portugal and Brazil.

1820 Liberal revolution in Portugal created a constitutional monarchy.

1821 John VI returned to Portugal from Brazil; reigned as constitutional monarch (1822–26).

1822 Brazil proclaimed independence; Pedro I established as constitutional monarch there.

1826 Maria II acceded to throne under the regency of Dom Miguel.

1828–33 Civil war; Miguel usurped the throne; Pedro I came to Portugal (1831) and, with the help of European powers, aided the liberals in restoring Maria (1833).

1834–53 Maria II reigned after reaching her majority; struggle between liberals and conservatives during her reign laid basis for later reforms.

1861–89 Louis I reigned; slavery abolished in colonies; legal reforms instituted.

1889–1908 Charles I reigned; assassinated after granting dictatorial powers to his prime minister. João Franco.

1908 Manuel II, last of the Braganzas, succeeded to the throne.

1910 Manuel II deposed by a military coup (Oct. 3–5); republic declared.

1911 Republican constitution instituted; church and state separated.

1911–15 M. de Arriaga in office as first elected president; period of economic problems and political unrest continued into 1920s.

1914–18 Portugal fought with the Allies in WW I.

1926 Military overthrew the government (May).

1926–51 A. Carmona installed as president.

1926 A. Salazar named finance minister; engineered Portugal's economic recovery.

1932–68 Salazar in power as prime minister; thereafter ruled Portugal as dictator.

1933 Salazar-sponsored constitution transformed Portugal into a "corporative state."

1936–39 Salazar supported Gen. F. Franco in the Spanish Civil War.

1939–45 WW II; Portugal remained neutral; from 1943 allowed Allies use of Azores.

1949 Portugal became a founding member of NATO.

1955 Portugal became a member of the UN.

1961 Goa forcibly invaded by the Indian army and annexed to India (Dec. 18).

1962 Revolt by independence fighters in Portuguese Angola broke out.

1968–74 M. Caetano in office as prime minister; replaced the ailing Salazar; opposition to repressive government mounted.

1970 Salazar, long-time head of Portuguese government, died (July 27).

1974 Military coup (Apr. 25) followed government's failure to maintain control over overseas territories in Africa; military junta led by Gen. Antonio de Spinola in power.

1974 Independence granted to Guinea-Bissau (Aug. 26).

1974–76 Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes in office; replaced De Spinola as president (Sept. 30).

1975 Gen. De Spinola's followers failed in attempted coup (Mar. 11).

1975 Banks and insurance companies nationalized by leftist government (Mar. 14–15).

1975 Agreements reached providing independence to Cape Verde Islands (July 5), Mozambique (June 25), São Tomé and Principe (July 12) and Angola (Nov. 11).

1975 Three-man military junta put in charge of country (July 25).

1975 Communist revolt crushed by government troops (Nov. 25–27).

1976 New constitution adopted.

1976 Moderate Socialist, Gen. Antonio Ramalho Eanes, elected to presidency in first free elections in decades (June 27).

1980 President Ramalho Eanes reelected (Dec. 8) after death of his principal opponent, Francisco Sá Carneiro.

Portuguese East Africa See Mozambique

Portuguese Guinea See Guinea-Bissau

Portuguese India Former Portuguese possessions in India. Comprising Goa, Daman, and Diu, they were the remnants of more extensive possessions and were annexed by India (Dec., 1961).

Poseidon Ancient Greek god of the sea. He is identified with the Roman god Neptune.

Poseidonius ⟨Posidonius⟩ *c*135–*c*51 BC. Greek Stoic philosopher. He was very successful in promoting Stoicism among the Romans, but none of his voluminous writings has survived.

Posidonius See Poseidonius

positivism School of philosophical thought. Positivism holds that all knowledge is based solely on sense experience and denies the possibility of transcendantal or metaphysical knowledge. The origins of both the name and the school are usually ascribed to A. Comte.

Posse, Count Arvid See Agrarian Party

Post, Emily Price 1873–1960. American writer on manners. Her book Etiquette went through some 90 editions, and her newspaper columns, giving commonsense rules for etiquette, ran in some 200 newspapers.

postimpressionism Movement in art dominant in the late 19th and early 20th cents. Going beyond impressionism's preoccupation with light, painters such as P. Cézanne, P. Gauguin, and V. van Gogh combined brilliant colors with studies of angle and form, thus paving the way for the major 20th-cent. movements Cubism and Fauvism.

Potato War See Bavarian Succession, War of the Potawatomi Indians North American Indian tribe. First discovered in northern Wisconsin, they moved to occupy both sides of southern Lake Michigan in the 18th cent. In the 1860s, many moved to Kansas and Oklahoma. The Potawatomi took part in Pontiac's Rebellion (q.v.) and fought with the British in the War of 1812.

Potemkin, Grigori Aleksandrovich 1739–91. Russian field marshal and statesman. He helped bring Catherine II to the throne (1762) and remained a powerful and influential favorite of hers. He served with distinction in the Russo-Turkish Wars.

Potidaea Ancient Greek city. Colonized *c*600 BC, it led a revolt against Athens (432 BC) that was a cause of the second Peloponnesian War. The city was destroyed (356 BC) by Philip II of Macedon.

Potsdam Conference ⟨Berlin Conference⟩ Allied meeting (July 17–Aug. 2, 1945) at Potsdam, near Berlin, after Germany's surrender in WW II. Present at the conference were US president H. Truman, Russian premier J. Stalin, and Great Britain's prime ministers, first W. Churchill and later (from July 26, after he had succeeded Churchill as prime minister) C. Atlee. The resulting Potsdam Agreement outlawed Nazism in Germany, placed Germany's eastern provinces under the control of Russia and Poland, decentralized the German economy, set terms for reparations, and agreed to try war criminals. The Potsdam Declaration (July 26) called on Japan to surrender unconditionally.

Pottawatomie Massacre Murder of five proslavery settlers on the night of May 24–25, 1856, on Pottawatomie Creek, Kansas. The massacre was carried out by abolitionist J. Brown and his party, and most of the victims were associated with the enforcement of proslavery laws.

Potter, Beatrix 1866–1943. English author of children's stories. She created such classics as the stories of Peter Rabbit and Benjamin Bunny and illustrated them with her own delicate watercolors.

Poulenc, Francis 1899–1963. French composer. A member of Les Six (q.v.), he wrote a variety of sophisticated, often witty songs and is considered a leading composer of this century.

Pound, Ezra Loomis 1885–1972. American poet. A leader in early 20th-cent. modernist literary movements, he created original poetical works, notably his Cantos, and was a major influence on US and British literature. His pro-Fascist broadcasts from Italy during WW II led to his incarceration (1946–58) in a mental hospital in Washington, D.C.

Poussin, Nicholas 1594–1665. French painter. Considered the leading 17th-cent. French artist, he painted both religious and mythological scenes in a style that set the standard for French classicism.

Powderly, Terence V See Knights of Labor

Powell, John Wesley 1834–1902. American geologist and ethnologist. Surveyor of the Colorado River system, he was the director of the Smithsonian's Bureau of Ethnology (1879–1902) and of the US Geological Survey (1881–94).

Powers, Hiram 1805–73. American sculptor. He worked in Florence in the predominant neoclassical style and became famous for such works as the nude Greek Slave.

Powhatan Confederacy League of North American Indian tribes consisting of some 200 settlements in the Virginia tidewater region and on the east shore of the Chesapeake. The confederacy was formed by Chief Wahunsonacock (called Powhatan by settlers) and for a time had friendly relations with the English colonists at Jamestown. The marriage of J. Rolfe to Pocahontas, the chief's daughter, kept the peace until Wahunsonacock's death. Thereafter, Indian resentment over white encroachment on their lands resulted in the Powhatan War (q.v.) and defeat of the confederacy.

Powhatan War Intermittent struggle of the tidewater Indian tribes of colonial Virginia and Maryland against encroachment of whites seeking new tobacco lands. The marriage of Pocahontas, daughter of the Indian chief Powhatan (1550?–1618), to J. Rolfe had helped keep peace with the English settlers, but after Powhatan's death his successor led an attack (1622) in which some 350 settlers were killed. Settler reprisal was fierce. The next large-scale Indian attack came in 1644, when some 500 settlers were killed. But the tide soon went against the Indians, eventually resulting in the death of three-quarters of the tribe and the takeover of most of their lands.

Poynings, Sir Edward See Poynings' Law

Poynings' Law Acts of the Irish Parliament (1494) secured by the English governor of Ireland, Sir Edward Poynings (1459–1521). The acts sharply limited the power of the Irish Parliament and included statutes putting English laws in force in Ireland and requiring approval of the English king and council for all parliamentary acts.

Poznan Riots Uprising (June, 1956) in the western Polish city of Poznan. Industrial workers staged a general strike demanding bread and freedom. It was suppressed with military force, leaving 53 dead and over 200 wounded, but it led to a change in Polish Communist party leadership.

Pozzo di Borgo, Carlo Andrea 1764–1842. Corsican statesman who served in the Russian diplomatic service. An opponent of the Bonapartes, he worked to promote the alliances that eventually defeated Napoleon I and restored the Bourbon dynasty.

praefect See prefect

Praetorian Guard See Praetorians

Praetorians ⟨Praetorian Guard⟩ Special military force organized (27 BC) by the Roman emperor Augustus to guard the emperor. As the only military force allowed in Rome, they acquired great power, even making and deposing emperors. Septimius Severus reorganized them (AD 193), and Constantine finally abolished them (AD 312).

Praetorius, Michael 1571–1621. German composer, born Schultheiss. He is remembered for his hundreds of religious choral works as well as for his Syntagma Musicum, a history of 17th-cent. music.

pragmatic sanction Royal decree on an issue of major importance to the state. The most famous of these sanctions was that issued by Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI in 1713. Lacking male heirs, Charles decreed that succession to the vast Hapsburg family domains would be continued through his daughter Maria Theresa and not his older brother's daughters. Charles worked tirelessly to secure acceptance of the sanction by European rulers. Nevertheless, Charles' death (1740) marked the beginning of the War of the Spanish Succession (q.v.) over Maria Theresa's accession. The Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle (1748) ending the war confirmed the Pragmatic Sanction of 1713. (See also Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges.)

Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges Royal edict issued (July 7, 1438) by French king Charles VII. It supported the Council of Basil, restricted papal authority in France and thus advanced the cause of Gallicanism (q.v.), and extended Charles' control over the French church. Louis XI revoked the pragmatic sanction (1461), and it was finally replaced by the Concordat of Bologna (1516).

Pragmatic Sanction of 1713 See pragmatic sanction pragmatism Important 20-cent. philosophical school first articulated by C. Peirce (1878) and developed by W. James and others. It stresses experimentation and practical usefulness as major tests of philosophical truths and places actual experience above speculative doctrines. Other pragmatists include the American J. Dewey and the Europeans F. Schiller and H. Bergson.

Prague Capital city (pop. 1,173,000) of Czechoslovakia; an industrial, commercial, and transportation center. Dating to the 9th cent., it became a leading European city (14th cent.) under Holy Roman Emperor Charles IV. It was a center for the Hussite religious movement (15th cent.). The Hapsburgs came to rule Prague, and it was the scene of the Defenestration of Prague (q.v.) in 1618, which contributed to the Thirty Years' War. In 1918, Prague became the capital of independent Czechoslovakia. It was occupied by the Germans in WW II and was the center of the Prague Spring (q.v.) movement.

Prague, Battle of Prussian victory over Austrian forces before Prague (May 6, 1757) during the Seven Years' War. Prussian forces of some 64,000 under Prussian king Frederick II defeated an Austrian army of comparable size, forcing some Austrian units to retreat and the balance to retire within the city. The Prussians began a siege of the city.

Prague, Defenestration of See Defenestration of Prague

Prague, Jerome of See Jerome of Prague

Prague, Peace of Treaty (May 30, 1635) ending hostilities between Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand II, the elector of Saxony, and other German princes. It closed the Swedish phase of the Thirty Years' War.

Prague, Treaty of Agreement (Aug. 23, 1866) ending the Austro-Prussian War. Austria recognized Prussian hegemony over Schleswig-Holstein and was excluded from the North German Confederation, which O. von Bismarck would later form into a modern, unified Germany.

Praguerie Revolt by French noblemen (Feb., 1440) against King Charles VII. Opposed to the king's military reforms and other measures intended to reduce their power, the nobles arose in imitation of a similar revolt in Prague (hence the name). The dauphin (who later became Louis XI) became the figurehead of the revolt, and the nobles continued to resist royal authority until July, 1440.

Prague Spring Abortive attempt to liberalize the Communist regime in Czechoslovakia (Jan.–Aug., 1968). It began with the ouster of the hardline Czech Communist party leader in favor of liberal Communist A. Dubček, and the movement thereafter became a bold attempt to effect democratic and economic reforms within a Communist country. It was an affront to the Russians, however, and on Aug. 20, 1968, the Russian-dominated Warsaw Pact invaded Czechoslovakia and quickly ended the Prague Spring.

Prairial, coup of 30 See French Revolution (1799)

Prajadhipok See Chakkri dynasty

Prakrit Family of Indic languages. Developed from the 6th cent. BC as vernacular dialects of Sanskrit, they were rarely literary languages (except the Buddhist sacred language Pali), but they formed the basis of modern Indo-Aryan languages.

Prasad, Rajendra 1884–1963. First president of the republic of India (1950–62). A disciple of M. Gandhi, he was three times president of the Congress party and also presided over the Constituent Assembly that drafted India's constitution (1949).

Pratt, Charles, 1st Earl Camden 1714–94. British jurist, noted for his decision against the legality of general warrants. He was lord chancellor from 1766 to 1770 and was dismissed for opposing taxation of the American colonies.

Praxiteles *fl. c*370–*c*330 BC. Ancient Greek sculptor. Considered one of the greatest classical artists, he was famous in antiquity for his nude Aphrodite of Cnidus.

Preble, Edward 1761–1807. American naval officer. He commanded the first American naval force east of the Cape of Good Hope (1799). He also commanded the Constitution in the Tripolitan War.

predestination Theological doctrine holding that God preordains those whom he will save. Some form of the doctrine was developed in the West by Saint Augustine and was further developed by Calvinism.

Preemption Act US statute (1841) by which squatters occupying government lands could purchase 160 acres from the government at nominal cost provided certain conditions were met. The act was repealed Mar. 3, 1891.

prefect ⟨praefect⟩ In ancient Roman government, a class of officers and magistrates to whom authority was delegated. The prefects of the city ruled it in the absence of the consuls, and the Praetorian prefects, commanding the Praetorians, sometimes functioned as virtual prime ministers of the emperors.

Pre-Raphaelites School of English painters and poets, including D.G. Rossetti and J. Millais. The group flourished from 1848 to 1853 and drew its inspiration from the realism of the Italian painters prior to Raphael.

Presbyterianism System of church organization that rose within the Christian church during the Protestant Reformation. It represents a compromise between government by bishops (episcopacy) and congregationalism. Elders assume ministerial and administrative responsibilities within the congregation. Generally Presbyterian churches are governed by a hierarchy of four separate bodies. The session is the governing body of the congregation. Above the session is the presbytery, composed of ministers and elders sent from congregations within a designated area. It is responsible for confirming the congregation's appointment of ministers. Above the presbytery is the synod, which holds some authority over the sessions and presbyteries. The ultimate body is the general assembly, which meets each year to deal with questions involving the entire church. Its head is elected for a term of one year and is the head of the church. Presbyterianism was greatly advanced as a movement by J. Calvin. It spread to the British Isles in the 16th cent. and its doctrinal principles were established by the British Parliament in the 17th cent. Presbyterianism rose in Scotland through the efforts of J. Knox, who founded the Church of Scotland. Other Presbyterian churches included the Presbyterian Church of Ireland and the Calvinistic Methodist Church, in Wales. Presbyterianism also influenced the religious movements in Europe, notably the Huguenots (French Protestants). In America, the Presbyterian Church was founded by the Irish Presbyterian leader, Francis Makemie (1658?–1708). Makemie emigrated to America in 1683 and founded the first presbytery in America in 1706. By the mid-18th cent., disputes arose within the movement over evangelical principles and revivals. Presbyterianism in America later branched into numerous groups. Among the leading Presbyterian bodies today are the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America.

Prescott, William Hickling 1796–1859. American historian. His fame rests on the histories The Conquest of Mexico and The Conquest of Peru, both noted for their distinguished literary style.

president Chief executive officer of a body or state. Most modern republics are headed by presidents, sometimes with extensive powers, as in the US and France, or with restricted powers as in Italy, West Germany, or India. (See also Executive Branch; prime minister.)

Presley, Elvis Aron 1935–77. American rock music singer. After his first hit song, Heartbreak Hotel, he dominated American rock music until the early 1960s.

pre-Socratics Collective name for those Greek philosophers and schools of philosophy that preceded Socrates. Among the schools are the Ionian, Pythagorean, Eleatic, atomist, and Sophist.

Pressburg, Treaty of Treaty (Dec. 26, 1805) between Napoleon I and Austria during the Napoleonic Wars. It was negotiated after Austria's defeat at the battles of Austerlitz and Ulm and eliminated Austria from the Third Coalition against Napoleon. Austria ceded extensive lands in both Italy and Germany to form new Napoleonic kingdoms and paid a huge indemnity. In return it received Salzburg.

Prester John Legendary Christian ruler. According to 12th cent. accounts originating with the crusaders, Prester John ruled a vast Christian land first thought to be in Asia and later in Africa.

Preston, Battle of Victory (Aug. 17–20, 1648) of O. Cromwell in the English Civil War in which the last of the forces supporting King Charles I were defeated. Some 20,000 Scots invaded England but were decisively defeated by Cromwell's force of 8,500 near Preston, Lancashire.

Pretoria South African capital city (pop. 563,000). Founded in 1855, it became the capital of Transvaal province (1860) and of the Union of South Africa (1910).

Pretoria Convention Agreement (Aug. 3, 1881) between Britain and the Transvaal, amid the continuing conflict with the Boers. The agreement granted the Transvaal self-government subject to British suzerainty and control over foreign relations. It failed to last.

Pretorius, Andries Wilhelmus Jacobus 1799–1853. Boer leader. He was a leader of the Great Trek (q.v.) from the British-dominated Cape Colony to Natal. Continuing to oppose the British, he went into the Transvaal (1848) and was instrumental in establishing Transvaal independence.

Pretorius, Martinus Wessel 1819–1901 Boer statesman. Son of A. Pretorius. He was elected (1857) first president of the South African Republic (the Transvaal) and (1859) president of the adjoining Orange Free State, but was unable to unite the two.

Prevost, Sir George 1767–1816. British colonial administrator. As governor general of Canada (1811–15) he followed a policy of conciliation with the French Canadians. His defeats as commander in Canada in the War of 1812 led to his recall.

Priam Legendary last king of Troy. The father of Hector and Paris, he was killed when the Greeks conquered Troy.

Priapus Greek fertility god, god of gardens, cattle, and fishermen. Believed to be a son of Dionysus and Aphrodite, he was represented as a grotesque figure with an immense phallus.

Price, Sterling 1809–67. Confederate general in the American Civil War. Price fought in the Mexican War, served as governor of Missouri (1853–57), and led Confederate forces in the West during the Civil War.

Pride, Thomas See Pride's Purge

Pride's Purge Incident (Dec. 6, 1648) during the English Civil War, in which some 143 members of the House of Commons were removed by force. The members were mostly Presbyterians, believed to be royalist sympathizers. The purge was carried out by Capt. Thomas Pride (d. 1658), who commanded a Parliamentarian military force. Subsequent sessions of Parliament were known as the Rump Parliament (q.v.).

Priestley, John Boynton 1894–. British author. A prolific novelist, playwright, and critic, he is especially noted for such expressionist dramas as Time and the Conways.

Priestley, Joseph 1733–1804. English scientist and theologian. Priestley conducted important scientific investigations into the nature of electricity and discovered oxygen, calling it "dephlogisticated air."

Prignano, Bartolomeo See Urban VI

prime minister ⟨premier⟩ The head of government in a parliamentary form of government. He serves under the head of state (king or president). In Britain, the prime minister has broad powers, including responsibility for policy making, administrative functions, and appointment of Cabinet ministers and other lesser government officers. The prime minister is a member of Parliament and usually is the leader of the majority party. He is responsible to Parliament and must resign in the event that his government cannot carry the majority in Parliament. Under other systems of parliamentary government, the president (as head of state) is invested with the real responsibility of governing and the prime minister has only minor functions.

primitivism In art, the work of an artist who has no formal training in art but who nevertheless has developed a talent far beyond that of a novice. Primitives (now more often called "naive painters") have a fresh but unorthodox style. Among the noted painters of this group are H. Rousseau and Grandma Moses.

Primo de Rivera, Jose Antonio See Falange

Primo de Rivera, Miguel 1879–1930. Spanish general and dictator. After a successful coup d'état (Sept., 1923), he became the virtual military dictator of Spain (1923–30). His authoritarian regime provoked widespread opposition and he was forced to resign.

primogeniture In inheritance law, the right of the eldest son to inherit exclusively. In England and Western Europe primogeniture prevented the division of estates and enhanced the power of the landed aristocracy.

Primorski Krai See Maritime Territory

Prim y Prats, Juan 1814–70. Spanish general and statesman. He helped overthrow (1868) Queen Isabella, the last Spanish Bourbon queen. He also helped install Amadeus of Savoy as king.

Prince Edward Island A Maritime Province of Canada (pop 124,100). Originally inhabited by the Micmac Indians, the island was discovered in 1534 by Jacques Cartier and named Île St. Jean by S. de Champlain (1603). First settled by the French (early 18th cent.), it was ceded to the British in the Treaty of Paris (1763). It became a province (1769), was renamed in honor of Edward, duke of Kent, in 1789, and entered the Canadian confederation in 1873.

Prince of Wales Title traditionally conferred upon the heir apparent to the British throne. It was first given (1303) to Prince Edward, later King Edward II.

Princes, Fronde of the See Fronde

Princeton, Battle of See Trenton and Princeton, Battles of Principality of Antioch One of the most powerful Crusader States (11th–13th cents.). Crusaders conquered the city of Antioch and surrounding territory (located in what is now southeastern Turkey) from the Muslims (1098) during the First Crusade. Bohemond I became its first ruler. It survived until the Mameluke conquest (1268).

Priscian fl. AD 500. Latin grammarian. Born in North Africa, he taught at Constantinople. His Institutiones grammaticae preserved many otherwise unknown quotations from classical authors and was one of the most popular textbooks of the Middle Ages.

privateering The use of specially commissioned, privately operated ships by belligerents to prey upon enemy shipping in time of war. From the 13th cent. privateering was used to supplement a country's naval strength. The heyday of privateering came in the 16th–17th cents., when such English privateers as J. Hawkins and F. Drake pursued Spanish shipping (late 16th cent.) and the French government commissioned many privateers to prey on English shipping (17th cent.). The US engaged in extensive privateering in the American Revolution and in the War of 1812, and the last letters of marque authorizing privateers to operate were in fact issued by the Confederate States of America. The practice was proscribed by the Declaration of Paris (1856). The Hague Conference (1907) laid down the conditions under which armed merchant vessels are deemed to be warships.

Privy Council In English history, the council of the king's principal advisers. It held executive, legislative, and judicial powers during its heyday. So named during the reign of Henry V (reigned 1413–22), it diminished in importance with the decline of the king's actual political power. Today it remains as a purely formal body.

Probus d. 282. Roman emperor (AD 276–282). He defeated the barbarians in Gaul and Illyria, but by allowing barbarian settlements within the empire he set a dangerous precedent. Eventually he was assassinated by his troops.

Proclamation of 1763 British royal proclamation (Oct. 7, 1763) that attempted to limit further western settlement in North America beyond the Appalachians. Conceived as a measure to conciliate the Indians following Pontiac's Rebellion, it fostered a serious Colonial grievance against the mother country.

Proclus AD *c*410–485. Greek philosopher. A Neoplatonist, he opposed Christianity and attempted to maintain the prestige of pagan philosophy.

Procne See Philomela

proconsul In ancient Roman government, originally a consul whose authority was extended to the completion of a commission, such as a military campaign. Later the office was given to the governor of a Roman province.

Procopius fl. 6th cent. Byzantine historian. He served as secretary to the military leader Belisarius and wrote volumes that are leading sources for history during the time of Justinian I.

Procopius the Great 1380–1434. Czech Hussite leader. During the Hussite Wars, he inflicted crushing defeats on the Catholic and imperial forces in 1426 and 1431. Embracing the Taborites, or more extreme Hussite faction, he was killed in the Taborite defeat at Lipany (1434).

Procopius the Little d. 1434. Czech Hussite leader. An ally of Procopius the Great, he unsuccessfully commanded the Hussite forces at the siege of Pilsen (1432–34) and died in the battle of Lipany (1434).

Procrustes Legendary Greek robber. He made his victims lie on a bed, stretching the limbs of those too short and cutting off the limbs of those too long. He was finally slain by Theseus.

Progressive Bloc Alliance of Russian liberals and conservatives in the last Russian duma. From Aug., 1915, it urged reforms on the imperial government to restore confidence and improve Russia's performance in WW I. It advocated strict rule of law and political amnesty. After the February Revolution (1917), members of the bloc helped form a committee that appointed the Provisional Government.

Progressive Conservative party ⟨Conservative party⟩ Major Canadian political party. Like its Liberal party counterpart, it is a broad-based coalition rather than an ideologically oriented party. It held power briefly from 1957 to 1963.

Progressive party Name adopted by three US political parties. 1. Party (also known as Bull Moose party) formed (1912) by Republicans disaffected by the conservative policies of Republican Pres. W. Taft. It arose from the National Republican Progressive League formed (1911) by Sen. R. La Follette, ran T. Roosevelt for president, and split the Republican vote, thereby helping W. Wilson to win the 1912 election. 2. Party formed (1924) by Sen. R. La Follette in opposition to the conservative policies of both Republican and Democratic parties. La Follette was defeated as its 1924 presidential candidate. 3. Party formed (1948) by dissident Democrats opposed to the policies of Democratic Pres. H. Truman. It called for a more cooperative policy toward Russia. H. Wallace, its 1948 presidential candidate, received only about 1,000,000 popular votes.

Prohibition In the US, an attempt (1920–33) to legally halt the manufacture, sale, and transportation of alcoholic beverages. The movement for Prohibition grew out of the temperance movements of the 19th and early 20th cents., such as the Prohibition party (q.v.) and Anti-Saloon League (q.v.), and was aided by a temporary prohibition law instituted during WW I to conserve grain. Prohibition went into force in many states, but it was adopted nationally with passage (1919) of the Volstead Act (q.v.) and ratification (1920) of the 18th Amendment. The program was a failure. Citizens found ways to find and consume liquor, notably in establishments called "speakeasies," and gangsters, among them A. Capone, became involved in the manufacture and sale of illegal liquor. Organized crime in the US flourished in the Prohibition era. Prohibition ended (1933) with ratification of the 21st Amendment, which repealed the 18th Amendment.

Prohibition party Minor US political party, founded (1869) to work for national prohibition of alcoholic beverages. From 1872 it sponsored a presidential candidate in every national election, but its influence actually declined during national prohibition (1920–33).

Prokofiev, Sergei Sergeyevich 1891–1953. Russian composer. He composed a large body of symphonic, operatic, and ballet music, but is probably known best for his orchestration of Peter and the Wolf.

Prokopovich, Feofan 1681–1736. Russian Orthodox prelate, theologian, and reformer. Cooperating with Peter the Great, he refashioned Orthodoxy as an arm of the czarist state, which endured until the 1917 Russian revolution.

proletariat The working class, without property and living entirely from the sale of their labor. In Marxist theory, the proletariat is believed to be created by the capitalist system. Marxists further hold that the proletariat would, by historical necessity, eventually resort to revolution to seize power from the capitalists.

Prometheus In Greek mythology, figure who stole fire from heaven and gave it to mankind. For this the gods chained him to a rock where an eagle perpetually fed on his liver. He was released by Hercules.

Propertius, Sextus 50?–15? BC. Roman elegiac poet, a contemporary of Ovid and Vergil. He wrote five books of poems imitating Alexandrian models.

prophet In the Old Testament, a Hebrew spiritual leader who gave guidance to God's people. The role of prophets as moral teachers outweighed their role in foretelling the future. The four major prophets were Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Their writings form a significant part of the Old Testament.

Protagoras *c*480–410 BC. Greek Sophist philosopher, adversary of Socrates. He promoted the slogan "Man is the measure of all things," i.e., that truth is subjective and relative to the individual.

protectionism System of protecting a nation's domestic industry by levying duty (tariffs) upon competing products imported from abroad. These duties increase the price of the imported goods by comparison with the domestically produced article. They, thus, foster home manufacturers and were imposed in England by Edward III as early as 1337. The first US protective tariff was enacted in 1816 and reached its highest point in US history after WW I. A movement away from protectionism began with British advocacy of free trade in the late 19th cent. and rose as industry in many countries matured. Pres. F. Roosevelt secured from Congress in 1934 the authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements lowering tariffs. Protectionism declined after WW II with the formation (1948) of GATT, the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade, and with the multilateral reductions negotiated in the 1960s, as well as with the creation of the European Common Market (1957).

protectorate In international relations, an arrangement whereby a stronger state undertakes to protect a weaker state, called a protectorate. Theoretically, the protectorate retains its sovereignty, unlike a colony.

Protectorate English government established (1653–59) after the English Civil War and the execution (1649) of Charles I. In 1649 England was declared a commonwealth under the rule of the Rump Parliament, although O. Cromwell, controlling the army, wielded real power. Cromwell dissolved the Rump Parliament (1653) and established the Nominated, or Barebone's, Parliament. After its failure he accepted the Instrument of Government (q.v.), by which he became (1653) lord protector of the commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland. From then until his death Cromwell was virtual dictator in England (ruling through a system of military districts), although he shared nominal power with a council of state and Parliament. In 1657 he accepted the Humble Petition and Advice (q.v.), which allowed him to choose his successor. After his death (1658) his son became lord protector. Cromwell's son resigned in 1659 and the Long Parliament was restored. It in turn brought Charles II (1660) to the throne and thus began the Restoration period.

Protestant Episcopal Church American Protestant denomination, dating from the 17th cent., when the Anglican church was established in America. The American Revolution (1775–83) caused great disorganization among the Anglican churches in the colonies and, after the war, these churches combined (1789) to form the Protestant Episcopal church, a separate entity within the Anglican Communion. It was again divided during the Civil War (1861–65) but reunited upon the cessation of hostilities.

Protestantism One of the three main branches of Christianity, with Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy. Protestantism grew out of the Reformation (q.v.) in the 16th cent., and there are numerous Protestant churches that grew out of the reform movement. The two main branches are Lutheranism and Calvinism (qq.v.). The characteristic doctrine of the original Protestant movement was justification by faith alone, not by church dispensations or by good works. Renewed emphasis on the teachings of the Bible and a general movement away from liturgy were also characteristic. Protestantism also evolved new forms of church polity, including Congregationalism, Presbyterianism, and Episcopalianism. In the years after the start of the Reformation, new Protestant churches sprang up and existing ones split into diverse sects. The 20th-cent. ecumenical movement (q.v.), however, has sought to bring about a reunification of churches. (See also Congregationalism, Presbyterianism, Protestant Episcopal church, Church of England, Methodism, Puritanism, Evangelicalism, Great Awakening, Baptists, Anabaptists, Pentecostal Church.)

Protestant Reformation See Reformation

Protestant Union Association (1608–21) of German Protestant princes. It was formed to prevent an imperial reimposition of Catholicism and went out of existence after the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War.

Proteus Legendary Greek "old man of the sea." He could assume any shape ("protean") but if held fast until he resumed his normal form, he was obliged to answer questions and foretell the future.

Protogenes *fl. c*300 BC. Greek painter, one of the most celebrated of Greek artists of antiquity. None of his paintings has survived.

Proudhon, Pierre Joseph 1809–65. French Socialist and theorist. His theory of "mutualism," in which social groups would bargain within the framework of agreed principles, greatly influenced later radical movements.

Proust, Marcel 1871–1922. French novelist. Author of a vast, panoramic, semi-autobiographical novel, Remembrance of Things Past, Proust is considered one of the greatest authors of the 20th cent.

Provençal Dialect of the Romance languages, once spoken in southern France and notable as the literary language of the medieval troubadors. It is also called langue d'oc.

Providence American city (pop. 571,300), capital and largest city of Rhode Island. It was founded (1636) by R. Williams.

Provisional Government Russian government formed after the fall of the czar (Mar., 1917). Headed by A. Kerensky, it governed Russia (Mar.–Oct.) until the October Revolution (q.v.).(See also Russian Revolution.)

Provisions of Oxford Governmental reforms imposed (1258) on English King Henry III by his barons. In need of money to pay for his unsuccessful foreign ventures, Henry convened the Mad Parliament (June 11, 1258) and was forced to accept reforms. Formulated by a special commission headed by S. de Montfort, the Provisions of Oxford included establishment of a 15-man council to advise the king, and reforms of local administration. These were supplemented by the Provisions of Westminster (q.v.). Henry later refused to abide by the provisions, however, and this resulted in the Barons' War (q.v.).

Prusa See Bursa

Prussia Former German state, and one of the most powerful German states, long regarded as the wellspring of German militarism. Its capital was Berlin. At its height it occupied much of north Germany and extended east into what is now Poland. The Teutonic Knights (q.v.) conquered the region (13th cent.), and in the 16th cent. Prussia proper (E. Prussia) passed to the electors of Brandenburg, though it remained under Polish suzerainty. Polish control was ended in 1660, during the time of Frederick William (the Great Elector). In 1701 the Holy Roman Emperor consented to creation of the Kingdom of Prussia, which included lands gained through expansion to the west. Thereafter Prussia continued to enlarge its domains and, under King Frederick William I (reigned 1713–40), important administrative reforms were effected and a strong army was created. The reign (1740–86) of Frederick II (the Great) brought Prussia to a position of power in Europe by victories in the War of the Austrian Succession and the Seven Years' War (qq.v.). Prussia also gained additional lands through the Partitions of Poland (q.v.). In the post-Napoleonic period in Europe, Prussia and Austria became rivals for control of the German Confederation (q.v.), which had been formed from the remnants of the then defunct Holy Roman Empire. Prussia sought to exclude Austria from the confederation and to unite the other states into a German kingdom under its control. This goal was ultimately achieved (1871) through the efforts of Prussian statesman O. von Bismarck and through Prussian victories in two wars that he helped to provoke, the Austro-Prussian War (1866) and the Franco-Prussian War (1871). Prussian king William I was crowned emperor of Germany and in subsequent years Prussia retained control of the empire. Prussia ceased to exist as a political entity in 1934, when A. Hitler formally abolished the German states. (See also Germany [1815–71].)

Pruth, Treaty of Agreement (July 23, 1711) between Russian czar Peter the Great and the Ottoman Empire, following Peter's defeat in the third Russo-Turkish War (1710–11). Peter was obliged to relinquish Azov and demilitarize other forts.

Prynne, William 1600–69. English Puritan pamphleteer. His attack on the immorality of the theater led to persecution by the government of King Charles I. An implacable opponent of Archbishop Laud, he came back into favor at the Restoration.

Przhevalsky, Nikolai Mikhailovich 1839–88. Russian explorer. His series of expeditions to Mongolia, Tibet, and Singkiang greatly increased the knowledge of the geography and natural history of these areas.

Psamtik d. 609 BC. Egyptian pharaoh, (663–609 BC), founder of the 26th dynasty. He reunited Egypt, ended Assyrian rule, and opened the country to Greek influence.

Pseudo-Dionysius See Dionysius the Areopagite

Psyche Mythological Greek maiden loved by Cupid. Psyche was eventually granted immortality as his consort. From the 5th cent. BC, she came to symbolize the soul.

Ptah ⟨Phthah⟩ Ancient Egyptian god. Originally a local god of Memphis, he came to be worshiped as a creator god corresponding to the Greek Hephaestus.

Ptolemaic system Geocentric cosmological system devised (2d cent. AD) by Ptolemy to explain the apparent movement of celestial bodies against the background of the fixed stars. The theory held sway until the development (16th cent.) of the heliocentric system devised by Copernicus.

Ptolemy ⟨Claudius Ptolemaeus⟩ fl. 2d cent. AD. Ancient Alexandrian astronomer, mathematician, and geographer. He formulated the geocentric Ptolemaic system. In his Geography he erred in calculating the circumference of the earth—a mistake that led C. Columbus to believe he could easily reach Asia by sailing west.

Ptolemy I d. 283 BC. Egyptian king (305–285 BC). A Macedonian, Ptolemy was one of Alexander the Great's most successful generals. After Alexander's death (323 BC), he quarreled with other generals (Diadochi, q.v.) over the empire's division, and became satrap of Egypt. He engaged in warfare to protect and expand his holdings. Though defeated by Demetrius in a battle at Salamis (306 BC), he named himself Egypt's king and soter (savior) the following year. He established Alexandria as a center of culture and commerce, founded its famed library, planned Egypt's government, and began the Ptolemaic dynasty. He abdicated in favor of his son (285 BC).

Ptolemy II ⟨Philadelphus, Ptolemy II⟩ *c*308–246? BC. Ancient Egyptian king (285–246 BC), successor to his father Ptolemy I. He helped make Alexandria the center of Hellenistic culture, built the city's famous museum, and commissioned the translation of the Hebrew Bible into the Greek Septuagint.

Ptolemy III ⟨Euergetes, Ptolemy III⟩ d. 222? BC. Ancient Egyptian king (246–222? BC), successor to his father, Ptolemy II. He reunited Egypt and Cyrenaica, warred with Syria, and established Egyptian naval supremacy in the eastern Mediterranean.

Ptolemy IV ⟨Philopater, Ptolemy IV⟩ d. 205 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (221–205 BC), successor to his father, Ptolemy III. Though he defeated the Seleucids in Syria (217 BC), the loss of Syrian lands and internal rebellions began under his rule. He was a debauched man who ruled through favorites and had many relatives murdered.

Ptolemy V ⟨Epiphanes, Ptolemy V⟩ d. 181? BC. Ancient Egyptian king (205–181? BC), successor to his father Ptolemy IV. During his reign Egypt's Levantine possessions were lost in disastrous wars but peace was finally concluded with his marriage to Cleopatra, daughter of Syrian king Antiochus III. The Rosetta Stone concerns his accession to the throne.

Ptolemy VI ⟨Philometer, Ptolemy VI⟩ d. 145 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (180–145 BC), successor to his father, Ptolemy V. Obliged to share power with his brother, later Ptolemy VII, he helped bring about the first intervention of Rome in Egyptian affairs.

Ptolemy VII ⟨Physcon, Ptolemy VII⟩ d. 116? BC. Ancient Egyptian king (145–116? BC). Usurping the throne from his brother, he ruled with great cruelty, provoking revolts. He drove the scholars from Alexandria.

Ptolemy VIII ⟨Lathyrus, Ptolemy VIII⟩ d. 81 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (116–81 BC), successor to his father, Ptolemy VII. He was driven (107) from the throne and returned (88) only after expelling his brother, Ptolemy IX Alexander, whose corule his mother had compelled him to accept.

Ptolemy IX ⟨Alexander, Ptolemy I⟩ d. 88 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (107–88 BC). With the help of his mother, he supplanted his brother, Ptolemy VIII, until finally defeated by the latter in a civil war.

Ptolemy X d. 80 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (80 BC). He became ruler upon his marriage to the widow of his predecessor, Ptolemy VIII. He murdered her and was in turn murdered by a mob.

Ptolemy XI d. 51 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (80–51 BC), an illegitimate son of Ptolemy VIII. His misrule brought about his expulsion and he was restored only by force of Roman arms.

Ptolemy XIII d. 44 BC. Last Macedonian king of Egypt (47–44 BC). Married to his sister Cleopatra by J. Caesar, he was murdered at her order in favor of her own son.

Ptolemy XIV 47–30 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (44–30 BC). He was the son of J. Caesar by Cleopatra (daughter of Ptolemy XI), and coruler with his mother until he was killed by Octavian. Following his death, Egypt became a Roman province.

Public Safety, Committee of See Committee of Public Safety

Public Weal, League of Alliance of French nobles (1465) against French king Louis XI. Led by Duke

Philip the Good of Burgundy, it forced concessions from Louis, but Louis eventually used diplomatic means to overcome the league.

Puccini, Giacomo 1858–1924. Italian operatic composer. His major operas, all tragic love stories centering on feminine protagonists, include La Bohème, La Tosca, and Madama Butterfly.

Pudovkin, Vsevolod Illarionovich 1893–1953. Russian film director. A pioneer of film techniques in such classic films as Mother, he also wrote the books Film Techniques and Film Acting.

Puebla, Battle and Siege of Two engagements at Puebla, Mexico, during the French campaign to establish Austrian archduke Ferdinand Maximilian as emperor. In the first battle (May 5, 1862), French forces of 7,500 were thrown back with more than 400 casualties by a defending army of 12,000 Mexicans. In the second battle (May 17, 1863), the city surrendered to a larger French force after the French defeated a Mexican relief column.

Pueblo* incident Seizure of the US Navy intelligence ship Pueblo and 83 crewmen off North Korea (Jan. 23, 1968). The US exerted diplomatic efforts to free the crewmen, contending that the vessel had been in international waters. The crewmen were not released by North Korea until Dec. 23, 1968.

Pueblo Indians American Indian tribes inhabiting compact adobe or stone villages in the southwestern US. Of diverse tribal and linguistic backgrounds, they have similar, settled cultures based on agriculture.

Pueblo Rebellion Pueblo Indian rebellion (1680) against Spanish rule in New Mexico. The Pueblo rose against enforced Christianization (Aug. 10, 1680), expelled the Spaniards, and restored ancestor worship. They retained their independence until reconquered in 1692.

Puerto Rico ⟨Porto Rico⟩ West Indian commonwealth (pop 3,187,600) in union with the US. It was discovered by C. Columbus (1493) and settled by Ponce de León (1508). During the Spanish-American War, American troops occupied Puerto Rico, and it was ceded to the US (1898). The Jones Act (1917) gave the Puerto Ricans US citizenship. A movement for independence led to an assassination attempt on President H. Truman (1950), but a 1967 plebiscite elected to keep commonwealth status.

Pueyrredon, Juan Martín de 1776–1850. Argentine general and statesman. As supreme director of the United Provinces of La Plata (1816–19), he provided key support of J. de San Martín in the conquest of Chile (1817).

Pufendorf, Samuel, Freiherr von 1632–94. German jurist and historian. His work De Jure Naturae at Gentium maintained that relations between nations ought to be governed by natural law, not by positive law enacted by man.

Pugachev, Emelian Ivanovich 1726–75. Russian leader of the peasant rebellion of 1773–74. Pretending to be Czar Peter III and to have escaped assassination, he led a formidable but ultimately unsuccessful attempt to abolish serfdom.

Pulaski, Casimir ⟨Pulaski, Kazimierz⟩ *c*1748–79. Polish aristocrat, patriot, and American Revolutionary leader. Unsuccessful in preventing the First Partition of Poland (1772), he came to America. During the American Revolution he commanded American cavalry with distinction but was killed at Savannah.

Pulaski, Kazimierz See Pulaski, Casimir

Pulitzer, Joseph 1847–1911. Hungarian-born American newspaper publisher. He revitalized old newspapers, pioneered modern journalism, and endowed both the Columbia University School of Journalism and the Pulitzer prizes.

Pulitzer prizes Annual awards for excellence in American literature, music, and journalism. Endowed by J. Pulitzer, they have been awarded annually since 1917.

Pullman Strike US labor dispute (1894). Workers of the Pullman Palace Car Company in Chicago struck (May 11, 1894) to protest a 25 percent wage cut, brought on by the Panic of 1893. The company refused arbitration and that brought in the national union, the American Railway Union, led by E. Debs. Debs called a nationwide boycott and thereby effectively shut down Chicago's rail traffic. However, Pres. G. Cleveland sent 2,000 federal troops to Chicago and broke the strike after considerable violence.

Punctation of Olmütz See Erfurt Parliament; Revolutions of 1848.

Punic War Three major wars between Rome and Carthage resulting in the subjugation of Carthage and Rome's acquisition of territories beyond the Italian peninsula. 1. First ~. This war (264–241 BC) was brought on by the growing commercial rivalry between Rome and Carthage. Its immediate cause was a conflict between the cities of Messina and Syracuse, on Sicily. Both Carthage and Rome responded to Messina's request for aid, and soon after were at war with one another. The Romans built a great fleet, defeated the Carthaginians at the Battle of Mylae (260), and launched an ill-fated invasion of Africa in which the commander, Regulus, was captured (255) by Greek mercenaries. On Sicily, the Carthaginian commander Hamilcar Barca succeeded in thwarting the Romans' attempt at decisive victory. However, the Roman fleet finally destroyed the Carthaginian fleet in the naval battle of Aegates (241) and thereby forced the Carthaginians to accept peace. Rome gained Carthaginian territories on Sicily. Not long after, Rome also annexed Sardinia and Corsica. 2. Second ~. War (218–201 BC) between Rome and Carthage, sparked by the Carthaginians' conquest of Saguntum, a Spanish city allied with Rome. In the years after the first war, Carthage had greatly expanded its holdings in Spain. With the outbreak of war, the great Carthaginian general Hannibal led his forces on the now-famous march from Spain, across the Alps, and into north Italy. He won notable victories at Ticinus (218), Trebia (218), Lake Trasimenus (217), and Cannae (216), but failed to take Rome itself. Macedon, a Carthaginian ally, was also defeated in the First Macedonian War (q.v.). Although Hannibal gained control of much of southern Italy, Carthage failed to provide him needed support. Finally, the Roman invasion of North Africa by Scipio Africanus Major (204) forced Hannibal to return to Carthage. He was defeated at the Battle of Zama (202), and Carthage itself fell (201). Carthage had to give up its navy and its Spanish territories and never again seriously threatened Roman military superiority. 3. Third ~. War (149–146 BC) between Rome and Carthage, resulting from continuing commercial rivalry and efforts by the Roman, Cato the Elder, to bring about the complete destruction of Carthage. Rome finally declared war and soon after laid siege to Carthage. The Carthaginians refused to surrender, and the Romans, led by Scipio Africanus Minor, were forced to fight in the streets of the city to gain control of it. They then completely destroyed Carthage and organized Carthaginian domains into the Roman province of Africa.

Punjab Historic region of northwest India whose river-delta areas were sites of prehistoric and early Aryan civilizations, The area was conquered by Alexander the Great, and by the Muslims (8th cent.), who converted western Punjab to Islam. The Punjab flourished under the Mogul empire until the 18th cent., when the Sikhs took control. The British made it a province in 1849. In the 1947 partition of India, western Punjab became part of Pakistan, and eastern Punjab became part of India.

Purandhar, Treaty of Treaty (Mar. 1, 1776) between the Maratha of India and the government of the British East India Company, in Calcutta. The company abandoned support of the Maratha pretender Raghunath Rao (d. 1783) but retained Salsette Island. The company subsequently disavowed the treaty, and the Maratha Wars (q.v.) were resumed.

Purcell, Henry 1659–95. English composer and organist. Noted for his opera Dido and Aeneas and his fine religious and ceremonial music, he is considered the outstanding influence in English music before Handel.

Pure Land Buddhism School of Mahayana Buddhism, one of the most popular in East Asia. It began in China as early as the 4th cent. and had spread to Japan by the 13th cent.

purge trials Series of political trials (1936–38) in the Soviet Union. The first (Aug., 1936) was held to try several prominent leaders, including G. Zinoviev and L. Kamenev, of complicity in the assassination (Dec., 1934) of S. Kirov, a Communist leader. In fact, it was held to eliminate opponents or potential rivals to the rule of J. Stalin. Subsequent trials (Jan., 1937; Mar., 1938) continued the process, by which Stalin virtually swept away all the old Bolshevik leaders and consolidated his power over every facet of Soviet life, including the Communist party. However, by crippling the party apparatus and eliminating many of Russia's top military leaders, he left Russia vulnerable in the face of the rising power of A. Hitler in Germany. In later years (after Stalin's death) the cases against the trial victims were shown to be complete fabrications.

Puritanism English religious movement (16th and 17th cents.) that sought to reform the Church of England. It arose during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I, and sought to purify (hence its name) the English church of Catholic and political elements. Embracing Calvinism and the authority of the Scriptures, the Puritan movement eventually split into several groups, including the Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Separatists, and Independents. Under King James I, the Presbyterians rose to prominence but were unable to promote changes within the Church of England at the Hampton Court Conference (1604). Repression of the Puritans led to the Pilgrim emigration to America (1620) aboard the Mayflower (q.v.). The Puritan movement in England received a further setback with adoption of the repressive Clarendon Code (q.v.), aimed at dissenting religious groups. In New England the Puritans established their principles in the Cambridge Platform (q.v.) of 1648, and flourished under the leadership of such men as R. Williams, C. Mather, and I. Mather. By the end of the 17th cent. Puritanism had largely ceased to exist as a movement, but its values of hard work, discipline, education, and thrift had an immense and lasting effect on the development of both English and American society.

Puritan Revolution See English Civil War

Pusey, Edward Bouverie 1800–82. English theologian and Anglican churchman. With J. Newman he was the principal leader of the Oxford Movement (q.v.).

Pushkin, Aleksandr Sergeyevich 1799–1837. Russian poet. Exemplifying the Romantic writer (he was killed in a duel), he is considered one of the greatest of Russian writers, and is noted for such works as the verse novel Eugene Onegin.

Putnam, George Palmer 1814–72. American publisher. He founded (1866) the publishing firm of G.P. Putnam's Sons.

Putnam, Israel 1718–90. American Revolutionary general. During Pontiac's Rebellion (q.v.) he relieved Pontiac's siege of Detroit (1764). During the American Revolution he fought at Bunker Hill. He was defeated by the British on Long Island (1776) and on the Hudson (1777).

Putnam, Rufus 1738–1824. American Revolutionary officer, cousin of I. Putnam. He distinguished himself during the American Revolution, helped secure passage of the Northwest Ordinance (1787), and, as a member of the Ohio Company, helped to settle Ohio.

Putney Debates See Levelers

Pydna, Battle of Roman victory (168 BC) over the Macedonians at Pydna, Greece, in the Third Macedonian War. Roman Gen. Lucius Aemilius Paullus routed Macedonian forces and put their king, Perseus, to flight. After the victory, the Romans divided Macedonia into four republics.

Pygmalion Legendary Greek king. He fell in love with the statue of a woman (which one version says he sculpted). He then prayed to Aphrodite, who brought the statue to life.

Pylos Harbor in southern Greece. Home of King Nestor, it was the site of an Athenian victory over Sparta (425 BC) and of the Battle of Navarino (1827).

Pym, John 1583?–1643. English statesman. A Puritan, he gave a notable speech (1640) enumerating popular grievances, in the Short Parliament. He was one of the leaders in the Long Parliament whom King Charles I attempted to arrest (1642) in the period leading to the English Civil War.

pyramids Great stone structures built by various ancient peoples. The best-known pyramids are the Egyptian, especially the three great pyramids at Giza (q.v.), built during the 3d millennium BC (4th–6th dynasties) as the burial places for the pharaohs.

Pyramids, battle of the Battle fought near Giza (July 21, 1798) between the 36,000-man French expeditionary force under Napoleon I and a 40,000-man Egyptian army under Murad Bey. The French defeated and dispersed the Egyptians and thus gained access to Cairo.

Pyramus and Thisbe Legendary Babylonian lovers whose tragic tale was recounted by Ovid in his Metamorphoses. Frightened by a lion at a trysting place, Thisbe fled, dropping her veil. The lion seized the veil and covered it with blood from his recent prey. Pyramus, finding the veil, thought Thisbe dead, and mortally wounded himself. Thisbe returned to find Pyramus, and in grief, killed herself.

Pyrenees, Peace of the Treaty (Nov. 7, 1659) ending hostilities between France and Spain, which had been renewed during the Fronde of the Princes. Spain ceded lands in Flanders, accepted a border with France at the Pyrenees, and betrothed the daughter of King Philip IV to French king Louis XIV. The treaty is generally thought to mark France's rise as Europe's dominant power.

Pyrrho *c*360–270 BC. Greek skeptical philosopher. He held that nothing can definitely be known and hence the search for truth is vain. Pyrrhonism, or absolute skepticism, thus derives from him.

Pyrrhus *c*318–272 BC. King of Epirus. Pyrrhus was established as coruler of Epirus by Macedonian king Demetrius I. He was overthrown and sent as hostage to Egyptian king Ptolemy I, who befriended him and restored him to his kingdom. Pyrrhus fought costly wars against Macedon and Rome. Although he defeated the Romans at Heraclea (280 BC) and Ausculum (279 BC), the great losses incurred gave rise to the term "Pyrrhic victory." He successfully aided Sicily against Carthage and again defeated Macedonia (273 BC), but his attempts to subdue Sparta led to his defeat. He fled to Argos, where he was pursued by a mob and killed.

Pythagoras *c*582–*c*507 BC. Greek philosopher and mathematician. Little is known of Pythagoras' life, and none of his writings has survived. However, it is ascertained that he founded a combination school and society at Crotona, Italy, that had great influence on Greek and Roman thought. Pythagoras and his school taught that all relationships could be expressed in numbers, and that numbers were the true essence of life. Many theories developed by the Pythagoreans are still employed today in geometry. Philosophically, the Pythagoreans believed in the transmigration of souls, and that the living of a good life would entitle one to a higher rank on the next turn of the "wheel of birth."

Pythagorean school See Pythagoras

Pytheas fl. 4th cent. BC Greek navigator and geographer who explored the western coastline of Europe, who was the first Greek to visit the British Isles, and who may have sailed as far north as Iceland.

Pythian games Ancient Greek games. They originally featured musical contests in honor of Apollo at Delphi; athletic contests were added in imitation of the Olympic games after 582 BC.

Pythias See Damon and Pythias

Q

Qaddafi, Muammar al- 1942–. Radical Arab nationalist, Libyan revolutionist and dictator (1969–). He led the military coup (Sept., 1969) to overthrow King Idris I, and set himself up as ruler of Libya. His reign has been marked by anti-Western policies, the closing of US bases in Libya (1970), government confiscation of Italian and Jewish property (1970), nationalization of foreign-owned oil facilities (1973), a proposed union with Egypt (1973), and then border wars with Egypt (1977). Qaddafi's support for Arab terrorist groups, such as the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization), and Muslim revolutionaries, such as Ayatollah Khomeini, has led to the growing isolation of Libya.

Qatar Small oil-rich Arab state on the Persian Gulf, inhabited primarily by Wahabi Muslims. Its capital is Doha. First mentioned in the 10th cent., Qatar was ruled by the Āl-Thānī dynasty from 1868 until the 1970s. Great Britain made Qatar a dependency in 1916. Oil was discovered in the 1940s, and Qatar became independent in 1971.

Quadruple Alliance 1. Alliance (1718) formed by Austria, France, Great Britain, and The Netherlands against Spain. The alliance was established after Spanish king Philip V attempted to overturn the terms of the Peace of Utrecht (q.v.) by seizing Sardinia and Sicily. Austrian forces landed in Sicily, and British and French forces advanced into Spain. Philip was forced, by the Treaty of the Hague (1720), to abandon his claims in Italy, and the peace settlements made at Utrecht were renegotiated. 2. Alliance (Nov. 20, 1815) formed by Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, and Russia after their defeat of Napoleon. The alliance was made to enforce the conditions of the Treaty of Paris of 1815 and to prevent further French military adventures. In 1818 France was admitted to the alliance. Great Britain gradually turned away from continental affairs and participation in the alliance. 3. Alliance (1834) formed by France, Great Britain, Portugal, and Spain to support the Spanish constitutionalists and Queen Isabella II against the Carlists in the First Carlist War (1833–39). The alliance was effectively crippled by the Affair of the Spanish Marriages (q.v.) in 1846, which led to a serious dispute between France and Great Britain.

Quakers See Society of Friends

Quantrill, William Clarke 1837–65. Confederate guerrilla leader in the American Civil War. He led a band of marauders in Missouri and Kansas and was responsible for the ruthless pillaging (Aug. 21, 1863) of Lawrence, Kansas, in which some 150 townspeople were killed.

quantum theory In physics, the theory that energy consists of emissions of discrete particles, or quanta. Pioneered by M. Planck and N. Bohr, the theory is used to explain the behavior of particles on the atomic and subatomic levels and is an essential theory of modern physics.

"quarrel of the ancients and the moderns" See Perrault, Charles

Quartering Act British parliamentary act passed (Mar., 1765) to defray costs of defending the colonies. It forced the American colonials to pay for British troops stationed in the colonies. The law was bitterly resented because it was enacted without approval of the colonial legislatures. It was allowed to lapse in 1770, but another Quartering Act was passed (June 2, 1774) after the Boston Tea Party.

Quasimodo, Salvatore 1901–68. Italian poet and writer, a master of both social and lyrical poetry. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1959.

Quebec Canadian province (pop. 6,325,200). First discovered and explored (1534–41) by J. Cartier, and later by S. de Champlain, the region, named New France, became a French colony (1663). The British gained control of it by the Treaty of Paris (1763), and many Loyalists settled there during and after the American Revolution. In 1791, the area now known as Ontario was made a separate colony called Upper Canada, and Quebec became known as Lower Canada. Although Quebec and Ontario were subsequently reunited (1841), they entered the confederation of Canada as separate provinces (1867).

Quebec Canadian city (pop. 542,000), capital of Quebec province. First settled (1608) by S. de Champlain, it was occupied briefly by the British (1629–32), and became the capital of New France (1663). It was captured by the British (1759) after the historic battle on the Plains of Abraham, and was unsuccessfully attacked (1775) by B. Arnold during the American Revolution. It was the site of the Quebec Conferences (q.v.).

Quebec Act British parliamentary law (June 22, 1774) establishing a permanent government for Canada. The act replaced the temporary administration set up by the Proclamation of 1763, extended Quebec's territory south to the Ohio River, and provided for religious tolerance of Roman Catholics. While the act kept Canada loyal to Britain, it enraged American colonists and contributed to the outbreak of the American Revolution.

Quebec campaign Unsuccessful military expedition (1775–76) by the American colonials against Canada during the American Revolution. Two American contingents were sent against Canada with the ultimate goal of taking Quebec. The force under Gen. B. Montgomery first captured Montreal (Nov., 1775). It later joined a force under Col. B. Arnold in an unsuccessful attack on the strongly fortified Quebec (Dec. 31, 1775). After Montgomery was killed and Arnold was wounded, the Americans broke off the attack. In May, 1776, American forces were withdrawn from Canada.

Quebec Conference 1. Meeting in Quebec, Canada (Oct. 10–27, 1864) that laid the foundations for an independent dominion of Canada. Thirty-three delegates from the various provinces of British North America drew up a draft constitution called the Quebec Resolutions, or Seventy-two Resolutions. This formed the basis of the 1867 British North America Act (q.v.), creating modern independent Canada. 2. Conference (Aug. 11–24, 1943) attended by US president F. Roosevelt, British prime minister W. Churchill, Canadian prime minister W. Mackenzie King, and Chinese foreign minister T. Soong. The conference formulated tentative plans for allied landings in Europe. 3. Meeting between US president F. Roosevelt and British prime minister W. Churchill (Sept. 11–16, 1944) at which strategy for defeating Germany was discussed. It was decided to advance against Germany on two fronts rather than make a single effort to take Berlin.

Queen Anne's War American Colonial war (1702–13) between France and England, the American counterpart of the War of the Spanish Succession. The French and their Indian allies waged a bitter war, but the British emerged victorious. The British captured and burned Spanish-held St. Augustine, Florida (1702), the French massacred townspeople of Deerfield, Massachusetts (1704), the British captured the French colony of Acadia (1710), and then unsuccessfully attempted to take Quebec (1711). The war was ended by the Treaty of Utrecht (q.v.) and Britain gained Newfoundland, Hudson Bay, and Acadia.

Queipo de Llano, Gonzalo See Fifth column

Quesnay, François 1694–1774. French economist and physician. A pioneer in the development of economic theory, he was the leader of the physiocrats (q.v.).

Quesnel, Pasquier 1634–1719. French theologian and exponent of Jansenism. One of the principal Jansenist leaders, he was exiled and briefly imprisoned. His teachings were ultimately condemned by Pope Clement XI's papal bull Unigenitus (1713).

Quetzalcoatl Ancient Mexican god. Represented as a feathered serpent, he was involved in the cult of human sacrifice. Revered as a god who gave the people corn, weaving, and the calendar, he figured in Aztec and Toltec cultures.

Quevedo y Villegas, Francisco Gómez de 1580–1645. Spanish poet and writer. He was a brilliant satirist as well as a writer of plays and novels.

Quezon City Capital city (pop. 994,700), since 1948, of the Republic of the Philippines. Adjacent to Manila, it was developed as a capital city and named after M. Quezon.

Quezon y Molina, Manuel Luis 1878–1944. First president of the Commonwealth of the Philippines (1935–44). Beginning as a rebel against American rule, he turned to tireless lobbying and was instrumental in obtaining the US legislation establishing the commonwealth.

Quiberon Bay, Battle of British naval victory (Nov. 20, 1759) over the French during the Seven Years' War, at Quiberon Bay, Brittany. The decisive British victory forced the French to abandon their plans to invade Scotland.

quietism Type of religious mysticism based on the belief that total passivity of the soul and suppression of all activity, even prayer, can bring communion with God. This type of mysticism is characteristic of a number of religious traditions, notably Hinduism (q.v.) and Islamic Sufism (q.v.). In the West the doctrine was associated with a Spanish priest, M. de Molinos, and a French mystic, Mme. J. Guyon, both of whom were active in the latter half of the 17th cent.

Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur Thomas 1863–1944. English man of letters. He edited The Oxford

Book of English Verse and other anthologies and wrote novels, criticism, essays, and poetry.

Quimby, Phineas Parkhurst 1802–66. American mental healer. Originally a clockmaker, he possessed hypnotic powers and became prominent as a mental healer. One of his patients was M. Eddy. She later founded Christian Science, but denied that Quimby's ideas influenced its principles.

Quincy, Josiah 1744–75. American pamphleteer. Closely associated with J. Adams, he was influential in rallying the American colonies against British policy. He died at sea after pleading the American case in England.

Quine, Willard Van Orman 1908–. American philosopher and mathematical logician. He refined modern philosophical concepts dealing with language as a logical system.

Quinisext Council ⟨Council in Trullo⟩ Synod of the Orthodox Eastern church convened in Constantinople (692) by Byzantine emperor Justinian II. Pope Sergius I refused to ratify its canons on behalf of the Western church, protesting in particular those allowing clerical marriage below the rank of bishop.

Quintilian ⟨Marcus Fabius Quintilianus⟩ AD *c*35–*c*95. Roman writer and rhetorician. A respected teacher of rhetoric, he wrote the Institutio Oratoria, a major study of rhetoric. His writings were influential in Renaissance times.

Quirino, Elpidio 1890–1956. Filipino statesman. He served as secretary and aide to M. Quezon, and fought in the underground during WW II. Elected (1946) vice-president under M. Roxas, he succeeded Roxas as president of the Philippines (1948–53).

Quirinus Ancient Roman god. In early times, he was a god of war, but by republican times he had become associated with the legendary founder of Rome, Romulus.

Quisling, Vidkun 1887–1945. Norwegian puppet prime minister (1940–45). A fascist, he served as prime minister under the German occupation of Norway during WW II. His name became a byword for "traitor." He was tried and executed after the war.

Quito Capital city (pop. 742,900) of Ecuador. Conquered by the Spaniards in 1534, Quito is noted for its balmy climate and elevation of nearly 10,000 ft. It is the cultural and educational center of the country.

Quran See Koran

Qutb ud-Din See Delhi Sultanate

R

Ra ⟨Re⟩ Egyptian god of the sun and creation. Depicted as sailing across the sky in a celestial barge, he fought the powers of darkness each night.

Rabelais, François *c*1490–1553. French Renaissance humanist and satirist. A learned monk and physician, he celebrated Renaissance ideals in his great satirical work Gargantua and Pantagruel.

Rachel In biblical history one of the four Jewish matriarchs. She was the daughter of Laban. Jacob sought to marry her for seven years, only to be tricked into marriage with her uncomely sister Leah. After another seven years, Jacob finally won Rachel, who bore him Joseph and Benjamin.

Rachmaninov, Sergei Vasilyevich ⟨Rakhmaninov, Sergius Vassilievich⟩ 1873–1943. Russian composer and piano virtuoso. The last great exponent of Russian romanticism, he wrote his best works for the piano. He spent his later life in the US, an expatriate from the Russian Revolution.

Racine, Jean Baptiste 1639–99. French poet and dramatist, considered a master of French classical tragedy. After a bitter rivalry with J. Molière and P. Corneille, he wrote his greatest works, Britannicus, Bérénice, Bajazet, Iphigénie, and Phèdre. In 1677, he left the theater, married, and became historiographer to Louis XIV. He later wrote two dramas, Esther and Athalie, at the request of Mme. de Maintenon.

Radcliffe-Brown, Alfred Reginald 1881–1955. British social anthropologist who helped establish a scientific basis for social anthropology. He carried out his major studies on the Andaman Islanders.

Radek, Karl Bernhardovich 1885–1939? Russian Communist politician and journalist. A prominent leader of the Comintern, he was a victim of the Stalinist purge trials (q.v.).

Radetzky, Joseph, Count 1766–1858. Austrian field marshal. He served Austria in wars against the Turks during the 1780s and in most all the wars against France during the era of the French Revolution and Empire.

Radhakrishnan, Sarvepalli 1888–1975. Indian philosopher and president of India (1962–67). He also served as Indian ambassador and vice-president (1952–62). Primarily an academic, he tried to harmonize Hindu philosophy with modern thought.

Radical Republicans Wing of the Republican party during the American Civil War and Reconstruction (q.v.) periods. Radicals demanded firm adherence to antislavery doctrines and advocated harsh treatment of the South after the war. Under leaders such as T. Stevens, C. Sumner, and B. Wade in Congress, the Radicals passed much important Reconstruction legislation. At the height of their power, they even tried to impeach President A. Johnson (1868). They have been criticized by historians but were also the only consistent upholders of the rights of blacks. They worked for passage of such key legislation as the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Radishchev, Aleksandr Nikolayevich 1749–1802. Russian aristocrat, writer, and liberal. He was exiled to Siberia for denouncing serfdom in what was ostensibly a travel journal, A Journey from St. Petersburg to Moscow, published in 1790.

Radom, Confederation of See Confederation of Radom

Radowitz, Joseph Maria von 1797–1853. Prussian statesman and general. He worked for a German federation under Prussian leadership some 20 years before O. Bismarck brought it into being.

Radzin, Treaty of See Russo-Turkish Wars (1)

Radziwill Important Polish-Lithuanian princely family that has played a significant role in the history of both countries since the 15th cent. The first prominent Radziwill became palatine of Vilnius (1492), and others followed him in the post. Several Radziwills in the 16th cent. promoted Calvinism in Poland, but their descendants returned to Catholicism during the Catholic Reformation. In the 18th cent., the Radziwills supported the Saxon monarchs in struggles over the Polish crown.

Raetia See Rhaetia

Raffles, Sir Thomas Stamford 1781–1826. British colonial administrator. He was one of the founders of Britain's empire in the Far East and acquired Singapore for Britain in 1819.

Raghunath Rao See Purandhar, Treaty of

Rahman, Tunku Abdul See Abdul Rahman, Tunku

Raid of Ruthven See Ruthven, William, 4th lord of Ruthven

Raikes, Robert 1735–1811. British philanthropist and newspaper publisher. He started a Sunday school in Gloucester, England, to educate poor children, and sparked a nationwide movement to provide such schooling.

Rainalducci, Pietro ⟨Nicholas V⟩ d. 1333. Italian churchman and antipope (1328–30). Holy Roman Emperor Louis IV captured Rome and declared Pope John XXII, residing at Avignon, deposed after John had excommunicated him. Louis then named Rainalducci pope as Nicholas V, but Rainalducci soon submitted to John XXII.

Rainbow Division US 42d Infantry Division. It was the first US combat division to arrive in France in WW I, where it distinguished itself (though with heavy losses).

Rainier III See Monaco

Rais, Gilles de Laval, seigneur de See Retz, Gilles de Laval, seigneur de

Rajagopalachari, Chakravarti 1879–1972. Indian political leader and last governor general of India (1948–50). A disciple of M. Gandhi, he cooperated with Britain once Indian independence was assured. He founded the Swatantra (Freedom) party in 1959.

Rajputs People of northwest India who traditionally considered themselves members of the Hindu warrior class. The Rajputs were organized in a clan system and were powerful from the 7th cent. to the early 17th cent., when they became subjects of the Moguls. They rose again briefly (18th cent.) after the fall of the Moguls, only to be subjugated by the Marathas and then the British.

Rakhmaninov, Sergius Vassilievich See Rachmaninov, Sergei Vasilyevich

Rákóczy, Francis II 1676–1735. Prince of Transylvania and Hungarian nationalist leader. During the War of the Spanish Succession, he led a nearly successful Hungarian rebellion (1703) against the Hapsburg rulers.

Rákóczy, George I 1591–1648. Prince of Transylvania and Hungarian nationalist leader. Pursuing an anti-Hapsburg policy, he successfully invaded Hungary and thereby gained concessions and religious liberty for the Hungarians.

Rákosi, Mátyás 1892–1971. Hungarian Communist leader. He came to Budapest as Communist party secretary with the Soviet army in 1944 and consistently followed a Stalinist line, which made him unpopular in Hungary. In and out of office as prime minister (1952–56), he fled the country just prior to the Hungarian Revolution of 1956.

Rakovsky, Khristian Georgievich 1873–? Russian Communist leader and diplomat. He was Soviet ambassador in both London and Paris but was ousted from the Communist party (1927) for opposing Stalin. He was tried during the purge trials and was imprisoned.

Ralegh, Sir Walter See Raleigh, Sir Walter

Raleigh, Sir Walter ⟨Ralegh, ~⟩ 1552?–1618. English courtier, adventurer, and poet. A favorite of Elizabeth I, he organized the ill-fated Roanoke Colony (q.v.) and was involved in other unsuccessful colonizing ventures, which nevertheless resulted in the introduction of potatoes and tobacco to Europe. He also led an expedition to South America in search of El Dorado (q.v). He fell out of royal favor on the accession of James I and was eventually beheaded.

Rama See Chakkri dynasty

Ramakrishna 1836–86. Indian religious seer and mystic, founder of worldwide religious movement based on his belief in a universal religion.

Ramanuja 1017–1137 BC. Hindu religious leader. Rejecting concepts of an exclusive impersonal spirit, he promoted a form of Hinduism emphasizing personal devotion to Vishnu, and was thus influential in the Vaishnava sect.

Ramathibodi I See Rama Tiboti

Rama Tiboti ⟨Ramathibodi I⟩ 1312–69. Thai warrior-king and lawgiver. In 1350, he established a unified Thai state (Siam), which his descendants, the Ayutthaya dynasty, ruled until 1767. He also drafted a legal code that was not changed significantly until the 19th cent.

Ramayana With the Mahabharata, one of the two most important hundu Sanskrit texts. Written *c*300 BC it chronicles the life of Rama, the ideal man and king.

Rambouillet, Catherine de Vivonne, marquise de 1588–1665. French noblewoman and founder of the first great Parisian literary salon. She received the most distinguished writers and poets of her day and exercised a profound influence on literary taste.

Rameau, Jean Philippe 1683–1764. French composer and music theorist. He wrote influential treatises on harmony and composed harpsichord music, ballets such as Les Indes Galantes, and many operas, including Castor et Pollux.

Ramée, Pierre de la See Ramus, Petrus

Rameses See Ramses

Ramillies, Battle of British allied victory (May 23, 1706) over the French in the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14). Fought at Ramillies, in modern Belgium, the battle pitted some 50,000 British, Dutch, and Danish troops under J. Churchill, duke of Marlborough, against an approximately equal French force. The allies won nearly the whole of the Spanish Netherlands (modern Belgium) by this victory.

Ramiro I d. 1063. First king of Aragon (1035–63). He built the kingdom from a base in Navarre, both by appropriating his brother's territories and by conquest of Moorish lands.

Ramsay, Sir William 1852–1916. British scientist. He discovered the entire family of the noble gases: argon, helium, krypton, and xenon. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Chemistry in 1904.

Ramses I ⟨Rameses⟩ d. 1318 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (1320–18 BC), founder of the 19th dynasty. He made his son Seti I co-regent during his brief reign.

Ramses II ⟨Rameses II⟩ *d. c*1237 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (*c*1304–*c*1237 BC), named "the Great." His reign was marked by a period of great prosperity, the building of temples at Karnak, Luxor, and Abu Simbel, and increased slavery (possibly including the Hebrews).

Ramses III ⟨Rameses III⟩ d. 1167 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (*c*1198–67 BC). He defended Egypt against invaders from Libya and the "sea peoples," including the original Philistines then colonizing Palestine.

Ramus, Petrus ⟨Ramée, Pierre de la⟩ 1515–72. French humanist and the most eminent logician of his time, born Pierre de la Ramée. His reforms of Aristotelian logic were highly regarded in the 16th and 17th cents. A Protestant, he was murdered during a period of religious persecutions in France.

Ranavalona II See Malagasy Republic

Ranavalona III See Malagasy Republic

Rand, Ayn 1905–82. Russian-born American novelist. Her books exalt her philosophy, called objectivism, which holds that rational self-seeking is a virtue and altruism is a weakness. The Fountainhead and Atlas Shrugged are among her works.

Randolph, Asa Philip 1889–1979. American labor leader and pioneer crusader for black civil rights. He organized the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and helped end job discrimination against blacks in US defense industries. He was a director of the 1963 March on Washington (q.v.).

Randolph, Edmund 1753–1813. American statesman. He formulated the Randolph (Virginia) Plan at the Constitutional Convention and later served as US attorney general (1789–94) and secretary of state (1794–95).

Randolph, John 1773–1833. American political leader. He spent most of his career (1799–1829) in Congress, where he was famous for his wit, eloquence, and stubborn defense of states' rights.

Randolph, Peyton *c*1721–75. American Revolutionary leader and first president of the Continental Congress (1774). A longtime member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, he took a leading part in the early events of the American Revolutionary period.

Rangoon Burmese capital city (pop. 2,276,000), river port, and the country's commercial and industrial center. A small fishing village for many centuries, Rangoon rose to prominence after King Alaungapaya located his capital there (1753). Under British colonial rule from 1852, it was developed into a major port. The Japanese occupied the city (1942–45) during WW II.

Ranjit Singh ⟨Runjeet Singh⟩ 1780–1839. Maharaja of the Punjab. Making himself the principal leader of the Sikhs (from 1801), he founded the Sikh kingdom by conquering Afghan and Pathan territories in northern India.

Ranke, Leopold von 1795–1886. German historian. A votary of carefully researched objective facts, he is considered the father of scientific historiography. He aimed to re-create history as "it actually happened."

Rankin, Jeanette 1880–1973. American congresswoman (1917–19, 1941–43). The first woman member of Congress, she created a furor by casting the only vote against a declaration of war against Japan after Pearl Harbor.

Ranters English religious sect that flourished during the Commonwealth and Protectorate from 1649 to 1660. Its members believed in pantheism, holding that God is coextensive with nature, and appealed to an inner experience, denying the authority of Scripture. The movement was suppressed by Parliament.

Raoul See Rudolph

Rapallo, Treaty of Two important treaties signed at Rapallo, Italy. 1. Treaty between Italy and Yugoslavia (Nov. 12, 1920) establishing the Adriatic city of Rijeka (Fiume) as a free city. (It reverted to Yugoslavia after WW II.) 2. Treaty signed between Germany and the Soviet Union (Apr. 16, 1922) normalizing relations and renouncing mutual war indemnities.

Raphael In the Bible, the archangel who is represented in the Book of Tobit as the companion of Tobias and the healer of Tobit.

Raphael 1483–1520. Great Italian artist in the High Renaissance style. He studied first with his father, Giovanni Santi, then with Perugino at Perugia, and studied the works of Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo. Thereafter, he produced many famous Madonnas and portraits. Summoned to Rome by Pope Julius II (1508), he decorated the Vatican apartment the Stanza della Senatura, and succeeded D. Bramante as chief Vatican architect (1514). His frescoes include the noted School of Athens and Disputa in the Vatican papal apartment.

Rapp, George See Harmony Society

Rappites Christian pietistic community that flourished in the 19th cent. It was founded (1803) by George Rapp in Germany, and the Rappites started other such groups in Pennsylvania and Indiana. Membership dwindled because of rules on celibacy, and the community eventually disbanded.

Rask, Rasmus Christian 1787–1832. Danish philologist. He pioneered the study of the relationships between the Indo-European languages and wrote Icelandic and Anglo-Saxon grammars.

Rasmussen, Knud Johan Victor 1879–1933. Danish explorer and ethnologist. Born in Greenland, he conducted many Arctic expeditions. He is noted for his valuable studies of the North American Eskimos.

Rasputin, Grigori Yefimovich 1872–1916. Russian peasant mystic who had great influence in the court of Czar Nicholas II. He gained the favor of Czarina Alexandra because he was able to relieve (1905) the suffering of her hemophiliac son, Alexis. In following years, Rasputin became notorious as a rapacious seducer of women. When Nicholas went to the front during WW I, Rasputin's corrupt influence and scandalous behavior only increased. Thus he hastened the collapse of the czarist government in the months leading up to the Russian Revolution of 1917. A group of noblemen, including Prince Felix Yusupov, plotted his assassination. They poisoned him unsuccessfully, then shot him and drowned him (Dec. 30) in the Neva River.

Ras Tafari See Haile Selassie

Rastatt and Baden, treaties of Treaty signed (Mar., 1714) in Rastatt (now in Germany) by which Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI made his personal peace with France in the War of the Spanish Succession. Some months later, in the Swiss city of Baden, he concluded peace on behalf of the states of the empire. These treaties complemented those signed at the Peace of Utrecht (q.v.).

Rathenau, Walter 1867–1922. German statesman and industrialist. He organized the German economy both for WW I and for reparations payments afterward and ended the postwar German isolation by helping to engineer the Treaty of Rapallo. He was assassinated by nationalist fanatics because he was a Jew.

Rathlin Island See Robert I

rationalism Philosophical doctrine holding that fundamental truths can be deduced by reason alone. It is opposed to empiricism (q.v.), the doctrine that such knowledge derives from experiences through the senses. R. Descartes articulated the rationalist doctrine in the 17th cent., and it was further developed by B. Spinoza and G. von Leibnitz. I. Kant formulated a modified form of rationalism, called "critical rationalism," in his work Critique of Pure Reason. The rationalist doctrine also affected religious thought, giving rise to the deists (q.v.), who denied the truth of religious revelations.

Ravel, Maurice 1875–1937. French composer. An exponent of impressionism, he was both an original composer and a popular one, with such well-known works as Bolero and La Valse.

Ravenna Historic city (pop. 139,000) in north-central Italy. Founded in early Roman times, it became the capital of the declining Western Roman Empire (402). It was the Ostrogothic capital (5th–6th cents.), then passed to the Byzantines, who created the Exarchate of Ravenna (q.v.) as the center of their power in Italy until *c*750. Conquered by the Franks, Ravenna was given to the pope *c*756 (the famous Donation of Pepin), and formed the basis of the Papal States (q.v.). Ravenna became part of Italy during the unification (1860).

Ray, Man 1890–1976. American painter and photographer. One of the chief exponents of the Dada movement after WW I, he created a variety of experimental works of art, some combining photography and painting.

Ram Mohan Roy ⟨Ray, Rammohan⟩ 1774–1833. Indian thinker and reformer. He advocated a reaffirmation of Hindu culture but supported some aspects of Western culture, notably education. He was a scholar in several Oriental languages, translated Sanskrit classics, and was instrumental in abolishing suttee, or sacrifice of a widow on her husband's funeral pyre.

Rayburn, Samuel Taliaferro 1882–1961. Democrat from Texas, Speaker of the US House of Representatives (1940–47, 1949–53, 1955–61). His 48 years in the House set a record, and he was Speaker longer than anyone before him. He generally supported New Deal and Fair Deal legislation.

Raymond IV d. 1105. Count of Toulouse (1093–1105). He was one of the principal leaders of the First Crusade (q.v.) and was the key figure in organizing it.

Raymond VI 1156–1222. Count of Toulouse, (*c*1194–1222). Excommunciated for his tolerance toward the Albigenses of southern France, he later fought S. de Montfort during the Albigensian Crusade (q.v.).

Raymond of Tripoli See Baldwin V

Razin, Stenka d. 1671. Cossack leader, head of the propertyless Cossacks of the Don (1670–71). He raided both Russian and Persian settlements, captured or razed several cities, and was finally defeated and captured by Russian troops at Simbirsk. He was taken to Moscow, tortured, and executed.

Re See Ra

Reagan, Ronald Wilson 1911–. US president (1981–), the 40th, successor to J. Carter. After a long career as a movie actor (from 1937), he entered politics as a conservative Republican in the early 1960s. He served two terms as governor of California (1967–75). Twice defeated in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination (1968, 1976), he won the nomination in 1980. He campaigned on a conservative platform that included tax cuts, reduced federal spending and regulation, and revitalization of the US military. He defeated his Democratic opponent, J. Carter, in a landslide victory. His early administration was marked by the end of the hostage crisis (q.v.), an assassination attempt (by John W. Hinkley, Jr., Mar. 30, 1981) that resulted in the wounding of President Reagan and others, passage of the Reagan budget package for reduced federal spending in all areas except defense, breaking of the nationwide air controllers strike, the successful flight of space shuttle Columbia, successful US efforts in negotiating an end to the Lebanese War, and increased US involvement in the war in El Salvador.

realism In philosophy, the theory that things possess a substantive reality independent of the mind that perceives them. It is opposed to philosophical idealism. In literature and art, it is the school that strives for faithful representation of life as it is really lived, without idealization. It was prominent in literature and art, especially in France, from the mid-19th cent. to the early 20th cent. and was opposed to romanticism.

Rebecca ⟨Rebekah⟩ In the Bible, the wife of the Hebrew patriarch Isaac and the mother of Esau and Jacob.

Rebekah See Rebecca

reciprocity The principle or policy by which two or more nations grant each other equal treatment, usually in international trade, which usually results in a mutual lowering of import duties.

Reconquista Name for the drive by Spanish Christians to recapture the Iberian peninsula from the Muslims. During the Muslim invasions of the early 8th cent., Christians were only able to maintain control over small kingdoms in northern Spain. By the 11th cent. Spanish Christians began an active campaign to expand these domains and retake the peninsula. They had largely succeeded by the 13th cent. The last Muslim stronghold, Granada, was conquered by King Ferdinand in 1492.

Reconstruction Period in US history (1865–77) that followed the American Civil War. It was marked by the return of Confederate states to the Union, bitter struggles over political and racial differences, and the failure to effect fundamental social and economic reform of Southern society. President A. Lincoln had already adopted a policy of reconciliation toward the South before his assassination, and President A. Johnson generally attempted to continue it. Radical Republicans in Congress, however, wanted harsher treatment for the South. Their Wade-Davis Bill failed in 1864 and they were enraged when provisional state governments, created by Johnson's executive order (1865), enacted Black Codes (q.v.) to restrict Negro rights.

Congress responded by passing laws to guarantee Negro rights and to institute harsh reconstruction measures, while the president attempted to veto the legislation. On the national level, the bitter struggle culminated (1868) in the Radical Republicans' (narrowly) unsuccessful attempt to impeach Johnson. The congressional reconstruction program included passage of the 13th Amendment in Dec., 1865, abolishing slavery; the Civil Rights Act (Apr., 1866), countering the Black Codes; the 14th Amendment in June, 1866, guaranteeing Negro rights; legislation sanctioning the Freedmen's Bureau (q.v.); the Reconstruction Act (Mar., 1867), dividing Confederate states (except Tennessee) into five military districts; and the 15th Amendment (1869), guaranteeing Negro voting rights.

Under the military authorities, there came to power Radical Republican governments composed of carpetbaggers (Northern Republicans and opportunists), scalawags (Southern white Republicans), and former Negro slaves. Rebuilding of the war-torn South began, state constitutions were rewritten to conform to standards set by the Republican Congress, and the states were readmitted (six in 1868, the remaining in 1870). The tenure of the pro-Republican carpetbaggers, however, was highly controversial and deeply resented by white Southerners. It was marked by corruption (although apparently no worse than elsewhere in the country), the rise of bitter sectional and racial hatred among Southerners, and the spread of terrorist groups such as the Ku Klux Klan.

Ultimately white Southerners regained control of the state governments, reinstituted discrimination against Negroes, and united to form the one-party, Democratic "solid South." Reconstruction ended with the disputed presidential election of 1876. Republican candidate R. Hayes was awarded the election (which hinged on returns from Louisiana, Florida, and South Carolina), and in 1877 federal troops were withdrawn from the South.

Red Baron See Richthofen, Manfred, baron von

Red Cambodians See Khmer Rouge

Red Cross International society, today involved in relief efforts in both wartime and peacetime. It was founded (1863) as a result of J. Dunant's call for establishment of a wartime relief agency to provide wounded with medical aid and was sanctioned by the Geneva Convention of 1864. Its functions were later expanded to include peacetime relief work. The American Red Cross was established (1881) by C. Barton.

Redi, Francesco *c*1626–98. Italian naturalist. A court physician in Tuscany, he proved in one of the first controlled experiments that maggots do not result from spontaneous generation in putrefying meat but come instead from eggs laid by flies.

Red River Settlement British colony in the Red River region of Manitoba, Canada. Settled in 1812, it became the object of rivalry between the Hudson's Bay Company and the North West Company. The Seven Oaks Massacre (1816), in which North West Company agents killed 22 settlers, and other incidents resulted in court battles and the eventual merger of the two companies (1821).

Red Shirt Movement Anti-British movement in the North-West Frontier province of India. It was launched in 1930 by Gaffar Khan (1890–) in support of the Indian National Congress and professed Ghandhian nonviolence.

Reed, John 1887–1920. American writer and radical leader. A wealthy Harvard graduate, he embraced communism, witnessed the Russian Revolution, and wrote a famous account of it, Ten Days That Shook the World.

Reed, Walter 1851–1902. American army surgeon and bacteriologist. In controlled experiments using human volunteers, he proved conclusively (1901) that yellow fever was transmitted by mosquitoes.

Reform, Catholic See Catholic Reformation

Reforma, La Period in Mexican history (1854–76) characterized by liberal reforms directed mainly against special privileges of the army and the church. It began with announcement of the liberals' Plan of Ayutla (Mar. 1, 1854) and the ouster (1855) of the dictator Santa Anna. There followed a succession of liberal presidents (most notably B. Juárez), revolts and civil wars, and the brief restoration of the monarchy under Maximilian. Reform legislation enacted included Ley Juárez (1855), abolishing church and military courts; Ley Lerdo (1856), forcing the sale of church-owned secular lands; a liberal constitution (1857) curtailing military and church power; and Laws of La Reforma (1859), ordering confiscation of church lands.

Reformation Religious reform movement that arose in the 16th cent. It began as a reaction to practices within the Roman Catholic church that some held to be either unsupported by scriptural teaching or simply corrupt and abusive usurpations of authority. The movement ultimately gave rise to the various Protestant churches. Although earlier movements for church reform had arisen in Europe, the Reformation dates from 1517, when Martin Luther issued his Ninety-five Theses. Other religious dissidents, such as John Calvin, also spread the movement for reform, which was fueled by religious zeal, by the new spirit of Renaissance humanism, and by social changes resulting from the growth of a prospering mercantile class. Key dates in the history of the Reformation include:

14TH CENT. John Wyclif led early movement for reform of Roman Catholic church.

1414–18 Council of Constance, unsuccessful attempt to introduce reforms in the Roman Catholic church.

1415 John Huss, Bohemian religious reformer, burned at stake for heresy; death led to outbreak of the Hussite Wars in the Holy Roman Empire.

1517 M. Luther posted his Ninety-five Theses at Wittenberg (Oct. 31) in the Holy Roman Empire; the Reformation began.

1518 In Switzerland, Huldreich Zwingli began campaign against sale of indulgences within the church; led growth of Reformation in Swiss cantons.

1519 Luther defended Protestant doctrine in famous Leipzig Debate (July).

1520 Luther excommunicated from the Roman Catholic church.

1521 Luther refused to recant after being called before the Diet of Worms.

1522–23 Knights' War, unsuccessful rebellion by knights to ensure ancient privileges against the Reformation.

1524–25 Peasant's War; Luther condemned violence of peasants' uprising, which was partly inspired by his teachings; peasants savagely repressed.

1526 First Diet of Speyer convened; decreed that German princes could embrace Lutheran teachings.

1529 Colloquy of Marburg; Luther and Philip Melanchthon debated against John Oecolampadius and Huldreich Zwingli on elements of Reformation doctrine.

1529 Second Diet of Speyer overturned ruling of first diet; Lutheran princes issued a protest against its decrees, thereby becoming known as the Protestants.

1530 Diet of Augsburg convened; Melanchthon drew up the Confession of Augsburg, which became the foundation for Lutheranism.

1531 Protestant nobles in the Holy Roman Empire formed the Schmalkaldic League to oppose Emperor Charles V's threats to use force against Lutheranism.

1534 In England Henry VIII came into conflict with the pope over his attempt to divorce Catherine of Aragon; excommunicated, he secured the Act of Supremacy, establishing the Church of England. Though Henry maintained Catholic character of church, later rulers introduced Protestant liturgy.

1536 John Calvin settled in Geneva and issued Institutes of the Christian Religion, foundation for Calvinism.

1539 Lutheranism in England suppressed by issuance of Act of Six Articles.

1545 Council of Trent convened; marked beginning of Catholic Reformation; reforms introduced to counter rising tide of Protestantism.

1546–47 Holy Roman Emperor Charles V defeated the Schmalkaldic League in the Schmalkaldic War.

1547–53 Edward VI reigned in England; began reorganization of Church of England into a Protestant church; secured (1547) repeal of Act of Six Articles and issuance (1549) of Book of Common Prayer.

1555 Peace of Augsburg provided formula for ending conflict between Catholics and Protestants within the Holy Roman Empire.

1559 Synod of French Protestant churches held in Paris; led to organization of Huguenot movement in France.

1560 John Knox secured establishment of Calvinism in Scotland.

1562–98 French Catholics and Huguenots engaged in civil war during Wars of Religion.

1598 French king Henry IV issued the Edict of Nantes, granting religious freedom to the Huguenots.

1618–48 Thirty Years' War; began as a revolt in Bohemia in the Holy Roman Empire and soon became general European war fought between Protestant and Catholic forces.

1648 Peace of Westphalia ended Thirty Years' War and established a measure of religious peace in Europe.

Reformation, Catholic See Catholic Reformation

Reform Bills Series of laws that enlarged the British electorate and removed voting inequities. A bill in 1832 increased the representation of large towns proportionally and increased the electorate 50 percent by eliminating certain voter qualifications. The 1867 act again redistributed parliamentary seats according to population and again doubled the body of eligible voters. The bill in 1884 enabled nearly all males to vote. In 1918, suffrage was extended to all over the age of 30, regardless of sex, and the voting age was lowered to 21 in 1928.

Reformed Church in America Official name, since 1867, of the Dutch Reformed church in North America. Both its doctrine and system of church government originated in The Netherlands under Calvinist inspiration. It was transplanted to America as the religion of the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam (New York).

Reform Judaism Religious movement that sought to modernize Judaism. Beginning in Germany (19th cent.) under the leadership of such rabbis as A. Geiger, the movement did away with many Orthodox rituals and practices and stressed instead religious faith and ethics. Since the 1930s, Reform congregations have reinstituted some of the traditional practices.

Reform Movement of 1898 Short-lived reform movement in China during the reign of Emperor Kuang Hsü. China's defeat in the Sino-Japanese War (1894–95) and the attempts by Western powers to exploit China gave rise to sentiment for Westernizing Chinese culture. Scholar and reformer K'ang Yu-wei (1858–1927), gained the emperor's confidence and persuaded him to issue sweeping reforms of traditional Chinese society. The movement was cut short, however, by a coup led by the Empress Dowager Tzu Hsi.

Reims See Rheims

Regency British historical and cultural period (1811–20). It spanned the regency of George, prince of Wales, who came to power as regent after his father, George III, went insane. It was marked by the end of the Napoleonic Wars, dissolute courtly life, an interest in antiquity and Oriental artifacts, and a flowering of the arts. Romantic literature, including the work of J. Keats, G. Byron, P. Shelley, and Sir W. Scott, flourished in this period, which also saw the development of distinctive styles in the decorative arts and architecture.

regicides During the English Civil War period, those who were responsible for the trial and execution of King Charles I (1649). Of those still alive at the Restoration of the monarchy (1660), 15 fled abroad and 29 were convicted of treason. Ten were executed.

Regiomontanus ⟨Müller, Johannes⟩ 1436–76. German mathematician, astronomer, and humanist. Involved in the study of Greek manuscripts, he produced the first systematic modern exposition of trigonometry (*c*1464).

Régnier, Henri de 1864–1936. French poet and writer. One of the foremost members of the symbolist school, he later wrote in a more classical vein.

Regulating Act British parliamentary legislation passed in 1773 reorganizing the British East India Company. Its object was to improve the government of Bengali domains, and it represented the first British government intervention in the company's administration of India. The British government took over complete administrative control by 1858. (See also Government of India acts.)

Regulator movement American Colonial reform society formed in the 1760s. Frontier settlers in western North Carolina formed the group to reform corrupt local government and end oppressive taxation. When the Colonial government failed to act, the Regulators refused to pay taxes and ultimately mounted an insurrection. The Regulators were defeated (1771) by the militia under Gov. W. Tryon. Thereafter, many Regulators fled to Tennessee. A similar group in South Carolina succeeded in effecting reforms during the 1760s, then disbanded without serious incident.

Regulus, Marcus Atilius *d. c*250 BC. Roman general in the First Punic War. Captured by the Carthaginians, he was released on parole to persuade the Senate to make peace. Instead he urged the Romans to persist, and then returned, as agreed, to Carthage, where he is said to have been tortured to death.

Rehoboam *d. c*914 BC. Last king of the united kingdom of Israel (933–914) and first king of Judah. During his reign, the 10 northern Hebrew tribes broke away under the leadership of Jeroboam I to form the kingdom of Judah. Rehoboam then ruled the two southernmost tribes.

Reichstag Legislative assemblies of the Holy Roman Empire and German successor states. The Holy Roman Emperor began to meet with city representatives *c*1100. The meetings became formal assemblies after 1250 and exerted legislative power until 1648, playing only a ceremonial role after that date. An elected Reichstag was established by the German Empire from 1871 to 1918, and was continued under the Weimar Republic (1919–33). The Reichstag surrendered its power to A. Hitler by the Enabling Act (1933), and was reduced to ceremonial functions during the Third Reich. It was replaced after WW II by the Bundestag in West Germany.

Reichstag fire The burning of the Reichstag building in Berlin on the night of Feb. 27, 1933. A Dutchman, Marinus van der Lubbe, was convicted for setting the fire. A. Hitler blamed the fire on the Communists, however, and used the incident to justify his assumption of dictatorial powers.

Reign of Terror Period during the French Revolution. Instituted Sept. 5, 1793, and directed by the Committee of Public Safety (q.v.), the Terror was intended to crush all opposition to the revolution. Thousands were guillotined or died in prisons. The period also saw the rise of M. Robespierre as virtual dictator of France, enactment of the laws of Maximum (establishing price controls and forbidding hoarding), institution of universal conscription, and reorganization of the army. Toward the end of the Terror, even allies of Robespierre (including followers of J. Hébert and G. Danton) fell victim to the guillotine. Finally, popular reaction against the Terror resulted in the overthrow of Robespierre (July 27, 1794) and the subsequent Thermidorean reaction. (See also French Revolution [1793–94].)

Reimarus, Hermann Samuel 1694–1768. German philosopher. A pioneer thinker of the Enlightenment, he denied the supernatural origins of Christianity and advanced the belief in natural religion of the deists.

Reinhardt, Max ⟨Goldmann, Max⟩ 1873–1943. Austrian theater director. He originated many modern dramatic techniques and brought new life to productions of classic Greek and Shakespearean drama.

Reinsurance Treaty Secret treaty (June 18, 1887) between Germany and Russia replacing the Three Emperors' League. It provided that one party would remain neutral if the other became involved in a war, unless Germany attacked France or Russia attacked Austria. Failure to renew the treaty (1890) led to a Franco-Russian alliance.

relativity Physical theory, advanced by A. Einstein and elaborated by Einstein and others, dealing with the nature and relationship of space and time. Toward the end of the 19th cent., certain anomalies in the system of Newtonian mechanics were discovered. In order to explain them, Einstein advanced the special theory of relativity (1905) and the general theory of relativity (1915), which fundamentally altered the perception of the form and structure of the universe. Fundamental to the theory is the concept that all motion is relative and that space and time are not separate and absolute entities. The theory produced a revolution in mathematics and physics that is continuing today. A unified field theory, which seeks to combine the special and general theories of relativity, has yet to be demonstrated.

Religion, Wars of Series of civil wars (1562–98) in France between the Catholics, led by the powerful Guise family, and the French Protestants, known as Huguenots. The civil wars revolved around religious differences but were further complicated by struggles among the nobility for political power. The wars culminated in the accession of the Huguenot leader, Henry of Navarre (as Henry IV), to the French throne in 1589. In an attempt to resolve the continuing struggle, he converted to Catholicism (1593) and finally ended the wars by the Edict of Nantes (1598), granting religious toleration to the Protestants. Key dates in the history of the wars include:

1560 Conspiracy of Amboise; Huguenots' unsuccessful plot to break influence of Catholic house of Guise over French King Francis II and thereby end persecution of Protestants.

1560–74 Charles IX reigned, following the death of Francis II; a youth at his accession, he was dominated by his mother, Catherine de Medici, throughout his reign.

1562 Massacre of Vassy; Huguenots massacred by troops of François, duke of Guise.

1562–63 First war fought after Huguenots rebelled against persecution.

1567–68 Second war fought.

1568–70 Third war fought; Huguenots led by Louis I de Bourbon and G. de Coligny; war ended by Treaty of St. Germain (1570), which granted some freedoms to the Huguenots.

1572 St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre (Aug. 23); brought on by rising influence of Huguenot leader G. de Coligny; resulted in murder of many Huguenots and sparked fourth war.

1572–73 Fourth war fought; ended by Edict of Bologne.

1574–89 Henry III, another son of Catherine de Medici, reigned; Catherine continued to exercise considerable influence.

1574–76 Fifth war fought; ended by Peace of Monsieur (1576), by which Huguenots received religious freedom everywhere but in Paris.

1576 Holy League formed by Catholics to oppose Protestantism in France; began alliance with Spain.

1577 Sixth war fought; war sparked by Henry III, who revoked toleration of Protestants at the urging of the Catholic Holy League.

1577 Protestants won favorable terms in the Peace of Bergerac (Sept. 17), ending sixth war.

1580 Seventh war fought after persecution of Huguenots continued; concessions to Huguenots confirmed by the Treaty of Fleix, ending the war.

1584 French king Henry III designated Henry of Navarre, a Huguenot, as heir to the French throne; Henry of Guise led Catholic Holy League in opposition, resulting in new war.

1585–89 War of the Three Henrys; Henry of Guise took Paris (1588) and deposed Henry III, who fled; Henry of Guise was murdered (1588); Henry III then turned to Henry of Navarre for support and was murdered (1589), thus ending the war.

1589 Huguenot leader Henry of Navarre became King Henry IV.

1589 Spain invaded France to aid the Catholic Holy League against Henry IV.

1589 Battle of Arques; Henry IV defeated Catholics.

1590 Battle of Ivry; Henry IV again victorious in fighting against Catholics.

1593 Henry IV converted to Catholicism.

1594 Henry IV entered Paris.

1598 Henry issued (Apr. 15) the Edict of Nantes, granting Huguenots religious freedom.

1598 Treaty of Vervins (May 2) ended war with Spain.

religious dualism See dualism

Religious Peace of Nürnberg ⟨Nürnberg Standstill⟩ Truce (July 23, 1532) that for a time ended religious wars between Holy Roman Emperor Charles V (Catholic) and the Schmalkaldic League (Protestant).

relocation centers WW II internment camps in which Japanese-Americans living in a defined area on the West Coast were forcibly confined between Mar., 1942, and Mar., 1946. Suspected of disloyalty after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Japanese-Americans were indiscriminately interned in such camps and lost property estimated at some $400 million. This program was later severely criticized and officially deplored by Congress in 1983.

Remarque, Erich Maria 1897–1970. German novelist, best known for his WW I novel All Quiet on the Western Front.

Rembrandt ⟨Rijn, Harmenszoon van⟩ 1606–69. Great Dutch painter, noted for his mastery of technique (especially lighting) and for great depth of understanding of his subjects. He spent many years teaching and enjoyed a wide following until the 1640s, when he lost popularity and began to experience financial problems that continued until his death. He nevertheless produced over 600 paintings, as well as many drawings and etchings, and in the later years of his life created some of his greatest masterpieces. Among his many famous works are Two Philosophers, The Anatomy Lesson of Dr. Tulip, The Sortie of the Banning Cocq Company, Aristotle Contemplating the Bust of Homer, Bathsheba, and his series of self-portraits.

Remington, Eliphalet 1793–1861. American arms manufacturer. His firm produced a famous series of rifles and pistols and supplied the US government with small arms from the mid-19th cent.

Remonstrants Dutch Protestants adhering to the liberal Calvinist ideas of J. Arminius. They presented their views to the States General (1610) in a "remonstrance," were condemned by the Protestant Synod of Dort (1618–19), and then were persecuted by the state church until 1625.

Remus Legendary cofounder of Rome (traditionally 753 BC). Remus and his twin brother, Romulus, founded the town that became Rome. After Romulus built a defensive wall around it, Remus jumped over it to prove it ineffective. Enraged, Romulus killed his brother.

Renaissance Transition period in Europe from medieval to modern culture. The Renaissance is generally viewed as a rebirth or reawakening of learning and the arts, which began in Italy in the 1300s and then spread throughout Europe. The Renaissance period may be broadly divided into the Italian Renaissance of the 1300s and 1400s and the Northern Renaissance (centers outside Italy) of the 1400s and 1500s. It may also be divided into Early (*c*1400–*c*1490), High (*c*1490–1520), and Late (1520–1600) periods, though dates of periods vary. Central to the Renaissance period was the rise of Humanism, a movement placing new emphasis on the individual and on the temporal (as opposed to secular) world about him. Man became "the measure of all things" and the "universal man," an individual accomplished in a wide variety of pursuits, became a Renaissance ideal. The intellectual "rebirth" of the Renaissance had wide ramifications. There was a sudden emphasis on education, particularly study of the Greek and Roman classics (the invention of printing helped make this possible). In literature and philosophy, it was man and the world about him that became the center of attention. In the arts, interest shifted from idealized religious themes to more worldly conceptions, and advances were made in areas of technical concern (perspective, use of color, study of human anatomy). In architecture, Renaissance designers adapted earlier classical forms (as in Palladianism) and medieval Gothic styles were gradually abandoned. Advances in science during the Renaissance helped prepare the way for the 17th-cent. revolution in science. The Renaissance in Italy began in Florence, and thereafter spread to Venice, Rome, and other cities. The great cultural flowering in Italy, as elsewhere, was aided by wealthy patrons, including such families as the Medici, Sforza, Este, and Gonzaga, and Roman Catholic popes such as Julius II and Leo X. Leading figures of the Renaissance are listed by country (and then by birth date) below.

Renaissance in Italy

NICOLA PISANO Founded school of sculpture at Pisa and developed style that influenced Renaissance sculpture in Italy. *c*1220–84

GIOTTO Florentine artist and architect; departed from the traditional Byzantine forms and created powerful new style of painting, foreshadowing the Renaissance. 1266–1337

PETRARCH Great Poet, classical scholar, and Humanist; helped spread interest in classical culture by his researches and poems, thereby laying foundations for the early Renaissance. 1304–74

G. BOCCACCIO Poet and storyteller who wrote the Decameron, in which the earthly passions of man are portrayed. 1313–75

F. BRUNELLESCHI First great architect of the Renaissance, he developed systematic rules of perspective and designed the celebrated dome of the cathedral in Florence. 1377–1446

L. GHIBERTI Leading 15th-cent. Renaissance sculptor famed for his doors for the baptistry of the cathedral of Florence. *c*1378–1455

DONATELLO Florentine sculptor, among the greatest Renaissance sculptors; he completed such masterpieces as the bronze statue David and Gattamelata, a prototype of Renaissance equestrian statuary. *c*1386–1466

P. UCCELLO Florentine painter noted for his pioneering use of perspective; masterpiece is cycle of Noah, among which is the Deluge. 1396–1475

FRA ANGELICO Florentine painter who brought classical stylistic elements to his religious works. *c*1400–55

LUCA DELLA ROBBIA Influential Florentine sculptor who did the marble cantoria (singing gallery), famous portrayal of children and innocence;

founded family studio famous for enamelled terracotta works. 1400?–82

MASACCIO Leading Florentine painter; completed fresco Trinity, which marked great advance in understanding of perspective; worked on the historic frescoes of the Brancacci Chapel of Santa Maria del Carmine in Florence. 1401–28?

LEON ALBERTI Early example of universal "Renaissance man"; systematized problems of perspective in Della Pittura, worked as an architect; wrote poetry; did studies in geography, grammar, and mathematics. 1404–72

FRA FILIPPO LIPPI Florentine painter noted as a great colorist and draftsman; did Coronation of the Virgin and other famous works. *c*1406–69

LORENZO VALLA Classical scholar and Humanist; attacked medieval philosophy and did important scholarly and critical works. *c*1407–57

ANTONIO POLLAIUOLO Florentine artist and sculptor, believed first to study human anatomy through dissection. 1429?–98

GIOVANNI BELLINI Venetian painter; helped make Venice a center of Renaissance art; taught Giorgione and Titian. *c*1430–1516

MANTEGNA Noted for his frescoes, especially in the Camera degli Sposi (wedding Chamber) of the Gonzaga palace. 1431–1506

MARSILIO FICINO Philosopher and leading exponent of Platonism in his time, he translated Greek classics into Latin. 1433–99

S. BOTTICELLI Florentine painter; Birth of Venus among his famous works. *c*1444–1510

D. BRAMANTE Painter and architect who pioneered the High Renaissance style in architecture. 1444–1514

LEONARDO DA VINCI Archetypal "Renaissance man," who painted masterpiece, Mona Lisa and the most famous Last Supper; worked as a sculptor, architect, and military engineer; noted also for his scientific studies, especially human anatomy, and for his inventions. 1452–1519

N. MACHIAVELLI Political philosopher and leading Renaissance figure who wrote the classic on political power, The Prince. 1469–1527

GIORGIONE Venetian painter; leading figure of the 16th-cent. painting in Venice; works include The Three Philosophers and Tempesta. 1478–1511

B. PERUZZI Painter and architect who worked in Rome and designed the Palazzo Massini. 1481–1536

ANTONIO DA SANGALLO THE YOUNGER Leading Florentine architect of his time who built the Farnese Palace at Rome; Sangallo's designs greatly influenced later architects. 1483–1546

RAPHAEL A great master of the High Renaissance whose many famous works include series of Madonna altar panels and the frescoes Disputa and School of Athens. 1483–1564

ANDREA DEL SARTO Noted painter who was influential in Florence and Rome; among his works were frescoes on the life of St. John the Baptist. 1486–1530

TITIAN One of the greatest of Renaissance painters; noted for his religious and mythological paintings; works include Sacred and Profane Love and the Pietà. 1490–1576

B. CELLINI Sculptured Perseus with the Head of Medusa and wrote a famous autobiography; famed as a goldsmith. 1500–71

A. PALLADIO One of the most influential Renaissance architects; developed architectural style (Palladianism) based on classical Roman forms; wrote famous treatise, Four Books on Architecture, and designed villas and church facades. 1508–80

TINTORETTO A Venetian, leading painter of Late Renaissance Mannerist school; he painted a Last Supper and other famous works. 1518–94

P. VERONESE Great decorative artist of the Venetian school; Christ in the House of Levi among his famous paintings. 1528–88

Renaissance in the Low Countries and German States

ROBERT CAMPIN Early Flemish master; taught Van der Weyden; did Mérode Altarpiece. *c*1378–1444

J. VAN EYCK Flemish, great Renaissance painter of the 15th cent.; he mastered the technique of painting with oils and made Flanders a center of Renaissance art; his style of realism was widely influential. *c*1390–1441

R. VAN DER WEYDEN Flemish painter noted for his treatment of religious themes; Christ Descending from the Cross is one of his masterpieces. *c*1400–64

HANS MEMLING Leading artist of Bruges in his time; painted Passion Triptych. *c*1430–94

HUGO VAN DER GOES Greatest Flemish artist of his time; noted for religious works of profound nature; was early influence in northern realism; did masterpiece, Portinari Altarpiece. *c*1440–82

M. SCHONGAUER Leading engraver of his time, noted for grace and idealistic beauty of his works; works include Madonna in a Courtyard and St. Sebastian. *c*1445–91

H. BOSCH Flemish painter; noted for his imaginative, sometimes bizarre works; famous works include Garden of Earthly Delights. c1450–1516

J. REUCHLIN German scholar and Humanist; he did important studies of classical Greek and Hebrew writings. 1455–1522

LUCAS CRANACH Leading German painter whose works greatly influenced 16th-cent. German art. 1472–1553

H. HOLBEIN THE YOUNGER German painter; noted for the realism of his portraits; he worked in England from 1532 until his death. 1497–1553

ERASMUS Leading Renaissance Humanist scholar; his works include an edition of the New Testament, of Latin and Greek classics, and critical works; he opposed M. Luther's Protestant reforms. 1466?–1536

A. DÜRER Great German artist of the Renaissance whose famous works include paintings, altarpieces, engravings, and woodcuts. 1471–1528

N. COPERNICUS Polish astronomer; leading scientific figure of the Renaissance, he founded modern astronomy by his theory that the earth and other planets revolve around the sun; paved the way for the scientific revolution of the 17th cent. 1473–1543

MELANCTHON German theologian, scholar, and Humanist; in addition to his major contributions to the Protestant Reformation, Melancthon played a significant role in reforming the German educational system. 1497–1560

M. GRÜNEWALD Great German painter; painted religious, often mystical works, including the Isenheim Altarpiece. c1475–1528

P. BRUEGHEL THE ELDER Leading 16th-cent. Flemish painter noted for his landscapes and peasant scenes, including Peasant Wedding. c1525–69

O. DI LASSO Among greatest of Renaissance composers; noted for his motets. c1530–94

Renaissance in France

GUILLAUME DE MACHAUT Poet and great composer in the 14th cent. Ars Nova musical style. c1300–77

J. FOUQUET Leading French painter; famous works include illuminations for the Book of Hours. c1415–80

G. BUDÉ Humanist scholar. Major figure of the Renaissance who established study of the classics in France and who helped organize a great library, which became the Bibliothèque Nationale. 1467–1540

JEAN CLOUET A noted portrait painter; he worked in France nearly all his life. c1485–c1540

F. RABELAIS Scholar, Humanist, and author of classic of satire, Gargantua and Pantagruel. c1490–1553

ROSSO FIORENTINO First of several Italians brought to France (1530) by King Francis I and who developed the influential Fontainebleau School of French painting; joined by Primaticcio and others, the school evolved styles of painting and decorative sculpture. 1494–1540

P. DELORME Great Renaissance architect; introduced a classical style to French architecture; did initial design of Tuileries Palace. c1510–70

PIERRE LESCOT Architect who developed decorative style; his work contributed to rise of French classicism; with sculptor Jean Goujon designed part of the Louvre. c1515–78

P. DE RONSARD Great Renaissance poet; he was a leader of the famous group of French Renaissance poets, the Pléiade; other members were Joachim du Bellay, Antoine de Baïf, Etienne Jodelle, Pontus de Tyard, Jean Dorat, and Rémi Belleau. 1525–85

M. DE MONTAIGNE Great essayist, noted for his three books of essays revealing spirit of Humanism and his mastery of style. 1533–92

Renaissance in England

J. FISHER A noted scholar, Humanist, and theologian, he promoted scholarly study in England; martyred for refusing to yield to King Henry VIII. 1459–1535

J. COLET Was a leading exponent of scholarly studies and of Humanism. 1467?–1519

T. MORE He was an important advocate of Humanism and wrote the classic Utopia. 1478–1535

ROGER ASCHAM Scholar, Humanist, and author who promoted the English vernacular. 1515–68

E. SPENSER One of the greatest Elizabethan poets, he wrote the Faerie Queene and other works. c1552–99

P. SIDNEY Noted Renaissance courtier and poet; wrote the essay The Defense of Poetry. 1554–86

F. BACON Philosopher and essayist, author of noted works, including Novum Organum and The New Atlantis; his work in inductive logic proved important to the later advances in scientific thought. 1561–1626

C. MARLOWE Leading poet and dramatist; introduced use of blank verse and psychological themes in English drama. 1564–93

W. SHAKESPEARE Perhaps the greatest dramatist of all time; his many famous plays mark the culmination of the Elizabethan Age. 1564–1616

I. JONES Architect; he introduced the Renaissance Palladian style in England. 1573–1652

Renaissance in Spain

CARDINAL JIMÉNEZ Promoted classical studies and founded the University of Alcala. 1436–1517

FERNANDO DE HERRERA Humanist and leading neoclassic poet of 16th-cent. Spain. 1534?–97

M. DE CERVANTES Leading figure of the Renaissance in Spain, he wrote the great classic Don Quixote. 1547–1616

L. DE VEGA The virtual founder of Spanish drama, he wrote some 1,800 plays; introduced Italian forms to Spanish poetry. 1562–1635

Renan, Ernest 1823–92. French historian, Orientalist, and writer. He left the seminary after a crisis of faith and afterward wrote about religion from a naturalistic point of view.

René 1409–80. King of Naples (1435–80) and duke of Anjou, Bar, and Lorraine. Involved in the dynastic politics of the time, he was driven out of Naples (1442) by his Aragonese rivals and retired to Provence to devote himself to the arts.

Renewed Church of the Brethren See Moravian Church

Reni, Guido 1575–1642. Italian painter of the Bolognese school. His works include the Crucifixion of St. Peter and his masterpiece, Aurora and the Hours.

Renner, Karl 1870–1950. First leader of the Austrian republican government, 1918–20, and president of Austria, 1945–50. A socialist, Renner held many key positions in the interwar period and advocated the union of Austria and Germany prior to WW II.

Renoir, Jean 1894–1979. French film director. A son of the painter P. Renoir, he is known for his imaginative cinematic effects. His films include the antiwar masterpiece La Grande Illusion.

Renoir, Pierre Auguste 1841–1919. French impressionist painter. He was noted for such effects as light filtering through leaves (Le Moulin de la Galette). Later in his career he returned to more formal techniques (Bathers) and then developed a style marked by its sensuousness.

Renville* Agreement Truce (Jan. 17, 1948) between the Dutch and the Indonesians, signed on the US Navy ship Renville. It marked a lull in the fighting between the Dutch and the Indonesian republicans and remained officially in effect, supplementing the Linggadjati Agreement (q.v.), until Indonesia obtained independence (1949).

reparations Payments required of a defeated nation for war damages, especially those imposed on Germany after WW I and WW II. German WW I reparations set by the Treaty of Versailles amounted to $32 billion, and the Dawes Plan for repayment was formulated (1924). Economic hardship and the worldwide Depression resulted in the Young Plan (1930), but by 1932 Germany had ceased to make further payments. After WW II, German reparations were officially canceled in 1954.

repartimiento Spanish-American colonial system by which colonists were allowed to recruit specified numbers of Indians for forced labor. The system assumed definite form by 1575 and, though progressively modified, continued in some form until the 19th cent.

republic Form of government in which power is vested in officers who represent the public and who govern in accordance with established laws for the sake of the common good. The government of the United States is a federal republic.

Republic, Council of the Preparliament Russian provisional government (Oct.–Nov., 1917), headed by A. Kerensky. Largely ineffective, it was swept away in the Bolshevik seizure of power.

Republic, Roman See Roman Republic; Rome

Republic of See names inverted.

Republican party One of the two major American political parties. Founded (1854) by antislavery Whigs and others who were opposed to the Kansas-Nebraska Act (1854) and the extension of slavery into new US territories, it received support from abolitionists, Free-Soilers, Know-Nothings, and others. Its first presidential candidate, J. Frémont, was defeated in the 1856 election, but its second, A. Lincoln, gained the presidency (1860) and thereby precipitated secession of the southern states and, ultimately, the Civil War. During the war, the party split into moderate and radical factions. The radical Republicans favored harsh Reconstruction measures against the South, and their struggle with Lincoln's successor, A. Johnson, led to impeachment proceedings (1868). Their activities during the administration of U. Grant led to formation of the Liberal Republican party, which unsuccessfully ran H. Greeley against Grant in the 1872 elections.

Other breaks in the Republican party occurred in 1884, when the Mugwumps (q.v.) abandoned the party to support Democrat G. Cleveland, and in 1912, when the progressive wing of the party formed the Progressive (Bull Moose) party (q.v.). This Republican split secured the election for the Democrat, W. Wilson. The Republican party, traditionally more conservative than its Democratic counterpart, was hurt in the 20th cent. by corruption in the administration of W. Harding and by the beginning of the Great Depression during the administration of H. Hoover. Hoover was defeated for reelection (1932) by F. Roosevelt, and the Republicans did not regain the presidency until the election (1952) of D. Eisenhower. Subsequent Republican presidents include R. Nixon, G. Ford, and R. Reagan.

Republican People's party Turkish political party. Formed in 1923 by K. Atatürk, it was Turkey's ruling party until 1950. Since then it has been the leading opposition party (to the Democrat party), with periods of rule. It is republican, secularist, and increasingly leftist in orientation.

Republic of China See Taiwan

Resaca de la Palma, Battle of Second major battle (May 9, 1846) of the Mexican War (1846–48), fought near present-day Brownsville, Texas. An American force, led by Gen. Z. Taylor, intercepted and defeated the Mexican army, under the leadership of Gen. Mariano Arista, then retreating after the Battle of Palo Alto.

Resistance Underground political and paramilitary forces that grew inside the countries occupied by Germany during WW II. The French Resistance was notable among them. Its network provided intelligence, published clandestine newspapers, and carried out sabotage, especially after the Allied landings (1944) on the Continent. (See also Partisans.)

Respighi, Ottorino 1879–1936. Italian composer. His works, such as The Pines of Rome and The Fountain of Rome, were influenced by the Russian and German Romantics.

Restoration 1. Period in English history (1660–88) that included the reigns of Charles II and James II. It began with the restoration of the monarchy under Charles after the experiment in republican government failed (see Protectorate). Growing opposition to the Protectorate (now dominated by the military) prompted one of the military leaders, G. Monck, to take control of London (1659). The royalist Convention Parliament (q.v.) was convened, and Monck made arrangements for Charles' restoration. Charles then issued the Declaration of Breda (q.v.), returned to England (1660), and assumed authority. His subsequent reign was marked by a reaction against Puritans and the policies of austerity they imposed on English life during the Protectorate; enactment of harsh measures by the Cavalier Parliament to ensure religious uniformity with the Church of England (see Clarendon Code); the rise of anti-Catholic sentiment; the beginnings of the Whig and Tory parties; and a series of misfortunes, including outbreak of the plague (1665), the Great Fire of London (1666), and losses in the Second Dutch War (1664–67). Under James II, anti-Catholic sentiment and reaction against his absolutism quickly brought about (1688) the Glorious Revolution (q.v.) and the end of the Restoration period. 2. Period in French history (1814–30) that began with Napoleon's fall from power and restoration of the Bourbon monarchs. Largely through the efforts of C. Talleyrand, Louis XVIII assumed power after Napoleon's first abdication (Apr. 11, 1814), in what is called the First Restoration. His rule was interrupted by Napoleon's Hundred Days (q.v.), however, and the Second Restoration began after Napoleon's second abdication (June 22, 1815). The Restoration period included the reigns of Louis and his successor, Charles X. It was marked by France's recovery from its defeat under Napoleon and growing friction between the royalist and republican factions. The Restoration was ended (1830) when these tensions culminated in the July Revolution (q.v.).

resurrection Central Christian doctrine holding that the dead will rise in possession of glorified bodies. This expectation is based on the belief in Christ's resurrection from the dead. Resurrection is a facet of other religions, including Islam.

Retz, Gilles de Laval, seigneur de ⟨Rais, ~, ~⟩ 1404–40. French soldier, nobleman, and marshal of France. A companion of Joan of Arc, he was later convicted of torturing and killing more than 100 children in his castle in Brittany. He thus inspired, it is thought, the Bluebeard legend.

Reuben Eldest son of the biblical patriarch Jacob. Reuben was ancestor of one of the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

Reuchlin, Johann 1455–1522. German humanist scholar. He was the first Christian to compose a Hebrew grammar, the Rudimenta Hebraica, and he defended the study of Hebrew writings before the Inquisition. He also did important studies in classical Greek.

Reuter, Paul Julius 1816–99. Founder of the first news wire service, Reuters. Born Israel Beer Josaphat, he developed Reuters from a carrier-pigeon service into a worldwide telegraph network transmitting commerical news.

Reuther, Walter Philip 1907–70. American labor leader. He was a president of the United Automobile Workers (UAW) and helped arrange the merger of the CIO (of which he was also president) with the AFL (1955). He broke with AFL-CIO president G. Meany, however, and took the UAW out of the federation in 1969.

Revere, Paul 1735–1818. American Revolutionary hero, immortalized in the poem by H.W. Longfellow. A Boston silversmith, Revere became involved early in the movement for independence and participated (1773) in the Boston Tea Party. A courier for Boston's Committee of Safety, he started out on what became his legendary ride to warn of the coming of British soldiers (Apr. 18, 1775). He was captured by a British patrol, but his two companions, Samuel Prescott (1751–77?) and William Daws (1745–99) escaped. Prescott then went on to complete the mission. The Minutemen were thus prepared for the battles of Lexington and Concord (Apr. 19, 1775), which marked the beginning of the American Revolution.

Reversal of Alliances See Diplomatic Revolution

reverse lend-lease See lend-lease revival Among Protestant churches, a mass reawakening of religious fervor, especially for intense religious experience. Use of the term dates from the rise of Methodism in England and the Great Awakening (q.v.) in the US (18th cent.).

Revocation of the Edict of Nantes See Nantes, Edict of Revolt of See names inverted, as in Ciompi, Revolt of the revolution See under country names (i.e., American, Russian, Chinese) and proper names (i.e., Glorious Revolution) revolution Fundamental change in political institutions, leadership, and social structure, often accompanied by violence. Classic examples are the American, French, Russian, and Chinese revolutions.

Revolution of 1800 See Adams, John revolutions of 1848 Revolutions in Europe sparked by the French February Revolution (q.v.) of 1848, which overthrew French king Louis Philippe. Soon after the February Revolution, uprisings in Vienna, Prague, Venice, and other cities marked the beginning of a general uprising of national groups within the control of Hapsburg Austria. Austrian emperor Ferdinand was forced to make constitutional concessions in Austria, Hungary, and Bohemia, and was faced with a rising movement for independence in Italy. The revolutions led to Ferdinand's abdication (Dec., 1848) and the accession of his nephew as Francis Joseph I. The uprisings in Bohemia and Italy began to fail in 1848. In Aug. 1849, Francis Joseph, with Russian aid, crushed the revolution in Hungary and forced many of its leaders, including L. Kossuth, to flee. In Germany the uprisings led to establishment (May 18, 1848) of the liberal Frankfurt Parliament, which sought to reform the German Confederation into a unified state. The Parliament, after much deliberation, adopted a new constitution (Mar. 27, 1849) and offered the crown to Prussian king Frederick William IV, who declined. The Prussians, however, tried to form the Prussian Union, under their domination, but the plan was effectively blocked by Austria by the Punctation of Olmütz (Nov. 29, 1850), which reestablished the old German Confederation. In the meantime, Austria had also reasserted its authority in Italy, Bohemia, and Hungary.

Reyes, Alfonso 1889–1959. Mexican poet, writer, and diplomat, one of the great Spanish literary figures of this century. Among his works are the poem Visión de Anáhuac and the essay Simpatías y diferencias.

Reyes, Rafael 1850–1921. President of Colombia (1904–09). Elected president, he assumed dictatorial powers and tried to promote the development and modernization of Colombia.

Reykjavik Iceland's capital city (pop. 83,887). It has one-third of the population of Iceland and is the center of the country's extensive cod-fishing industry. It was founded in 874 as the island's first settlement and became the capital in 1904.

Reynaud, Paul 1878–1966. French statesman. A conservative, he held several ministerial posts under the Third and Fourth French republics, and was prime minister when France fell to the Germans (1940) in WW II.

Reynolds, Sir Joshua 1723–92. English portrait painter. He painted in the "grand style" and dominated the artistic life of the mid-18th cent.

Reza Shah Pahlevi 1877–1944. Shah of Iran (1925–41). An army officer, he led a coup (1921) and later became prime minister (1923). He subsequently assumed dictatorial powers, ousted the shah, Ahmed (1925), and began a program of reform and modernization. He changed the name of his country from Persia to Iran (1935).

Rhaetia ⟨Raetia⟩ Ancient Roman province, added to the empire in 15 BC. It occupied an important position in the Alps between the Danube and the Po. Its principal city was the modern Italian city of Trent.

Rhea Greek mother goddess, born of Uranus and Gaea (heaven and earth). She was mother of most of the other major Greek gods, including Zeus, and was worshiped as a fertility goddess.

Rhee, Syngman 1875–1965. First president of South Korea (1948–60). The first Korean to earn an American Ph.D., he worked for Korean independence from Japan. He ruled South Korea as a popular but authoritarian president, until forced from office on election-rigging charges.

Rheims ⟨Reims⟩ City (pop. 183,600) in northern France, site of the Gothic cathedral where French kings were traditionally crowned. Clovis, the king of the Franks, was first crowned there in AD 496, and from the 12th to 19th cents. it was used for royal coronations. The cathedral was heavily damaged in WW I but was restored. In WW II, the German surrender (1945) was signed at Rheims.

Rhine, Confederation of the See Confederation of the Rhine

Rhineland Region of West Germany west of the Rhine River, and a frequent battleground. After WW I the Treaty of Versailles (1919) provided for occupation of most of it by Allied forces and for its eventual demilitarization (reaffirmed 1925 in the Locarno Pact). The last Allied forces (French) left in 1930. In 1936, Hitler remilitarized the region in clear defiance of the treaty and constructed the Siegfried Line (q.v.).

Rhode Island Northeastern US state (pop. 947,200), the 13th state. The Dutch under Adriaen Block explored the region in 1614 and it was settled by R. Williams (1636) after he was exiled from Massachusetts for religious differences. He was granted a charter (1663) by Charles II to forestall claims by Massachusetts and Connecticut. Rhode Island was one of the first colonies to renounce allegiance to England but refused to ratify the Constitution until 1790. Industrial development began (1790) with S. Slater's textile mill in Pawtucket. Rhode Island's constitution was adopted in 1842 after a rebellion led by T. Dorr.

Rhodes Historic Greek city on the island of Rhodes. It was laid out by Hippodamus in 408 BC and was the site of the Colossus of Rhodes (q.v.), one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Rhodes flourished as a commercial and cultural center until the 2d cent. BC, when competition from Delos resulted in its decline.

Rhodes, Cecil John 1853–1902. British South African statesman and financier. He worked for the extension and consolidation of southern African territories under British domination, made a fortune in diamonds, and endowed the Rhodes scholarships at Oxford.

Rhodes, Colossus of See Colossus of Rhodes

Rhys, Ernest Percival 1859–1946. Welsh writer and critic. He was best known as the editor of nearly all the 1,000 volumes of the world's great books collected in the Everyman's Library series.

Ribalta, Francisco *c*1555?–1628. Influential Spanish painter, noted for his contrasts of light and dark coloring. His paintings include Christ Embracing Saint Bernard.

Ribault, Jean See Ribaut, Jean

Ribaut, Jean ⟨Ribault, Jean⟩ *c*1520–65. French navigator and explorer. He established French forts and early colonies in South Carolina and Florida in the 1560s. He and the settlers were ultimately killed by the Spaniards.

Ribbentrop, Joachim von 1893–1946. German diplomat and Nazi foreign minister (1938–45). He concluded the Russo-German nonagression pact of Aug., 1939, which paved the way for Hitler's attack on Poland (the immediate cause of WW II). He was executed as a war criminal after the war.

Ricardo, David 1772–1823. English economist. He was a pioneer in the development and systematization of economic theory, especially in such areas as value theory, price levels, and free trade.

Ricci, Matteo 1552–1610. Italian Jesuit missionary in China. By mastering the Chinese language and classics, he was able to interpret Christianity and the West for the Chinese literati and thus introduced them to European culture.

Richard I ⟨Richard Coeur de Lion⟩ ⟨Richard Lion-Heart⟩ 1157–99. King of England (1189–99), successor to his father, Henry II, and hero of popular legends. He became duke of Aquitaine (1172), joined his brothers in a rebellion (1173–74) against their father, and defeated him in another clash (1189). He joined (1190) Philip II of France on the Third Crusade, shortly after becoming king. He conquered Cyprus and with Philip took Acre (1191), but was forced into a treaty with Saladin after failing to take Jerusalem. On his way back to England he was captured in Austria and held for ransom (until 1194) by Holy Roman Emperor Henry VI. He then returned to England, put down a revolt by his brother John, and spent the remainder of his reign fighting Philip II in France.

Richard II 1367–1400. King of England (1377–99), successor to Edward III. Conflicts with his barons eventually led to his overthrow by his cousin, Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster, who became Henry IV. He was the son of Edward the Black Prince.

Richard III 1452–85. Last Yorkist king of England (1483–85). He took the throne from his brother, Edward IV, eliminating the latter's young sons, until he was defeated and killed in the Battle of Bosworth Field (q.v.), which ended the Wars of the Roses (q.v.).

Richard Coeur de Lion See Richard I

Richard Lion-Heart See Richard I

Richardson, Dorothy M. 1882–1957. English novelist. She was a pioneer in the stream-of-consciousness technique, employed in her novel Pilgrimage.

Richardson, Henry Hobson 1838–86. American architect. He pioneered the Romanesque revival in America, employing the style in such buildings as Boston's Trinity Church, completed in 1877.

Richardson, Samuel 1689–1761. English novelist. His epistolary novel Pamela: or Virtue Rewarded (1740) was one of the first true English novels. Richardson's other works include Clarissa; or the History of a Young Lady.

Richelieu, Armand Jean du Plessis, duc de 1585–1642. French cardinal and chief minister (1624–42) to Louis XIII. Made a cardinal in 1622, he rose to power as a favorite of Louis' mother, Marie de Médicis. His domestic policy aimed at weakening the power of the nobility and the Huguenots to establish the central absolute authority of the monarchy. His foreign policy sought to end Hapsburg power. He formed alliances with Protestants during the Thirty Years' War (1618–48) and finally brought France into it (1635) against the Hapsburg powers. The wars wrecked French finances but marked the country's ascendency as a major power.

Richmond Virginia capital city (pop. 219,200), the commercial and cultural center of the region. Settled in 1637, it was made Virginia's capital in 1779 and was incorporated in 1782. It became the capital of the Confederacy in 1861, was burned by the retreating Confederates (1865), and was later rebuilt.

Richter, Hans 1843–1916. Hungarian-born conductor. He was a major orchestra conductor in both Germany and England and a noted authority on the operas of his friend R. Wagner.

Richthofen, Manfred, baron von 1892–1918. German pilot in WW I, known as the "Red Baron." He led the German air group known as Richthofen's Circus and was credited with downing 80 Allied aircraft, a record that made him the principal ace of WW I. He was killed in action on Apr. 21, 1918.

Ricimer d. AD 472. Roman general of Germanic (Suevian) origin. He defeated the Vandals in 456, and then deposed the Western Roman emperor Avitus. While retaining real power, he subsequently installed and ousted a series of emperors (457–472).

Rickenbacker, Edward Vernon 1890–1973. American pilot, WW I ace and industrialist. He downed a record 26 German planes in WW I and later became president and chairman of Eastern Airlines.

Rickover, Hyman George 1900–. American admiral. He directed the planning and building of the world's first atomic-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus, launched in 1954.

Ridgway, Matthew Bunker 1895–. American general. He pioneered paratrooper assaults by American forces in Sicily and Normandy during WW II. He later became supreme commander of UN forces in Korea (1951–52) and NATO forces in Europe (1952–53) and served as US chief of staff (1953–55).

Ridley, Nicholas 1500?–55. English bishop, reformer, and Protestant martyr. As bishop of London, he was one of the most effective English reformers. A supporter of the Protestant Lady Jane Grey, he was tried and burned at Oxford with Hugh Latimer after Mary Tudor became queen.

Ridolfi, Roberto 1531–1612. Italian conspirator involved in a plot (1520–71) to restore Catholics to power in England. He planned to murder Queen Elizabeth I and replace her with Mary Queen of Scots, who was to marry the duke of Norfolk. The plan was uncovered when one of the conspirators was captured and confessed. Ridolfi escaped but the duke of Norfolk was beheaded.

Riego y Nuñez, Rafael del 1785–1823. Spanish rebel, a leader in the 1820 liberal revolution.

Riehl, Wilhelm Heinrich 1823–97. German writer. He was a novelist, short-story writer, and a distinguished historian of culture.

Riel's Rebellions Two brief revolts in western Canada against the government. Both were led by Louis Riel (1844–85). In 1869–70, Riel organized the Metis (half European, half Indian) of the Red River area into a provisional government, in order to prevent Canada from taking over the land that until then had been administered by the Hudson's Bay Company. The government crushed the revolt, but gave Red River its own provincial government, and Riel went to America. He led a second revolt (1884–85) on behalf of the Metis of Saskatchewan, but was captured and hanged.

Riemann, Georg Friedrich Bernhard 1826–66. German mathematician. A highly original thinker, he made many contributions to the science of geometry, some of which were later important to the mathematics of the theory of relativity.

Rienzi, Cola di ⟨Rienzo, ~⟩ 1313–54. Popular leader of the medieval city of Rome. He began as an official under authority of the pope (residing at Avignon) and then conceived his grandiose plan of restoring the Roman Empire. He assumed dictatorial powers over the city for a time but was eventually killed by a mob.

Rienzo, Cola di See Rienzi, Cola di

Riga Russian city (pop. 843,000) in the Soviet Socialist Republic of Latvia. It became a trading settlement and seat of the Livonian Knights (q.v.) in the early 13th cent., joined the Hanseatic League (q.v.) in 1282, and thereafter became an important commercial center. It came under Polish control (1581) and then was taken by the Russians (1710) during the Northern War. The city became an industrial center in the 19th cent. Then, in the Baltic War of Liberation (1918–20), it became capital of independent Latvia. Taken by the Germans in 1941, it was retaken by the Russians after WW II.

Riga, Treaty of 1. Treaty (Aug. 11, 1920) between Latvia and Russia, at the close of the Baltic War of Liberation (q.v.). By it, Russia recognized Latvia's independence. 2. Treaty (Mar. 18, 1921) ending the Russo-Polish War (1919–20). By it, Russia ceded parts of the Ukraine and Belorussia to Poland.

Right Opposition Opponents of J. Stalin in the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party (1928–29). The former "left-wing Bolshevik" N. Bukharin was sometimes considered the leader of this opposition.

Rights and Grievances, Declaration of See Stamp Act Congress

Rights of Man, and of the Citizen, Declaration of the French Revolutionary manifesto. Drafted by E. Sieyes and adopted by the French National Assembly on Aug. 26, 1789, this document outlined inalienable rights of individuals. In 1791, it became the preamble to the French constitution, guaranteeing rights of representation, equality before the law, protection of property and from arrest, and freedom of religion, speech, and the press.

Riis, Jacob August 1849–1914. Danish-born American writer and social reformer. He became famous for his book exposing the conditions in New York tenements, How the Other Half Lives, published in 1890.

Rijn, Rembrandt Harmenszoon van See Rembrandt

Riksdag Swedish parliament. Formed as a two-chamber body in 1866, it was reduced to a single chamber in 1971. The government is responsible to the Riksdag and, since 1975, the Riksdag speaker has had the right to name the premier. From 1435 to 1865, "Riksdag" was the name of Sweden's states general, which included the peasantry as a fourth estate.

Rilke, Rainer Maria 1875–1926. Austrian poet. Considered a major 20th-century literary figure, he is best known for his Duino Elegies and Sonnets to Orpheus.

Rimbaud, Arthur 1854–91. French poet. He developed a mystical, hallucinatory style in such works as A Season in Hell and thereby greatly influenced the later symbolist poets.

Rimini, Golden Bull of See Golden Bull of Rimini

Rimsky-Korsakov, Nicolai Andreyevich 1844–1908. Russian composer. One of the Russian nationalist composers, he is best known for such orchestral works as Scheherezade and such operas as The Golden Cockerel.

Ringling, John ⟨orig. Rüngeling, John⟩ 1866–1936. American circus impresario. With five brothers, he organized a circus in 1884, bought out Barnum and Bailey in 1907, and, at his death, had sole control of the extensive Ringling Brothers Circus operation.

Rio de Janeiro Brazilian city (pop. 4,857,700) and major port. It was first settled by the French (1535) but by 1567 it had become a Portuguese possession. It was the capital of Brazil (1763–1960) from colonial times until establishment of the new capital of Brasilia.

Rio de Janeiro, Treaty of Mutual defense treaty (Sept. 2, 1947) between the US and the Latin American republics. It provided for a united response to attack by outside aggressors and for settlement of disputes between signers.

Rio Salado, Battle of Major victory (Oct. 30, 1340) for Christians over the Muslims (Moors) in Spain. Muslims from North Africa launched their last major invasion of Iberia, and Christians thus faced both Spanish and North African Muslims. King Alfonso XI of Castile and Alfonso IV of Portugal joined forces and routed the Muslims at Seville. The victory marked the beginning of the final phase of the Christian takeover in southern Spain.

Ripley, George 1802–80. American reformer and literary critic. He helped establish the utopian Brook Farm (q.v.) experiment and later became an influential book reviewer for the New York Tribune.

Risorgimento Italian nationalistic movement resulting in a unified Italian state (1861). In the early 19th cent., during the post-Napoleonic period in Europe, sentiment for unification of Italy, at that time divided and dominated by foreign powers, arose. The Carbonari (q.v.), as well as other secret societies, and G. Mazzini's nationalistic movement (Young Italy) were formed and, by the mid-1800s, the unification movement had gained momentum. Abortive liberal republican revolts failed in 1848–49. The Austrians were driven out of north Italy (1859) and G. Garibaldi's successful military campaign (1860) won much of the rest of Italy for the nationalists. Victor Emmanuel was crowned king of Italy in 1861.

Ristori, Adelaide 1822–1906. Italian tragic actress. She won fame as a child actress in Italy and later became renowned throughout Europe and the Americas.

Rites Controversy Religious dispute (17th–18th cents.) among Catholic missionaries in China about whether Confucian ancestor veneration was compatible with Christian worship. The Jesuits tended to favor the rites, while the Dominicans and Franciscans tended to oppose them. Pope Clement XI banned all ancestral rites in 1704, making further Jesuit missionary work difficult.

Ritschl, Albrecht 1822–89. German Protestant theologian. His work was a reaction against rationalism and stressed the unique revelation contained in the life and teachings of Jesus.

Ritter, Karl 1779–1859. German geographer. One of the founders of modern scientific geography, he was noted for his study of the influence of natural environment on human history.

Rivadavia, Bernardino 1780–1845. Argentine diplomat and statesman, and first president (1826–27) of the United Provinces of La Plata, an Argentine confederation.

Rivera, Diego 1886–1957. Mexican painter. Known for his realistic murals, many on the life and history of Mexico, he identified strongly with populist and leftist causes.

Rivera, José Eustasio 1889–1928. Colombian poet and novelist. He is known for his sonnets and his novel about the rubber gatherers in the Amazon jungle, The Vortex.

Rizal, José 1861–96. Philippine writer and nationalist leader. He wrote novels against the Spanish rule in the Philippines. Accused of instigating the revolt against Spain in 1896, he was tried and executed.

Roanoke Colony See Lost Colony

Robbins, Frederick Chapman 1916–. American physician. A professor of pediatrics, he shared the 1954 Nobel Prize in Medicine with John Enders (1897–) and Thomas Weller (1915–) for discoveries concerning the polio virus.

Robert I *c*865–923. Frankish king (922–23). Ruling the land between the Seine and the Loire, he revolted against Charles III, and was made king of the Franks. He was killed in battle soon after. His grandson was Hugh Capet.

Robert I d. 1035. Duke of Normandy (1027–35). A strong ruler, he established order in his domains and aided Henry I of France. By his mistress, he fathered William I ("the Conquerer"), whom he legitimatized and made his heir.

Robert I ⟨Robert the Bruce⟩ 1274–1329. Scottish king (1306–29) and hero of Scottish independence. Following a struggle with John Comyn (d. 1306) for leadership of the Scottish nationalists, Robert was crowned king of Scotland (Mar. 27, 1306) in defiance of the English. He was decisively defeated by the English at the Battle of Methven (June 19, 1306) and was driven into hiding on Rathlin Island, off the Irish coast. There, according to tradition, he renewed his determination to free Scotland after watching a spider persevere in making a web. He returned to Scotland (1307), won new supporters, and ultimately defeated the English at the famous Battle of Bannockburn (q.v.). The English recognized Scottish independence by the Treaty of Northampton (1328).

Robert II *c*970–1031. French King (996–1031), successor to his father, Hugh Capet.

Robert II ⟨Robert Curthose⟩ *c*1054–1134. Duke of Normandy (1087–1106). The eldest son of William I ("the Conquerer"), he inherited Normandy, while his brother William II took England. Robert was a leader of the First Crusade.

Robert II 1316–90. King of Scotland (1371–90). He was several times regent during the exiles of his uncle, David II. He eventually succeeded him and thus founded the Stuart line of Scottish (and later British) kings.

Robert III *c*1340–1406. King of Scotland (1390–1406). He ruled (from 1384) for his father, Robert II, until incapacitated by injury in 1388. His brother and his son ruled for him after he became king.

Robert, Henry Martyn 1837–1923. American general and writer. He wrote the famous Robert's Rules of Order (1876) for public meetings.

Robert, Saint See Cistercians

Robert Curthose See Robert II

Robert Guiscard *c*1015–85. Norman adventurer in Italy and founder of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. He was invested by the pope with the rule of southern Italian lands but they remained to be conquered from the Saracens. With his brother Roger I he conquered Sicily, Calabria, Bari, and Salerno. He next took Corfu from the Byzantines (1082). He returned to rescue Pope Gregory VII from Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV, and Robert's troops entered and sacked Rome (1084).

Robert of Courteney d. 1228. Latin emperor of Constantinople (1218–28). It was under his ineffective reign that the Latin Empire of Constantinople was reduced to the city and environs.

Robert of Geneva d. 1394. Genevan churchman and antipope Clement VII (1378–94). After electing Pope Urban VI, the cardinals reversed themselves and elected Robert, who took up residence at Avignon. This began the Great Schism (q.v.).

Roberts, Charles G. D. See Confederation group

Roberts, Sir Charles George Douglas 1860–1943. Canadian author. He was noted for his stories set in the Canadian wilderness and his popular History of Canada.

Roberts, Owen Josephus 1875–1955. American jurist and associate justice of the US Supreme Court (1930–45). He was prosecutor in the Teapot Dome scandal, followed a generally conservative line as justice, and later headed the commission investigating the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Robert the Bruce See Robert I

Robert the Strong See Capetians

Robespierre, Maximilien François Marie Isidore de 1758–94. French revolutionary. As a lawyer and head of the Jacobins, he was known as "the Incorruptible." He became a member of the National Convention. There, as a leader of the radical Montagnards, he played an important role in ousting (1793) the moderate Girondists from power, and thus in altering the course of the revolution. He next joined (July 27, 1793) and dominated the Committee of Public Safety (q.v.) and through it became the leading power behind the Reign of Terror (q.v.), which he ultimately used to eliminate even his former allies. He was finally ousted in the coup of 9 Thermidor (July 27, 1794) and was tried and executed the following day.

Robin Hood Legendary English hero, whose exploits were the subject of many ballads from the 13th cent. on. He is portrayed as the leader of an outlaw band in Sherwood Forest. He and his men robbed from the rich, gave to the poor, and were always at odds with the hated sheriff of Nottingham.

Robinson, Charles 1818–94. American antislavery leader and first governor of the state of Kansas (1861–63). He was involved in Bleeding Kansas (q.v.), was imprisoned for a time by the proslavery forces in the territory, and assumed the governorship (1861) after Kansas became a state.

Robinson, Edwin Arlington 1869–1935. American poet. He is best known for his series of poems about the common people of the imaginary Tilbury Town. Among them are "Richard Cory," "Miniver Cheevy," and "Luke Havergal."

Rob Roy 1671–1734. Scottish freebooter whose name was Robert MacGregor. As head of the MacGregor clan, he led them in cattle-stealing raids and other ventures. His exploits were celebrated in Sir W. Scott's novel Rob Roy.

Robusti, Jacopo See Tintoretto

Roca, Julio Argentino 1843–1914. Argentine soldier and president (1880–86, 1896–1904). As an army general he opened up Patagonia for settlement. His term as president was marked by rapid development and increased financial speculation.

Rochambeau, Jean Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, comte de 1725–1807. French general. Having distinguished himself as a commander in Europe, he was sent (1780) with 6,000 troops to America during the revolution. Accompanying Washington, he was instrumental in winning the Battle of Yorktown (q.v.), which ended the American Revolution.

Rochdale Society of Equitable Pioneers First successful consumers' cooperative. It was founded in Rochdale, England, in 1844, on the basis of the ideas of R. Owen. The society began with a grocery store and later expanded to include a textile mill and factory on the same cooperative principles.

Rochefort, Victor-Henri, marquis de Rochefort-Lucay 1830–1913. French journalist. He moved from the extreme left to the extreme right, at first opposing Napoleon III and supporting the Paris Commune (1871). He then turned to G. Boulanger and later the nationalists in the Dreyfus Affair.

Rochester,John Wilmot, 2d earl of 1647–80. English courtier and poet. Notoriously dissolute, he nevertheless fought bravely against the Dutch. He was noted for his satiric poems. Among them were History of Insipids, Maim'd Debauchee, and A Satyr Against Mankind.

Rockefeller, John Davison 1839–1937. American millionaire industrialist and philanthropist. First employed as a bookkeeper, he later organized (with partners) the Standard Oil Company (1870). Thereafter Rockefeller gained control of the oil industry, built Standard Oil into one of the great trusts, and amassed a huge fortune. His company was the object of government antitrust suits in the early 1900s, and after 1911 Rockefeller turned to philanthropy, notably through his Rockefeller Foundation (established 1913).

Rockefeller, John Davison, Jr. 1874–1960. American industrialist and philanthropist. Heir to his father's vast Standard Oil fortune, he was especially noted for his philanthropies, such as funding the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg and donating the land for the United Nations building.

Rockefeller, Nelson Aldrich 1908–79. Forty-first US vice-president (1974–77) and heir to the vast Rockefeller family fortune. A liberal Republican, he served four terms as New York governor (1959–73) and was nominated to the vice-presidency by G. Ford. He was a noted philanthropist and patron of the arts.

Rockefeller, William 1841–1922. American financier. Associated with his brother J. Rockefeller in the oil business, he also had other stock-market, industrial, and banking interests.

Rockingham, Charles Watson-Wentworth, 2d marquess of 1730–82. British prime minister (1765–66, 1782). He attempted to conciliate the American colonies and repealed the Stamp Act during his first ministry. His second ministry, following the collapse of Lord North's government, saw the repeal of Poynings' Law (q.v.) but ended before final peace had been made with the American colonials.

Rock of Gibraltar See Gibraltar

Rockwell, Norman 1894–1978. American painter and illustrator. Best known for his covers for the Saturday Evening Post magazine, he painted scenes typical of American life in a realistic style.

rococo Artistic style that succeeded the baroque in Europe. Originating in 18th-cent. France, the rococo style was characterized by highly ornate and decorative designs and lines.

Rodgers, Richard 1902–79. American composer of musical comedies. He produced many outstanding musical shows in collaboration with L. Hart and O. Hammerstein II, winning Pulitzer prizes with the latter for Oklahoma and South Pacific.

Rodin, Auguste 1840–1917. Great French sculptor, whose works were executed in a style of Romantic realism. Many of his most famous pieces were studies to be included in the unfinished bronze doors for Paris' Musée des Arts Décoratifs. They include Adam and Eve, The Thinker, and The Kiss. He is noted also for The Burghers of Calais.

Rodney, George Brydges Rodney, 1st baron 1719–92. British admiral, Rodney distinguished himself during the Seven Years' War. He became a national hero by defeating the Spanish, relieving Gibraltar (1780), and the French off Dominica (1782), in fighting related to the American Revolution.

Rodó, José Enrique 1872–1917. Uruguayan writer and philosopher. He upheld spiritual over material values in his most famous essay, Ariel, and was considered one of the great Latin American philosophers.

Roebling, John Augustus 1806–69. American civil engineer, born in Germany. He pioneered the use of steel cable in bridge-building, built major suspension bridges at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and Niagara, and began the Brooklyn Bridge (completed by his son).

Roebling, Washington Augustus 1837–1926. American civil engineer and bridge builder. The son of J. Roebling, he was associated with his father's firm and completed the building of the Brooklyn Bridge (opened 1883), which had been begun by his father.

Roehm, Ernst See Röhm, Ernst

Roemer, Olaus See Rømer, Olaus

Roentgen, Wilhelm Conrad ⟨Röntgen, ~⟩ 1845–1923. German physicist. He discovered X-rays (1895) while serving as director of the Würzburg Physical Institute and thus revolutionized the practice of medicine. He received the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1901.

Roger I *c*1031–1101. Norman conquerer and count of Sicily. He helped his brother Robert Guiscard conquer southern Italy from the Saracens and Byzantines. He ruled these domains as a papal legate after the death of his brother.

Roger II 1097–1154. Count (1101–30) and then Norman king of Sicily (1130–54). He consolidated the lands conquered by his Norman kinsmen and added Capua, Naples, and the Abruzzi. His rule was one of the most advanced of the times and he brought a period of prosperity. His capital at Palermo became a cultural center.

Roger, Pierre See Clement VI

Rogers, John 1500?–55. English Protestant reformer and martyr. He published (under the pseudonym Thomas Matthew) the English-language Matthew Bible of 1537, utilizing mostly the translations of William Tyndale and Miles Coverdale. This bible was subsequently revised as the Great Bible, which in turn became the basis for the famous King James Version. Rogers was executed after the accession of Catholic Queen Mary I.

Rogers, William Penn Adair 1879–1935. American humorist, writer, and actor. Beginning with a vaudeville act, he went on to write popular columns and books based on his homespun but shrewd and satirical wit. He also appeared in many movies.

Rogers' Rangers British-American colonial frontier force, composed of some 600 men trained in Indian methods. Commanded by Major Robert Rogers (1731–95), it carried out numerous daring raids during the French and Indian War and Pontiac's Rebellion.

Roget, Peter Mark 1779–1869. English physician and lexicographer. He worked for many years compiling his Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases (published in 1852), which has undergone many revisions and remains a standard reference work.

Rohan, Louis René Édouard, prince de 1734–1803. French diplomat and churchman who became a Catholic cardinal. He was French ambassador in Vienna and later was duped into providing security for jewels in the famous Affair of the Diamond Necklace (q.v.). He was subsequently banished.

Rohilla War War against the Afghan Rohilla tribe then in India, waged (1774) by the Nawab of Oudh, mainly to recover money owed him by the Rohillas. He crushed the Rohillas with help from a British East India Company brigade provided by W. Hastings, governor of Bengal. The incident later became one of the grounds for Hastings' impeachment.

Röhm, Ernst ⟨Roehm, Ernst⟩ 1887–1934. German National Socialist leader. An early Nazi party member and organizer of the storm troops, he was a potential rival to Hitler. He was executed without trial on Hitler's orders during the Blood Purge (q.v.).

Rojas Pinilla,Gustavo 1900–75. Colombian army leader and president of Colombia (1953–57). He led a coup that ousted the unpopular L. Gómez, but the brutality, ineptitude, and corruption of his own administration led to his ouster by a military junta, backed by both right and left. He was an unsuccessful candidate for president again in 1970.

Roland d. 778. Hero of the great French epic poem The Song of Roland in which, as part of Charlemagne's rear guard crossing the Pyrenees, he fought valiantly in a great battle against overwhelming numbers of Saracens. The historical Roland was actually cut off and killed by Basques at the Battle of Roncesvalles (q.v.), a minor engagement.

Roland de la Platière, Jean Marie 1734–93. French Revolutionary leader and minister of the interior (1792). A prominent member of the moderate Girondist faction, he had to flee Paris during the Reign of Terror. He committed suicide after his wife Manon was arrested and guillotined.

Roland de la Platière, Manon Philipon 1754–93. French Revolutionary leader. The wife of Girondist leader J. Roland de la Platière, she maintained a fashionable revolutionary salon. Arrested during the Reign of Terror, she uttered the words "O Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!" just before being guillotined.

Rolfe, John 1585–1622. English colonist in Virginia. He introduced the cultivation of tobacco, which became Virginia's staple crop, and married the Indian girl Pocahontas. He took her to England (1616), where she died. He was probably killed in the Indian massacre of 1622 after his return to Virginia.

Rolland, Romain 1866–1944. French novelist, biographer, and musicologist. He exalted art, pacificism, and socialism, especially through his 10-volume novel Jean Christophe, about a modern genius. He received the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1915.

Rollo ⟨Rou⟩ ⟨Hrolf⟩ *c*860–*c*932. Norman chieftan, founder of the duchy of Normandy. He invaded and conquered the land around the mouth of the Seine (now in France). He was granted rule over it (911) by French King Charles III (the Simple) in return for accepting vassalage and baptism.

Rölvaag, Ole Edvart 1876–1931. Norwegian–American writer. He was noted for his portrayal of immigrants in Minnesota, especially in Giants in the Earth and the novels that followed it.

Romagna Historical region of north-central Italy. It was the center of Byzantine domains in Italy (6th–7th cents.) and was later incorporated into the Papal States. Its major city was Ravenna (q.v.).

Romains, Jules ⟨pseud. of Farigoule, Louis⟩ 1885–1972. French writer. He produced a panoramic view of French life in the early 20th cent. in his 27-volume novel, Men of Good Will.

Roman Catholic Church One of the three major branches of Christianity (with Protestant and Orthodox Eastern churches). It is a worldwide union of churches recognizing the primacy of Rome. The authority of the popes is traditionally believed to derive from the continuous line of popes (bishops of Rome) succeeding St. Peter. The church claims to be the one true apostolic Christian church, maintaining its supremacy in doctrinal questions that created other branches of Christianity. The early years of the church, following the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, were marked by the rapid spread of Christianity; persecution and then toleration by the Romans; the growing isolation of Rome and the Western church from the Eastern church (centered at Constantinople) after the fall of the Western Roman Empire (AD 476); and finally the alliances between the popes at Rome and the kings of Europe (from the 8th cent.). In following centuries of the Middle Ages, the church became a powerful force in European politics and culture. For a time popes were able to command the submission of the great European monarchs. The struggle between the popes and the Holy Roman emperors, however, gradually eroded that power and, by the 15th–16th cent., papal power was overshadowed by the absolutist monarchs in Europe. Meanwhile the split between the Western and Eastern halves of the Christian world continued to widen, until finally the Schism of 1054 resulted in a complete break and formation of the Orthodox Eastern church (q.v.). A second great division of the Christian world occurred in the 16th cent. The Protestant Reformation (q.v.) resulted in the creation of a host of new Christian sects and forced the Roman Catholic church to institute the sweeping reforms of the Catholic Reformation (q.v.). In modern times the church has been concerned with doctrinal problems raised by modern society and with bridging the divisions within the Christian world. Key events in the history of the church include:

c8–6? BC Jesus born in Bethlehem; worked as a carpenter until around age 30, when he began his public ministry.

AD c30 Jesus Christ crucified in Jerusalem; disciples claimed he rose from the dead, appeared to them, and commissioned them to preach a Gospel

(lit. "good news") of eternal salvation through him.

AD c30–44 Disciples of Christ gathered around the Apostle Peter; the nucleus of the new church engaged in preaching the Gospel of Jesus and administering the sacraments.

AD c33 Saul of Tarsus, a Jew, blinded by a vision on the road to Damascus; converted and became St. Paul the Apostle.

AD c43 Apostle St James ("the Greater") became missionary to Spain; martyred.

AD c45 St. Peter moved to Antioch as first bishop of the church there; St. James left as bishop in Jerusalem.

AD c47–49 St. Paul's first missionary journey (with St. Barnabus and St. Mark) to Cyprus and Asia Minor; began to write the letters, or "epistles" that were the earliest New Testament writings.

AD c50 Council of Jerusalem, proto-council of the church; decided that gentiles converting to Christianity need not observe the full ritual Jewish law.

AD c50–53 Second missionary journey of St. Paul; crossed into Europe (Macedonia) where the church later flourished.

AD 53–57 Third missionary journey of St. Paul; wrote great epistles to the Romans and Corinthians.

AD c55 St. Peter left Antioch for Rome, where tradition held he become the first bishop (pope).

AD c59 St. Paul arrested in Jerusalem; sent to Rome for trial.

AC c62 St. James, bishop of Jerusalem, martyred.

AD c67 Persecutions of Christians ordered by Nero; Sts. Peter and Paul martyred, according to tradition.

AD c67–79? St. Linus, first of the line of successors to St. Peter, became bishop of Rome (pope).

AD c95 St. Clement of Rome (fourth pope) wrote "Epistle to the Corinthians," intervening in affairs of a local Greek church.

AD c107 First mention of the term "Catholic church" (lit. "universal church") in an epistle of St. Ignatius of Antioch.

AD c100–165 St. Justin Martyr, the first Christian apologist; combined Christian belief with Platonic philosophy.

AD 155 Martyrdom of St. Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna.

AD 177 Large-scale public persecution in the arena at Lyons.

AD c189 St. Irenaeus of Lyons declared in Adversus Haereses that "every church must be in harmony" with the Church of Rome.

AD 249–251 Large-scale persecution under the Emperor Decius.

AD 251 St. Cornelius pope (AD 251–253) and martyr; first schism, resulting in the election of an antipope, Novatian.

AD 258 Edict of persecution of the Emperor Valerian; martyrdom of St. Cyprian of Carthage.

AD c275 St. Anthony, pioneer of Christian monasticism, retired into Egyptian desert to pursue the ascetic life.

AD 303 Edict of the Emperor Diocletian unleashed ten-year persecution of Christians.

AD 311 Donatist heresy (holding validity of sacraments depended on sanctity of the minister) in North Africa.

AD 313 Edict of Milan: co-emperors Constantine and Licinius established toleration of Christianity within the Roman Empire.

AD 325 First Council of Nicaea (1st ecumenical council): condemned Arianism and issued creed as official profession of faith.

AD 341 St. Julius pope (AD 337–352); defended Nicaea and claimed Roman primacy based on apostolic tradition stemming from Peter.

AD 356 St. Athanasius, Archbishop of Alexandria (AD 328–373), exiled by the Arian emperor Constantius for his defense of Nicaea.

AD c360 Rise of Macedonianism, the belief that the Holy Spirit was created.

AD 361–363 Emperor Julian ("the Apostate") attempted to reintroduce paganism in the Roman Empire.

AD c370 St. Basil the Great reorganized monasticism in the East.

AD 378 St. Damasus (pope AD 366–384) condemned Apollinarian heresy.

LATE 4TH CENT. AD Twenty-seven books, constituting the present canon of the New Testament, decreed by Church to be authentic Scripture: Festal Epistle of St. Athanasius of Alexandria (AD 376); Decree of Pope St. Damasus (AD 382); provincial Synod of Carthage (AD 397).

AD 380 Emperor Theodosius the Great decreed Christianity to be the religion of the Roman Empire.

AD 381 First Council of Constantinople (2nd ecumenical council) condemned Macedonianism; issued creed in substantially the form it is recited today as the "Nicene Creed."

AD c 400 Pelagianism, heresy denying original sin and affirming humans have perfect freedom of the will, introduced in Rome by British monk Pelagius.

AD 410 St. Augustine of Hippo began writing The City of God.

AD 417 St. Innocent I (pope AD 402–417) declared that pronouncements of bishops must be confirmed by the Roman See.

AD 431 Council of Ephesus (3d ecumenical council): condemned Nestorianism, which denied Christ's divinity; declared that the Virgin Mary was "the Mother of God"; provoked centuries-long Nestorian schism.

AD 449 St. Leo the Great (pope AD 440–461) condemned unauthorized "robber council" held at Ephesus and issued his famous Tome defining the nature of Christ.

AD 451 Council of Chalcedon (4th ecumenical council): rejected Monophysitism; declared Jesus Christ to be true God and true man at the same time; centuries-long schism of Armenian, Egyptian, Ethiopian, and Syrian Monophysite churches stemmed from council's decree.

AD c495 Gelasius I (pope AD 492–496) wrote to Byzantine emperor Anastasius I denying the right of the state to interfere in church affairs.

AD c498 Baptism of Clovis, King of the Franks.

529 Monte Cassino abbey founded in Italy by St. Benedict; became center of Western monasticism.

553 Second Council of Constantinople (5th ecumenical council): reiterated condemnation of Nestorianism.

589 Provincial Synod of Toledo: Filioque clause added to the Nicene Creed; provoked long and bitter controversy with the East.

597 St. Gregory the Great (pope 590–604) reformed liturgy; despatched St. Augustine of Canterbury to Christianize England.

610–640 Rise of Monothelite heresy, denying that Christ had both a human and a divine will.

680–681 Third Council of Constantinople (6th ecumenical council): condemned Monothelite heresy.

751 Pepin the Short, King of the Franks, allied Franks with the papacy; marked beginning of Rome's alliance with European powers.

756 "Donation of Pepin"; papal domains constituted as a sovereign entity in central Italy.

768 Accession of Charlemagne as Frankish king.

787 Second Council of Nicaea (7th ecumenical council): convened by Empress Irene to deal with Iconoclasm controversy; last council considered ecumenical by Eastern Orthodox church.

800 Pope St. Leo III (795–816) crowned Charlemagne emperor of the Romans, strengthening ties with Europe's great monarch.

857 Controversy between Ignatius and Photius and at Constantinople over iconoclasm; Photius challenged right of popes to rule in the East; this resulted in breach between Rome and Constantinople, laying basis for future schism of East and West.

865 St. Nicholas the Great (pope 858–867) reaffirmed primacy of Rome.

869–870 Fourth Council of Constantinople (8th ecumenical council): anathematized Photius as a usurper in Constantinople and confirmed decree of Pope Nicholas against him.

910 Cluniac monastic order founded in France.

962 German king Otto I conquered northern Italy and forced the pope to crown him emperor; this marked beginnning of Holy Roman Empire.

11TH CENT. Rise of Scholasticism; appearance of the first great medieval philosophers: P. Abelard, P. Lombard, St. Anselm of Canterbury, etc.

1054 Schism of 1054 between Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic churches.

1059 Lateran Synod under Pope Leo IX; established papal election procedure, giving cardinals power to elect pope.

1073–85 St. Gregory VII (Hildebrand) pope; well-known for his reforms and insistence on papal authority.

1077 Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV excommunicated, then pardoned as a penitent at Canossa, Italy, by Pope Gregory VII; great struggle between popes and Holy Roman Emperors continued.

1085 Gregory VII finally driven from Rome by Henry IV; died at Salerno.

1085–1122 Investiture Controversy; power struggle between the papacy and the Holy Roman Empire centering on the question of "lay investiture" (appointment of bishops by secular rulers).

1086 Carthusians, strictest monastic order, founded by St. Bruno of Cologne.

11TH–14TH CENT. The Crusades: medieval holy wars undertaken by European Christians to reconquer the Holy Land from the Muslims.

1098 Cistercian monastic order launched at Cîteaux, France.

1098 Pope Urban II failed to reconcile Eastern and Western churches at the Council of Bari.

1115–35 St. Bernard, Abbott of Clairvaux, France, was principal religious leader in Europe.

1122 Diet of Worms; ended Investiture Controversy.

1123 First Lateran Council (9th ecumenical council) convened; first church council in the West; dealt with church discipline and investiture question, ratifying Diet of Worms.

1139 Second Lateran Council (10th ecumenical council) convened by Innocent II (1130–43); ended schism created by the election of antipope Anacletus II.

1159–81 Alexander III pope; effectively established papal authority over bishops and clergy; excommunicated the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa.

1179 Third Lateran Council (11th ecumenical council): College of Cardinals definitively empowered to elect pope; crusade against Albigenses in southern France proclaimed.

13TH–15TH CENT. Guelphs and Ghibellines were two opposing Italian factions prominent in the struggle for control of Italy; Guelphs usually favored popes, Ghibellines the Holy Roman emperor.

1198–1216 Innocent III pope; height of medieval papacy; preached disastrous Fourth Crusade.

1209 Friars Minor, mendicant order founded by St. Francis of Assisi.

1210 Innocent III excommunicated Holy Roman Emperor Otto IV.

1213 Innocent III forced English King John to acknowledge sovereignty of the pope.

1215 Fourth Lateran Council (12th ecumenical council) convened; doctrine of Transubstantiation defined; Easter duty established.

1216 Dominican Friars, founded as a preaching order, especially to combat heresy.

1225–74 St. Thomas Aquinas, great theologian and philosopher; his adaptation of Aristotle became official Catholic philosophy in 19th cent.

1233 Inquisition (medieval) established by Pope Gregory IX (1227–41) to oppose spread of such heresies as those of Albigenses and Waldenses.

1245 First Council of Lyons (13th ecumenical council): called by Innocent IV (1243–54) during his struggle with the Emperor Frederick II.

1274 Second Council of Lyons (14th ecumenical council): called by Gregory X (1271–76) to act on pledge of Byzantine Emperor Michael VIII to reunite Eastern and Western churches.

1302 Boniface VIII (1294–1303) issued bull Unam Sanctam asserting supreme authority over secular state and "every human creature."

1303 Boniface VIII captured and imprisoned by agents of French King Philip IV; died shortly afterward.

1309–77 Babylonian Captivity of the papacy: Clement V (1305–14) brought it about by moving the seat of the papacy to Avignon.

1311–12 Council of Vienne (15th ecumenical council) convened in France; Knights Templar condemned.

1377 Pope Gregory XI (1370–78) moved the papacy back to Rome, ending the captivity.

1378–1415 Great Schism; Urban VI elected pope (1378–84); then abandoned by a faction of cardinals who elected Clement VII antipope (1378–94); both lines perpetuated.

1414–18 Council of Constance (16th ecumenical council): ended Great Schism by electing Martin V (1417–31) as pope; condemned views of J. Wycliffe and burned J. Huss at the stake (1415).

1431–38 Council of Basel; became embroiled in a struggle with Eugenius IV (1431–37) over Conciliarism vs papal authority.

1438–53 Council of Florence (17th ecumenical council); convened to try to end the schism between the Latin and Greek churches.

1483 Spanish Inquisition organized throughout all Spanish possessions.

1492–1503 Alexander VI pope; notoriously corrupt Borgia; successfully resisted invasion of Italy by French King Charles VIII.

1512–17 Fifth Lateran Council (18th ecumenical council) called by Julius II (1503–13) to reform the church; reforms not implemented.

1517 Protestant Reformation: launched by German M. Luther to protest sale of indulgences; nailed 95 theses on Wittenburg church door challenging Catholic doctrine (Oct. 31); he later developed Lutheranism based on principle of justification by faith alone.

1520 Leo X (1513–21) excommunicated Luther (June 15).

1521 Diet of Worms placed Luther under ban of the Holy Roman Empire. (Apr. 17–18).

1523 Adrian VI pope (1522–23); acknowledged guilt of Catholic clergy in helping bring about Protestant Reformation.

1534 Henry VIII secured Act of Supremacy declaring him supreme head of the church in England; Church of England created as organization separate from Rome.

1534–49 Paul III reigned as pope.

1534 Jesuits, or Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius of Loyola; special vow of loyalty to pope taken by Jesuits.

16TH CENT. Catholic Reformation launched in response to Protestant threat.

1545–63 Council of Trent (19th ecumenical council); instituted far-reaching reforms in response to Protestant Reformation; completed comprehensive restatement of Catholic doctrine on the sacraments and instituted radical clerical reforms, including establishment of the modern seminary system for training priests; much important work concluded under Pius IV (1559–65).

1566–72 St. Pius V pope; reformed the missal and promoted the Holy League, which won the victory at sea over the Turks at Lepanto; excommunicated Queen Elizabeth I of England.

1582 Gregorian Calendar instituted (Oct. 15) by Gregory XIII (1572–85).

1621–23 Gregory XV pope; created the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith to administer church's worldwide missionary effort.

1640 Jansenism, movement emphasizing predestination and denying free will, expounded in Augustinus, a book by C. Jansen, Bishop of Ypres.

1643 Bollandists organized: a group of Belgian Jesuits charged with examining and updating lives of the saints.

1653 Five characteristic Jansenist propositions condemned by Innocent X (1644–55).

1713 Clement XI (1700–21) issued Constitution Unigenitus against Jansenism.

18TH CENT. Society of Jesus expelled from a number of European countries: Portugal (1759); France (1764); Spain (1767).

1764 Febronianism, belief that all bishops have equal stature, condemned by Clement XIII (1758–69).

1773 Pope Clement XIV (1769–74) dissolved the Jesuit order under pressure from the European Catholic powers.

1790 John Carroll made bishop of Baltimore, first Catholic bishop of the United States.

1790 French Revolution's Civil Constitution of the Clergy subjected the church in France to the National Assembly.

1796 Papal States conquered by Napoleon.

1798 Pius VI taken prisoner by Napoleon.

1809 Napoleon annexed the Papal States to the French Empire and made Pius VII prisoner.

1814 Pius VII restored the Society of Jesus.

1815 Congress of Vienna restored the Papal States to the Pope.

1829 Catholic Emancipation ended persecution of Catholics in Britain.

1846–78 Pius IX pope; defined the dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

1860 Most of Papal States taken from church during the course of Italian unification.

1864 Syllabus of Errors: comprehensive compendium of modern "errors"—"progress, liberalism, and modern civilization"—issued by Pius IX (Dec. 8).

1870 First Vatican Council (20th ecumenical council): declared that God could be known by reason and defined the infallibility of the pope.

1870 German theologian J. Dollinger excommunicated for opposing the doctrine of papal infallibility.

1870 Italian king Victor Emmanuel II seized Rome; pope declared himself a prisoner in the Vatican, marking the beginning of the Roman Question.

1870s Kulturkampf of O. von Bismarck directed against Catholicism in Germany.

1878–1903 Leo XIII pope; pope of social justice and opening to modern democracy.

1879 Encyclical Aeterni Patris of Leo XIII made the philosophical and theological system of St. Thomas Aquinas church doctrine.

1891 Encyclical Rerum Novarum of Leo XIII emphasized rights of the workingman in modern industrial society (May 15).

1903–14 St. Pius X pope; condemned Modernism as "the resumé of all heresies."

1917 Codex juris canonici, revised code of canon law, completed.

1929 Lateran Treaty, agreement between Italy and the papacy settling the Roman Question and establishing the pope as an independent sovereign in Vatican City.

1937 Pope Pius XI (1922–39) condemned Nazism and Communism.

1939–58 Pius XII pope; in Encyclical Humani Generis warned that certain modern scientific ideas were incompatible with revealed dogma.

1958–63 John XXIII pope; summoned Vatican Council II (1959).

1962–65 Second Vatican Council (21st ecumenical council) convened by John XXIII; sought to renew spiritual life of all the members of the Church.

1963–78 Paul VI pope; continued Vatican Council II.

1964 Pope Paul VI met Greek Orthodox patriarch Athenagoras in Jerusalem.

1968 Encyclical Humanae Vitae of Paul VI reiterating church's traditional condemnation of artificial birth control; caused worldwide controversy and widespread dissent within the church.

1971 International commission of Roman Catholic and Anglican theologians reported agreement on basic teaching concerning the Eucharist (Dec. 30).

1978 John Paul I elected to succeed Paul VI (Aug. 26).

1978 Pope John Paul I died suddenly (Sept. 29); Pole John Paul II elected (Oct. 16); first non-Italian pope in 455 years.

1979 John Paul II began a series of extensive worldwide missionary journeys by visiting the Dominican Republic, Mexico, US, Poland, Britain, and Spain.

1981 Pope John Paul II seriously wounded by a Turkish terrorist (May 13) in assassination attempt at Vatican City.

1982 Pope John Paul II visited Britain; meetings with Anglican leaders marked a significant step in efforts to reestablish ties between the English church and Rome (May 28).

Romance languages ⟨Romanic languages⟩ Family of European languages descended from Latin. So called because Latin was the language of the Romans, the principal modern Romance languages are French, Italian, Portuguese, Romanian, and Spanish.

Roman Empire Name of the Roman state after Augustus assumed imperial powers (27 BC) and thus formally ended the republic. The empire was later divided into the Western Roman Empire ⟨Western Empire⟩ and Eastern Roman Empire ⟨Eastern Empire⟩ in AD 286 by Diocletian. Through much of the subsequent period it was governed by co-emperors of the East and West. The death of Theodosius I marked the beginning of the permanent division (AD 395) of the empire. The Western half consisted of Italy, Gaul, western Illyricum, Africa, Spain, and Britain. The Eastern half primarily consisted of the Balkan Peninsula (including the eastern part of Illyricum) and Asia Minor. The Western Roman Empire, unable to withstand the barbarian invasions (q.v.), ceased to exist (AD 476) with the death of Emperor Romulus Augustus. The Eastern Roman Empire survived as the Byzantine Empire, and thus the Carolingian Empire (8th cent.) is sometimes regarded as the successor state to the Western Roman Empire. (See also Rome; Byzantine Empire for detailed history.)

Romania ⟨Rumania; Socialist Republic of Romania⟩ Republic located in southeastern Europe. Its capital is Bucharest. The area of modern Romania was largely that of the ancient Roman province of Dacia. With the decline of the Roman Empire the region was subsequently invaded numerous times by Goths, Huns, Slavs, and Bulgars. The rise of the principalities of Moldavia and Walachia (14th cent.) was followed by a period of domination (15th–19th cent.) by the Ottoman Empire, and then for a time by the Russian Empire. Proclaimed a kingdom in 1881, Romania became a people's republic in 1947. Key dates in Romania's history include:

1330 John Bassaraba founded the independent principality of Walachia.

1349 Bogdan Voda founded the independent principality of Moldavia

EARLY 15TH CENT. Walachia became an Ottoman vassal state.

16TH CENT. Moldavia became an Ottoman vassal state.

1593–1601 Walachian prince Michael the Brave reigned; united Walachia, Moldavia, and Transylvania under his rule (1599–1600); union fell apart after his death.

1711 Moldavia allied with Russia against Ottoman rule; Russian forces sent to region were defeated; Ottomans introduced Phanariot system of rule (rule by governors), generally by Greeks who lived in Constantinople.

1768–74 Russo-Turkish Wars; Ottoman Empire defeated by Russia; Treaty of Kuchuk Kainarji marked rise of Russian influence in Moldavia and Walachia.

1806–12 Russo-Turkish War fought; Russia defeated the Ottomans and gained Bessarabia.

1822 Ottomans consented to make Romanians governors of Moldavia and Walachia.

1828–29 Russo-Turkish War fought; Russians occupied Moldavia and Walachia; Russia gained virtual protectorates over the principalities through the Treaty of Adrianople (1829), ending the war; both remained technically Ottoman holdings.

1848 Romanians staged unsuccessful uprising against foreign domination; defeated by combined Russian and Ottoman intervention.

1854–56 Crimean War; Russian forces withdrew from region and Austrian troops moved in; war ended by Treaty of Paris (1856), which established Moldavia and Walachia as principalities under Ottoman suzerainty; Moldavia awarded southern Bessarabia.

1859 Alexander John Cuza became prince of Moldavia and Walachia.

1862 Moldavia and Walachia joined to form the principality of Romania; capital established at Bucharest.

1866 Cuza deposed; succeeded by Carol I, a member of the house of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen.

1877–78 Romania allied with Russia in the Russo-Turkish War; war ended by the Treaty of Berlin, by which Romania became independent but ceded southern Bessarabia to Russia.

1881 Romania became a kingdom (1881); Carol I ruled as first king (1881–1914); modernized the country.

1907 Peasant uprising in Moldavia against the Jews and against the landed nobles, the Boyars; uprising crushed, but land reforms were subsequently instituted; conflict marked growth of anti-Semitism in Romania.

1912 First Balkan War against Ottomans; Romania remained neutral.

1913 Second Balkan War; Romania allied with Greece and Serbia against Bulgaria and occupied southern Dobruja.

1914 Carol I died (Oct.); succeeded by his nephew Ferdinand I.

1914–18 WW I; Romania initially remained neutral, then joined (June 1916) the Allies against the Central Powers; after invading Transylvania, the Romanians were driven back and the kingdom occupied by Austro-German troops; Romania withdrew from the war by the Treaty of Bucharest (Feb. 1918) but reentered the war (Nov.) on the eve of its ending.

1918–20 At end of WW I Romania annexed Transylvania, Bessarabia, Bukovina, and part of the Banat; most of its gains were confirmed by the treaties of St. Germain (1919) and Trianon (1920); Russia refused to accept Romanian annexation of Bessarabia.

1919 Romania invaded Hungary and overthrew the Communist government of Bela Kun.

1920–21 Romania joined the Little Entente, an alliance with Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia.

1922–27 Ion Bratianu, head of the Liberal party, in power; his near-dictatorial authority challenged by both the National Peasants party under Iuliu Maniu and the fascist nationalist organization, the Iron Guard, headed by Corneliu Zelea-Codreanu.

1927 King Ferdinand I died; his grandson Michael was made king under a regency.

1930 Carol, Michael's father, assumed the crown as Carol II.

1938 Carol took control of the government and jailed leaders of the Iron Guard; Zelea-Codreanu and others shot, allegedly while trying to escape.

1939–45 WW II fought.

1940 Romania forced by Germany to cede Bessarabia and Bukovina to Russia, Transylvania to Hungary, and southern Dobruja to Bulgaria (Aug.–Sept., 1940); led to severe unrest in Romania and forced Carol to appoint Ion Antonescu as dictator; Carol then abdicated (Sept. 6).

1939–45 Romania, initially neutral, joined Germany in its invasion (June, 1941) of Russia; later declared war (Dec., 1941) on the US; occupied (1944) by Russian forces; King Michael led overthrow of Antonescu (Aug. 24); Romania signed armistice with Russia (Sept. 12, 1944).

1945 Coalition government dominated by Communists headed by Peter Groza (Mar.).

1947–48 Michael abdicated (Dec. 30, 1947); Romania proclaimed a people's republic; new constitution, modeled on Russian constitution, adopted (Apr. 13, 1948).

1952 New constitution promulgated (July 18), modeled closely on Soviet lines.

1967 Nicolae Ceausescu came to power, marking beginning of long rule in Romania that lasted into the early 1980s.

1968 Warsaw Pact forces invaded Czechoslovakia; Romania did not take part.

1974 Ceausescu became first to hold new office of presidency.

1977 Ceausescu instrumental in preparations for Egyptian president Sadat's visit to Israel.

1980 Ceausescu, continuing his independent foreign policy, condemned the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Romanesque Style of medieval art and architecture that reached its height in the 11th and 12th cents. In architecture it was characterized by the use of rounded arches and massive walls. It gave way to the Gothic style (q.v.). The Romanesque movement in art, centered in France, represented a fusion of Roman, Carolingian, Byzantine, Teutonic, and other influences and was marked by its concern for powerful imagery and grand conception.

Romanic languages See Romance languages

Roman Inquisition See Inquisition

Romano, Giulio ⟨pseud. of Giulio Pippi⟩ *c*1492–1546. Italian painter and architect. A favored student of Raphael, he is considered an originator of mannerism (q.v.).

Romanov Russian royal dynasty. The Romanovs ruled Russia from 1613 until the revolutions of 1917. They traced their royal lineage to Anastasia Romanovna, first wife (m. 1547) of Ivan the Terrible. They came to power after the Time of Troubles (q.v.) when Michael Romanov became czar. The line ended during the Russian Revolution with the assassinations of Nicholas II and his family, including his son and heir Alexis. Rulers of the Romanov dynasty were:

Michael	1613–45
Alexis	1645–76
Fëdor III	1676–82
Ivan V (with Peter)	1682–96
Peter (the Great)	1682–1725
Catherine I	1725–27
Peter II	1727–30
Anna Ivanova	1730–40
Ivan VI	1740–41
Elizabeth	1741–62
Peter III	1762
Catherine II	1762–96
Paul I	1796–1801
Alexander I	1801–25

Nicholas I	1825–55
Alexander II	1855–81
Alexander III	1881–94
Nicholas II	1894–1917

Roman province of Africa Province created after 146 BC, following conquest of Carthage in the Third Punic War. Initially it consisted of lands once controlled by Carthage, but, by the 1st cent. AD, it had been greatly expanded east and west to include parts of modern Algeria and Libya. Roman Emperor Septimius Severus later created the province of Numidia from its western end. Diocletian created Tripolitania in the east and Byzacena in the south. A commercially prosperous region under the Romans (1st-3d cents. AD), it fell (AD 430) to the Vandals and declined rapidly thereafter.

Roman province of Asia Territory of the Roman Empire in western Asia Minor. It was constituted as a province in 133 BC when Rome gained possession of the Kingdom of Pergamum (q.v.). The importance of the region declined (3d–4th cents. AD) with the rise of Constantinople to the north.

Roman Question See Lateran Treaty; Law of Guarantees

Roman Republic 1. Name of the ancient Roman state from the time the Romans gained independence (*c*509 BC) from the Etruscan Tarquin kings to the accession of Augustus as Roman emperor (27 BC). (For history, see Rome.) 2. Republican government established briefly in Rome (1798–99) by the French.

Roman Senate Roman governmental body. Formed in the 6th cent. BC as an advisory council appointed by the kings of Rome, it evolved into a powerful legislative body that lasted until the end of the Roman Empire. Originally composed of patricians, the Senate gradually came to include wealthy plebeians. It wielded great power in financial, administrative, military, and religious affairs until the end of the 2nd cent. BC, when corruption and the rise of two antagonistic political factions within the Senate weakened its ability to govern. The Senate lost much of its power after the assassination (44 BC) of J. Caesar.

romanticism Movement in literature and the arts that arose (18th–19th cents.) as a reaction to the extreme rationalism of the Enlightenment (q.v.) and the strictures of classicism (q.v.) in the arts. The movement began in Germany and England (late 18th cent.) and thereafter spread to other countries. Its aims were various and often conflicting, but generally were characterized by opposition to rationalism and social conventions; belief in the natural man and natural beauty, and in the primacy of human emotions, self-expression, and individualism; and an interest in mystical, medieval, and Oriental themes. The French author and philosopher J. Rousseau is considered an important forerunner of romanticism. The movement gave rise to romantic nationalism and a fondness for experimentation. It declined (from the mid-1800s) and in literature gave way to realism (q.v.). Leading Romantics writers include Sir W. Scott, J. W. von Goethe, and V. Hugo; in music, R. Wagner, R. Schumann, F. Liszt, and F. Chopin; in art, J. Turner and F. Delacroix.

Romanus I d. 948. Byzantine emperor (920–944). He was regent for Constantine VII, but took the throne himself, fought the Bulgars, and clashed with the great landowners of the empire. He was overthrown by his sons, who were then ousted by Constantine VII.

Romanus II 939–963. Byzantine emperor (959–963), successor to Constantine VII. He was an incompetent profligate under whom imperial affairs were in the hands of his wife and favorite eunuchs. However, his military commander, Nicephorus I, won notable victories against the Arabs and eventually succeeded him.

Romanus III ⟨Romanus Argyrus⟩ *c*968–1034. Byzantine emperor (1028–34). He succeeded to the throne by marrying Empress Zoë, the daughter of Constantine VIII. After an irresponsible rule, he was murdered, probably by Zoë and her husband-to-be, Michael IV.

Romanus IV ⟨Romanus Diogenes⟩ d. 1071. Byzantine emperor (1067–71). He married the widow of his predecessor, Constantine X, and reigned as coregent. He was deposed after his total defeat by the Seljuks at the Battle of Manzikert (q.v.).

Romanus Argyrus See Romanus III

Romanus Diogenes See Romanus IV

Romany Indo-European language spoken in a number of dialects by the Gypsy peoples. The language is descended from Sanskrit and began evolving toward its modern form about AD 1000, when the Gypsies migrated out of northwestern India. Romany has a rich oral tradition but no written literature.

Rome Historic city (pop. 2,900,000) and capital of Italy, located in central Italy. The Vatican City lies within its borders and Rome has long been the seat of the Roman Catholic church. According to Roman tradition, the city of Rome was founded in 753 BC by Romulus. In subsequent years the city grew and came under the influence of the Etruscans (the Tarquin kings). The Romans drove out the Tarquin kings *c*509 BC and established the Roman Republic. Rome then became the center of an expanding empire which, by the beginning of the 2d cent. AD, encircled the Mediterranean and included much of Europe as well (for history during this period see Rome, below). Rome remained the capital of the empire until AD 330 when the capital was moved to Constantinople. By the time of the fall of the (Western) Roman Empire in AD 476, Rome had also been supplanted by Ravenna as chief city of the Italian peninsula. During the following centuries, the bishops of Rome gained temporal authority over the city and, after the 8th cent., Rome became the seat of church-controlled domains in central Italy (known as the Papal States, q.v.). The history of Rome during the Middle Ages was chaotic. The struggle for power between the popes and the Holy Roman emperors resulted in numerous attacks on the city. Civil strife resulted from attempts to establish a republic at Rome and from the long struggle between Guelphs and Ghibellines (q.v.) in Italy. Finally in the 14th and early 15th cents., during the Babylonian Captivity and the Great Schism, Rome sank into chaos and economic ruin. During the 15th cent., the popes reestablished firm control over Rome (and the Papal States). This time also marked the flowering of the Renaissance in Italy, and the popes commissioned the great artists of their time to adorn Rome with magnificent buildings and works of art. Rome again came under attack during the Italian Wars (q.v.) of the 16th cent. But Rome under the popes nevertheless continued its rise as a center of world culture. During the French Revolutionary Wars, Rome was occupied (1798) by Napoleon and a short-lived republic was formed of Italian territories. The popes were restored to control of Rome in 1814, but the seeds of the Italian nationalist movement had been sown. During the Revolutions of 1848, Rome was proclaimed a republic and held out for a short time against the French, who ultimately restored the pope. When the kingdom of Italy was created (1861), its domains did not then include Rome, which remained under papal control. The city was finally occupied in 1870, and in 1871 it was made capital of Italy. The popes, however, refused to recognize the loss of their temporal power and thus began the Roman Question, which was not resolved until 1929. The Fascists came to power through their March on Rome (q.v.) in 1922 and the city was captured (1944) by the Allies during WW II. Rome, which remains the spiritual center of the Roman Catholic world today, was the site of a Catholic pilgrimage in 1950. Modern Rome is a commercial and tourist center of Italy. It is the site of many ancient ruins and historic buildings.

Rome (empire) Great empire of ancient times which for several centuries dominated the Mediterranean world. The history of ancient Rome can be broadly divided into two epochs, the Roman Republic (c509–527 BC) and the Roman Empire (27 BC–AD 476). The rise of Rome began with the subjugation of the Italian peninsula (largely completed in the 3d cent. BC). Acquisition of overseas territories began with the Punic Wars (3d–2d cent. BC) in which the great Carthaginian empire was destroyed and its territories were absorbed by Rome. Thereafter the Romans expanded their domains through various conquests, uniting under their rule an empire that encircled the Mediterranean and extended northward into the British Isles. Roman culture, laws, and customs were spread throughout the empire and greatly influenced the subsequent development of civilization in the West. The decline of the empire began at about the end of the 2d cent. AD and following centuries were marked by the breakdown of authority and political chaos, worsening economic problems, oppressive taxation, and finally the destructive invasions by various barbarian peoples (probably joined by disaffected Roman subjects). The Western Roman Empire collapsed before the barbarian hordes in AD 476, which is traditionally considered the end of the Roman Empire. However, the Eastern Roman Empire continued for many centuries thereafter as the Byzantine Empire (q.v.). (For history of the Italian peninsula after 476, see Italy. See also Rome (entry above) for history of the city itself.) Key events in the history of Rome include:

753? BC Legendary founding of Rome by Romulus.

715?–672 BC Numa Pompilius, according to tradition, succeeded Romulus as king; established religious and civil law.

c616 BC Etruscans, a people of northern Italy, gained control of Rome; ruled as the Tarquin kings: Etruscan civilization greatly influenced Roman civilization.

509 BC Tarquin kings driven out by Romans; uprising caused, according to tradition, by rape of the Roman woman Lucrece; Roman Republic founded.

c509–527 BC Roman Republic; two consuls elected annually; Senate, established as advisory body to the kings, continued and formalized, and finally dominated government during the republic; government at first controlled by patricians (aristocrats) with plebeians gaining rights and powers over the centuries.

496 BC Battle of Lake Regillus; Romans defeated neighboring Latins.

c494 BC Plebes seceded to the Sacred Mount to protest oppression by the patricians; tribunate created.

FROM 471 BC Tribunes of the plebs elected in the Councilium Plebis (assembly).

458 BC Cincinatus became dictator; defeated the Aequi.

c450 BC Twelve Tables drawn up as Rome's legal code; plebeian unrest over harsh treatment by patrician magistrates brought about code; became the basis of Roman law until 2d cent. BC.

444 BC Election of military tribunes begun after plebs agitated for greater powers.

443 BC Office of censor established; remained part of Roman government until 22 BC.

405–396 BC Romans put the Veii under siege; the town was finally captured and destroyed.

c391 BC Augurs (prophets) abolished.

390 BC Rome sacked by the Gauls; Camillus traditionally believed to have brought about the Gauls' withdrawal.

367 BC Tribunes C. Licinus and L. Sextus initiated important reforms; plebs, after years of agitation, permitted to name one consul from their ranks; later eligible to hold all other offices, and distinction between patrician and pleb disappeared.

367–345 BC Romans variously at war with the Gauls, and neighboring Latin tribes; southern Etruria captured; Hernici, Volsci, and others defeated.

343–341 BC First Samnite War; marked beginning of Rome's move to take control of the Campania.

340–338 BC Latin Wars; Italian cities rebelled for equal status with Rome but were defeated by Roman armies.

339 BC Publilian Laws; plebs, or plebeians, gained further power by the reforms of Quintus Publilius Philo.

316–304 BC Second Samnite War.

312 BC Construction of Appian Way began.

290 BC Sabines conquered by Rome.

298–290 BC Third Samnite War; Romans defeated the rebelling tribes, asserting firm control in central Italy.

287 BC Reform of the dictator Quintus Hortensius issued after plebeians seceded to the Janiculan hill; Lex Hortensia gave plebeians equal status with patricians by making the plebiscita (resolutions) of the plebeians binding on all citizens without the approval of the Senate.

282–272 BC War with the Greek king Pyrrhus, who sought to defend the Greek colony of Tarentum (southern Italy) against the Romans; noted Battle of Asculum fought (279 BC); Pyrrhus finally withdrew to Greece.

264–241 BC First Punic War against Carthage; Rome won control of Sicily, a valuable grain-producing region.

238 BC Romans took control of Sardinia, previously a Carthaginian possession.

229–228, 219 BC Illyrian Wars conducted on behalf of Greeks against pirates; led to Greek recognition of Roman power.

218–201 BC Second Punic War against Carthage; Hannibal crossed the Alps into Italy and nearly conquered the Romans; Scipio defeated Hannibal in Africa; Rome gained control of Spain and Carthaginian islands in Mediterranean; Carthaginian power broken.

214–205 BC First Macedonian War fought with Macedon; Macedonians, in alliance with Carthage, successful against Rome.

c204–149 BC Cato the Elder flourished; noted statesman who advocated return to the traditional Roman ways; urged destruction of Carthage.

200–196 BC Second Macedonian War fought; Macedonian power reduced; Roman hegemony in Greece established.

171–168 BC Third Macedonian War fought; Romans victorious and Macedon divided into four republics.

149–146 BC Third Punic War against Carthage; Carthage captured and completely destroyed; Carthaginian territories made into Roman province of Africa.

149–148 BC Fourth Macedonian War fought; led to Roman annexation of Macedon and complete domination of Greece.

143–133 BC Numantine War; Scipio Africanus the Younger finally defeated the Celtiberians in Spain after long war against them.

c134–132 BC First Servile War, unsuccessful slave uprising against Romans in Sicily.

133 BC Tribune T. Gracchus assassinated by opponents of his land reforms, which sought to improve the peasants' lot.

133 BC Kingdom of Mysia (Pergamum) passed to Rome on the death of its king; Romans organized it as the province of Asia.

121 BC C. Gracchus killed; as tribune he had instituted radical reforms, including the land reforms of his brother, T. Gracchus, and measure forcing government to supply grain at a fair price; reforms reversed after his tribunate and he was killed in subsequent riots.

111–105 BC Romans subdued rebellion in Africa led by King Jugurtha; begun by Marius, completed by Sulla.

105 BC Romans defeated by invading Cimbri and Teutones at the Battle of Arausio in Gaul; the tribes then invaded Italy.

104–100 BC Marius reelected consul each year.

102–101 BC Romans, led by Marius, defeated the Cimbri at the Battle of Aquae Sextae (102 BC) and Vercellae (101); Marius hailed as a great hero.

c102–99 BC Second Servile War, unsuccessful slave uprising against Romans in Sicily.

91 BC M. Drusus advanced reforms, including measure granting citizenship to all Italian peoples subject to Rome; Drusus killed.

c90–88 BC Social War, unsuccessful uprising of Italian tribes against Rome; full citizenship granted to all Italian peoples.

88–87 BC Civil war began; Sulla marched his troops into Rome after tribune Publius Sulpicius Rufus tried to impose reforms by force; Marius, a leader of the popular party, fled and Rufus was executed; Sulla, leader of the optimates (aristocrats) became consul (87 BC) and left Rome to lead armies in First Mithridatic War.

88–84 BC First Mithridatic War; Mithridates of Pontus attempted to seize the Roman province of Asia during the Social War; Roman consul Sulla defeated him.

87 BC Cinna, popular party leader, became consul at Rome; attempted to put through Rufus' reforms in Sulla's absence and was driven out of Rome; reentered Rome with Marius' help and massacred many of Sulla's followers.

83–82 BC Sulla, returning from the Mithridatic War, defeated supporters of the popular party; ordered proscription of members of the faction.

83–81 BC Second Mithridatic War; Romans attacked Mithridates; restored conquered territory at the end of the war.

82–79 BC Sulla ruled as dictator; instituted conservative reforms to increase power of the Senate and limit that of the tribunes and judiciary; retired after reforms were enacted.

77 BC Pompey defeated attempt by M. Lepidus to rescind Sulla's reforms by force.

c75–43 BC Cicero flourished; great Roman statesman and orator.

74–63 BC Third Mithridatic War; this war resulted in the complete conquest of Pontus and its annexation to the Roman province of Asia.

73–71 BC Third Servile War, unsuccessful slave uprising in Italy led by Spartacus; slave army defeated by Crassus and Pompey.

70 BC Pompey and Crassus became consuls; rescinded Sulla's reforms, thus restoring power to popular faction.

70–19 BC Vergil lived; considered leading poet of his age.

65–8 BC Horace lived; among the great Latin poets.

64 BC Pompey added domains of Seleucids to the empire as a province; reorganized Rome's province of Asia.

64 BC Palestine brought under Roman control by Pompey.

64–63 BC Conspiracy of Catiline.

60 BC First triumvirate formed by Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus.

59 BC Caesar, as consul, appointed himself to take charge of Gaul for five years (later extended another five years).

59 BC–AD 17 Roman historian, Livy, lived; wrote history of Romans.

58–51 BC Gallic Wars; Caesar's military campaigns led to the conquest of all Gaul and gave him great power and prestige.

53 BC Roman invasion of Parthia halted at Battle of Carrhae; Crassus killed soon after; first triumvirate began to break up.

52 BC Pompey, now leader of the optimates, elected sole consul at Rome; engaged in power struggle with Caesar, leader of the popular party.

49 BC Senate ordered Caesar to disband his army in Gaul.

49 BC Civil war (49–46 BC) began; Caesar, refusing to disband his army, led his soldiers in the famous crossing of the Rubicon (Jan. 10–11); marched into Italy against Pompey.

49 BC Caesar laid siege to Pompey's forces at Brundisium, in Italy; Pompey escaped (Mar.) to Greece.

49 BC Caesar entered Rome; did not institute customary proscription of opponents.

49 BC M. Antony made tribune.

49 BC Caesar successful in fighting against Pompey's supporters in Spain.

49 BC Caesar elected consul after renouncing his election as dictator; returned to pursuit of Pompey.

48 BC Caesar defeated by Pompey at Dyrrhachium (now in Albania).

48 BC Battle of Pharsalus, in Greece; Caesar routed Pompey's forces (Aug. 9); Pompey fled to Eygpt.

48 BC Pompey killed in Egypt by order of King Ptolemy XII.

48–47 BC Alexandrine War; Caesar, pursuing Pompey, had entered Alexandria, Egypt; found himself under siege by Egyptian forces; dallied with Cleopatra; broke siege and subdued Egypt; installed Cleopatra and Ptolemy XIII on the Egyptian throne.

47 BC Caesar defeated Pharnaces II at the Battle of Zela in brief war in Syria and Pontus; Caesar said of the war, "Veni, vidi, vici" (I came, I saw, I conquered); Caesar next went to Africa.

46 BC Caesar victorius against the last of Pompey's forces at the Battle of Thapsus (Feb. 6); Cato the Younger committed suicide; Roman Senate named Caesar dictator for ten years.

46 BC Back in Rome, Caesar pardoned his enemies and began program of reform aimed at improving lot of the populace; then went to Spain to war against Pompey's sons.

46 BC Caesar instituted the Julian Calendar.

45 BC Caesar defeated Pompey's sons at the Battle of Munda, Spain; was made consul for ten years.

44 BC Caesar assassinated (Mar. 15) by opponents who feared his growing power; Cassius, Marcus Brutus, and Decimus Brutus among the assassins; M. Antony rose to power in Rome; began to organize against the assassins, who had fled Rome.

44–43 BC Octavian, Caesar's heir, attempted to claim his rights, but was at first opposed by Antony; the two formed an alliance against Caesar's assassins the next year.

43 BC Second Triumvirate formed (Nov.) by Octavian, Antony, and Lepidus.

43 BC–AD 17 Ovid lived; wrote classics of Latin poetry.

43 BC Cicero executed on orders from Antony, whom he had opposed.

42 BC Forces of Octavian, Antony, and Lepidus won decisive victory at the Battle of Philippi (Oct. 27); Brutus and Cassius committed suicide.

42 BC Marc Antony began his celebrated love affair with Cleopatra.

40 BC Treaty of Brundisium wed Marc Antony to Octavian's sister; Octavian to rule the West, Antony the East; Lepidus to rule Africa.

c39 BC Herod made king of Judea by Marc Antony.

36 BC Octavian defeated Sextus Pompey, a powerful opponent, at the Battle of Mylae.

36 BC Octavian, consolidating his power, deposed Lepidus; Antony, meanwhile, renewed his love affair with Cleopatra (unpopular in Rome) and thus aroused opposition in Rome.

35–33 BC Octavian conquered Illyria.

31–30 BC Final struggle between Octavian and Antony; Antony and Cleopatra defeated at the Battle of Actium (31 BC) and the two lovers committed suicide soon after; Octavian became sole ruler of Rome.

30 BC Egypt made a Roman province after Octavian killed King Ptolemy XIV.

27 BC Octavian accepted imperial title, Augustus; marked beginning of Roman Empire.

27 BC–AD 476 Roman Empire; Roman domains reached their greatest extent during this period; first 200 years marked by peace (Pax Romana) and prosperity.

27 BC–AD 14 Augustus (Octavian) ruled as first Roman emperor; had complete control of the military and the provinces; reformed both the military and provincial administration; undertook building program and patronized the arts, fostering the "Augustan Age."

c8–6 BC Jesus of Nazareth born.

AD 14–c130 Silver Age of Latin literature.

AD 14–37 Tiberius reigned as emperor, following Augustus' death; Tiberius turned over effective rule to the intriguer, Sejanus (AD 23–31), but finally had him executed.

AD 16 Germanicus Caesar suppressed a revolt by Arminius in Germany.

AD 30 Jesus crucified at Jerusalem.

AD 37–41 Caligula reigned; became insane and ruled as a cruel tyrant.

AD 41–54 Claudius I reigned; dominated by his wives; added Mauretania (AD 41–42) to the empire and began final conquest of Britain (AD 43).

AD 54–68 Nero reigned; notorious tyrant.

AD 64 Rome destroyed by great fire; Nero, suspected of having had it set, blamed the Christians and thereupon began persecutions of Christians; Nero rebuilt Rome.

AD 65 Conspiracy to overthrow Nero discovered.

AD 66–73 First Jewish revolt in Judaea; Jerusalem destroyed (AD 70).

AD 68 Nero overthrown; Galba recognized as emperor by Praetorian Guard.

AD 69–79 Vespasian reigned as emperor following a struggle for power; founded Flavian dynasty.

AD 69–82 Colosseum built.

AD 78–84 Agricola conquered much of Britain; served as governor.

AD 79–81 Titus reigned.

AD 79 Pompeii buried under volcanic ash during eruption of Mt. Vesuvius.

AD 81–96 Domitian reigned; bought off the army and the Roman mobs and increased the powers of the emperor; unsuccessful in wars in Dacia; assassinated.

AD 96–98 Nerva reigned; introduced legal and tax reforms.

AD 98–117 Trajan reigned as emperor; warred against Parthia, gaining territories east of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers; empire reached its greatest extent (AD 116).

AD 107 Dacia became a province after a long war against barbarians there (from AD 101).

AD 117–138 Hadrian reigned; undertook considerable building in provinces; imperial edicts became the sole source of Roman law (from AD 131); economic problems, exacerbated by excessive taxation, began to appear.

AD 132–135 Second Jewish revolt; Jews thereafter forbidden to live in Jerusalem.

AD 138–161 Antonius Pius reigned; reign marked by general peace and stability.

AD 161–180 Marcus Aurelius reigned; despite persecution of Christians, his rule considered wise and humane; he was famous exponent of Stoicism.

AD 166–167 Plague throughout the empire; spread by Roman soldiers returning from war with Parthia (AD 162–165).

AD 180–192 Commodius reigned; gave himself up to dissolute life and his reign marked the start of Rome's decline; by arrangement with conspirators, a wrestler named Narcissus strangled Commodius during a match.

AD 193–211 Septimus Severus reigned; his reign began long period of instability in which Praetorian Guard controlled selection of the emperors.

AD 212 Roman citizenship granted to nearly all within the empire by Emperor Caracalla (reigned AD 211–217).

FROM AD c214 Alemanni and Goths began attacks on Roman outposts on the northern frontier in Germany.

AD 250 Decius (reigned AD 249–251); began general persecution of the Christians.

AD 253–270 Barbarians broke through Roman frontier defenses; Alemanni advanced to Milan; Franks passed beyond the Rhine; Goths invaded the Balkans.

AD 260 Emperor Valerian (reigned AD 253–260) captured during wars with Persians.

AD 270 Claudius II (reigned AD 268–270); halted advance of the Goths; allowed them to settle Dacia.

AD 270–275 Aurelian reigned; withdrew from Dacia and drove Alemanni out of Italy.

AD 284–305 Diocletian reigned; instituted wide-ranging administrative, military, and financial reforms; brought measure of stability to the empire, which by this time, however, was crumbling under the weight of costly bureaucracy, excessive taxation, and continuing economic problems.

AD 286 Roman Empire divided into the Western and Eastern empires by Diocletian; named Maximian co-ruler, though by adopting him maintained theoretical unity of the empire.

AD 293 Diocletian divided the empire into four administrative units (two east, two west); each responsible to respective emperor.

AD 306 Constantine began his struggle against rivals for control in the Western Empire.

AD 312 Battle of Milvian Bridge; Constantine defeated his last rival for control of the West; a vision he had before the battle led to his conversion to Christianity.

AD 312 Constantine became emperor in the West, Licinius emperor in the East.

AD 312 Praetorian Guard abolished by Constantine.

AD 313 Edict of Milan issued by Constantine and Licinius; established toleration of Christianity throughout empire.

AD 324 Licinius, emperor of the East, defeated by Constantine.

AD 324–337 Contstantine reigned as sole ruler; Roman Empire reunited under him; he established his capital at Constantinople (AD 330).

AD 325 Constantine called the Council of Nicaea (1st ecumenical) to resolve question of Arianism; established role of emperor in Eastern church.

AD 361–363 Julian the Apostate reigned; tried to reinstate paganism in the empire; Christianity reinstated on his death.

AD 376 Huns conquered Visigoths in region of modern Romania, bringing them into contact with Romans.

AD 378 Visigoths decimated Roman forces at the Battle of Adrianople; Eastern emperor Valens killed; Visigoths swept into Europe.

AD 375–395 Theodosius I the Great reigned as emperor in the East; Valentinian II (AD 375–392) and Gratian (375–383) ruled in West.

AD 383 Gratian killed in revolt by Maximus; Maximus finally killed by Theodosius (AD 388).

AD 390 Theodosius forced to do penance before bishop of Milan for massacring thousands of Greeks; marked victory of church over temporal power of the emperors.

AD 394 Battle of Frigidus; Theodosius defeated Eugenius, who had usurped and killed Valentinian II; Roman Empire united for last time under Theodosius.

AD 395 Roman Empire permanently divided into Eastern and Western Empires on the death of Theodosius I.

AD 395 Honorius became emperor of the West (ruled AD 395–423), Arcadius emperor of the East (ruled AD 395–408).

AD 396–408 Stilicho, a Vandal and commander of Roman troops in the West, successful against invading barbarians; drove Visigoths out of Greece (AD 397), and blocked attempts to invade Italy; Gaul was meanwhile overrun by barbarians (AD 406).

AD c402 Ravenna made capital of the West.

AD 407 Romans withdrew from Britain.

AD 408–450 Theodosius II reigned in the East.

AD 409–410 Visigoths under Alaric invaded Italy; sacked Rome (AD 410); subsequently invaded and conquered Spain.

AD 425–454 Valentinian III reigned in the West.

AD 429–431 Vandals crossed from Spain into Africa; conquered Roman territories in North Africa.

AD 441–443 Attila and his brother Bleda led the Huns in invasion of eastern Roman provinces.

AD 450–452 Attila the Hun invaded Gaul and Italy (AD 452).

AD 455 Valentinian III murdered; succession of rulers set up in the West.

AD 455 Gaiseric, king of the Vandals, sacked Rome.

AD 457–474 Leo I reigned as emperor of the East.

AD 474–491 Zeno reigned as emperor of the East; attempted to win control over the Goths.

AD 475–476 Romulus Augustus reigned as last emperor of the West.

AD 476 Odoacer defeated last Roman forces at Battle of Pavia; deposed Emperor Romulus Augustus (Sept. 4), thus ending Western Roman Empire.

Rome, March on See March on Rome

Rome, Seven Hills of See Seven Hills of Rome

Rome, treaties of, Series of agreements signed in Rome (Mar. 25, 1957), between Belgium, France, Italy, Luxemburg, The Netherlands, and West Germany, that established the European Economic Community. The treaties eliminated tariffs, established a ruling council of ministers, and also set up the European Atomic Energy Community (Euratom).

Rømer, Olaus ⟨Römer, Ole⟩ ⟨Roemer, Olaus⟩ 1644–1710. Danish astronomer. By observing the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites, he was able to prove conclusively (1676) that light travels at a definite speed and not instantaneously. He roughly calculated its speed at 140,000 miles per second.

Römer, Ole See Rømer, Olaus

Rommel, Erwin 1891–1944. German field marshal during WW II. After performing brilliantly in France in 1940, he became the near-legendary German commander of the Afrika Korps in the North Africa Campaign (q.v.). He was commander in northern France when the Allies landed in 1944. Rommel was forced to take poison after discovery of his part in the plot against A. Hitler's life.

Romulus Legendary founder and king of Rome. He and his brother Remus built the town (753 BC). Romulus built a defensive wall around it and, when Remus ridiculed the wall, Romulus killed him. Romulus then populated the town with fugitives, providing them with wives by carrying off the women, the Sabines, of a nearby tribe.

Romulus Augustulus fl. 5th cent. AD. Last Roman emperor of the West, (475–476 AD). He was put on the throne by his father, the Roman general Orestes. He was deposed soon after by the German conquerer Odoacer, who sent him into exile.

Roncalli, Angelo Giuseppe See John XXIII

Roncesvalles, Battle of Ambush of the rear guard of Charlemagne's army (Aug. 15, 778) in the Pyrenees Mountains. This minor engagement took place during Charlemagne's return from a military campaign against the Muslims in Spain and provided the inspiration for the epic poem The Song of Roland.

Ronsard, Pierre de 1525–85. French poet. Considered one of the greatest poets of the Renaissance, he was a leader of the Pléiade. His works include Amours de Cassandre, Hymnes, and the unfinished La Franciade.

Röntgen, Wilhelm Conrad See Roentgen, Wilhelm Conrad

Roon, Count Albrecht Theodor Emil von 1803–79. Prussian field marshal. As minister of war from 1859, he reorganized the Prussian army and made victories possible in the Austro-Prussian War and in the Franco-Prussian War.

Roosevelt, Anna Eleanor 1884–1962. American political figure, humanitarian, and author. As the wife (m. 1905) of Pres. F. Roosevelt, she not only worked with her husband but also pursued her own interests as a newspaper and radio commentator and US representative at the UN (1945–52, 1961).

Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 1882–1945. Thirty-second US president (1933–45), successor to H. Hoover, and the only president to win four consecutive elections (1932, over H. Hoover; 1936, over A. Landon; 1940, over W. Willkie; 1944, over T. Dewey). During his long tenure, Roosevelt saw the country through the Depression (q.v.) and most of WW II (q.v.), vastly increased the power and prestige of the presidency, and firmly committed the federal government to (then) unprecedented direct involvement in promoting the social and economic well-being of American society. A

New York Democrat, he first served in state and federal posts, was an unsuccessful vice-presidential candidate (1920), and then was partly paralyzed by polio (1921). He nevertheless persevered, became governor of New York (1928–30, 1930–32), and then won the presidency. He took office (1933) during the worst of the Depression and, in his famous first Hundred Days (q.v.) in office, he initiated the first wave of his New Deal (q.v.) legislation to counter the Depression. His administration during the rest of the 1930s was marked by still more New Deal legislation (though at a slower pace after 1936), the persisting economic stagnation of the Depression, increasing political opposition, and, finally, concern over the menace of war in Europe. By the late 1930s, Roosevelt had already begun to prepare the nation for war and, with W. Churchill, issued the Atlantic Charter (q.v.). After the Pearl Harbor attack (1941) brought the US into the war, he instituted a massive program to put the US economy on a wartime footing and quickly built up American military forces. He then played a prominent role in the Allied wartime conferences (such as Teheran and Yalta) and worked for establishment of the UN. He died shortly before the end of war in the European theater.

Roosevelt, Theodore 1858–1919. Twenty-sixth US president (1901–09), successor to W. McKinley. Roosevelt got his start in politics as a Republican in New York State. After holding both state and federal posts, he became a national hero for his exploits with the Rough Riders (q.v.), notably at the Battle of San Juan Hill during the Spanish-American War (1898). Elected vice-president under W. McKinley (1900), he became president a few months later when McKinley was assassinated. He was subsequently elected to a full term in 1904. Roosevelt's administration was marked by his concerted attacks on the business trusts (trust-busting) and passage of reform legislation, including acts to end railroad rebates (Elkins Act, 1903), to create the Department of Commerce and Labor, and to regulate the quality of food and drugs. Roosevelt also actively involved the US in foreign affairs and he played a role in the Venezuela Claims (q.v.) dispute; formulated the Roosevelt corollary to the Monroe Doctrine (q.v.), using it to interfere in Central American affairs; backed Panamanian revolutionaries and, after they set up a rebel government, arranged a treaty for the building of the Panama Canal (q.v.); and mediated at the Portsmouth Conference (1904) to end the Russo-Japanese War. At the end of his term, Roosevelt helped elect his successor, H. Taft, and went abroad for an extended tour. In 1912, after falling out with Taft, he formed the Progressive (Bull Moose) party and attempted to win reelection as president. He lost to W. Wilson. He won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1906.

Roosevelt corollary See Monroe Doctrine

Root, Elihu 1845–1937. US secretary of war (1899–1904) and secretary of state (1905–09). A dedicated internationalist, he negotiated important treaties with Japan (notably the Root-Takahira Agreement, q.v.), Britain, and Latin America and consistently promoted disarmament. He received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1912.

Root, John Wellborn 1850–91. American architect. An associate of D. Burnham and leading architect of the Chicago school, he designed buildings that were important in the development of the modern skyscraper.

Root-Takahira Agreement Executive agreement concluded between the US and Japan (Nov. 30, 1908). By its terms, both countries agreed to support an open-door policy in China, maintain the territorial status quo in East Asia, and work for the continued independence and integrity of China. It was named for US Secretary of State E. Root and the Japanese ambassador to the US, Baron Kogoro Takahira (1854–1926).

Rorschach, Hermann 1884–1922. Swiss psychiatrist and neurologist. He devised the famous Rorschach inkblot test for diagnosing mental disorders.

Rosamond d. 1176? Mistress of England's Henry II, known as the "Fair Rosamund." The king acknowledged her (1174) after he had imprisoned his wife, Eleanor of Aquitaine. The many legends about her include one that she was murdered by Eleanor.

Rosas, Juan Manuel de 1793–1877. Dictator of Buenos Aires province and ruler of nearly all Argentina (1835–52). A wealthy rancher, he became governor of Buenos Aires province for the first time from 1828 to 1832. On taking office again (1835), he assumed dictatorial powers and extended his control over most of the other Argentine provinces. Thereafter he instituted a reign of terror; alienated foreign powers and thus provoked French and British blockades of Argentina (1838–40, 1845–50); and became involved in a scheme to take over Uruguay. He was overthrown by J. Urquiza, who, with support from Uruguay and Brazil, defeated Rosas' army at Monte Caseros (Feb. 3,1852).

Rosecrans, William Starke 1819–98. American Civil War general. A successful commander at Corinth and Murfreesboro, he was relieved of command after his defeat (1863) at the Battle of Chickamauga Creek (q.v.). He later served as a diplomat and congressman.

Rosenberg, Alfred 1893–1946. German Nazi party leader and ideologist. He began as editor of the Nazi paper and provided the party with its anti-Semitic ideology in his The Myth of the Twentieth Century. He was hanged as a war criminal after WW II.

Rosenberg, Julius and Ethel First US civilians put to death for espionage. Born in 1918 and 1916 respectively, they were tried, then executed on June 19, 1953. They were convicted of transmitting to the Soviet Union secret information about the atomic bomb (1944–45). The information had allegedly been obtained by Mrs. Rosenberg's brother, army sergeant David Greenglass, who was an employee of the Los Alamos project. Julius, an army signal corps electrical engineer, was an acknowledged Communist. Many unsuccessful efforts were made to obtain clemency for them.

Rose of Lima, Saint 1586–1617. Peruvian religious mystic. A Dominican, she is the patron saint of South America, and the first native-born American to be canonized by the Catholic church.

Roses, Wars of the Dynastic wars (1455–85) in England between the houses of York (white rose insignia) and Lancaster (red rose insignia). They fought over rival claims to the English throne. The claimants in both houses were descendants of Edward III, though the Lancastrians had been in power since 1399. However, the Yorkist position was strengthened by discontent over the ineffective rule of Henry VI and his unpopular queen (Margaret of Anjou), English losses in France during the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453), heavy taxes, and disorders such as Cades' Rebellion (q.v.).

Richard, duke of York, became protector of the kingdom when Henry became temporarily insane (1453–54). The wars began soon after Henry's recovery. Yorkists won the first battle (1455) at St. Albans (q.v.). Fighting ceased until 1459, when Yorkists were beaten at the Battle of Ludford Bridge (Oct. 12). But they were victorious at the Battle of Northampton (July 10, 1460) and forced King Henry to name Richard (and Yorkist heirs) as his successor. This disinherited Queen Margaret's son and she then marched an army against the Yorkists. She won a bloody victory at Wakefield (Dec. 30, 1460), in which Richard was slain. She then won (Feb. 17, 1461) the second Battle of St. Albans (q.v.) and marched toward London. However, Richard's son, Edward, had already defeated the Lancastrians (Feb. 2) at the Battle of Mortimer's Cross (q.v.) and marched into London first.

Edward was proclaimed King Edward IV (Mar. 4, 1461), routed Margaret's forces at Towton (q.v.), and forced the Lancastrians to flee the country. Edward's reign was undisturbed until 1469, when his brother, George, Yorkist duke of Clarence, and R. Neville, earl of Warwick (a powerful Yorkist) rebelled against him. They were driven out of England (1470) and, in France, formed an alliance with the exiled Lancastrian, Margaret of Anjou, and also won backing from French king Louis XI. They subsequently invaded England (Sept. 1470), briefly restored Henry VI, and put Edward to flight. Edward then formed an alliance with Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, and, returning to England (1471), won decisive victories at Barnet (q.v.) and Tewkesbury (q.v.). His principal opponents either dead or imprisoned (Henry was apparently murdered), Edward lived out the remainder of his life as king.

The last phase of the wars broke out soon after Edward's death. Edward's brother, Richard III, seized power (1483) from Edward's son. Henry Stafford, 2d duke of Buckingham, raised an unsuccessful revolt and disaffected Yorkists threw their support to the Lancastrian claimant, Henry Tudor. Henry Tudor then defeated and killed (Aug. 22, 1485) Richard at the Battle of Bosworth Field (q.v.) and was crowned Henry VII. This ended the wars. Henry further cemented the peace by marrying (1486) Elizabeth of York and by quelling the last Yorkist revolts. The wars decimated the ranks of English nobles and they were subsequently unable to oppose the absolutist powers accumulated by Henry and his Tudor heirs.

Rosetta Stone Inscribed basalt stone that provided the key to deciphering ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics. Found (1799) by Napoleon's troops near Rosetta, Egypt, the stone bore inscriptions in Greek, Egyptian demotic, and hieroglyphics. Preliminary discoveries by Thomas Young (1773–1829) concerning the hieroglyphics were used by J. Champollion to finally decipher the ancient writings (1821).

Rosicrucians International society that claims it has the secret knowledge of the ancients. Its doctrine contains elements of occultism and mysticism. The group was first mentioned in 17th-cent. publications.

Ross, Betsy 1752–1836. American seamstress. Tradition credits her with making the first American flag (adopted by the Continental Congress June 14, 1777).

Ross, Sir John 1777–1856. British admiral and Arctic explorer. His explorations of Arctic waters failed to find a Northwest Passage (q.v.), but the north magnetic pole was located (1831) on one of his expeditions.

Ross, John ⟨Koowescoowe⟩ 1790–1866. American Indian chief of Scottish and Cherokee parentage. He fought valiantly to prevent the expulsion of his people from Georgia but eventually led them on the long journey (from 1835) to the Indian Territory in Oklahoma.

Rossetti, Christina Georgina 1830–94. English poet, sister of D.G. Rossetti. A devout Anglican, she spent her later life as a recluse and wrote religious poems. Her works include Goblin Market and Other Poems and Prince's Progress.

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel 1828–82. English poet and painter. He was one of the founders of the Pre-Raphaelites, who sought to restore naturalness to painting.

Rossini, Gioacchino Antonio 1792–1868. Italian composer. Best known as an operatic composer, his comic-opera masterpiece is the still popular The Barber of Seville. His best-known dramatic opera is William Tell.

Rostand, Edmond 1868–1918. French poet and playwright, best known for his famous play Cyrano de Bergerac.

Rostovtzeff, Michael Ivanovich 1870–1952. Russian-born American historian and archaeologist. He was noted for his writings on the society and culture of the ancient world, including Social and Economic History of The Roman Empire and A History of the Ancient World.

Rothko, Mark ⟨Rothkovitch, Marcus⟩ 1903–70. Russian-born American painter. He was a leading exponent of abstract expressionism (q.v.). His later works consisted of rectangles of color painted on large canvases.

Rothkovitch, Marcus See Rothko, Mark

Rothschild, baron Lionel Nathan de 1808–79. British banker and member of parliament (1858–74). Son of N. Rothschild, he arranged large international loans such as those for the Irish famine (1847) and the Crimean War (1856). He was the first Jewish member of Parliament.

Rothschild, Mayer Amschel 1743–1812. Founder of the Rothschild banking dynasty. Originally a Frankfort money-changer, he capitalized on his position as adviser to the landgrave of Hesse-Kassel and, through his sons, founded Rothschild banks in London, Paris, Vienna, and Naples.

Rothschild, Nathan Meyer 1777–1836. Founder of the London branch of the famous Rothschild banking dynasty. He was noted for helping the British subsidize their allies in the fight against Napoleonic France.

Rou See Rollo

Roualt, Georges 1871–1958. French expressionist artist. Employing a "stained-glass" style of bold, vivid colors, he is considered one of the foremost religious artists of this century.

Rouget de Lisle, Claude Joseph 1760–1836. French army engineer and writer. He wrote (1792) the French national anthem, La Marseillaise.

Rough Riders Popular name for the 1st US Volunteer Cavalry in the Spanish-American War (1898). Largely organized by T. Roosevelt and commanded by L. Wood, they mainly fought on foot in Cuba, having been forced to leave their horses behind in Florida. The Battle of San Juan Hill, fought under Roosevelt's command, was their best-known engagement.

Roundheads Name of the party of Parliamentarians that opposed Charles I in the English Civil War (1642–49). They were so named because of their short haircuts. The Royalists wore their hair long in the then fashionable ringlets.

Round Table In Arthurian legend, the huge table King Arthur had constructed so that no knight could claim precedence over any other. It was first mentioned *c*1155.

Rousseau, Henri 1844–1910. French primitivist painter. He painted exotic scenes of jungles, wild beasts, and strange Gypsies in a naive style. His works include Monkeys in the Orange Trees, Sleeping Gypsy, and The Dream.

Rousseau, Jean Jacques 1712–78. Swiss-born French author and philosopher. A highly controversial figure in his lifetime, he influenced both the development of Romanticism and the political thought of the French Revolution. Rousseau's life was erratic and, after he gained recognition, was marked by bitter quarrels with his friends, flight from one country after another because of hostile reactions to his views, and, finally, at least partial insanity. Among his works were articles for the great French Encyclopédie; Discourse on Arts and Sciences, which held that civilization corrupted the essential goodness of man; Discourse on the Origin of Inequality, which again treated corruption of the natural man by civilization; the famous Social Contract, which postulated both subordination of the individual to the general will of society and the common good toward which society must aim; Émile, a novel that influenced educational theory; and Confessions, his famous autobiography.

Roussel, Albert 1869–1937. French composer. He combined modern experimental techniques with a basic neoclassical style in such well known works as the ballet Bacchus and Ariane.

Rowlatt Acts Legislation passed (Feb., 1919) by the British Government of India to extend wartime measures whereby suspected revolutionaries could be tried without juries and even interned without trial. The Indian protests over these measures, led by M. Gandhi, led to the Massacre of Amritsar (q.v.).

Rowley, William 1585?–1642? English Jacobean dramatist. He was both an actor and a collaborator on dozens of plays, most notably The Changeling, written with T. Middleton. His own best-known play was All's Lost by Lust.

Roxana ⟨Roxane⟩ d. 311BC. Wife of Alexander the Great, daughter of a local Bactrian chief. Alexander married her (327 BC) to consolidate his position in Persia and she bore him a posthumous son. Caught in the conflicts between Alexander's generals (Wars of the Diadochi), she and her son were put to death by Cassander.

Roxane See Roxana

Roxas y Acuna, Manuel 1892–1948. First president of the independent Republic of the Philippines (1946–48). He was Speaker of the House and senator before independence. During WW II he spied for the Allies while serving in the Japanese occupation government in the Philippines.

Royal Academy of Arts Principal British art organization. It was founded in 1768 by George III, with Sir J. Reynolds as its first president. It has 40 academicians and sponsors studies and biennial exhibitions.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Canadian federal police force. It was founded (1873) as the Northwest Mounted Police with an original force of 300 men to restore order in the frontier provinces. Popularly called the Mounties and long celebrated for its dogged pursuit of criminals, the unit was given federal status in 1920 and now numbers some 14,000 men.

Royal Highlanders See Black Watch

Royal Society One of the oldest and most prestigious European scientific societies. Founded in London (1660) as the Royal Society of London for the Improvement of Natural Knowledge, it has counted among its members the most distinguished men of science from its founding down to the present.

Royce, Josiah 1855–1916. American philosopher, an exponent of philosophical idealism. In his works he stressed the importance of individuality and will over intellect.

Ruanda See Rwanda

Ruanda-Urundi Former Belgian colonial territory in central Africa, now divided between the independent states of Rwanda and Burundi. Once a part of German East Africa, the region was taken by Belgium in 1916. It was made a UN trust territory in 1946 and was divided in 1962. The Tutsi and the Hutu are the main peoples inhabiting the area.

Rubens, Peter Paul 1577–1640. Flemish painter, considered the master of baroque art and noted for the sensuousness and use of color in his works. After studying in Italy, he ran a large workshop in Antwerp and used assistants to help with his many commissioned works, including Descent from the Cross and the decoration of France's Luxembourg Palace. Later he became a diplomat and was sent on missions to Spain, where he painted the royal family, and to England, where he did the Allegory of War and Peace. Among his many other noted works were Adoration of the Magi, The Massacre of the Innocents, Venus and Adonis, and The Three Graces.

Rubicon A small stream flowing into the Adriatic. Located in what is now north central Italy, it once marked the border between Cisalpine Gaul and Italy. By crossing the Rubicon with his army (Jan. 10–11, 49 BC), J. Caesar irrevocably committed himself to the civil war with the Roman Senate.

Rubinstein, Anton Grigoryevich 1829–94. Russian pianist, a virtuoso esteemed as a master of technique in his time. He was also a respected composer, though his works are rarely performed today.

Rubinstein, Artur 1886–1982. Polish-born American pianist. Known especially as an interpreter of Chopin, he was one of the most popular of concert pianists for many decades.

Ruby, Jack See Kennedy, John F

Rudolf 1858–89. Archduke and heir to the Austro-Hungarian empire. His mysterious death (with his mistress) at Mayerling was officially declared a suicide.

Rudolf I ⟨Hapsburg, Rudolf of⟩ 1218–91. German king (1273–91), and first of the Hapsburg line of emperors. His election ended the Interregnum (q.v.) in the Holy Roman Empire. His wars against King Ottocar II of Bohemia, a rival for the crown, helped restore eastern German lands, and he consolidated the rule over lands central to his family dynasty (notably Austria). He was never crowned Holy Roman Emperor.

Rudolf II 1552–1612. Holy Roman emperor (1576–1612), successor to his father, Maximilian II. He reversed his father's policy of toleration of Protestantism and openly supported the Catholic Reformation. However, opposition to his policies (notably a revolt by S. Bocskay in Hungary) and Rudolf's mental instability made it increasingly impossible for him to rule. By 1606 his brother Matthias had become actual ruler of the empire.

Rudolph ⟨Raoul⟩ d. 936. Duke of Burgundy and king of France (923–36), successor to Robert I. His reign was embroiled in a succession of wars against the Normans and Hungarians, fought to consolidate his position.

Rueil, Peace of See Fronde

Ruffo, Fabrizio 1744–1827. Roman Catholic cardinal and Neapolitan leader. In 1799 he led a successful insurrection against the Napoleonic regime (Parthenopean Republic) in Naples.

Rufinus d. AD 395. Roman statesman. As minister to Theodosius I and his son Arcadius, Rufinus wielded great power in the Eastern Roman empire. He failed in his attempt to marry his daughter to Arcadius and was assassinated by the Goths, probably at the instigation of Stilicho, his rival.

Ruhr District Ruhr River valley (northwest West Germany) and one of the world's leading industrial regions. The presence of high-quality coal ultimately led to the region's development (19th cent.) as a center for steel production and other allied industries. It was important to the German war effort in WW I and was occupied (1923–25) by France and Belgium when Germany failed to meet reparations payments after WW I. In WW II the district again supplied much of Germany's war materials and was heavily bombed (1942–45).

Ruisdael, Jacob van ⟨Ruysdael, Jacob van⟩ *c*1628–82. Dutch painter of the baroque period. Considered one of the greatest landscapists, he influenced the French and English landscapists of the next two centuries. Among his noted works were Jewish Cemetery and Wheatfields.

Rumania See Romania

Rumford, Benjamin Thompson, Count 1753–1814. American-born British physicist. He is best-known for his theory that heat is caused by the motion of particles (1798).

Rump Parliament Phase of England's Long Parliament (1640–60) that began following (1648) expulsion of members unacceptable to the rebel army (see Pride's Purge). These expelled members were recalled in 1660, restoring the Long Parliament. It voted its own dissolution (Mar. 16, 1660) after providing for the convening of the Convention Parliament (q.v.). This paved the way for the English Restoration.

Rundstedt, Gerd von 1875–1953. German field marshal, commander of German forces in Western Europe (1942–45). He was one of the ablest of Hitler's commanders, taking a leading part in the conquest of France, the invasion of Russia, the fortification of Europe, and the Battle of the Bulge.

Runeberg, Johan Ludvig 1804–77. Finnish romantic poet. He wrote verse epics, and the Finnish national anthem, "Our Land," was adapted from one of his poems.

Rungeling, John See Ringling, John

Runjeet Singh See Ranjit Singh

Runnimede See Runnymede

Runnymede ⟨Runnimede⟩ Meadow near the Thames River in Surrey, England, where King John was obliged (1215) by his barons to accept the Magna Carta (q.v.).

Rupert 1352–1410. German king (1400–10), successor to Wenceslaus and elector palatine of the Rhine (1398–1410). He unsuccessfully attempted to regain the imperial city of Milan, which had been taken by the Visconti. Rupert was never crowned Holy Roman Emperor.

Rupert, Prince 1619–82. Count palatine of the Rhine and English Royalist general. A grandson of James I, he fought during the Thirty Years' War, and then commanded Royalist forces defending Charles I during the English Civil War. He won notable victories, but was badly defeated at the battles of Marston Moor and Naseby. After the restoration of Charles II, he served as a naval commander in the Dutch Wars and became president of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Rupert's Land Canadian territory held by the Hudson's Bay Company from receipt of its charter in 1670 until it was sold to Canada in 1869. Named after Prince Rupert, the company's first president, it included the vast region constituting the drainage basin of Hudson Bay.

Rurik Dynasty of Russian noblemen and czars that ruled Russia until 1598. The line was founded by Rurik (d. 879) and his brothers, Scandinavian adventurers called Varangians, who gained control of Novgorod (*c*862). Rurik's successor later gained control of the Russian princely states, notably Moscow, and thus came to control the empire. Beginning with Ivan III, who ended Tatar control of the region (1480), succeeding members of the line enlarged and consolidated their control over Russian domains. Ivan IV (the Terrible) was the first ruler to proclaim himself czar and Fëdor I was the last ruler of the Rurik family. He was succeeded by B. Godunov, whose reign ended in the Time of Troubles and the rise of the Romanov dynasty.

Rush, Benjamin 1745?–1813. American physician and politician. He served in the Continental Congress (1776–77), signed the Declaration of Independence, was surgeon general of the Continental Army, and finally treasurer of the US mint.

Rush, Richard 1780–1859. American statesman and diplomat. He negotiated the Rush-Bagot Convention (q.v.) that demilitarized the Great Lakes and helped establish the 49th parallel as the border between the US and Canada. He also played a role in preliminary talks with the British that led to formulation of the Monroe Doctrine.

Rush-Bagot Convention Agreement signed between the acting US secretary of state R. Rush and the British minister Charles Bagot in 1817. It provided for virtual demilitarization of the US-Canadian border region (notably the Great Lakes) and was the basis of subsequent peaceful border relations between the US and Canada.

Ruskin, John 1819–1900. British art critic and social thinker, the dominant critic of the Victorian period. He promoted the Gothic Revival movement and later took up the cause of improving the condition of the working class. His critical works included Modern Painters and The Stones of Venice. Among his works on social reform were Time and Tide and Fors Clavigera.

Russell, Bertrand Arthur William, 3d earl Russell. 1872–1970. British philosopher, one of the most important of this century. He established a considerable reputation prior to WW I, particularly in the field of mathematical logic, with such works as Principles of Mathematics (1903) and Principia Mathematica (1910–13). From WW I on, however, he became increasingly involved in pacifism, social reform, and nuclear disarmament. Though his outspoken liberal views sometimes resulted in loss of teaching positions and even arrest, he actively pursued such causes until his last days.

Russell, Charles Taze See Jehovah's Witnesses

Russell, Francis, 2d earl of Bedford *c*1527–85. English courtier and politician. He had to flee the country as a result of his part in the affair of Lady Jane Grey, but returned to hold important posts under Queen Elizabeth I.

Russell, Francis, 4th earl of Bedford 1593–1641. English nobleman who developed the great London market known as Covent Garden.

Russell, Henry Norris 1877–1957. American astronomer. His diagrams showing the relationship between the brightness and spectral class of stars contributed to theories of the evolution of the universe.

Russell, John, 1st earl of Bedford 1486?–1555. English courtier and politician. One of Henry VIII's executors, he was also lord privy seal, and was created early in 1550.

Russell, John, 4th duke of Bedford 1710–71. English politician. An important opponent of Robert Walpole, he was a Whig leader and served in such posts as first lord of the admiralty, lord lieutenant of Ireland, and ambassador to France.

Russell, John, 1st earl Russell 1792–1878. British statesman and twice prime minister (1846–52, 1865–66). As a member of Parliament, he championed such liberal causes as the Catholic Emancipation Act, the Reform Bill of 1832 (q.v.), and the repeal of the Corn Laws.

Russell, Lord William 1639–83. English Whig political leader. As a member of Parliament, he opposed Charles II's pro-French policies. Unjustly accused of being involved in the Rye House Plot (q.v.), he was executed and later cleared.

Russell, William, 5th earl and 1st duke of Bedford 1613–1700. English nobleman and Civil War leader. He fought variously for both king and Parliament during the English Civil War.

Russia See Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Russia, Orthodox Church of See Orthodox Church of Russia

Russia Company See Muscovy Company

Russian Civil War War (1918–22) between the Bolshevik Red Army and counterrevolutionary (White Army) forces, variously aided by the Germans, French, British, Japanese, and Americans. The Bolshevik takeover during the Russian Revolution (q.v.) coalesced opposition to the Communists (as the Bolsheviks called themselves since 1918) and a number of border territories proclaimed independence. The Red Army, led by L. Trotsky, fought variously in the Ukraine, the Baltic region, northern Russia (against British, French and American forces), the southern Caucasus region, and Siberia (against the Japanese, as well as White Russians). By 1922 most of the former Russian territories had been regained, and with the Communist government in firm control, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was proclaimed (Dec. 30). (See also Union of Soviet Socialist Republics [1917–22].)

Russian Revolution of 1905 Rebellion in Russia that led to the establishment of a constitutional monarchy and paved the way for the Russian Revolution of 1917. Czar Nicholas II's reign was marked by increased repression and protest against it, calls for reform by the zemstvos (q.v.), and widespread discontent over losses in the Russo-Japanese War (q.v.). The unrest finally culminated in Bloody Sunday (q.v.) in which soldiers fired on a peaceful protest (Jan. 1905). This incident galvanized opposition to the czarist regime and resulted in widespread strikes and uprisings. By October the revolt had reached a fever pitch and Nicholas was forced to issue the October Manifesto (q.v.), in which he acceded to rule by a constitution, promised creation of the Duma (a legislative body), and named Count S. Witte prime minister. Order was restored soon after, though the arrest of rebel leaders provoked some further protests.

Russian Revolution of 1917 Name applied to the political uprising in Russia in which the monarchy was overthrown and the Bolsheviks under N. Lenin came to power. The Revolution of 1917, was actually two revolutions: the February Revolution, which led to the overthrow of the czar and end of the Romanov dynasty; and the October Revolution, which brought the Bolsheviks (q.v.) to power in Russia. The revolution had far-reaching consequences. It brought into being the world's first Communist state and resulted in sweeping reform of Russian society. These reforms did not go unopposed, however, and it was not until 1922 that the Communists brought an end to the Russian Civil War (q.v.). [See also Union of Soviet Socialist Republics [1917–22].] Key dates in the history of the revolution include:

1906–11 Nicholas' prime minister Piotr Stolypin attempted unsuccessfully to introduce reforms, while at the same time suppressing the revolutionary movement; assassinated.

1914–18 WW I; severe hardship, failures of Russian government and military reversals contributed to revolutionary movement.

1915 Czar Nicholas took over command of Russian armies at the front (1915); left Czarina Alexandra (dominated by the unpopular Rasputin) in charge of the government; her mismanagement of government only caused further political unrest.

1916 Rasputin assassinated (Dec. 30) by angry noblemen; Rasputin's death failed to ease tensions.

1917 February Revolution (Mar. 8, Feb. 23 Old style); workers in Petrograd (new name of St. Petersburg) went on strike; outbreaks of rioting.

1917 Czar Nicholas attempted to dissolve the Duma (Mar. 11); his order ignored; soldiers in Petrograd joined the workers in the revolt (Mar. 12).

1917 Strikers organized Petrograd Workers' and Soldiers' Soviet (Mar. 12), which began to assume political power in the capital.

1917 Duma established Provisional Government, headed by Prince Georgi Lvov and including Alexander Kerensky; Nicholas abdicated in favor of regency of his brother, Grand Duke Michael (Mar. 15).

1917 Grand Duke Michael abdicated (Mar. 16); Romanov dynasty ended; struggle for power between Petrograd soviet and Provisional Government began.

1917 Provisional Government announced its intention to continue the war against Germany (Mar. 19); Petrograd soviet gained support among workers and soldiers.

1917 Lenin returned to Russia (Apr.) in "sealed train" provided by Germans. His able supporter, L. Trotsky, arrived in the following month.

1917 Lenin outlined his April theses (Apr., 17) for Bolshevik-dominated government.

1917 Provisional Government foreign minister Pavel Milyukov forced to resign because of his war policies; Kerensky became minister of war (May 18).

1917 First all-Russian Congress of Soviets convened in Petrograd (June 16); delegates largely Mensheviks or Social Revolutionaries; Bolsheviks a minority despite growing support.

1917 Russians launched major military offensive (June 29); its failure (early July) led to growing Bolshevik strength and further weakening of Provisional Government.

1917 Massive demonstrations held in Petrograd (July 16–18); led to resignation of Prince Lvov (July 20); Kerensky became head of Provisional Government.

1917 Provisional Government instituted program of political repression against Bolsheviks and other revolutionary elements (July–Sept.); Lenin forced to flee to Finland.

1917 Gen. Lavr Kornilov led unsuccessful attempt to occupy Petrograd and seize power; arrested (Sept. 14).

1917 Lenin secretly returned to Petrograd (Oct., 20); called for armed insurrection against provisional government.

1917 Provisional government sent troops to close Bolshevik newspapers in Petrograd (Nov., 6), thus sparking revolt.

1917 October Revolution; Bolsheviks seized power in Petrograd (night of Nov. 6–7, Oct. 24–25 Old Style); second all-Russian Congress of Soviets convened (Nov. 7), Bolshevik delegates in majority; most Mensheviks and Social Revolutionaries withdrew; Trotsky announced dissolution of Provisional Government; Kerensky fled; Congress proclaimed Soviets as ruling government bodies throughout Russia; Council of People's Commissars, with Lenin as chairman, created to head government.

1917 Forces of local Soviets fought to take control in ensuing weeks, as Russian civil War began.

Russian Social Democratic Labor party Russian Marxist political party founded (Mar., 1898) at Minsk by delegates from several revolutionary organizations. Its existence was nominal until its second party congress (1903) in Brussels and London, at which time it divided into two factions, the Bolsheviks (q.v.) and the Menshiviks (q.v.).

Russo-Finnish War ⟨Winter War⟩ War between Russia and Finland (Nov., 1939–Mar., 1940). Following the outbreak of WW II, Russia began (Nov. 30, 1939) an undeclared war over demands for certain territorial concessions and demilitarization of Finland's defensive Mannerheim Line. While the Soviets bombed Helsinki and shelled Finnish ports, the Finns, under Field Marshal C. Mannerheim, successfully resisted Soviet attacks on the eastern frontier. In early February, however, superior Russian forces began to break Finnish defenses. Ultimately Finland was forced to sign a peace treaty (Mar. 12, 1940) granting Russia the concessions it sought.

Russo-Japanese War Brief war (1904–05) between Russia and Japan, an outgrowth of rivalry over control of Manchuria and Korea. After negotiations failed (largely because of Russian intransigence) to produce a settlement, Japan launched a surprise attack (Feb. 8, 1904) on the Russian stronghold of Port Arthur, defended by Russian Gen. A. Kuropatkin. The Japanese finally took Port Arthur (Jan. 2, 1905) and inflicted a decisive defeat at the Battle of Mukden (Mar. 10, 1905). The final blow came when Russia's Baltic fleet, attempting to relieve Russian forces in the East, was intercepted and destroyed at Tsushima (May 27, 1905) by a Japanese naval force under Adm. H. Togo. The Treaty of Portsmouth (Aug. 29, 1905) ended the war in a humiliating defeat for Russia. Russia conceded territories (including Port Arthur) to Japan, though it retained control of northern Manchuria. The war marked the emergence of Japan as a major power.

Russo-Polish War War between Russia and Poland (Apr. 25–Oct. 12, 1920) caused by Poland's attempt to seize the Russian Ukraine. Allied with Ukrainian nationalists, the Poles entered the Ukraine and occupied Kiev (May 7, 1920). The Russian counteroffensive began in June and by August the Russians had driven the Poles back to Warsaw. On the verge of total defeat, Poland was saved by the intervention of European powers. A military force under French Gen. M. Weygand aided the Poles and forced the Russians to retreat and finally agree to an armistice. The subsequent Treaty of Riga established the Russo-Polish border until WW II.

Russo-Swedish War War (1741–43) between Russia and Sweden, in which Russia emerged victorious after initial Swedish gains. The war was ended by the Treaty of Åbo (q.v.), by which Sweden ceded territory in Finland to Russia.

Russo-Turkish Wars Wars fought by Russia and the Ottoman Empire (16th–19th cents.) that resulted in Russian conquest of Ottoman domains between the Black Sea and the Balkans. Concern over Russian expansionism and the general decline of the Ottoman Empire eventually brought direct involvement by other European powers in the 19th cent. (See also Eastern Question.) 1. War (1676–81) fought by Czar Fëdor III of Russia against the Ottomans. He gained most of the Turkish Ukraine by the Treaty of Radzin (1681). 2. War (1695–96) in which Czar Peter I conquered the Ottoman stronghold of Azov on the Black Sea. Though Peter's European allies made peace with the Ottomans in the Treaty of Karlowitz (1699), he continued hostilities until 1702. 3. War (1710–11) between Peter and the Ottomans, a part of the Northern War (1700–21). Encouraged by France, the Ottomans attacked Russia (1710), defeated Peter's army at Pruth, and by the Treaty of Pruth (1711) regained Azov. 4. War (1736–39) between the Russians (with their ally, Austria) and the Ottomans, in which the Russians recaptured Azov and overran Moldavia. The Austrians, however, concluded the Treaty of Belgrade (1739), in which Russia acquired only Azov and was forced to agree not to militarize the Black Sea. 5. War (1768–74) declared by the Ottomans (under Mustafa III) on the Russians, under Catherine II. The Russians conquered Moldavia and Walachia and were victorious in the Crimea. The Treaty of Kuchuk Kainarji (q.v.) greatly increased Russian influence in the region and established Russia as the protector of Christians within Ottoman domains. 6. War (1787–92) between the Russians under Catherine II (with Austria as ally, 1788–91) and the Ottomans. Following Russia's annexation of the Crimea (1783), tensions increased and finally resulted in war, in which Russia and Austria were generally successful. Austria was forced out of the war (1791) by pressure from Prussia. Russia eventually concluded the Treaty of Jassy (1792), by which it extended its boundary to the Dniestr River and gave up Moldavia and Bessarabia. 7. War (1806–12) between Russia and the Ottomans under Selim III, caused by Selim's removal (1806) of Russian puppet rulers in Moldavia and Walachia. Russian victories in 1811–12 led to the Treaty of Bucharest (1812) and Russia's acquisition of Bessarabia. 8. War (1828–29) between Russia and the Ottomans, an outgrowth of the Greek War of Independence (1821–30). The Russians were successful on the Asian front and penetrated deep into the Balkans (to Adrianople), but were unable to take Constantinople. By the Treaty of Adrianople (q.v.), Russia won many concessions. 9. War (1853–56) better known as the Crimean War (q.v.). 10. War (1877–78) between Russia and the Ottomans, resulting from the Bosnian Rebellion of 1875. Russia actively encouraged the rebels, and Ottoman attempts to suppress the revolt precipitated (1877) a Russian declaration of war (to protect Christians). The Russians decisively defeated the Ottomans, crossed into the Balkans and halted just outside Constantinople. The resulting Treaty of San Stefano gave Russia so much territory that European powers protested and forced Russia to accept modified terms, as set forth at the Congress of Berlin (q.v.).

Ruth In the Bible, Moabite widow who later married Boaz and thereby became an ancestor of David.

Rutherford, Ernest Rutherford, 1st baron 1871–1937. New Zealand-born British physicist, noted for his important studies of radioactivity. He discovered the alpha and beta particles and developed the concept of an atom as a nucleus surrounded by orbiting electrons. He received the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1908.

Ruthven, William, 4th lord of Ruthven and 1st earl of Gowrie 1541?–1584. Scottish nobleman. An opponent of Mary Queen of Scots, he led (1582) the "Raid of Ruthven," in which the boy king James VI of Scotland (later James I of Great Britain) was kidnapped. Ruthven, pardoned for that conspiracy, was executed after yet another plot.

Rutledge, Ann 1813?–35. Supposed object of A. Lincoln's great love. Lincoln's biographer, William Herndon, created the now discredited story of Lincoln's romance with the girl.

Rutledge, John 1739–1800. American political leader. A member of the Continental Congress and the Constitutional Convention, he was instrumental in drafting and ratifying the Constitution.

Rütli Oath ⟨Grütli ~⟩ Traditionally, an oath sworn by representatives of the Swiss cantons of Uri, Schwyz, and Untenwalden, to join in rebellion against Austria. It is regarded as symbolic of Swiss independence.

Ruysdael, Jacob van See Ruisdael, Jacob van

Ruyter, Michiel Adriaanszoon de 1607–76. Dutch admiral. He was a lifelong sailor, and his brilliant victories in the Dutch Wars enabled The Netherlands for a time to match British naval power.

Rwanda ⟨Ruanda⟩ East-central African republic. Its capital is Kigali. An agricultural society, Rwanda is the most densely populated nation in Africa. The minority Tutsi tribe dominated the Hutu majority, until the Hutu rebelled (1959), sending thousands of Tutsi into exile. Formed by the division of Ruanda-Urundi, Rwanda became independent in July 1, 1962.

Rye House Plot Failed plot (June 1683) by Whig extremists to assassinate Charles II of England and the duke of York (later James II). It was named for the house where the conspirators met and resulted in the execution of Whig leaders Lord William Russell and Algernon Sidney as suspected conspirators.

Rykov, Aleksey Ivanovich 1881–1938. Russian Bolshevik revolutionary leader. A Politburo member under N. Lenin, he was removed for opposing J. Stalin's collectivization program.

Ryle, Gilbert 1900–74. British philosopher. A leader of the school of rigorous linguistic analysis, he published his noted work, The Analysis of Mind, on the mind-body dualism.

Rymer, Thomas 1641–1713. English literary critic. In his A Short View of Tragedy, he advocated a return to classicism in drama and attacked such contemporary works as Shakespeare's Othello.

Ryswick, Treaty of Treaty (Sept. 27, 1697) between France and the alliance of Britain, The Netherlands, and Spain. It ended the War of the Grand Alliance. France retained Alsace but acknowledged William III as King of England, and the Dutch gained commerical concessions. Conquests in the colonies were restored and France returned captured territories in The Netherlands, Luxembourg, and Catalonia to Spain.

S

Saadi See Sadi

Saar See Saar Territory

Saarinen, Eero 1910–61. Finnish-born American architect, a pioneer of experimental architecture. His works include St. Louis' Gateway Arch, the Dulles Airport terminal in Washington, D.C., and the US Embassy in London.

Saarinen, Gottlieb Eliel 1873–1950. Finnish-American architect. A leading practitioner of modern architecture as well as a teacher, he collaborated with his son E. Saarinen on several projects. His works include the music shed for the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts.

Saarland See Saar Territory

Saar Territory ⟨Saar⟩ German territory now known as the West German state Saarland. A highly industrialized, coal-producing region, it has at various times been ruled by France but became a permanent part of the Federal Republic of Germany in 1957.

Saba See Sheba

Sabbatai Zevi ⟨~ Z'vi⟩ 1626–76. Jewish mystic and sectarian leader. Having proclaimed himself the Messiah, he led an unsuccessful march on Constantinople (1666). Captured, he accepted Islam to save himself.

Sabbatai Z'vi See Sabbatai Zevi

Sabbatarians ⟨Southcottians⟩ Christians who advocate strict observance of Sunday as the sabbath. Sabbatarians have frequently promoted blue laws to restrict Sunday activities.

Sabellianism Christian heresy. Founded by the Roman theologian Sabellius (fl. AD *c*220), Sabellianism held that the three persons of the Trinity were not three distinct, independent persons but three manifestations of the one Godhead.

Sabellius See Sabellianism

Sabine Crossroads, Battle of See Taylor, Richard

Sabines Ancient people who lived in the Sabine Hills near Rome. According to legend, the Romans, led by Romulus, captured their women and carried them off to provide wives for themselves. The Sabines were conquered by the Romans (290 BC) and became Roman citizens (268 BC).

Sacagawea See Sacajawea

Sacajawea ⟨Sacagawea⟩ ⟨Sakakawea⟩ 1787?–1812. American Indian woman who served as an interpreter on the Lewis and Clark expedition. A Shoshone, she was married to a French Canadian fur trapper hired by Lewis and Clark.

Sac and Fox Indians ⟨Sauk Indians⟩ Related North American Algonquin Indian tribes. Inhabiting the Great Lakes area, the Sac and Fox tribes provoked the Black Hawk War (q.v.). After their defeat they were eventually pushed west across the Mississippi.

Sacco, Nicola See Sacco-Vanzetti case

Sacco-Vanzetti case American criminal trial. On Apr. 15, 1920, a factory paymaster and security guard were robbed and killed at South Braintree, Massachusetts. Two Italian immigrants, Nicola Sacco (1891–1927) and Bartolomeo Vanzetti (1888–1927), were arrested, tried, and convicted (July 14, 1921) of the crime. Critics of the trial pointed to lack of concrete evidence and charged there was prejudice against the defendants because of their ethnic origins and political belief in anarchism. Despite international protests and appeals, both men were executed (1927).

Sackville, Thomas, 1st earl of Dorset 1536–1608. British poet, dramatist, and diplomat in service to Queen Elizabeth I. He is remembered today as the author of the first English tragedy in blank verse, Gorboduc, written with Thomas Norton (1532–84).

Sacramento American city (pop. 275,700), capital of California. First settled in 1839, it grew rapidly after the discovery of gold nearby in 1848 and became California's capital in 1854.

Sacred Band See Pelopidas

Sacred War(s) Wars fought by ancient Greek cities in the Amphictyonic League for protection of the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. 1. First ~ (*c*596–*c*586 BC). Delphi was located within the territory of the Phocian city of Crisa, and when the city imposed a tax on pilgrims to Delphi, the Amphictyonic League went to war. Crisa was defeated and destroyed and the league took over administration of Delphi. 2. Second ~ (*c*448 BC). Fought by Athens against Sparta to restore control of Delphi to Phocis. 3. Third ~ (355–346 BC). Phocis, fined by the Amphictyonic League for cultivating sacred grounds, seized Delphi and thereupon came under attack. Phocis, supported by Athens and Sparta, successfully resisted until Philip of Macedon joined forces (352) with the Amphicytonic League. Philip concluded the Peace of Philocrates with Athens (346), defeated Phocis, and became chairman of the league. 4. Fourth ~ (339–338 BC). The league next began a war against Amphissa, which caused Athens to join Thebes against it. Philip of Macedon, leading forces of the league, crushed Athens and Thebes at the Battle of Chaeronea (338) and thereby gained control over Greece.

Sacrosancta See Constance, Council of

Sadat, Anwar al- 1918–81. Egyptian president (1970–81) and statesman, noted for securing the first Arab peace treaty with Israel. As an Egyptian army officer, Sadat was imprisoned (1942–44) during WW II for aiding the Germans against the British. He was imprisoned again after the war for acts of terrorism but was acquitted and returned to the military. In 1952 he aided his fellow officer and longtime friend G. Nasser in overthrowing King Farouk and served in several posts during Nasser's rule. Made vice-president (1969), he succeeded to the presidency on Nasser's death (1970). He ordered Russian military advisers to leave Egypt and launched the Arab-Israeli War of 1973 (q.v.) against Israel. After the war Sadat engaged in a search for a negotiated peace in the Mideast which led eventually to his historic trip to Jerusalem (Nov., 1977) to address the Israeli Knesset. Peace talks between Israel and Egypt, in which the US took part, led to the Israeli-Egyptian Peace Treaty (Mar., 1979). The Arab world vigorously opposed the treaty and instituted a virtual boycott of Egypt. Opposition within Egypt to Sadat's rule culminated in Sadat's assassination (Oct. 6, 1981) by a group of disaffected Muslim fundamentalists within the army.

Sadducees Ancient Jewish sect. Rivals of the Pharisees from *c*200 BC, they held to a strict interpretation of the Torah and centered their worship about the Temple. They disappeared as a group after the destruction of the Temple (AD 70).

Sade, Donatien Alphonse François, comte de 1740–1814. French erotic writer, also known as the marquis de Sade. He was several times confined for his cruel sexual perversions, about which he wrote in his novels. The word "sadism" was derived from his name.

Sadi ⟨Saadi⟩ 1184–1291. Classical Persian poet. A mystical and lyric poet, he is known best for his poems Bustan (Orchard) and Gulistan (Rose Garden).

Sad Night, The See Alvarado, Pedro de

Sadowa, Battle of See Koniggratz, Battle of Safavids Persian Muslim dynasty (1501–1736). It was founded by Ismail I, who conquered and subdued large areas of Persia, added several Iraqi territories, and proclaimed Shi'ite Islam as the state religion. Under the military leadership of Abbas I (ruled 1587–1629), the Safavids defeated Turkey, expanded Persia's territories, ended Portuguese encroachment, established trade with the West, and became an international power. The dynasty began a slow decline at the death of Abbas I and ended with the rule (1732–36) of Abbas III, who was overthrown by Nadir Shah.

Sagasta, Práxedes Mateo 1825–1903. Spanish statesman, several times prime minister. He granted autonomy to Cuba (1897) but was blamed for its loss in the Spanish-American War.

Sage, Margaret Olivia Slocum See Sage, Russell

Sage, Russell 1816–1906. American financier. He amassed an enormous fortune from his holdings in railroads in association with J. Gould. His widow, Margaret Olivia Slocum Sage (1828–1918), made extensive charitable contributions and established the Russell Sage Foundation.

Saigon Vietnamese city, capital of South Vietnam from 1954 until its conquest in 1975 by North Vietnam. Captured by the French (1859), it became a cosmopolitan city under their tutelage. It was the center of the US effort in the Vietnam War, was a center of fighting in the Tet Offensive (q.v.), and fell to the Communists at the end of the war (1975).

Saigo Takamori 1828–77. Japanese soldier and statesman. He supported the emperor in the Meiji Restoration but opposed the Westernization of Japan. He eventually led his samurai followers in the unsuccessful Satsuma Revolt (1877), in which he was killed.

saint For names of saints, see under individual names. For places, events, and biographical names beginning with Saint or St., see below.

Saint Albans, battles of Battles of the English Wars of the Roses. The first (May 22, 1455), a Lancastrian defeat, resulted in the capture of King Henry VI by Richard, duke of York. The second (Feb. 17, 1461) was a Yorkist defeat, inflicted by Queen Margaret.

Saint Albans Raid Confederate attack from Canada (Oct. 19, 1864) on Saint Albans, Vermont, during the American Civil War. Some 25 Confederate raiders robbed three banks, killing one man, and escaped into Canada. Canada refused to return the raiders, but the money they stole was returned.

Saint Augustine City (pop. 12,000) in northeastern Florida, the oldest city in the US. Founded (1565) by P. Menendez de Aviles, it was Spain's northernmost outpost in the New World until Florida was ceded to the US (1821).

Saint Bartholomew's Day, Massacre of See Massacre of Saint Bartholomew's Day

St. Clair, Arthur 1734–1818. Scottish-born American Revolutionary general and first governor of the Northwest Territory (1789–1802). He fought at Princeton and Trenton, and was exonerated from blame for the evacuation of Fort Ticonderoga (1778).

Saint Crispin, Knights of See Knights of Saint Crispin

Sainte-Beuve, Charles Augustin 1804–69. French literary critic and historian, considered the greatest literary critic of his day. The extent and quality of his work marked a milestone in French intellectual life.

Saint-Exupéry, Antoine de 1900–1944. French airman and writer. A pioneer aviator, he celebrated flying in such books as Night Flight and Wind, Sand and Stars. His fable The Little Prince is widely read.

Saint-Gaudens, Augustus 1848–1907. American sculptor. The leading sculptor of his time, he is noted especially for his statue of Adm. D. Farragut and the memorial in Washington's Rock Creek Cemetery to Mrs. H. Adams.

Saint George's Day Revolt ⟨Estonian Revolt of 1343⟩ Uprising (1343–45) of Estonian peasants against their Danish overlords. Many Danish and German nobles were killed before the Teutonic Knights quelled the rebellion. Denmark sold Estonia to the order (1346), and they in turn placed it under the rule of the Livonian Knights.

Saint-Germain, Treaty of 1. Treaty (1570) between the Huguenots and Catholics during the French Wars of Religion (q.v.). It marked the end of the first phase of the conflict. 2. Treaty (Sept. 10, 1919) between the Allies and Austria which abolished the Austro-Hungarian monarchy and created the new republic of Austria after WW I. The treaty limited Austria's armed forces and its ability to enter alliances.

St. John, Henry, Viscount Bolingbroke 1678–1751. British statesman. A brilliant Tory leader during the reign of Queen Anne, he was compelled to flee to France (1715) after her death and his implication in a Jacobite plot. Pardoned but banned from politics, he became an influential writer.

Saint John Damascene See John of Damascus, Saint

Saint-Just, Louis de 1767–94. French revolutionary leader. He was an ardent and pitiless ally of M. Robespierre during the Reign of Terror and was eventually guillotined with him.

Saint Laurent, Louis Stephen 1882–1973. Canadian statesman and prime minister (1948–57).

St. Leger, Barry See Oriskany, Battle of

Saint Louis American city (pop. 453,100) on the Mississippi. Founded (1763) as a French trading post, it became the major gateway to the West during the 19th cent.

Saint Paul American city (pop. 270,200), capital of Minnesota. First settled in the early 1800s, it became the capital of Minnesota Territory (1849) and the state of Minnesota (1858). A major industrial, rail, and commercial center, it forms, with adjacent Minneapolis, the Twin Cities metropolitan center.

St. Petersburg See Leningrad

Saint Peter's church Roman Catholic basilica at the Vatican, Rome. The world's largest church, it was built to replace an earlier (4th-cent.) structure. Work began in 1506, and the church was dedicated in 1626. Many Renaissance artists worked on it, among them D. Bramante, Raphael, and Michelangelo. Beneath the altar is the tomb of Saint Peter.

Saint-Saens, Charles Camille 1835–1921. French composer. A piano and organ virtuoso, he composed symphonies, concerti, and tone poems, but is known best for his opera Samson and Delilah.

Saint-Simon, Claude Henri de Rouvro 1760–1825. French social thinker. A great-nephew of L. de Saint-Simon, he formulated an early version of scientific socialism, a precursor of positivism.

Saint-Simon, Louis de Rouvro 1675–1755. French courtier and memorist. An ardent aristocrat, his Mémoires, dealing with the court of King Louis XIV, are considered a major contribution to French literature.

Saionji, Kimmochi, Prince 1850–1940. Japanese statesman and prime minister (1906–08, 1911–12). He participated in the Meiji Restoration, traveled in the West, served in many government posts, and tried to moderate his country's turn toward militarism.

Saka Era See Kaniska Era

Sakakawea See Sacajawea

Saladin 1137?–1193. Muslim sultan and military leader, noted for his chivalry in battle against the Crusaders, founder of the Ayyubid dynasty. An ardent Sunni Muslim, he participated in wars against the Fatimids in Egypt (1164–68), became vizier in Egypt (1169), and formally ended Fatimid control in Egypt (1171). He subsequently extended his control over Damascus, and began to subdue local rulers throughout Syria and Palestine. Saladin then mounted a major campaign against the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem (q.v.) ruled by the Crusaders. He won a signal victory at the Battle of Hattin (July 4, 1187) in Palestine and went on to take Jerusalem (Oct. 2, 1187), thus effectively ending the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem. This prompted the unsuccessful Third Crusade (q.v.), after which Saladin permitted Christians access to Jerusalem. Christian domains in the Holy Land, however, were reduced to a small fraction of their former size.

Salamis, Battle of Naval battle (480 BC) between the Greeks and the Persians during the Persian Wars (q.v.). It was fought in the straits between the island of Salamis and the Greek mainland. The Greeks under Themistocles won the battle, one of the most celebrated encounters of history. Themistocles lured the superior Persian navy (600 ships to over 360 Greek vessels) into the narrow straits, and thus made it impossible for the Persians to maneuver. The Greeks subsequently sank 200-300 Persian ships, losing only about 40.

Salazar, Antônio de Oliveira 1889–1970. Dictator of Portugal (1932–68). As minister of finance (1926, 1928–32), Salazar initiated a number of economic recovery programs. Made premier (1932), he instituted a new constitution (1933) which turned Portugal into a corporate state and gave Salazar dictatorial powers. He also served as minister of war (1936–44) and minister of foreign affairs (1936–47). Although a number of Salazar's reform measures were successful, he was unable to substantially reduce poverty and illiteracy in Portugal. He is credited with making the country financially stable.

Salbai, Treaty of Treaty (May, 1782) between the British East India Company and the Marathas ending the first of the Maratha Wars. By its terms, similar to those of the earlier Treaty of Purandhar (q.v.), the British withdrew support of the Maratha pretender Ragoba but retained Salsette island.

Salem witch trials Series of witch trials (May–Oct., 1692) in Salem, Massachusetts. The trials were prompted by three young girls who, having heard tales of voodoo, claimed to be possessed by the devil. Their accusations led to hysteria and further accusations. By the time calm had been restored, 19 persons had been executed for witchcraft.

Sales, Saint Francis of See Francis of Sales, Saint

Salian dynasty Line of German emperors that ruled the Holy Roman Empire from 1024 to 1125. During its tenure, the investiture controversy (q.v.) with the papacy broke out. Its members included:

Conrad II	1024–39
Henry III	1039–56
Henry IV	1056–1106
Henry V	1106–25

Salic law Rule of succession in some European royal houses forbidding females to succeed to family titles. Supposedly dating to Frankish times, it was invoked by the French, English, and Spanish monarchies.

Salinger, Jerome David 1919–. American writer, known best for his novel The Catcher in the Rye.

Salisbury, John of See John of Salisbury

Salisbury, Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoyne-Cecil, 3d marquess of 1830–1903. British statesman and prime minister (1885–86, 1886–92, 1895–1902) noted for his advancement of British imperial interests in foreign affairs. Salisbury acted as his own foreign secretary. The Boer War (q.v.) was fought during his third ministry.

Salisbury, Robert Cecil, 1st earl of 1563?–1612. English statesman. He succeeded his father, Lord Burghley, as the principal adviser to Queen Elizabeth I, and negotiated the agreement that allowed the Scottish king to succeed peacefully to the British throne as James I. Cecil also served as James's principal minister.

Sallust (Crispus, Gaius Sallustius) 86–*c*34 BC. Roman historian. He was expelled from the Senate (50 BC) for immorality and for his support of J. Caesar, and, as governor of Numidia, was accused of extortion. Among his best-known histories is the Catilina, concerning the conspiracy of Catiline.

Salome Stepdaughter of Herod Antipas (d. after AD 40), who was tetrarch of Galilee and Perea. As a reward for dancing before Herod, she demanded the beheading of John the Baptist (q.v.).

Salomon, Haym 1740–1785. American Revolutionary financier and founder of the first Philadelphia synagogue. The principal financial backer of the fledgling American republic, he was impoverished by his loans to the government and to prominent individuals.

Salonica Campaign WW I Allied military expedition (1915–18), originally intended to aid Serbia, then under attack by Bulgaria. The Allied force of some 40,000 tried (Oct., 1915) to link up with the Serbians but was forced to retreat to Salonica in northeastern Greece. With Salonica as their base, the Allies increased forces there to some 250,000 and launched inconclusive attacks against Bulgarian and German forces. In 1917, the Allies forced the pro-German Greek king, Constantine I, to abdicate. The final Allied offensive from Salonica (from Sept., 1918) resulted in Bulgaria's surrender (Sept. 30), liberation of Serbia (Nov. 1), defeat of the Central Powers in Albania and Montenegro (by Nov. 9), and capture of Romania (Nov. 10). The armistice halted further military action.

Salt Lake City American city (pop. 163,000), capital of Utah. Founded (1847) on Great Salt Lake by B. Young, it is the world center of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (see Mormons).

Salvation Army Christian and philanthropic organization founded (1878) in England by W. Booth. Organized with military ranks and uniforms, it emphasizes street-corner evangelism and seeks to help satisfy the spiritual and material needs of the poor.

Salzburg Austrian city (pop. 130,000) noted for its Renaissance architecture and as a center of music and the performing arts. Originally a Celtic settlement, it became an archbishopric (*c*798) and its archbishops became (13th cent.) powerful princes of the Holy Roman Empire. W. Mozart was born in Salzburg.

Samanids Persian dynasty that ruled (*c*819–999) after the Arab Muslim conquest of Iran. The dynasty greatly advanced Persian literature, art, and architecture.

Samaritans Ancient Semitic people settled in Samaria, in the former kingdom of Israel, after its conquest by Assyria (*c*721 BC). Although they adopted Judaism and the Torah, they were shunned by the Jews returning to Judah after their Babylonian exile.

Samarkand One of the world's oldest cities, now in Uzbekistan, south central USSR. Taken by Alexander the Great (329 BC), it was destroyed (AD 1220) by G. Khan, but recovered and became (1370) capital of the empire of Tamerlane. Samarkand came under Soviet control in 1925.

Samnite War(s) Wars between the Romans and the Samnites, tribes of the mountain region of central and southern Italy. The Romans were ultimately victorious and thereby gained control of central and southern Italy. 1. First ~ (343–341 BC) proved indecisive. 2. Second ~ (326–304 BC). The Romans, defeated at the Battle of Caudine Forks (321), lost control of Campania (in southern Italy) and in 308, Rome was attacked by various tribes of central Italy. Rome succeeded in gaining the initiative, finally defeated the Samnites, and won firm control of Campania. 3. Third ~ (298–290 BC). The Samnites united with other tribes (including the Etruscans and Gauls) against the Romans. Defeated by the Romans at the Battle of Sentinum (295), the tribes were all eventually forced to accept peace.

Samos Greek island near Asia Minor. Colonized (11th cent. BC) by the Ionian Greeks, it became a commercial cultural center. Pythagoras came from Samos. Under various rulers for a millennium, it reverted to Greece in 1913.

Samos, Aristarchus of See Aristarchus of Samos

Samosata, Paul of See Paul of Samosata

Samothrace ⟨Samothraki⟩ Greek island in the Aegean, site of the famous statue Victory (Nike) of Samothrace, which was found there in 1863. Samothrace had mainly religious importance in antiquity. It has been part of Greece since 1913.

Samothraki See Samothrace

Sampson, William Thomas See Santiago, Battle of

Samson Judge of ancient Israel. Tricked by Delilah into revealing his hair was the source of his strength, he was blinded and enslaved when she managed to cut off his hair. He pulled down the Philistine temple when his hair grew back and his strength returned.

Samsonov, Alexander See Tannenburg, Battles of

Samudra Gupta d. AD *c*380. Indian emperor (AD *c*330–*c*380) of the Gupta dynasty, successor to his father, Chandragupta I. He expanded Gupta control over much of northern India. A poet and musician as well as warrior and conqueror, he was considered a model of the ideal Hindu ruler.

Samuel Last of the judges of ancient Israel and first of the prophets after Moses. A legendary Israelite hero, he established the Hebrew monarchy, anointing first Saul and then David.

samurai Japanese warrior class. The samurai rose in the 12th cent. during Japan's feudal period and played a major role in Japanese life. As highly skilled warriors, they were instrumental in establishing the shoguns as real rulers in Japan (12th cent.) and provided the basis for the shoguns' power in subsequent centuries. During the long, peaceful reign of the Tokugawa shoguns (17th–19th cents.), the samurai gradually moved into bureaucratic posts. After the Meiji Restoration (1868), the class was abolished with feudalism, and discontented samurai led several unsuccessful revolts, notably the Satsuma Revolt.

Sancho III ⟨Sancho the Great⟩ *c*970–1035. King of Navarre (1000–35). He ultimately ruled a unified Spanish state that included Castile, León, Navarre, and Aragon. By his will the kingdom was divided at his death among his four sons.

Sancho the Great See Sancho III

Sand, George ⟨Dupin, Barrone Dudevant, Aman-

dine Aurore Lucie) 1804–76. French writer. She wrote some 80 novels celebrating women's freedom and the joys of country life and was notorious for her liaisons with famous men of the day.

Sandburg, Carl 1878–1967. American author whose works are noted for their celebration of America and its people. He gained fame with the poem Chicago. His six-volume biography of Abraham Lincoln was awarded a Pulitzer Prize in history in 1940. Among his other volumes of poetry are Smoke and Steel and Good Morning, America. Sandburg's Complete Poems received a Pulitzer Prize in poetry in 1951.

Sand Creek Massacre ⟨Chivington Massacre⟩ Massacre of Cheyenne Indians (Nov. 29, 1864) peacefully encamped on the Sand Creek near Fort Lyon, in Colorado. Some 1,000 raiders led by Col. John Chivington ignored the white flag raised by Cheyenne chief Black Kettle and murdered hundreds. The massacre led to fierce conflict with the Plains Indians in the following years.

Sandwich, Edward Montagu, 1st earl of 1625–72. English admiral. He supported Parliament in the English Civil War but escorted King Charles II from Holland back to England at the Restoration. Ennobled by Charles, he later died in battle against the Dutch.

Sandwich, John Montagu, 4th earl of 1718–92. British politician and three-time British lord of the admiralty (1748, 1763, 1771–82). The Sandwich Islands and the sandwich were named after him. He is said to have devised the latter to eat without having to leave the gaming table.

Sandys, Sir Edwin 1561–1629. English Parliamentarian and colonizer. A prominent opponent of absolute monarchy, he advanced constitutional ideas that later contributed to the overthrow of King Charles I. He was a member of both the Virginia Company and the British East India Company.

San Francisco American city (pop. 679,000) on the California coast, one of the leading cities of the US. Founded (1776) as a mission and presidio by the Spanish, it was known as Yerba Buena until after its capture (1846) by the US in the Mexican War. San Francisco grew with the discovery (1848) of gold in California, and a period of lawlessness followed the influx of gold seekers and adventurers. It became the terminus for the first transcontinental railroad (1869) and continued to grow. The earthquake of Apr. 18, 1906, and subsequent fire virtually destroyed the city, but a massive rebuilding effort soon restored it. San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge was completed in 1937. The UN Charter was drafted here (1945) at the San Francisco Conference (q.v.).

San Francisco Conference International conference of 50 nations convened in San Francisco (Apr. 25, 1945) to establish a new international organization following WW II. The conference concluded with the signing of the United Nations Charter (June 26, 1945).

Sanhedrin Ancient Jewish council of elders in Jerusalem which functioned up to the destruction of the Temple (AD 70). According to the Mishna, it had academic functions, but according to the Gospels and Flavius Josephus, it also possessed judicial functions, as in the trial of Jesus.

San Ildefonso, Treaty of 1. Treaty (1796) between France and Spain concluded at San Ildefonso, Spain. By its terms the two countries became formally allied against Britain in the French Revolutionary Wars. 2. Secret treaty concluded (1800) between Spain and Napoleon I, confirmed by later treaties of 1801 and 1802. By its terms Spain retroceded Louisiana to France in return for the newly created kingdom of Etruria in Italy. Napoleon subsequently sold Louisiana to the US against the express terms of this treaty.

San Jacinto, Battle of Battle (Apr. 21, 1836) of the Texas war for independence, fought at the San Jacinto River near present-day Houston. Some 800 Texans under S. Houston defeated 1,500 Mexicans under Gen. A. de Santa Anna, thereby ensuring Texas' independence.

San Juan Capital city (pop. 535,000) and main port of Puerto Rico. First settled (1508) by Ponce de León, it was a center of Spanish exploration and colonization and became a leading port in the 18th and 19th cents. It was occupied by US troops (1898) during the Spanish-American War.

San Juan Boundary Dispute Dispute between the US and Great Britain over the northwest boundary between the US and British Columbia. Because of the vague wording of the Oregon Treaty of 1846, both Britain and the US claimed the San Juan Islands in the Gulf of Georgia, southeast of Vancouver. Armed conflict (1859) was avoided when both nations decided on joint occupation. By the Treaty of Washington (1871), German emperor Wilhelm I was chosen as arbitrator and awarded the lands to the US (1872).

San Juan Hill, Battle of US victory over the Spanish (July 1, 1898) at San Juan Hill, in Cuba, during the Spanish-American War. Part of the larger Battle of Santiago (q.v.), it is celebrated for the part played in it by T. Roosevelt and the Rough Riders (qq.v.).

San Marino ⟨Most Serene Republic of~⟩ Independent republic located in central Italy. Founded in the 4th cent., it is claimed to be the oldest republic in Europe and is the smallest in the world. Its independence was recognized (1631) by the pope, and it secured a treaty of friendship with Italy in 1862.

San Martín, José de 1778–1850. South American revolutionary leader. He played a major part in the liberation of Argentina, Peru, and Chile from Spanish rule. He led an army across the Andes to defeat the Spanish in Chile (1817) and deferred to S. Bolívar (1822), who then became the leader of the South American independence movement.

Sannazaro, Jacopo 1458–1530. Italian poet and humanist. He served as court poet in Naples and is known best for his idyll in prose and verse Arcadia.

San Remo, Conference of See Conference of San Remo

San Salvador Largest city (pop. 400,000) and capital of El Salvador. Established in 1528, it became the Salvadoran capital in 1841. It was heavily damaged by earthquakes in 1854 and 1873.

sans-culotte French term meaning "without knee breeches," applied to the more radical supporters of the French Revolution, especially the lower classes. It derived from the long trousers adopted by the lower classes to replace knee breeches, considered aristocratic. (See also Hébert, Jacques René.)

Sanskrit Sacred language of the Hindu religion. Long used by Indian religious scholars and the upper caste, it developed from the earlier Verdic language. Though technically a dead language, it continues to be used in the scholarly and literary fields. The study of Sanskrit in the 18th cent. led to important archaeological discoveries and also to the development of philology as a science.

San Stefano, Treaty of Treaty (Mar. 3, 1878) between Russia and the Ottoman Turks ending the Russo-Turkish War of 1877–78. The defeated Turks agreed to pay a large indemnity; to recognize the independence of Romania, Serbia, and Montenegro; to create an autonomous Bulgaria; and to cede large areas to Russia. This treaty was subsequently altered by the Congress of Berlin (1878).

Santa Anna, Antonio López de 1794–1876. Mexican general and statesman. He fought with A. de Iturbide in securing Mexican independence (1821) but helped to overthrow Iturbide in 1823. He followed a policy of supporting, then helping to overthrow, subsequent leaders. His victory over the Spanish at Tampico (Sept., 1829) gave him the title "Hero of Tampico" and helped him gain the presidency (1833). His ruthless treatment of Texans at the Alamo and Goliad aided the Texan independence movement and contributed to Santa Anna's defeat by S. Houston at San Jacinto (q.v.) and the loss of Texas. Forced from office (1836), Santa Anna returned to power (1839–44, 1846–47) but was again removed from office after his defeats in the Mexican War (q.v.). He returned to power once more in 1853 but was exiled two years later.

Santa Fe American city (pop. 48,900), capital of New Mexico. Founded (1609) by the Spanish, it was a center of trade with Mexico and the terminus of the Santa Fe Trail. It became the territorial capital in 1851.

Santa Fe Trail Wagon route, some 780 miles long, from Independence, Missouri, to Santa Fe, New Mexico. The trail was a major path of westward migration from the 1820s to 1880, when Santa Fe was connected with the transcontinental rail network.

Santander, Francisco de Paula 1792–1840. Colombian revolutionist and statesman. Associated with S. Bolívar, he governed Great Colombia as vice-president during Bolívar's absences from 1821 to 1828. After Bolívar's death, he was president of New Granada (1833–37).

Santa Sophia See Hagia, Sophia

Santayana, George 1863–1952. Spanish-born American philosopher and writer, known best for his four-volume work The Life of Reason.

Santiago Capital (pop 3,449,000) and leading city of Chile. Founded (1541) by P. de Valdivia, it was leveled by an earthquake (1647) but grew into one of South America's largest cities (late 19th cent.).

Santiago, Battle of Battle (July 1–3, 1898) of the Spanish-American War, at Santiago de Cuba. In May, 1898, a Spanish fleet under Admiral Pascual Cervera y Topete (1839–1909) was blockaded in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba by a US fleet under Admiral William Thomas Sampson (1840–1902). On July 1, US ground forces attacked the city's defenses, notably in the Battle of San Juan Hill (q.v.). On July 3, the Spanish fleet attempted to leave the harbor. In Sampson's absence, Commodore W. Schley engaged and destroyed the Spanish squadron, suffering one American dead to Spanish losses of some 600. Santiago de Cuba formally surrendered on July 17. Later a controversy arose as to which US commander achieved the American victory—Schley, who opened the naval engagement, or Sampson, commander of the operation.

Santo Domingo Capital (pop. 673,500) and largest seaport of the Dominican Republic. The oldest continuous settlement in the Western Hemisphere, it was founded (1496) by Bartholomew Columbus (1445?–1514?) and was the seat of Spain's colonial offices in the Americas. Almost destroyed by a hurricane (1930), it was named Ciudad Trujillo, after R. Trujillo, from 1936 to 1961.

Santo Domingo Former name for the Dominican Republic (q.v.).

Sapir, Edward 1884–1939. Polish-born American linguist and anthropologist. He made major contributions to the study and classification of North American Indian languages.

Sapor I See Shapur I

Sapor II See Shapur II

Sappho fl. early 6th cent. BC. Ancient Greek lyric poetess of Lesbos. Her lyrics were considered masterly by the ancients, but only a few, mostly fragments, have survived.

Sara See Sarah

Saracens Name applied in the Middle Ages to the Muslim enemies of Christendom. Originally referring to northern Arabian raiders, it eventually was applied to all Muslims, whether Arabs, Moors, or Turks.

Saracoglu, Sukru 1887–1953. Turkish statesman and premier (1942–46). An associate of K. Atatürk in the modernization of Turkey, he served as premier and managed to keep Turkey uninvolved in WW II.

Sarah ⟨Sara⟩ Old Testament matriarch, wife of Abraham and mother of Isaac. Originally childless, she is represented in the Book of Genesis as conceiving in her old age by a special divine favor. Her original name was Sarai.

Saratoga, First Battle of See Freeman's Farm, Battle of Saratoga campaign American military campaign (Sept.–Oct., 1777) during the American Revolution, near Saratoga, New York. The campaign is considered the turning point of the war. On Sept. 19, 1777, some 6,000 British troops under Gen. J. Burgoyne failed to break through the American defense lines of H. Gates, D. Morgan, and B. Arnold in the Battle of Freeman's Farm (q.v.). This was followed by a decisive American victory over the British (Oct. 7) in the Battle of Bemis Heights. The Americans subsequently surrounded the British and forced Burgoyne's surrender (Oct. 17). This first major American victory heartened the discouraged patriots, encouraged France to aid the American war effort, and ended British plans to isolate the northern colonies from the rest of America.

Sarbinowo, Battle of ⟨Battle of Zorndorf⟩ Prussian victory over Russia (Aug. 25, 1758) in the Seven Years' War. Prussian king Frederick II defeated an invading Russian army and prevented its advance into Brandenburg.

Sardanapalus Assyrian king identified by some, probably mistakenly, with Ashurbanipal. Sardanapalus burned his palace, killing himself and his court, when it appeared Nineveh would be taken.

Sardinia, kingdom of European kingdom formed (1720) for Duke Victor Amadeus II of Savoy after Sicily passed to Austrian control. The kingdom included Sardinia, Savoy, Piedmont, and Nice, and in the 18th and 19th cents. it grew to include other territories. It became the center of the movement to unify Italy in the 19th cent. and was given control of territories conquered by Garibaldi (q.v.) in 1860. In 1861, Sardinian king Victor Emmanuel II became king of Italy, and the house of Savoy became the ruling house of Italy.

Sardis Ancient city located near modern Izmir, Turkey. As capital of Lydia, it was the political center of the area and the western terminus for the Persian royal road. It fell to the Ionian Greeks (499 BC) and to the Romans (133 BC), and was finally destroyed by Tamerlane (1402).

Sardou, Victorien 1831–1908. French playwright. Immensely popular in his day, he wrote some 70 plays for famous actors and actresses of the time. For S. Bernhardt he wrote the play La Tosca, which formed the basis for the opera by G. Puccini.

Sargent, John Singer 1856–1925. American painter. Most of his work was done in London, where he became the most fashionable portrait painter of the day. He also was noted for his murals and landscapes.

Sargon d. 705 BC. Ancient Assyrian king (721–705), successor to Tiglath-pileser III. He was also known as Sargon II. He consolidated the Assyrian Empire, defeating and resettling conquered weaker peoples. He conquered Babylon and Samaria and destroyed the northern kingdom of Israel (*c*721 BC).

Sargon ⟨Sharrukin⟩ *fl. c*2800? BC. Ancient Mesopotamian ruler. From Akkad, he defeated Sumer and established the first great Semitic empire. His empire of Akkad (q.v.) included the area later ruled by Babylonia.

Sarmatia Ancient territory between the Vistula and the Caspian Sea inhabited (3d cent. BC–3d cent. AD) by the Sarmatians. An ancient Indo-Iranian nomadic people related to the Scythians, they invaded Roman territory and subdued many neighboring tribes. Eventually they were defeated and disappeared.

Sarmiento, Domingo Faustino 1811–88. Argentine educator, writer, and first civilian president of Argentina (1868–74). He became known as a writer and educator in exile until the overthrow of J. de Rosas. His presidency was marked by an expansion of democracy and education.

Sarmiento, Félix Rubén García See Darío, Rubén

Sarnoff, David 1891–1971. Russian-born American pioneer in the development of commercial radio and television. Beginning as a wireless telegraph operator, he became famous for his reception of wireless signals from the stricken liner Titanic (1912). He later was instrumental in forming both the Radio Corporation of America (RCA) and the National Broadcasting Company (NBC).

Saroyan, William 1908–1981. American writer, noted for his fresh, original novels, plays, and stories celebrating life in America. His play The Time of Your Life was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1940, but Saroyan declined the honor.

Sarpi, Paolo ⟨Polano, Pietro Soave⟩ 1552–1623. Venetian theologian and historian. In a dispute between Venice and Pope Paul V over papal jurisdiction, he defended the right of the state to ecclesiastical control. He wrote a history of the Council of Trent, attacking it as an exercise of papal absolutism.

Sarto, Andrea del 1486–1530. Florentine painter during the Renaissance. Noted for his craftmanship, he influenced Florentine painting during the High Renaissance. He painted chiefly religious subjects, including "Madonna in Glory" and "Madonna of the Harpies."

Sarto, Giuseppe See Pius X

Sartre, Jean Paul 1905–1980. French philosopher and writer. A major exponent of existentialism, he believed that man is "condemned" to freedom and must rely on his own sense of values and will in life.

Sasbach and Altenheim, Battles of Engagements in the Second Dutch War, fought near the Rhine at Sasbach (July 27, 1675) and Altenheim (Aug. 1, 1675). A French army of some 22,000 initially forced a 20,000-man Austrian force into an untenable position at Sasbach, but the French commander, Marshal H. Turenne, was killed. The Austrians subsequently forced the French to retreat, defeated them at Altenheim (Aug. 1), and forced them to withdraw across the Rhine.

Saskatchewan Province of western Canada (pop. 975,700). Members of the Hudson's Bay Company first explored (1690) then settled the area (1774) and controlled it until 1869, when it became part of Canada's Northwest Territories. Extension of the railroad (1882) into Saskatchewan brought more settlers, and the last Indian rebellion was put down in 1885. Saskatchewan became a province in 1905.

Sassanians See Sassanidae

Sassanidae ⟨Sassanids⟩ ⟨Sassanians⟩ Last ancient Persian dynasty to rule before the Arab conquest of Persia (651). The dynasty was founded (AD 226) by Ardashir I. The Sassanidae promoted a revival of native Persian arts and letters and made Zoroastrianism the state religion. The last Sassanidae ruler died in exile in 651.

Sassanids See Sassanidae

Satan In Judaeo-Christian teachings, the supernatural figure identified with evil, also known as the devil. Satan originally appeared in Hebrew religion as one of God's angels, and only gradually became a figure of evil, in opposition to God.

Satie, Erik 1866–1925. French composer and leader of the avant-garde. His spare, satirical musical style, a reaction to romanticism, had considerable influence on the development of 20th-cent. music.

Sato, Eisaku 1901–75. Japanese prime minister (1964–72). He held important government posts during Japan's post-war period. As prime minister, he signed a treaty with the US reestablishing Japan's control over Okinawa. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1974.

satrap Name given provincial governors of the ancient Persian Empire. In general, a satrap administered the province, collected taxes, and was the supreme judge.

Satsuma Revolt See Saigo Takamori

Saturn Ancient Roman god of agriculture, identified with the Greek Cronus. His week-long festival, the Saturnalia, included revelry, temporary equality between slave and citizen, and the exchange of gifts.

satyr Mythological Greek woodland creature usually represented as half man and half goat. Satyrs were boisterous, lusty creatures associated with the cult of Dionysus.

Saud 1902–69. Saudi Arabian king (1953–64), successor to his father, Ibn Saud. Forced to yield some of his powers to an executive council headed by his brother Faisal (1958), he was deposed by Faisal (1964) and died in exile.

Saudi Arabia ⟨Kingdom of Saudi Arabia⟩ Muslim monarchy occupying most of the Arabian peninsula in the Middle East. Its capital is Riyadh. The Muslim holy cities of Mecca and Medina are located in Saudia Arabia, birthplace of Islam. Saudi Arabia is today one of the world's largest oil-producing nations. (For early history of the region, see Caliphate, Empire of,) Key dates in Saudi history include:

FROM 16TH CENT. Region under nominal rule of Ottoman Empire.

18TH CENT. Arabia divided into separate principalities.

18TH CENT. Wahabi movement, supported by Saud family and Bedouin tribes, unsuccessfully attempted to unite Arabia.

1811–18 Wahabi movement crushed by Egypt.
1891 Rashid dynasty defeated Wahabi movement.
FROM 1902 Ibn Saud revived the Wahabi movement; seized city of Riyadh; began expanding domains in Arabian peninsula.
1932 Kingdom of Saudi Arabia formed from Ibn Saud's conquests in Nejd and Hejaz.
1932–53 Ibn Saud reigned as king of Saudi Arabia.
1936 Oil discovered.
1938 Large-scale oil exploration began; using revenues, Ibn Saud made massive internal improvements.
1945 Saudis joined UN and Arab League.
1951 New royalty agreement with Aramco, Saudi oil consortium; Saudis receive 50% of net earnings.
1953–64 King Saud reigned, following death of Ibn Saud.
1960 Saudi Arabia became founding member of OPEC; later became leading force in the oil cartel.
1964–75 King Faisal reigned after deposing his brother, Faisal.
1974 Saudis, demanding participation in Aramco, got 60% ownership of company.
1975 Faisal assassinated by nephew (Mar. 25).
1975–82 King Khalid, brother of Faisal, reigned.
1979 Muslim extremists seized the sacred Grand Mosque in Mecca; held it against government troops (Nov. 20–Dec. 4).
1980 Saudi takeover of Aramco completed.
1981 US announced sale of Advance Warning and Command Systems (AWAC) planes to Saudi Arabia; deal linked to Saudi agreement to maintain levels of oil production.
1982 Fahd Bin Abdul-Aziz became king after Khalid died (June 13, 1982).

Sauk Indians See Sac and Fox Indians

Saul First king (11th cent.?) of the ancient Israelites. In the Bible, he was noted for his prowess in battle and for his jealousy of his successor, David, whom he tried to destroy. He committed suicide to escape capture by the Philistines.

Saussure, Ferdinand de 1857–1913. Swiss Sanskrit scholar and linguistic pioneer. His Course in General Linguistics is considered one of the foundations of modern linguistics.

Savelli, Cencio See Honorius III

Savigny, Friedrich Karl von 1779–1861. German jurist and legal historian. He produced monumental studies of Roman and medieval law and influenced the study of legal history.

Savonarola, Girolamo 1452–98. Italian Dominican religious reformer. He enthralled Florence with his sermons, noted for their moral rigor. He challenged papal authority and later was repudiated and executed by the Florentines.

Savoy, house of European royal dynasty. Founded in the 11th cent. by Humbert I, the White-Handed, it first dominated the French-Swiss-Italian Alpine region, then spread to Piedmont. Made a ducal family of the Holy Roman Empire (1416), it eventually came to rule vast areas of France, Switzerland, and Italy. After receiving the kingdom of Sardinia (1720), their support of Italian unification led to the creation (1861) of the kingdom of Italy, with the house of Savoy as its royal family. The house of Savoy remained the ruling house of Italy until 1946, when a republic was established.

Savoy, Louise of See Louise of Savoy

Savoy, Prince Eugene of See Eugene of Savoy, Prince

Savoy Conference English ecclesiastical conference (1661) held at the Savoy Palace in London after the Restoration. Twelve Bishops of the Church of England and twelve Presbyterians failed to reach agreement on worship and a revision of the Book of Common Prayer.

Saxe, Maurice, comte de 1696–1750. French general and marshal of France. An illegitimate son of the elector of Saxony, he rose to supreme command in the War of the Austrian Succession. He led the French victory at Fontenoy (1745).

Saxe-Weimar Former duchy in Thuringia, central Germany. United with Eisenach (1741) to form Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, it became notable under Duke Charles Augustus for its prosperity and its position as a center of the arts. Its capital, Weimar, became an intellectual capital of Europe.

Saxo Grammaticus fl. 1188–1201. Danish medieval chronicler. He wrote a history of early Denmark, Gesta Danorum, partly legendary, partly factual. Surviving parts of it inspired W. Shakespeare's Hamlet as well as the work of Danish romantic poets.

Saxons Germanic peoples believed to have originated in the area of the Baltic coast that is now Schleswig and the Elbe Valley. First mentioned by Ptolemy (2d cent. AD), their influence grew as the Roman Empire declined. The Saxons conducted numerous raids of piracy along the coasts of northern Germany, Gaul, and Britain, and, with the Angles, many Saxons settled in Britain (5th cent., see Anglo-Saxons). On the continent, their constant warfare against the Franks ended with their defeat (9th cent.) and their forced conversion to Christianity by Charlemagne.

Saxony Historic region of northwest Germany once occupied by the Saxons, a Germanic tribe. The Saxons were in firm control of the region by the 5th–6th cent., and in the 5th cent. many of them migrated to Britain. Saxony was conquered by Charlemagne (8th cent.) and incorporated into Frankish domains. It became part of the East Frankish (German) kingdom after 843. Saxony soon became the most powerful of the duchies that emerged during the breakup of the East Frankish kingdom. In 962 the Holy Roman Empire was formed under the leadership of the Saxon duke, Otto (Holy Roman Emperor Otto I).

Saxony, duchy of Medieval German duchy, now located in East Germany, founded by the early 10th cent. Duke Henry I of Saxony was elected German emperor (919), and his line ruled the Holy Roman Empire until 1024. In 1180, Saxony was seized from Henry the Lion by Frederick Barbarossa and was divided. The ducal title passed to one of the fiefs thus created, and its holder became an elector of the Holy Roman Empire (13th cent.).

Saxony, Electoral Historic territory established, along with the title "elector" (13th cent.) after the division (1180) of the duchy of Saxony. Electoral Saxony took part in the Thirty Years' War, first supporting and then opposing the Holy Roman Empire. At the war's end, Saxony emerged as one of the strongest duchies in Germany. In 1697, elector Augustus II became king of Poland. His death led to the War of the Polish Succession (1733–38), after which his son reigned as Polish king Augustus III. During this time Saxony reached its intellectual and cultural golden age, but after the Seven Years' War it began a period of decline. In 1806, it was conquered by Napoleon and made a kingdom.

Saxony, kingdom of Kingdom established (1806) by Napoleon after his conquest of Electoral Saxony. Napoleon raised the electorate to a kingdom and established Frederick Augustus I as its ruler. Saxony's alliance with France contributed to its growth in size and power until Napoleon's downfall. The Congress of Vienna forced Saxony to cede much land to Prussia. In 1830, Saxony was torn by riots, which led to the granting of a constitution the following year. Saxony sided unsuccessfully with Austria during the Austro-Prussian War and entered the German Confederation in 1866. It became part of the German Empire (1871) and after WW I became a state within the Weimar Republic.

Saxony-Anhalt Former state in East Germany, consisting principally of the historical German states of Saxony and Anhalt. It was abolished in 1952.

Sayyid dynasty Dynasty that ruled India's Delhi sultanate from 1414 to 1451. The four sultans of the dynasty were barely able to maintain themselves and eventually gave way to the Lodi dynasty.

Scaevola, Caius Mucius 6th cent.? BC. Legendary Roman hero. Condemned for trying to assassinate Lars Porsena during his siege of Rome (509 BC), he so impressed Porsena by thrusting his hand into flame without flinching that he was ordered released and the siege was lifted.

Scaevola, Quintus Mucius d. 82 BC. Ancient Roman jurist. He served as tribune (106 BC) and as consul (95 BC) and introduced a law limiting Roman citizenship and the right to vote. This contributed to the outbreak of the Social War (q.v.).

Scala, Can Francesco della ⟨~, Cane Grande della⟩ 1291–1329. Medieval Italian lord of Verona and member of the prominent Veronese Ghibelline family. He was appointed the imperial vicar of Verona by Holy Roman Emperor Henry VII. He was a patron of the arts, notably of Dante during his exile from Florence.

Scala, Cane Grande della See Scala, Can Francesco della scalawags Term applied to southern Republicans who supported the federal program of Reconstruction after the American Civil War. A Reconstruction Republican from the North was known as a carpetbagger.

Scaliger, Joseph Justus 1540–1609. Renaissance classical scholar. Son of J. C. Scaliger, he produced prodigious linguistic studies and critical editions of the classics. He founded the modern science of chronology by his comparative study of the calendar, De Emendatione Temporum.

Scaliger, Julius Caesar 1484–1558. Italian-born French scholar, physician, and philologist, father of J. J. Scaliger. He produced commentaries on the classics and an early study of Latin grammar as well as polemics against such scholars as Erasmus.

Scanderbeg *c*1404–68. Albanian national hero. Born an Albanian prince, he became a Turkish hostage in childhood and was raised and educated as a Muslim by Sultan Murad II. When the Turks attacked Albania, he escaped (1443) and formed an alliance of Albanian princes to resist the Turks. As commander of Albanian forces, he repulsed 13 Turkish attacks between 1444 and 1466. Soon after his death, the alliance collapsed and Albania fell to the Turks.

Scandinavia Region of northern Europe consisting primarily of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. The term is usually extended to include neighboring Finland and also Iceland.

Scannabechi, Lamberto See Honorius II

Scarlatti, Alessandro 1658/59–1725. Italian composer. Father of D. Scarlatti, he was important in the development of classical harmony and of the opera form. He wrote more than 100 operas, of which the best known is Il Tigrane.

Scarlatti, Giuseppe Domenico 1685–1757. Italian composer and virtuoso, son of A. Scarlatti. He is noted for his more than 500 harpsichord sonatas which expanded the sonata form. He composed many while court musician in Madrid.

Scarron, Paul 1610?–60. French writer. He contributed to the development of the drama and the comic burlesque but is remembered for his novel Le Roman Comique.

Scaurus, Marcus Aemilius *c*162–*c*89 BC. Ancient Roman official. According to Cicero, he was a powerful conservative leader in the Roman Senate. He conducted successful Alpine campaigns and controlled the grain supply at Ostia. His daughter married Pompey.

Schacht, Hjalmar Horace Greeley 1877–1970. German financial expert. As president of the Reichsbank (1923–30, 1933–39) he helped halt the ruinous inflation in the 1920s, and as minister of economy (1934–37) he achieved economic stabilization and growth in the early years of Nazi Germany.

Schaff, Philip 1819–93. Swiss-born American Protestant theologian and church historian. He was noted for his studies of ecclesiastical history, History of the Christian Church and The Creeds of Christendom.

Scharnhorst, Gerhard von 1755–1813. Prussian general. In 1807, he began the reorganization of the Prussian army, transforming it from a mercenary force into a citizen army. He introduced the system by which soldiers were trained and served for a short period, then were replaced by new trainees.

Scheidemann, Philipp 1865–1939. German Social Democratic leader. After WW I and the flight of the kaiser, he proclaimed the Weimar Republic and became its first chancellor (1918). He resigned (1919) in protest against the Treaty of Versailles.

Schelling, Friedrich Wilhelm Joseph von 1775–1854. German philosopher. He contributed to the development of the philosophical movement known as idealism.

Schiller, Friedrich von 1759–1805. German poet and dramatist, one of the leading literary figures of his day. His plays include The Robbers and William Tell. Schiller's poem Ode to Joy was used by L. van Beethoven in the last movement of his Ninth Symphony.

Schirra, Walter Marty, Jr. 1923–. US astronaut, one of the seven original astronauts. As commander of Gemini 6 he achieved (Dec. 15, 1965) the first successful space rendezvous by linking his craft with Gemini 7. He also commanded the flight (Oct. 11–12, 1968) of Apollo 7.

Schism 1. Schism of 1054. Final division of the Christian church into the Roman Catholic (Western) church and the Orthodox Eastern church. Doctrinal and other disputes began separating the two churches (as early as the 9th cent.) and included the question of the filioque (q.v.) and the controversy over Photius (q.v.). Finally, in 1054, a jurisdictional dispute prompted Pope Leo IX to excommunicate the Patriarch of Constantinople, Michael Cerularius. The patriarch in turn excommunicated the pope and from that point the two churches were considered to be officially separated. 2. Great Schism. Division in the Roman Catholic church (1378–1417) in which two rival lines of popes emerged. Pope Gregory XI died (1378) soon after ending the Babylonian captivity (q.v.) and restoring the papacy to Rome. The Romans demanded election of an Italian pope and Pope Urban VI was elected (1378). However, Urban, by his actions, quickly aroused opposition, and within a few months the cardinals declared his election void. They then elected Clement VII as pope. Urban forced Clement out of Rome and Clement subsequently took up residence at Avignon, France. To end the schism, the Council of Pisa was convened (1409) and declared against the then-reigning popes in Rome and France. In 1410 the council installed John XXIII as pope. John succeeded in winning widespread support and then called the Council of Constance (1414). Gregory XII in Rome resigned and the council deposed both John XXIII and Benedict XIII, then reigning in France. Pope Martin V was elected and the schism was ended.

Schleicher, Kurt von 1882–1934. German general and last chancellor (1932–33) of the Weimar Republic. In an attempt to prevent the rise of A. Hitler, he sought unsuccessfully to receive emergency powers from Pres. P. Hindenburg. Schleicher left office Jan. 1933, and Hindenburg made Hitler chancellor soon after.

Schleiermacher, Friedrich Ernst Daniel 1768–1834. German Protestant theologian. He opposed both philosophical rationalism and religious dogma. His writings were a major influence in the development of Protestant theology.

Schlesinger, Arthur Meier 1888–1965. American historian, a pioneer in the study of both social and urban history in America. He emphasized the importance of economics in his best-known work,

The Colonial Merchants and the American Revolution. He edited the notable 13-volume A History of American Life.

Schlesinger, Arthur Meier, Jr. 1917–. American historian. His extensive writings on American history include Age of Jackson (Pulitzer Prize, 1946), The Age of Roosevelt, A Thousand Days (Pulitzer Prize, 1966), and The Imperial Presidency.

Schleswig-Holstein Historic region and modern German state located in northwest Germany. Denmark gained control of Schleswig in the 12th cent. and Holstein (in fief to the Holy Roman Empire) in the 14th cent. After the collapse of the Holy Roman Empire (early 19th cent.), the German Confederation gained nominal suzerainty over Holstein, while Denmark retained full sovereignty over Schleswig. The rise of nationalism in Denmark and the German states soon created conflict over Schleswig-Holstein, where there was a considerable native-German population. When Danish king Frederick VII moved to annex Schleswig to Denmark, the War of Schleswig-Holstein (1848–50) broke out between Prussia and Denmark. The status of Schleswig-Holstein was unchanged, however. War again broke out in 1864, Denmark was defeated, and Schleswig-Holstein passed to the joint administration of Austria and Prussia. Prussia, then vying with Austria for domination of the German Confederation, used a dispute over the region to start the Austro-Prussian War (1866). Prussia emerged victorious and annexed Schleswig-Holstein. When the unified German Empire was created (1871), the region passed to Germany.

Schley, Winfield Scott 1839–1911. American naval officer. Second in command of the US fleet at the Battle of Santiago (q.v.) during the Spanish-American War, Commodore Schley fought the naval engagement that led to the destruction of the Spanish fleet. Later a controversy arose over whether he or his superior, Admiral William Thomas Sampson (1840–1902), should have received credit for the victory.

Schlick, Moritz 1882–1936. German philosopher. He was a leader of the Vienna Circle, a school of logical positivism.

Schlieffen, Alfred, Graf von 1833–1913. German field marshal. As head of the German general staff (1891–1905) he devised (1895) the Schlieffen plan (q.v.), the strategy later attempted by Germany in WW I.

Schlieffen plan Plan devised by German field marshal A. von Schlieffen to crush French resistance in a war by a massive, lightning attack from the north through Belgian and Dutch territory (ignoring their neutrality). The plan also called for an attack by relatively light forces concentrated in the south against France and in the east against Russia. The plan failed during WW I because the forces attacking through Belgium and Holland were not strong enough, but in WW II Germany brilliantly executed the basic plan.

Schliemann, Heinrich 1822–90. German archaeologist who excavated the ruins of ancient Troy. A student of Homer's works, and with independent wealth acquired from business, he devoted himself after early retirement to the search for Troy, and conducted several other excavations, one at Mycenae.

Schmalkaldic League Alliance of Protestant princes and free cities formed at Schmalkalden (1531). Led by Philip of Hesse and John Frederick I of Saxony, it had as its object a common defense against Holy Roman Emperor Charles V's threats to destroy Lutheranism by force. Charles decisively defeated the League at the Battle of Mühlberg (1547).

Schmalkaldic War War (1544–47) waged by Holy Roman Emperor Charles V against the Schmalkaldic League during the Reformation period. Forced to recognize this defensive alliance in 1532, Charles renewed his warfare against it after having made peace with France. He routed the League forces at Mühlberg (1547).

Schmidt, Helmut 1918–. West German chancellor (1974–82). A Social Democrat, he served in the Bundestag from 1953 (except for 1962–65). He served as minister of defense (1969–72) and minister of finance (1972–74) and succeeded W. Brandt as chancellor.

Schoenberg, Arnold See Schönberg, Arnold

Schofield, John McAllister 1831–1906. Union general in the American Civil War. A successful commander in Tennessee and under W. Sherman in Georgia, he went on to become secretary of war (1868–69) and commander in chief of the US Army (1888–95).

scholasticism Medieval Christian philosophical and theological movement that arose in the 11th cent. It embraced various schools of thought that were in general terms concerned with questions of reconciling faith and reason and it stimulated a renewed interest in ancient Greek philosophy. Earlier Christian thinkers, notably St. Augustine (through his writings on Platonism) helped set the stage for medieval scholasticism. In the 11th cent., St. Anselm founded the movement and in his writings used reason to better understand belief ("faith seeking understanding"). Peter Lombard gave the movement further impetus in the 12th cent. through his work, The Book of Sen- tences, a compilation of the opinions of the church fathers.

The works of Aristotle (translated from Arabic) became available for the first time in Christian Europe by the 13th cent. and had a tremendous impact on medieval scholastic thinkers. Albertus Magnus began the synthesis of Aristotelianism and Christian theology, but St. Thomas Aquinas, one of the greatest thinkers of the Christian church, brought it to full development. Thomism was by no means unopposed, and the theologian Duns Scotus evolved an alternate synthesis. Finally, William of Ockham brought a close to the scholastic tradition (14th cent.) by effectively asserting that there is no rational basis for faith. He thus separated religion and philosophy into two distinct spheres. Thomism, however, experienced a revival in the 15th cent. and in modern times theologians have sought to apply Thomist doctrines to contemporary problems.

Schönberg, Arnold 1874–1951. Austrian-born American composer. He revolutionized modern music through his use of a twelve-tone scale and through his influential writing, teaching, and outstanding compositions.

Schönbrunn, Peace of Treaty signed at Vienna (Oct. 14, 1809) following Austria's defeat by France at the Battle of Wagram (q.v.) during the Napoleonic Wars. By its terms Austria lost substantial territories to France, Russia, Bavaria, and the Grand Duchy of Warsaw.

Schoolcraft, Henry Rowe 1793–1864. American explorer and ethnologist. He collected much information and lore about American Indian tribes and was one of the pioneers of Indian studies.

School of Alexandria See Alexandrian School

Schopenhauer, Arthur 1788–1860. German philosopher. A successor of I. Kant in the idealist school, he saw will rather than mind as the fundamental principle of existence and developed a philosophy based on this idea. His most important work was World as Will and Idea.

Schrieffer, John See Bardeen, John

Schrödinger, Erwin 1887–1961. Austrian physicist. He formulated the basic wave equation, named for him, describing the motion of subatomic particles—the most widely used tool of quantum mechanics. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics in 1933.

Schubert, Franz Peter 1797–1828. Austrian composer. He is equally celebrated for his more than 500 lieder (art songs) and for his symphonies, including Symphony in B Flat, Symphony in B Minor, and Symphony in C Major. He is also known for his chamber music, masses, and other compositions. Now considered a musical genius, he achieved little recognition in his lifetime.

Schuman, Robert 1886–1963. French statesman and prime minister (1947–48). As foreign minister (1948–53) he proposed (1950) the Schuman plan for pooling European coal and steel resources. This move toward European cooperation led eventually to the formation of the European Common Market.

Schumann, Robert Alexander 1810–56. German Romantic composer. In his writing and in his compositions he championed the Romantic movement. A versatile composer, he produced both vocal and orchestral pieces. His Spring and Rhenish symphonies and his Piano Concerto in A minor are considered among his most outstanding works.

Schuman plan See Monnet, Jean

Schurz, Carl 1829–1906. German-born American statesman, reformer, and journalist. Fleeing Germany after the Revolution of 1848, he distinguished himself in America as politician, diplomat, Civil War general, US senator, and newspaper editor. He was a leader of the mugwumps, opposing J. Blaine in the 1884 presidential campaign.

Schuschnigg, Kurt von 1897–. Austrian statesman. As prime minister (1934–38) he strove to prevent Austria's takeover by Germany (1938). He was a German prisoner until 1945.

Schütz, Heinrich 1585–1672. German baroque composer. He introduced Italian-style music and techniques into German music, wrote many outstanding sacred-music pieces, and composed Dafne, considered the first German opera.

Schutzstaffel See Ss

Schuyler, Philip John 1733–1804. American Revolutionary leader. He served in the Continental Army and was a member of the Continental Congress. As US senator (1789–91, 1797–98) he was a leading Federalist in New York state.

Schwabach, Articles of See Articles of Schwabach

Schwann, Theodor 1810–82. German physiologist. He isolated the first enzyme (pepsin) from animal tissue, studied muscle contraction, and identified the cell as the basic unit of plant and animal life.

Schwarzenberg, Felix, Fürst zu 1800–52. Austrian statesman. As prime minister (1848–52) he restored the Austrian Hapsburg Empire after its near collapse in the Revolution of 1848. His work was soon eroded by the growth of nationalism.

Schwarzenberg, Karl Philipp, Fürst zu 1771–1820. Austrian field marshal and diplomat. He led the Austrian contingent with Napoleon against Russia (1812) but later commanded the allied forces that defeated Napoleon in 1814.

Schweitzer, Albert 1875–1965. Alsatian theologian, philosopher, and medical missionary in Africa. Renouncing fame as a scholar and musician, he founded (after 1913) a medical mission (Lambaréné Hospital) in Africa, illustrating his philosophical principle of "reverence for life." He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1952.

Schwenkfeld, Kaspar von 1490–1561. German Protestant religious leader. He tried to chart a middle way between Protestants and Catholics but was persecuted by his fellow Protestants for his views. He founded the sect named for him, the Schwenkfeldians.

Schwerin, Kurt Christoph, Graf von 1684–1757. Prussian field marshal. One of the chief lieutenants of Prussian king Frederick II, he won his greatest victory at the Battle of Mollwitz (1741) in the War of the Austrian Succession.

Scipio Ancient Roman patrician family. They were distinguished by their patronage of Greek culture but even more by family members who were outstanding Roman leaders during the 3d and 2d cents. BC. (See names below.)

Scipio, Cnelus Cornelius d. 211 BC. Roman leader. As consul (222 BC) he completed the subjugation of Cisalpine Gaul, and, with his brother P. Scipio, defeated Hasdrubal in Spain (215).

Scipio, Publius Cornelius *d. c*211 BC. Roman leader and general. He was defeated by Hannibal at the Ticino River (218 BC), but his later campaigns in Spain with his brother C. Scipio significantly hindered the Carthaginian efforts. Both brothers were killed in Spain.

Scipio, Quintus Caecilius Metellus Pius d. 46 BC. Roman politician and general. He was consul (52 BC) with Pompey and commanded armies for him in Syria and Egypt. In the struggles for control of the Roman state, he lost to J. Caesar at the Battle of Thapsus, and committed suicide.

Scipio Africanus Major 234?–183 BC. Roman general. Sent as proconsul to Spain (210 BC), he conquered the Carthaginians there during the second Punic War, gained control of the whole country, and pursued the Carthaginians into Africa, where he defeated Hannibal at the Battle of Zama (202 BC). He and his brother Lucius were successful in the war against Syrian king Antiochus III (190 BC).

Scipio Africanus Minor *c*185–129 BC. Roman consul and general, adopted son of P. Scipio. He ended the Third Punic War (149–146 BC) by conquering and destroying Carthage. He was made consul (147 BC) and censor (142). Reelected consul (134), he crushed a revolt in Spain, destroying the city of Numantia. It is thought that he was murdered by his wife or a member of her family, the Gracchi.

Scipio Nasica Serapio, Publius Cornelius *d. c*132 BC. Ancient Roman politician. He violently opposed the reforms of T. Gracchus and personally led the mob that murdered him.

Scopes trial Celebrated "monkey" trial (July 10–21, 1925) at Dayton, Tennessee. John T. Scopes (1900–70), was charged with violating a 1925 state law by teaching evolution in his high school class. During the trial, C. Darrow, one of Scopes's attorneys, conducted a severe questioning of the fundamentalist beliefs of W. Bryan. Scopes was found guilty and fined. Darrow failed to establish the law's unconstitutionality and it stood until repealed in 1967.

Scotland Former kingdom and now part of Great Britain, located on the island of Great Britain and north of England. Its capital is Edinburgh. Although in union with Britain, Scotland maintains its own system of law and has representation in the British Parliament. Known to the Romans as Caledonia, the region saw the rise (5th–6th cent. AD) of kingdoms established by Picts, Angles, Britons, and Scots; suffered raids (8th–12th cent.) by the Norsemen, and subsequently became embroiled in wars with England, which for centuries sought to establish suzerainty over Scotland. The English and Scottish crowns were joined (1603) under James I, but formal union did not come until 1707. Thereafter the history of Scotland merges with that of Great Britain (q.v.). Key dates in the history of Scotland include:

1ST CENT. AD Romans attempted conquest of region, then known as Caledonia.

AD 122 Hadrian ordered construction of military wall to halt continued attacks from Picts in the north (Scotland) on Roman domains in the south.

AD 409 Romans withdrew from Britain.

5th–6th CENT. Britons established kingdom of Strathclyde; Picts established kingdom in northern Scotland; Gaelic Scoti from Ireland established kingdom of Dalriada; Angles established kingdom of Northumbria in southern Caledonia and northern England.

563 St. Columba came to Scotland from Ireland; established monastery and proceeded to spread Christianity.

730 Pictish king Angus MacFergus conquered Dalriada and Strathclyde.

8TH–12TH CENT. Norsemen made continuous raids on the Scottish coast; gained some holdings in Scotland but generally held little more than the Hebrides, Orkney, and Shetland island groups.

844 Dalriada and kingdom of Picts united under Kenneth MacAlpine; new kingdom known as Alban.

1005–34 Malcolm II reigned; defeated Northumbria at Battle of Carham (1018) and extended kingdom at expense of Northumbrians.

1034–40 Duncan reigned; Strathclyde incorporated into kingdom, which became known as Scotland; severe political turmoil culminated in Duncan's murder by Macbeth.

1040–57 Macbeth reigned; killed and succeeded by Duncan's son Malcolm Canmore, who reigned as Malcolm III.

1057–93 Malcolm III reigned; married St. Margaret of Scotland, an English princess (1067); reign marked by increasing influence of English and Roman Catholic ideas and practices in both the kingdom and in the Celtic church.

1093 Malcolm III died; leaders of the Scottish clans forced Margaret and her son Duncan II into exile.

1097–1107 Edgar, son of Malcolm III and Margaret, reigned; began the breakup of traditional Scottish clan society and the introduction of a feudal system, which was continued by his successors.

1124–53 David I reigned; lost Northumbrian possessions to England (1149).

1165–1214 William the Lion reigned; sought to regain Northumbria; captured by the English and forced to sign the Treaty of Falaise (1174), by which he swore fealty to English King Henry II.

1189 English king Richard II renounced provisions of Treaty of Falaise in return for a sum of money.

1249–86 Alexander III reigned; recaptured the Hebrides Islands from the Norsemen (1266); succeeded by his granddaughter, the infant Margaret of Norway.

1290–92 Margaret died (1290), causing struggle for the succession; English king Edward I supported the claims of John de Baliol and invaded Scotland; Baliol made king (Nov. 1292).

1295–96 John de Baliol allied with France (1295) in an attempt to end English suzerainty over Scotland; Baliol defeated (Apr., 1296) at Battle of Dunbar; Edward I annexed Scotland, but the Scots continued to rebel against English rule.

1297 Scottish troops under William Wallace victorious over the English at Battle of Stirling (Sept. 11).

1298 English victorious over the Scots (July 22) at Battle of Falkirk.

1305 Wallace captured and executed by the English; succeeded by Robert the Bruce as leader of Scottish rebellion; Robert was crowned king a year later.

1306–29 Robert the Bruce reigned; established Scottish independence by his victory at the Battle of Bannockburn (June 24, 1314); secured English recognition of Scottish independence by the Treaty of Northampton (1328).

1329–71 David II reigned; rule marked by conflict with Edward de Baliol for the throne and continuing warfare with England.

1346 Invasion of England by David II halted at the Battle of Neville's Cross.

1371–90 Robert II reigned; founded Stuart line in Scotland.

1406–37 James I reigned; held prisoner in England (until 1424); returned to Scotland and attempted to restore order and institute reforms; his rule was resisted by the nobles; he was assassinated.

1488–1513 James IV reigned; married Margaret Tudor, daughter of English king Henry VII, but came into conflict with Henry's son, Henry VIII; led invasion of England but was killed (Sept. 9, 1513) along with many Scottish nobles at Battle of Flodden Field.

1513–42 James V reigned; assumed personal rule in 1528; married Mary of Guise (1538), thereby strengthening the alliance formed with France in 1295 and leading ultimately to war with England (1542); James defeated (Nov., 1542) at Battle of Solway Moss; died soon after.

1542–60 Mary Queen of Scots, daughter of James V, succeeded, under regency of James Hamilton and, later, her mother, Mary of Guise; sent to France (1548), she married the French dauphin (1558), which only fueled resentment against the regency of Mary of Guise; rebellion led by J. Knox (1559–60), aided by English Queen Elizabeth I, led to ouster of Mary of Guise and ascendancy of Scottish Protestants; Scottish Parliament established Presbyterianism as Scottish religion.

1561–67 Mary Queen of Scots returned to Scotland and assumed rule (1561); instituted Counter-Reformation amid complicated political and religious struggle; Mary ultimately deposed (1567) and imprisoned in England, where she was later executed (1587).

1567–1625 Mary succeeded by her son James VI (1567); James assumed rule of Scotland (1583) and established his authority over the Scottish nobles; on death of English Queen Elizabeth I (1603), he became king of both Scotland and England as James I.

1625–49 Charles I reigned in England and Scotland; attempts to introduce Anglican reforms opposed by the Covenanters; Scottish Protestants resisted in the Bishops' Wars (1639–40), which led to the English Civil War.

1642–49 English Civil War; Scottish Covenanters (Presbyterians) had great influence over rebel Parliament until Pride's Purge and ascendancy of the Puritans under O. Cromwell.

1649–60 Scotland ruled under English Commonwealth and Protectorate; rebellions (1649-52) in Scotland in support of royalists put down by Cromwell.

1660–88 Restoration period in England; Presbyterians in Scotland again persecuted by English kings.

1689–1702 Protestants William and Mary reigned after the Glorious Revolution in England; Presbyterianism became Scottish state church.

1702–14 Queen Anne reigned; English and Scottish parliaments passed acts of union that formally united England and Scotland as Great Britain (1707)

Scotland, Church of See Church of Scotland

Scotland, Saint Margaret of See Margaret of Scotland, Saint

Scotland Yard Name given the criminal investigation division of the London Metropolitan Police. The name comes from the London street on which the first headquarters of the London police was established (1829).

Scott, Robert Falcon 1868–1912. British naval officer and Antarctic explorer. Scott commanded an expedition to the Antarctic (1901–04). On his second expedition (1910–12), Scott's party of five reached the South Pole one month after R. Amundsen, but all died in bad weather during their journey back.

Scott, Sir Walter 1771–1832. Scottish writer, considered the father of the historical novel. Scott's first major work, the ballad collection Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, appeared in 1802–03, but his great success began with the publication of Waverley (1814), the first of a number of historical novels known collectively as the Waverley novels. Scott's novels are set in Scotland, England, and Europe, and their popularity made Scott one of the leading authors of his day. Among them are Guy Mannering, Old Mortality, Quentin Durward, and Ivanhoe.

Scott, Winfield 1786–1866. American politician and general who fought with distinction in the War of 1812. Made commanding general of the US army (1841–61), he captured Vera Cruz (1847) during the Mexican War. He was the unsuccessful Whig candidate for president in 1852. He retired shortly after the outbreak of the Civil War.

Scottish Highlands See Highlands, the Scottsboro Case Notorious court case (1931) in Scottsboro, Alabama, in which nine blacks were convicted of raping two white girls. The Supreme Court reversed the decision on procedural grounds and one of the girls recanted her testimony at a second trial. The case became famous as an example of racial prejudice affecting a legal verdict.

scribe Ancient Jewish scholar and teacher of the Old Testament and the Law. By the time of Jesus, scribes were the equivalent of doctors of the law, and many conducted classes in the temple precincts for future rabbis. The name was first applied to Ezra.

Scriblerus Club English literary club of the early 18th cent., formed to satirize the literary excesses of the period through the writings of a fictitious person, Martinus Scriblerus. Its members included J. Gay, J. Swift, and A. Pope.

Scribner, Charles 1821–71. American publisher. With Isaac Baker (d. 1850), he founded (1846) the publishing company that became (1878) Charles Scribner's Sons.

Scribner, Charles 1854–1930. American publisher. Son of C. Scribner, he became president of Charles Scribner's Sons (1879). During his tenure (1879–1928) the firm published the works of some of the most distinguished writers in America.

Scripps, Edward Wyllis 1854–1926. American newspaper publisher. He organized (1895) the first major newspaper chain and established (1907) the United Press news service.

Scrope, Richard See Neville, Ralph

scutage Feudal payment to a lord from a vassal in lieu of military service. Scutage existed in Europe, especially in England, but became obsolete by the 14th cent.

Scylla In Greek mythology, a sea monster that lived on the Italian side of the Strait of Messina. She seized and devoured sailors from passing ships. Charybdis, a mythical monster turned into a whirlpool, menaced sailors, among them Odysseus and Jason, from the opposite side of the strait.

Scythia Ancient kingdom of indeterminate boundaries centered in the area north of the Black Sea. The Scythians were nomadic horsemen who made periodic incursions into areas to the south. They flourished from *c*8th cent. BC to the 2d cent. BC, when they were conquered by the Sarmatians.

Seaborg, Glenn Theodore 1912–. American nuclear chemist and chairman of the US Atomic Energy Commission (1961–71). He was the codiscoverer of plutonium and other elements heavier than uranium and was instrumental in the development of the atomic bomb. He was corecipient of the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1951.

Seale, Bobby See Black Panthers

"Sealed train" See Lenin, Nikolai

sea power Term used to designate those elements including men, ships, shorelines, and industrial capacity that enable a nation to gain control over a portion of the seas. The term was popularized by the American naval officer and historian Alfred Thayer Mahan (1840–1914), especially in his The Influence of Sea Power Upon History.

SEATO See Southeast Asian Treaty Organization

Seattle Capital city (pop. 494,000) of Washington state. First established in the 1850s, it grew slowly until the arrival (late 19th cent.) of the railroad and the advent of the gold rush in Alaska. It has become the commercial and industrial center of the Pacific Northwest.

Sebastian 1554–78. Portuguese king (1557–78), successor to his grandfather, John III. He led the Portuguese army to a disastrous defeat in Morocco at the Battle of the Three Kings (1578). Popular belief refused to accept his death, and various pretenders and rumors of his return long persisted.

Sebastian, Saint d. AD *c*288. Roman Christian martyr. According to tradition, he was a Praetorian Guard under Emperor Diocletian. When Sebastian's Christianity was discovered, Diocletian ordered his death by arrows. Sebastian recovered and returned to confront Diocletian, who ordered him beaten to death. His martyrdom was the subject of numerous Renaissance works of art.

secession Formal withdrawal of a political entity from a larger entity. The term refers especially to the attempt by 11 southern states to leave the Union (1860–61), thus precipitating the American Civil War.

Second Coalition, War of the War (1798–1802) conducted by a coalition of European nations against France, the last phase of the French Revolutionary Wars (q.v.). On Dec. 24, 1798, the monarchies of Russia and Britain, in agreement with Naples, Portugal, Austria, and the Ottoman Empire, formed the Second Coalition to oppose Napoleon's expansionism. Russia and Britain agreed to drive France from The Netherlands, Austria was to combat Napoleon in Germany, and Switzerland and combined Austro-Russian forces were to expel the French from Italy. The coalition was only partially successful before Russia withdrew (Oct., 1799), and France subsequently regained some of its earlier losses. The conflict was ended by the Treaty of Amiens (Mar. 27, 1802), which also closed the French Revolutionary Wars.

Second Crusade See Crusade, Second

Second Empire French government under the rule of Emperor Napoleon III (1852–70). Originally chosen as president of the Second Republic (1848), Napoleon III declared himself emperor in 1852. He followed Napoleon I's tradition of autocratic rule and expansionism, especially in Asia, Indochina, Mexico, and the Crimea. However, France's humiliation in the Franco-Prussian War (1870) led to his overthrow and declaration of the Third Republic. (See also France [1852–70.]

Second Polish Revolution See January Insurrection

Second Punic War See Punic War(s)

Second Republic French government (1848–52) formed after the abdication (Feb. 24, 1848) of King Louis Philippe in the February Revolution (q.v.) and establishment of the provisional government of L. Blanc. Louis Napoleon, nephew of Emperor Napoleon, was elected president of the republic (Dec. 10). Though the Second Republic had a constitution and a legislature, its rule was brief. Louis Napoleon overthrew his own government, proclaimed himself Emperor Napoleon III (Dec., 1852), and declared the Second Empire.

Second Republic Spanish republican government (1931–39) formed after the ouster of King Alfonso XIII. A constitution was promulgated and church property was confiscated, but the moderate policies followed by Pres. Niceto Alcalá Zamora (1877–1949) brought attacks from both the right and left. He was ousted in the 1936 elections by the Popular Front (a coalition of republicans, Communists, syndicalists, and Socialistas). Soon after their president, M. Azaña, took office, the Spanish Civil War (q.v.) broke out. The Second Republic was replaced by Franco's Nationalist government at the end of the war (1939).

Secret Speech See destalinization

secularism A movement directed toward concern with the sphere of human existence. In most of its manifestations secularism has set itself in conscious opposition to religion, holding that religion is too concerned with an afterlife, even to the detriment of the potentialities of this world.

Sedan, Battle of Decisive German victory over France (Sept. 1, 1870) during the Franco-Prussian War, at Sedan, France. It resulted in the surrender (Sept. 2) of Napoleon III and the downfall of the French Second Empire.

Sedgemoore, Battle of Victory (July 16, 1685) of English king James II over the forces of his nephew James Scott, duke of Monmouth, pretender to the throne. The battle, fought at Somerset, resulted in Monmouth's capture and execution.

Sedgwick, John 1813–64. American Civil War general. He fought in the battles of Antietam, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, and in the Wilderness Campaign. He was killed in action at Spotsylvania (May 9, 1864).

Seeckt, Hans von 1866–1936. German general and head of the German army (1920–26). He remolded the limited German army after WW I as a professional force capable of rapid expansion.

Segni, Ugolino di See Gregory IX

Segovia, Andrés 1894–. Spanish classical guitarist. He revived use of the guitar as a concert instrument through his performances and his transcriptions for guitar from the classical repertory.

segregation Separation of the races (especially in reference to whites and blacks) to maintain the social, economic, and political advantages of one over the other. Though by no means restricted to the US, it has been an important factor in its social history. Segregation of whites and blacks was firmy established in the US South by the end of the post-Civil War Reconstruction (q.v.). The Supreme Court decision in Plessy vs Ferguson (1896) upheld the legality of separate but equal facilities (such as schools) and thereby ensured continuation of segregation policies. It was not until the late 1930s and 1940s that the trend toward integration began. Antidiscrimination clauses were included in federal contracts (after 1941) under Pres. F. Roosevelt, and Pres. H. Truman ordered integration of the military (1948). The Supreme Court decision in Brown vs Board of Education of Topeka (1954) began the process of ending school segregation. The 1960s saw the rise of the civil rights movement (q.v.) and enactment of landmark civil rights legislation. See also apartheid.

Seingalt, Giovanni Giacomo Casanova de See Casanova de Seingalt, Giovanni Giacomo seignorial system See Manorial System

Seisachtheia See Solon

Sejanus, Lucius Aelius d. AD 31. Roman administrator. He was chief adviser for Emperor Tiberius, and may have helped Livilla, wife of the emperor's son Drusus, in Drusus' murder. Tiberius had him executed on suspicion of trying to take power.

Sejm Legislative body of Poland. Polish king Casimir IV summoned the first Polish diet in 1467 and in 1505 the nobles forced the king to recognize the power of the Sejm to legislate. From 1572 until 1791, members of the Sejm had the liberum veto, which gave any member the right to veto legislation, and thus weakened the government. In 1919, the Sejm was reorganized into a single, or unicameral, legislature.

Selden, John 1584–1654. English scholar, jurist, and Parliamentarian. A leader in English political life, he was also one of the most erudite scholars of his day. He wrote on the history of English law, religious tithes, and Oriental gods, and in defense of English sovereignty over the seas.

Seleucid Kingdom ⟨Seleucid Empire⟩ Hellenistic empire of Asia Minor. The Seleucid dynasty (312–64 BC) was centered in Syria and ruled over vast areas of Asia Minor which had been captured by Alexander the Great. The dynasty was founded by the Macedonian Seleucus I, one of Alexander's generals, following Alexander's death. In the division of Alexander's empire, Seleucus was given Babylonia. He rapidly added territories that extended from Syria to the Indus River. Subsequent Seleucid rulers were instrumental in spreading Greek culture throughout Asia Minor. However, the empire was gradually reduced and was limited to Syria and Cilicia by the time of its absorption by Rome (64 BC).

Seleucus I d. 280 BC. Macedonian general and (from 312 BC) first of the Seleucid rulers of the eastern portions of Alexander the Great's empire. His rule extended over Syria, Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, and Persia. He founded Antioch as his capital.

Selecus II d. 226 BC. Syrian king (247–226 BC), successor to his father, Antiochus II. He fought a war with his half brother Ptolemy III of Egypt as well as against his stepmother Berenice, and eventually lost both Parthia and Asia Minor.

Self-Denying Ordinance See New Model Army

Self-Strengthening movement Chinese movement begun (*c*1861) to adopt elements of Western civilization in order to strengthen the Ch'ing (Manchu) dynasty against both internal forces and further aggression by Western nations. The movement began to decline in the 1870s.

Selim I 1467–1520. Ottoman Turkish sultan (1512–20). He deposed his father, Bajazet II, and killed all who had claims to the throne. He conquered sections of Persia (1514), added Syria and Egypt to the Ottoman domain, and assumed the spiritual authority of the caliphate.

Selim II *c*1524–74. Ottoman Turkish sultan (1566–74), successor to his father, Suleiman I. During his reign, Cyprus and Tunisia were added to the empire, but Selim's defeat at the Battle of Lepanto (1571) marked the first major setback to Ottoman expansion.

Selim III 1761–1808. Ottoman Turkish sultan (1789–1807), successor to his uncle Abdu-l-Hamid I. Selim inaugurated a policy of reform and Westernization but was unable to halt the decline in Ottoman power and prestige. Russo-Turkish Wars were fought during his reign. He was overthrown, imprisoned, and murdered.

Seljuks Turkish dynasty that ruled much of western Asia and Asia Minor from the 11th to 13th cents. Originally an Asiatic nomadic people, the Seljuks converted to Islam (11th cent.) and soon created a vast empire after taking power in the Empire of the Caliphate. Rulers of the dynasty included Togrul Beg, grandson of Seljuk, the founder of the dynasty. Leading the Seljuks eastward, Togrul Beg conquered Persia and entered Baghdad (1055), overthrowing the Buyids (Persians who held power under the caliphs). He thus established the Seljuk sultans as effective rulers in the Empire of the Caliphate. He was succeeded (1063) by his son Alp Arslan (1029–72), who conquered Syria and Palestine and defeated and captured Byzantine emperor Romanus IV at the Battle of Manzikert (1071). Alp Arslan was succeeded by his son Malik Shah (ruled 1072–92), who brought the Seljuk Empire to its height. After his death (1092), local rulers took over portions of the empire and the Abbasid caliphs gained control of the central government. Continued Seljuk attacks on the Byzantine Empire led to the Crusades (q.v.). The Seljuk kingdoms were eventually conquered (13th cent.) by Genghis Khan and his successors. The former Seljuk kingdom of Rum became (14th cent.) the nucleus around which the Ottomans formed their great empire.

Selkirk, Thomas Douglas, 5th earl of 1771–1820. Scottish philanthropist and colonizer. To alleviate hardships of Scottish highlanders, he established colonies for them on Prince Edward Island and Manitoba, Canada, notably the Red River Settlement (q.v.).

Sellasia, Battle of See Antigonus III; Cleomenes III

Semele In Greek mythology, the mother of Dionysus by Zeus. Asking to behold Zeus in his glory, she was killed by his thunderbolts. Zeus rescued Dionysus by placing him in his own thigh, from which he was later born. Zeus ultimately brought Semele out of Hades and made her immortal.

Seminole Indians North American Indian tribe. They formed (18th cent.) from the Creek Indians and settled in Florida. Through the early 19th cent. they resisted European encroachment on their lands, notably in the Seminole Wars (q.v.), until their defeat and removal (1842).

Seminole Wars Series of wars fought between the US and the Seminole Indians in Florida. 1. The first Seminole War (1817–18) began when Gen. A. Jackson invaded the Spanish-held territory of Florida after a long series of border skirmishes. He defeated the Seminoles and the war encouraged Spain to sell Florida to the US. 2. The second Seminole War (1835–42) was sparked by attempts of white settlers to remove the Seminoles from their reservation land. The conflict cost 2,000 soldiers and over $20 million and ended only when Seminole leader Osceola (q.v.) was betrayed and killed (1842). Most Seminoles were forced to emigrate westward. Those who refused were tracked down and deported during a third conflict (1855–58).

Semiramis Mythical Assyrian queen, reputed to have founded Babylon and to have married the founder of Nineveh. Eventually she was deified. She came to be identified with the goddess Ishtar.

Semite A member of an ethnic group speaking a Semitic language. As early as 2500 BC the Semites began to migrate from the Arabian Peninsula. Semitic peoples include the ancient Akkadians, Assyrians, Aramaeans, Israelites, and Phoenicians, and the modern Arabs and Jews.

Semmes, Raphael 1809–77. American naval officer. As Confederate commander of the Confederate cruiser Alabama (1862–64) during the American Civil War, he was able to inflict extensive damage on Union shipping until the Alabama was sunk off Cherbourg, France (June 19, 1864).

Sempach, Battle of Decisive Swiss victory (July 9, 1386) over the Austrians at Sempach, Switzerland. The battle secured the independence of the Swiss Confederation from Austrian Hapsburg rule.

Senate, Roman See Roman Senate

Senenayake, Don Stephen 1884–1952. Prime minister of Ceylon (1947–52). After a distinguished political career in Ceylon under British rule, he became (1948) the first prime minister of independent Ceylon and thus is considered the father of his country.

Seneca, Lucius Annaeus ⟨Seneca the Elder⟩ *c*55 BC–AD 40. Spanish-born Roman rhetorician and writer of influential works on rhetoric. He was the father of the Roman philosopher Seneca.

Seneca, Lucius Annaeus 3 BC–AD 65. ⟨Seneca the Younger⟩ Roman Stoic philosopher, statesman, and dramatist, considered the leading literary figure of his day. Tutor and adviser to Nero, he held great power during Nero's early reign (54–62). Eventually, conflicts with the emperor led to his retirement, and he was finally ordered to commit suicide by Nero. Seneca's writings included moral essays and nine plays. His works had a profound influence on later literature, notably Elizabethan drama.

Seneca the Elder See Seneca, Lucius Annaeus

Senegal West African republic (pop. 5,660,000) on the Atlantic Ocean. Its capital is Dakar. First settled by the Portuguese (15th cent.), Senegal was subsequently occupied by the French (17th cent.).

It became a colony (1895), then a member of the French Union (1946). It joined with Mali to form an independent federation (June, 1960) but withdrew from the union two months later. L. Senghor was first president.

Senghor, Leopold Sedar 1906–. African poet, writer, and statesman, and president of Senegal (1960–81). He represented Senegal in the French National Assembly and became the country's first president after its independence, working thereafter for African unity.

Sennacherib d. 681 BC. Ancient Assyrian king (705–681 BC), successor to his father, Sargon II. He is noted for the rebuilding of Nineveh, the destruction of Babylon (689 BC), and the siege of Jerusalem (701 BC).

Sennett, Mack ⟨Sinnott, Michael⟩ 1884–1960. Pioneer American film maker. His best-known comedies involved the misadventures of the Keystone cops.

Sentinum, Battle of Roman victory (295 BC) over the Samnites, Etruscans, and Gauls in the third Samnite War (q.v.), at Sentinum (now Sassoferrato), in central Italy. The battle established Roman preeminence in the region.

Seoul ⟨Kyongsong⟩ Capital of South Korea (pop. 6,879,500) and the commercial, industrial, and political capital of the country. It was capital of the Yi dynasty of Korea from the city's founding (1392) to 1910, when Korea was occupied by the Japanese. Occupied by US forces (1945) after WW II, it became the capital of South Korea in 1948.

Separatists Factions of English Christians who tried to remove themselves from the authority of the Church of England. The principal Separatists were the Brownists (q.v.), Pilgrims, Baptists, and the Society of Friends (qq.v.).

September massacres Series of massacres (Sept. 2–6, 1792) carried out in Paris by French revolutionaries. Some 1,200 jailed prisoners were murdered because of a supposed conspiracy to restore the monarchy.

Septennial Act British parliamentary act (1716) extending the term of a Parliament from three to seven years. It made the dissolution of a Parliament mandatory at the end of seven years. The Whigs secured passage of the act to continue their dominance.

Septimius Severus See Severus

Septuagint Oldest existing Greek translation of the Old Testament from the original Hebrew. It was composed in sections from *c*3d cent. BC to early Christian times. It contains the canonical books of the Bible as well as the Apocryphal or deuterocanonical books. The Septuagint is used by the Greek Orthodox church.

Serbia Constituent republic of Yugoslavia. Settled by Serbs (7th cent.), the region came under Byzantine suzerainty (by 10th cent.). Serbia became the leading kingdom in the Balkan Peninsula under Stephen Dushan (ruled 1331–55). It was a part of the Ottoman Empire from 1459 to 1878 and gained independence (1878) following the Serbo-Turkish War (q.v.). Independent Serbia played a prominent role in the Balkan League and in the Balkan Wars (qq.v.). The assassination of Austrian archduke Francis Ferdinand (1914) by a Serbian nationalist precipitated WW I. After the war, Serbia became part of the united Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (1918), which formed the basis of modern Yugoslavia. It became a constituent republic of Yugoslavia in 1946.

Serbo-Bulgarian War War (Nov. 13, 1885–Mar. 13, 1886) between Serbia and Bulgaria. After Bulgaria annexed Rumelia, Serbia declared war but was defeated at Slivnitza (Nov. 17–19). Bulgaria was deterred from advancing into Serbia by pressure from the Austro-Hungarian empire, and peace was made on the basis of the status quo.

Serbo-Turkish War of 1876–78 Balkan conflict between Serbia and its ally Montenegro and the Ottoman Empire. In 1875, the Christian peasants of Herzegoina and Bosnia rebelled against their rulers, the Ottoman Turks. Serbia, an independent principality within the Ottoman Empire, sided with Bosnia and declared war on the Ottomans (June, 1876). Though the Serbs technically lost their war by October, they received support from Russia, which tried to pressure the Ottomans into accepting pro-Christian reforms. When they refused, Russia declared war (1877) on the Ottomans (see Russo-Turkish Wars). The Serbs rejoined the conflict and ultimately gained their independence in the Treaty of Berlin (July 13, 1878).

serf In feudalism, a peasant laborer bound to the land owned by a lord. The serf owed payment, usually a portion of crops, and services to the lord in return for protection and use of the land. (See feudalism.)

Serra, Junípero ⟨~, Miguel José⟩ 1713–84. Spanish Franciscan missionary in California. Noted for his austere, virtuous life, he accompanied Spanish expeditions and founded nine missions, some of which were the basis of such California cities as San Diego and San Luis Obispo.

Serra, Miguel José See Serra, Junípero

Sertorius, Quintus d. 72 BC. Roman general. He opposed the constitution imposed on Rome by Sulla. From 80 BC he conducted a rebellion in Spain against Rome and was largely successful until his assassination by one of his soldiers.

Servetus, Michael 1511–53. Spanish Reformation theologian and physician. Attacked by both Catholics and Protestants for his speculative books challenging the Trinity and the divinity of Christ, he was finally burned by order of J. Calvin.

Servile Wars Three slave uprisings against Roman rule. 1. The first Servile War (*c*134–132 BC) occurred in Sicily. Its leader, Eunus, named himself King Antiochus, and was defeated only with great difficulty. 2. The second Servile War, also in Sicily, raged from *c*102 to 99 BC. 3. The third Servile War (73–71 BC) was led by the gladiator Spartacus. He conquered much of southern Italy before his defeat by Crassus and Pompey.

Sesostris I d. *c*1926 BC. Ancient Egyptian king of the 12th dynasty (*c*1970–*c*1926 BC). Son of Amenemhet I and coregent with him (1980–1970 BC), he led successful expeditions against both Nubia and Libya and brought Egypt to a peak of prosperity.

Sesostris II d. 1878 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (1897–1878 BC) of the 12th dynasty, successor to his father, Amenemhet II, with whom he ruled for a time as coregent. His reign was marked by a growth of mining in Nubia and the development of the Fayyum, a fertile area near Cairo.

Sesostris III d. 1849 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (1878–1849 BC) of the 12th dynasty, successor to his father, Sesostris II. He reestablished Egypt's southern border at the second cataract of the Nile and increased his power at the expense of the nobles.

Sesshu 1420–1506. Japanese landscape painter and Zen Buddhist monk, considered one of the greatest masters of Japanese painting.

Seth In the Bible, the son of Adam and Eve and the father of Enos.

Sethos See Seti

Seti I ⟨Sethos⟩ d. 1304 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (1318–1304 BC) of the 19th dynasty, successor to his father, Ramses I, and father of Ramses II. He conquered the Libyans, invaded Syria, and built one of the finest tombs in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

Seti II ⟨Sethos⟩ d. 1210 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (1216–1210 BC), who reigned in the last years of the 19th dynasty. After his brief rule, anarchy reigned in Egypt until the accession of Ramses III.

Seton, Elizabeth Ann Bayley 1774–1821. American Roman Catholic, known as Mother Seton. She founded the Sisters of Charity and was the first native American to be canonized (1974).

Settlement, Act of See Act of Settlement

Seurat, Georges 1859–91. French neoimpressionist painter. He developed pointillism, a technique of applying paint in tiny individual dots. With this technique he produced masterpieces such as his Baignade.

Seven Against Thebes Seven legendary Greek heroes who fought against King Eteocles of Thebes to restore the throne to his brother Polynices. All but one died. The legend was the basis for Seven Against Thebes, by Aeschylus, and Phoenician Women, by Euripides.

Seven Churches in Asia Seven early Christian churches to which Saint John the Evangelist addressed the Book of Revelation. These seven churches were in the towns of Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia (Lydia), and Laodicea (Phrygia).

Seven Days' Battles Series of battles (June 25–July 1, 1862) during the American Civil War by which Confederate forces led by Gen. R. Lee turned back a Union attempt to capture the Confederate capital of Richmond, Virginia, and ended the Peninsular Campaign (q.v.). The battles were fought against Union troops under Gen. G. McClellan, and occurred at Mechanicsville (June 26), Gaines's Mill (June 27), Savage's Station (June 29), Frayser's Farm (or Glendale, June 30), and Malvern Hill (July 1).

Seven Gods of Luck Group of seven Japanese deities believed to promote happiness and good luck.

Seven Hills of Rome The seven hills upon which the city of Rome was built. The original city of Romulus was built on the Palatine hill. The other hills are: Capitoline (which became the principal one and site of the palaces of the Caesars), Quirinal, Viminal, Esquiline, Caelian, and Aventine.

Seven Oaks Massacre See Red River Settlement

Seven Pines, Battle of ⟨Fair Oaks, Battle of⟩ Battle (May 31–June 1, 1862) of the American Civil War, near Fair Oaks, Virginia. The battle was part of the Peninsular Campaign (q.v.). Confederate forces under Gen. J. Johnston attacked the Union army, under Gen. G. McClellan, which was advancing toward Richmond. The Confederates inflicted and received heavy losses and were ultimately repulsed. Gen. Johnston was wounded in the battle and was replaced by R.E. Lee soon after.

17th Parallel Name applied to the cease-fire line established by the Geneva Conference of 1954 dividing Vietnam in two parts. The line formed the border between North and South Vietnam until reunification of Vietnam (1976).

Seventh Crusade See Crusade, Seventh

Seven Weeks' War See Austro-Prussian War

Seven Wise Men of Greece List of seven great men of ancient Greece. Sources disagree as to which seven should be included, but one list includes Bias, Chilon, Cleobulus, Periander, Pittacus, Solon, and Thales.

Seven Wonders of the World Seven greatest man-made works of the ancient world. Lists varied but usually included the pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the Colossus of Rhodes, the statue of Zeus at Olympia, the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus, the Pharos lighthouse of Alexandria, and the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus.

Seven Years' War War fought (1756–63) in Europe and in colonial domains in other parts of the world. The American phase of the war was called the French and Indian War (q.v.). The war evolved from two separate ongoing struggles between European powers: the rivalry between Prussia and Austria (which had been humiliated by Prussia in the War of the Austrian Succession, 1740–48) and the colonial rivaly between Britain and France (in Canada, America, India, and elsewhere). The war itself pitted Prussia, Britain, and Hanover against Austria and France. Austria and France were joined variously by Sweden, Russia, Saxony, and Spain. The war began in 1756 and Prussia and Britain eventually emerged victorious. Prussia was confirmed as a leading European power and Britain became the chief colonial power, having stripped France of nearly all its colonial possessions. Key events in the war include:

1748 Austria, humiliated by loss of Silesia to Prussia in the War of the Austrian Succession (1740–48), formed an alliance with Russia.

1754 French and Indian War; rivalry between French and British in Ohio Valley region flared into armed clashes; war later merged with Seven Years' War.

1756 Treaty of Westminster (Jan.); George II of England allied with Frederick II of Prussia.

1756 Diplomatic revolution; France allied itself with its traditional enemy, Hapsburg Austria, following the pact between Britain and Prussia.

1756 Frederick II of Prussia invaded Saxony (Aug.); the Saxons surrendered (Oct. 15).

1757 Holy Roman Empire (ruled by the Austrian Hapsburgs) declared war on Prussia (Jan.); alliances with France, Russia, and Sweden formed.

1757 Prussia invaded Bohemia; defeated the Austrians at the Battle of Prague (May 6).

1757 In India, British defeated French at the Battle of Plassey (June 23).

1757 French forces occupied Hanover (Sept.) after defeating the British.

1757 Frederick II of Prussia defeated at Kolin by the Austrians (June), and forced to evacuate Bohemia.

1757 Frederick II defeated the Austrians and French at the Battle of Rossbach, in Saxony (Nov. 5).

1757 Battle of Leuthen, in Silesia (Dec. 5); Prussians under Frederick defeated the Austrians.

1758 British and Hanoverians defeated the French and Austrians at Crefeld (June), after driving the French back across the Rhine in the west.

1758 Frederick II defeated the Russians at Zorndorf (Aug.), halting the Russian advance toward Brandenburg.

1758 Prussians defeated by the Austrians at the Battle of Hochkirch (Oct.), but retained possession of Saxony and Silesia.

1759 Battle of Minden (Aug.); British and Hanoverians defeated a new French offensive in the west.

1759 British captured Quebec, in Canada, in a major victory over France (Sept. 13).

1759 Frederick II badly defeated by the Austrians at Kunersdorf (Aug.) and at Maxen (Nov.).

1759 British naval forces defeated French fleet in the Battle of Lagos, off Portugal (Aug. 7–18); headed off French invasion of England.

1759 French abandoned plans to invade Scotland after being defeated in the naval battle of Quiberon Bay, off Brittany (Nov. 20).

1760 British defeated (Jan. 22) French forces in India at the Battle of Wandiwash, Madras; most important battle of the war in India.

1760 Berlin occupied by the Russians (Oct.), but they were soon forced to withdraw.

1760 Prussians victorious (Nov. 3) over Austrians in bloody battle of Torgau; heavy losses ended fighting for the year.

1761 In India, the British were victorious (Jan.) in fighting at Pondicherry, the French stronghold in southern India.

1761 French defeated by the Prussians at Villinghausen (July 15).

1761 British ended aid to Prussia following accession of George III and the fall of W. Pitt (the elder).

1762 Spain entered war on the Austrian-French side, in accordance with the Family Compact.

1762 Czar Peter III succeeded to throne (Jan.) in Russia; an admirer of Prussian king Frederick, he moved to end hostilities with Prussia at a time when Prussia was near defeat.

1762 Treaty of St. Petersburg (May 5); war between Prussia and Russia ended; Sweden made peace with Prussia the same month.

1762 Frederick II defeated the Austrians at Burkersdorf (July 21) and Reichenbach (Aug. 16), recovering Silesia.

1762 British captured Spanish-held Havana, Cuba (Aug. 13), as they continued fighting in the colonies.

1762 Spanish captured fortress of Almeida (Aug. 25) in invasion of Portugal.

1762 Manila, in the Philippines, taken from the Spanish by the British (Oct. 5).

1762 Treaty of Fontainebleau (Nov. 3); preliminary peace between Britain and France.

1763 Treaty of Paris: Britain got French holdings in Canada, America, India, and elsewhere, as well as Spanish Florida; Spain got Cuba and Philippines back from Britain; Spain got Louisiana Territory from France (Feb. 10).

1763 Treaty of Hubertusberg: Prussia, Austria, and Saxony made peace, leaving Silesia in Prussian hands and confirming Prussian preeminence in Germany (Feb. 15).

Severini, Gino 1883–1966. Italian futurist painter. Influenced by both pointillist neoimpressionism and cubism, he was instrumental in gaining acceptance for futurism (q.v.) in Italy.

Severus, Flavius Valerius d. AD 307. Roman emperor of the West (AD 306–307). Named Augustus in the west by Galerius. He marched on Rome against Maxentius, whom he failed to defeat. Severus surrendered and later was executed.

Severus, Lucius Septimius ⟨Septimius Severus⟩ AD 146–211. Roman emperor (AD 193–211). Declared emperor by his legions, he successfully fought several rivals, subdued and annexed Mesopotamia, and used the army to increase imperial authority.

Sevier, John 1745–1815. American frontiersman and first governor of Tennessee (1796–1801, 1803–9). He was active in the American Revolution, represented North Carolina in Congress, and served as governor (1785–88) of the temporary western state of Franklin (q.v.).

Seville Spanish city (pop. 588,800) on the Guadalquivir River in southwestern Spain. A prosperous city under the Romans, Vandals, and Visigoths, it became a commercial and intellectual center under Moorish rule (712–1248). It was taken (1248) by Ferdinand III and became (15th–16th cents.) the main port for Spanish trade with the New World. It was superseded by its rival, Cádiz (17th cent.)

Seville, Saint Isidore of See Isidore of Seville, Saint

Sèvres, Treaty of Treaty (Aug. 10, 1920) between the Allies and the Ottoman Turks, concluded at Sèvres, France, after WW I. By its terms the Ottoman Empire was abolished and Turkey was forced to renounce all non-Turkish possessions. The Dardanelles were internationalized and demilitarized. Palestine and Mesopotamia became British mandates, Syria became a French mandate, and the Hejaz and Armenia became independent kingdoms. The treaty was rejected by the nationalists led by K. Atatürk and was superseded by the Treaty of Lausanne (q.v.) in 1923.

Seward, William Henry 1801–72. American Whig and Republican statesman and secretary of state (1861–69). An uncompromising antislavery politician, he failed to gain the 1860 Republican presidential nomination but was Lincoln's first Cabinet officer. He is known best for the purchase of Alaska from Russia (1867).

Seward's Folly See Alaska

Seychelles Republic (pop. 70,000) in the Indian Ocean consisting of about 85 islands. First settled by the French (18th cent.), the islands were taken by the British (1794), made a crown colony (1903), and became a republic within the British Commonwealth (1976).

Seydlitz, Friedrich Wilhelm, Freiherr von 1721–73. Prussian general. Under Frederick II he reorganized the Prussian cavalry and led it in a series of brilliant victories in the War of the Austrian Succession and the Seven Years' War.

Seymour, Edward, 1st duke of Somerset 1506?–52. Protector of England (1547–50). He was virtual ruler of England during the early minority of Edward VI. His moderate religious and land reforms led to his downfall.

Seymour, Horatio 1810–86. American politician. He was governor of New York (1853–55, 1863–65) and an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for president (1868) against U. Grant. As governor during the New York draft riots (1863) he attempted to conciliate the rioters, which led to his defeat for reelection (1864).

Seymour, Jane 1509?–37. Third queen of English king Henry VIII (m. 1536), former lady-in-waiting to Henry's two previous queens. She gave birth to his only son (who became King Edward VI) and died a few days later.

Seymour, Thomas, Baron Seymour of Sudeley 1508?–1549. English aristocrat. He held high military offices under King Henry VIII after Henry's marriage to his sister Jane Seymour and married (1547) Henry's widow, Catherine Parr. He tried to supplant his brother E. Seymour as protector of Edward VI but was eventually executed for treason.

Sforza, Carlo, Count 1873–1952. Italian diplomat, antifascist leader and minister of foreign affairs (1920–21, 1947–51). He negotiated the Treaty of Rapallo (1922). During B. Mussolini's rule, he lived in exile.

Sforza, Francesco I 1401–66. Italian mercenary. He married (1441) the daughter of F. Visconti, duke of Milan. After Visconti's death (1447), a republic was declared in Milan. Sforza gained control and became duke (1450–66), founding a dynasty that ruled Milan for nearly a century.

Sforza, Francesco II 1495–1535. Last Sforza duke of Milan, son of L. Sforza. He took possession of the duchy (1522) but was deprived of it three years later. Restored as duke (1529), he died without heir.

Sforza, Galeazzo Maria 1444–76. Duke of Milan (1466–76), successor to his father, Francesco I Sforza. He was noted for his cruelty and immorality, and was assassinated.

Sforza, Gian Galeazzo 1469–94. Duke of Milan (1476–80), successor to his father, G. Sforza, under the regency of his mother. The duchy was soon seized from him by his uncle, L. Sforza.

Sforza, Ludovico 1451–1508. Duke of Milan (1494–99), patron of L. da Vinci. Sforza took control of the duchy from his nephew Gian Galeazzo Sforza in 1480 and succeeded officially on his death (1494). He aided French king Charles VIII to invade Naples (1494), then helped to drive him out. He was overthrown by French king Louis XII.

Sforza, Muzio Attendolo 1369–1424. Italian mercenary, founder of the Sforza family. A farmer turned soldier of fortune, he served in the employ of both Naples and Milan. His son Francesco I Sforza became (1450) the first Sforza duke of Milan.

Shackleton, Sir Ernest Henry 1874–1922. English explorer. Shackleton made four record-breaking voyages to the Antarctic. In 1915, after his ship was crushed by ice, he made his way some 800 miles to South Georgia Island to organize a relief expedition for his men.

Shaftesbury, Anthony Ashley Cooper, 1st earl of 1621–83. English statesman. Shaftsbury supported Cromwell but later aided in the restoration of King Charles II. He supported the Test Act and the Popish Plot of T. Oates.

Shaftesbury, Anthony Ashley Cooper, 3d earl of 1671–1713. English philosopher. A pupil of J. Locke, he rejected rationalism and held that humans are endowed with a moral sense. His writings influenced later philosophers.

Shaftesbury, Anthony Ashley Cooper, 7th earl of 1801–85. English social reformer. As a member of the House of Commons (1826–85) he introduced the Coal Mines Act (1842) prohibiting women and children from underground work, sponsored schools and model tenements for the poor, and encouraged the work of F. Nightingale.

Shah Jehan ⟨Shah Jahan⟩ 1592–1666. Fifth Mogul emperor of India (*c*1628–58). Many great buildings, notably the Taj Mahal, were built during his reign.

Shakers Christian sect founded (*c*1747) as an offshoot of Quakerism and transplanted to America (1774) by Mother Ann Lee. She claimed to be the incarnation of God's feminine nature. Shakers believed in celibacy and communal sharing of property. More than 20 Shaker communities existed by around 1830, but the movement declined steadily thereafter.

Shakespeare, William ⟨Shakespere, ~⟩ 1564–1616. English poet and playwright, considered the greatest of all dramatists. Few biographical details of his life are certain. He was born in Stratford-upon-Avon; married Anne Hathaway (1582), who gave him three children; went to London, where he gained a reputation as a playwright and actor with the company the Lord Chamberlain's Men (by 1594); enjoyed sufficient prosperity to buy a house in Stratford (1597) and to become a partner in the Globe Theater (1599); and lived out his last years as a country gentleman in Stratford (from 1610). Other details of his life have long been a matter of wide speculation and controversy. Even authorship of the plays attributed to him has been questioned, and a few critics have claimed that Shakespeare's works were actually written by someone else (F. Bacon is often cited). But these issues aside, there is little doubt concerning the depth of understanding, mastery of character, eloquence of language, and dramatic intensity revealed in his plays. Although he is known best for his plays, Shakespeare wrote numerous sonnets, collected and published in 1609; two narrative poems, Venus and Adonis (1593) and The Rape of Lucrece (1594); and the love poem, The Phoenix and the Turtle (1601). Shakespeare enjoyed a wide reputation in his own time, but interest in his works declined in the 17th and 18th cents. The Romantic period (18th–19th cents.), however, marked the beginning of renewed appreciation of Shakespeare. Critical works by G. Lessing, S. Coleridge, W. Hazlitt, and many others helped establish Shakespeare's rightful place in literature. Among Shakespeare's many well-known plays are Hamlet, Macbeth, Romeo and Juliet, King Lear, The Comedy of Errors, A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Merchant of Venice, Julius Caesar, The Taming of the Shrew, Much Ado About Nothing, and All's Well That Ends Well.

Shakespere, William See Shakespeare, William

Shalmaneser I d. 1290 BC. Assyrian king. He extended Assyria's boundary northward and moved its capital from Assur to Calah, which he had founded.

Shalmaneser II See Shalmaneser III

Shalmaneser III ⟨Shalmaneser II⟩ d. 825 BC. Assyrian king (860–825 BC). He made war successfully on Babylonia and Israel and received tribute from King Jehu of Israel.

Shalmaneser IV See Shalmaneser V

Shalmaneser V ⟨Shalmaneser IV⟩ d. 722 BC. Assyrian king (727–722 BC). He fought King Hosea of Israel but died during the siege of the Israelite capital, Samaria. It was finally taken by his successor, Sargon II.

shamanism Ancestral religion of such Central Asian peoples as Mongolians, Kirghiz, Tungus, etc. It is based on belief in the powers of shamans, who heal the sick and are believed to communicate with and appease the gods through incantations, dreams, and visions. Shamanism is also found among the Eskimos and North American Indians.

Shams ud-din Muhammad See Hafiz

Shamyl *c*1798–1871. Muslim leader in the Caucasus. He conducted guerrilla warfare against Russian domination and allied himself with England and France in the Crimean War. After the war he was defeated and captured by Russia (1859).

Shang Chinese dynasty, also called the Yin. The Shang ruled northern China from *c*1766 to *c*1122 BC. It is the earliest Chinese dynasty to be historically verified by archaeological evidence and written inscriptions. The Shang period saw great advances in bronze casting, pottery, weaving, and agriculture. It appears that ancestor worship and human sacrifice were practiced and that Shang rulers had a highly organized system of government.

Shanghai A major seaport and the largest city (pop. 12,000,000) in China. Opened (1842) to the British as one of the first treaty ports accessible to Western nations, it rapidly became a commercial center. Occupied by the Japanese during WW II, it was returned to China (1945), and was occupied by the Communists (1949).

Shapley, Harlow 1885–1972. American astronomer. Shapley determined the size of the Milky Way and the sun's position in it. He also contributed to the fields of photometry and spectroscopy.

Shapur I ⟨Sapor I⟩ d. AD 272. Persian king (AD 241–272), successor to his father, Ardashir I. He strengthened the Sassanian Empire founded by his father. He captured Roman emperor Valerian at Edessa (AD 260) and imprisoned him, thereby further weakening the Roman Empire.

Shapur II ⟨Sapor II⟩ AD 309–379. Persian king (AD 309–379) from birth. He waged war against the Romans and defeated an invasion (AD 363) by Roman emperor Julian, who died in battle. Shapur received an advantageous peace from Julian's successor, Jovian, and gained control of Armenia.

Sharpsburg, Battle of See Antietam, Battle of

Sharrukin See Sargon

Shaw, George Bernard 1856–1950. Irish playwright, critic, and political pamphleteer, considered one of the great English playwrights. An outspoken Socialist, he revealed his concern for humanity in such plays as Mrs. Warren's Profession, Arms and the Man, Major Barbara, Pygmalion, and Saint Joan. His plays helped to revolutionize British theater. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in literature in 1925.

Shawano Indians See Shawnee Indians

Shawnee Indians ⟨Shawano Indians⟩ North American Indian tribe. Originally inhabiting the Ohio River valley, they migrated to several states before reuniting (18th cent.) in Ohio. Under Tecumseh (q.v.), they rose against encroachment on their lands by settlers, but were defeated at Tippecanoe (q.v.) and eventually resettled in Oklahoma.

Shawnee Prophet ⟨Tenskwatawa⟩ 1768–1837. Shawnee Indian mystic and leader, brother of Tecumseh. He led the Shawnee at the Battle of Tippecanoe (q.v.) in 1811.

Shay's Rebellion American insurrection (1786–87) led by Daniel Shays (1747?–1825). Massachusetts farmers, suffering because of the financial depression after the American Revolution, rose up in hopes of forcing the government to decrease taxes and issue paper money. The revolt was suppressed. Shays was condemned to death but was pardoned.

Sheba ⟨Saba⟩ Biblical country, located in southern Arabia. Its people, the Sabaeans, colonized Ethiopia (10th cent. BC). According to legend, in the same century, Balkis, queen of Sheba, made a visit to the court of Solomon.

Shechem ⟨Sichem⟩ Biblical city in Palestine, now the town of Nablus. It was the home of Jacob and the site of the tomb of Joseph.

Shelburne, William Petty Fitzmaurice, 2d earl of 1737–1805. English statesman. A supporter of W. Pitt, he attempted unsuccessfully to moderate England's course toward its American colonies. He concluded the Treaty of Paris (1783).

Shelley, Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin 1797–1851. English writer. The daughter of M. Wollstonecraft and wife of P. Shelley, she is known best as author of the classic novel Frankenstein.

Shelley, Percy Bysshe 1792–1822. English poet, one of the leading English Romantic poets. Expelled from Oxford for publishing The Necessity of Atheism (1811), he left his first wife (1814) and ran off to Europe with M. Shelley (née Godwin). There he wrote many of his greatest works, among them Prometheus Unbound.

Shenandoah Valley Valley in northern Virginia, running north to south between the Allegheny and Blue Ridge mountains. It was a strategic Confederate stronghold and source of supplies during the American Civil War (1861–65) and was the scene of many battles. In 1862, Confederate Gen. Stonewall Jackson, operating in the valley, repulsed troops seeking to reinforce Union Gen. McClellan outside Richmond, and thus contributed to the failure of the Union Peninsular Campaign (q.v.). Gen. R.E. Lee used the valley as an escape route after offensives against the North failed (notably after Gettysburg, 1863). During 1864, Confederate Gen. J. Early conducted highly successful operations in the valley. Subsequently in that year Union forces under Gen. P. Sheridan began a drive to take control of the valley, completed in 1865.

Shen Nung Legendary Chinese emperor, believed to have been born in 2800 BC. He was the second of China's mythical great emperors and is said to have taught the Chinese farming skills and to have established an agricultural society.

Shen Yen Huang Ti See Huang Ti

Sheraton, Thomas 1751–1806. English furniture maker. Sheraton's graceful furniture designs greatly influenced his age and are still popular today.

Shere Ali 1825–79. Emir of Afghanistan (1863–79). His succession was contested by family members, but he gained control with British assistance. Later he turned away from Britain and was defeated by the British in the second Afghan War (q.v.) in 1878.

Sheridan, Philip Henry 1831–88. Union general in the American Civil War. As commander of the Army of the Shenandoah (1864–65), he defeated Confederate Gen. J. Early and laid waste to the Shenandoah Valley. Early later successfully counterattacked, but Sheridan turned a possible Union disaster into a victory. In Apr., 1865, he cut off Gen. R. Lee's retreat at Appomattox, Virginia, forcing Lee to surrender (Apr. 9).

Sheridan, Richard Brinsley 1751–1816. English dramatist. Among his many plays are The Rivals and The School for Scandal. He entered Parliament (1780) and served in several Cabinet posts.

Sherman, John 1823–1900. American statesman. As US senator (1861–77, 1881–97) he played a role in Reconstruction after the American Civil War and in formulating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (q.v.) and the Sherman Silver Purchase Act (q.v.). He also served as secretary of the treasury (1877–81) under Pres. R. Hayes.

Sherman, William Tecumseh 1820–91. Union general in the American Civil War, noted for saying, "War is hell." A West Point graduate (1840), he resigned the army (1853), only to rejoin on the outbreak of the Civil War. He fought at the First Battle of Bull Run and afterward was made a brigadier general of volunteers. Transferred to Tennessee, he fought at Shiloh, in the Vicksburg and Chattanooga campaigns, and other battles (1862–63). Already a brigadier general in the regular army, Sherman became supreme commander in the West (Mar., 1864). He then conducted his successful Atlanta Campaign (q.v.) and, after capturing the city, began his devastating "March to the Sea" (Nov. 15).

Sherman Anti-Trust Act American law (1890), the first designed to prohibit trusts, monopolies, combinations, and restraint of trade on a national and international level. Supreme Court decisions curtailed its effectiveness until Pres. T. Roosevelt actively enforced it. The law was also strengthened by the Clayton Anti-Trust Act (1914).

Sherman Silver Purchase Act American currency law (1890) requiring the American government to buy set amounts of silver each month to be added to the national currency. The mandatory and excessive purchases of silver soon threatened to drain the nation's gold supply and led to the financial Panic of 1893. The act, and consequently the national policy of bimetalism, was repealed (Nov. 1, 1893) and the gold standard was restored.

Sherman's March to the Sea See American Civil War (1864–65)

Sherpas See Nepal

Sherwood, Robert Emmet 1896–1955. American playwright. His plays, among them The Petrified Forest, Idiot's Delight, and There Shall Be No Night, greatly influenced American drama. Sherwood was awarded four Pulitzer prizes (1936, 1939, 1941, 1949).

Sheshonk I *d. c*924 BC. Egyptian king (945–924 BC), founder of the 22d dynasty. Originally a mercenary commander, he usurped the throne, and conducted campaigns in Palestine, apparently in support of Jereboam.

Shidehara, Kijuro, Baron 1872–1951. Japanese diplomat and statesman. As foreign minister (1924–27, 1929–31) he followed a peaceful policy antagonistic to Japanese militarism. After WW II, he served briefly (1945–46) as prime minister.

Shih Huang Ti ⟨Ch'in Shi Huang Ti⟩ 255–210 BC. Chinese emperor (247/6–210 BC) who first unified the empire and built the Great Wall of China. Following his accession as king of the Ch'in Kingdom of northwestern China, he annexed six other Chinese kingdoms to create (221 BC) the Ch'in Empire. He thereupon abolished the old feudal order, divided his empire into 36 military districts, established a centralized administration, and instituted uniform standards in weights and measures, laws, and the written language. He was a builder and, in addition to the Great Wall, ordered construction of roads and canals. His struggle with the Confucian scholars (supporters of the old feudal order) led to the Burning of the Books (213 BC) and the eventual rise of the Han dynasty.

Shi'ites Muslim sect, one of the two major divisions of Islam, the other being the Sunni (q.v.). The Shi'ites originated in Persia as partisans of Ali, son-in-law of Muhammad, after the first Muslim Civil War. They opposed the Ummayad dynasty, supported by the Sunni. The Shi'ites believe that a Mahdi will appear at the millennium. Babism and Bahaism are outgrowths of Shi'ite beliefs. Shi'ism is the official religion of Iran and also has followers in India, Iraq, Yemen, Pakistan, and Oman.

Shiloh Biblical town in Palestine. It was the home of the prophets Eli, Ahijah, and Samuel; the sanctuary of the Ark of the Covenant; and the meeting place of the Israelites.

Shiloh, Battle of ⟨Pittsburg Landing, Battle of⟩ Battle (Apr. 6–7, 1862) of the American Civil War, near Pittsburg Landing in southwestern Tennessee. The second major battle of the war; it derives its name from Shiloh church nearby. Here Confederate forces under Gen. A. Johnston surprised the Union troops under Gen. U. Grant. Bloody fighting ensued, Johnston was killed, and each side suffered more than 10,000 casualties. Though both sides claimed victory, Confederate failure to completely route the Union has led historians to classify it as a Union victory.

Shimabara Rebellion Japanese insurrection (1637–38) in which the predominantly Catholic population of Shimabara rose against unjust taxation. More than 100,000 troops failed to quell the rebellion and a Dutch gunship had to be called in. The rebellion caused further Christian persecution and led Japan's leaders to adopt a policy of isolation.

Shimonoseki, Treaty of Treaty (Apr. 17, 1895) between China and Japan ending the First Sino-Japanese War. By its terms China, who had lost the war, accepted Korean independence and ceded Taiwan, the Pescadores islands, and Port Arthur and the Liaotung Peninsula to Japan. Japan subsequently returned Port Arthur and the Liaotung Peninsula after European protests.

Shinar Biblical region, located between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers and corresponding to southern Babylonia.

Shinran 1173–1262. Japanese Buddhist philosopher and religious reformer. He founded the True Pure Land sect, the largest Buddhist sect in Japan.

Shinto Indigenous religion of Japan which is more a way of life than a formal dogma. Its major divinities are Amaterasu, the sun goddess, and her brother Susanowo, the storm god, but all objects contain a holy spirit called kami. Ancestor worship and pilgrimages to shrines are important aspects of Shinto, which literally means "the way of the gods." The Japanese emperor was considered divine as a direct descendent of Amaterasu. This belief was promoted until 1946, when Emperor Hirohito disavowed his divinity.

Shipton, Mother English prophetess, believed to have been Ursula Southiel Shipton (1488–1561). She allegedly predicted events of King Henry VIII's reign and the date of the Great Fire of London (1666).

Shirpurla See Lagash

Shiva ⟨Siva⟩ The four-armed Hindu god of destruction. With Brahma (creation) and Vishnu (preservation), he is one of the three major gods of Hinduism.

Shivaji See Sivji

Shockley, William See Bardeen, John

shogun Military leaders who were the effective rulers of Japan from 1192 to 1867. Shogun was the title of the imperial military commander, and in 1192 the emperor appointed Minamoto Yoritomo shogun. Yoritomo gained control over the government, and in subsequent centuries the shoguns, as well as the warrior class they controlled, ruled Japan. The emperor was sovereign in title only. Under the shoguns, Japan remained locked in a rigid feudal system. The emperors did not regain power until the Meiji Restoration (1868), which marked the end of feudalism in Japan and the beginning of the movement toward modernization. The shogunate itself was hereditary and was held successively by the following families:

Kamakura shogunate (Minamoto family)	1192–1333
Ashikaga shogunate	1338–1578
Tokugawa shogunate	1603–1867

shogunate See also Bakufu

Sholes, Christopher Latham 1819–1890. American journalist and inventor. With Carlos Glidden and Samuel W. Soulé, he invented (1868) the first practical typewriter. The machine, with improvements, became (1874) the Remington typewriter.

Sholokhov, Mikhail Alekansdrovich 1905–. Russian author. He is known best for his trilogy of Russian life: The Silent Don, And Quiet Flows the Don, and The Don Flows Home to the Sea. He was awarded a Nobel Prize in literature in 1965.

Shore, Jane d. 1527? English mistress to King Edward IV. She had great influence, but after Edward's death, King Richard III forced her into humiliation and poverty.

Short Parliament Fourth English Parliament in the reign of King Charles I. Convened (Apr. 13, 1640) by Charles to provide aid for a war against the Scottish Covenanters, it refused to do so until the king had replied to its grievances. It was dissolved (May 5) and followed (Nov. 3) by the Long Parliament.

Shostakovich, Dmitri 1906–1975. Russian composer. He aroused controversy in Russia by following his own musical values, sometimes in conflict with those of Russian politics. He was renowned for his symphonies and piano and violin concertos.

Shreve, Henry Miller 1785–1851. American steamboat captain who played a major role in the opening of the Mississippi River to commercial trade. Shreveport, Louisiana, is named for him.

Shrewsbury, Charles Talbot, duke of 1660–1718. English statesman. He was one of the seven leaders to sign the paper (1688) inviting William of Orange to become English king in the Glorious Revolution. He also played a major part in securing the succession (1714) of the Hanoverian king George I.

Shrewsbury, John Talbot, 2d earl of See Castillon, Battle of

Siam See Thailand

Sian Incident Incident sparked (Dec. 12, 1936) by the arrest of Chinese Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek by one of his generals, Chang Hsueh-liang, at Sian, China. Chang demanded that Chiang end his war against the Communists and form a united front to fight the invading Japanese. Chiang agreed and was released (Dec. 25). The incident led to a Communist-Nationalistic coalition that lasted through WW II.

Sibelius, Jean Julius Christian 1865–1957. Finnish composer and nationalist. A Romantic composer, he brought worldwide attention to Scandinavian music with his symphonies and tone poems, among them Finlandia.

Siberia Region of the northern Asian USSR stretching from the Urals to the Pacific Ocean and noted for its wealth of natural resources and its harsh climate. It was the site (15th cent.) of the Tatar khanate, which was conquered for Russia (1581) by the Cossacks under Yermak. Russia continued to extend its control over Siberia in the 16th and 17th cents. but relinquished some of its territory to China by the Treaty of Nerchinsk (q.v.) in 1689. Settlement increased after construction (1891–1905) of the Trans-Siberian Railway. Siberia was the center of White Russian resistance (1918–20) to Bolshevik rule after the Russian Revolution. Large petroleum reserves have been found in Siberia and it has been greatly developed in the 20th cent.

Sibyl Mythical ancient Greek prophetess. Sibyls were said to have powers of divination and the ability to intercede with the gods on behalf of humans.

Sichem See Shechem

Sickingen, Franz von 1481–1523. German knight. A free knight, he aided the election of Charles V as Holy Roman Emperor and protected M. Luther and J. Reuchlin. He died fighting in the Knights' War.

Sickles, Daniel Edgar 1819–1914. American politician and Union general in the American Civil War. He fought in the Peninsular Campaign and at Antietam, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg. He served in Congress (1857–61, 1893–95).

Sicyon Ancient Greek city in the Peloponnesus northwest of Corinth. It rose to power (6th cent. BC) under Cleisthenes but was later dominated by Corinth or Sparta. It was noted for its artists and art schools.

Sicyon, Butades of See Butades of Sicyon

Siddons, Sarah Kemble 1755–1831. English actress. A member of the Kemble acting family, she was admired by both audiences and critics for her performances in such roles as Desdemona and Lady Macbeth.

Sidmouth, Henry Addington, 1st Viscount 1757–1844. English statesman. As prime minister (1801–04) he concluded the Treaty of Amiens with Napoleon. As home secretary (1812–21) he persecuted the Luddites and helped to bring about the Peterloo massacre (q.v.).

Sidney, Sir Philip ⟨Sydney, ~⟩ 1554–96. English author and courtier. Sidney was influential in the court of Queen Elizabeth I. He is known for his pastoral poems and his prose essay The Defense of Poetry.

Siege of See under names inverted, as in Orleans, Siege of Siegfried ⟨Sigfrid⟩ ⟨Sigurd⟩ German mythical hero of the Nibelungenlied. He killed the dragon Fafnir and became king of the Nibelungs.

Siegfried Line Line of fortifications built along Germany's western frontier in the 1930s. It corresponded to the French Maginot Line and succeeded in slowing down the Allied offensive in WW II.

Siena Italian city. A great commercial and banking center before the rise of Florence, it was noted for its artistic and architectural influence.

Siena, Saint Catherine of See Catherine of Siena, Saint

Sierra Leone West African republic (pop. 3,470,000) on the Atlantic Ocean. Its economy is based on agriculture and mining. First explored (15th cent.) by the Portuguese, it was a center for the British slave trade (17th and 18th cents.) until the trade was outlawed by the British (1807). It became a British protectorate (1896) and achieved independence in 1961.

Siete Partidas See Alfonso X

Sieyes, Emmanuel Joseph 1748–1836. French revolutionary statesman. He played a major role in the early years of the French Revolution, drafted the Declaration of the Rights of Man (q.v.), and later helped organize the coup d-état that overthrew the Directory.

Sigebert I d. 575. Frankish king of Austrasia (561–575). His reign was marked by nearly constant warfare with his brother Chilperic I. He defeated Chilperic but was assassinated by order of Fredegunde, Chilperic's wife.

Sigel, Franz 1824–1902. German-born American general. A leader of the Baden insurrections of 1848–49, he fled to America after their failure. He served as a Union general during the American Civil War.

Sigfrid See Siegfried

Sigismund 1368–1437. Holy Roman Emperor (1411–37, crowned 1433), last of the Luxemburg emperors. As Hungarian king (1387–1437) he persuaded Pope John XXIII to convene the Council of Constance (1414–17), which ended the Great Schism (q.v.). He revoked his guarantee of safe passage to J. Huss, who was condemned for heresy and burned. Huss's death led to the Hussite Wars (q.v.).

Sigismund I 1467–1548. Polish king (1506–48), successor to his brother Alexander I. His reign was marked by power struggles with the nobility and warfare with Russia.

Sigismund II ⟨Sigismund Augustus⟩ 1520–72. Polish king (1548–72), successor to his father, Sigismund I. He united Poland with Lithuania and Livonia.

Sigismund III 1566–1632. King of Poland (1587–1632) and Sweden (1592–99). Deposed in Sweden, he engaged in wars to regain his throne. He also invaded Russia and captured Moscow (1610–12).

Sigismund Augustus See Sigismund II

Sigurd See Siegfried

Sigurdsson, Jon 1811–79. Icelandic scholar and statesman. He edited many books of Icelandic literature and history. His efforts contributed to Denmark's granting of self-government to Iceland (1874).

Sikhs People of northwest India, followers of a religion founded (15th cent.) by Nanak. Fusing Hindu and Muslim beliefs, the Sikhs worship one God and employ meditation and exercise to attain the realization of God. They revere their guru (teacher) and accept as their only religious text the Adi Granth, largely a collection of hymns by the early gurus. They came to control much of the Punjab (18th cent.) but were defeated by the British in the Sikh Wars (q.v.) of the 19th cent.

Sikh Wars Two 19th-cent. wars between the Sikhs and the British. 1. The first Sikh war (1845–46) was sparked by a Sikh invasion into British India and culminated in the defeat of the Sikhs and British annexation of Kashmir. 2. The second Sikh war (1848–49) was caused by an uprising and resulted in a British victory and the annexation of the Punjab.

Sikorski, Wladyslaw Eugeniusz 1881–1943. Polish general and statesman. He fought in WW I, commanded in the Russo-Polish War (1920), and served as prime minister (1922–23). He headed (1939–43) the Polish government in exile during WW II.

Sikorsky, Igor Ivan 1889–1972. Ukrainian-born American aircraft engineer. He is noted for the development (1939) of the first successful helicopter.

Silas ⟨Silvanus⟩ Early Christian missionary. He accompanied the Apostle Paul on his second journey.

Silenus Ancient Greek forest god, companion to Dionysus. Part man and part horse, he was said to be often drunk, but was extremely wise.

Silesia European region situated largely in modern Poland but also in Czechoslovakia and East Germany. An industrial and mining center, Silesia was originally part of Poland. It passed to Bohemia (14th cent.), was divided, and was devastated during the Thirty Years' War, after which it passed to Austria (1648). Prussia gained control of much of the region in the Silesian Wars (q.v.). It came under increasing German influence (18th–19th cents.). Partitioned (1921) after WW I, it was seized by Germany in WW II. After the war, most of the region was restored to Poland.

Silesian Wars 1. The first Silesian War (1740–42) was fought between Prussia and Austria for possession of Silesia. It was begun by the invasion of Silesia by Prussian king Frederick II, in alliance with Bavaria, France, and Saxony. Austria was defeated, and by the Treaty of Breslau (1742) Prussia gained possession of much of Silesia. 2. The second Silesian War (1744–45) was begun by Frederick II, who crossed Saxony and invaded Bohemia. He captured Prague but was forced back into Saxony. The war was ended by the Treaty of Dresden (1745) between Austria and Prussia, and Frederick retained possession of Silesia. 3. See Seven Years' War.

Silk Road ⟨Silk Route⟩ Ancient trade route across Asia from the Roman Empire to China. Roughly the same route was followed by Marco Polo in his travels.

Silk Route See Silk Road

Silla, kingdom of Ancient kingdom of Korea which arose (1st–2d cent. AD) in southeastern Korea. With the kingdoms of Koguryo and Paekche, it was one of the three early Korean kingdoms and later unified the peninsula under native Korean rule for the first time in 670. An administrative bureaucracy, influenced by Chinese patterns, was set up, and Buddhism flourished. The Silla rulers were supplanted by the Koryo dynasty in 935.

Silvanus See Silas

Silva Xavier, José Joaquim da See Tiradentes Conspiracy

Silver Age Period in Roman literary history (AD 14–*c*130) following the Golden Age. It was characterized by the writings of Tacitus, Juvenal, Suetonius, Pliny the Elder and Pliny the Younger, and Seneca.

Simcoe, John Graves 1752–1806. British soldier and governor. Simcoe fought in the American Revolution and became (1792) the first lieutenant governor of Upper Canada.

Simeon ⟨Symeon⟩ Biblical patriarch, the second son of Jacob and Leah. He was the ancestor of the southernmost of the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

Simeon I d. 927. Bulgarian prince (893–925) and first czar of Bulgaria (925–927). Simeon warred successfully against the Magyars, Serbs, and the Byzantine Empire. His court became a center of culture.

Simeon II 1937–. Last czar of Bulgaria (1943–46), successor to his father, Boris III. Nominal czar under a regency, he went into exile when the monarchy was abolished.

Simeon Stylites, Saint d. AD 459? Syrian Christian ascetic. Simeon lived for thirty years atop a small, high pillar, from which he preached.

Simms, William Gilmore 1806–70. American writer, known for his popular historical romances about life in the South.

Simnel, Lambert 1477?–1534? Pretender to the English throne. Yorkists claimed that Simnel was Edward of Warwick and attempted unsuccessfully to overthrow King Henry VII (1487).

Simon, Théodore See Binet, Alfred

Simon Bar Cochba See Bar Kokba, Simon

Simon Commission British commission appointed (Nov., 1927) under the chairmanship of Sir John Simon (1873–1954) to study the working of the Indian constitution established in 1919. It was boycotted by the Indian National Congress for its "all white" composition, and its actions and conclusions aroused great hostility among Indian nationalists.

Simonides of Ceos *c*556–468? BC. Greek poet, known best for his epitaphs for the dead at Marathon of Thermopylae.

Simon Magus Biblical Samaritan. A sorcerer, he attempted to buy spiritual powers from the apostles of Jesus. From this comes the word "simony."

Simon of Cyrene Biblical figure. An onlooker during Jesus' crucifixion, he was obliged to carry the cross of Jesus.

Simon Peter One of the twelve apostles of Jesus. He was the first bishop of Rome, forerunner of the religious designation "pope." (See also Peter.)

Simons, Menno See Mennonites

Simpson, Sir George 1792–1860. Scottish-born Canadian explorer. Simpson explored Canada for the Hudson's Bay Company and made an overland journey (1841–42) across the northern part of the world.

Sims, William Sowden 1858–1936. American naval officer. He commanded US operations in European waters during WW I. With Burton J. Hendrick (1870–1949) he wrote the Pulitzer Prize-winning The Victory at Sea.

sin Violation of divine law. The concept of sin appears in various forms in several religions but is most highly developed in the Bible and in the teachings of Christianity.

Sin 1. Wilderness in the western Sinai through which the ancient Hebrews wandered. 2. Ancient Assyro-Babylonian god, father of Ishtar.

Sinai Peninsula in northeastern Egypt linking Africa with Asia. It was the scene of battles between Israel and Egypt during the Arab-Israeli Wars.

Sinaitic inscriptions Inscriptions carved on rocks in the Sinai Peninsula. They were discovered (1904–05) by Sir W. Petrie.

Sinan 1489?–1587? Foremost Ottoman architect, who designed and built more than 300 structures. He built the mosques of Suleiman I at Constantinople and Selim II at Adrianople.

Sinatra, Frank ⟨~, Francis Albert⟩ 1915–. American singer and actor. He first gained prominence in the 1930s, and became one of the country's best-known singers in the 1940s. His phenomenal popularity has continued.

Sinclair, Harry F. See Teapot Dome

Sinclair, Upton Beall 1878–1968. American writer and reformer. One of the muckrakers (q.v.), he is known best for his novel The Jungle, an exposé of the meat-packing industry. He was awarded a Pulitzer Prize (1943).

Singapore ⟨Republic of Singapore⟩ Small republic located at the tip of the Malay Peninsula. Originally a Malay city, it was destroyed by the Javanese (14th cent.). Sir T. Raffles refounded (1819) the city and under the British East India Company it became a major world port and naval base in the Straits Settlements. The British surrendered Singapore to the Japanese (1942) during WW II but retook the city (1945). It became self-governing in 1959, briefly joined the Federation of Malaysia (1963–65), and became an independent republic (Sept., 1965).

Singer, Isaac Merrit 1811–75. American inventor. He devised and patented (1851) the first continuous-stitch sewing machine. Although he lost a patent-infringement case (1854) to E. Howe, his company soon became the leading manufacturer of sewing machines.

Sinn Fein Irish Nationalist political party of Ireland, whose name means "We Ourselves." Originally a movement founded (1899) by A. Griffith, it sought to gain independence from England. It gathered momentum after the Easter Rebellion (1916) under the leadership of E. De Valera. After De Valera withdrew (1927) to enter the Dail of the Irish Free State, Sinn Fein declined in importance and eventually became the political arm of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Sinnott, Michael See Sennett, Mack

Sino-French War Undeclared war (1883–85) between France and China arising from French expansion into Vietnam. China claimed Vietnam as a protectorate, and after France declared a protectorate over Annam (1883), China sent troops to Vietnam. Soon defeated, China was forced (1885) to recognize French interests in Annam and Tonkin.

Sino-Japanese War 1. War (1894–95) between China and Japan over control of Korea. The Japanese, having a modern, well equipped army, easily invaded Shantung and Manchuria and forced the Chinese to sue for peace. By the Treaty of Shimonoseki (1895), the Chinese agreed to pay a large indemnity, to cede vast areas (including Taiwan) to Japan, to grant trade privileges to Japan, and to recognize the nominal independence of Korea. Japan emerged from the conflict as a major international power. 2. War (1937–45) between China and Japan. Following its occupation of Manchuria (1931–32), Japan pressed the Chinese for further concessions. The ongoing civil war between Chinese nationalists and Communists made it all but impossible to resist the growing threat of an invasion by Japan. By the Sian Incident (q.v.) in 1936, Nationalists and Communists agreed to form a common front against the Japanese, and in July 1937 hostilities broke out. Japan quickly occupied Peking and Tientsin, and soon after took Shanghai and the capital of Nanking. The Japanese continued their rapid advance over the eastern portions of China, taking cities and other strategic points while the Chinese pursued a scorched-earth policy and waged a bitter guerrilla war from within. China declared war on the Axis powers in 1941, after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and the fighting in China thus became part of WW II. In 1942–44, despite an increase in aid from the US and Britain and the diversion of Japanese forces to fighting elsewhere, the Chinese were unable to gain the initiative, though they slowed the Japanese advance and inflicted some serious defeats. In fact, it was not until the spring of 1945, just before the Japanese surrender, that the Chinese were able to mount a successful offensive.

Sinop Turkish seaport on the Black Sea. The destruction of an Ottoman fleet here (1853) by the Russians contributed to the outbreak of the Crimean War (1853–56).

Sino-Soviet Treaty Treaty (Aug. 14, 1945) between China and the USSR. Intended to deter Japanese aggression, it established a joint railway, a joint naval base at Port Arthur, and made Darien a free port.

Sintra, Convention of See Convention of Sintra

Sion See Zion

Sioux Indians ⟨Dakota Indians⟩ Confederation of American Indian tribes that inhabited large tracts of the Midwest from Lake Superior to beyond the Dakotas. The Sioux concluded several treaties with the US, but after complications following a treaty (1851) involving US acquisition of much of Minnesota, they rose and massacred settlers. Thus began a series of clashes against further encroachment on tribal lands continuing through the 1860s. In 1867 the Sioux moved to Dakota territory, but discovery of gold in the Black Hills (1867) led to further conflict and the Battle of Little Bighorn (q.v.). The last Sioux uprising ended in the massacre at Wounded Knee (q.v.) in 1890.

Siqueiros, David Alfaro 1898–1974. Mexican painter. His murals, such as March of Humanity and Third World, reflect his ardent socialism and are among Mexico's most celebrated works of art.

Siracusa See Syracuse

Siren One of several mythological Greek sea nymphs, half woman and half bird, who inhabited an island and lured sailors to destruction on its rocks by their singing. They were outwitted by both Jason and Odysseus.

Sistine Chapel Private papal chapel at the Vatican. Built (1473) by Pope Sixtus IV, it is celebrated for its ceiling paintings by Michelangelo.

Sistova, Peace of Treaty (Aug. 4, 1791) between Austria and Bulgaria, concluded at Sistova, Bulgaria. It adjusted mutual borders and returned Belgrade to Turkey.

Sisyphus Mythical Greek king, founder and ruler of Corinth. He was condemned by Zeus to spend eternity rolling a boulder to the top of a hill in Hades, only to see it roll down again.

Sitter, William de 1872–1934. Dutch astronomer. He advanced the theory of an expanding universe.

Sitting Bull d. 1890. American Indian leader. He led the Sioux in the Battle of the Little Bighorn (q.v.) in 1876. He surrendered (1881), spent his last years on a reservation, and was killed for allegedly resisting arrest.

Sitwell, Edith 1887–1964. English poet. Her poetry reveals a love of beauty and a sense of humanity's sufferings. Among her works are Clown's Houses, Street Songs, and The Canticle of the Rose.

Siva See Shiva

Sivaji ⟨Shivaji⟩ ⟨Grand Rebel⟩ 1627–80. Indian ruler, founder of the Maratha (q.v.) kingdom. He expanded his domains at the expense of the Mogul Empire.

Siward ⟨Siward the Strong⟩ d. 1055. Danish warrior and earl of Northumbria. He supported Edward the Confessor and later defeated Scottish king Macbeth.

Siward the Strong See Siward

Six, Les Group of early 20th-cent. composers who opposed the musical traditions of C. Debussy, C. Franck, and others. They were briefly influential.

Six Acts Acts adopted (Dec. 1819) by the British Parliament to suppress the radical movement for parliamentary reform in England. The acts followed the Peterloo massacre and greatly curtailed freedom of speech, press, and assembly.

Six Articles, Act of See Act of Six Articles

Six-Day War See Arab-Israeli War (Third)

Six Dynasties Name given to the period in China between the fall of the Han dynasty (AD 220) and the beginning of the Sui (581). The era was marked by political disintegration but such cultural advancements as the introduction of Buddhism and Taoism; medical and scientific study; and the use of coal, tea, and gunpowder. It was named after the six dynasties that ruled during the period: the Wu (AD 222–280), the Eastern Ch'in (317–419), the Liu-Sung (420–479), the Southern Ch'i (479–502), the Liang (502–557), and the Ch'en (557–581).

Sixteen Kingdoms Name applied to a group of dynasties, all but three non-Chinese, that ruled in northern China from AD 304–439.

Sixth Crusade See Crusade, Sixth

Sixtus IV 1414–84. Pope (1471–84), successor to Paul II. A patron of the arts, he built (1473) the Sistine Chapel. He deeply involved the papacy in political intrigues.

Sixtus V ⟨Peretti, Felice⟩ 1521–90. Italian-born pope (1585–90), successor to Gregory XIII. He made many administrative reforms, restored order in the Papal States, and did much rebuilding in Rome.

Sjahrir, Sutan 1909–66. Indonesian prime minister (1945–47). He negotiated the Linggadjati Agreement with The Netherlands, by which the Indonesian government was recognized and plans were made for a permanent state.

Skagerrak, Battle of See Jutland, Battle of Skelton, John 1460?–1529. English satirical poet. Tutor to Henry VIII, he wrote sharp verse satires on the morality and people of his day.

skepticism Philosophical position in which either specific knowledge or the ability to know is called into question. Skepticism has been an important aspect of philosophical thought since ancient times (Democritus and the Sophists). In modern times, D. Hume and I. Kant have advanced such theories.

Skinner, Burrhus Frederick 1904–. American psychologist and noted exponent of behaviorism (q.v.).

Skobelev, Mikhail Dmitreyevich 1843–82. Russian general. He fought brilliantly in the Russo-Turkish War (1877–78), figuring in the conquest of Russian Turkistan.

Skriabin, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich See Molotov, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich

Slater, Samuel 1768–1835. English-born American industrialist. Slater familiarized himself with English cotton-textile machinery and built a similar factory (the first in America) in Rhode Island (1790) from memory.

Slave Coast West African region where European slave traders procured most of their slaves. It includes parts of Nigeria, Dahomey, and Togo.

Slave dynasty First dynasty of the Delhi Sultanate in northern India. It ruled between 1209 and 1290 and was so named because its founder, Qutb-ud-Din Aibak, was once a slave.

slavery Age-old institution of involuntary servitude, now eliminated in nearly every part of the world. Mention of slavery has been found in writings of the Babylonians, Hebrews, Egyptians, and other ancient peoples and it was common among the Greeks and Romans. After the fall of Rome, slavery in the medieval European states was generally replaced by the feudal institution of serfdom. It continued in the Muslim states, however. European involvement in slavery was renewed in the 15th cent. with the beginnings of overseas exploration and colonization, and slaves were used mainly in colonial domains. The Portuguese took the first Negro slaves from West Africa in the 1440s, and in the 16th cent., Spain and England also began trading them (France, Denmark, and American colonials started in the 17th cent.). By the late 17th cent., the English dominated the slave trade. The prime market for slaves was in the New World colonies. The Spanish began importing large numbers of slaves into South America after native Indian slaves proved too rebellious. In North America the first slaves were introduced (1619) at Jamestown, Virginia, and, though slaves were later sent to other British colonies in the Americas, it was in the South that they became an integral part of the plantation economy. Active slave trade by European powers continued throughout the 18th cent. But by the beginning of the 19th cent., abolitionists were already mounting their campaign to bring about its end (see abolition).

Slavonia Region of northern Yugoslavia, historically united with Croatia. In 1918 it became part of Yugoslavia.

Slavophile Russian intellectual movement (mid-19th cent.). Slavophiles held that Russian culture was superior to European civilization. The movement declined after the Crimean War.

Slavs Largest ethnic group in Europe, today divided into three main branches: Western, including Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, and Wends; Southern, including Serbs, Croats, and others; and Eastern, including Great Russians, Ukrainians, and Belorussians. The Slavs are thought to have migrated from Asia to Eastern Europe (3d–2d millennium BC). They were then forced eastward beyond the Oder River to their present homelands (5th–6th cents.) by the expansion of the German states.

Slidell, John 1793–1871. US diplomat. Failure of the "Slidell Mission" in Mexico led to the Mexican War (q.v.). He also figured in the Trent Affair (q.v.).

Slim, William Joseph, 1st viscount 1891–1970. British field marshal. Slim commanded British forces in the reconquest of Burma from the Japanese during WW II.

Sloat, John Drake See Mexican War

Slovakia Historic region, now a Czechoslovakian constituent republic. Settled by Slovaks (c6th cent.), it became part of the Moravian Empire and was converted to Christianity (9th cent.) by saints Cyril and Methodius. The Magyars conquered Slovakia in 906, and it was ruled by the Hungarians until 1918, when it became part of Czechoslovakia. After the breakup of Czechoslovakia (1938), Slovakia declared its independence (1939) and became allied with Germany for protection. Czechoslovakia was reformed after WW II. The Czech and Slovak republics gained local autonomy under the 1968 constitution.

Sluis, Battle of ⟨Sluys, ~⟩ English naval victory (June 24, 1340) over France at the beginning of the Hundred Years' War. Fought near Bruges, the battle resulted in destruction of the French fleet and gave Edward III command of the English Channel for the next generation.

Sluter, Claus d. c1406. Flemish sculptor, noted for his sculptures on the tomb of Philip the Bold and at the Carthusian monastery of Champmol.

Sluys, Battle of See Sluis, Battle of Smetana, Bedřich 1824–84. Czech composer, considered the father of Czech national music. Among his noted works were The Moldau and the opera The Bartered Bride.

Smith, Adam 1723–90. Scottish economist and philosopher. Smith's famous book, Wealth of Nations (1776), greatly influenced economic theory. It argued for laissez-faire doctrines such as free trade and held that the "invisible hand" of individual competition would ultimately work to the public benefit.

Smith, Alfred Emanuel 1873–1944. American politician. The governor of New York (1919–20, 1923–28), he was the first Catholic to become a presidential candidate (1928) of a major party (Democrats). He lost to H. Hoover.

Smith, Edmund Kirby ⟨Kirby-Smith, Edward⟩ 1824–93. Confederate general. Smith fought at Bull Run, headed (from 1863) the Trans-Mississippi Department, and was the last general to surrender (May 26, 1865).

Smith, Gladys Mary See Pickford, Mary

Smith, Ian Douglas 1919–. Rhodesian politician. A white supremacist, he became prime minister in 1964 and unilaterally declared Rhodesia's independence (1965) from Britain. His white Rhodesian government subsequently resisted international pressures, including economic boycott, and ruled until 1980, when blacks came to power.

Smith, John 1580–1631. English colonist, a founder of Jamestown, Virginia (1607). Probably saved by the intervention of the Indian princess Pocahontas, he later married her and thus established friendly relations with the Indians.

Smith, Joseph 1805–44. American religious leader, founder of the Mormons (q.v.). Some of his religious views, especially those on polygamy, aroused hostility to Mormonism. He was killed by a mob.

Smith, Walter Bedell 1895–1961. American WW II general, Gen. D. Eisenhower's chief of staff (1942–45). He later served as ambassador to the Soviet Union, CIA director, and undersecretary of state.

Smith Act ⟨Alien Registration Act of 1940⟩ US act (June 29, 1940) requiring aliens to register and making it a federal offense to advocate the violent overthrow of the government. This provision was used to prosecute leaders of the American Communist party after WW II.

Smithson, James 1765–1829. English scientist. Smithson bequeathed his fortune to America for the purpose of founding the Smithsonian Institution (established 1846).

Smolensk, Battle of Two battles fought at this western Russian city. 1. Victory (Aug. 17, 1812) for Napoleon during his invasion of Russia in the Napoleonic Wars. He later vainly tried to rally his troops there during his retreat. 2. WW II battle (July-Aug. 6, 1941) in which the Germans captured the city during their invasion of the Soviet Union. Russian losses were 100,000 casualties and prisoners.

Smollett, Tobias George 1721–71. Scottish novelist, noted for such comic novels as The Adventures of Roderick Random, The Adventures of Peregrine Pickle and The Expedition of Humphrey Clinker.

Smoot, Reed 1862–1941. American politician, the first Mormon elected senator (1902). He opposed US entry into the League of Nations and coauthored the Hawley-Smoot Tariff (1930).

Smuts, Jan Christiaan 1870–1950. South African soldier and statesman. He fought the British in the Boer War but later was instrumental in forming the Union of South Africa (1910). He was prime minister (1919–24, 1939–48).

Smyrna Former name for Izmir (q.v.).

Snefru *d c*2589 BC. First Egyptian king (*c*2613–2589) of the 4th dynasty. Under his rule Egyptian mining and trade flourished, and government and administration were refined. The first true pyramid was built at Dahshur during his reign.

Snow, Charles Percy, Baron 1905–80. English author and physicist. As a novelist he is best known for his Strangers and Brothers series of novels, including The Masters and The Affair.

Snowden, Philip, 1st viscount 1864–1937. English statesman, a Laborite, and several times chancellor of the exchequer. He supported free trade and balanced budgets but was ousted with the Labour government (1931) during the Depression.

Sobhuza II See Swaziland

Sobraon, Battle of British victory in the first of the Sikh Wars in northwestern India. Some 25,000 Sikhs were defeated by a 15,000-man Anglo-Indian force. Sikh losses were 8,000 to 2,300 allied deaths.

Soccer War Brief war (July 14–30, 1969) between El Salvador and Honduras. Supposedly triggered by tensions over soccer matches between the two national teams, it actually resulted from resentment at the expulsion of Salvadoran immigrants from Honduras. About 2,000 soldiers and civilians, mainly Honduran, were killed.

social contract Agreement or bond by which human beings move from a state of nature to form society. This theory was first advanced by T. Hobbes and J. Locke.

Social Credit See Aberhart, William

social Darwinism Discredited 19th-cent. social philosophy based on the Darwinian theory of evolution. It held that human societies, like animal species, were subject to the law of "survival of the fittest." Chief exponents were British philosopher H. Spencer and American sociologist William Graham Sumner (1840–1910).

Social Democratic Party of Germany German political party. Founded (1863) as a Marxist workers' party, it became a formidable power in Germany during the early 1900s. It was suppressed (1933) by A. Hitler and reorganized after WW II. However, it was unable to successfully challenge the coalition of Christian Democrat and other parties until after 1959, when it eliminated Marxist ideology and broadened its appeal as a people's party. Since the 1970s the party has formed coalition governments in Germany under W. Brandt and H. Schmidt.

Social Gospel Movement in American Protestantism (late 19th–early 20th cent.) that sought to apply the principles of the Gospels to the social questions of the day. It advocated a shorter work week, better working conditions, the right to a living wage, the abolition of child labor, etc. The movement declined when organized labor took up many of its causes.

socialism Politico-economic doctrine. Socialism seeks to replace the competitive capitalist system with a cooperative society, in which means of production and distribution are owned either by the government or collectively by the people. A response to the hardships and social injustice bred by the Industrial Revolution, socialism dates primarily from the works of such thinkers as F. Babeuf, C. de Saint-Simon, C. Fourier, and R. Owen (18th-19th cent.).

Babeuf, sometimes called the first socialist theorist, sought to advance economic egalitarianism during the French Revolution and this gave rise to the revolutionary movement known as Babouvism. Saint-Simon postulated government control of the economy and industry, while Fourier and Owen believed in decentralizing society into small collectives. Experiments in socialism in the early 19th cent. included founding of utopian communes (notably Brook Farm and New Harmony) and L. Blanc's unsuccessful National Workshops (government financed, worker controlled) in France after the 1848 Revolution. New elements of class struggle and the necessity of revolution were added to Socialist thought by way of Marx's and Engels' Communist Manifesto (1848).

For the rest of the 19th cent. and into the early 20th, the doctrinal dispute over revolutionary socialism vs evolutionary socialism divided Socialists and ultimately brought about the permanent split between democratic Socialists (advocates of gradual change) and Communists (advocates of revolutionary change). The disputes were evident in the First and Second International (qq.v.), the revolutionary sentiment giving rise to anarchism and syndicalism (qq.v.) in the late 19th cent. Gradualists formed the Fabian Society (q.v.) in Britain and Social Democratic parties elsewhere in Europe. Though many other issues divided Socialists in the early 1900s, the triumph of the Bolsheviks in the Russian Revolution of 1917 resulted in the complete separation of revolutionaries (now Communists) from the Socialist movement. Thereafter, democratic Socialists gradually gained power in European countries (especially after WW II), notably in Britain (see Labour party), Germany (see Social Democratic party of Germany), and, in the 1980s, France. In the US, the Socialist party (q.v.) never managed to gain significant power.

Socialist Labor party American Socialist party established in Philadelphia (1876). Founded on Marxist principles, it opposed simple trade unionism. Under the vigorous leadership of D. De Leon, the party reached its zenith in the 1890s and declined thereafter.

Socialist party Former US political party advocating gradual transformation to a Socialist state in the US. Formed (1901) by a merger of the Social Democratic party and moderate elements of the Socialist Labor party, it reached its zenith in the years between 1910 and 1919, under the leadership of E. Debs. Debs ran for president in 1912 and again in 1920 while in prison for opposing US involvement in WW I. The party was seriously weakened (1919) when the radical wing defected to form the US Communist party. Later, during the 1930s, Pres. F. Roosevelt incorporated many of the party's reforms in the New Deal. Led by N. Thomas from the 1920s, the party declined steadily in subsequent years.

Socialist Revolutionary party Russian political party. Founded (1901) by a Populist coalition, it advocated a classless society and agrarian reform, and carried out political assassinations. It was suppressed (1922) by the Communists.

Social War ⟨Marsic War⟩ Rebellion (90–88 BC) by tribes in central and southern Italy against Roman rule. The tribes, including the Marsians, Samnites, Pelignians, and Lucanians, had been forced into alliance with Rome but did not enjoy the privileges of Roman citizenship. The Roman Marcus Livius Drusus proposed extending citizenship (91 BC), but the move was opposed by the Senate and he was assassinated. The tribes then rose in revolt (90 BC) and attempted to form a confederation (Italia) in opposition to Rome. Roman armies (Sulla was a commander) were unable to break the rebellion. It ended after citizenship was offered to all Roman allies and those tribes that ceased hostilities. Eight new gens (Roman tribes) were created and the new citizens were rapidly assimilated. The Italian peninsula was thus unified under Roman control.

Society of Friends ⟨Quakers⟩ Protestant Christian sect that rejects both formal creed and the need for priests, holding that they interfere with an individual's communion with the Holy Spirit ("inner light"). Established (c1647) in England under the leadership of G. Fox, the Quakers refused to take oaths, to bear arms, to pay religious tithes, or otherwise conform to the English church. They were persecuted until laws regarding religious toleration were passed (late 17th cent.) and, under W. Penn, founded the Quaker colony in Pennsylvania (1681). The Friends were early and zealous supporters of abolition of slavery and actively support pacifism. The American Friends Service Committee (founded 1917) is noted for its support of humanitarian causes.

Society of Jesus ⟨Jesuits⟩ Roman Catholic religious order, founded (1534) by St. Ignatius of Loyola and approved (1540) by Pope Paul III. Missionary work, notably by St. Francis Xavier in the East, began shortly after founding of the order.

The Jesuits played an important role in the Catholic Reformation and also established many schools in Europe. However, they aroused opposition from European monarchs, partly because of their loyalty to the pope, and by 1773 Pope Clement XIV was forced to dissolve the order. Pope Pius VII reinstituted it (1814).

Socinianism Anti-Trinitarian Christian sect founded by Laelius Socinus (1525–62) that flourished in Poland from the 1550s. Socinianists believed Jesus was merely a man, divine only in his function and not his nature. They suffered persecutions and disbanded by the early 17th cent.

Socinus, Laelius See Socinianism

Socrates 470?–399 BC. Greek philosopher, one of the great philosophers of ancient Greece, whose life and teachings have made a profound impression on Western thought. The son of Sophroniscus, a sculptor, he is thought to have worked in sculpture before turning to philosophy. He fought in the second Peloponnesian War and was noted for his courage and strength. Socrates spent much of his life in the public places of Athens conducting discussions, or dialogues, with his fellow citizens. He developed a mode of inquiry known as the dialectic, or Socratic method, by which the truth of a given statement is tested by a series of questions. His purpose was to gain knowledge, the basis of virtue, or right conduct. He became a well-known figure in Athens and was the subject of mockery in Aristophanes' play The Clouds. Eventually he was accused of impiety and corruption of youth and was sentenced to death. With his disciples by his side, he committed suicide by drinking hemlock. Socrates wrote nothing, and our knowledge of his life and teachings comes mainly from the writings of his disciple Plato, notably the Apology, Crito, and Phaedo.

Sodom ⟨Sodoma⟩ Biblical city. Sodom, along with Gomorrah, was destroyed by God because of its wickedness. Lot and his family were spared.

Sodoma See Sodom

Sofia Bulgarian capital city (pop. 976,000) and its commercial and cultural center. Founded 2d cent. AD by the Romans, it was ruled by the Byzantines and Ottoman Turks before becoming capital of Bulgaria in 1879.

Soissons, Battle of See Clovis I

Solemn League and Covenant Agreement (1643) between the Scots and the English Parliamentarians during the English Civil War. By it, the Parliamentarians endorsed Presbyterianism for all of England and Scotland in exchange for Scottish military help against the royalist armies. The agreement was never implemented.

Soleri, Paolo 1919–. Italian-American architect and city planner, known for his futuristic designs of densely populated cities, planned to minimize environmental disturbance.

Solferino, Battle of Bloody battle (June 24, 1859) fought during the Italian Risorgimento (q.v.), or war of unification. King Victor Emmanuel II of Piedmont (later of all Italy) and his allied French forces met the Austrian forces in this indecisive battle in northern Italy. The heavy losses (totaling nearly 30,000 dead) moved the French to a settlement, which resulted in Emmanuel's acquisition of Lombardy.

Solidarity See Poland, 1980–82

Solomon Great king of ancient Israel (973–933 BC), successor to his father, David, and renowned for his wisdom. He encouraged trade and thereby brought on a period of great commercial prosperity. He also built lavish cities, constructed the first Temple at Jerusalem, and (traditionally) was the author of the Song of Solomon, proverbs, and other biblical writings.

Solon *c*638–*c*559 BC. Athenian statesman who laid the foundations of democracy in Athens. Elected archon (chief magistrate) (594 BC) amid a social crisis caused by the widespread indebtedness of the populace to the aristocracy, he instituted his economic reforms called Seisachtheia. He ended the practice of securing loans with personal liberty (serfdom resulted from failure to pay), annulled all debts contracted in this manner, restricted exports, and reformed the currency. He also reformed the Athenian constitution, allowing all freemen to participate in the assembly for the first time. The power of the Areopagus (q.v.) was limited and a council of Four Hundred was created to represent the propertied class. Solon also introduced a new law code to replace the harsh Draconian Code.

Solzhenitsyn, Aleksandr Isayevich 1918–. Russian writer and a leading dissident against the excesses of the Soviet system. He was exiled to the West in 1974. He received the Nobel Prize in literature, 1970.

Somalia ⟨Somali Democratic Republic⟩ Independent state located on the Horn of Africa and bordering the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean. Its capital is Mogadisho. Key dates in the history of Somalia include:

7TH–10TH CENT. Arab and Persian traders established in region.

16TH CENT. Ottoman Turks ruled north, Sultan of Zanzibar ruled south.

1862 France established coaling station near Djibouti; Italy settled Eritrea.

1870s–84 Egyptian occupation.

1884 British occupied region formerly held by Egyptians.
1887 Britain established protectorate over its territory.
1888 British and French reached agreement on borders of their respective territories in region.
1889 Italy established protectorate in central region.
1936 Italian Somaliland joined to Ethiopian provinces to form Italian East Africa.
1941 WW II; Britain captured and ruled entire area (until 1950).
1950 Italian Somaliland separated from British territory; came under Italian control as UN trust.
1960 Britain and Italy granted their respective sectors independence; regions joined as Republic of Somalia (July 1).
1964–67 Clashes with Ethiopia and Kenya as Somalis sought to unify large Somali populations in those countries with Somalia.
1969 President Abdi Rashid Ali Shermarke assassinated; parliament replaced by Supreme Revolutionary Council.
1969– Maj. Gen. Muhammad Siad Barre in power; he remained in office into the early 1980s.
1976 Barre dissolved council; named Somali Socialist party only legal political party.
1977 Somalia supported Ethiopian rebels in Ogaden region; led to break with Soviets, who supported the Ethiopian central government.
1978 Somalia defeated in war with Ethiopia; US supplied food, relief.
1979 New constitution adopted; People's Assembly elected.
1980 US given bases in Somalia in return for military and economic aid.

Somaliland Region located on the eastern coast of Africa and extending from the equator north to the Gulf of Aden. It is divided between Afars and Issas (formerly French Somaliland) and Somalilia (formerly British Somaliland and Italian Somaliland).

Somers, John ⟨Sommers, Baron⟩ 1651–1716. English Whig jurist who presided over the framing of the English Bill of Rights (1689) and who was a trusted adviser to William III.

Somerset, Edmund Beaufort, 2d duke of d. 1455. English statesman and general. Largely responsible for loss of English territory in France during the Hundred Years' War, he nevertheless held a favored position in Henry VI's government. This provoked the Yorkists and helped precipitate the Wars of the Roses.

Somme, Battle of Two major offensives on the Western Front in northeastern France. 1. First ~: Allied French and British offensive (July-Nov., 1916), fought to relieve German pressure on Verdun. Allied generals D. Haig and J. Joffre launched repeated attacks against German defensive positions, commanded by P. Hindenburg and E. Ludendorff, and gained some territory, but at great cost. Losses were 500,000 Allied troops; 450,000 Germans. 2. Second ~: German offensive (Mar. 21-Apr. 4, 1918) and nearly successful attempt to break through Allied lines. Commanded by Gen. E. Ludendorff, the Germans launched a series of major attacks that ultimately drove Allied troops back some 40 miles. Gen. F. Foch, named Allied commander during the battle, halted the offensive by Apr. 4. Losses, nearly 200,000 Allied troops; 180,000 Germans.

Sommers, Baron See Somers, John

Somoza, Anastasio 1896–1956. President of Nicaragua (1936–47, 1951–56). As head of the army (from 1933) he ruled the country even when out of office. He established his family's rule in Nicaragua that lasted until 1979.

Sonderbund League (1845) of Catholic cantons of Switzerland. It was formed as a "defense league" against the anti-Catholic movement in the other cantons but was deemed a "separatist league." A brief civil war ensued and ended with the league's defeat in 1847.

Songhai, Empire of Ancient African empire in the Niger valley of the Sudan. Founded by Berbers (*c*700) and converted to Islam, the empire reached its height under Askia Muhammad I (*c*1493–1528) with Timbuktu its chief city. The invasion of Moorish troops from Morocco (1591) destroyed the empire.

Songhay See Songhai

Sonni 'Ali d. 1492. Ruler (1464–92) of the Songhai Kingdom. He began the expansion of Songhai domains until he controlled much of the Sudan, including Timbuktu (taken 1468).

Sonnino, Sidney, Baron 1847–1922. Italian diplomat who promoted Italy's entry into WW I and who negotiated the secret Treaty of London (q.v.) in 1915.

Sons of Liberty Activist patriotic organizations formed in the American colonies from *c*1765. They organized protests against unpopular British laws such as the Stamp Act. The same name was adopted (1864) by a Copperhead (q.v.) organization seeking a negotiated peace with the Confederacy.

Soong, T. V. 1894–1971. Chinese financier and Kuomintang finance minister (1928–31, 1932–31). He reorganized China's financial systems and renegotiated foreign agreements to restore China's control of its tariff rates.

Soong Ch'ing-ling ⟨Sun Yat-sen, Madame⟩ 1890–. Chinese political leader. The sister of T.V. Soong and wife (m. 1914) of Sun Yat-sen, she was active in the Kuomintang until the Communists were expelled.

Soong Mei-ling ⟨Chiang Kai-shek, Madame⟩ 1898–. Chinese political leader. A member of the Soong family, she married Chiang Kai-shek (1927) and helped win Western support for the Kuomintang.

Sophia 1630–1714. Electress of Hanover, and granddaughter of James I of England. Her son became George I of England by the Act of Settlement (q.v.).

Sophia Alekseyevna 1657–1704. Regent of Russia (1682–89), daughter of Czar Alexis. She ruled during the minority of her brother Ivan V and half-brother Peter I (Peter the Great).

Sophocles *c*496–*c*406 BC. Greek tragedian who is ranked with his contemporaries Aeschylus and Euripides as one of the greatest tragic poets. Born a patrician, he was a general and statesman. He made several innovations in Greek drama and wrote over 120 plays. His surviving works include Antigone, Electra, Trachiniate, Philoctetes, Oedipus at Colonus, and the most famous, Oedipus Rex.

Sophists Greek philosophical school that flourished from the 5th cent. BC. Skeptical about the possibility of knowing truth, the Sophists opposed philosophical doctrine and instead taught the art of rhetorical persuasion. Protagoras was the first prominent Sophist.

Soranus fl. 1st-2d cent. AD. Ancient Greek physician, an authority on gynecology, obstetrics, and pediatrics. His writings were influential through the 15th cent.

Sorel, Agnes *c*1422–50. French mistress (1444–50) to Charles VII, the first woman to be officially recognized in that capacity in France.

Sorel, Georges 1847–1922. French philosopher, a leading advocate of revolutionary syndicalism (q.v.). He wrote Reflections on Violence.

Soter ⟨Demetrius⟩ See Demetrius I

Soubirous, Marie Bernarde See Bernadette, Saint

soul Spiritual essence or principle that, united with the body, makes up the living human being and, in some beliefs, is part of animals, plants, and even inanimate objects. The nature of the soul and belief in its immortality are major elements in many of the world's religions.

Soulé, Pierre 1801–70. French-born American politician. As US minister to Spain, he joined with J. Buchanan and John Y. Mason (1799–1859) in writing the controversial Ostend Manifesto (q.v.).

Soule, Samuel W. See Sholes, Christopher Latham

Soulouque, Faustin Élie ⟨Faustin I⟩ 1785–1867. Haitian dictator. A former slave and soldier, he was elected to the presidency (1847) and made himself emperor (1849–59).

Soult, Nicolas 1769–1851. French marshal. Under Napoleon, he commanded French forces in the Peninsular Campaign and was chief of staff at Waterloo. He later served royalist governments and brought about the French conquest of Morocco.

Sousa, John Philip 1854–1932. Noted American bandmaster and composer. He conducted the US Marine Band and composed many popular marches, including Stars and Stripes Forever.

Sousa, Martim Affonso de 1500?–64. Portuguese admiral. He founded the first Portuguese settlement in Brazil (1532) at São Vincente.

South, the US region, comprising the southeastern and south central states. Traditionally, the Mason-Dixon line has been the dividing line between North and South and until recent times marked political, social, and economic differences; it contributed to friction and divisiveness between the two regions. See also individual states; Confederacy; American Civil War.

South Africa, Republic of Republic located at the southern tip of Africa. The national capital is Pretoria; the legislative capital is Cape Town. South Africa was first settled by the Dutch, whose descendants, the Boers, developed the Afrikaner language and culture. British settlement and influence increased from the 17th to 19th cent. As a result, the Boers migrated north and east to found Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State. All eventually were incorporated, after the Boer War (1899–1902), into the Union of South Africa, which became the independent Republic of South Africa in 1961. Key dates in the history of South Africa include:

1652 Jan van Riebeeck established supply post at Cape of Good Hope for the Dutch East India Company; first permanent European settlement in South Africa.

17TH–18TH CENT. Descendants of Dutch settlers developed Afrikaner society and culture in region; established new farms and settlements inland.

1815 Cape Colony passed to British control by Congress of Vienna.

1835–43 Great Trek, migration of Boers away from British-controlled territory; Piet Retief, Andres Pretorius, and others led the Boers north and east beyond the Orange River.

1843 British annexed Natal, territory settled by Boers (northeast of Cape Colony).

1852 Boers established independent republic of Transvaal.

1854 Boers established independent republic called the Orange Free State.

1856 Transvaal became known as the South African Republic.

1860s–70s Discovery of diamonds (1867) in Orange Free State and gold (1886) in southern Transvaal led to great influx of British to region and resulting friction with Boers; Britain annexed the Transvaal (1877), but restored its independence in 1881.

1886 Johannesburg founded.

1894 British South Africa Company defeated natives in Matabele War.

1895–1896 Leander Starr Jameson led Jameson Raid into Transvaal in attempt to spur uprising of British settlers (Uitlanders) against Boers; raid supported by Cecil Rhodes, prime minister of Cape Colony; raid failed but ultimately contributed to outbreak of Boer (South African) War.

1899–1902 Boer War (South African War) fought between the Boers and British; Boers defeated; Transvaal and Orange Free State made British colonies.

1909 South Africa Act united British colonies into Union of South Africa (Sept. 20).

1910–19 L. Botha in office as first prime minister of the Union of South Africa.

1912 African National Congress Party organized to oppose European domination.

1914–18 Union of South Africa joined Allies in WW I; suppressed revolt (1915) of Boers against support of Britain; occupied (1915) German South-West Africa, which became a League of Nations mandate under South African control after the war.

1919–24 Jan Christiaan Smuts in office as prime minister.

1924–39 J.B.M. Hertzog, leader of the pro-Afrikaner Nationalist party, in office as prime minister; government passed numerous laws advancing segregation of the different racial groups in South Africa.

1939–48 J. Smuts again prime minister; led South Africa into WW II on Allied side despite pro-German sentiment among many Boers; came under fire by Nationalists over his "liberal" policies; UN opposed to South Africa's racial policies.

1945 South Africa joined the UN.

1948–54 D. Malan in office as prime minister; established apartheid policies.

1958–66 H. Verwoerd prime minister.

1966–78 B. Vorster in office as prime minister.

1974 UN declared its authority over South-West Africa, renamed Namibia; South Africa resisted move; unsuccessful attempt made to expel South Africa from the UN.

1974 South Africa suspended from participation in UN General Assembly.

1976 10,000 black students rioted (June) in Soweto, near Johannesburg.

1976 Black homeland of Transkei granted independence by South African government.

1977 Steven Biko, a leading opponent of apartheid, died (Sept. 12) of injuries suffered in prison; death led to renewed protests against South Africa's racial policies.

1977 Government issued (Oct.) new restrictions on political freedoms of blacks; activists arrested and black organizations banned.

1977 Black homeland of Bophuthatswana granted independence by South African government.

1978 Prime Minister B. Vorster resigned; denounced UN plan for independence of Namibia.

1978 Prime Minister Pieter Willem Botha in office; remained in power in the early 1980s.

South Africa Act British act (effective May 31, 1910) that created the Union of South Africa by uniting the British possessions of Cape, Natal, Transvaal, and Orange River. The act also provided a constitution and its provisions established white supremacy there.

South African War See Boer War

Southampton, Henry Wriothesley, 3d earl of 1573–1624. Soldier and patron of W. Shakespeare, who dedicated Venus and Adonis and The Rape of Lucrece to him. Southampton participated in Essex's revolt against Elizabeth I (1601).

Southampton, Thomas Wriothesley, 1st earl of 1505–50. English statesman. He negotiated a treaty between Henry VIII and Holy Roman Emperor Charles V, and was made lord chancellor (1544–47). He supported Henry's antipapal measures but remained a Catholic.

Southampton, Thomas Wriothesley, 4th earl of 1606–67. English nobleman. One of Charles I's close advisers during the English Civil War, he became lord high treasurer (1660–67) during the Restoration.

Southampton Insurrection Slave insurrection (Aug., 1831) in Southampton County, Virginia. Led by a rebel slave, N. Turner, who believed he had a divine calling to liberate his brothers, it was quickly suppressed by federal troops.

South Carolina State of southeastern US (pop. 3,119,200), the 8th state. Explored by the Spanish, it was first permanently settled by the French (1562). The English claimed the region in 1629, and Charles II granted it to eight noblemen (1663). North and South Carolina were organized as separate colonies (1713), and in 1729 it became a royal province. During the American Revolution a number of important battles were fought there, and during the American Civil War, South Carolina was the first state to secede (1860). It was readmitted in 1868. The constitution was adopted in 1895.

Southcottians See Sabbatarians

South Dakota North central state of the US (pop. 690,200), the 40th state. Explored by the French in the mid-18th cent., the area was acquired by the US in the Louisiana Purchase (1803). It was crossed by Lewis and Clark (1804–6). Fur posts were established in spite of trouble with the Sioux Indians, and farmers began to settle the region in the 1850s. It became part of the Dakota Territory in 1861 and the discovery of gold in the Black Hills (*c*1874) brought a new influx of settlers. South Dakota became a state and adopted its constitution in 1889.

Southeast Asia Treaty Organization ⟨SEATO⟩ Alliance created by a treaty signed (Sept. 8, 1954) by the US, Australia, France, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines, Thailand, and Britain. It was intended to bolster the region's defenses after the French withdrawal from Indochina. The Vietnam War disrupted the alliance and it held its final joint exercises in 1976.

Southern Sung See Sung

South Sea Bubble Rush of speculative investment (1720) in the South Sea Company, a trading company founded (1711) in England by R. Harley. The end of the War of the Spanish Succession was expected to result in the company's gaining a monopoly on trade with Spain's American colonies, but the treaty of 1713 produced only slightly advantageous terms. With George I as its governor, the company next proposed to take over the British national debt (1720). This brought a rush of speculative investment; company share prices rose from 128.5 to 1,000 pounds in a matter of months. The speculative bubble finally burst in Sept., 1720, bringing the collapse of banks and ruination of thousands of investors.

South-West Africa ⟨Namibia⟩ Mandate of South Africa, located in the extreme southwestern portion of Africa on the Atlantic Coast. Its capital is Windhoek. The area was claimed by the Portuguese, Dutch, and British before becoming a German colony. South Africa gained control of the area in 1915. Key dates in the history of South-West Africa include:

15TH CENT. Portuguese discovered region.

18TH CENT. Portuguese, British, and Dutch explored region.

mid-19TH CENT. British and German missionaries arrived.

1884 Region made a German protectorate.

1904–08 Nama and Herero tribes revolted; Germans put down the revolt, in which thousands were killed.

1908 Diamonds discovered; Europeans began immigrating to South-West Africa.

1915 WW I; South African forces, led by Louis Botha and Jan Christiaan Smuts, captured land from Germany.

1920 Treaty of Versailles made territory a South African League of Nations mandate.

1921–22 South Africa crushed Nama revolt.

1946 UN General Assembly rejected South Africa's application for incorporation of the area; asked to make trusteeship application instead.

1947 Smuts, prime minister of South Africa, announced that South-West Africa would continue to be administered under mandate; refused to make region UN trust territory.

1949 Region granted representation in South African parliament as step toward annexation.

1951 UN-South African negotiations over status of South-West Africa ended in failure.

1951–52 South African delegate boycotted UN General Assembly.

1966 UN General Assembly terminated old League of Nations mandate.

1968 Area renamed Namibia.

1971 International Court ordered South Africa to end its control of South-West Africa; South Africa refused.

1974 UN ordered South Africa to turn South-West Africa's government over to native Namibians.

1975 South Africa proclaimed itself willing to grant Namibian independence, but refused to deal with South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO).

1977 South Africa agreed to negotiate with SWAPO.

1978 South Africa agreed to Namibian independence after period of transition; Marthinus Steyn named to head interim government.

1980 Windheek established as capital.

Soutine, Chaim See expressionism

Souvanna Phouma 1901–. Laotian statesman. Of royal descent, he was frequently premier during the years of civil war from 1951. Forced to the right by the gains of the Communist Pathet Lao, he relied heavily on US aid during the Vietnam War years. Nevertheless the Communists took control in 1974–75.

soviet Council and basic elective political unit of the modern Soviet Union's government. Dominated by the Communist party, soviets are arranged in a hierarchy ranging from local to national jurisdiction and are charged with legislative and executive functions. The first soviets were organized by rebels during the 1905 revolution; during the 1917 revolution the soviets, formed in all of Russia's major cities, rivaled the Russian Provisional Government for power. By taking control (1917) of the powerful Petrograd and Moscow soviets, the Bolsheviks took command of the revolution and ultimately all Russia.

Soviet Republic of Hungary Short-lived Communist government of Hungary that ruled after WW I (Mar. 21–Aug. 1, 1919). After initial successes against the invading Czechs and Romanians, Communist premier B. Kun was driven out of Hungary, making way for a counterrevolutionary government.

Soviet Union See Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Spaak, Paul Henri 1899–1972. Belgian statesman and Socialist. The Belgian foreign minister at various times from 1938 until his death, he served as premier (1938–39, 1946, 1947–50) and was first UN General Assembly president (1946).

space exploration The age of space exploration began in 1957 with the launching of the first artificial sattelite, Sputnik, by the Soviets. Many other "firsts" were recorded in subsequent years as the US and the Soviets engaged in what became known as the "space race." Both nations struggled to gain the lead (and world prestige) on this new frontier. During the 1960s the race focused on landing a man on the moon and in 1969 the US achieved that goal. Enthusiasm for the space race disappeared in the years following the manned moon missions (partly because of the costs). In the 1970s space exploration was carried forward by unmanned space probes sent to the far planets in the solar system (Mars, Jupiter, Saturn). The major advance of the early 1980s was the successful launch of the US space shuttle Columbia, the first reusable spacecraft. Key events in space exploration include:

1957 Russians launched Sputnik, inaugurating the Space Age (Oct. 4).

1958 US launched Explorer 1, its first satellite (Jan. 31); Van Allen radiation belts discovered.

1959 Soviet Luna 2 became first spacecraft to make hard landing on the moon (Sept. 12).

1959 Luna 3, Soviet space probe, flew around moon and sent back first pictures of the dark side of the moon (Nov.).

1961 Y. Gagarin, a Russian, became the first man to travel in space; orbited earth inside Vostok I for over an hour (Apr. 12).

1961 Alan Shepard, Jr., became first American in space (May 5), aboard Mercury 3.

1961 Vostok 2; Russia's Gherman Titov made the first space flight lasting more than one day (Aug. 6–7).

1962 Mercury 6; John Glenn became first American to orbit the earth (Feb. 20).

1962 Mariner 2, US space probe, passed by Venus (Dec. 14); sent back scientific data.

1962 Communications satellite Telstar launched by US; provided television pictures between Europe and America (July 1).

1963 Vostok 6; Russia's Valentina Tereshkova became first woman in space (June 16–17).

1965 Aleksei Leonov, Soviet cosmonaut aboard Voskhod 2, became first man to "walk" in space (Mar. 18).

1965 Gemini 4; Edward White became first American to "walk" in space (June 3–7).

1966 Luna 9, Soviet space probe, made first soft landing on moon (Jan. 31).

1966 Venera 3, Soviet space probe, reached Venus (Mar. 1).

1966 Gemini 8; first docking of two spacecraft in outer space (Mar. 16–17).

1966 US space probe, Surveyor 1, made soft landing on moon (June 2).

1966 Pioneer 7, US space probe, launched into orbit around the sun (Aug. 17).

1968 Apollo 8; Frank Borman, James Lovell, and William Anders orbited the moon, sending back pictures of the lunar surface (Dec. 21–27).

1969 Venera 5, Soviet space probe, landed on Venus; sent back scientific data (May 16).

1969 Mariner 6, US space probe, passed by Mars (July 31); television pictures and data sent back to earth.

1969 Apollo 11; US astronauts Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin, Jr., and Michael Collins on historic manned moon-landing mission (July 16–24); Armstrong became first man to set foot on the moon (July 20).

1969 Apollo 12; second lunar landing made by Charles Conrad, Richard Gordon, and Alan Bean (Nov. 14–24).

1970 Apollo 13 moon mission (Apr. 11–18) marred by exploding oxygen tank; astronauts returned safely.

1970 Unmanned Soviet moon probe, Luna 16, completed moon landing and return (Sept. 24).

1970 Unmanned Soviet moon probe, Luna 17, landed on moon (Nov 17).

1971 Apollo 14; Alan Shepard, Jr., Stuart Roosa, and Edgar Mitchell made third US moon landing (Jan 31–Feb. 9).

1971 Soyuz 10 mission; Soviet cosmonauts completed in-space docking with space station, Salyut (Apr. 24).

1971 Soyuz 11 successfully completed (June 7) in-space docking with Salyut; three Soviet cosmonauts found dead in capsule after reentry (June 30).

1971 Apollo 15; fourth manned mission to the moon (July 26–Aug. 7); David Scott, Alfred Worden, and James Irwin aboard.

1971 Mariner 9, US space probe, became first to orbit Mars (Nov. 13); sent back close-up pictures of Mars.

1971 Mars 2, Soviet space probe, passed by Mars (Nov. 27); capsule sent down to surface.

1972 Apollo 16 moon mission (Apr. 16–27); US astronauts stayed over 71 hours on moon; Charles Duke, Thomas Mattingly, and John Young aboard.

1972 Apollo 17; Eugene Cernan, Ronald Evans, and Harrison Schmitt made sixth moon mission (Dec. 7–19); stayed 75 hours on last Apollo moon mission.

1973 Soviets landed unmanned moon vehicle, Lunokhod 2, on moon (Jan. 16).

1973 Salyut 2, Soviet orbital workshop in space (Apr. 3–28).

1973 First US orbiting space station, Skylab 2, launched into space; Skylab damaged during flight (May 25–June 22).

1973 US unmanned space probe, Pioneer 10, passed close to Jupiter (Dec. 3); designed to escape solar system (1986).

1973–74 US Skylab 4 mission (Dec. 16–Feb. 8); last of Skylab series.

1974 Mariner 10, US space probe, passed by Venus (Feb. 5); continued to Mercury.

1974 Mariner 10, US space probe, reached Mercury (Mar. 29).

1974 US Pioneer 11 space probe passed by Jupiter en route to Saturn (Dec. 3).

1975 US Apollo 18 and the Soviet Soyuz 19 linked up in orbit around the earth (July 17–19).

1976 US Viking 1 space probe landed on Mars; photos from surface sent back to earth (July 20).

1976 US Viking 2 space probe landed on Mars (Sept. 3).

1977–78 Soviet cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 27 returned to earth after setting 96-day space endurance record (Dec. 10–Mar. 16).

1979 US Voyager 1 space probe passed by Jupiter; photographs of moons sent back to earth (Mar. 5); continued to Saturn.

1979 US Pioneer 11 space probe passed by Saturn; transmitted scientific data on planet (Sept. 1).

1980 US Voyager 1 passed by Saturn (Nov. 12); sent back valuable scientific data and pictures of Saturn's rings; continued to Uranus (1986).

1981 Soyuz 35; Soviet cosmonauts set record of 185 days in space (Apr. 9–Oct. 11).

1981 World's first reusable spacecraft, the US space shuttle Columbia, completed its first flight (Apr. 12–14).

1981 US Voyager 2 passed by Saturn; sent back valuable scientific data (Aug. 25); continued to Uranus (1986).

1981 US space shuttle Columbia returned to earth after completing half of scheduled second mission (Nov. 14).

1982 Columbia successfully completed its third voyage (July 4).

space shuttle See Columbia

Spain ⟨Spanish State⟩ Country located in Western Europe and occupying the Iberian Peninsula (with Portugal). Its capital is Madrid. The early history of the modern Spanish state begins with the Reconquista (reconquest, 11th–15th cent.), in which Spanish Christians drove the Muslims out of the Iberian Peninsula. Spain remained divided between rival kingdoms until the marriage (1469) of King Ferdinand II and Isabella I began the process of unification by bringing together the two largest kingdoms, Aragon and Castile. Ferdinand and Isabella sponsored Columbus' voyage to the New World (1492) and in the next century Spain gained control over most of South America. The vast riches in gold that came out of these colonies helped make Spain the leading European power during the 16th cent. Toward the end of that century, however, Spanish power underwent a decline. By the early 19th cent. its South American colonies were lost in wars for independence. In the 20th cent., Spain was torn by a bloody civil war (1936–39), which brought Gen. F. Franco to power (1939–75). Franco restored order and brought about a measure of economic prosperity. Key events in the history of Spain include:

12TH–11TH CENT. BC Phoenicians established colonies on the peninsula (Cadiz, Tartessus).

11TH–5TH CENT. BC Basques and Iberians occupied Iberian Peninsula.

6TH CENT. BC Celts invaded Iberian Peninsula.

3D CENT. BC Carthaginians, led by Hamilcar Barca, conquered most of the peninsula; established Cartegena as capital.

3D CENT. BC–5TH CENT. AD Roman occupation of Spain; Rome gained control of Spain from Carthage following the Second Punic War.

AD 409 Alans, Suevi, and Vandals invaded Spain.

AD 412–419 Visigoths invaded Spain, forcing out Vandals (who invaded North Africa).

AD 419–711 Visigothic kingdom of Toulouse dominated the Iberian Peninsula; Christianity and Roman culture spread.

711 Muslims, led by Tarik, invaded Spain from North Africa; by 719 conquered all but extreme northern part of Spain, where Christians established kingdom of Asturias (*c*718).

756 Abd ar-Rahman I established the Umayyad dynasty in Muslim Spain, after the Abbasid line seized power in the Empire of the Caliphate.

778 Spanish March (later called Catalonia) created in northern Spain by Charlemagne out of lands he conquered from Muslims.

866–911 Alfonso III ruled Asturias; greatly extended his domains in wars against Muslims.

905 Independent kingdom of Navarre founded in north.

912–961 Abd ar-Rahman III reigned in Muslim Spain; period marked by cultural flowering; Muslim Spain created a caliphate by Abd ar-Rahman (929).

932 Castile founded as an independent kingdom.

999–1027 Alfonso V gained control of León from the Moors, ruled as king.

1000–35 Sancho III reigned as king of Navarre; briefly united northern Spain under his rule; at his death, Navarre partitioned into kingdoms of Navarre, Aragon, and Castile.

1008–31 Fourth Muslim Civil War; led to elimination of Umayyad caliphate in Spain; Muslim domains broke up into petty kingdoms.

1065–1109 Alfonso VI reigned as king of Castile and León; El Cid active; Alfonso extended Christian domains to Toledo, only to be driven north by Muslim Almoravides.

1086 Muslim Almoravides invaded Spain and seized power; later conquered by Almohades.

1143 Portugal's independence from Spain recognized by Treaty of Zamora.

1145–51 Muslim Almohades invaded Spain and took control over Muslim domains.

1195 Almohades decisively defeated Alfonso VIII of Castile at the Battle of Alarcos.

1212 Alfonso VIII defeated the Muslims in Battle of Navas de Tolosa; Christian reconquest of Spain nearly complete; only Granada remained in Muslim control.

1230 Christian kingdom of Castile united with León; Spain dominated by two great kingdoms, Castile in the west and Aragon in the east.

1238 Kingdom of Granada formed by Muslims.

1340 Battle of Rio Salado, a major victory for Christians over Muslims.

1469 Marriage of Ferdinand II of Aragon and Isabella I of Castile; marked beginning of unification of Spain; though Ferdinand and Isabella each ruled separately, process of centralizing authority begun.

1478 Spanish Inquisition established by King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella; T. de Torquemada, Grand Inquisitor, became notorious for his use of torture and execution.

1492 King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella conquered Granada, last Muslim stronghold; Jews expelled from Spain to promote religious unity.

1492 Columbus discovered the New World for Spain; marked beginning of period of colonialism by European powers.

1494 Treaty of Tordesillas signed (June 7) with Portugal; provided for division of newly discovered lands in Americas, Africa, and Asia.

1494–1559 Italian Wars for control of Italy; Spanish emerged victorious after years of sporadic warfare; gained southern Italy (Kingdom of Naples) and Milan.

16TH CENT. Spanish "Golden Age"; Spain ranked as the leading European power throughout much of the century; expansion of Spanish domains in the New World and tremendous influx of gold provided the base for this power.

1502 Persecution of Muslims in Spain began.

1504 Isabella died; Ferdinand began struggle to gain control of Castile; opposed by Juana (mentally infirm) and her husband Philip.

1506–16 Ferdinand, as regent, gained control of Castile; ruled both kingdoms jointly.

1509–11 Spanish victorious in campaigns against Muslims in North Africa.

1512 Ferdinand acquired southern part of kingdom of Navarre; northern part under French hegemony.

1516–56 Charles I reigned; first of the Hapsburg kings of Spain and first king of united Spain.

1516–1700 Hapsburgs ruled in Spain.

1519–56 Charles I became Holy Roman Emperor Charles V; vast Spanish domains joined with those of Hapsburg Holy Roman Empire; Charles V thus controlled a great and unwieldy family empire.

1519–22 Magellan, in Spanish service, commanded first exploratory voyage around the world; voyage completed by J. Cano, in command after Magellan's death (1521).

1520–21 Revolt of the comuneras; revolt sparked by Charles V's attempts to centralize his authority in Spain.

1556–98 Philip II reigned as king of Spain; inherited Mediterranean territories, Spanish Netherlands, and overseas empire; an absolutist, Philip vigorously supported Catholicism and the Inquisition.

1559 Treaty of Cateau-Cambresis ended Italian Wars to Spain's advantage.

1567 Netherlands rebelled against Philip's attempts to impose royal authority and Inquisition there; in subsequent war for independence, northern part of Spanish Netherlands won independence as United Provinces.

1571 Battle of Lepanto; Spanish forces joined allied fleet that defeated the Ottoman Turks in a signal naval battle.

1580 Portugal united with Spain by Philip following struggle over succession.

1588 Spanish Armada, formed to invade Protestant England, defeated by English and stormy seas; marked beginning of Spain's decline as a European power.

1589–98 Spain interfered in the Wars of Religion in France.

1598–1621 Philip III reigned.

1609 Christian Moors (Moriscos) exiled from Spain.

1618–48 Thirty Years' War in Europe; fighting between Spain and France continued to 1659.

1621–65 Philip IV reigned.

1640 Portugal regained its independence from Spain after a successful revolt.

1640–59 Province of Catalonia rebelled to maintain autonomy.

1659 Peace of the Pyrenees; ended hostilities stemming from the Thirty Years' War; established border.

1665–1700 Charles II reigned as last Spanish Hapsburg king; Spain's power continued to decline.

1667–68 War of Devolution, war with France over the Spanish Netherlands.

1672–78 Third Dutch War; Spain lost Franche-Comte and territories in Flanders to France.

1689–97 War of the Grand Alliance; Spain joined this general war against French king Louis XIV.

1700 Charles II, just before his death, named Philip V, a Frenchman of the House of Bourbon, as his successor.

1700–46 Philip V reigned.

1700–1868 Bourbon line ruled in Spain (except 1808–13).

1701–14 War of the Spanish Succession; Philip successfully defended his succession, though by the Peace of Utrecht the Spanish Netherlands and Spanish Mediterranean domains passed to Austria; Gibraltar, captured (1704) by British, remained in British hands.

1718 Spain joined the Quadruple Alliance.

1733 Family Compact formed between the Bourbon kings of France and Spain.

1733–38 Spain supported Poland in War of the Polish Succession.

1740–48 War of the Austrian Succession.

1756–63 Seven Years' War; by Treaty of Paris ending war, Spain lost Florida and gained Louisiana Territory.

1759–88 Charles III reigned; considered an enlightened despot, he instituted administrative reforms.

1767 Jesuits exiled in attempt to establish state's supremacy over church.

1783 Treaty of Versailles, after the American Revolution; Spain, which had sided with the American colonials against Britain, regained Florida.

1788–1808 Charles IV reigned.

1792–1802 French Revolutionary Wars; Spain at first warred against (1793–95) and was defeated by France; later joined France in War of the Oranges (1801), in which Portugal was conquered.

1800 Spain ceded Louisiana Territory to France.

1803–15 Napoleonic Wars; Spain was invaded (1808) and occupied by French in Peninsular War. Spain's South American colonies used opportunity to begin movement for independence.

1808 Revolt of Aranjuez (Mar.); sparked by Prime Minister M. Godoy's pro-French policies; resulted in King Charles' abdication.

1808 Charles IV abdicated (Mar. 19); Ferdinand VII succeeded him.

1808 Bayonne Conference (Apr. 6); Napoleon forced Ferdinand to abdicate; Napoleon subsequently named his brother Joseph king.

1808–13 Joseph Bonaparte reigned as king; Spanish resisted his rule, aiding British in the Peninsular War.

1810–26 Wars of independence in South America; Spain lost its colonies there as the independence movement spread throughout Spanish New World colonies.

1812 First national Cortes met at Cadiz in unoccupied Spain; liberal constitution drawn up.

1814–33 Ferdinand VII reigned; restored after the French were driven out, he rescinded the liberal constitution and instituted conservative, reactionary policies that bred liberal revolt.

1819 Transcontinental Treaty concluded between Spain and US; Spain ceded Florida and the Oregon country to US; US recognized Spanish sovereignty in Texas.

1820–23 Liberal revolution, led by Col. Rafael Riego, failed; French intervened on behalf of the Spanish monarchy.

1833 Salic Law abolished by Ferdinand VII to allow his daughter Isabella to succeed.

1833–68 Isabella II reigned; her succession marked beginning of dynastic struggle with Carlists.

1834 Estatuto Real, royal charter, granted by Isabella; less liberal than 1812 constitution.

1834–39 First Carlist War.

1868 Military revolt; growing liberal sentiment and disaffection with Isabella led to proclamation of revolution (Sept. 18) by military officers; government forces were defeated soon after and Isabella was deposed (Sept. 29); provisional government set up.

1869 Constitutional monarchy established by the Cortes.

1870–73 Amadeus reigned as king.

1873 Amadeus abdicated in the face of opposition and increasing political problems.

1873 Spanish Republic established; brought down (1874) by Carlist War.

1873–76 Second Carlist War.

1874–85 Alfonso XII reigned, following restoration of the monarchy.

1874–1931 Bourbon line again ruled in Spain.

1876 New constitution adopted; provided for bicameral legislature.

1886–1931 Alfonso XIII reigned; Spain was governed under the regency of his mother, Maria Christina, until the early 1900s.

1898 Spanish-American War; Spain lost Cuba and the Philippines to the US.

1912 Spanish Morocco established as a protectorate after agreement with France defining spheres of influence in Morocco.

1914–18 WW I; Spain remained neutral.

1921 Spanish military defeat (July) at Anul, in Morocco; thousands of Spanish soldiers slaughtered by Moroccan rebel, Abd el-Krim; caused political crisis in Spain.

1923 Military coup (Sept. 13) followed widespread social and political unrest; Primo de Rivera established dictatorship (1923–30).

1930 Rivera forced to resign by mounting opposition to his regime; period of unrest followed his resignation.

1931–1939 Second Spanish Republic, established after Alfonso XIII was deposed.

1931–36 N. Alcala Zamora, leader of provisional republican government, served as first president of the Spanish Republic; term marked by outbreaks by increasingly radical factions on both the conservative and liberal republican sides.

1934 Catalonia proclaimed independence; revolt put down by government.

1934 Unsuccessful uprising by miners.

1936–39 Spanish Civil War; Gen. F. Franco won control of Spain with aid of Italian Fascists and German Nazis.

1939–75 Franco ruled Spain as dictator; opposition suppressed and Falange made only legal political party; church and landed aristocracy restored to favor.

1939–45 WW II; Spain remained nominally neutral.

1942 Cortes reestablished.

1953 Spain signed agreement with US providing for US bases in Spain.

1955 Spain admitted to UN.

1956 Spanish Morocco made part of independent Morocco.

1966 New constitution issued by Franco, following period of mounting unrest; introduced liberal reforms, including relaxed censorship, direct election of some members of the Cortes, and religious freedom.

1968 Spanish Equatorial Guinea granted independence.

1972 Gen. Franco named Prince Juan Carlos as his successor (to become king).

1973 Franco resigned as premier; retained post as head of state.

1973 Premier Carrero assassinated.

1975 Juan Carlos assumed power (Oct. 30) as head of state; Franco seriously ill.

1975 Franco died (Nov. 20).

1975 King Juan Carlos I succeeded Franco as ruler of Spain (Nov. 22).

1976 Political parties legalized.

1977 Diplomatic relations reopened with the Soviets after nearly 40 years.

1977 Communist Party legalized.

1977 First free parliamentary elections held (June) since 1936; Democratic Center coalition victorious.

1978 New constitution providing for constitutional monarchy approved by voters.

1979 Catalonia and Basque provinces granted home rule.

1981 Civil Guardsmen seized the Parliament (Feb. 23) in an abortive coup attempt, which ended the following day.

1982 Socialists won a majority in the elections, bringing them to power in Spain.

1982 Spain became a member of NATO.

Spangenberg, August Gottlieb 1704–92. German-born American religious leader, founder of the Moravian church in America (1740).

Spanish-American War War (Apr.-Dec., 1898) between the US and Spain. Spain's harsh measures against rebels in Cuba became, in the US, the subject of inflammatory newspaper articles, which aroused American public sentiment for war. It reached a fever pitch after the USS Maine (Feb. 15, 1898) was sunk in Havana Harbor. Spanish involvement was never proved but relations between the US and Spain broke down. Although Spain called (Apr. 10) for a cessation of hostilities in Cuba, US Pres. W. McKinley asked Congress for and received (Apr. 11) authority to intervene. Spain declared war (Apr. 24) and the US reciprocated (Apr. 25). On May 1, a US fleet under G. Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet at Manila Bay in the Philippines. In Cuba the major conflict came in the Battle of Santiago (q.v.), in which the Rough Riders under L. Wood and T. Roosevelt fought the Battle of San Juan Hill (July 1) and a US fleet destroyed the Spanish fleet in Santiago Harbor (July 3). In the Philippines, US forces occupied Manila (Aug. 12) a day after signing an armistice. The war was officially ended by the Treaty of Paris (Dec. 10, 1898). By its terms, the US gained control of Cuba, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines in return for an indemnity of $20,000,000. The war established the US as a world power.

Spanish Armada (Invincible Armada) Great Spanish war fleet, formed (1588) by King Philip II to invade England and put an end to Protestant rule there (under Elizabeth I). The fleet, under command of the Duke of Medina-Sidonia (1550–1615), consisted of about 130 ships. It was anchored at Calais when the English sent fire ships into the anchorage and forced it to scatter. The slow-moving Spanish ships, now out of formation, became easy prey for the English force of 197 smaller and more maneuverable warships and other vessels under the command of C. Howard (of Nottingham). The Armada escaped the English but was further ravaged by storms on the return to Spain. Only half the ships completed the journey and the destruction of the Armada marked Spain's decline as a naval power.

Spanish Civil War War (1936–39) between republican (leftist) and nationalist (rightist) forces in Spain that brought Gen. F. Franco to power in 1939. With the establishment of the Second Spanish Republic in 1931, moderate republicans (liberals, moderate Socialists) gained power. In the first, unsettled years of the republic they were opposed by the nationalists, then consisting of the aristocracy, royalists, the church, military and fascists. However, extremist factions on both sides came to the fore and, after civil war broke out (1936), they played a major role in the continuing struggle. The republican faction was split by conflicts between Communists, anarchists, and radical Socialists. These disputes ultimately contributed to their downfall, despite considerable aid provided by the Soviets. The nationalists, on the other hand, were quickly unified under the leadership of Gen. Franco and were supplied with men and material by Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany. The war devastated Spain, and some 750,000 were killed. Key events in the civil war include:

1931 Monarchy of King Alfonso XIII fell; Second Spanish Republic proclaimed (Apr.).

1931 Republican constitution adopted by the Cortes (legislative assembly) (Dec. 9).

1932 Abortive uprising by royalist faction of the military (Aug. 10); Gen. José Sanjurjo took Seville before rebels were defeated.

1932 Catalonia proclaimed its autonomy (Sept. 25); other local separatist movements arose, weakening republican government.

1933 Nationalists gained majority in elections; liberal reforms negated.

1934 Catalonia unsuccessful in revolt for independence; revolt by Communists put down (Oct.).

1936 Leftist Popular Front won Cortes elections (Feb. 16); nationalists began to consolidate against it.

1936 Spanish Civil War began (July 17–18) when Spanish army, led by Gen. F. Franco, revolted in Morocco; nationalists revolted in Spain.

1936 Nonintervention Pact signed (Aug.) by 27 nations, including Italy, Germany, and Soviets; pact all but ignored by Italy, Germany, and Soviets.

1936 Franco became head of nationalist revolutionary state (Oct. 1), aided by Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

1936 Nationalists besieged (Nov.) Madrid; International Brigade (largely Communists) supported republicans.

1937 Málaga fell to Italian troops (Feb. 8).

1937 International Brigade and republicans repulsed nationalists at the Battle of Guadalajara, outside Madrid.

1937 Franco organized (Apr.) fascist Falange and other rightist groups under his command.

1937 German air bombing (Apr.) caused massive destruction and many deaths at Guernica.

1937 Marxists revolted (May) in Barcelona; moderate Socialist premier Largo Caballero ousted; Socialist Juan Negrin led new republican government.

1937 Bilbao, last republican stronghold in the north, fell to the nationalists (June 18).

1937 Republicans won the Battle of Teruel (Dec. 19) during a short-lived offensive; Franco retook Teruel (Feb.).

1938 Nationalist forces split republican territories in two (Mar.–June).

1938 Republicans won Battle of Ebro, but failed to press their advantage (July 24).

1939 Nationalist offensive in Catalonia (Dec.–Jan.); Barcelona fell to Franco (Jan. 26) after heavy fighting; nationalists established control of Catalonia.

1939 Britain and France recognized Franco regime.

1939 Military coup (Mar. 6); Negrin's republican government overthrown; new government sought to end war; Communists rebelled and were defeated; republicans' peace overtures rejected by nationalists.

1939 Nationalists captured Madrid (Mar. 27–28).

1939 Republicans surrendered; civil war ended (Mar. 28).

Spanish Guinea See Equatorial Africa

Spanish Inquisition See Inquisition

Spanish Main Name (from the 16th cent.) of the coastal region of northern South America and Central America and adjacent Caribbean waters during Spanish colonial times. This region was famous as a haven for buccaneers who raided Spanish treasure fleets.

Spanish March Name of the region in northeast Spain established by Charlemagne in 801 after he conquered it during war against the Muslims. It is part of modern Catalonia.

Spanish Marriages, Affair of the See Affair of the Spanish Marriages

Spanish Netherlands See Netherlands, Spanish and Austrian

Spanish Sahara Former overseas province of Spain, in northwestern Africa. Spain claimed the region as a protectorate in 1884 and gradually expanded the territory in the 20th cent. It was given up by Spain in 1975 and divided between Mauritania and Morocco.

Spanish Succession, War of the A war (1701–14) fought in Europe to determine the succession to the Spanish throne on the death of Spanish King Charles II. (Related fighting in the American colonies was known as Queen Anne's War [q.v.].) French king Louis XIV, seeking to greatly enhance French power on the Continent, supported the accession of his grandson Philip of Anjou. This was opposed by England, which feared French political and economic domination of Europe, and by Holy Roman Emperor Leopold I, who championed the claims of his son, Archduke Charles. A third claimant was Bavarian Prince Joseph Ferdinand. Attempts to find a negotiated settlement began after the War of the Grand Alliance (1689–97) with the First and Second Partition treaties. They failed after the death of Charles II and the accession of Philip as Philip V. England then formed the Grand Alliance against France and the war began. Most fighting occurred outside Spain. Key events in the war include:

1698 First Partition Treaty named Bavarian Prince Joseph Ferdinand successor in Spain; France and Holy Roman Empire were to receive territories as compensation; treaty opposed by Spain and nullified by death (1699) of Joseph Ferdinand.

1700 Second Partition Treaty; Austrian archduke Charles (later Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI) named heir in Spain; France would receive Milan, Naples, and Sicily in compensation; opposed by Holy Roman Emperor Leopold I.

1700 Spanish king Charles II named Philip of Anjou as his successor; Charles died; France abrogated the Second Partition Treaty and supported Philip's accession (1700) as Philip V.

1701 Britain, alarmed at the union of the French and Spanish crowns and consequent enormous growth of French power, formed the Grand Alliance with the Holy Roman Empire and The Netherlands; France and Spain allied with Bavaria, Savoy, and Portugal against the Alliance; the war began with fighting in Italy and Bavaria.

1703 Savoy and Portugal joined the Grand Alliance.

1704 British and Imperial forces under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene of Savoy defeated the French and Bavarians at the Battle of Blenheim (Aug. 13); French forces obliged to withdraw from Bavaria.

1704 Gibraltar fell to British forces.

1705 Holy Roman Emperor Leopold I died; succeeded by Joseph I.

1706 British and allied forces won a major victory over the French at the Battle of Ramillies, Belgium (May 23); took control of most of Spanish Netherlands.

1706 Eugene of Savoy led allied forces to victory over the French in Battle of Turin (Sept. 7); French forced to retreat from Italy.

1707 French victorious at Battle of Almansa (Apr. 25).

1708 British troops won battle of Oudenaarde (July 11); Britain gained initiative in war.

1709 Allied forces under Eugene of Savoy and the Duke of Marlborough defeated the French at Malplaquet (Sept. 11).

1711 Holy Roman Emperor Joseph I died; succeeded by Archduke Charles as Charles VI; Britain withdrew from the alliance because Charles was a claimant to the Spanish throne and an allied victory over France would simply join Spain with the Holy Roman Empire, an equally unacceptable solution to the balance of power in Europe; Charles continued to fight against France.

1713–14 Peace of Utrecht negotiated; series of treaties concluded among European powers ended the war and reorganized European political lines; Philip V's succession confirmed; Britain gained major territorial concessions in Canada from the French.

1714 Treaties of Rastatt and Baden formally ended war between France and Holy Roman Empire.

1720 Treaty of the Hague formally concluded war between Holy Roman Empire and Spain.

Sparta City-state of ancient Greece. Founded *c*1100 BC by the Dorians, Sparta became, by the 6th cent. BC, one of the most powerful city-states in Greece. Its dominance of the Peloponnesus and support of oligarchies against democracies led to its famous rivalry with Athens. Sparta finally defeated Athens in the Peloponnesian War (q.v.) and Sparta became the leading power in Greece. It remained so until its defeat by Thebes at Leuctra (371 BC). Sparta eventually fell under Macedonian, then Roman rule and was destroyed by the Goths (AD 395). In the 18th cent. a new city of Sparta was established near the site of the old one. Key dates in the history of Sparta include:

C11TH CENT. BC Sparta founded by Dorian Greeks.

9TH CENT.? BC Lycurgus created Sparta's militaristic society, aimed at producing fierce warriors.

C800 BC Sparta extended its control over the surrounding region of Laconia.

8TH CENT. BC Earliest known ephors in office; these were Spartan magistrates who served under the Spartan kings and fulfilled executive functions.

735–715 BC First Messenian War; Sparta conquered Messenia, in western Peloponnesus.

C650–C600 BC Sparta put down revolt by Messenians (second Messenian War).

mid-6TH CENT. BC Sparta organized the Peloponnesian League, thereby gaining hegemony over most of the Peloponnesus.

C550 BC Chilon became Spartan ephor; regarded as one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece.

520–490 BC Cleomenes reigned in Sparta; meddled in Athenian politics and maintained Sparta's dominant position in the Peloponnesus.

507 BC Spartans invaded Attica in unsuccessful attempt to oust Cleisthenes and restore aristocracy to power in Athens.

499–479 BC Persian Wars; Sparta joined Athens and other city-states in repulsing invasions of Greece by Persians.

C466 BC Pausanias, Spartan commander accused of treason, took refuge in temple of Athena; Spartans walled him in and left him to starve to death.

464–461 BC Rebellion by helots of Messenia against Sparta.

460–445 BC Sparta fought Athens in the first Peloponnesian War.

431–404 BC Peloponnesian War; Sparta, successful against Athens, emerged as the most powerful city-state in Greece.

C427–400 BC Agis II reigned; led Spartan armies in Peloponnesian War.

395–387 BC Corinthian War; Spartan power in Greece challenged by Athens, Thebes, and other allies; Sparta defeated.

371 BC Sparta defeated by Thebes at the Battle of Leuctra; Sparta's decline began.

338 BC Philip II of Macedonia gained control of Greece.

338–331 BC Agis III reigned; led unsuccessful revolt against Alexander the Great of Macedonia (333–331 BC).

C266–262 BC Chremonidean War; Sparta and Athens fought against Macedonian rule.

222 BC Sparta defeated by Antigonus III of Macedonia.

146 BC Sparta under Roman rule along with the rest of Greece.

AD 395 City destroyed by Goths under Alaric.

Spartacus d. 71 BC. Thracian-born Roman gladiator who led the slaves in the Servile War (q.v.) in Italy (73–71 BC).

Spartacus League Militant German Socialist organization. Protesting against WW I, the Spartacists split from the German Social Democratic party (1916). They later allied themselves with the Russian Bolsheviks (1919) and thus became the German Communist party. Party leaders K. Liebknecht and R. Luxemburg were murdered after they organized a general strike in Berlin (1919).

Spee, Maximilian, Graf von 1861–1914. German WW I admiral. He routed a British squadron off the coast of Chile in WW I but was defeated and killed soon after at the Battle of Falkland Islands (1914).

Speer, Albert 1905–81. German architect and Nazi official. He organized German war production, bringing it to its peak (1944). Sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment after the war. He wrote Inside the Third Reich.

Speke, John Hanning 1827–64. British explorer. He discovered Lake Victoria, one of the sources of the Nile River.

Spencer, Herbert 1820–1903. English philosopher. An early advocate of evolution, he and T. Huxley helped bring about acceptance of Darwin's theory of evolution. His 10-volume Synthetic Philosophy covered the principles of various fields of knowledge.

Spener, Philipp Jakob 1635–1705. German theologian, founder of Pietism (q.v.).

Spengler, Oswald 1880–1936. German historian and philosopher. Spengler wrote The Decline of the West, in which he likened every culture to a personal cycle of birth, growth, maturity, and inevitable decline. The West, he believed, had reached the last phase.

Spenser, Edmund *c*1552–99. English poet, considered one of the finest of Elizabethan England. While in the civil service in Ireland, he published (1590) the first three books of his great unfinished epic peom, Faerie Queene. The second three books were published in 1596. He also wrote the love sonnet sequence Amoretti, which included the wedding poem Epithalamion, celebrating his marriage to Elizabeth Boyle.

Speranski, Mikhail Mikhailovich 1772–1839. Russian statesman and reformer. A trusted adviser to Alexander I, he proposed liberal reforms and a constitution (1809) that angered the nobles and brought about his dismissal. Restored by Nicholas I, he compiled a code of Russian law.

Sperry, Elmer Ambrose 1860–1930. American inventor. Best known as the inventor of the gyroscope, Sperry also devised an arc lamp and a searchlight, improved the dynamo and the Diesel engine, and founded the Sperry Gyroscope Company.

Speusippus d. 339 BC. Athenian philosopher. He succeeded his uncle, Plato, as head of the Academy.

sphinx Mythical creature with a human head and the body of a lion (sometimes winged). Although the image was common to many ancient cultures, the best known is the great stone sphinx at Giza, Egypt, dating from *c*2500 BC. In Greek mythology, the sphinx posed a riddle that only Oedipus could answer: What walks on four legs in the morning, two at noon, and three at night? Answer: A human being. He crawls on all fours as a baby, walks on two legs in his prime, and uses a cane in old age.

Spinoza, Baruch 1632–77. Dutch rationalist philosopher. A lens grinder by trade, he developed a monist philosophy that is a noted example of pantheism (q.v.). Among his major works were Treatise on Religion and Political Philosophy, and Ethics.

spiritualism ⟨spiritism⟩ Belief in the existence after death of the human spirit or personality, and its ability to manifest itself. Noted advocates have included Madam Blavatsky and A.C. Doyle.

Spode, Josiah 1754–1827. Famous British pottery manufacturer. He developed a new mixture (adding feldspar and bone ash) for his porcelain and popularized many intricate patterns.

spoils system ⟨patronage⟩ In the US, the practice of awarding government jobs to loyal supporters of the party after an election victory. New York Senator W. Marcy coined the term (1832) when he declared that "to the victor belong the spoils." On the national level, the practice became especially widespread from the first administration of Pres. A. Jackson. It was eventually curbed by the Pendleton Civil Service Act and other such regulations.

Spooner Amendment Amendment to the US Army appropriation bill (Mar. 2, 1901), authorizing the president to abolish the US military government in the Philippines and to establish a civil government.

Spotsylvania Court House, Battle of Bloody Civil War battle fought in May, 1864, in northeastern Virginia, during the Wilderness Campaign.

Spottiswoode, John 1565–1639. Scottish religious leader. He abandoned his Presbyterianism to support James I's plan to introduce episcopacy in Scotland. Named chancellor of Scotland (1635), he fell out of favor and was ousted in 1638.

Spring and Autumn Period See Ch'un Chiu

Springfield Capital city (pop. 99,600) of Illinois. Settled in 1818, it became the capital in 1837 and was incorporated in 1840. A. Lincoln lived there (1837–61).

Spurgeon, Charles Haddon 1834–92. English Baptist preacher, noted for his fundamentalist sermons and the wide following he enjoyed during his lifetime.

Spurs, Battle of the ⟨Guinegate, Battle of⟩ English victory (Aug. 16, 1513) over the French during wars of the Holy League. English King Henry VIII, a member of the league, launched an invasion from Calais into northern France. Reinforced with troops sent by Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I, the English intercepted a French cavalry force at the village of Guinegate. The French, however, retreated suddenly before serious battle had been joined (thus, Battle of the Spurs).

Sputnik The world's first artificial satellite, launched (Oct. 4, 1957) by the Russians as the first of ten satellites in the Sputnik series. The second (Nov. 3, 1957) carried a dog, Laika, into earth orbit.

Spyri, Johanna 1827–1901. Swiss writer. The best known of her many children's books is Heidi.

Squanto ⟨Tisquantum⟩ d. 1622. American Indian. A member of the Pawtuxet tribe, Squanto assisted the Pilgrims at Plymouth Colony, showing them how to plant and fish. He frequently served as guide, interpreter, and mediator.

Sri Lanka ⟨formerly Ceylon⟩ Island republic (pop. 14,740,000) in the Indian Ocean southeast of India. Capital is Sri Jayewardenapura Kotte. The island's ancient inhabitants were conquered (6th cent. BC) by the Sinhalese from India. They introduced Buddhism (3d cent. BC) and established a kingdom that reached its peak in the 4th–6th cents. AD. The island was invaded (11th–12th cent.) by the Tamils from India, who established a kingdom in the north. Much of Ceylon's coastal region was conquered (16th cent.) by the Portuguese and their holdings were seized in turn by the Dutch (17th cent.) and the British (1796). The British established a crown colony (1798) and gained control of the entire island (1815) following the overthrow of the kingdom of Kandy, which had ruled the interior. A nationalist movement, originating in the early 20th cent., led to independence (1948) as a dominion within the British Commonwealth. Ceylon was the site in the 1950s of strife between the country's Sinhalese and Tamil populations, and in 1959 its prime minister S.W.R.D. Bandaranaike (1899–1959) was assassinated. His widow, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike (1916–) became prime minister (1960), began a program of reforms (including nationalization [1962] of British and US businesses) and was voted out of office (1965). A more moderate government lasted until 1970, when Mrs. Bandaranaike again became prime minister as head of a coalition that sought increasingly radical reforms. A Marxist revolt (1971) was crushed in 1972, and that year Ceylon became a republic under the name Sri Lanka. Mrs. Bandaranaike was voted out of office (1977) and the next year Sri Lanka adopted a presidential form of government. Junius Richard Jayewardene (1906–) became its first president and remained in office into the early 1980s.

SS ⟨Schutzstaffel⟩ ⟨Black Shirts⟩ Nazi military corps (formed 1929). Commanded by H. Himmler, it eventually became the instrument of Nazi party control in Germany and occupied territories. By the end of WW II the SS had grown to 35 divisions responsible for domestic and international security and included the Gestapo, the armed Waffen SS units, and concentration camp guards.

Ssŭ-ma Ch'ien ⟨Si-ma Qien⟩ 145–85 BC. First great historian of China. He wrote the Shih Chi (Historical Records), a dynastic history of China down to the end of the 2d cent. BC.

Ssu-ma Kuang 1019–1086. Chinese statesman and historian of the Sung dynasty, compiler of the massive Comprehensive Mirror for Aid in Government, a history of China from 403 BC to AD 959.

St. For names beginning with St.. see under Saint

Staël, Germaine de 1766–1817. French writer, considered the greatest French woman of letters. Her book De l'Allemagne (1810) was ordered destroyed by Napoleon, and she was exiled. Reprinted later, it introduced German romanticism to France.

Stafford, Henry, 2d duke of Buckingham 1454?–1483. English nobleman, who helped Richard III seize the throne. He later raised an army against Richard, but was captured and beheaded.

Stafford, Humphrey, 1st duke of Buckingham 1402–60. English nobleman. Stafford served in the Hundred Years' War and supported the Lancasters in the War of the Roses. He died at the Battle of Northampton.

Stahl, Georg Ernst 1660–1734. German chemist. Stahl developed both the phlogiston theory of combustion, and the theory of animism—that bodily functions are controlled by the soul.

Stair, James Dalrymple, 1st viscount 1619–95. Scottish judge. A royalist, he was nevertheless appointed judge during the Commonwealth. Ousted during the Restoration he wrote The Institutions of the Law of Scotland. He was reappointed under William III.

Stair, John Dalrymple, 1st earl of 1648–1707. Scottish statesman, son of James Stair, lord advocate and secretary of state for William III. His approval of the Glencoe Massacre (q.v.) forced his resignation.

Stair, John Dalrymple, 2d earl of 1673–1747. Scottish general and diplomat. He fought for William of Orange (later William III) in Holland and then in England. He served as Ambassador to Paris under George I.

Stakhanovism Movement in the Soviet Union (c1935) to increase industrial workers' output. Aleksey Stakhanov, a coal miner who increased production sevenfold by instituting more efficient techniques, gave his name to the movement. Stakhanovite workers received special pay and privileges.

Stalin, Joseph Vissarionovich 1879–1953. Soviet Communist leader, originally surnamed Dzhugashvili. Stalin joined N. Lenin's Bolshevik faction in 1903 and took part in revolutionary activities. He became (1922) general secretary of the Central Committee after the Bolsheviks came to power in the Revolution of 1917. Shortly before Lenin's death, Stalin and Lenin fell out, but Lenin died before any action was taken. In the ensuing power struggle among Lenin's survivors, Stalin defeated L. Trotsky, G. Zinoviev, L. Kamenev, and N. Bukharin to become virtual dictator of the Soviet Union and the Communist party. In 1928, Stalin instituted a new policy of industrialization and collectivization of agriculture. Resistance by kulaks, or farmers, to collectivization led to untold misery and death. Failures in Stalin's Five Year Plan (q.v.) caused further hardship. The 1930s saw the Purge Trials (q.v.), by which Stalin eliminated all potential opponents, and the signing of a nonagression pact (1939) with Germany.

Stalin's hopes of keeping Russia out of WW II ended with the German invasion of the Soviet Union (June 22, 1941), and his inability to deal at first with the invasion contributed to the Red Army's disastrous early losses. He subsequently acted as commander-in-chief of the victorious Soviet forces, although his role as military leader is disputed. Stalin's participation in the Teheran (1943) and Yalta (1945) conferences (qq.v.) established the Soviet Union as one of the major world powers, and led to Soviet domination of Eastern Europe after the war. In the late 1940s and early 1950s he became the leading Communist figure in the Cold War (q.v.) and further increased his tyrannical rule. After his death (1953), a power struggle led to the rise of N. Khrushchev, who denounced (1956) Stalin's excesses and the personality cult that had formed around him.

Stalingrad ⟨Volgograd⟩ Soviet city (pop. 818,000) now known as Volgograd, capital of Volgograd Oblast. It is a major port on the Volga River and a railroad center. It began as a fort in 1589 for defense against the Cossacks and was conquered by S. Razin in 1670. It was named after Stalin in 1925 but was renamed Volgograd in 1961. (See also Stalingrad, Battle of.)

Stalingrad, Battle of Important turning point of WW II during which the Russians gained the offensive against the Germans. More than 500,000 Germans under Gen. von Paulus attacked and largely destroyed Stalingrad in Sept. 1942, but the Russians continued to hold out and by Nov., 1942, Gen. G. Zhukov had surrounded the Germans, who were forced to surrender (Feb. 2, 1943). Hundreds of thousands were killed and wounded on both sides in this bloody battle.

Stalinism Doctrines and policies of Soviet dictator J. Stalin. He advocated a pragmatic rather than an ideological approach to creating the socialist state. He abandoned the idea of spreading revolution throughout the world for the sake of creating "socialism in one country" (the Soviet Union). The results of his programs were far-reaching: he collectivized agriculture, undertook a massive program to industrialize the nation, and suppressed the church. But by far the most prominent aspect of Stalinism was the "cult of personality." His great success in concentrating power in his own hands and his ruthless measures against dissent in any form made him absolute ruler of the Soviet Union and made his dictates the gospel of the Communist party.

Stalin Line Soviet defensive fortifications along the border with Poland. Patterned after the Maginot Line (q.v.), these defenses failed to prevent the German invasion of WW II.

Stalwarts Conservative faction of the US Republican party that vied for power in the 1870s and 1880s. Led by New York Senator Roscoe Conkling and by C. Arthur, the Stalwarts opposed the Half-Breeds (q.v.). Stalwarts fought the civil-service reforms of Pres. R. Hayes and unsuccessfully tried to nominate U. Grant for a third term.

Stambolov, Stefan 1854–95. Bulgarian politician. Stambolov was a regent after the abdication of Prince Alexander (1886–87) and as prime minister (1887–94) dominated Prince Ferdinand. His strong rule led to his forced resignation and assassination.

Stambuliski, Alexander 1879–1923. Bulgarian politician. Stambuliski headed the Peasants' party, became premier (1919) and dictator. In 1923 he was overthrown and executed.

Stamp Act British revenue law (1765) intended to raise funds for the defense of the American colonies by selling stamps that had to be used for all newspapers, legal documents, pamphlets, almanacs, cards, etc. Widespread Colonial opposition (sometimes violent) led to the formation of the Stamp Act Congress (q.v.) and the Sons of Liberty

(q.v.). The British Parliament, which had passed the act without consent of Colonial assemblies, repealed it in Mar., 1766. The Stamp Act was one of the Colonial grievances that resulted in the American Revolution.

Stamp Act Congress Meeting (Oct., 1765) of American colonials to formalize protest against the Stamp Act (q.v.). Representatives from New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Delaware, South Carolina, Maryland, and Connecticut met in New York City and issued the Declaration of Rights and Grievances, which condemned taxation by the British without Colonial representation in Parliament. Parliament refused to acknowledge the grievances but, under pressure from British merchants, repealed the Stamp Act (Mar., 1766). At the same time Parliament maintained, by the Declaratory Act of 1766, the right to impose taxes within the British Empire.

Standish, Myles *c*1584–1656. English colonist who sailed to America on the Mayflower and served as the military leader and treasurer of Plymouth colony. He is the subject of a famous poem by H. Longfellow about his supposed unsuccessful courtship of Priscilla Mullins.

Stanhope, Charles, 3d earl Stanhope 1753–1816. British politician and inventor. Stanhope was W. Pitt's brother-in-law and urged conciliation toward America. His many inventions include lenses, calculating machines, a printing press, and fireproof stucco.

Stanhope, Lady Hester 1776–1839. English noblewoman and adventuress, secretary to her uncle, W. Pitt. In 1810 she traveled to the Middle East and, living among the natives, was revered by them as a prophetess.

Stanhope, James, 1st earl Stanhope 1673–1721. English general. He fought in the War of the Spanish Succession and, as George I's secretary of state, negotiated the Triple Alliance (1717) and Quadruple Alliance (1718).

Stanhope, Philip 1805–75. English statesman and historian who served as R. Peel's undersecretary for foreign affairs. He wrote History of England from the Peace of Utrecht to the Peace of Versailles.

Stanislaus I ⟨Leszczynski, Stanislaus⟩ Polish king (1704–09, 1733–35). Installed (1704) by the Swedes during the Northern War, he fled Poland after their defeat. His return (1733) after the death of King Alexander II precipitated the War of the Polish Succession (q.v.).

Stanislaus II ⟨Poniatowski, Stanislaus Augustus⟩ 1732–98. Last king of Poland (1764–95), successor to Alexander III. A lover of Catherine II, he was installed by her as king of Poland. Though Russia thereafter dominated Poland, Stanislaus attempted to implement reforms. He was unable to prevent the complete dismemberment of the kingdom in the three Partitions of Poland (q.v.).

Stanislavsky, Konstantin ⟨Alekseyev, Konstantin Sergeyevich⟩ 1863–1938. Russian actor, director, and teacher. Stanislavsky co-founded the Moscow Art Theater. His "method acting" theories have profoundly influenced modern acting and directing.

Stanley, Sir Henry Morton 1841–1904. British-born American reporter and explorer. Stanley's diverse activities included fighting for both sides in the American Civil War, newspaper reporting, finding the missing Dr. D. Livingstone in Africa, and colonizing the Congo and Uganda.

Stanley, Wendell Meredith 1904–71. American biochemist. He researched the chemical nature of viruses and was cowinner of the 1946 Nobel Prize in Chemistry.

Stanton, Edwin McMasters 1814–69. American statesman. A Radical Republican, he became secretary of war (from 1862) under Pres. A. Lincoln and later under Pres. A. Johnson. However, Johnson's struggle with Radical Republicans, over control of Reconstruction (q.v.) policy, resulted in a presidential order discharging Stanton. Soon after radical Republicans in Congress unsuccessfully attempted to impeach Pres. Johnson, saying he had violated the Tenure of Office Act by firing Stanton.

Stanton, Elizabeth Cady 1815–1902. American reformer, a leader of the woman suffrage (q.v.) movement. She organized (1848) at Seneca Falls, New York, the first women's rights convention.

Staple, Company of the Merchants of the See Company of the Merchants of the Staple Star Chamber English royal court. An outgrowth of the king's council, it eventually included civil and criminal matters in its jurisdiction, and for a time it was a popular expedient to common-law courts. Under the Stuart kings (notably Charles I), however, the court became a device for asserting royal powers. It was abolished (1641) soon after by the Long Parliament.

Starhemberg, Ernst Rüdiger, graf von 1638–1701. Austrian field marshal who successfully defended Vienna against prolonged Turkish attack (1683) during the Austro-Turkish War (q.v.).

Starhemberg, Ernst Rüdiger von 1899–1956. Austrian politician. He joined Hitler in the Munich Putsch (1923). Later he formed the Austrian Heimwehr, a fascist group supporting E. Dollfuss.

Stark, John 1728–1822. American Revolutionary general. Stark participated in fighting at Bunker Hill, Princeton, Trenton, and Saratoga. He defeated Burgoyne at Bennington (1777).

Starr, Belle 1848–89. American frontier figure whose fame as a horse thief and outlaw was spread by exaggerated newspaper accounts of her deeds. She was for a time associated with C. Younger and the James gang and later ran a hideout for outlaws.

state Term applied to the political organization of a society, or the form or institution of government ruling the affairs of a society.

States General (Estates General) Representative assembly. First established in France as an advisory body to King Philip IV (q.v.) in the early 14th cent., it was divided into three "estates": the clergy, the nobility, and the people (third estate). Though it acquired jurisdiction over taxes and other powers, it was eclipsed by the growth of royal power. Thus, the States General was seldom convened after 1500 and did not meet at all from 1614 to 1789. Finally, Louis XVI was forced by the chaos of royal finances to convene the body in 1789. The meeting resulted in the union of the clergy and the people, the formation of the National Assembly, and the beginning of the French Revolution. The States General is also the name for the assembly of the Dutch Republic (1579–1795). It was superseded by the National Assembly in 1796.

states' rights Political doctrine prominent in US history. It advocates limitations on federal government powers and is based on the 10th Amendment to the Constitution, which gives the states powers not granted to the federal government or otherwise expressly prohibited. States' rights has figured in many important controversies. The power struggle between Jeffersonian Republicans and the Federalists in the early years of the republic resulted in the drafting of the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions (q.v.), the first statement of states' rights doctrine. In the 1800s, southern opposition to federal tariff laws fostered the states' rights Nullification Controversy (q.v.), and the determination of southern states to defend slavery led to the bitter American Civil War. This ended the controversy over the states' power to directly oppose federal powers. Nevertheless, states rights became a factor in opposition to desegregation in the South during the 1950s and 1960s. Finally, limitation of federal powers, which have been expanding for decades, was the basis of Pres. R. Reagan's 1980 campaign.

States' Rights Democrats See Dixiecrats

Statius, Publius Papinius AD *c*40–*c*96. Latin poet. The surviving fragments of his work include the Achilleid, the Silvae, and Thebaid.

Statue of Liberty Statue, now a symbol of the American ideal of liberty. A gift from France in memory of the Franco-American alliance during the American Revolution, it was entitled Liberty Enlightening the World. The monument was designed by F.A. Bartholdi and was erected on Liberty Island in New York harbor in 1886.

Statute of Wales English law enacted on Mar. 19, 1284, uniting Wales with England after the conquest of Wales by Edward I.

Stavisky Affair French scandal (1934) that for a time threatened to bring down the Third Republic. Serge Alexandre Stavisky had sold great quantities of fraudulent bonds, and discovery of the scandal resulted in his death (1934) by either murder or suicide. Rightists charged that it was murder to protect prominent government officials and began agitating to overthrow the republic. The ministries of C. Chautemps and E. Daladier were forced to resign before calm was finally restored.

Steel, Pact of See Pact of Steel

Steele, Sir Richard 1672–1729. Noted English writer and dramatist, who wrote essays with J. Addison for the periodicals Tatler and The Spectator.

Steelyard, Merchants of the See Merchants of the Steelyard

Steenkirk, Battle of See Grand Alliance, War of the

Steffens, Joseph Lincoln 1866–1936. American journalist. An editor for such periodicals as McClure's and The American, he was a leading muckraker (q.v.) who exposed business and political corruption.

Steichen, Edward 1879–1973. American photographer. With A. Stieglitz, he founded the Photo-Secession Group (1902) and was among the first to recognize the camera's artistic potential.

Stein, Gertrude 1874–1946. American writer and a leading avante-garde literary figure in the early 1900s. Her works include The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas and Four Saints in Three Acts.

Stein, Baron Heinrich Friedrich Karl vom und zum 1757–1831. Prussian statesman and reformer. He was instrumental in abolishing serfdom and effecting other civil, economic, and military reforms.

Steinbeck, John Ernst 1902–68. Noted American novelist. His works include The Grapes of Wrath, East of Eden, Of Mice and Men, and Tortilla Flat. Nobel Prize in literature (1962).

Steiner, Jakob 1796–1863. Swiss-born German mathematician, a pioneer in the study of synthetic geometry.

Steiner, Rudolf 1861–1925. Austrian-German philosopher. Once a Theosophist, he developed his own philosophy of anthroposophy, which stressed spiritual thought without reliance on the senses or material objects.

Steinmetz, Charles Proteus 1865–1923. German-born American electrical engineer. He made important discoveries concerning alternating current and devised a generator to produce artificial lightning.

Steinway, Henry Englehard 1797–1871. German-born American piano manufacturer, and founder of the famous Steinway and Sons piano company. Steinway introduced many innovations into piano construction.

Stendhal ⟨Marie Henri Beyle⟩ 1783–1842. French writer, one of the great French novelists. His best-known works include the two novels The Red and the Black and The Charterhouse of Parma.

Stentor In Homer's Iliad, a Greek herald with a voice as strong as 50 voices combined. Thus, "stentorian" means "strong-voiced", as applied, for example, to a public speaker.

Stephen, Saint ⟨Stephen I⟩ 969–1038. First king of Hungary (1001–38). Crowned with the blessings of the pope, he Christianized Hungary. He is called the Apostle of Hungary.

Stephen 1097–1154. King of England (1135–54), successor to Henry I. Forced to acknowledge Henry's daughter, Matilda, as legitimate heir, Stephen nevertheless claimed the throne on Henry's death. Matilda invaded England (1139) and, after capturing Stephen at Lincoln (1141), reigned for six months. Stephen regained the throne and drove Matilda out of England (1148), though he was unable to restore order in his domains.

Stephen I See Stephen, Saint

Stephen II d. 757. Italian-born pope (752–757). Threatened by the Lombards, he allied the church with the Franks under Pepin the Short, received the Donation of Pepin from him, and thus became the first pope who was also temporal ruler of the Papal States (q.v.).

Stephen Báthory 1533–86. King of Poland (1575–86). He successfully fought Russian Czar Ivan the Terrible for control of Livonia. His goal, unfulfilled because of his early death, was the unification of Poland, Muscovy, and Transylvania.

Stephen Dushan *c*1308–55. King (1331–46) and czar, (1346–55) of Serbia. One of the notable conquerers of European history, he brought Albania, Bulgaria, and Macedonia into a Serbian empire which, however, did not long survive his death.

Stephens, Alexander Hamilton 1812–83. American politician. Though opposed to secession, Stephens served as Confederate vice-president (1861–65). He continually opposed Pres. J. Davis' policies and sought peace with the Union.

Stephens, Uriah S. See Knights of Labor

Stephenson, George 1781–1848. English inventor, creator of the first practical railroad locomotive, originally designed for hauling coal in mines. He then built a locomotive for England's first railroad, completed in 1825.

Stepniak, S. 1852–95. Russian revolutionary and author. A Nihilist, he assassinated the czarist chief of police, and defended his actions in Life for Life.

Stern, Otto 1888–1969. German-born American physicist. Stern's work with beams of atoms and other discoveries regarding properties of atoms laid the groundwork for atomic science. He received the Nobel Prize in physics, 1943.

Sterne, Laurence 1713–60. British novelist who wrote A Sentimental Journey and the famous satirical novel Tristam Shandy.

Stesichorus *fl. c*600 BC. Dorian Greek lyric poet. Though only fragments of his work survive, he is thought to have made innovations in Greek poetry and drama.

Steuben, Friedrich Wilhelm, Baron von 1730–94. Prussian general in service of American colonials. From 1778, he was responsible for training the American revolutionary army and organizing it into a conventional military fighting unit. He wrote its first training manual and later was a commander at the Battle of Yorktown.

Stevens, John 1749–1838. American inventor and engineer, a pioneer in steamship design. He built the first American locomotive (1825), and was instrumental in passage of the first US patent laws (1790).

Stevens, Robert Livingston 1787–1856. American engineer and inventor, son of J. Stevens. He invented the T-shape rail and the railroad spike and added the cowcatcher to the front of railroad locomotives.

Stevens, Thaddeus 1792–1868. American statesman. He co-authored the 14th Amendment, was a leader of the Radical Republicans in US Congress during their fight to impose a harsh Reconstruction (q.v.) policy, and urged the impeachment of Pres. A. Johnson.

Stevens, Wallace 1879–1955. American poet. An insurance executive, he wrote such poems as The Man with the Blue Guitar, and The Auroras of Autumn.

Stevenson, Adlai Ewing 1835–1914. American statesman, Stevenson was first assistant postmaster general (1885–89) and vice-president (1893–97) under Pres. G. Cleveland.

Stevenson, Adlai Ewing 1900–65. American statesman. He served as governor of Illinois (1948–52), was twice the unsuccessful Democratic candidate for president (1952, 1956), and was US ambassador to the UN (1961–65).

Stevenson, Robert Louis 1850–94. Scottish author, renowned for such classic novels as Treasure Island, The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and Kidnapped.

Stewart See Stuart

Stewart, William Morris 1827–1909. American politician, US senator from Nevada (1864–75, 1887–1905). He wrote the final draft of the 15th Amendment, supported silver coinage and won passage of mining laws.

Stieglitz, Alfred 1864–1946. American photographer. With E. Steichen he founded the Photo-Secession Group (1902) and pioneered the development of photography as an art form. He was noted for his photo studies of his wife, Georgia O'Keefe.

Stilicho, Flavius d. AD 408. Roman general. He repulsed invasions by the Vandals (AD 403) and the Goths (AD *c*406). Suspected of plotting against Emperor Honorius, he was beheaded.

Still, Andrew Taylor 1828–1917. American doctor. He founded osteopathy, the theory that diseases can be treated without drugs by massage.

Stilwell, Joseph Warren 1883–1946. American general, commander of US and Nationalist Chinese forces in the Far East during WW II. Forced to retreat during the Japanese invasion of Burma (1942), he led US forces in the reconquest of the region (1943–44).

Stimson, Henry Lewis 1867–1950. American statesman. He was secretary of war (1911–13, 1940–45), serving notably during the WW II years. As secretary of state (1929–33) he formulated the Stimson Doctrine (1932), which proposed the US refuse recognition of territories seized by acts of aggression.

Stimson Doctrine See Stimson, Henry Lewis

Stockhausen, Karlheinz 1928–. German composer. Stockhausen's avant-garde techniques include the use of electronic music, improvisation, and simultaneous performances by more than one orchestra.

Stockholm Swedish capital city (pop. 661,300), port, and its largest city. Founded *c*1250, it rose to commercial prosperity as a member of the Hanseatic League. In the 16th cent., it was the focal point of King Gustav's drive for independence. The city became Sweden's capital in 1634 and later became a cultural center. Rapid industrial development occurred in the late 19th cent.

Stockholm, Treaty of Two treaties signed in Stockholm by Sweden during the Great Northern War (1700–21). In Nov., 1719, Sweden ceded Bremen and Verdun to British king George I, in return for financial and military aid against Russia. In the second agreement (Feb., 1720), Sweden sold sections of Pomerania and the port of Stettin to Prussia.

Stockholm Bloodbath Massacre of over 80 Swedish nobles in Stockholm (Nov. 8, 1520), ordered by Danish King Christian II. The incident temporarily prevented break-up of the Kalmar Union (q.v.) but ultimately served to unite Sweden for independence. By 1522 Gustavus I had driven the Danes out of Sweden and dissolved the union.

Stockmar, Christian Friedrich, Baron 1787–1863. German physician and diplomat. He helped arrange Prince Albert's marriage to Queen Victoria and later served as their unofficial adviser.

Stoicism Philosophical school founded (*c*300 BC) at Athens by Zeno of Citium. It arose in opposition to Epicureanism (q.v.), spread among the Greeks, and after the 2d cent. BC became influential among the Romans. Stoicism was derived from the teachings of Cynics. Stoics held that all reality is material and that God, or reason, is the universal working force. Thus, living according to nature or reason was to come into harmony with the divine order of the universe. The ideal, virtuous life was to be achieved by exercising wisdom and restraint, by casting off passion and desire, and by right conduct and devotion to duty. Notable adherents of Stoicism include Diogenes of Babylonia, Antipater of Tarsus, Cato the Younger, Seneca, Epictetus, and Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

Stoker, Bram 1847–1912. Irish-born British novelist, best known as the author of Dracula.

Stokes, Whitley 1830–1909. Irish jurist. Stokes revised the civil and criminal codes in India.

Stokowski, Leopold 1882–1977. Noted American conductor. Stokowski conducted many contemporary works and unusual orchestrations, and popularized Bach.

Stolypin, Pëter Arkadevich 1863–1911. Russian statesman. As prime minister (1906–11), he attempted to control the revolutionary movement by instituting agrarian land reforms and by ruthless use of secret police.

Stolypin Land Reform See Agrarian Reform Act

Stone, Harlan Fiske 1872–1946. American jurist, an associate (1925–41) and chief justice (1941–46) of the Supreme Court. He was noted for his dissenting opinions in defense of New Deal legislation.

Stone, Lucy 1818–93. American reformer, a noted public speaker on both abolition and women's rights. With her husband, Henry Blackwell, she helped found the American Woman Suffrage Association.

Stone Age Stage in the development of human culture beginning about 2.5 million years ago and lasting until the beginning of the Bronze Age (q.v.), or roughly about 3500 BC (in the Near East). Dating varies widely according to region and particular culture, and an essentially Stone Age culture exists even today among some primitive peoples. The Stone Age is characterized by the use of stone (along with wood and bone) for tools and implements, and is commonly subdivided into the Paleolithic and Neolithic stages. The Paleolithic (Old Stone Age) period is the earliest and lasted until about 8000–6000 BC. The Neolithic (New Stone Age) period is generally taken to begin with the advent of domestication of animals, cultivation of food plants, and development of village culture (although criteria vary). It ends with the appearance of metal weapons and tools. The term Mesolithic (Middle Stone Age) usually refers to a stage of cultural development in northwestern Europe, lasting from about 8000 to 3000 BC.

Stonehenge Famous prehistoric stone structure near Salisbury, in southern England. Built and added to between the 18th and 14th cent. BC, it was apparently used for religious purposes, though not by the Druids, as is popularly believed. The structure is made up of large stones arranged in concentric circles about a central altar stone.

Stones River, Battle of ⟨Battle of Murfreesboro⟩ Battle of the US Civil War, fought (Dec. 31, 1862–Jan. 2, 1863) near Murfreesboro, Tennessee. Union forces under Gen. W. Rosencrans forced the Confederates under B. Bragg to withdraw after a bloody battle.

Storm and Stress See Sturm und Drang

Storm, Hans Theodor Woldsen 1817–88. German author, best known for the haunting realism of his novellas, especially The Rider of the White Horse.

Storting Norwegian parliament (since 1814). It is divided into an upper house (Lagting) and lower house (Odelsting).

Story, Joseph 1779–1845. American jurist, associate justice of the Supreme Court (1811–45). He generally agreed with Chief Justice J. Marshall and wrote the pivotal court opinion in Martin vs Hunter's Lessee (1816), which established Supreme Court review of state cases involving constitutional law.

Stowe, Harriet Beecher 1811–96. American writer. The sister of H.W. Beecher, her novel Uncle Tom's Cabin (1852) solidified antislavery sentiment in America.

Strabe 63 BC–after AD 21. Greek geographer and historian. His Geographica was a compilation of his own observations and the cumulative knowledge of the geography and history of the ancient world.

Stradivari, Antonio ⟨Stradivarius, Antonius⟩ 1644–1737. Italian violin maker, the acknowledged master of his craft.

Stradivarius, Antonius See Stradivari, Antonio

Strafford, Thomas Wentworth, 1st earl of 1593–1641. English statesman. An adviser to Charles I and loyal supporter of his despotic rule, he commanded the king's forces during the second Bishops' War (1640). Following his defeat, Parliamentarians seized the opportunity to eliminate an enemy in their fight with the king. Strafford was impeached and beheaded.

Straits Convention International agreement (July 13, 1840) by which the Ottoman Turks agreed (at the instigation of European powers) to close the Dardanelles to warships during peacetime. The agreement was superseded by the Lausanne Convention (1923), which opened the straits to all warships.

Straits Settlements British colony in the Southeast, including the territories of Singapore, Malacca, Penang, and Labuan. The colony was broken up in 1946.

Stralsund, Treaty of Agreement (May 24, 1370) by which Denmark made extensive commercial concessions to the Hanseatic League. Defeated (1368) by a coalition the league had formed with Sweden and other powers, Danish king Valdemar IV signed the treaty to regain his throne.

Strang, James Jesse 1813–56. Dissident Mormon leader. He failed in his bid to become leader of the Mormons after J. Smith's assassination (1844), formed his own sect (Strangites), and later established a colony on Beaver Island in Lake Michigan.

Strasbourg, Oath of See Oath of Strasbourg

Strasser, Gregor and Otto 1892–1934; 1897–1974. German Nazi leaders. These brothers were early supporters of A. Hitler. Otto left the party (1930) to join the Socialist Black Front and his brother, a powerful rival of Hitler's within the party, was assassinated (1934).

Strassman, Fritz See Meitner, Lise

Stratford de Redcliffe, Stratford Canning, Viscount 1786–1880. British diplomat. Stratford served as minister to Ottoman Turkey, and mediated conflicts between that country, Greece, and Russia. He was unable, however, to avert the Crimean War.

Strathclyde Medieval Celtic kingdom in southwestern Scotland, constituted around the 5th cent. Conquered by King Edmund of England in 945, it was annexed by Scotland in 1124.

Strathcona and Mount Royal, Donald Alexander Smith, 1st baron 1820–1914. Canadian financier and statesman. Originally a fur trader, he became governor of the Hudson's Bay Company (1889–1914) and was a leading figure in the company that completed the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Straus, Isidor 1845–1912. American merchant. Straus was involved in the family import business, L. Straus and Sons, and, with his brother, N. Straus, took over R.H. Macy and Company. He died aboard the Titanic.

Straus, Nathan 1848–1931. American merchant and philanthropist. Straus was associated with the family import business, L. Straus and Sons, and with his brother, I. Straus, took over R.H. Macy and Company. He aided the poor and Zionist charities.

Straus, Oscar Solomon 1850–1926. American diplomat. A member of the wealthy Straus family, Oscar served as minister to Ottoman Turkey under G. Cleveland, W. McKinley and W. Taft.

Strauss, Johann 1825–99. Austrian composer, noted for his waltzes. Strauss ignored his father's opposition and followed him into a musical career. He composed the waltzes Blue Danube and Tales from the Vienna Woods and the operettas Die Fledermaus and The Gypsy Baron.

Strauss, Richard Georg 1864–1949. Famous German composer, noted for his romantic operas and symphonic poems. The vast body of his work includes the operas Elektra, Salome, and Der Rosenkavalier, and the orchestral music Don Juan, Death and Transfiguration, Thus Spake Zarathustra, and Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks.

Stravinsky, Igor Fëdorovich 1882–1971. Russian-born American composer, one of the great composers of this century. He was best known for his ballets, including The Firebird, Petrouchka, and The Rite of Spring.

Streicher, Julius 1885–1946. German Nazi leader, a vicious anti-Semite who used his newspaper, Der Stürmer, to spread hatred of the Jews. He joined A. Hitler's Nazi party in the early days and was executed as a war criminal after the war.

Stresemann, Gustav 1878–1929. German statesman. As foreign minister of the Weimar Republic, he succeeded in pursuing a policy of conciliation with Germany's former enemies and arranged Germany's admission to the League of Nations. He shared the Nobel Peace Prize (1926).

Strijdom, Johannes Gerhardus 1893–1958. South African politician. A leader of the Nationalist party (from 1929) and supporter of apartheid, he served as prime minister from 1954 to 1958.

strikes Collective work stoppages by employees, usually those who are members of a union seeking higher wages or improved working conditions. Strikes in the US were fairly rare until after the Civil War, when a period of rapid industrialization and the organization of workers began. The late 19th and early 20th cents. witnessed many outbreaks of violence in connection with strikes (notably the Homestead and Pullman strikes, qq.v.). Since then, however, violence has steadily played less of a role in labor actions. Though uncommon in the US, strikes in support of political causes are common in Europe. Perhaps the most significant were the widespread strikes (1917) in Russia that helped bring down the czarist government.

Strindberg, Johan August 1849–1912. Swedish playwright and novelist. He is best known for his plays, including The Father, Miss Julie, and The Dance of Death.

Stroganov Russian merchant family that organized vast colonial enterprises in eastern Russia (16th–17th cents.). They contributed significantly to Russia's expansion into Siberia by organizing entire colonies and military expeditions in pursuit of their commercial expansion. They also provided financial support for czarist governments.

Stroheim, Erich von 1885–1957. Austrian-born American film director and actor. He appeared in such classic films as The Birth of a Nation, Grand Illusion, and Sunset Boulevard, and directed the critically acclaimed Greed.

Strozzi Noble Florentine family that opposed the power of the Medici family in Florence. Its members included Filippo Strozzi the Elder (1426–91), Giambattista Strozzi (1488–1538), and Piero Strozzi (d. 1558).

Struensee, Johann Friedrich 1737–72. German-born Danish politician. As physician to the insane Christian VII, he gained control of the government (1770) and assumed dictatorial powers. He was accused of adultery with Queen Caroline and was beheaded.

Stuart ⟨Stewart⟩ Royal family of Scotland and England (reigned 1603–1714). The family originated in the 11th cent. and from the 12th cent. the Stuarts were hereditary stewards of Scotland. The first Stuart king of Scotland was Robert II (1371–90). The Stuart claim to the English throne stemmed from the marriage of Scottish king James IV to English King Henry VII's daughter, Mary Tudor. Their granddaughter, Mary Queen of Scots, was mother of Scottish king James VI, who became King James I (1603–25), first Stuart king of England. Thereafter the Stuarts reigned (or claimed the throne) during the tumultuous period of the English Civil War, Restoration, and the Glorious Revolution. The Act of Settlement (1701) excluded the Stuarts from the throne, but descendents of the Stuart line ruled until the Hanovers came to power (1714).

Stuart Kings of Scotland

Robert II	1371–90
Robert III	1390–1406
James I	1406–37
James II	1437–60
James III	1460–88
James IV	1488–1513
James V	1513–42
Mary	1542–67
James VI	1567–1625

Stuart Kings of England

James	1603–25
Charles I	1625–49

Civil War, Commonwealth, Protectorate

Charles II	1660–85
James II	1685–88
William III	1689–1702
Anne	1702–14

Stuart, Arabella 1575–1615. English noblewoman, a claimant to the throne. Her cousin, King James I, imprisoned her in the Tower of London, where she died.

Stuart, Charles Edward 1720–88. Claimant to the English throne, a grandson of Charles II. The hope of the Jacobites, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," The Young Pretender, led them in an abortive revolt (1745) but was defeated at the Battle of Culloden (1746). He lived abroad thereafter and died in obscurity.

Stuart, Esme, 1st duke of Lennox *c*1542–83. Scottish nobleman. A favorite of his cousin King James I of England, he had the Earl of Morton executed for Lord Darnley's murder. He was subsequently driven from Scotland for plotting a Spanish invasion of England to rescue Mary Queen of Scots.

Stuart, Frances Teresa, duchess of Richmond and Lennox 1648–1702. English mistress. A great beauty, she is reputed to be the only woman that Charles II truly loved. She married (1667) Charles Stuart, duke of Richmond, but continued her affair with the king.

Stuart, Gilbert 1755–1828. American portrait painter, noted for his portraits of G. Washington, J. Adams, T. Jefferson, and J. Madison.

Stuart, Henry Benedict Maria ⟨Cardinal York⟩ 1725–1807. Last Stuart to claim the English throne. He became the royal pretender as Henry IX on the death of his brother, Charles Edward Stuart (1788). In return for favors granted by King George III, however, he bequeathed the Stuart family jewels to George IV.

Stuart, James Ewell Brown 1833–64. Confederate cavalry officer in the American Civil War, noted for skillful deployment of his troops in battle and for his daring raids behind Union lines.

Stuart, James Francis Edward ⟨the Old Pretender⟩ 1688–1766. English Prince of Wales, son of King James II and claimant to the English throne as James III. His claim was supported by the Jacobites.

Stuart, Mary See Mary Queen of Scots

Sture, Sten *c*1440–1503. Swedish patriot. Sture defeated the Danish king Christian I at Brunkeburg (1471) and unsuccessfully attempted to oppose the union of Sweden with Denmark (Kalmar Union, q.v.).

Sturghkh, Karl, graf von 1859–1916. Austrian prime minister (1911–16). He suspended the Parliament (1914) and, an archenemy of liberals and radicals, was assassinated by a Socialist.

Sturm und Drang ⟨Storm and Stress⟩ German literary movement in the 1770s. It developed as a reaction to rationalism and included works of J. Goethe and F. Schiller.

Stuyvesant, Peter 1592–1672. Dutch administrator, governor of New Amsterdam until its capture (1664) by the English, who renamed it New York.

Stymphalian birds ⟨Stymphalides⟩ Man-eating birds in Greek mythology that infested Lake Stymphalus in Arcadia. Hercules killed them as his sixth labor.

Stymphalides See Stymphalian birds

Styx River in Greek mythology. It was one of the five rivers of Hades, which newly deceased souls crossed. The ferryman Charon provided passage across the river for these souls.

Suárez, Francisco 1548–1617. Spanish Jesuit and prominent Scholastic philosopher. Suarez believed in the equality of souls and disputed the divine right of kings in his Defensio fidei.

Suckling, Sir John 1609–42? English poet, one of the Cavalier Poets *(q.v.).*He was best known for his lyrics.

Sucre, Antonio José de 1795–1830. A South American revolutionary. He was S. Bolívar's chief lieutenant and participated in fighting against the Spanish in Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, and Colombia and commanded in the Battle of Ayacucho (q.v.). He was first president of Bolivia (1826–28).

Sudan ⟨Republic of the Sudan⟩ Republic located in northeastern Africa. Its capital is Khartoum. Northern Sudan, once part of ancient Nubia, was settled by the Egyptians, who were forced out of the region by the 8th cent. BC. Muslims completed conquest of the region in the 16th cent., and Egypt regained control in the early 19th cent. In 1899 the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, a condominium under British and Egyptian rule, was established. The Sudan became independent in 1956. Key dates in the history of Sudan include:

c3400–2000 BC Egypt established control over northern Sudan, then part of the ancient region of Nubia.

8TH–4TH CENT. BC Cush kingdom flourished, after Nubians revolted successfully against Egypt.

6TH CENT. AD Christian state of Dongola established; successfully resisted Muslim invasions from Egypt until its fall (15th cent.).

16TH–19TH CENT. Muslim state of Funj flourished in northern Sudan.

1820–22 Region conquered by Egyptians under Muhammad Ali.

1823 Khartoum founded by Egyptians.

1877–80 British officer and administrator C. Gordon served as governor of Egyptian Sudan; streamlined provincial administration and took steps to end the slave trade.

1881–98 Egyptian rule in Sudan challenged by Mahdist revolt led by Muhammad Ahmed, the Mahdi.

1885 Mahdists overran and destroyed Khartoum (Jan.); Gordon killed; Mahdists seized complete control of Egyptian Sudan.

1885 Mahdi died; succeeded by the Khalifa Abdallahi.

1896–98 Joint Anglo-Egyptian expedition to regain Sudan led by British Gen. H. Kitchener; defeated the Khalifa at Omdurman (Sept. 2, 1898).

1899 Anglo-Egyptian Sudan established (Jan. 19); agreement set up joint British and Egyptian rule.

1924 British divided Sudan into separate northern and southern administrative units.

1936 Anglo-Egyptian treaty reaffirmed 1899 agreement for joint rule of Sudan.

1948 Legislative assembly created (June 19); first step in program for Sudanese autonomy.

1953 British and Egyptians signed accord (Feb. 12) calling for Sudanese autonomy within three years.

1955 Predominantly Christian southern Sudanese began revolt against predominantly Muslim northern Sudanese; lasted to 1972.

1956 Sudan became independent (Jan. 1).

1958 Gen. Ibrahim Abboud seized power in military coup.

1964 Parliamentary government restored after Abboud stepped down as military leader.

1969 Col. Gaafar al-Nimeiry seized power; outlawed political parties and proceeded with nationalization of key industries; Nimeiry remained in power into the early 1980s.

1971 Leftist coup by army officers put down (July).

1972 Years of civil war ended (Feb.); southern Sudan granted degree of autonomy by central government.

1973 New constitution adopted; established one-party rule.

1976 Unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Nimeiry; Nimeiry broke diplomatic relations with Libya, suspecting Libyan leader M. Qaddafi of engineering the coup.

Sudetenland See Munich Pact

Suetonius ⟨Tranquillus, Gaius Suetonius⟩ fl. AD *c*120. Roman biographer. A private secretary to Hadrian, he is chiefly remembered for his Lives of the Caesars.

Sudra caste See caste system

Suez Canal Canal in Eygpt, an important commercial waterway connecting the Mediterranean Sea and the Red Sea. Built by a private French company (1859–69) under the supervision of F. de Lesseps, it passed to the British after they established control over Egypt (1882). After WW II and during the subsequent general withdrawal of the British from Egypt, Britain sought to retain control of the canal. Egyptian leader G. Nasser, however, forced the British to give up the canal (effected June, 1956). He then nationalized the privately-owned canal company (July 26, 1956), when the US refused to go through with a loan to build his coveted Aswan Dam. The resulting Suez Crisis erupted into war when the Israelis, long denied access to the canal, launched the second Arab-Israeli War (q.v.) and invaded Egypt. British and French troops entered the fighting (Oct. 31) to retake the canal. They eventually were replaced by UN troops after a cease-fire was arranged (Nov. 6). The canal was completely blocked during the third Arab-Israeli War (1967) and was not reopened until June, 1975, following the fourth Arab-Israeli War (1973).

Suez Crisis See Suez Canal

Suffolk, Charles Brandon, 1st duke of d. 1545. English nobleman. Suffolk was a favorite and brother-in-law of Henry VIII, whom he accompanied to the Field of Cloth of Gold (1520), and for whom he twice invaded France (1523 and 1544).

Suffolk, Henry Grey, duke of d. 1554. English nobleman. As father of Lady Jane Grey, he joined Northumberland's plot to make her queen. He was spared execution by Mary Tudor, but later joined the T. Wyatt (q.v.) uprising and was beheaded.

Suffolk Resolves Resolutions passed (Sept. 9, 1744) at meetings of American colonists in Suffolk County, Massachusetts, to protest the British Intolerable Acts (q.v.). They called for disobedience to the acts, nonpayment of taxes, the start of regular militia musters, and an end to trade with Britain. The resolves were forwarded to and endorsed by the Continental Congress.

Sufism Muslim mystical, philosophical, and literary movement. An outgrowth of the Shi'ite sect, it stressed the personal union of the soul with God. Sufism flourished especially in Persia in the 11th cent. and produced the best of the Persian poets. Its greatest exponent was Al-Ghazali.

Sugar Act British law (1764) designed to raise revenue for defense of the American colonies and to put an end to smuggling of molasses and sugar from the French and Dutch West Indies to America. New rules regarding shipment and confiscation of illegal cargoes were especially unpopular among colonists and the act helped foment sentiment for revolution.

Suharto (his complete name) 1921–. President of Indonesia (1967–). A career army officer, he led the army in putting down a Communist-influenced coup d'état in 1965. Some 300,000 Indonesian Communists were massacred. From then on he effectively controlled the government, though A. Sukarno remained president. Suharto finally became president in 1967 and was re-elected in 1973.

Sui Chinese dynasty (581–618) that reunited China after the Six Dynasties (q.v.) period. The Sui emperors were Yang Chien (541–604) and his son, Yang Kuang (d. 618). They began construction of a canal system, called the Grand Canal, and refortified the Great Wall. The dynasty was overthrown and the succeeding T'ang dynasty adopted many of the Sui governmental systems.

Sukarno, Achmed 1901–70. Indonesian statesman, president (1949–67), and leader of the nationalists in the fight for independence from the Dutch (1945–49). After becoming president he consolidated his power, dissolved the assembly (1959), and made himself dictator. At the same time, he sought closer relations with the Communists, particularly the Chinese. An attempted Communist coup, however, resulted in a takeover by the Indonesian army and Sukarno's ouster.

Sulayman See Suleiman

Suleiman I ⟨Suleyman I⟩ 1494–1566. Sultan of the Ottoman Empire (1520–66), son and successor of Selim I. He was known as "the Magnificent" and "the Lawgiver" for his expansion of the empire, his patronage of the arts, and his many reforms. His conquests include Belgrade (1521), Rhodes (1522), southern Hungary (at the Battle of Mohács, 1526), and parts of Persia, Iraq, and Tripoli (by 1551). His navy, under the command of Barbarossa, terrorized the Mediterranean. During his reign, Suleiman also formed what became a long-standing alliance with France against the Hapsburg rulers of Europe.

Suleiman II 1642–91. Ottoman sultan (1687–91), successor to his brother, Muhammad IV. Through his minister, Mustafa Kuprili, he introduced liberal reforms. His reign was marked by the Austro-Turkish War (1682–99).

Suleyman I See Suleiman I

Sulla, Lucius Cornelius 138–78 BC. Roman general and politician. A rivalry with Marius had become a bitter feud and, when Sulla became consul (88 BC), civil war broke out between them. Sulla won that year and then departed for Asia Minor to fight the first Mithradatic War (88–85). Marius subsequently marched on Rome, massacred Sulla's supporters, and took power. Sulla returned to Rome (83), seized power, and defeated Carbo (leader of the Marian party) in the ensuing civil war. He then made himself dictator for life (82) and began the systematic murder of thousands of his opponents. At the same time, he instituted a program of governmental reforms, notably those to restore the power of the Senate. He resigned unexpectedly in 79 BC.

Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour 1842–1900. English composer. With lyricist Sir W. Gilbert, Sullivan created such famous operettas as The Pirates of Penzance, The Mikado, and H.M.S. Pinafore.

Sullivan, John 1740–95. American Revolutionary War general. He saw action at the battles of Long Island, Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, and Germantown, and fought in the campaign against the Iroquois (1779).

Sullivan, Louis Henry 1856–1924. American architect, considered the "Father of Modernism" for his designs of early skyscrapers, especially the Gage Building and the Chicago Stock Exchange. His pupil was F.L. Wright.

Sully, Maximilien de Béthune, duc de 1560–1641. French financier and statesman. A close friend of Henry IV, he became finance minister (by 1598) and restored the royal treasury, which had been seriously depleted by the Wars of Religion.

Sully-Prudhomme, René François Armand 1839–1907. French poet, one of the Parnassians. His poetry was marked by its philosophical concerns. He won the first Nobel Prize for literature (1901).

sultan Islamic term applied at first to spiritual leaders of the Islamic community and later to Muslim rulers wielding political authority.

Sumatra Treaty See Achinese War

Sumer Ancient civilization of southern Mesopotamia from roughly the 4th to 3d millennium BC to the beginning of the 2d millennium BC. Though an extensive village culture existed in the region by the 5th millennium BC, the formation of Sumerian cities and the rise of Sumerian culture did not begin until the 4th to 3d millennium. From that time, such cities as Eridu, Erech, Lagash, Larsa, and Ur flourished as commercial and cultural centers and rivaled one another for control of neighboring lands. In the 24th cent. BC, however, the Semitic people of northern Mesopotamia, the Akkadians (see Akkad), conquered Sumeria and made it part of their empire. The Akkadians absorbed and thus spread much of the Sumerian culture (including cuneiform writing) before they were in turn conquered (22d cent. BC) by invaders from the north. Thereafter the Sumerians enjoyed a brief resurgence under the leadership of such cities as Lagash and, notably, Ur. But dynastic struggles and invasions by neighboring peoples brought on their final decline in the 20th cent. BC. During their ascendancy, the Sumerians developed the first writing system (cuneiform) in the Near East, the first written civil law code, commercial and banking systems, skills in pottery-making and metal-working and agricultural and military technology. The fall of Sumerian civilization was followed by the rise of Babylonia (q.v.).

Summer Offensive See June Offensive

summit conference Meeting by heads of major powers to discuss fundamental issues of mutual interest. These meetings became a prominent feature of East-West diplomacy after WW II. The first (1955) was attended by US Pres. D. Eisenhower, Soviet leader N. Khrushchev, and British Prime Minister A. Eden and sought to ease Cold War tensions. A 1960 Paris summit between the US, the Soviet Union, and European powers was scuttled by the U-2 incident (q.v.). The 1961 Vienna summit between Pres. J. Kennedy and Khrushchev marked the beginning of further East-West tensions. Pres. R. Nixon's Peking conference (1972) formally began the process of normalizing US-China relations. Nixon's Moscow conference (1972) marked the first visit to Moscow by a US president.

Sumner, Charles 1811–74. US Senator (1851–74) from Massachusetts. A prominent abolitionist, he was attacked and beaten in the Senate by a southern senator, was a leader of Radical Republicans demanding a harsh Reconstruction (q.v.) policy, and urged the impeachment of Pres. A. Johnson.

Sumter, Thomas 1734–1832. American general. During the American Revolution he commanded (1780) a force of raiders that harassed the British in North and South Carolina. Fort Sumter was named for him.

Sunday, Billy ⟨Ashley, William⟩ 1863–1935. American Christian evangelist and preacher. A former professional baseball player, he gained a wide following (from 1896) for his revival meetings.

Sunday school Program of religious education for the young. The first Sunday school was organized by R. Raikes in England (1780). By 1786 the first one had been organized in Virginia.

Sung Chinese dynasty and historic period (960–1279), which followed the Five Dynasties (q.v.) period. One of the great epochs of Chinese history, it was marked by commercial prosperity, a cultural flowering, administrative reforms, and technological innovations. The dynasty was founded by Chao K'uang-yin (reigned 960–976), a general serving the later Chou dynasty ruler. On the emperor's death, Chao took power and by 976 had largely completed reunification of China. With its capital at Kaifeng, the Sung dynasty was not seriously threatened until 1127. At this time, invasions by nomadic Jurchen tribes from the north forced Sung rulers to move their capital to Lin-an (now Hangchow) in the south. Thus the Sung dynasty is usually divided into Northern Sung (960–1127) and Southern Sung (1127–1279). The Sung dynasty was finally conquered (1279) by the invading Mongols under Kublai Khan, who replaced it with the Yüan dynasty. Sung rulers instituted administrative reforms (notably those of Wang An-shih, q.v.), many of which were aimed at centralizing power (especially to gain firm control over the military) and also fostered the growth of schools and a great government bureaucracy. Commercial prosperity came as a result of increased trade, notably with India, Persia, and the Arabs. The Sung period was further marked by the increase in printing (with movable type by the 11th cent.); a revival of Confucianism and the writings of Chu Hsi; the compilation of great encyclopedias and histories; and a golden age of Chinese landscape painting and ceramics. It also saw the use of gunpowder and the magnetic compass for navigation.

Sunga Dynasty that ruled North India between *c*185 and *c*73 BC. It succeeded the Maurya Empire. During the rule of this dynasty Brahmanical Hinduism re-emerged as the official state religion, after a temporary eclipse by Buddhism.

Sunnis See Sunnites

Sunnites (Sunnis) Traditional or orthodox sect of Islam, adhered to by over three-quarters of all Muslims. They accept the actual succession of the early Muslim caliphs, while the other major sect, the Shi'ites (q.v.), say that Ali (the fourth) was the first true successor of Muhammad. The Sunnites also accept the Sunnah as the legitimate body of Muslim traditions.

Sun Yat-sen 1866–1925. Chinese revolutionary, the father of the Chinese republic and leader of the Nationalist Kuomintang until his death. Sun led an abortive revolt at Canton (1895) and for the next 16 years worked in exile to promote revolution in China. He returned to China during the Revolution of 1911 and served for a few months as president of the provisional government (1911–12). Next he led an abortive revolt (1913) against the dictatorial regime of Yüan Shih-k'ai and fled China until 1917. Sun became president of the Nationalist government at Canton (1923), formed an alliance with the Chinese Communists, and reorganized the Nationalist Kuomintang with the help of Russia. He died before being able to launch his planned Northern Expedition (q.v.).

Sun Yat-sen, Madame See Soong Ching-ling

Suppiluliumas I See Hittite Empire

Supremacy, Acts of See Acts of Supremacy

suprematism School of abstract art that began in Russia around 1913. Totally nonrepresentational, it emphasized pure geometric forms. The school was founded by Casimir Malevich (1878–1935) and it influenced modern architecture and industrial design.

Supreme Court Highest court, in the US, empowered to interpret treaties, laws, and the Constitution; mediate disputes between states or citizens of different states; and act as the court of final appeal. The Court was established in 1787 by Article 3 of the Constitution. Originally set at six members, its number stabilized at nine in 1869, despite F.D. Roosevelt's efforts to enlarge it in the 1930s. The justices, including one chief justice and eight associate justices, are appointed for life. Justices have generally fallen into two categories: those who strictly interpret the letter of the law, and those whose looser interpretations allow "implied" governmental powers. The first female justice was appointed to the court in 1981.

Surinam (formerly Dutch Guiana) Independent republic located on the northeast coast of South America. Capital is Paramaribo. Settled by the Dutch and the English, Surinam was granted to the Dutch by the Treaty of Breda (1667), in return for abandonment of Dutch claims to New Amsterdam (New York). Surinam became an autonomous state within the kingdom of The Netherlands (1954) and an independent republic (Nov. 25, 1975). In 1980 its government was overthrown by a military coup d'état.

Surji-Arjungaon, Treaty of Treaty (Dec. 30, 1803) between the British and the Marathas, concluding the second Maratha War. It virtually ended Maratha independence (they agreed to accept a British resident) and consolidated British rule over northern Indian territory.

Surprise plot See Bye plot

Surprising Treason See Bye plot

Surrat, Mary Eugenia 1820–65. American conspirator, who kept the Washington, D.C., boarding house where J. Booth and others planned A. Lincoln's assassination. She was hung, though her actual guilt is still debated.

surrealism Literary and art movement founded in 1924 by A. Breton. An outgrowth of Dada, it focused on the use of unconscious thought processes and their expression.

Suryavarman II See Angkor Wat

Susanna Biblical matron. She refused seduction by two elders, who in turn vengefully accused her of adultery. Daniel proved their guilt.

Suslov, Mikhail 1902–82. Soviet Communist leader. Suslov held important government positions under J. Stalin, N. Khrushchev, and L. Brezhnev, and was considered a leading spokesman of Soviet Communist ideology. He supported the Russian invasions of Hungary (1956), Czechoslovakia (1968), and Afghanistan (1979), and advocated the imposition of martial law in Poland (1981).

Sussex* Incident International incident caused by the sinking of the passenger ship Sussex by a German submarine (Mar. 24, 1916). Because two of the 80 casualties were American, the US issued the "Sussex Ultimatum" to Germany (Apr. 18, 1916). Germany initially agreed to give warning and provide for the safety of those aboard ships being torpedoed, but her resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare in (Feb., 1917) helped bring the US into WW I.

Sussex Ultimatum See Sussex Incident

Sutter, John Augustus 1803–80. German-born American pioneer. Gold found (1848) on Sutter's land in the Sacramento, California, valley set off the Gold Rush (1849). Prospectors overran Sutter's land, killed his cattle, and eventually bankrupted him.

Suttner, Bertha Kinsky, Baroness von 1843–1914. Austrian writer and pacifist. Her pacifist novel Lay Down Your Arms profoundly influenced many, including A. Nobel. She was the first woman awarded the Nobel Peace Prize (1905).

Suvorov, Aleksandr Vasilievich 1729–1800. Russian general who served Russia in many wars, including the Seven Years' War, Russo-Turkish War (1787–92), and the French Revolutionary Wars.

Sverdrup, Johan 1816–92. Norwegian statesman. A leftist, he was president of the Storting (1871–84) and prime minister (1884–89). He helped institute trial by jury, parliamentary and agrarian reforms, and compulsory military service.

Sverre d. 1202. King of Norway(1184–1202), considered one of the great Norwegian kings. He limited the power of the church and aristocracy and increased the power of the monarchy.

Sviatoslav 920–72. Duke of Kiev (945–72) and Russian national hero. He spent his entire career in conquest, expanding Kiev into an empire that extended from the Volga to the Danube. He was eventually compelled by his one-time Byzantine allies to relinquish his Balkan territories.

Svoboda, Ludvik 1895–. Czechoslovakian general and president (1968–75). Svoboda was a military hero in both WW I and WW II. As president, he obtained the release of the political prisoners taken in the Russian invasion of 1968.

Swabia Historic region, now in southern West Germany. Originally settled by the Suevi and Alamanni, it became a duchy in the 9th cent. and once belonged to the Hohenstaufen family (1105–1254). Thereafter the duchy was divided into smaller land holdings. See also Swabian League.

Swabian Leagues Protective associations formed at various times in the Middle Ages by cities and other local powers in what is now southern Germany. The most important of them (sometimes called the Great Swabian League) was formed in 1488 by 22 imperial cities, local leagues, and noblemen. It supported Holy Roman Emperor Charles V and its army fought the rebels in the Peasants' War (1524–25). Religious differences during the reformation forced its dissolution in 1534.

Swahili African Bantu people and language. The language shows marked Arabic influence and is spoken in Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, and Zaire.

Swamp Fox, the See Marion, Francis

Swaziland Southeast African kingdom. Capital is Mbabane. The native Swazis migrated to their present homeland (early 19th cent.) under pressure from Zulus and soon afterward granted concessions to European powers. Swaziland became a British territory in 1903, achieved limited self-government in 1963, and became independent on Sept. 6, 1968. King Sobhuza II (reigned 1921–82) dissolved Parliament and assumed personal control of the kingdom in 1973. A new Parliament, with advisory powers only, was created in 1979. Sobhuza's successor was not named immediately after his death.

sweatshop Term applied to a workplace characterized by unsanitary or dangerous working conditions and by the employment of workers at extremely low pay. Sweatshops flourished in England, the US, and other nations in the 19th cent. and contributed to the rise of unions and passage of labor laws to protect workers.

Sweden ⟨Kingdom of Sweden⟩ Constitutional monarchy located in northern Europe. Its capital is Stockholm. United with Norway (1319) and Denmark (1397), Sweden fell under Danish domination until it gained independence (1523) under Swedish king Gustavus I. By the 17th cent. Sweden had become the greatest power in the Baltic, a position it lost in the Great Northern War (1700–21). During the 19th cent., Norway was united with Sweden. In the early 20th cent., Sweden began to set up its extensive social welfare system. Key dates in the history of Sweden include:

993–1024 Olaf Skutkonung reigned; first Christian king of Sweden.

1150–60 Eric IX reigned; increased Sweden's military and advanced Christianity; began Swedish conquest of Finland, but was killed by Danish Prince Magnus Henrikson.

1240 Invasion of Novgorod (now Russia) halted by defeat in the Battle of the Neva.

1319–65 Magnus VII reigned; united (1319) Norway and Sweden.

1397 Kalmar Union; Queen Margaret joined Denmark, Norway and Sweden under one crown at Kalmar, Sweden.

1450 Sten Sture the Elder expelled Danish-Norwegian king Christian I.

1513–23 Christian II reigned as king of Denmark and Norway (1513–23) and Sweden (1520–23), successor to his father, King John.

1520 Stockholm Bloodbath (Nov. 8); execution of Swedish nobles by Christian II to prevent breakup of Kalmar Union.

1521–23 Swedes rebelled against Christian II and forced Danes from all of Sweden except the southern tip (1521); made Gustavus Vasa king as Gustavus I (1523).

1523–60 Gustavus I reigned; made Lutheranism the state religion, established a hereditary monarchy, and founded the Vasa dynasty.

1560–68 Eric XIV reigned; conquered Estonia (1561).

1569–92 John III reigned; married the sister of Polish king Sigismund II; succeeded by his son, Polish king Sigismund III.

1592–99 Polish King Sigismund III reigned in Sweden; his rule was opposed by the Swedish Protestants and he was deposed.

1611–32 Gustavus Adolphus reigned as Gustavus II; took Ingermanland and parts of Karelia from Russia (1617); conquered most of Livonia from Poland; led Sweden (1630) into the Thirty Years' War.

1611–13 Sweden defeated by Denmark in Kalmar War.

1618–48 Thirty Years' War.

1632–54 Queen Christina reigned; Peace of Westphalia, ending Thirty Years' War, concluded during her rule; Sweden gained substantial territories and the monarch became a prince of the Holy Roman Empire; Sweden became the dominant Baltic power.

1654–60 Charles X Gustavus reigned following Christina's abdication; waged successful war against Poland (1655–60), the first Northern War; forced Poland to officially cede Livonia by the Treaty of Oliva (May 3, 1660) and won Danish-held territory at southern tip of Sweden.

1660–97 Charles XI reigned; established absolute monarchy.

1697–1718 Charles XII reigned; presided over Sweden's decline during much of the Great Northern War (1700–21).

1700–21 Great Northern War fought by Sweden against coalition of Denmark, Poland, and Russia; defeated, Sweden was forced to sign the treaties of Stockholm (1720) and Nystadt (1721), by which it lost Estonia, Livonia, and most of its German holdings; war marked the decline of Sweden and the rise of Russia as the dominant power in the region.

1718–20 Ulrika Eleanora reigned; acceded to a constitution establishing a constitutional monarchy with authority residing in a Riksdag, or parliament.

1741–43 Sweden defeated in Russo-Swedish War; Finnish Territory ceded to Russia.

c1770–1810 Swedish Enlightenment.

1771–92 Gustavus III reigned; reimposed (Aug. 19, 1772) absolute monarchy; tyrannical rule led to his murder.

1788–89 Nobles and army officers of the Anjala League unsuccessfully attempted to undermine Gustavus III, then at war with Russia.

1792–1809 Gustavus IV reigned; ruled during French Revolutionary and most of the Napoleonic wars; Russia seized Finland from Sweden (1808) and Gustavus was deposed.

1809 Riksdag adopted new constitution (1809) and made Charles XIII king (reigned 1809–18); Charles ceded (1809) Finland to Russia.

1810 French Marshal Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte named successor to Charles XIII; Bernadotte soon became leading power in Swedish government.

1814 Sweden and Norway united by Congress of Vienna in Treaty of Kiel.

1818–44 Bernadotte reigned as Charles XIV; established Bernadotte dynasty and began period of peace and liberalization in Sweden.

1905 Union between Norway and Sweden dissolved.

1907–50 Gustavus V reigned; maintained Swedish armed neutrality through both WW I and WW II.

1911 Old-age pension system established; marked beginning of extensive social welfare system set up in Sweden during subsequent years.

1920, 1921–23, 1924–25 H. Branting served as premier; promoted social democracy.

1932–46 Social Democratic leader P. Hansson served as prime minister.

1932–76 Social Democratic party dominant party in Swedish government; shared power with opposing parties during WW II (1939–45) but resumed sole control of the cabinet after the war.

1950–73 Gustavus VI reigned; rule was marked by passage of new laws promoting social welfare in Sweden.

1973 Carl XVI became king (Sept. 15) following death of his father.

1976 Forty-year rule of Social Democrats ended; Thorbjörn Fälldin, coalition government leader, named prime minister.

1978 Prime Minister Ola Ullsten (liberal) in office after struggle over increasing number of nuclear power plants.

1980 Center party leader Fälldin returned to office as head of non-Socialist coalition government.

1980 Voters approved referendum for expansion of nuclear generating system.

1982 Olaf Palme, a Social Democrat, in office as prime minister.

Swedenborg, Emanuel 1688–1772. Swedish scientist and religious leader. Swedenborg devoted himself exclusively to religion after 1734. His writings interpreting the Scriptures became the basis for the Church of New Jerusalem, an organization founded by his followers.

Swedish Enlightenment Literary period (*c*1770–*c*1810), the flowering of neoclassicism in Sweden. Sometimes called the Gustavian Enlightenment after Gustavus III, the period saw official encouragement of literature through the royal patronage of Gustavus, as well as the founding of the Swedish Academy (1786).

Sweyn ⟨Sweyn Forkbeard⟩ d. 1014. King of Denmark (*c*985–1014). He killed King Olaf I, conquered Norway (1000), and later conquered England (1013). He was the father of Canute.

Sweyn Forkbeard See Sweyn

Swift, Jonathan 1667–1745. Great English satirist. He wrote social and political satires, including A Tale of a Tub, The Drapier Letters, A Modest Proposal, and the classic Gulliver's Travels.

Swinburne, Algernon Charles 1837–1909. English poet. Swinburne at times offended Victorian sensibilities, but his poems were known for their energy, innovativeness, and mastery of the language. His works include Atalanta in Calydon, Poems and Ballads, and A Song of Italy.

Swiss Confederation Union of the 22 Swiss cantons that make up Switzerland. The nucleus of the confederation was formed (1291) by the cantons Uri, Schwyz, and Unterwalden (Forest Cantons) to maintain their liberties against encroachments by the Austrian Hapsburgs. Other cantons joined in the 14th and 15th cents., and the confederation finally won recognition of its independence in 1648. See also Switzerland.

Swiss Guards Swiss mercenary soldiers noted for their bravery in the service of European powers, especially France. They were provided (from 1512) by Swiss cantons under agreements called capitulations. The Swiss constitution banned further capitulations (1874).

Swithin, Saint ⟨Swithun, Saint⟩ fl. 860. English saint. Swithin was adviser to kings Egbert and Aethelwulf. Traditionally, if there is rain on his feast (July 15), there will be rain for 40 days.

Swithun, Saint See Swithin, Saint

Switzerland ⟨Swiss Confederation⟩ Country located in central Europe and situated in the mountain ranges of the Alps. Its capital is Bern. The modern state of Switzerland developed from the original "Forest Cantons" that rebelled (13th cent.) against rule of the Austrian Hapsburgs. Switzerland was a center of Calvinism during the 16th-cent. Reformation. The neutrality of Switzerland was guaranteed by the Treaty of Paris in 1815 and the country has maintained a tradition of neutrality since then. Such international conferences as the Geneva Conventions have been held there, and organizations such as the International Red Cross and the International Labor Organization have their headquarters there. Key dates in the history of Switzerland include:

58 BC Helvetii, who inhabited what is now Switzerland, conquered by the Romans.

5TH CENT. AD Territory invaded by Germanic tribes (Alemanni and Burgundii).

6TH CENT. AD Area passed under Frankish control.

1033 Area became part of the Holy Roman Empire.

1276 Rudolf of Hapsburg, Holy Roman Emperor, attempted to assert feudal rights in Switzerland.

1291 Cantons of Uri, Schwyz, and Unterwalden (around Lake Lucerne) formed defensive league against the Hapsburgs; became the basis of the Swiss Confederation.

14TH CENT. Zurich, Glarus, Bern, Lucerne, and Zug joined the Swiss defensive league.

1307 Rutli Oath—traditionally, the alliance of the cantons that became foundation of Swiss independence movement; legend of W. Tell dates from this period.

1315 Austrian invasion repulsed by Swiss Confederation at Battle of Morgarten (Nov. 15).

1386 Swiss routed Austrian Hapsburgs at Battle of Sempach (July 9).

1388 Austrian invaders defeated at the Battle of Nafels, central Switzerland (Apr. 9).

15TH CENT. Fribourg and Solothurn joined the league; Aargau, Thurgau and the valleys of Ticino conquered.

1476 Burgundian invasion repulsed at the Battle of Morat (June 22).

1499 Swiss independence recognized by Emperor Maximilian I in Peace of Basel (Sept. 22).

1513 Basel, Schaffhausen, and Appenzell joined the confederation; confederation now composed of 13 cantons.

1515 Battle of Marignano; the French decisively defeated the Swiss.

1516 Alliance with France formed; Swiss adopted what became traditional policy of neutrality; Swiss mercenaries nevertheless served in European wars.

1519 Swiss Reformation launched by U. Zwingli in Zurich.

1529, 1531 Kappel Wars; religious wars between Protestants and Catholics.

1536 Geneva, under the influence of J. Calvin, revolted against Savoy and its Catholic bishop.

1541 Calvin founded theocratic government at Geneva; made Geneva the center of Calvinism.

1618–48 Switzerland neutral during the Thirty Years' War.

1648 Peace of Westphalia; Switzerland recognized as a completely independent state.

1798 Napoleon conquered Switzerland during the French Revolutionary Wars; established the Helvetic Republic (1798–1803).

1803 Act of Mediation; Napoleon partially restored the traditional Swiss Confederation.

1815 Congress of Vienna; Swiss Confederation restored; nine cantons added.

1815 Treaty of Paris; perpetual Swiss neutrality recognized.

1845 Sonderbund, league of Catholic cantons, established; its existence led to a short civil war and its dissolution (1847).

1848 Constitution adopted; established central federal government, replacing the former confederation.

1864–1949 Geneva Conventions; series of international agreements regulating warfare and treatment of prisoners.

1874 Constitution revised; specified certain federal functions, such as foreign relations and establishing tariffs.

1927 Geneva Conference convened; unsuccessful attempt to reduce naval armaments.

1932–34 Geneva Conference, unsuccessful attempt to reduce armaments, collapsed when A. Hitler withdrew from conference.

1954 Geneva Conference led to armistice in the Korean War.

1958 Geneva Conference held between US, USSR, and Great Britain to discuss nuclear test ban.

1959 Switzerland became a member of the European Free Trade Association.

1971 Woman suffrage approved (Feb. 7).

1972 Switzerland associated with the European Common Market.

1979 Canton Jura created (Jan. 1), bringing total number of cantons to 23 (20 full cantons, 6 half cantons).

1981 Referendum granting women equality with men approved in nationwide vote.

Sybaris Ancient city in what is now southern Italy. Founded by the Achaean Greeks (720 BC), it soon became renown for its wealth and the decadence of its citizens. It was attacked and destroyed (510 BC) by forces from Crotona.

Sybota, Battle of Naval battle (432 BC) during the Peloponnesian War. A combined force from Corcyra and Athens defeated the Corinthian fleet.

Sydenham, Thomas 1624–89. English physician. Called the English Hippocrates, Sydenham observed and described such illnesses as gout, malaria, scarlet fever, and smallpox. He introduced the use of a substance containing quinine to treat malaria and began the practice of using opium medicinally.

Sydney, Philip See Sidney, Sir Philip

Sykes-Picot Agreement Secret agreement concluded by Britain and France (May 9, 1916), regarding partition of the Ottoman Empire after WW I. Britain was to get direct control of southern Mesopotamia and other territories. France was to get Lebanon and parts of Syria. Additional Arabian territories (to be a federation of states) were designated as within respective spheres of influence.

Sylvester II d. 1003. French-born pope (999–1003). The first French pope, Sylvester was renowned for his scientific expertise. He promoted Christianity in Poland and Hungary.

Symbolists French literary school of the late 19th cent. A reaction to naturalism and realism, it sought to express universal truths by subjective or symbolic means. Symbolists were followers of P. Verlaine and S. Mallarmé, and their movement spread to other countries, as well as other art forms, notably painting and music.

Symeon See Simeon

Symons, Arthur 1865–1945. British poet and critic. A leading British Symbolist, he helped introduce the movement in Britain.

Symplegades In Greek mythology, two cliffs at the entrance to the Black Sea that moved together to crush any ship passing between them. Jason succeeded in guiding his ship, the Argo, between them and they remained open forever afterward.

syndicalism Theory of government holding that power of the state should be primarily concentrated in the hands of organized labor unions. Influenced by P. Proudhon and G. Sorel, it flourished especially in France, Spain, Italy, and Latin America before WW I. It declined with the spread of Communist-dominated unions.

Synge, John Millington 1871–1909. Irish poet and playwright. Synge is famous for such studies of Irish life as Riders to the Sun and The Playboy of the Western World.

Synod of See under names inverted, as in Whitby, Synod of Syracuse ⟨Siracusa⟩ Historic port city (pop. 108,000) in Sicily, Italy. Founded (734 BC) as a Corinthian colony, it became the most powerful city in Sicily under the tyrant Gelon (5th cent. BC) and a Greek cultural center under Hiero, his successor. Syracuse was the scene of major battles (see Syracuse, Battle of) during the Peloponnesian and Punic Wars, and its conquest by the Romans in 212 BC marked the beginning of its decline. Thereafter it was taken by the Byzantines (AD 535), Arabs (AD 878), and the Normans (1085). It later became part of the Kingdom of The Two Sicilies.

Syracuse, Battle of 1. Protracted battle (415–413 BC) during the Peloponnesian War (431–404 BC).

Athens laid siege to the city of Syracuse (now in Sicily) and ultimately committed some 40,000 soldiers and over 200 ships to the action. Syracuse, reinforced by Sparta, eventually killed or captured the entire Athenian force (including the commander Nicias and Demosthenes) and thereby contributed to Athens' defeat in the Peloponnesian War. 2. Battle (387 BC) in which the Carthaginians suffered a decisive defeat after laying siege to Syracuse. 3. Battle (214–212 BC) during the Second Punic War (218–201), in which Rome captured the city. A force of 25,000 Romans under Marcellus attacked the city, defended by Hippocrates. After initial defeats brought about in part by defensive weapons devised by Archimedes, the Romans breached the city's defenses and sacked the city.

Syracuse, Dion of See Dion of Syracuse

Syria (Syrian Arab Republic) Country located at the eastern end of the Mediterranean in the Middle East. Its capital is Damascus. Historically the term "Syria" referred to the region occupied by the modern republic, as well as Jordan, Lebanon, and Palestine. The modern republic was formed in 1944 from territories that once belonged to the Ottoman Empire, which had been acquired by France in the early 1900s during the breakup of the Ottoman Empire. Key events in the history of Syria include:

c2100 BC Amorites (Semites) settled in the area of Syria.

15TH–13TH CENT. BC Syria part of the Hittite Empire, alternating with Egyptian overlordship.

8TH CENT. BC Most of the area conquered and made part of the Assyrian Empire.

538 BC Persia conquered the region.

333–332 BC Alexander the Great made Syria part of his empire.

312–64 BC Seleucid dynasty in power in Syria and environs; established by Seleucus I following breakup of Alexander the Great's empire.

64 BC Domains of Seleucid Empire (greatly reduced) made into a Roman province by Pompey.

4TH CENT. AD Antioch, a principal center of Christianity, was one of the four ancient patriarchates, along with Rome, Alexandria, and, later, Constantinople.

5TH CENT. AD Syria remained part of the Byzantine Empire at the dissolution of the Western Roman Empire.

633–640 Arab Muslim conquest of Syria.

661–750 Damascus served as the seat of the Umayyad caliphate, then the center of the Islamic world.

11TH CENT. Most of Syria under the sway of the Seljuk Turks.

1099 Most of Syria incorporated by the Christian crusaders into the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem.

1174–87 Saladin, sultan of Egypt, regained Syria for Islam, overthrowing the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem.

1260 Mongol invasion under Hulagu Khan devastated Syria and almost destroyed Aleppo and Damascus.

1401 The Mongols under Tamerlane again sacked Aleppo and Damascus.

1516 Syria incorporated into the Ottoman Empire for the next four hundred years.

1832–40 Syria annexed to Egypt by Ibrahim Pasha; returned to Ottoman suzerainty (1840).

1920 France granted a League of Nations mandate over Syria, following the breakup of the Ottoman Empire; region included Lebanon.

1926 Lebanon made a separate state by the French.

1936 Syrian autonomy (under the mandate) granted by France; suspended in 1939.

1941 Syria invaded by British and Free French forces, who took it from the Vichy French regime (June).

1941 Syria proclaimed a republic (Sept.).

1943 Rise of Ba'ath party.

1944 Syria became fully independent (Jan. 1); Shukri al-Kuwatli became first president.

1946 French troops finally withdrew, following unrest caused by continued French military presence.

1948–49 Arab-Israeli War; Syria joined in attack on newly created Israeli state.

1949 First of a number of military coups, led by Col. Adib al-Shishakli (Dec.).

1950 Constitution providing for parliamentary government promulgated; lasted less than a year.

FROM 1954 Ba'ath party became a dominant force in Syrian politics.

1958–61 Syria joined with Egypt in the United Arab Republic (UAR).

1961 Army coup in Syria; Syria withdrew from UAR.

1962 Military coup; constitutional government restored.

1963 Coup by Ba'athists; program of nationalization and social reform adopted; split developed in Ba'ath Party.

1966 Coup by radical Ba'athists.

1967 Arab-Israeli War; Israelis victorious in Six-Day War; Golan Heights taken.

1970 Army officers seized power in coup led by Gen. Hafez al-Assad (Nov. 13).

1971 Assad elected president; he remained in office into the early 1980s.

1973 New constitution approved by voters; failure to include provision naming Islam state religion ended in boycott of voting by Sunni Muslims.

1973 First parliamentary elections (May) in over a decade; coalition of Ba'ath, Communist, and Socialist parties secured a substantial majority.

1973 Fourth Arab-Israeli War; Israelis repulsed attacks by Egyptians and Syrians.

1974 Syria signed agreement with Israel (May) whereby the latter returned to 1967 cease-fire line; UN troops in Golan Heights.

1974 Syria introduced UN resolution naming Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) sole representative of the Palestinians.

1976 30,000 Syrian troops sent into Lebanon to help mediate Lebanese civil war.

1980 Formal agreement signed uniting Libya and Syria (Sept. 10).

1980–82 Syrian troops in Lebanon actively supported Muslim factions in Lebanon; clashes with Israelis developed into heavy fighting during the Lebanese War (1982).

Syrian Orthodox church ⟨Jacobite Church⟩ Christian church founded (6th cent.) as a Monophysite sect. Adherents are sometimes called Jacobites after a principal organizer of the church, Jacob Baradaeus, bishop of Edessa (d. 578).

Syrian Wars 1. First Syrian War (276–272 BC), between Egypt and the Seleucid Empire. It led to the defeat of Seleucid king Antiochus I and the seizure of Phoenicia and much of Anatolia by Egyptian King Ptolemy II. 2. Second Syrian War (*c*260–255 BC). It resulted in the defeat of Egypt by Seleucid King Antiochus II, aided by Macedonia. The Seleucids regained much of Phoenicia and Anatolia. 3. Third Syrian War (*c*245–241 BC), also known as the Laodicean War. It resulted in the Egyptian defeat of Seleucid king Seleucus II, who lost to Egypt parts of Syria and Asia Minor. 4. Fourth Syrian War (221–217 BC). It ended in the victory of Egyptian king Ptolemy IV over Seleucid king Antiochus III, who was forced to cede Coele Syria to Egypt. 5. Fifth Syrian War (*c*201–195 BC). The Egyptians were defeated by Seleucid king Antiochus III, who regained Coele Syria and parts of southern Asia Minor.

Szold, Henrietta 1860–1945. American Zionist leader. A teacher, she founded (1912) the Jewish women's group Hadassah.

T

Taaffe, Eduard, Graf von 1833–95. Austrian statesman. As premier (1868–70, 1879–93) he attempted to reconcile conflicts between the various national groups comprising the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Tabari, al- *c*839–923. Arab historian and writer. He is noted for his commentaries on the Koran and for his Annals of the Apostles and the Kings, a compilation of world history from creation to the year 915.

Tabitha See Dorcas

Table of Abydos Ancient list of kings at the temple of Seti I in Abydos, Egypt. It helped to establish the chronology of the ancient Egyptian kings.

Table of Tanis See Decree Of Canopus

Taborites Most militant wing of the Bohemian Hussites. Named after their fortified city, Tabor, they founded their own sect but were defeated (1452) by a coalition of Catholics and Hussite Utraquists.

Tacitus AD 55?–*c*117. Roman historian. Tacitus served in many military and governmental posts before becoming Consul (AD 97). He quickly gained a reputation as an eloquent speaker, then turned to writing. His works include the Dialogus, a book on oratory; Agricola, a biography of his father-in-law, Agricola; Germania, a history of early German tribes; and two major works on Roman history, the Histories and the Annals.

Tacna-Arica Controversy Prolonged dispute (1883–1929) over the provinces of Arica and Tacna, which Chile had obtained from Peru at the end of the War of the Pacific (q.v.). The dispute was finally resolved by the suggestions of US president H. Hoover that Chile should retain Arica but return Tacna, pay an indemnity, and provide Peru with a free port at Arica.

Tafari Makonnen See Haile Selassie I

Taft, Robert Alphonso 1889–1953. American statesman, son of W. Taft. As US senator (1939–53) he was cosponsor of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act (1947).

Taft, William Howard 1857–1930. US president (1909–13), the 27th, successor to Pres. T. Roosevelt. Taft became first civil governor of the Philippines (1901–04), and in 1904, he became secretary of war under Roosevelt. Picked by Roosevelt as his successor, Taft became the Republican candidate for president (1908) and defeated W. Bryan in the election. Taft continued Roosevelt's policy of trust-busting, but he modified Roosevelt's Latin American policy into what came to be known as "dollar diplomacy" (q.v.). However, Taft increasingly opposed progressive legislation and policies, and his support of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff (1909) brought much opposition from the progressive wing of the Republican party. He managed to win the 1912 Republican nomination but was now opposed by Roosevelt, who had formed the Progressive (Bull Moose) party (q.v.). This split the Republican party and resulted in the election of the Democratic candidate, W. Wilson. Taft subsequently served as chief justice of the US Supreme Court (1921–30).

Taft-Hartley Labor Act US labor relations act passed (1947) over the veto of Pres. H. Truman. It prohibited the closed shop and jurisdictional and secondary strikes and authorized suits against labor unions and government use of 80-day injunctions against some strikes.

Tagal See Tagalog

Tagalog ⟨Tagal⟩ Filipino people, second-largest ethnic group in the Philippines. They are largely Christian, and their Malayo-Polynesian language, also called Tagalog, is the official language of the Philippines.

Taginae, Battle of See Busta Gallorum, Battle of Tagore, Sir Rabindranath 1861–1941. Indian poet and philosopher. Tagore sought to combine elements of East and West in his works. He was the first Asiatic to win the Nobel Prize in literature (1913).

Taharka See Tirhakah

Tahmasp I See Ismail I

Taine, Hippolyte 1828–93. French critic and historian, one of the leading figures in 19th-cent. positivism. He is noted for his applications of scientific principles to the study of history and humanity.

Taiping Rebellion Uprising (1850–64) against the Manchu dynasty of China, a precursor to the Nationalist and Communist movements. Its leader was Hung Hsiu-ch'üan (1814–64) who believed he was the younger brother of Jesus Christ. A new religion was formed around his teachings in the late 1840s and gained support among the peasants and workers in Kwangsi. It was loosely based on Christianity, opposed Confucianism, and advocated (then) radical reforms, such as communal ownership of property and equality of women. Beginning in 1850 with a few thousand followers, the rebels soon gathered support and eventually mustered a highly organized army of a million zealous troops. The rebels succeeded in capturing Nanking in 1853 and made it their capital. The failure of subsequent expeditions and internal dissent weakened the movement, however. An attempt to take Shanghai (1860) was stopped by the "Ever-Victorious Army" organized by Europeans and later led by C. Gordon. A Manchu army under Tseng Kuo-fan beseiged Nanking (1862–64) and finally captured the city (July, 1864). Hung committed suicide and the revolt was broken. Nevertheless, it had seriously weakened the Manchu government and paved the way for later rebellions and the final collapse of the Manchu dynasty.

Taira family Japanese military clan, or family, also called Heike. Founded in the 9th cent., it reached its height in the 12th cent. but was defeated (1185) by the Minamoto clan in the Gempei War (q.v.).

Taira Kiyomori 1118–81. Japanese military leader of the Taira family. He defeated the Minamoto family and led the Taira to high positions in the imperial court.

Taisho ⟨Yoshihito⟩ 1879–1926. Japanese emperor (1912–26). During his reign, Japan joined the Allies in WW I and became firmly established as a great power. His son, the future emperor Hirohito, became regent in 1921.

Taiwan ⟨Republic of China⟩ ⟨Nationalist China⟩ Island republic located off the coast of China. It includes the island of Taiwan (Formosa) and several smaller islands, such as Quemoy and Matsu. Its capital is Taipei. First settled (7th cent.) by the Chinese, the island of Taiwan was visited (1590) by the Portuguese, who named it Formosa. The Dutch established a fort (1624) at what is now Tainan, and the Spanish settled in the north. The Dutch forced the Spanish to give up their holdings (1641), and were in turn forced off Taiwan by the Chinese (1662). Chinese immigration into Taiwan increased, and the island was held by the Manchus until after the first Sino-Japanese War, when it passed (1895) to Japan. Japan introduced agricultural and industrial improvements. During WW II, Taiwan was bombed by US planes, and after the war it was returned to China. When the Communists came to power on the mainland (1949), Chiang Kai-shek led millions of his Nationalist Chinese followers to the island and established the Kuomintang government there. The Communists planned to invade (1950), but Pres. H. Truman ordered the US Seventh Fleet to the Formosa Strait to deter any Communist attack. When Pres. D. Eisenhower recalled the fleet (1953), the Communists stepped up their attacks on Quemoy and Matsu, leading to a mutual defense agreement (1955) between Taiwan and the US. Despite continued friction between mainland China and Taiwan, the Nationalists secured tremendous advances in agricultural reform and industrialization. But Chiang's plan to topple the People's Republic of China and return to the mainland proved fruitless. In 1971, Taiwan lost its seat in the UN to the People's Republic of China. In 1978, the US recognized the People's Republic and broke diplomatic ties with Taiwan.

Taj Mahal Indian mausoleum in north-central India built (1648) by Shah Jehan in honor of his favorite wife, Mumtaz Maha. It is considered one of the most beautiful buildings in the world.

Takahira, Baron Kogoro See Root-Takahira Agreement

Taliesin ⟨Taliessin⟩ fl. 6th cent. Welsh poet, possibly a mythological figure, to whom is attributed authorship of the poems in the Book of Taliesin, a major Welsh work.

Taliessin See Taliesin

tallage In feudalism, a tax levied by a lord on his subjects or their property. Tallage evolved in England to be a tax by the king on estates in royal possession and on chartered towns.

Talleyrand, Charles Maurice de ⟨Talleyrand-Périgord, ~⟩ 1754–1838. French statesman and diplomat. Originally a cleric in the court of King Louis XVI, Talleyrand was excommunicated (1791) because of his sympathy for radical church and political reform. His persuasive skills brought him high advisory and diplomatic positions under the Directory, Napoleon, Louis XVIII, and Louis Philippe. He represented France at the Congress of Vienna (1814–15), skillfully limiting the demands of other countries upon France and restoring many European borders to their pre-Napoleonic status.

Tallien, Jean Lambert 1767–1820. French revolutionary. A Jabobin, he supported the Reign of Terror and fell in love with and married (1794) one of his prisoners, T. Tallien. He subsequently led the rebellion of 9 Thermidor which overthrew M. Robespierre.

Tallien, Theresa Cabarrus ⟨Cabarrus, Jeanne Marie Ignace, Theresa de⟩ 1773–1835. French political figure. A prisoner of J. Tallien during the French Revolution, she married him (1794) and greatly influenced his political career.

Talmadge, Eugene 1884–1946. American politician. As governor of Georgia (1933–37, 1941–43) he was noted for his opposition to New Deal policies and for firing several professors from the state university for supporting racial equality.

Talmud Written compilation of the oral laws of the Jews, after the Old Testament, the most important Judaic text. It consists of the Mishna (q.v.), the text of the laws; and the Gemara, commentary. The two versions of the Talmud are the Palestinian (compiled *c*5th cent. AD) and the Babylonian (compiled *c*6th cent. AD. The Babylonian Talmud is much longer and is the authoritative work.

Tamerlane ⟨Timur⟩ *c*1336–1405. Mongol conqueror. A Muslim and self-proclaimed descendent of Genghis Khan, he gained firm control of the throne of Samarkand (in modern Soviet Turkistan) by 1369. Thereafter he led his army of Turks and Mongols in a series of campaigns that vastly expanded his domains. He warred against Persia, and by 1387 had extended his empire to the Euphrates River. Crossing the Euphrates (1392), he advanced northward to conquer the Caucasus region. India was invaded next (1398) and the Delhi Sultanate (q.v.) was ruthlessly destroyed, during which time Tamerlane ordered the massacre of tens of thousands. Turning westward again, Tamerlane captured Baghdad (1401), attacked the Egyptian Mamelukes in Syria, and defeated the Ottoman Turks in Asia Minor (Sultan Bajazet I taken prisoner, 1402). Tamerlane died before launching his planned invasion of China and on his death the empire he had created was divided among his heirs. (See also Timurids.)

Tamil Ancient Dravidian dialect, spoken mainly in Madras, India.

Tammany Organization that controlled New York City politics through the Democratic party in the 19th and early 20th cents. Under the leadership of W. Tweed, R. Croker, and others, it gained a national reputation for corruption.

Tammuz Mythical Babylonian god of agriculture and nature. When he died, Ishtar traveled to the underworld to rescue him. His death and resurrection explained the seasonal cycle of nature.

Tanaka Kakuei 1918–. Japanese prime minister (1972–74). He served in the cabinet of E. Sato and succeeded Sato as prime minister. Tanaka opened diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China but was forced from office under charges of financial improprieties.

Tanaka, Gilchi, Baron 1863–1929. Japanese prime minister (1927–29) and general who advocated Japanese expansion. The Tanaka Memorial (1927), a plan for Japanese military conquest attributed to him, is now thought spurious.

Tancred d. 1194. King of Sicily (1190–94). His short reign was marked by a power struggle with his uncle, Holy Roman Emperor Henry VI, who seized Sicily after Tancred's death.

Taney, Roger Brooke 1777–1864. American jurist, fifth chief justice of the US Supreme Court (1836–64). He handed down the landmark court decision in the Dred Scott case (q.v.) of 1857.

T'ang Dynasty of Chinese rulers (618–907). The dynasty was founded after the overthrow of the Sui dynasty by Li Yuan. T'ang rulers greatly expanded the empire, and at its height, under Emperor Hsuan Tsung (ruled 712–756), it included parts of Korea, Manchuria, Mongolia, Tibet, and Turkistan. Trade was stimulated, and in the ensuing period of prosperity the arts, particularly poetry and sculpture, flourished. Such masters as Tu Fu, Wang Wei, Li Po, and Hsüan Tsang lived during this period. Confucianism enjoyed a resurgence and was officially adopted by the state. The civil service system was further refined. However, the empire was weakened by an unsuccessful revolt (755–763) led by An Lu-shan, a Turkish general. In subsequent years, provincial warlords gained power and ultimately overthrew the T'ang rulers.

Tanganyika Former republic in eastern Africa, since 1964 part of the republic of Tanzania (q.v.). Capital was Dar-es-Salaam. Tanganyika was already inhabited by the 9th cent. when Arab and Indian traders established towns along the coast. The region was explored by the Portuguese (15th–16th cents.). German colonists, notably Carl Peters (1856–1918), secured agreements (1884–85) for lands with Tanganyikan natives. The German East Africa Company (formed 1887) then administered the area as German East Africa (q.v.). The company's inadequate rule led to native resistance and ultimate establishment (1891) of a German protectorate. The area was occupied by the British during WW I and in 1920 part of it became a British League of Nations mandate (as Tanganyika). In 1946, it became a UN trust territory, and on Dec. 9, 1961, it achieved independence. J. Nyerere was its first prime minister. When Tanganyika was made a republic (Dec., 1962), Nyerere became its first president. In 1964, Tanganyika merged with Zanzibar to form Tanzania, and its subsequent history is that of Tanzania.

T'ang Hsuan Tsung 685–762. Chinese emperor (712–756), sixth emperor of the T'ang dynasty. During his reign China reached the peak of its power and prosperity, though the T'ang dynasty's decline began soon after.

Tangier Seaport in Morocco on the Strait of Gibraltar, once a Roman city. It passed to the Portuguese (15th cent.), then to England as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza on her marriage (1662) to Charles II, then was taken by the Moors (1684). Tangier became an international zone in 1923, and was returned to Morocco in 1956.

T'ang T'ai Tsung 600–649. Chinese emperor (626–649), second emperor of the T'ang dynasty. Considered the founder of the dynasty, he consolidated the empire, drove out the Turks, and encouraged art and literature.

Tannenberg, Battles of 1. Battle (1410) at Tannenberg, Poland, in which the Polish and Lithuanian forces under Polish king Ladislaus II defeated the Teutonic Knights, thus halting their eastward expansion. 2. Major Russian defeat (Aug. 26–30, 1914) by Germany at Tannenberg, Poland, early in WW I. The Russian forces under Gen. Alexander Samsonov (1859–1914) were surrounded and defeated by German forces under generals P. Hindenburg and E. Ludendorff. Russian casualties were more than 90,000, and Samsonov committed suicide.

Tannhäuser fl. 13th cent. German lyric poet and minnesinger celebrated for his wanderings and thought to have taken part in the Sixth Crusade. His legend is the basis for an opera by R. Wagner.

Tantalus Mythical Greek king punished in Hades by the gods. Water receded when he tried to drink and food moved away when he tried to eat, hence the word "tantalize."

Tantras Collection of Hindu and Buddhist holy books that include information on such topics as religious rituals, traditions, and the practice of yoga. They date from the 6th or 7th cent.

Tanzania African republic on the east coast of Africa, formed (1964) by the union of Tanganyika and Zanzibar (qq.v.). Capital is Dar-es-Salaam. Its history prior to 1964 is that of Tanganyika and Zanzibar. In early 1964, a revolution in Zanzibar toppled that country's government. The new government merged Zanzibar with Tanganyika (Apr., 1964) and J. Nyerere became first president of Tanzania. A new constitution was adopted (1965). Although officially united under one government, Tanganyika and Zanzibar have followed somewhat independent courses. In the 1970s, Tanzania came into repeated conflict with Uganda, headed by I. Amin. In 1979, Tanzanian forces toppled Amin's regime and forced him into exile.

Taoism Major Chinese religious and philosophical system. Taoism was, by tradition, founded by Lao-Tze in the 6th cent. BC. But the book upon which the system is based, Tao-te-ching, appears to have been written in the 3d cent. BC. According to Taoism, human beings can find Tao (the Way) by following a policy of nonaction, or passivity. The Way is the natural course of all events in the world, and the human path to happiness is through elimination of desire, ambition, and struggle, which go contrary to all nature. Taoism was in part a reaction to the organized system of ethical conduct advanced by Confucianism. By the 5th cent. AD, it was an organized religion. A hierarchy of gods was developed and ways to increase longevity and achieve immortality were sought. Taoist religion has been an important influence in China, especially in the arts. Although it was suppressed by the Chinese Communist government, Taoism is still practiced in China.

Tappan, Arthur 1786–1865. American merchant and abolitionist, a founder (1833), with W. Garrison, and first president of the American Anti-Slavery Society. In 1840, he broke with Garrison and established the American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society.

Tarain, Battles of See Taraori, Battles of Taraori, Battles of ⟨Tarain, ~⟩ Series of battles (1191–92) resulting in the victory of Muhammad of Ghor (d. 1206) over the Rajput raja of Ajmer and Delhi. The victory contributed to the Muslim conquest of northern India.

Tarbell, Ida Minerva 1857–1944. American writer and reformer. One of the muckrakers (q.v.), she is known best for her History of the Standard Oil Company and Life of Abraham Lincoln.

Tardieu, André ⟨Villiers, George⟩ 1876–1945. French statesman and writer. He took part in the Paris Peace Conference (q.v.) of 1919 and between the world wars held a number of government posts, including that of premier (1929–30, 1930, 1932). He urged a strong stance against rising German militarism.

Tariff of Abominations US protective tariff passed on May 19, 1828. Originally a political ploy to gain support for A. Jackson's presidential candidacy, the bill was designed to force Pres. J. Q. Adams to defeat it and thereby fall into discredit. It passed, however, and Adams signed it into law. The tariff led J. Calhoun to advocate "nullification" by the states.

tariffs Taxes imposed on imported and sometimes on exported goods, also known as customs duty. Originally used to raise revenue, by the 17th cent. tariffs were used to protect domestic economies. (See also protectionism.)

Tarik ⟨~ ibn Ziyad⟩ fl. 711. Berber general. Tarik led the first Muslim invasion of Spain (711), conquering much of the Iberian Peninsula and firmly establishing Moorish influence there.

Tarik ibn Ziyad See Tarik

Tarkington, Newton Booth 1869–1946. American author known for his novels set in small Midwestern towns. His novels included Penrod, The Magnificent Ambersons, and Alice Adams. The latter two earned him the Pulitzer Prize for the best American novel in 1919 and 1922.

Tarleton, Banastre See Cowpens, Battle of

Tarpeia Legendary Roman woman who let the Sabines into Rome in return for the bracelets on their left arms. When they entered, they crushed her with their shields, which they carried on their left arms as well.

Tarpeian Rock See Capitoline Hill

Tarquinius Collatinus *fl. c*509 BC. Legendary Roman. The rape of his wife, Lucrece, by his cousin, Tarquinius Sextus, led to the fall of the last Tarquin king (509 BC) and establishment of the Roman republic.

Tarquinius Priscus, Lucius Roman king (*c*616–578 BC). He reputedly built the Circus Maximus and the Forum. He was assassinated in a plot to limit the king's power.

Tarquinius, Sextus fl. 6th cent. BC. Roman, son of L. Tarquinius Superbus, last king of Rome. Sextus' rape of Lucrece (509 BC) led to the overthrow of the Tarquin line of kings.

Tarquinius Superbus, Lucius Last king of Rome (*c*534–509 BC). He made Rome powerful and extended its dominions. His cruelty and the rape of Lucrece by his son led to his overthrow.

Tarsus Ancient Asian city, capital of Cilicia, in southern Turkey. It was the birthplace of the Apostle Paul.

Tartars See Tatars

Tartini, Giuseppe 1692–1770. Italian violinist and composer. Tartini modified the shape of the bow and wrote hundreds of violin pieces, the best-known being The Devil's Trill.

Tartu, Treaty of Peace treaty (Feb. 2, 1920) between Estonia and Russia, concluded at Tartu, Estonia, at the end of the Baltic War of Liberation. It established Estonian independence.

Tasman, Abel Janszoon 1603?–59. Dutch navigator. Tasman discovered Tasmania (which he called Van Diemen's Land) and New Zealand (1642).

Tasso, Torquato 1544–95. Italian poet, considered one of the great Renaissance poets. He is known best for Jerusalem Delivered, an epic about the First Crusade.

Tatars ⟨Tartars⟩ Turkic-speaking peoples of the USSR living near the Volga River region and numbering some 6,000,000. The name once referred to Mongols and other Asiatic people who invaded Europe, some of whom merged to form the Golden Horde (q.v.), a powerful force in Russia. They adopted Islam (14th cent.) and are Sunni Muslims today.

Tate, John Orley Allen 1899–1979. American poet and critic. He was a founder and editor of The Fugitive (1922–25) and a member of the southern agrarian literary group known as the Fugitives.

Tauroggen, Convention of See Yorck von Wartenburg, Johann David Ludwig

Tawney, Richard Henry 1880–1962. British economic historian. Tawney was a leader of numerous social reforms and helped to formulate the Labour party's economic policies. Among his many books is The Acquisitive Society.

Taylor, Brook 1685–1731. English mathematician. He formulated Taylor's Theorem, the foundation of differential calculus. He also solved the problem of the center of oscillation.

Taylor, Jeremy 1613–67. English bishop and writer, called the "Shakespeare of the Pulpit" for his moving sermons. They were collected in such volumes as The Golden Grove.

Taylor, John 1753–1824. American political philosopher and agriculturalist. Taylor espoused T. Jefferson's contention that democracy was dependent on the farmer. Among his many works are An Inquiry into the Principles and Policies of the Government of the United States.

Taylor, Maxwell Davenport 1901–. American general. He commanded the 82d and then the 101st Airborne divisions during WW II and also commanded the Eighth Army during the Korean War. As chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (1962–64) he advocated US involvement in the Vietnam War.

Taylor, Richard 1826–79. Confederate general in the American Civil War, son of Z. Taylor. His defeat of Gen. N. Banks in the Battle of Sabine Crossroads (Apr. 8, 1864) led to the Union withdrawal from Louisiana and failure of the Red River Campaign, an attempt to gain control of the states of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

Taylor, Zachary 1784–1850. US president (1849–50), the twelfth, successor to J. Polk. Taylor joined the army in 1808 and fought with distinction in the War of 1812 and in the Black Hawk and Seminole wars against the Indians. His military campaigns earned him the nickname "Old Rough-and-Ready." During the Mexican War (1846–48), he became a national hero by his victories at Palo Alto (q.v.) and Resaca de la Palma (q.v.) and the capture (Sept., 1846) of Monterrey. In the Battle of Buena Vista (q.v.), his decisive victory over a much larger Mexican force ended the war in northern Mexico. Taylor was chosen Whig candidate for president and was elected in 1848. As president he favored the admission of California and New Mexico as states, but his support of the Wilmot Proviso (q.v.), which prohibited the extension of slavery, aroused opposition in the South. Taylor also opposed the key elements of what became the Compromise of 1850 (q.v.). During the last days of his administration he was embroiled in a scandal involving members of his Cabinet. He planned to reorganize the Cabinet but fell ill and died (July 9, 1850).

Tay Son rebellion Vietnamese uprising (1771–88) led by three brothers from Tay Son, Vietnam. They overthrew the ruling dynasties governing Vietnam, defeated the Chinese sent to support the rulers, and unified the country. During their brief rule (1788–93) they attempted to introduce social reforms, and are thus regarded as precursors of the 20th-cent. nationalist movements in Vietnam.

Ta Yü See Yü the Great

Tchad See Chad

Tchaikovsky, Piotr Ilich 1840–93. Russian composer, one of the greatest Russian composers. Noted for the melodic and intensely emotional character of his compositions, he is famous for his scores for ballet, including Swan Lake, The Nutcracker, and Sleeping Beauty. He also composed symphonies, concertos, and other works. Among his best known works are Fifth Symphony in F Minor, Sixth Symphony in B Minor, Fourth Symphony in F Minor, and Violin Concerto in D Major.

Tea Act British parliamentary act (May 10, 1773) that gave the British East India Company a virtual monopoly on tea trade in the American colonies. American opposition to the act led to the Boston Tea Party (q.v.).

Teach, Edward See Blackbeard

Teapot Dome Naval oil reserve in Wyoming that gave its name to the Teapot Dome scandal (1922) during the administration of Pres. W. Harding. Secretary of the Interior A. Fall, who held jurisdiction over the oil fields, granted exclusive leases to the fields to Harry F. Sinclair (1876–1956) in apparent consideration of a $200,000 "loan." This and a similar arrangement involving assignment of reserves in California to Edward L. Doheny (1856–1935) caused great embarrassment to the Harding administration and led to Fall's conviction for accepting bribes.

Technocracy American movement, begun in the early 1930s, advocating the reorganization of society through implementation of technological principles. The movement was short-lived, but some of its ideas remain influential.

Tecumseh 1768?–1813. American Indian leader, chief of the Shawnees. His attempt to form a league of Indian tribes against US encroachment on Indian lands ended with the defeat of his brother at Tippecanoe. He fought with the British in the War of 1812 and died at the Battle of the Thames.

Tegucigalpa Capital (pop. 273,900) and largest city of Honduras. Founded in the 16th cent., it became the Honduran capital in 1880.

Teheran ⟨Tehran⟩ Iranian capital (pop. 4,496,200) and largest city of Iran. Founded in the 12th cent., it became Persia's capital (1788). It was the site of the Teheran Conference (1943) during WW II.

Teheran Conference Allied conference (Nov. 28–Dec. 1, 1943) at Teheran, Iran, during WW II. Attended by US president F. Roosevelt, British prime minister W. Churchill, and Soviet premier J. Stalin, it coordinated strategy involving the Allied invasion of Western Europe.

Tehran See Teheran

Teilhard de Chardin, Pierre 1881–1955. French scientist and Catholic theologian. Teilhard's attempts to reconcile Christianity with what he saw as the ongoing social and mental evolution of man gained many supporters but caused him problems with the church. He put forth his theory in The Phenomenon of Man.

Tel Aviv-Jaffa ⟨Tel Aviv-Yafo⟩ Largest city (pop. 343,300) in Israel. Founded in 1909, it was Israel's capital in 1948–49.

Telemachus Greek mythical figure, son of Odysseus and Penelope. Upon Odysseus' return from the Trojan War, Telemachus helped him to slay Penelope's suitors.

Telemann, Georg Philipp 1681–1767. German composer. He was a prolific composer whose large body of works includes operas, chamber music, and oratorios.

Tell, William Legendary Swiss hero. Doubt persists as to Tell's actual existence. He reputedly saved his town of Uri from the Austrians with his bow and arrow, and is credited with shooting an apple from his son's head.

Teller, Edward 1908–. Hungarian-born American physicist. Teller worked with E. Fermi on the atomic bomb and later supported the movement to build the hydrogen bomb.

Tellez, Gabriel See Tirso de Molina

Temesvar, Battle of Austrian victory (Aug. 9, 1849), with Russian support, over the Hungarians.

By this victory Austria overthrew the Hungarian republic established by the Hungarian Revolution of 1848.

temperance Movement advocating abstinence from alcoholic beverages. The first temperance group was founded (1808) in Saratoga, New York, and others soon appeared in the US, Great Britain, Ireland, and Scandinavia. The movement was led by churches and women's groups and became a major force in the US through the Woman's Christian Temperance Union (founded 1874) and the Anti-Saloon League (founded 1895). A major result of this movement was ratification (1919) of the 18th Amendment to the US Constitution, which secured Prohibition in the US.

Templars See Knights Templars

Temple, Sir William 1628–99. English diplomat. He arranged the Triple Alliance (1688) against France and brought about the marriage of William of Orange to Princess Mary of England.

Tempo reforms Japanese reforms implemented (1841–43) by the Tokugawa shogunate in an unsuccessful attempt to restore the financial balance of the shogunate and the political and economic well-being of Japan.

Temujin See Genghis Khan

Ten, Council of Venetian tribunal founded (*c*1310) to investigate plots against the state. It soon gained vast powers in both domestic and foreign matters and existed until abolishment (1797) of the Venetian state by Napoleon.

Tencin, Claudine Alexandrine Guérin de 1685–1749. French writer and literary patron. Her numerous affairs with high political figures brought her wealth and political influence during the reign of King Louis XIV.

Ten Commandments ⟨Decalogue⟩ Ten laws that form the basis of Judaeo-Christian religion. According to the Bible, they were written on two stone tablets and handed down by God to Moses.

Tenentismo Brazilian reform movement of the 1920s. Begun by young army officers seeking social reforms, the movement conducted two revolts (1922, 1924), both of which were quickly crushed. However, it remained an influence into the 1930s.

Teng Hsiao-p'ing ⟨Deng Xiaoping⟩ *c*1902–. Chinese Communist leader. As general secretary of the Chinese Communist party (1956–67) he worked closely with Mao Tse-tung. Purged (1967) during the Cultural Revolution, he was rehabilitated and became first deputy prime minister (1977–).

Ten Kingdoms Independent kingdoms that rose in southern China in the period (907–960) between the end of the T'ang and the rise of the Sung dynasties.

Ten Lost Tribes of Israel See Lost Tribes of Israel

Tennent, Gilbert 1703–64. American Presbyterian clergyman. A powerful preacher, he was a driving force in the Great Awakening (q.v.).

Tennis Court Oath Oath sworn (June 20, 1789) by members of the Third Estate during the early stages of the French Revolution. The delegates to the Estates General had formed (June 17) the National Assembly, and, finding themselves barred from their meeting place, convened at a tennis court, where they swore not to disband until a constitution had been granted the country. Their determination led King Louis XVI to direct the clergy and nobility to join the National Assembly (June 27).

Tennessee Southeastern US state (pop. 3,835,100), the 16th state. Its capital is Nashville. First claimed by the French, the Tennessee area was ceded to England after the French and Indian Wars (1763). D. Boone explored the region, and Virginians established the first permanent settlement (1769). After the American Revolution, disgruntled settlers formed the independent state of Franklin (1784–88), and in 1796, Tennessee became a state. Tennessee seceded from the Union (1861) during the Civil War and was the locale of several military engagements, notably the Chattanooga Campaign and the battles of Shiloh and Stones River. Tennessee was readmitted to the Union (1866), and its constitution was adopted in 1870.

Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) US government agency created by Congress in 1933 to manage development of the Tennessee River Basin. The agency oversaw the construction of some 42 dams, achieving both flood control and cheap electric power. The TVA raised much controversy and was regarded by some as an example of government interference with private industry.

Tennyson, Alfred Tennyson, 1st Baron 1809–92. English poet laureate (1850), considered the leading poet of Victorian England. Among his many works are Idylls of the King, In Memoriam, The Charge of the Light Brigade, and Crossing the Bar.

Tenochtitlán Ancient capital city of the Aztecs, which stood on the site of present-day Mexico City. Founded *c*1325, it was captured and largely razed (1521) by H. Cortez.

Tenskwatawa See Shawnee Prophet

Tenure of Office Act US act passed over a presidential veto (Mar. 2, 1867) forbidding the removal of certain high government officials without the consent of the Senate. President A. Johnson's removal of E. Stanton despite this act led directly to Johnson's impeachment trial.

Ten Years' War Cuban revolt against Spanish rule (1868–78). It was led by Carlos Manuel de Céspedes (1819–74), who called for the gradual emancipation of slaves and universal suffrage. He also favored Cuban independence, although not all the insurrectionists agreed. After 10 years of brutal fighting, which left about 200,000 Cubans and Spanish dead, the insurrection was defeated. The Treaty of El Zanjón (1878) made liberal promises, most of which were not kept.

Tenzing Norgay See Hillary, Sir Edmund Percival

Teotihuacán Ancient Mexican city, site of many architectural ruins dating from the Toltec period.

Terence 185–159 BC. Roman playwright known for his comedies adapted from Greek plays. Six of his comedies survive, among them Andria, Eunuchus, and Adelphi.

Teresa of Avila, Saint 1515–82. Spanish Catholic reformer and mystic who contributed significantly to the Catholic Reformation in Spain. She became the first female Doctor of the Church.

Terman, Lewis Madison 1877–1956. American psychologist. Terman gave the term "IQ" (intelligence quotient) to America with his introduction of the Stanford-Binet intelligence tests for schoolchildren.

Terpsichore See Muses

Territory of Orleans Name given to the area forming the state of Louisiana, from its acquisition in the Louisiana Purchase (1804) to statehood (1812).

Tertullian AD *c*160–*c*230. Roman theologian. A convert and a strong defender of Christianity, he later became a Montanist, and still later established his own sect, the Tertullians.

Teruel, Battle of Battle (Dec., 1937–Feb., 1938) of the Spanish Civil War, at Teruel, Spain. Republican forces captured Teruel (Dec., 1937) but were unable to hold it. Teruel was recaptured (Feb., 1938) by the forces under Gen. F. Franco.

Teschen, Treaty of Treaty (May 13, 1779) between Austria and Prussia ending the War of the Bavarian Succession. The treaty made territorial adjustments between the two powers and awarded a cash payment to Saxony, Prussia's ally.

Tesla, Nikola 1856–1943. Yugoslavian-born American inventor noted for his contributions to the development of alternating-current electrical technology.

Test Act English statute (1673). It was established to exclude from public office Roman Catholics or those who refused to support the Church of England and the king's supremacy in ecclesiastical affairs.

Tethys See Titan

Tet Offensive Major offensive (Feb., 1968) by the Vietcong and North Vietnamese regulars during the Vietnam War. The combined Communist forces staged attacks in more than 100 cities throughout South Vietnam (including Saigon), thus proving their continued strength and embarrassing US military leaders. Fighting lasted a month at the city of Hue and Communist losses were heavy, but the offensive proved a major propaganda victory.

tetrarchy In Roman government, any principality, especially in the East, whose rulers retained a degree of sovereignty but were controlled by the Roman Empire. As Tetrarch of Judaea, Herod the Great was "king" under the Romans. Originally the term came from Macedonia's division of Thessaly into four parts (342 BC).

Tetzel, Johann *c*1465–1519. German Dominican monk. His granting of indulgences in return for donations to a building fund sparked M. Luther's initial challenge to the Catholic church.

Teutoburg Forest, Battle of the Battle (AD 9) in the Teutoburg Forest, now in West Germany. There the Germans under Arminius defeated the Romany army under Varus, thus halting Roman expansion east of the Rhine.

Teutonic Knights ⟨German Order⟩ Catholic military order founded (1190) at Acre by German nobles during the Third Crusade. In the 13th cent., the order moved to Europe, became a powerful force, and gained control of Prussia. A branch of the order, the Livonian Knights, expanded its rule to the east. Through the 14th cent., the order expanded its holdings and power, and many of its cities became members of the Hanseatic League. Its continued attacks on Poland and Lithuania led to the order's defeat in the Battle of Tannenberg (1410) and its subsequent decline. The order was dissolved (1525) by Grand Master Albert of Brandenburg, who accepted Protestantism and became duke of Prussia under Polish suzerainty.

Tewfik Pasha 1852–92. Khedive of Egypt (1879–92), successor to his father, Ismail Pasha. Egyptian opposition to Western influence during his rule led to military intervention (1882) by the British, who took virtual control of Egypt.

Tewkesbury, Battle of English battle (May 4, 1471), the final battle of the Wars of the Roses. Here the Yorkists under King Edward IV defeated the Lancastrians led by Margaret of Anjou and Prince Edward.

Texas US state in the Southwest (pop. 14,228,400), the 28th state. The Spanish discovered the region (16th cent.), but hostile Indians prevented settlement until the early 18th cent. F. La Salle claimed part of eastern Texas for France (1685), and the French claim was included in the Louisiana Purchase by the US. S. Austin founded the first American settlement in Texas (1821). A province of Mexico, Texas rebelled and declared independence (1836). In the ensuing war, S. Houston defeated the Mexicans at the Battle of San Jacinto (1836), and Texas became an independent republic. US annexation of Texas (1845) led to Texas statehood that year and contributed to the outbreak of the Mexican War. Texas seceded from the Union in 1861 and was readmitted in 1870. The constitution was adopted in 1876.

Texas Rangers Texas military police. They were organized in 1835 to guard the Texas frontier against lawlessness and Indian attacks. In 1935 they became part of the state's highway patrol.

Thackeray, William Makepeace 1811–63. English writer, considered one of the great English novelists. Among his novels are Vanity Fair, The Paris Sketch-Book, and Henry Esmond.

Thailand ⟨Kingdom of Thailand; formerly Siam⟩ Southeast Asian country occupying the western portion of the Indo-Chinese peninsula. Its capital is Bangkok. The Thais are of Indo-Chinese linguistic stock and Thailand was the only Southeast Asian country that maintained its independence throughout the entire period of European colonialism. Thailand has generally been pro-Western in its policies. Key dates in the history of Thailand include:

FROM 6TH CENT. AD Thai tribes began migrating to the area of modern Thailand.

1253 Mass Thai migration southward into region of present-day boundaries; prompted by destruction of Thai kingdom of Nanchao (in Yunnan, China) by Mongols under Kublai Khan.

1350 Rama Thibodi I established first unified Thai state; founded Ayutthaya dynasty, which ruled until 1767.

1657–88 Narai reigned as king of Siam; established splendid court; preserved freedom from European colonial powers by astute diplomacy.

1688 Antiforeign coup closed Siamese kingdom to most foreigners for over a century.

1782 Gen. Phaya Chakkri founded Chakkri dynasty, which has ruled until present day; he reigned as Rama I; moved capital to Bangkok.

1826 Commercial treaty with Britain.

1833 Commercial treaty with the US.

1851–68 King Mongkut reigned; Westernization began.

1868–1910 Chulalongkorn reigned.

1893 Forced to yield Cambodia and all territory east of the Mekong to France.

1896 Anglo-French accord guaranteed the country's independence.

1917 Siamese government entered WW I on the side of the Allies (July).

1932 Bloodless coup against King Prajadhipok (reigned 1925–35), forcing him to grant a constitution; constitutional monarchy proclaimed (June 27).

1935–46 Rama VIII reigned.

1938–57 Pibul Songgram in power; long tenure began with appointment as premier; eventually became dictator; renamed country Thailand.

1941 Pibul allowed Japanese to enter the country (Dec. 8).

1942 Thailand declared war on the US and Britain (Jan. 25).

1946 Pridi Phanomyang served as leftist premier in postwar government; Pibul held as war criminal.

1946 King Rama VIII died under mysterious circumstances.

1946– Rama IX reigned; crowned in 1950 after attaining his majority.

1947 Pridi overthrown (Nov. 9) by Pibul as dissatisfaction with Pridi regime was increasing.

1954 Thailand made the headquarters of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

1957 Pibul Songgram overthrown in coup led by Marshal Sarit Thanarat; Thanom Kittakachorn made premier.

1958–63 Sarit deposed Thanom and ruled by martial law.

1963 Thanom returned to power; remained in power until 1973.

1968 New constitution restored parliamentary democracy.

1971 Bloodless coup (Nov. 17); Prime Minister Thanom Kittikachorn seized full power.

1972 Interim constitution promulgated; government controls eased (Dec.).

1973 Thanom fled country following student riots (Oct.).

1973 Prime Minister Sanya Thammasak installed; return to civilian government.

1976 Military junta seized power amid political crisis and rioting by leftist students.

1976 US forces ordered out of Thailand (Mar. 20).

1980 Gen. Prem Tinsulanonda in power as premier (Mar.).

1978–80 Massive influx of refugees from Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia; Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia sent still more refugees into Thailand; hundreds of thousands of Cambodians had returned to their homeland by the end of 1980.

1981 Attempted military coup failed (Apr. 3).

Thaïs fl. 4th cent. BC. Athenian courtesan, mistress to Alexander the Great and later to the king of Egypt. A legend, probably false, holds that she induced Alexander to burn Persepolis.

Thaïs fl. 4th cent. AD. Legendary Alexandrian courtesan, said to have been converted to Christianity by St. Paphnutius. Her legend forms the basis for a novel by A. France, which in turn was the basis for the opera Thaïs by J. Massenet.

Thakin Shu Maung See Ne Win, U

Thales *c*636–*c*546 BC. Greek philosopher, considered the first Western natural philosopher. One of the Seven Wise Men of Greece, he held that all things were based on one element—water.

Thalia See Muses

Thames, Battle of the American victory over the British (Oct. 5, 1813) in Ontario, Canada, during the War of 1812. Some 3,000 Americans commanded by W. Harrison defeated 600 British and 1,000 Indian allies under Tecumseh, thereby establishing American control of the Northwest. Tecumseh was killed in this battle.

Thanom Kittikachorn 1911–. Thai army general and prime minister (1963–73). He restored parliamentary democracy under a new constitution (1968), but his seizure of power through a military takeover (1971) led to his ouster (1973).

Thant, U 1909–74. Burmese diplomat. As secretary general of the United Nations (1962–71) he helped find peaceful solutions to the Cuban Missile Crisis (1962) and the conflicts in the Congo (1962) and Cyprus (1964). He was also influential in resolving the India-Pakistan War of 1965.

Thapsus, Battle of Decisive victory (46 BC) for J. Caesar over the remaining supporters of Pompey in North Africa. Thousands were slaughtered, and the opposing commander, M. Scipio, committed suicide. Soon after, Caesar was appointed dictator by the Roman Senate.

Thasos Greek island in the northern Aegean, noted in ancient times for its gold mines.

Thatch, Edward See Blackbeard

Thatcher, Margaret 1925–. British prime minister (1979–). A Conservative, she was elected amid a worsening economic crisis in Britain and later oversaw the British victory in the Falkland Islands War (q.v.).

Thaw, Harry K. See White, Stanford

Theatre Guild New York production society formed (1919) to present plays of merit from both America and Europe, regardless of commercial acceptability. Among their many successful productions were Oklahoma! and Porgy and Bess.

Théâtre-Libre Independent theater founded in Paris (1887) by A. Antoine. An important outlet for new naturalist plays, it had a profound influence on later experimental theaters.

theater of the absurd Movement in the drama of the 1950s and 1960s that depicted the human condition as meaningless and absurd. It was characterized by such plays as S. Beckett's Waiting for Godot and E. Ionesco's The Bald Prima Donna.

Thebes Ancient Egyptian city. Thebes became the capital of Upper Egypt and rose to prominence with the 11th dynasty (2130–2000 BC), reaching its peak from the 18th to the 20th dynasties. It was the center of worship of the god Amon and the site of Tutankhamen's tomb. It declined as cities on the Nile delta became powerful. Thebes was sacked by Assyrians (661 BC), and Romans (29 BC).

Thebes Greek city, the chief city of ancient Boeotia. Founded by Cadmus and settled by Boeotians before 1500 BC, it was involved in numerous struggles with both Athens and Sparta from the 6th to 4th cents. BC. Thebes allied itself with Athens against Philip II of Macedonia and he defeated them at Chaeronea (338 BC). The city was destroyed by Alexander the Great (336 BC).

Thebes Seven Against See Seven Against Thebes

Theiler, Max 1899–1972. South African-born American bacteriologist. For his contributions to development of a vaccine for yellow fever, he was awarded a Nobel Prize in physiology and medicine in 1951.

Theia See Titan

theism In theology, belief in a supreme, personal God who is intimately associated with yet apart from the existence of things. Its opposite is Atheism.

Themis Mythical Greek goddess of wisdom, justice, and order. She was the second wife of Zeus and the mother of Prometheus.

Themistocles *c*525–*c*460 BC. Athenian statesman and naval commander. Themistocles urged the strengthening of the Greek navy and defeated the Persians at Salamis (480 BC).

theocracy Form of government in which God is the ultimate authority and laws devolve as from God, through priests or clergy. Thus priests act as both spiritual and secular rulers of the state.

Theocritus fl. 3d cent. BC. Greek poet considered the originator of pastoral poetry. He brought pastoral poetry to new heights and influenced such later poets as Vergil and E. Spenser.

Theodora AD *c*500–548. Byzantine empress (AD 527–548), wife of Emperor Justinian (m. AD 523). She had great influence during Justinian's rule and played a key role in saving the throne during the Nika riot (AD 532).

Theodore of Mopsuestia AD *c*350–428. Greek Christian theologian, bishop of Mopsuestia (AD 392–428). He applied scientific and historical criteria to the study of the Bible. He influenced Nestorius and is sometimes considered the real founder of Nestorianism.

Theodoric I ⟨Thierry I⟩ d. 534. Frankish ruler, a son of Clovis I. On Clovis' death, Theodoric shared the Frankish Kingdom with his brothers Childebert I and Clotaire I.

Theodoric the Great AD *c*454–526 Ostrogothic king of Italy (493–526). Acting in behalf of Byzantine emperor Zeno, Theodoric led his Gothic army in an invasion of Italy (from 488). By 493 he had captured Ravenna and killed Odoacer, the German chieftain who had overthrown the last Western Roman emperor in 496. He subsequently ruled over Italy as king, though he was nominally in the service of the Byzantines.

Theodosian Code Compilation of Roman laws from the reign of Constantine to that of Theodisius II, under whom it was issued (AD 438). It was later used in compiling the Justinian Code.

Theodosius I ⟨Theodosius the Great⟩ AD 346?–395. Roman emperor of the East (AD 379–395). He defeated the Goths in the East and convened the Second Council of Constantinople (381). He defeated and killed the usurper Maximus (388) and restored Valentinian II to the throne in Italy.

Theodosius II AD 401–450. Roman emperor of the East (AD 408–450), successor to his father, Arcadius. He left the actual ruling to his sister Pulcheria and his wife Eudocia. He authorized the Theodosian Code and negotiated with Attila the Hun.

Theodosius the Great See Theodosius I

Theophrastus *c*372–*c*287 BC. Greek philosopher. He succeeded Aristotle as head of the Peripatetics. He wrote extensively on plants, nature, and ethics.

Theorell, Axel Hugo Teodor 1903–. Swedish biochemist. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine (in 1955) for his studies of enzyme oxidation.

theosophy Mystical religious philosophy holding that direct knowledge of God is possible and is the means of salvation. Although its concepts date back to early Indian philosophy, modern Theosophy was founded (1875) by H. Blavatsky.

Theresa, Saint 1515–82. Spanish saint, known for her mystical experiences. She founded (1562) the reformed Carmelite order known as the Discalced Carmelites.

Thermidor Eleventh month of the French Revolutionary calendar. The coup d'état of 9 Thermidor (July 27, 1794) brought down M. Robespierre and ended the Reign of Terror. The coup was carried out by a hastily organized coalition of factions in the National Convention, following a speech by Robespierre (July 26) in which he denounced certain unnamed enemies. Robespierre and others were guillotined July 28 and the Thermidorian reaction, as it was called, was swift. The machinery of the Reign of Terror was dismantled, the radical Jacobins were suppressed, and the moderates came into control. Radical reforms were rescinded, among them the Law of Maximums, which set controls on wages and prices (in effect 1793–94). The Thermidorian period ended with the establishment of the Directory (q.v.) in 1795. (See also French Revolution [1794–95].)

Thermopylae Historic Greek pass linking northern and southern Greece. Here a small force of Spartans under Leonidas made a heroic but unsuccessful stand (480 BC) against the vastly superior army of Persian king Xerxes during the Persian Wars.

Thermopylae, Battle of See Antiochus III

Theseus Legendary Greek hero, son of Athenian king Aegeus. He killed the Minotaur and defeated the Amazons.

Thespis fl. 534 BC. Greek poet, considered the originator of the tragic drama. He was said to have introduced the role of actor to interact with the leader of the chorus, thereby creating dialogue.

Thessaly Ancient Greek region of northern Greece. Surrounded by mountains, Thessaly became a power in Greece (4th cent. BC) but soon declined.

Thetis Mythical Greek figure, the wife of Peleus and mother of Achilles.

Thibault, Jacques Anatole See France, Anatole

Thibaw See Burmese War (Third)

Thiers, Louis Adolphe 1797–1877. French statesman and historian. Theirs served in several ministerial positions under King Louis Philippe, opposed Emperor Napoleon III and the Franco-Prussian War, and after the war became president of the Third French Republic (1871–73). He suppressed the Commune of Paris (1871).

Thierry I See Theodoric I

Third Coalition, War of the (1805) Early phase of the Napoleonic Wars fought by a coalition of England, Austria, Russia, and Sweden against France and Spain. Napoleon defeated the Austrians in the Battle of Ulm (q.v.), suffered a naval defeat by the British in the Battle of Trafalgar (q.v.), and defeated the Austrians and Russians in the Battle of Austerlitz (q.v.), thus crushing the coalition.

Third Crusade See Crusade, Third

Third Estate In prerevolutionary France, one of the three groups represented in the States General, the others being the clergy and the nobility. It was composed largely of townsmen, or burghers. Its establishment (June, 1789) of the National Assembly in France marked the beginning of the French Revolution.

Third Punic War See Punic War

Third Reich Name given the German government (1933–45) under the rule of A. Hitler and the Nazi party. (See Germany [1933–45]; Nazi Party.)

Third Republic Name given the French government established (1870) after the fall of the Second Empire in the Franco-Prussian War. It was succeeded (1940) by the Vichy government during WW II. (See also France [1870–1940].)

Third World Term applied to the less developed and often politically nonaligned countries of Africa, Asia, and Latin Ameria.

Thirteen Colonies, the Those original British North American colonies which joined in the American Revolution and became the United States. They included Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and Virginia.

38th Parallel Boundary line adopted at the end of WW II to mark the separate areas in Korea where surrender would be made to American and Soviet forces. After the war, a Communist regime was established in North Korea (Democratic People's Republic of Korea), while the Republic of Korea was established in the south. As a result of the Korean War, South Korea now holds some territory north of the parallel.

Thirty-nine Articles Articles formulating the official doctrines and beliefs of the Church of England. Officially promulgated by the Canterbury Convocation (1571) and approved by Queen Elizabeth I, they were based on forty-two articles prepared (1553) by Archbishop T. Cranmer.

Thirty-three Immortals see Lavalleja, Juan Antonio

Thirty Tyrants 1. Name given the group of thirty Athenians who ruled Athens (404–403 BC) under Spartan domination after the Peloponnesian War. They were overthrown by Thrasybulus. 2. Name given the group of pretenders to the Roman throne who rose during the reigns of emperors Valerian and Gallienus (AD 253–268).

Thirty Years' War Series of interrelated conflicts (1618–48) that led ultimately to the end of Hapsburg dominance in Europe, the crippling of the Holy Roman Empire, and the emergence of France as the leading power in Europe. The war, which left Germany devastated, began in Bohemia as a reaction to imperial repression of Protestantism and quickly spread to other Hapsburg domains in the Holy Roman Empire. Denmark and Sweden, each in turn, joined the conflict against the Hapsburgs. In the final phase of the conflict, France entered the war in a successful move to break the power of the Holy Roman Empire. Key dates in the history of the Thirty Years' War include:

1576–1612 Holy Roman Emperor Rudolf II reigned; rule marked by repression of Protestants in Germany, disrupting the uneasy truce established between Protestants and Catholics by the Treaty of Augsburg (1555).

1608–09 Protestant leaders established alliance known as the Evangelical Union (1608); Catholics created the Catholic League (1609); stage set for outbreak of warfare between the factions.

1612–19 Matthias reigned; he failed to win peace between Protestants and Catholics.

1618 Defenestration of Prague; began the Bohemian revolt against Hapsburg rule.

1618–20 Bohemian phase of the war; began with the Protestant revolt throughout Bohemia that spread into other Hapsburg lands.

1619 Bohemians chose Frederick V, elector of the Palatinate, as king; led to split between Lutherans and Calvinists.

1620 Ferdinand II became emperor (Aug.); Catholic League forces under Count Tilly defeated Frederick and the Bohemians at White Mountain (Nov. 8); defeat marked end of Bohemian phase of war; Frederick continued the war in the Palatinate.

1620–25 Palatinate phase of the war; Protestants under Frederick at first successful but ultimately defeated by imperial forces led by Tilly; Palatinate passed to Bavarian Duke Maximilian I.

1622 Imperial forces under Tilly defeated (Apr.) at Weisloch; battle marked high point of Protestant fortunes in the Palatinate.

1622 Tilly defeated the Protestants at Wimpfen (May) and Höchst (June); imperial forces began to crush Protestant resistance in the Palatinate.

1622 Protestants victorious at the Battle of Fleurus (now in Belgium).

1623 Protestants defeated at Stadtlohn (Aug.); battle marked virtual end of the struggle in the Palatinate.

1625–29 Danish phase of the war; Danish king Christian IV entered the conflict partly out of religious motives and partly to oppose growing Hapsburg influence in northern Germany.

1626 Christian IV advanced into Saxony.

1626 Christian IV defeated (Apr.) by imperial forces under Duke Albrecht von Wallenstein at Dessau.

1626 Imperial forces under Tilly inflicted major defeat on Danes (Aug. 27) at Lutter am Barenberge.

1626–27 Imperial forces under Wallenstein and Tilly forced the Danish army north to the Jutland Peninsula.

1629 Emperor Ferdinand II issued the Edict of Restitution (Mar. 6), canceling Protestant titles acquired through the Peace of Augsburg in 1555.

1629 Treaty of Lübeck (May 12); Denmark withdrew from the conflict, thereby ending the Danish phase; Denmark lost territories.

1630–35 Swedish phase of the war; Swedish king Gustavus II (Gustavus Adolphus), enticed by promises of aid from French minister Cardinal Richelieu, entered the war against the Hapsburgs.

1630 Wallenstein dismissed as commander of imperial army; Tilly assumed command.

mid-1630 Gustavus II advanced his Swedish forces into Pomerania.

1631 Tilly captured Magdeburg (May 20) and destroyed the city; severe reprisals taken against the Protestants who had rebelled.

1631 Swedish and Saxon forces victorious over Tilly (Sept.) at Breitenfeld; Protestant forces advanced south.

1632 Tilly defeated and killed (Apr. 14) at the Battle of the Lech; Protestant forces subsequently captured Munich; Wallenstein returned to command imperial army.

1632 Wallenstein engaged Swedes and Saxons at Battle of Lützen (Nov. 16); Wallenstein defeated, but Gustavus II was killed; Gustavus succeeded by Duke Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, who advanced into Bavaria.

1633 Wallenstein sought unsuccessfully to secure peaceful settlement to the war; was removed from command; continued to seek peace.

1634 Wallenstein assassinated (Feb. 25).

1634 Gen. M. von Matthias replaced Wallenstein as commander of imperial forces.

1634 Imperial forces defeated Protestants, under Bernhard, at Nordlingen (Sept. 6); battle marked virtual end of Protestant alliance with Swedes.

1635 Peace of Prague (May 30) ended Swedish phase of the conflict; its provisions favorable to the Protestants, the treaty formed a groundwork for peace in war-torn Germany.

1635–48 French phase of the war; Cardinal Richelieu, seeking to establish France as leading power in Europe, secured French declaration of war against Hapsburg Spain (May 1635); the war evolved into an international struggle between France (and allies) against the Hapsburgs and the Holy Roman Empire.

1636 Swedes inflicted heavy casualties on imperial armies at the Battle of Wittstock in Germany (Oct. 4); marked recovery from Nordlingen defeat.

1637 Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand II died; succeeded by his son Ferdinand III.

1638 Duke Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar defeated imperial forces at Rheinfelden (Mar. 3).

1642–45 Swedish forces under Gen. Lennart Torstensson conquered Denmark; advanced south into Austria and Germany, seriously crippling the Hapsburgs' military position.

1642 French minister Cardinal Richelieu died; succeeded by Cardinal Mazarin.

1643 French forces under Prince Louis II de Condé defeated Spanish at Battle of Rocroi (May).

1645 The French under Condé and Viscount Turenne defeated the imperial army at Allersheim (Aug. 3), near Nordlingen.

1645 Matthias ousted as imperial commander.

1647 Treaty of Ulm marked a truce between Bavarian forces and allied French and Swedish armies.

1648 Peace negotiations (1645–48) culminated in the Treaty of Westphalia (Oct. 24), which ended the Thirty Years' War; its terms were favorable to France and Sweden and left the house of Hapsburg and the Holy Roman Empire severely crippled; France became the dominant power in Europe.

Thisbe See Pyramus and Thisbe

Thistlewood, Arthur 1770–1820. English revolutionary. He organized (1820) the unsuccessful Cato Street Conspiracy to murder R. Castlereagh and other Cabinet members.

Thököly, Emeric ⟨~, Imre⟩ ⟨Tököly, Emeric⟩ 1657–1705. Hungarian patriot. He fought against the Austrian Hapsburgs and in 1678 took command of all rebel Hungarian forces. He was allied with the Turks in their unsuccessful assault on Vienna (1683).

Thököly, Imre See Thököly, Emeric

Thomas, Dylan Marlais 1914–53. Welsh poet whose work is noted for its originality and brilliant and complicated imagery. Among his writings is the dramatic work Under Milk Wood.

Thomas, George Henry 1816–70. Union general in the American Civil War. His actions at the Battle of Chickamauga (1863) saved the Union army from destruction. He later defeated the Confederates at Nashville (1864).

Thomas, John See Christadelphians

Thomas, Norman Mattoon 1884–1968. American Socialist leader and Presbyterian minister (1911–31). A leading social reformer, he was six times the Socialist candidate for the presidency from 1928 to 1948.

Thomas, Saint One of the Twelve Apostles of Jesus. His refusal to believe in Jesus' resurrection without evidence led to the term "doubting Thomas." He is thought to have preached in northern Persia and India.

Thomas, Silken See Fitzgerald, Thomas, 10th earl of Kildare

Thomas à Becket, Saint 1117–70. English saint, archbishop of Canterbury (1162–70), chancellor of England (1155–62), and onetime friend of King Henry II. Appointed chancellor by Henry and elected archbishop with Henry's aid, Becket infuriated the king by consistently defending church prerogatives and canon law against royal authority. His opposition to the king led to his exile from England (1164–70). Soon after his return, he was murdered by four of the king's knights in Canterbury Cathedral.

Thomas Aquinas, Saint 1225–74. Italian theologian and philosopher whose writings have been officially adopted by the Roman Catholic church. A Dominican, he studied under Albertus Magnus and later taught in Paris and Rome. He successfully opposed the strictly rational interpretation of Aristotelian philosophy advanced by Siger de Brabant (1235?–81?) and the Averroists. He also opposed the teachings of the Augustinians by holding that reason and faith are compatible. His major works are the Summa Theologica and Summa contra Gentiles.

Thomson, Sir Charles W. See Challenger Expedition

Thomson, Sir Joseph John 1856–1940. English physicist noted for his studies of the electrical conductivity of gases and the charge and mass of the electron. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1906.

Thor ⟨Donar⟩ Mythical Norse god of thunder, strength, and war. The patron of peasants, he never hurt humanity. Thursday is named for him.

Thoreau, Henry David 1817–62. American writer and philosopher. Thoreau was an influential transcendentalist. His works include the journal Walden and the essay On Civil Disobedience.

Thorfinn Karlsefni fl. 1002–10. Icelandic navigator. Thorfinn attempted to establish a colony in North America but abandoned the colony after a year.

Thorndike, Edward Lee 1874–1949. American psychologist. Thorndike devised intelligence and learning-ability tests for children. His works include Mental and Social Measurements and The Psychology of Learning.

Thornton, William 1759–1828. American architect. His plans (submitted 1793) for the proposed Capitol in Washington, D.C., were approved by Pres. G. Washington. Much of the central section of the Capitol follows his design, but other elements of the structure were modified.

Thoth Ancient Egyptian god, identified with the Greek god Hermes. A scribe and messenger, he kept the records of the dead. He was considered the god of learning and was credited with many inventions, among them writing.

Thothmes I See Thutmose I

Thothmes II See Thutmose II

Thousand, Expedition of the See Expedition of the Thousand

Thrace Historical European region in the southeastern part of the Balkan Peninsula. Its inhabitants resisted Greek domination, but the Greeks established several colonies in Thrace, notably Byzantium (6th cent. BC). Thrace was taken by Persia (6th cent. BC) and annexed by Rome (1st cent. BC). It passed to the Byzantine Empire, but by AD 1453 the last of Thrace fell to the Ottoman Turks. Thrace was contested by Bulgaria and Turkey in the Balkan Wars (q.v.). After WW I, the region was divided among Greece, Bulgaria, and Turkey by the treaties of Neuilly (1919), Sèvres (1920), and Lausanne (1923).

Thrasybulus *d. c*389 BC. Athenian general and statesman. He was banished by the Thirty Tyrants (404 BC) but overthrew them (403 BC) and reestablished democracy in Athens.

Three-Anti campaign Early campaign (1951–52) by the Chinese Communist party, after its takeover of the Chinese mainland, to eliminate fraud, mismanagement, and corruption.

Three Emperors, Battle of See Austerlitz, Battle of Three Emperors' League Alliance (1873–77, 1881–87) of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Russia, originated by German chancellor O. von Bismarck, to preserve peace between Russia and Austria-Hungary and to isolate France. It was disrupted by the Russo-Turkish War of 1877–78 but was secretly renewed in 1881.

Three Feudatories, Revolt of the Rebellion (1673–81) against the Ch'ing (Manchu) dynasty by semi-autonomous areas in Yunnan, Kwangtung, and Fukien, headed by former Ming dynasty generals. They attempted to establish a new dynasty but were defeated.

Three Henrys, War of the French civil war (1585–89), one of the French Wars of Religion. It involved the last Valois king, Henry III; Henry, 3d duke of Guise; and the Huguenot Henry of Navarre (later King Henry IV). Navarre's defeat of the Catholic forces of King Henry III at Coutras (Oct. 20, 1587) led the Catholic Henry of Guise to march on Paris to depose Henry III. The king fled to Blois (May, 1588) and subsequently ordered Guise's assassination (Dec., 1588). This led to a revolt of the Catholics and forced the king to seek refuge with Navarre. While in Navarre's camp the king was murdered (July, 1589). Henry of Navarre continued the struggle to gain the throne.

Three Holy Children In the Bible, three Hebrews thrown into a fiery furnace by Nebuchadnezzar. Their faith in God protected them and they escaped unscathed. They were Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego.

Three Kingdoms Period in Chinese history (AD 220–280) during which three kingdoms ruled China after the fall of the Han dynasty. They were the Wei, which ruled in the north; the Wu, which ruled in the south; and the Shu Han, which ruled in the west. Wei conquered Shu Han (AD 264) and established the Chin dynasty. The dynasty then conquered the Wu (AD 280) and reunited China. The Three Kingdoms has been characterized as a romantic period, notably in the novel Romance of the Three Kingdoms.

Three Kings See Magi

Three Kings, Battle of the ⟨Alcazarquivir, Battle of⟩ Moroccan victory (Aug. 4, 1578) over the Portuguese invasion led by Portuguese king Sebastian I. Sebastian supported the Moorish pretender against the king of Fez and was defeated at Alcazarquivir, Morocco. All three kings died in the battle.

Three Mile Island Nuclear-powered electrical generating plant outside Middletown, Pennsylvania. A nuclear accident at the plant, beginning Mar. 28, 1979, resulted in the venting of radioactive gases. Though a full-scale disaster was averted (by Apr. 9, 1979), the crisis resulted in a major reevaluation of the US nuclear energy program.

Three Principles of the People Ideological goals advanced in China by Sun Yat-sen and later claimed by both the followers of Chiang Kai-shek and the Chinese Communists. They included: Nationalism, freedom from imperialism and imperial rule; Democracy, the ability of the Chinese to govern themselves through a form of democratic structure; and Livelihood, apparently a program to advance land equalization.

Thucydides *c*460–400 BC. Greek historian. He was exiled because of his failure (424) as a leader in the Peloponnesian War and wrote The History of the Peloponnesian War during his exile. The work, covering the years 431–411, is noted for its accuracy, impartiality, and (then) novel examination of human character in relation to the events of the war.

Thugs ⟨Phansigars⟩ Indian religious sect. Devoted to the goddess Kali, the Thugs dressed as religious mendicants or merchants and killed their victims, usually travelers, as offerings to her. They were suppressed by the British (19th cent.).

Thule Name given the northernmost known country by the ancient Greeks. The Greek navigator Pytheas (fl. 4th cent. BC) reached an island he named Thule. It may have been Iceland, Norway, or one of the Shetland Islands.

Thurber, James Grover 1894–1961. American humorist whose whimsical stories and drawings, which appeared regularly in the magazine The New Yorker, were noted for their insight into the human condition.

Thuringia Former German state, now part of East Germany. Taken by the Franks (6th cent.), the region became a march (frontier country) under Charlemagne (804). After 1247, the rule of Thuringia was contested and the land was divided. Most of Thuringia came under the control of Saxony (15th cent.). Its various principalities were reunited (1919) into the state of Thuringia. In WW II, Thuringia was occupied by Russian forces, and in 1952, it was divided among several East German districts.

Thutmose I ⟨Thothmes I⟩ *d. c*1512 BC. Egyptian king (*c*1526–12). He secured control of the Nile Valley as far as its fourth cataract, on whose rocks he inscribed records of his victories. He also sent military expeditions deep into Syria.

Thutmose II ⟨Thothmes II⟩ Ancient Egyptian king (*c*1512–04 BC). He married his half sister Hatshepsut, who quickly overpowered him and ruled in his stead.

Thutmose III *d. c*1450 BC. Egyptian king (*c*1504–*c*1450 BC), successor to his father, Thutmose II. The regency of his aunt, Queen Hatshepsut, ended in *c*1482, and he began the conquests that made Egypt a great power. He added Syria, Kadesh, Mitanni, and part of the Sudan to his empire. He erected many monuments and temples and brought Egypt great wealth and prosperity.

Thutmose IV *d. c*1417 BC. Ancient Egyptian king (*c*1425–17 BC), successor to his father, Amenhotep II. He led successful campaigns in Nubia and Asia Minor. His marriage to the daughter of the Mitanni king in Syria led to a long and advantageous peace.

Thuy, Nguyen Vinh See Bao Dai

Tiberius 42 BC–AD 37. Second Roman emperor (AD 14–37), successor to his stepfather Augustus. He ruled ably in the early years of his reign but later, under the influence of Sejanus, became a tyrant. He had Sejanus killed (AD 31).

Tibet Autonomous region of China, located in southwestern China. Capital is Lhasa. Tibet was crossed in early times by the trade route from China to India. A Tibetan kingdom rose there (7th cent.) and Buddhism was introduced, which evolved into Tibetan Buddhism (q.v.). Its chief religious leaders, the Dalai Lama and Panchen Lama, became the traditional political leaders (until recent times) of Tibet as well. Tibet came under Mongol domination (12th cent.), and then passed to the Chinese Manchu dynasty (1720). Chinese influence in Tibet waned through the 18th and 19th cents. and Tibet was invaded several times by Gurkhas from Nepal. Tibetan resistance to British attempts to open trade relations led to a British invasion (1904) and subsequent concessions. After the fall of China's Manchu dynasty (1912), Tibet again became independent. China invaded it (1950) and restored Chinese control over the country. A rebellion against Chinese rule (1959) was severely crushed and the Dalai Lama fled to India. The Chinese Communists suppressed Tibetan Buddhism, installed a secular government, and in 1965 the country formally became the Tibetan Autonomous Region.

Tibetan Buddhism ⟨often incorrectly called Lamaism⟩ Form of Buddhism found in Tibet, Mongolia, and adjacent regions. It began in Tibet (*c*7th cent. AD) and is derived from Indian Mahayana Buddhism, though it embodies elements of Tantric Buddhism and the native Tibetan religion, Bon. The important Yellow Hat Sect was begun (15th cent.) by the lama (monk) Tsong-kha-pa (*c*1357–1419), who introduced many reforms and established rigorous discipline within the monasteries. In 1641, the Mongols came under the influence of the Yellow Hat Sect and gave control of Tibet to the Dalai Lama, who eventually became secular leader of the country. Spiritual control came to reside with the Paschen Lama. The Dalai Lama was exiled (1959) after an abortive revolt against Chinese domination. Since then the Chinese have actively suppressed Tibetan Buddhism.

Tibullus, Albius 54?–18? BC. Roman elegaic poet. Only two works, Delia and Nemesis, can be definitely ascribed to him. His patron was Messala.

Ticonderoga, Battle of American victory (May 10, 1775) over the British during the American Revolution at Ticonderoga in northeastern New York. E. Allen and the Green Mountain Boys captured Fort Ticonderoga, at the northern end of Lake Champlain. Artillery from the fort was later used to force the British evacuation from Boston (1776).

T'ien-ching See Tientsin

Tientsin ⟨T'ien-ching⟩ Chinese city (pop. 7,200,000) and major seaport in eastern China. Tientsin was the site of the Treaties of Tientsin (June, 1858), by which the city and 10 other Chinese ports were opened to European trade; and also of the Tientsin Massacre (q.v.). It was a center of fighting during the Boxer Rebellion*(q.v.)*.

Tientsin Massacre Massacre (June 21, 1870) of some 20 French nationals, including the French consul, at Tientsin, China. European warships were sent to Tientsin and war was avoided by Chinese issuance of an official apology.

Tiepolo, Giovanni Battista 1696–1770. Italian artist, considered one of the leading Venetian painters of the 18th cent. His massive frescoes are noted for their use of light and color.

Tiffany, Louis Comfort 1848–1933. American decorative artist. He developed and manufactured a form of colored glass known as Tiffany favrile and produced a great number of works in glass, in the art nouveau style.

Tiglath-pileser I *d. c*1077 BC. Ancient Assyrian king (*c*1115–*c*1077 BC). He conquered parts of the former Hittite empire, invaded Asia Minor and Babylonia, and campaigned west to the Mediterranean.

Tiglath-pileser III d. 728 BC. Ancient Assyrian king (745–728 BC). He conquered Syria and invaded Palestine. He also suppressed a revolt in Babylon (729 BC), thereby becoming titular king of Babylon, and launched campaigns as far east as the Caspian Sea. He brought the Assyrian empire to its greatest extent and also proved an able administrator.

Tigranes I the Great *c*140–55 BC. Armenian king (*c*95–55 BC). He conquered northern Mesopotamia, Syria, and Cappodocia, but was defeated (69 and 68 BC) by the Romans under Lucullus. He surrendered (66 BC) to Pompey and subsequently ruled Armenia as a Roman vassal.

Tigris and Euphrates Rivers rising in Turkey and flowing through southwestern Asia to join in southern Iraq. The ancient region of Mesopotamia encompassed this river system, and gave rise to such early civilizations as Sumer (q.v.), Akkad (q.v.), Babylonia (q.v.), Assyria (q.v.), and Chaldaea (q.v.).

Tilak, Bal Gangadhar 1856–1920. Indian nationalist leader. He negotiated the Lucknow Pact (1916), which unified Hindus and Muslims against British rule in India.

Tilden, Samuel Jones 1814–86. American statesman, Democratic presidential candidate (1876) against Republican R. Hayes. Tilden won the popular vote but disputed electoral votes were awarded by a Congressional Commission to Hayes, who won the election.

Tillich, Paul Johannes 1886–1965. German-born American philosopher and theologian. His writings, which sought to blend modern thought with Christianity, include The Courage to Be and My Search for Absolutes.

Tilly, Johannes Tserklaes, count of 1559–1632. Flemish soldier in Bavarian and imperial service during the Thirty Years' War. As commander of the Catholic League he gained many victories, notably at White Hill (q.v.), in 1620. He seized Magdeburg (1631), which was sacked by his troops. He was defeated and killed at the Battle of Breitenfeld (1632).

Tilsit, Treaties of Two treaties signed (July, 1807) by France during the French Revolutionary Wars. 1. By the First Treaty of Tilsit (July 7, 1807), France granted Russia freedom to conquer Finland in return for a Russian attempt to mediate between England and France. If England should refuse mediation, Russia was to ally with France. 2. By the Second Treaty of Tilsit (July 9, 1807), France gained substantial territory from Prussia, and Prussia was obliged to join the Continental System against Britain.

Timbuktu West African city, now in Mali. Founded *c*1000, it rose to become a center of the gold and salt trade and reached its peak (15th cent.) under Songhai rule. Sacked (16th cent.) by the Moroccans, it soon declined.

Time of Troubles Period in Russian history (1604–13) from the rise of the first so-called false Dmitri claimant to the Russian throne to the accession of Czar Michael and establishment of the Romanov dynasty. In 1598, with the death of Czar Fëdor I and the end of the Rurik line, B. Godunov was elected czar. His rule was challenged (1604) by the rise of a pretender in Poland who claimed to be Dmitri, Fëdor's half-brother. He gained much support and at Godunov's death (1605) was made czar. He was murdered (1606) by the Boyars and succeeded by Basil IV Shuisky (ruled 1606–10), who was confronted by peasant revolts and the rise of new pretenders, including a second false Dmitri. The second Dmitri forced Shuisky to seek aid from Sweden, which in turn prompted a Polish invasion (1609) and occupation of Moscow (1610). Polish king Sigismund III sought the Russian throne for himself and provoked increased Russian resistance after the death (1610) of the second Dmitri. Moscow was relieved by Russian forces (1612) and a national assembly elected (1613) Michael Romanov czar, thus establishing the Romanov dynasty.

Timon of Athens fl. 5th cent. BC. Athenian misanthrope and recluse. Accounts of his life by Lucian and Plutarch formed the basis for the play Timon of Athens by W. Shakespeare.

Timothy, Saint d. AD *c*100. Christian disciple, companion to Saint Paul. He is frequently mentioned in the New Testament and two of Paul's letters are addressed to him. According to tradition, he was the first bishop of Ephesus and was martyred there.

Timur See Tamerlane

Timurids Turkish dynasty (15th cent.) descended from Tamerlane. Upon Tamerlane's death, the empire, comprising domains extending from India to Persia (modern Iran), was divided into eastern and western sections and distributed between his sons. Shah Rokh (ruled 1405–47), given the eastern half of the empire, quickly reunited much of the territory. He sparked a literary and cultural movement, established a library at his capital, Herat, and encouraged trade. After his death, the empire fell into anarchy and eventually disintegrated into local dynasties. Baber, one of these rulers, founded the Mogul (q.v.) empire in India.

Tinchebrai, Battle of Battle (Sept. 28, 1106) by which English king Henry I gained control of Normandy.

Tindal, William See Tyndale, William

Tindale, William See Tyndale, William

Tintoretto ⟨Robusti, Jacopo⟩ 1518–94. Italian painter, one of the great Venetian Renaissance painters of the 16th cent. A leader of the Mannerist school, he was thought to have been a student of Titian. His many famous works include a Last Supper, Susanna Bathing, The Golden Calf, The Finding, and The Removal of the Body of St. Mark.

Tippecanoe, Battle of Victory (Nov. 7, 1811) of US forces led by Gen. W. Harrison over the Shawnee Indians led by Tenskwatawa, brother of Tecumseh. The battle, near the Tippecanoe River in Indiana, broke the power of the Indian alliance formed by Tecumseh and also provided Harrison with the slogan "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too," for his 1840 presidential campaign.

Tipu Sahib 1753–99. Indian Sultan of Mysore (1782–99). He fought against the British and the Marathas in the Mysore Wars. He was killed in the fourth war and his kingdom was divided.

Tiradentes Conspiracy A Brazilian movement against Portuguese rule. It was led by José Joaquim da Silva Xavier (1748–92), also called Tiradentes. He was captured (1789) and executed after a lengthy trial.

Tiresias In Greek mythology, a blind Theban prophet. He prophesied the tragedy of Oedipus.

Tirhakah ⟨Taharka⟩ d. 663 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (689–663 BC). Last king of the 25th (Ethiopian) dynasty in ancient Egypt, he was defeated (671 BC) by the Assyrians in a series of battles and was obliged to abandon Lower Egypt.

Tirpitz, Alfred von 1849–1930. German admiral. As naval secretary from 1897, he built a modern fleet to match the British navy. He retired (1916) during WW I because of opposition to his policy of unrestricted submarine warfare.

Tirso de Molina ⟨Téllez, Gabriel⟩ 1571?–1648. Spanish monk and dramatist. A prolific author of some 400 plays, he provided the first literary treatment of the Don Juan legend in El Burlador de Sevilla.

Tisquantum See Squanto

Tissaphernes d. 395 BC. Persian satrap. He played a major role in Persia's reconquest of the Ionian Greek cities, and in the Battle of Cunaxa (401 BC).

Tisza, Count Stephen 1861–1918. Hungarian premier (1930–05, 1913–17). A strong supporter of the Austro-Hungarian dual monarchy, he favored the alliance with Germany and was assassinated for his support of Hungary's WW I role.

Titans In Greek mythology, the twelve sons and daughters of Uranus, god of heaven, and Gaea, goddess of earth. Led by Cronus, they overthrew their father. They were in turn overthrown by the children of Chronus and Rhea (the Olympians), led by Zeus. The Titans were (sons) Hyperion, Oceanus, Cronus, Iapetus, Coeus, Crius, and (daughters) Phoebe, Rhea, Theia, Themis, Mnemosyne, and Tethys.

Titanic British ocean liner involved in a major seagoing disaster. Believed to be unsinkable, the liner struck an iceberg during the night (Apr. 14, 1912), while on her maiden voyage. It sank the next morning with the loss of more than 1,500 lives.

Tithonus Trojan prince in Greek mythology. Loved by the Goddess Eos, he was granted immortality by Zeus, but not eternal youth. Eos changed him into a grasshopper in his old age.

Titian ⟨pseud. of Tiziano Vecellio⟩ 1477–1576. Italian painter, one of the great Renaissance artists. A member of the Venetian school, Titian painted sumptuous religious and mythological paintings, such as the masterpieces Sacred and Profane Love and Rape of Europa. Among his many other famous works are Charles V in Battle, Assumption of the Virgin, and the Pietà.

Tito ⟨Josip Broz⟩ 1892–1980. President of Yugoslavia (1953–80) and Communist leader. A Russian prisoner during WW I, he participated in the 1917 revolution, then returned to Yugoslavia, becoming leader of the Communist party in 1937. During WW II, he led the Partisans (q.v.) in guerrilla fighting and, from 1945, headed the Yugoslav government. He pursued policies independently of the Soviet Union and was expelled from the Cominform (1948). Thereafter he maintained relations with Western and Communist powers, as well as with nonaligned countries. His regime was one of the most liberal in the Communist world.

Titus fl. 1st cent. AD. Traditional first bishop of Crete and a disciple of St. Paul. One of Paul's pastoral epistles was addressed to Titus.

Titus AD *c*39–81. Roman emperor (AD 79–81), successor to his father, Vespasian. As a general he captured (AD 70) and destroyed Jerusalem and the Temple. As emperor, he rebuilt Rome after a great fire (AD 80) and completed the Colosseum.

Titus Flavius Vespasianus See Vespasian

Titus Lucretius Carus See Lucretius

Tiw, ⟨Tyr⟩ Ancient Germanic god. One-handed because of a wolf's treacherous bite, Tiw was a god of war that gave his name to Tuesday (Tiw's day).

Tiy fl. 1400 BC. Egyptian queen. She was the mother of Ikhnaton, and wife of Amenhotep III, over whom she is thought to have exerted great influence.

Tocqueville, Alexis de 1805–59. French writer and statesman. Tocqueville visited the US in 1831 and wrote the study Democracy in America, considered a classic of political literature.

Togliatti, Palmiro 1893–1964. Italian Communist party cofounder and longtime leader. He advocated liberalization of Communist regimes but never broke with Moscow.

Togo, Republic of See Togoland

Togo, Heihachiro, Count 1847–1934. Japanese admiral. In the Russo-Japanese War, he defeated the Russians at Port Arthur (1904) and at the Battle of Tsuschima in 1905—the first defeat of a European power by Asians.

Togoland Region in West Africa. A former German protectorate, Togo was divided into British and French mandates in 1922. The eastern half became the Republic of Togo in 1960. The rest became part of Ghana in 1957.

Togrul Beg See Seljuks

Tojo, Hideki 1884–1948. Japanese general and wartime premier (1941–44). Tojo helped instigate the attack on Pearl Harbor (1941) and led Japan's war effort until 1944. He was executed (1945) as a war criminal.

Tokio See Tokyo

Tököly, Emeric See Thököly, Emeric

Tokugawa, Iyeyasu See Iyeyasu

Tokugawa Keiki ⟨Hitotsubashi⟩ 1837–1902. Last Japanese shogun. Made shogun (1867) he surrendered his authority upon the accession (1868) of Mutsuhito as emperor.

Tokugawa Last shogunate of Japan (ruled 1603–1867). Founded by Ieyasu, who came to power (1603) after the death of Hideyoshi, the shogunate ruled by means of a centralized feudal government. The capital was moved from Kyoto to Edo (now Tokyo) and the reign of the Tokugawa family was marked by a period of peace, prosperity, and cultural flowering. Nearly all foreign trade was ended and Confucianism was promoted. The Tokugawa shoguns were ousted from power during the Meiji (q.v.) Restoration.

Tokyo ⟨Tokio⟩ ⟨Edo⟩ Japan's capital city (pop. 8,543,800) and its cultural, administrative, and commercial center. Founded in the 15th cent., it became the capital of the Tokugawa shogunate (1603) as the city of Edo. During the Meiji Restoration it was made the imperial capital (1868) as Tokyo. It became an industrial center in the 19th cent. and was severely damaged (1923) in an earthquake. During WW II the city was two-thirds destroyed by Allied bombing.

Toledo Spanish city (pop. 44,000). An important city since Roman times, it was a Visigothic capital (534–712), a Moorish capital (712–1085), and capital of Castile and then of Spain (1087–1560). Under the Spanish it became a center of Christianity, the site of several church councils and seat of the Inquisition.

Toledo, Francisco de d. 1584. Spanish colonial administrator and viceroy of Peru (1569–81). He reorganized and stabilized the government of Peru originally set up after the Spanish conquest.

Tolkien, John Ronald Reuel 1892–1973. British author. An Oxford professor, he is best known as the author of the popular trilogy The Lord of the Rings.

Tolstoy, Leo 1828–1910. Russian author and philosopher, considered one of the greatest of all novelists. Born into a wealthy family, he attended college for a time and served in the army. He then married (1862) and returned to his country estate, Yasnaya Polyana, where he wrote his masterpieces, War and Peace and Anna Karenina. He experienced a religious transformation in 1876, and thereafter dedicated himself to social reform and the development of his new religion, which was a form of Christian anarchism.

Toltec Ancient people of Mexico, warriors who dominated central Mexico from *c*900 AD to the rise of the Aztecs (12th–13th cent.). Toltecs were skilled in building, metallurgy, and the arts. They are believed to have worshiped the sun and practiced human sacrifice.

Tombaugh, Clyde William 1906–. American astronomer. He discovered the planet Pluto (1930) after its existence had been predicted by P. Lowell.

Tompkins, Daniel D. 1774–1825. American statesman. He was governor of New York (1807–17) and US vice-president (1817–25) under J. Monroe.

Tone, Theobald Wolfe 1763–98. Irish nationalist leader. Tone worked for legislation to free the Irish from Britain and later joined a French military expedition (1798) to Ireland in support of a rebellion. Captured, he committed suicide.

Tong Wars Violent feuds (1850s–1920s) in US West Coast cities between Chinese immigrants belonging to associations (called tongs) that were dominated by criminal elements.

Toombs, Robert 1810–85. American statesman and Confederate general. He was US senator from Georgia (1853–61) and during the American Civil War he saw action at the second Battle of Bull Run and at Antietam.

Topeka US city (pop. 115,300), capital of Kansas. Founded in 1854 by antislavery activists, Topeka became the capital when Kansas finally became a state in 1861.

Torah Hebrew name for the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Bible. The term is also used more broadly to refer to the entire Hebrew Bible.

Tordesillas, Treaty of Treaty (June 7, 1494) between Spain and Portugal dividing between them the newly discovered lands in the Americas and the East. The treaty generally followed a papal bull, issued by Alexander VI, allotting the Americas to Spain and Africa, and Asia to Portugal. But it fixed the dividing line farther west, giving Portugal a claim to Brazil.

Torgau, Battle of Costly Prussian victory (Nov. 3, 1760) over Austria in the Seven Years' War, fought at Torgau (now in East Germany). Frederick II, leading some 44,000 Prussians, defeated some 65,000 Austrians, commanded by Marshal Count von Daun. Prussian casualties were 13,000.

Tories See Loyalists

Toronto One of Canada's two largest cities (pop. 2,803,101), capital of Ontario. Located on Lake Ontario, it is a major port. Toronto was the site of a fur-trading post and the French Fort Roille (1749). The British founded the city as York in 1793 and it was damaged in American attacks during the War of 1812. It was renamed Toronto when it was incorporated (1834). Toronto was the scene of W. MacKenzie's uprising (1837), and twice served as Canada's capital (1849–51, 1855–59).

Torquemada, Juan de 1388–1468. Spanish Franciscan monk and cardinal, an uncle of T. de Torquemada. At the Councils of Basel and Constance, he ably defended papal prerogatives against conciliarism.

Torquemada, Tomas de 1420–98. Spanish Dominican monk. An advisor to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, he brought about expulsion of the Jews (1492) from Spain and was named grand inquisitor (1493). In this post he promulgated rules for the Inquisition (q.v.) and, by his ruthless enforcement of them, made his name synonymous with cruelty. Some 2,000 persons were condemned while he held office.

Torres Vedras, Lines of See Lines of Torres Vedras

Torricelli, Evangelista 1608–47. Italian scientist. He was secretary to Galileo and invented the barometer.

Torstensson, Lennart 1603–51. Swedish general. His notable innovations in the use of more mobile field artillery contributed to Swedish success in the Thirty Years' War (1618–48).

Torun, Treaty of Treaty (Oct. 19, 1466) between Poland and the Teutonic Knights. By it Poland obtained the city of Torun and other territories (including Pomerania) from the order and compelled the Teutonic Knights to recognize Polish suzerainty. The treaty restored to Poland lands taken by the order in the 13th cent.

Tory Name of a once-powerful English political party. It was originally applied to Catholic King James II's supporters, who believed in the divine right and absolutist powers of the king. After the Glorious Revolution (1688), the party represented the rural gentry and generally favored a powerful monarchy, religious uniformity, and noninvolvement in foreign wars. The party was powerful under Queen Anne (reigned 1702–14) but was effectively dissolved as a party under George I, because of its ties with the Jacobites (q.v.). A new Tory party formed under the leadership of W. Pitt and remained in power from 1783 to 1830. However, the party's reactionary policies during this period, coupled with passage of the Reform Bill of 1832, resulted in the breakup of the party in the 1830s. Tory factions reemerged in the Conservative party (q.v.).

Toscanini, Arturo 1867–1957. Italian conductor. Considered one of the greatest conductors of all time, he was musical director of La Scala (1898–1907), of the New York Philharmonic (1933–36), and of the NBC Symphony (1937–54).

Tostig d. 1066. Anglo-Saxon earl of Northumbria and brother of England's King Harold II. When his brother sided with Northumbrian rebels against him, Tostig joined Norwegian king Harold III in an unsuccessful invasion of England. Tostig was killed in battle.

totalitarianism Form of authoritarian government in which the state attempts to control every aspect of the life of its citizens. The term was first used to describe the Fascist regime in Italy, the Nazi regime in Germany, and the Communist regime in the Soviet Union.

Totila ⟨Baduila⟩ d. 552. Ostrogothic king. A capable general, he overran most of Italy, briefly reconquering it from the Byzantines (550). He was killed at the Battle of Taginae.

Toulon, Siege of Siege (Aug. 28–Dec. 9, 1793) during the French Revolutionary Wars in which French republican forces succeeded in taking Toulon. Napoleon, then a young artillery officer, first gained notice there.

Toulouse-Lautrec, Henri de 1864–1901. French artist famous for paintings, lithographs, and posters of Parisian night life, such as Le Moulin de la Galette.

Toungoo dynasty Burmese ruling dynasty (15th–18th cent.) of a kingdom centered in southern Burma. In the 16th cent. the kingdom was greatly expanded, notably by Bayinnaung, and included all of Burma and parts of neighboring states. Toungoo power began declining after the death (1581) of Bayinnaung.

Tours, Berengar of See Berengar of Tours

Tours, Saint Gregory of See Gregory of Tours, Saint

Tours, Truce of Truce concluded on May 28, 1444, between the English and French forces in the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453). It lasted until 1449.

Toussaint L'Ouverture, François Dominique *c*1744–1803. Haitian revolutionary leader. As the leader of a band of Negro rebels, he sided with the French (*c*1794) and drove out the British and Spaniards. He fell afoul (1801) of Napoleon, however, when he sought greater independence from France.

Tower of Babel Legendary tower. In the Bible, Noah's descendents attempted to build a tower to heaven. But God caused them to suddenly speak different languages, making them unable to understand each other and complete the tower. Thus it was an early explanation for the diversity of language.

Tower of London Historic British fortress located on the Thames River in London. William the Conqueror was said to have begun fortification of the site (*c*1066). Construction of the central tower, made of white limestone, was begun (*c*1078). In succeeding centuries, successive encircling walls were added and the fortress was used variously as a royal palace, a jail, and an arsenal. It was notorious as the place where such historic figures as A. Boleyn, Sir W. Raleigh, and Lady Jane Grey were imprisoned or executed.

Townshend, Charles 1725–67. British chancellor of the Exchequer. A brilliant but unstable politician, he secured passage of the Townshend Acts (q.v.).

Townshend, Charles Townshend, 2d Viscount 1674–1738. English statesman. He was a participant in Whig governments with his brother-in-law, R. Walpole. His major achievement was the conduct of British foreign policy between 1721 and 1730.

Townshend Acts British colonial laws (1767) replacing the Stamp Act. The British Parliament passed these four laws (June 15–July 2, 1767), which were designed to reassert its authority over rebellious American colonists. Named for C. Townshend, British chancellor of the Exchequer, the acts fixed import taxes on glass, lead, paints, papers, and tea; authorized searches to guarantee compliance; and suspended the New York Assembly's powers until that colony complied with the 1765 Quartering Act. These laws stiffened Colonial resistance, and were repealed (1770), except for the tax on tea. This last provision led to the Boston Tea Party (q.v.).

Towton, Battle of Yorkist victory (Mar. 29, 1461) in the English Wars of the Roses (1455–85). Yorkist and Lancastrian forces numbered about 20,000 each and the battle was fought in a blinding snowstorm. The Yorkists gained the upper hand, massacred the Lancastrians and forced King Henry VI to flee England. Yorkist king Edward IV then took the throne.

Toynbee, Arnold 1852–83. English economist and sociologist, noted for pioneering settlement work and his economic history, The Industrial Revolution in England.

Toynbee, Arnold Joseph 1889–1975. English historian. He produced a notable theory of the rise and fall of civilizations based on the idea of cultural responses to challenges, in the 12-volume A Study of History.

Toyotomi Hideyoshi See Hideyoshi

trade unions See labor unions

Trafalgar, Battle of Naval battle (Oct. 21, 1805) between Britain and France, fought during the Napoleonic Wars, off Cape Trafalgar, Spain. It established British naval superiority for the rest of the century and ended Napoleon's plans to invade England. Twenty-seven British ships under Admiral H. Nelson defeated a fleet of 33 French and Spanish ships commanded by P. de Villeneuve. The French lost 20 ships, the British none. But Nelson was killed by a French sniper.

Trail of Tears See Cherokee Indians

Trajan AD *c*53–117. Roman emperor (AD 98–117), successor to Nerva. Born in Spain, he was the first non-Italian emperor. He conquered Dacia and much of Parthia in the east. He encouraged building and constructed Trajan's Forum in Rome and Trajan's bridge, the first bridge across the Danube.

Tranquillus, Gaius Suetonius See Suetonius

Transcendentalism New England literary and philosophical movement (*c*1835–55). Transcendentalists such as R. Emerson and H. Thoreau believed in the goodness and divinity of man and nature. Their beliefs were marked by an emphasis on individuality and opposition to authority.

Transcontinental Treaty ⟨Adams-Onis Treaty⟩ Treaty between Spain and the US, signed on Feb. 22, 1819. Spain gave up claims to Florida and the Oregon Country in return for US recognition of her sovereignty over Texas.

Transvaal Former independent state and now a South African province, which has the world's richest goldfield. Boers from the Cape Colony began settling there after the Great Trek (q.v.) in the 1830s, gaining independence in 1852. They successfully rebelled against the British annexation (1877), but became outnumbered by foreigners (uitlanders) after the discovery of gold in 1886. During the Boer War (1899–1902) the Transvaal was annexed (1900) by Britain, and it became a province of the Union of South Africa in 1909.

Transylvania Historic region of northwestern and central Romania. Once part of the Roman province of Dacia, it was conquered by Germanic tribes and became part of Hungary under Stephen I (1003). Control of the region was contested between Austria and the Ottoman Empire (15th–18th cents.), though it enjoyed nearly independent status in the 17th cent. Austria finally gained complete control in 1711 and by 1867 it had become part of Hungary. Romanian inhabitants, however, were dissatisfied with Magyar domination and supported the seizure (1918) of Transylvania by Romania. By the Treaty of Trianon (1920), Hungary ceded the territory to Romania.

Trasimene, Battle of Carthaginian victory (217 BC) over the Romans in the Second Punic War, near Lake Trasimene in central Italy. The Carthaginian general Hannibal ambushed and totally destroyed a Roman army led by C. Flaminius, who was killed.

Travis, William Barrett 1811–36. Texas revolutionary hero. He commanded the Texas rebels at the Alamo (q.v.) and died in battle there.

Treaty of See under names inverted, as in Paris, Treaty of treaty ports Ports specifically designated by treaty as open to trade with foreign nations. In the 19th cent. both China and Japan resisted trade with the West as a matter of policy. To force a change in that policy, Britain precipitated the Opium War (q.v.) and, by the resulting Treaty of Nanking (1842), won trading rights in five Chinese treaty ports. In Japan, Commodore M. Perry used the presence of his US naval fleet (1854) to pressure the Japanese into opening their ports to foreign trade, and soon after treaty ports were established there. Other nations followed and eventually there were over 60 treaty ports in China and six in Japan. The system was abolished (1899) in Japan and (1946) in China.

Trebizond, Empire of Kingdom on the south shore of the Black Sea. After the overthrow of the Byzantine Empire (1204) by the Crusaders, two grandsons of Emperor Andronicus I Comnenus founded this successor state in what is now northeastern Turkey. Located on trade routes with the East, it prospered until taken over by the Ottoman Turks in 1461.

Treitschke, Heinrich von 1834–96. German historian. A passionate advocate of German nationalism and power, he expounded his ideas in a major work, History of Germany in the Nineteenth Century.

Tremblay, Françoise Leclerc du See Joseph, Father

Trent, Council of Important council of the Roman Catholic Church (19th ecumenical), held in three sessions (1545–47, 1551–52, 1562–63) under two popes, Paul III and Pius IV. It met in response to the Protestant Reformation, and all doctrinal disputes raised by Protestants were answered. The council's far-reaching results were published in the Catechism of the Council of Trent (1566) and included reforms and definitions concerning the sacraments, the Scriptures, church dogma, duties of the clergy, and other subjects. The council marked the beginning of the Catholic Reformation (q.v.).

Trent Affair A diplomatic incident during the American Civil War. During the US blockade of the South, the US vessel San Jacinto, commanded by Capt. C. Wilkes, seized (Nov. 8, 1861) the British mail steamer Trent on the open sea and removed two Confederate commissioners. At the demand of the British, they were released and an international incident was averted.

Trenton US city (pop. 92,100), capital of New Jersey, and a manufacturing and transportation center. First settled by Quakers in 1679, it was a battle site during the American Revolution. It became state capital in 1790.

Trenton and Princeton, battles of American Revolutionary War battles, G. Washington's first victories against the British forces of lords Howe and Cornwallis. Washington made his famous crossing of the Delaware River (Dec. 25, 1776) and captured Trenton by taking 918 Hessians prisoner in a surprise attack. He then eluded some 7,000 British soldiers sent to Trenton and routed a British column near Princeton (Jan. 2, 1977) before moving into winter quarters at Morristown.

Trevelyan, George Macaulay 1876–1962. English historian. He was a champion of "literary" historical writing. His works include History of England and English Social History.

Trianon, Treaty of Treaty signed at Versailles (June 4, 1920) between the victorious WW I Allies and the new state of Hungary that was created out of Austria-Hungary. The new nation ceded territory to Romania (Transylvania and part of Banat), Czechoslovakia (Slovakia and Ruthenia), and the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (Croatia, Slavonia, and part of Banat). Its army was also reduced to 35,000.

Tribonian d. 545? Roman jurist. He headed the commissions that produced the great compilation of Roman law, the Corpus Juris Civilis (q.v.) issued by Emperor Justinian.

tribune Ancient Roman government official. Originally military officers, tribunes by the 5th cent. BC had assumed governmental functions, notably as protectors of the rights of the plebeians. Tribunes were elected by the plebs, were usually 10 in number, and gradually gained control (by their veto power) over the Roman Senate. They had relatively little power during the Roman Empire.

Trident Conference ⟨Anglo-American Conference⟩ Secret wartime conference of WW II in Washington, D.C. (May 12–25, 1943). President F. Roosevelt, Prime Minister W. Churchill, and their combined chiefs of staff planned the opening of a second front in Europe (Normandy invasion).

Trier West German city (pop. 103,400). One of the oldest cities in Germany, it was founded by the Romans in 15 BC and was a Roman provincial capital. During the Middle Ages, its archbishops became the rulers and from the 12th cent. were also electors of the Holy Roman Empire. Trier was incorporated into Prussia in 1815.

Trieste, Free Territory of See Free Territory of Trieste

Trilling, Lionel 1905–75. American literary critic and essayist. A Columbia University professor, he was noted for his writings on the American liberal tradition (The Liberal Imagination and Middle of the Journey), as well as for his literary studies.

Trinidad and Tobago Independent state composed of two tropical islands off the coast of Venezuela. Capital is Port of Spain. Trinidad was discovered by Columbus (1498), was under British rule from 1803, and was combined with British-ruled Tobago in 1888. It won independence Aug. 31, 1962 and became a republic in 1976. Its prime minister since 1956 has been Eric E. Williams (1911–).

Trinity Fundamental Christian doctrine about the nature of God. As defined by several early church councils, God has a single divine essence that subsists in three divine persons: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Tripartite Pact See Axis Powers

Triple Alliance 1. Alliance formed (1668) by England, The Netherlands, and Sweden to oppose French aggression during the reign of French king Louis XIV. The alliance was short-lived, as Louis soon secured an agreement (Treaty of Dover) with England. 2. Alliance formed (1717) by France, Great Britain, and The Netherlands, primarily to oppose Spain and secure the provisions of the Peace of Utrecht. In 1718 the alliance was joined by Austria, and thus became the Quadruple Alliance (q.v.). 3. Alliance formed in the late 19th and early 20th cents. by Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. It was opposed by the Triple Entente. In the late 19th cent. O. von Bismarck sought to strengthen Germany's position against France, following the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71). In 1879, Bismarck secured the defensive Dual Alliance with Austria-Hungary. In 1882, Italy agreed to a defensive alliance with Germany, thus forming the Triple Alliance. The formation of this alliance led first to a series of informal agreements designed to offset the power of the Triple Alliance. By 1891, France had established an informal understanding with Russia. This developed (1893) into a military agreement, which was made public in 1895. In 1898 Théophile Delcassé (1852–1923) became French foreign minister. His policies led to an understanding between France and Great Britain (1904) known as the Entente Cordiale. In 1907 the Anglo-Russian Entente established the set of agreements that completed the Triple Entente. The two power blocs—Triple Alliance and Triple Entente—continued to dominate European politics up to the eve of WW I. At that point, Italy was in conflict with Austria-Hungary over the Balkans and refused to enter the war on the side of Germany and Austria-Hungary. This effectively ended the alliance and in 1915, Italy joined the Allies in WW I.

Triple Alliance, War of the War (1865–70) between Paraguay and an alliance formed by Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay. The war, sparked in part by conflicting interests of Argentina, Brazil, and Paraguay over influence in Uruguay, led to the virtual destruction of Paraguay, the death of a large portion of its population, and loss of much of its territory to Brazil. In 1864–65, Brazil helped establish Venancio Flores (1809–68), a leader of the Colorado faction, as Uruguayan president. Paraguayan president F. López, a supporter of the rival Blanco faction in Uruguay, then declared war on Brazil. He also declared war on Argentina, after it refused to allow Paraguayan forces passage through its territory. Uruguay then joined the alliance with Brazil and Argentina against Paraguay. After initial successes, López withdrew his forces, vastly outnumbered by the Alliance, to Paraguayan territory. By Jan., 1866, the tide had turned against López and, though Paraguayans offered fierce resistance in following years, the Alliance slowly closed in on them. Asunción, the capital, fell in Jan., 1869, and López was captured and executed (Mar. 1, 1870).

Triple Entente See Triple Alliance (3)

Tripoli Capital of Libya (pop. 551,500). Founded (*c*7th cent. BC) by Phoenicians as Oea, it became one of the three major cities of the region called Tripolitania. Captured by the Romans (1st cent. BC), Tripoli was conquered by various peoples after the 5th cent. AD and was in Muslim hands from the 7th cent. It was a noted haven for pirates during this time and the US fought the Tripolitan War (q.v.) to suppress them. Tripoli passed to Italy after the Italo-Turkish War (q.v.) and later became capital of Libya.

Tripolitania See Roman Province of Africa

Tripolitan War Confrontation between the US and the Barbary States (1801–05) resulting from the US refusal to increase payments of tribute to the pasha of Tripoli for his protection from pirate raids. The US blockade of Tripoli (from 1801) was generally unsuccessful against the pirates, and subsequent attempts to negotiate failed. In 1803, the US warship Philadelphia was captured by Tripoli and S. Decatur led a famous raiding party that destroyed the ship in the harbor (Feb., 1804). Fighting continued but was unsuccessful until the US organized a land invasion force against Tripoli in 1805. The Tripolitans agreed to a treaty (June 4, 1805) even before the force, under W. Eaton, reached Tripoli. The agreement ended US payments of tribute but acts of piracy continued in subsequent years.

Tripolitan War See Italo-Turkish War

Triptolemus In Greek mythology, the inventor of the plow and the teacher of agriculture to the human race. A favorite of the goddess Demeter, from whom he learned, he was symbolized by an ear of wheat.

Trist, Nicholas Philip 1800–74. American diplomat, sent to negotiate an end to the Mexican War. He disregarded orders recalling him and went on to conclude the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (q.v).

Triton Greek mythological sea creature. Originally a gigantic son of Poseidon, Tritons were later represented as minor gods that were half fish, half man.

triumvirate In ancient Rome, a board of three government officials appointed to carry out a specified task. The term was applied to the alliance (not legally sanctioned by the government) between Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus (formed 60 BC). This was the First Triumvirate. The Second Triumvirate (legally sanctioned) consisted of Octavian (later Augustus), Antony, and Lepidus, and resulted in reforms that gave the triumvirs dictatorial powers. It was organized in 43 BC.

Trojan War Legendary war between the Greeks, led by Agamemnon, and the city of Troy, defended by Hector and others. It is believed to have had its roots in a real conflict that took place *c*1200 BC. The mythical battle began when the Trojan prince Paris kidnapped Helen, wife of King Menelaus of Sparta. For ten years the Trojans and the invading Greeks fought many heroic but inconclusive battles. Finally the Greeks built a large wooden horse, ostensibly a gift for the Trojans. A number of Greek warriors hid inside it and the Greeks embarked their ships, pretending to sail home. The Trojans wheeled the horse inside the city and that night the warriors opened the gates of Troy for their fellow Greeks, who then conquered the city. The war inspired many poems and stories, most notably Homer's Iliad and Odyssey (q.v.).

Trollope, Anthony 1815–82. Noted English Victorian novelist. A chronicler of the ordinary lives of provincial people, he is famous for his series of novels about the fictional county of Barsetshire. Among these novels were The Warden and Barchester Towers.

Tromp, Maarten Harpertszoon 1597–1653. Dutch admiral. Given supreme command of the Dutch Navy, he decisively defeated the Spanish in battle (1639) in the English channel. He was killed in the Dutch War (1652–54) with the English.

Troppau, Congress of See Congress of Troppau

Trotsky, Leon ⟨pseud. of Bronstein, Lev Davidovich⟩ 1879–1940. Russian Communist leader. He was a chief theorist, a leader in both the 1905 and 1917 revolutions, and N. Lenin's commissar for foreign affairs. In the latter capacity he arranged the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk with Germany. He next became war commissar, rebuilding the Russian army. Trotsky and his arch-rival, J. Stalin, struggled for power after Lenin's death (1924). Stalin eventually stripped Trotsky of his influence and expelled him from Russia in 1929. Trotsky spent the rest of his life in exile, writing and preaching revolution. Stalin is believed to have masterminded his assassination in Mexico City.

Trotskyism Doctrine of a "permanent revolution" on a worldwide scale advocated by Russian Communist leader L. Trotsky. This doctrine, along with Trotsky's advocacy of a greater role for the working class led to his struggle with J. Stalin, who advocated "socialism in one country." Trotsky was ultimately exiled from Russia and assassinated.

troubadours Medieval lyric poets who composed in the dialect of Provence, langue d'oc, in southern France. They flourished between the 11th and the 13th cents. and greatly influenced subsequent European literature.

trouvere Medieval lyric poets and musicians who composed in the langue d'oc, the language of northern France and of the French court centered around Paris. They began writing in imitation of the troubadours, and flourished in the 12th and 13th cents.

Troy Ancient city located along the Hellespont in what is now Asian Turkey. Made famous by the legendary Trojan War (q.v.), Troy flourished (3d–2d millennium BC) as the center of Troas. Archaeological evidence indicates it was abandoned from 1100 to 700 BC (after the war). New cities were later built on the site until Roman times. The site was identified as the actual location of the legendary Troy by H. Schliemann, who began archaeological digs there in 1870.

Troyes, Chrétien de See Chrétien de Troyes

Troyes, Treaty of Treaty (May 21, 1420) between England and France, an attempt to settle the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453). English king Henry V was to marry the daughter of Charles VI and thereby become successor to the French throne. But the disinherited French dauphin (later Charles VII) resisted the settlement with the aid of Joan of Arc.

Truce of See under names inverted, as in Altmark, Truce of

Trucial Coast See United Arab Emirates

Trucial Oman See United Arab Emirates

Trucial States See United Arab Emirates

Trudeau, Pierre Elliot 1919–. French Canadian Liberal party leader and prime minister (almost continuously since 1968). He has been noted for his championship of liberal domestic programs and for a more independent foreign policy. His administration has been marked in recent years by the rise of French separatism and ongoing attempts at constitutional reform.

Truffaut, François 1932–. French film director and critic. He directed such films as The 400 Blows and Jules and Jim, considered typical examples of the "new wave" films.

Trujillo Molina, Rafeal Leonidas 1891–1961. General and dictator of the Dominican Republic (1930–61). His rule was marked by ruthless suppression of opposition, which ultimately led to his assassination.

Truman, Harry S. 1884–1972. Thirty-third US president (1945–53), successor to F. Roosevelt. A US senator from Missouri (1935–45), he gained national attention as chairman of a Senate committee investigating defense expenditures. He was elected vice-president under Roosevelt in 1944 and became president on Roosevelt's death (Apr. 12, 1945). Truman participated in the Potsdam Conference (q.v.) and ended WW II by ordering the first use of the atomic bombs, dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Truman's postwar foreign policy was marked by rapidly deteriorating relations with Russia, leading to the Cold War (q.v.). He countered Soviet postwar expansion by issuing the Truman Doctrine (q.v.), which was intended to contain Communism. It was implemented by the Marshall Plan (q.v.), the Point Four Program (q.v.), and establishment of NATO (q.v.). The Berlin blockade and airlift (q.v.) of 1948–49 began during this period. At home, much of his domestic legislation was blocked by Congress, which passed the Taft-Hartley Labor Act (1947) over Truman's veto. Truman received the 1948 Democratic presidential nomination and conducted an energetic whistle-stop campaign. He won the election and outwitted the pollsters who predicted that Republican candidate T. Dewey would become president. His second term was marked by continued Congressional resistance to proposed legislation of his Fair Deal (q.v.) program and the outbreak of the Korean War (q.v.). During the conflict he aroused a national controversy by dismissing Gen. D. MacArthur from command for insubordination (1951). Truman did not seek reelection in 1952, but supported the candidacy of A. Stevenson.

Truman Doctrine US foreign-policy decision, embodied in a message of President H. Truman of Mar. 12, 1947, calling for military aid to Greece and Turkey to fight Communist rebellions. It signaled US determination to "contain" the further expansion of communism.

Trumbull, John 1756–1843. Early American painter, noted for his Revolutionary War scenes.

Trumbull, Jonathan 1710–85. American patriot. He became governor of Connecticut (1769–84) and during the Revolutionary War supplied G. Washington with war materials and other services.

trust Form of business combine or corporation established to create a monopoly over a particular business or industry. Trusts rose to positions of great power in the US during the late 19th cent. Among the greatest were the oil, steel, sugar, and meat-packing trusts. Their activities led to passage of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act (q.v.) of 1890 and they were vigorously prosecuted during the presidency of T. Roosevelt.

trusteeship Method of governing territories. It was established in 1946 by the UN to replace the former League of Nations mandates (q.v.). By the mid-1970s, nearly all the UN trusteeship territories had become independent nations and UN members.

Truth, Sojourner *c*1797–1883. Former slave and evangelist. Freed in 1827, she embarked on a notable career as a traveling speaker for the Christian Gospels, abolition, and women's rights.

Tryon, William 1729–88. British Colonial governor. As governor of North Carolina, he suppressed the Regulator Movement (q.v.). As Governor of New York during the Revolutionary War period, he was at first forced to govern from a British warship.

Ts'ao Ts'ao AD 155–220. Chinese general. He held real power during the last years of the last Han emperor, Hsien Ti, and set up the new Wei dynasty in 220.

Tseng Kuo-fan 1811–72. Chinese general and government administrator under the Ch'ing dynasty. Tseng was successful in suppressing the Taiping Rebellion and conciliating the Western powers. He gave the declining Chinese imperial government a new lease on life.

Tshombe, Moise Kapenda 1919–69. Congolese leader. Tshombe led Katanga in secession (1960–63) from the newly independent Congo Republic, was said to be implicated in the murder of P. Lumumba, and was finally exiled (1963). He returned to become premier (1964–65) of a reunited Congo Republic, but soon after was accused of treason and fled.

Tsin See Chin

Tsong-kha-pa See Tibetan Buddhism

Tsu Hsi See Tz'u Hsi

Tubman, Harriet *c*1820–1913. American abolitionist. An escaped slave, she was a principal figure in the Underground Railroad. She aided the Union army during the Civil War.

Tubman, William Vacanarat Shadrach 1895–1971. Liberian president (1943–71). A descendant of freed American slaves, he filled various governmental posts before becoming president. His long tenure was marked by economic progress and social reforms, including granting to women and native Liberians the right to vote.

Tudor Dynasty of English rulers (reigned 1485–1603). The family was of Welsh origins. Its rise to power began with Owen Tudor (d. 1461), who fought in the service of Henry V, wed Henry's widow (Catherine of Valois), and supported his Lancastrian stepson, Henry VI, in the Wars of the Roses (q.v.). Owen Tudor's grandson (Henry Tudor) became Henry VII after the Lancastrian victory at Bosworth Field (1485) and thus founded the Tudor dynasty. The subsequent Tudor reign saw the rise of England as a naval power, creation of the Church of England, and increased powers of the monarchy. The Tudor sovereigns were:

Henry VII	1485–1509
Henry VIII	1509–47
Edward VI	1547–53
Mary	1553–58
Elizabeth I	1558–1603

Tu Fu 712–770. Chinese poet. Sometimes considered the greatest of all Chinese poets, he wrote pessimistic lyrics attacking court luxury and deploring hardships of the poor.

Tuileries Palace, Storming of the Assault on the French royal palace in Paris (Aug. 10, 1792) during the French Revolution. The attack led to a massacre of the Swiss guards. French king Louis XVI was suspended from all authority by the Legislative Assembly.

Tully See Cicero, Marcus Tullius

Tulunid dynasty See Egypt (868)

T'ung Chih 1856–75. Chinese emperor (1862–75) of the Ch'ing dynasty. Most of his reign was spent under the regency of his mother, Tz'ŭ-Hsi. It was a period in which relations with the West were expanded, the Taiping Rebellion was suppressed, and the imperial treasury was restored. T'ung Chih died two years after taking full control of the government.

Tunis Capital (pop. 1,000,000) of Tunisia. Located near ancient Carthage, it was founded in Carthaginian times and rose to prominence under the Muslims (7th cent. AD). It became the capital of Tunisia (9th cent.) and was a commercial center (13th–16th cents.) The Ottoman Turks controlled it from the 16th cent. to the 19th, when the French took control. It was the scene of heavy fighting (1942–43) in WW II.

Tunisia Republic located in northwestern Africa. Capital is Tunis. Once part of Carthage (6th cent. BC), it was conquered (2d cent. BC) by the Romans, then was taken by the Vandals (5th cent. AD), Byzantines (6th cent.), and the Muslims (7th cent.). It thrived under Muslim influence and fell (late 16th cent.) to the Ottoman Turks. Under the rule of Ottoman governors, or beys, Tunisia gained virtual independence within the Ottoman Empire, and became a center for piracy in the 18th and early 19th cents. A French expedition to Tunisia led to establishment (1881) of a French protectorate. During WW II, Tunisia was occupied by German and Italian forces and was the site (1943) of fierce fighting between Allied and Axis armies. Tunisia became independent in 1956. H. Bourguiba became its first prime minister and first president (1957–), when Tunisia became a republic. Bourguiba followed a policy of modernization and agrarian reform and supported a negotiated end to the Middle East crisis between Israel and the Arab nations. During the 1970s his rule was marked by political unrest and by conflict (1980) with Libya.

Tupac Amaru 1742?–81. Peruvian Indian revolutionary. Taking the name of an ancestral Inca leader, he led Peruvian Indians in a revolt (1780–81) to improve their lot. He was captured and executed.

Tupper, Sir Charles 1821–1915. Canadian statesman. As premier of Nova Scotia (1864–67), he helped bring that province into the Dominion. He was instrumental in building the Canadian Pacific Railway and was briefly the federal prime minister (1896).

Turckheim, Battle of French victory (Jan. 5, 1675) over the Austrians in the second Dutch War. French marshal H. Turenne led his forces on a winter march across the Vosges, surprised and routed the Austrians under Count Montecuccoli in the Alsace region. France recovered Alsace by this one battle.

Turenne, Henri de la Tour d'Auvergne, vicomte de 1611–75. Great French military leader. Turenne was created a marshal for his brilliant service in the Thirty Years' War. Though he sided unsuccessfully with Louis II de Bourbon, Prince de Condé in the Fronde of the Parlement (q.v.), Turenne rejoined the government and defeated the Condé in the Fronde of the Princes (q.v.). He also conducted notable campaigns in the Dutch War (1672–78). He was killed in battle.

Turgenev, Ivan Sergeyevich 1818–83. Russian novelist. Turgenev chronicled the plight of the serfs in A Sportsman's Sketches and the conflict with the new, emancipated, nihilistic generation of Russian intelligentsia in Fathers and Sons.

Turgot, Anne Robert Jacques 1727–81. French economist and statesman. A Physiocrat (q.v.), he was controller of finance (1774–76) and attempted by drastic reforms to restore the royal treasury. He was opposed by Queen Marie Antoinette, however, and his ouster continued the financial crisis that contributed to the outbreak of the French Revolution.

Turkestan See Turkistan

Turkey ⟨Republic of Turkey⟩ Republic located in southwestern Asia. Its capital is Ankara. The modern state of Turkey was created by the Treaty of Sèvres (1920), which formally dismantled the Ottoman Empire after WW I. A republic was established (1923) by the Nationalists led by Mustafa Kemal (Kemal Atatürk). Atatürk, as the country's first president, embarked on a program of democratization and industrialization that profoundly changed Turkish life and institutions. For history of the region prior to 1920, see Ottoman Empire. Key dates in the history of Turkey include:

1920 Nationalist party, under Mustafa Kemal (later known as Kemal Atatürk), established national government at Ankara (Apr.), in defiance of both the victorious Allied powers and the Turkish Sultan Muhammad VI.

1920 Treaty of Sèvres (Aug. 10) between Allies and Turkish sultan; dismembered the Ottoman Empire and established successor state (Turkey) in northern Anatolia; treaty opposed by Nationalists.

1921 Atatürk and Nationalists entered into treaty of friendship with Soviet Union; continued to resist foreign encroachment in Turkey.

1921–22 Greco-Turkish War fought with Greece after Greek invasion of Anatolia; Atatürk drove the Greeks from Anatolia.

1923 Republican People's party founded by Atatürk; sole Turkish party until 1950.

1922 Turkish sultan deposed (Nov. 1) by Nationalist government; his brother assumed the caliphate, but the sultanate ceased to exist.

1923 Turkish republic proclaimed (Oct. 29); new constitution instituted and Atatürk made first president; government abolished caliphate (1924) and eliminated state support for Islam.

1923 Treaty of Lausanne negotiated with Allies; established borders of modern Turkey, except for contested territory of Alexandretta; Turkey agreed to demilitarization of Dardanelles strait.

1923–38 Atatürk served as president; led successful program of Westernization and industrialization of Turkey; introduced democratic reforms but held great personal power.

1932 Turkey admitted to League of Nations.

1934 Turkey entered Balkan Entente with Greece, Yugoslavia, and Romania.

1936 Montreux Convention signed; military control of the Dardanelles returned to Turkey.

1938–50 Ismet Inönü served as president, following the death of Atatürk; maintained policy of neutrality through most of WW II.

1939 Territory of Alexandretta ceded to Turkey by France.

1945 Turkey declared war (Feb. 23) on Germany and Japan at end of WW II.

1945 Russia renounced friendship treaty with Turkey (Mar.); demanded cession of Kars and Ardelan (in eastern Turkey) and joint military control of Dardanelles; relations between the two countries broken following Turkish refusal.

1945 Turkey became (June 26) a founding member of the UN.

1947 US granted (Mar. 24) military and economic aid to Turkey under Truman Doctrine.

1950 Democratic party victorious in national elections (May 22); Celal Bayar succeeded Inönü as president; Adnan Menderes made prime minister.

1952 Turkey entered NATO.

1960 Increasing economic problems and rising unrest in the 1950s led to passage of increasingly repressive laws; antigovernment demonstrations (Apr.) broke out and a military coup led by Gen. Cemal Gürsel overthrew government (May); Bayar, Menderes and others arrested; Menderes subsequently executed.

1961 New constitution formulated; Gürsel elected president (Oct.); Ismet Inönü made prime minister.

1962 Unsuccessful attempt (Feb.) by military officers to overthrow government.

1965–71 Süleyman Demirel served as prime minister; unable to solve country's growing problems.

1966 Cevdet Sunay became president following death of Cemal Gürsel.

1974 Bülent Ecevit in office as prime minister.

1974 Turkish forces invaded Cyprus (July 20–22) to protect Turkish Cypriots; invasion came after Cypriot leader Archbishop Makarios was ousted by a pro-Greek military coup.

1975 Süleyman Demirel returned to office as prime minister.

1978 Martial law declared (Dec.) in 13 provinces to counter unrest by Muslim sects.

1980 Military coup (Sept. 11) overthrew elected government in wake of growing unrest over economic problems; Gen. Kenan Evren in power; constitution suspended and assembly dissolved.

1981 Government dissolved political parties.

Turkistan ⟨Turkestan⟩ Central Asian region between China, Siberia, and the Caspian Sea. Home of predominantly Turkic peoples, and once dominated by the Mongols, much of it was conquered by the Russians in the 19th cent. It is divided today between the USSR (Western Turkistan) and China (Eastern Turkistan).

Turkmanchay, Treaty of Treaty (Feb. 22, 1828), between Russia and Persia, ending war with Persia (1826–28). Persia had to cede much of Persian Armenia to Russia and grant the latter extensive commercial and extraterritorial rights.

Turks Branch of the Central Asian Turkic people that migrated to the Middle East and Asia Minor between the 11th and the 13th cents. The first wave of Turkish migration was the Seljuks (q.v.), who by 1092 controlled Iran, Mesopotamia, Syria, and Palestine. Beginning from a base in the Seljuk sultanate of Rum, the Osmanli Turks began from the 13th cent. to build what became the Ottoman Empire. This later became the basis of modern Turkey.

Turner, Frederick Jackson 1861–1932. American historian. He virtually founded a school of American historical thought with his theory concerning the effect of the Western frontier on American society and government.

Turner, Joseph Mallord William 1775–1851. British artist. Considered the foremost English landscape and seascape painter, Turner was a Romantic whose works anticipated the impressionists.

Turner, Nat 1800–31. American slave leader. Believing he was called by God to emancipate America's black slaves, he led a rebellion by 60 slaves during Aug., 1831, that terrorized rural Virginia and cost the lives of 51 whites. Turner was captured and executed soon after the revolt broke out, but his revolt gave rise to repressive laws for controlling slaves.

Turpin, Richard 1706–39. English robber whose career as a horse thief and highwayman was much romanticized.

Tuscany Italian province and historic region located in central Italy. It is centered on what was once the ancient Etruscan kingdom of Etruria and was a center of Italian culture in medieval Renaissance times. Florence and Pisa are among its notable cities.

Tutankhamen ⟨Tutenkhamon⟩ *d. c*1352 BC. Egyptian pharaoh (*c*1361–52). He restored the traditional god Amon to prominence after the religious revolution of Ikhnaton. His world-famous tomb was discovered in 1922.

Tutenkhamon See Tutankhamen

Twain, Mark ⟨pseud. of Clemens, Samuel Langhorne⟩ 1835–1910. Noted American author who wrote the classics The Adventures of Tom Sawyer and The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn.

Tweed, William Marcy 1823–78. American politician and New York City "boss." Gaining control of Democratic party patronage, Tweed and his associates (Tweed Ring) made fortunes through their manipulation of city expenditures.

Tweed Ring Conspiracy of politicians, led by W. Tweed, who defrauded New York City of up to $30 million between 1856 and 1872. They controlled city and even some state offices through the Democratic party's Tammany (q.v.) machine. In 1871 they were exposed by The New York Times and a reform slate was elected to replace them.

Twelve Conclusions See Lollardry

Twelve Tables See Rome (450 BC)

Twelve Tribes of Israel In the Bible, the Hebrew tribes that settled in the Promised Land after the Exodus. The tribes were named after Jacob's offspring. Ten were named after his sons, Reuben, Simeon, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, Gad, Asher, Dan, Naphtali, and Benjamin. Two were named after his grandsons Ephraim and Manasseh. (See also Lost Tribes of Israel.)

Twenty-one Demands List of demands presented to China by Japan (Jan., 1915) and backed by threat of invasion. China submitted May 25. The 21 demands included access to China's harbors and islands, control of mineral deposits, the right to colonize Manchuria and Mongolia, and the territorial exclusion of other world powers. China refused, however, to allow Japan to regulate its military, financial, and trade affairs, as was also demanded.

26th of July Movement Rebel movement organized by F. Castro that overthrew (Jan. 1, 1959) the dictatorship of F. Batista during the Cuban Revolution (q.v.). It began with Castro's abortive attack (July 26, 1953) with 150 rebels on the Santiago army barracks. Imprisoned after the raid (1953–55), Castro organized a new rebel force in Mexico. He landed in southwestern Cuba (Dec. 2, 1956) with 82 men and was quickly put to flight by government troops. However, he and 11 others managed to establish a base in the Sierra Maestra mountains. With E. Guevara, Castro mounted a guerrilla campaign against Batista that was increasingly successful in the following years. Rebel gains and the withdrawal of US aid to Cuba (1958) finally forced Batista to flee Cuba in 1959.

Two Sicilies, Kingdom of the Name of the kingdoms of Sicily and Naples, which included all of southern Italy below the Papal States and which were variously ruled separately and jointly from the 11th to 19th cents. The Kingdom of Two Sicilies was founded by the Normans, who conquered Sicily and the southern Italian Peninsula (Kingdom of Naples) from the Byzantines, Muslims, and Lombards. The territory passed to the Hohenstaufen Holy Roman emperors (12th cent.). Under them southern Italy became a prosperous commercial center from which Greek and Arab culture spread to Europe. The French nobleman Charles of Anjou conquered Sicily and the Kingdom of Naples (1266) after the Hohenstaufen line died out, but he was driven out of Sicily (1282) after the Revolt of the Sicilian Vespers (q.v.). The Spanish House of Aragon then took control of Sicily (1302), while the Kingdom of Naples remained in the hands of the French Angevin line. A long series of wars between Sicily and Naples ensued, with the Spanish Aragonese finally winning both kingdoms in 1442.

Spanish rule was broken by the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14) and the brief rule of the Austrian Hapsburgs. By 1735, however, the Spanish Bourbons were again in firm control of both Sicily and Naples. Napoleon gained Italy at the end of the 18th cent. Spanish rule was restored in 1815, and from 1816 the Kingdoms of Sicily and Naples were ruled jointly as the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. The spread of liberalism and nationalism in the post-Napoleonic period gave rise to revolts by the Carbonari (q.v.) and the movement for unification of Italy. The Kingdom of the Two Sicilies was finally conquered (1860) by the Italian nationalist, G. Garibaldi, and was joined with northern states to form the Kingdom of Italy (1861).

Tyche Greek goddess of chance. She was identified with the Roman Fortuna, and was believed to insure prosperity and good fortune.

Tydings-McDuffie Act US legislation (Mar. 4, 1934) that created a Commonwealth of the Philippines. The Commonwealth (effective July 4, 1936) was to last for ten years. The US continued to control Philippine defense, foreign affairs, and monetary matters during that period. Philippine independence was granted in 1946.

Tyler, John 1790–1862. Tenth US president (1841–45); successor to W. Harrison. Tyler served as US congressman (1817–21), governor of Virginia (1825–27), and US senator (1827–36). A supporter of states' rights and a follower of the ideas of T. Jefferson, Tyler opposed Pres. A. Jackson. His refusal to help expunge a motion censuring Jackson prompted his resignation from the Senate (1836). Tyler was elected vice-president (1841) under W. Harrison and, after Harrison's death (Apr., 1841), Tyler became the first vice-president to succeed to the presidency. His opposition to reestablishment of a national bank led to Tyler's loss of Whig support and the resignation of his Cabinet, except for D. Webster, who remained to negotiate the Webster-Ashburton Treaty (q.v.) of 1842. Tyler's term of office was also marked by the end of the second Seminole War (1835–43) and by the annexation of Texas (1845). Chosen by a Democratic faction as presidential candidate (1844), Tyler withdrew from the race in favor of J. Polk. In Feb., 1861, Tyler presided over the Washington Peace Conference, an unsuccessful attempt to avoid the Civil War. When the war came, he served in the provisional Confederate Congress.

Tyler, Moses Coit 1835–1900. American literary historian noted for his A History of American Literature 1607–1765 and A Literary History of the American Revolution

Tyler, Wat d. 1381. English rebel leader. He led the Peasants' Revolt (q.v.) in 1381.

Tylor, Sir Edward Burnett 1832–1917. British anthropologist. Often considered the founder of cultural anthropology, Tylor was noted for his theory of cultural evolution.

Tyndale, William ⟨Tindal, ~⟩ ⟨Tindale, ~⟩ d. 1536. Pursued by authorities of the English church, he translated the New Testament into English and published (1525) his vernacular edition at Worms. The edition was denounced and Tyndale was captured and burned at the stake some years later. His translation eventually provided the basis for the King James Bible.

Tyndareus In Greek legend, a legendary king of Sparta and husband of Leda (q.v.). He relinquished rule of Sparta to Menelaus after the death of his own sons.

Typhoid Mary ⟨Mallon, Mary⟩ d. 1938. Notorious "carrier" of typhoid fever. She worked as a cook in New York and caused numerous typhoid outbreaks in places where she worked before she was finally arrested (1915).

Tyr See Tiw

tyrant In Greek history, a ruler who usurped or acquired power by illegal means. The term was originally not connected with oppressive rule. Tyrants appeared especially during the 7th through 5th cents. BC and often favored the populace against the aristocrats. Instances of their misrule after the 5th cent. gradually gave the term its modern meaning.

Tyrconnel, Richard Talbot, duke and earl of 1630–91. Irish Jacobite leader. Appointed lord deputy of Ireland (1687) by James II, Tyrconnel attempted to continue ruling Ireland after James was deposed (1688) in the Glorious Revolution. He was defeated at the Battle of the Boyne (q.v.) and died shortly thereafter.

Tyre Ancient port city on the Mediterranean Sea and located in what is now Lebanon. It was capital of Phoenicia (11th–6th cent. BC) and a famed commercial center for centuries. It was conquered by Alexander the Great (332 BC), by the Romans (64 BC), and by the Muslims (7th cent. AD). It was destroyed when the Muslims retook it from the Crusaders in 1291.

Tyre, William of See William of Tyre

Tz'ŭ Hsi ⟨Tzu Hsi⟩ 1834–1908. Dowager empress of China (1861–1908) and regent for most of that period. Originally a concubine, she came to power by bearing the emperor's only son, T'ung Chih. As regent for him and his successors, she steadfastly resisted reforms and played a role in the Boxer Rebellion (q.v.).

u

Uccello, Paolo *c*1396–1475. Florentine painter, noted for his pioneering use of perspective and foreshortening in his works.

Uesugi family Japanese clan. Founded during the Kamakura shogunate, it rose (15th cent.) to great power in Japan. It challenged (early 17th cent.) the Tokugawa clan for control in Japan but was defeated. It continued to rule in northern Honshu until the fall of the Tokugawa shogunate (1868).

Uffizi Palace in Florence, Italy. Built in the 16th cent., it is now the site of the Uffizi Gallery, one of the greatest art museums in the world.

Uganda ⟨Republic of Uganda⟩ Independent state located in east-central Africa. Its capital is Kampala. Governed by Britain until 1962, it was under the rule of the notorious dictator Idi Amin during the 1970s. Key dates in Ugandan history include:

AD 1100 Bantu-speaking peoples arrived.

FROM C1500 Buganda kingdom established; chief among many kingdoms and tribes occupying present Uganda.

1844 Uganda first visited by Arab traders.

1862 British explorer John Speke was first European in region.

1870s British and French missionaries arrived.

1880s Natives slaughtered Christians.

1890 Anglo-German agreement placed Uganda in British sphere of influence.

1894 British protectorate established by British East Africa Company.

1894–1962 British colonial occupation; firm control of countryside established by 1918; small-scale agriculture by native Ugandans developed; Asian immigrants (from Indian subcontinent) controlled commerce.

1962 Uganda became independent (Oct. 9); Mutesa II, king of Buganda, chosen president; Dr. Milton Obote, prime minister.

1963 Uganda became a republic; Mutesa elected president.

1967 New constitution instituted by Prime Minister Obote; abolished traditional kingdoms, notably the still-powerful Buganda, and gave central government more power.

1970 Banks and import-export businesses nationalized as Obote tried to adopt leftist course.

1971 Idi Amin ousted Obote (Jan. 25); established dictatorship.

1971–79 Amin ruled Uganda; his reign marked by charges of ruthless brutality, including reported deaths of some 300,000 of his opponents.

1972 Amin expelled all Asians with British passports and all Israeli advisers.

1975 Amin nationalized all lands without compensation.

1976 Entebbe Raid; Israelis rescued passengers of airliner hijacked by Palestinians; airliner had been held in Uganda with Amin's apparent approval.

1976 Hostilities with Kenya ended by formal agreement.

1978 Border clashes with Tanzania.

1978 Tanzania invaded Uganda (Nov.).

1979 Kampala taken (Apr. 11); Ugandan insurgents aided by Tanzanians deposed Amin, who fled to Libya; provisional government set up.

1980 Military commission under Paulo Muwanga took power.

1980 First elections in years; constitutional government restored; Obote became president.

1981 Antigovernment insurgents reported making frequent terrorist attacks.

Ugolino della Gherardesca d. 1289. Italian Guelph nobleman who gained control of Pisa (1284). Political intrigues led to his downfall and to a charge of treason. His brutal death by starvation is related by Dante in the Inferno.

Uighurs See Uigurs

Uigurs ⟨Uighurs⟩ Turkic people of central Asia. They several times achieved political prominence, and an Uigur empire flourished in the 8th and 9th cents. Today they are a Sunni Muslim people living mostly in Chinese Singkiang.

Ukraine ⟨Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic⟩ Constituent republic of the European USSR (pop. 49,757,000). Its capital is Kiev, the leading city in Russia before the invasion of the Golden Horde (13th cent.). In the 14th cent., Lithuania and Poland expanded into the Ukraine, but the harsh Polish rule caused many to flee. The Russians won the eastern Ukraine from Poland (1667) and by 1793 controlled the entire region. The movement for Ukrainian independence flourished through the 19th cent., and after the Russian Revolution the Ukraine declared its independence (1918). The Soviets recognized it by the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk (1918) but later overran it and made it a constituent republic (1923).

Uladislaus II *c*1456–1516. King of Bohemia (1471–1516) and Hungary (1490–1516). A weak and vacillating ruler, he was notable for signing a treaty (1515) with the Hapsburgs, which, after his son Louis II died without issue, added Bohemia and Hungary to the Hapsburg domains.

Ulbricht, Walter 1893–1973. East German Communist leader. A founder of the German Communist party, he became deputy premier of the German Democratic Republic in 1949 and was secretary general of the Social Unity party (1950–71). He ordered the building of the Berlin Wall (1961).

Ulm, Battle of French victory (Oct. 20, 1805) over the Austrians at Ulm, now in West Germany, during the War of the Third Coalition. By brilliant maneuvering, Napoleon surrounded the Austrian army led by Baron Karl Mack von Leiberich (1752–1828) and compelled Mack to surrender some 20,000 troops.

Ulm, Treaty of Truce (1647) between the French and Swedish forces and Bavaria toward the end of the Thirty Years' War.

Ulpian ⟨Ulpianus, Domitius⟩ d. AD 228. Roman jurist, Praetorian prefect (AD 222–228) under Alexander Severus. His voluminous writings were a major source for the Digest of Justinian I.

Ulpianus, Domitius See Ulpian

Ulster See Northern Ireland

ultraismo Post–WW I poetic movement in Spain and Spanish America. Influenced by the French symbolist and Parnassian movements, it sought to develop poetry beyond its traditional limits.

ultramontanism In the history of the Roman Catholic Church, the belief that papal jurisdiction is supreme. It opposed Gallicanism and was upheld by the Vatican Council (1869–70), which promulgated the doctrine of papal infallibility.

Ultraroyalists ⟨Ultras⟩ French reactionary royalist faction that advocated increased monarchial powers following the restoration of King Louis XVIII.

Ultras See Ultraroyalists

Ulysses See Odysseus

Umar ⟨Omar⟩ 581–644. Second Muslim caliph (634–644). A father-in-law of the prophet Muhammad, he at first opposed Islam, but was converted by 618. He chose Abu Bakr as the first caliph to succeed to the authority of the prophet (632), and succeeded him (634). During his caliphate, Arab armies advanced into Syria, Egypt, and Persia. He established the administration and taxation of the subsequent empire.

Umayyad ⟨Omayyad⟩ Muslim dynasty which ruled (661–750) the empire of the caliphate (q.v.). The Umayyads held power after the first four orthodox caliphs, so-called because the legitimacy of their reigns is unquestioned. The Umayyads, however, took power after Muawiya, founder of the dynasty, deposed the caliph Hasan in 651. The accession of the Umayyads thus gave rise to the split between the majority Sunni Muslim sect (which accepts the Umayyad legitimacy) and the Shi'ite sect (which denies it). The Umayyads established their capital at Damascus, continued the expansion of the empire of the caliphate (Spain was conquered), established effective systems of communication, and instituted administrative reforms. Internal unrest mounted toward the end of their reign and a successful revolt (750) brought the Abbasid dynasty (q.v.) to power. Following the revolt, members of the Umayyad family were massacred. Only one is known to have escaped (Abd ar-Rahman I) and he established the Umayyad dynasty in Spain (in power 755–1031). Umayyad caliphs of the caliphate empire are:

Muawiya	661–680
Yazid	680–683
Muawiya II	683
Marwan I	683–685
Abd al-Malik	685–705
Walid I	705–715
Sulayman	715–717
Umar II	717–720
Yazid II	720–724
Hisham	724–743
Walid II	743
Yazid III	743–744
Ibrahim	744
Marwan II	744–750

Umberto I See Humbert I

Umberto II See Humbert II

Umbria Mountainous region of central Italy. Conquered by the Romans (3d cent. BC), it was part of the Papal States until incorporated into the kingdom of Italy (1860).

UN See United Nations

Uncas *c*1588–*c*1683. American Indian chief. A Pequot, he broke away and formed the Mohegan

Indian tribe. He fought with the British in the Pequot War (q.v.) and waged successful war against the Narragansett Indians.

Underground Railroad Secret system, organized (c1838) by abolitionists, Quakers, ex-slaves, and others, to aid southern slaves to escape to freedom in the North or Canada in the years before the American Civil War.

unicorn Mythical creature resembling a horse with a single horn projecting from its forehead. The hunting of the unicorn was the subject of numerous works of art, especially tapestries of the Middle Ages.

uniformitarianism See Lyell, Sir Charles

Uniformity, Act of See Church of England (1549)

Union, Acts of See Acts of Union

union, labor See labor unions

Union League Clubs Organizations formed in the northern US states during the Civil War to inspire support for the Union. During Reconstruction the clubs raised support for Republican candidates among newly enfranchised blacks and inadvertantly aided the rise of the Ku Klux Klan.

Union of See also names inverted, as in Utrecht, Union of

Union of October 17 See Octobrists

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (formerly Russia, also called Soviet Union*)* Country located in Europe and Asia, extending from Eastern Europe across the entire northern part of the Asian continent to the Pacific Ocean. Its capital is Moscow. Traditionally, the history of the Russian state begins in the 9th cent. with Rurik, a Scandinavian invader who established a petty kingdom at Novgorod in northwestern Russia. It was not until the 14th cent., however, that the Duchy of Moscow began its rise as the nucleus of the modern Russian state. The grand dukes of Moscow steadily added to their domains and in the mid-16th cent. Ivan IV the Terrible became the first to call himself "czar" of Russia. Thereafter Russian expansionism pushed the borders eastward into Siberia and southward into Persian and Ottoman domains. By the 19th cent. Russia had become a major European power (especially after repulsing Napoleon's invasion) and had acquired vast territories. But oppressive conditions of the poor and failure to enact reforms led to the spread of radicalism and the Revolution of 1917. The revolution brought the Bolsheviks to power and thereby created the first Communist state. In the years before WW II, Communists sought to consolidate their hold over Russia (renamed Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in 1922) and to rebuild the economy. The Soviets emerged from WW II as a leading world power (with the US). In subsequent years the Soviets engaged the Western powers in the Cold War, a protracted political rivalry. By the early 1970s the USSR and the US began a rapprochement (détente) aimed at easing Cold War tensions through international cooperation. The program was largely successful in the 1970s and cultural and economic relations between Communist and non-Communist nations were significantly improved. However, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan (1979) and policies toward Poland in the early 1980s soured US-USSR relations, delivering a setback to the policy of détente. Key events in the history of Russia and the Soviet Union include:

9TH CENT. AD Northwestern Russia occupied by the Eastern Slavs, who had long occupied the region; Khazars, a Turkic people, controlled region to the south (from 7th cent. AD).

9TH–10TH CENT. Varangians, Scandinavian conquerors, invaded Russia.

862 Rurik, a Varangian, established control over Novgorod (near Baltic, in western Russia); founded Rurik dynasty of later Russian rulers.

879–912 Oleg reigned; expanded Varangian domains to include Kiev; moved capital to Kiev (c882); united Eastern Slavs in region and laid foundation of Kievan Russia, which eventually included vast domains lying between the Baltic and Black Seas.

911 Oleg concluded commercial treaty with Byzantine Empire; subsequent contact with Byzantines greatly influenced development of Russian culture.

945–972 Sviatoslav reigned as duke of Kiev; greatly expanded domains and brought duchy to height of its power.

980–1015 Vladimir I reigned; made Christianity (Orthodox Eastern) the state religion (c988).

1019–54 Yaroslav reigned; duchy of Kiev divided among his heirs at his death; control of duchy subsequently rotated among heirs; led to period of wars and collapse of Kievan Russia.

12TH CENT. Autonomous principalities emerged from collapse of Kievan Russia; Novgorod, Vladimir, Suzdal, Smolensk, and (later) Moscow emerged as powerful cities loosely united by common heritage.

c1147 Moscow founded.

1223 First Mongol invasion; armies of Genghis Khan defeated forces of Russian principalities at battle of Kalka River; Mongols withdrew immediately afterward.

1237–40 Second Mongol invasion, led by Batu Khan; Russian cities in south and west (Kiev among them) taken and destroyed; Novgorod in the north bypassed.

1240 Novgorod attacked by invading Swedes; Alexander Nevsky became Russian national hero by defeating Swedes at the Battle of the Neva.

1240s Poland and Duchy of Lithuania expanded into Russian domains, taking control of western parts (what became Belorussia and the Ukraine).

1242 Novgorod attacked by Teutonic Knights; Alexander Nevsky defeated them at the Battle of Lake Peipus.

1242 Empire of the Golden Horde established; dominated Russia from the south until 1480.

1246–63 Alexander Nevski ruled as grand duke of Novgorod; accepted suzerainty of Golden Horde as protection against further invasions.

1300s Rise of Moscow, in the principality of Vladimir, as a powerful city, due partly to its position as a trade center.

1328–41 Ivan I reigned as duke of Moscow; became collector of Russian tribute paid to Mongols and thus gained great wealth; helped make Moscow the residence of the metropolitan see of the Russian church.

1359–89 Demetrius reigned as duke of Moscow; began revolt against Mongol overlords; ceased practice of dividing domains among heirs.

1380 Battle of Kulikovo; Demetrius defeated the Mongols.

1389–1425 Vasily reigned as grand duke of Moscow; struggle for succession broke out on his death.

1392–98 Tamerlane invaded the Empire of the Golden Horde and reached the borders of the Russian principalities; Golden Horde declined steadily thereafter.

1453 Fall of Constantinople to the Ottoman Turks; Moscow proclaimed successor to Roman tradition ("Third Rome") and new center of the Orthodox church.

1462–1505 Ivan III the Great reigned; adopted autocratic style of rule; greatly expanded domains and began drive to unite domains of Eastern Slavs; exploited divisions between Tatar khans.

1472 Ivan married Sophia, niece of the last Byzantine emperor; she is said to have convinced him to adopt Byzantine ways of government.

1474 Rostov captured.

1478 Ivan conquered Novgorod and added its extensive domains to the Grand Duchy of Moscow.

1485 Tver, a powerful rival, was conquered by Ivan.

1497 First code of laws promulgated by Ivan.

1497–1502 Period of civil war over right of succession; Vasily III won.

1505–33 Vasily III reigned as grand duke; greatly strengthened the monarchy; continued expansion, adding Pskov (1510), Smolensk (1514), and Ryazan (1521); emergence of bureaucracy.

1533–84 Ivan IV the Terrible reigned; both cruel and mentally infirm, he became the first to call himself "czar" (1547); greatly expanded Russian domains and consolidated powers of the monarchy at the expense of the boyars (nobles); instituted reign of terror (from c1565).

1552–56 Tatar khanates of Kazan and Astrakhan conquered (1552, 1556), beginning eastward expansion of Russia.

1558–82 Livonian War fought; Russia ultimately forced to renounce claims to Livonia.

1565 Ivan set up oprichniki (crown lands) under his direct control.

1566 First national assembly called by Ivan.

1581–82 Conquest of Siberia begun for the czar by the Cossack chief Yermak; eastward expansion at the expense of the Mongols continued.

1584–98 Fedor I reigned as czar; the last of the Rurik dynasty; incompetent and unable to rule; government run by Boris Godunov, his brother-in-law.

1589 Orthodox patriarchate of Moscow given formal status.

1591 Death of Dmitri, heir to the throne; Godunov believed to have arranged murder to secure his succession.

1597 Serfdom established by law.

1598–1605 Boris Godunov reigned as czar; chosen by nobles as czar; successfully concluded brief war with Sweden; popular distrust of him spread, particularly after famine followed crop failures of 1601–02; Time of Troubles began just before his death.

1604–13 Time of Troubles; period of social and political chaos began with revolt led by pretender, Dmitri, who claimed to be heir to Rurik line; Dmitri, made czar (1605) after Godunov's death, was murdered by boyars; ensuing period marked by appearance of new pretenders, peasant revolts, and invasions by Sweden and Poland (Moscow occupied 1610–12); Poles driven out and Michael Romanov elected czar (1613).

1613–45 Michael Romanov reigned; founded Romanov line; on his accession country was in ruins, with many areas still held by Swedes, Poles, and rebels; order gradually restored and agreements concluded with Sweden (1617) and Poland (1618); government bureaucracy, which had survived Time of Troubles, aided recovery.

1613–1917 Romanov dynasty ruled Russia.

1645–76 Alexis reigned as czar; reign marked by promulgation of new law code (1648) that continued serfdom and by acquisition of the eastern Ukraine.

1652–66 Nikon reigned as patriarch of the Russian Orthodox church; introduced reforms to bring Russian rites into conformity with Byzantine rite and thus provoked schism and persecution of Old Believers, who favored Russian tradition; attempts to assert supremacy of church over czar led to his downfall.

1654 Uprising by Zaporozhe Cossacks in Ukraine against Polish rule; Cossacks sought Russian aid.

1654–67 Thirteen Years' War with Poland; Russians, taking advantage of Cossack uprising, gained eastern Ukraine and Kiev.

1656–61 War with Sweden; Russia failed to gain control of Baltic territories.

1670–71 Revolt by Don Cossacks, led by S. Razin; crushed by Czar Alexis' forces.

1676–82 Fedor III reigned; ended system of military and civil appointments on basis of social rank; began wars against Ottoman Turks.

1676–81 Russo-Turkish War; Russians gained most of Turkish Ukraine.

1682–1725 Peter I the Great reigned; made Russia a European power; his reign was dominated by his efforts to modernize and Westernize Russia and by nearly continuous wars; instituted administrative and fiscal reforms; built Russia's first navy.

1689 Peter overthrew the regency of his half-sister Sophia; assumed direct rule.

1695–96 Russo-Turkish War; Peter I captured Azov.

1700–21 Northern War with Sweden; Russia broke Swedish power in the Baltic and gained Livonia, Estonia, Ingermanland, and part of Karelia; victory made Russia a European power.

1703 St. Petersburg, built by Czar Peter, established as Russian capital.

1710–11 Russo-Turkish War; Ottomans attacked Russia, regaining Azov.

1712 Russian Orthodox church put under state control; patriarchate of Moscow abolished.

1721 Czar Peter formally adopted title Emperor of Russia.

1722 Table of ranks issued by Czar Peter; established rigid hierarchy for all government posts; advanced by merit and seniority.

1725–27 Catherine I reigned; the mistress and second wife (m. 1712) of Peter I; A. Menshikov dominated the government.

1727–30 Peter II reigned; manipulated by powerful nobles; A. Menshikov arrested.

1728 Capital moved to Moscow.

1730–40 Anna Ivanovna reigned as czarina; Prussians gained influential posts.

1733–35 Russia allied with Austria against Poland in War of the Polish Succession; gained accession of Frederick Augustus II as Augustus III.

1736–39 Russo-Turkish War; Russians retook Azov.

1740–41 Ivan VI reigned; succeeded as an infant; overthrown in palace conspiracy.

1741–62 Elizabeth reigned as czarina; pursued anti-German policy and allied Russia against Prussia.

1741–43 Russia victorious in Russo-Swedish War; gained Finnish territory.

1756–63 Seven Years' War; Russia allied with other European powers against Prussia for most of war; Elizabeth's death ended Russian participation and saved Prussia from defeat.

1762 Peter III reigned; quickly alienated nobles and the church; his decision to withdraw (1762) from Seven Years' War helped bring about his overthrow.

1762–96 Catherine II the Great; participated in overthrow of her husband; increased Russian power and prestige in Europe; warred against the Ottoman Turks; instituted administrative reforms and patronized the arts.

1764 Stanislaus II installed as Polish king by Catherine; as Catherine's lover he was dominated by her and Russian interests in Poland.

1766 Instruction of Catherine the Great issued.

1768–74 Russo-Turkish War; Russians victorious in Crimea and greatly increased influence in region; Russia established as protector of Christians in Ottoman domains.

1772 First Partition of Poland; Russia gained Polish territories east of the Dnieper and Dvina rivers.

1773–74 Peasant revolt against serfdom led by Pugachev; new, harsher laws on serfdom promulgated after the rebellion was crushed.

1785 Charter to the Nobility issued by Catherine; guaranteed nobles rights and prerogatives.

1787–92 Russo-Turkish War; Russia generally successful in war caused by its annexation of Crimea (1783).

1792–1802 French Revolutionary Wars in Europe.

1793 Second Partition of Poland; Russia gained Lithuanian Belorussia, western Ukraine, and other parts of Poland.

1795 Third Partition of Poland; Russia shared (with Austria and Prussia) remaining central core of Polish kingdom; kingdom ceased to exist.

1796–1801 Paul I reigned; reversed many of Catherine's policies and attempted to limit nobles' powers; his inconsistent foreign policy included brief participation in coalition against France (1798) and alliance against Britain after; assassinated.

1801–25 Alexander I reigned; a liberal ruler early in his reign, he supported the conservative movement of the post-Napoleonic period.

1801 Russia annexed Georgia; Russian possession confirmed (1813) after victory in war with Persia (1804–13).

1803–15 Napoleonic Wars; Alexander, defeated by Napoleon in fighting in Europe, submitted to Napoleon by the Treaty of Tilsit (1807); Napoleon later broke the alliance and launched his ill-fated invasion of Russia (1812); Alexander's rout of the invasion force led to Napoleon's downfall and made Russia a leading European power.

1806–12 Russo-Turkish War; Russia acquired Bessarabia.

1808–09 Russo-Swedish War; Russia gained Finland from Sweden.

1825 Decembrist Conspiracy, abortive revolt (Dec.) by nobles and officers, against accession of Nicholas I.

1825–55 Nicholas I reigned; instituted autocratic, oppressive rule, though he did attempt to improve the lot of the serfs; beginning of spread of revolutionary sentiment; continued Russia's expansionist wars against the Ottoman Empire; Russian literature flourished.

1826–28 War with Persia; Russia gained part of Armenia.

1826 Convention of Akkerman (Oct. 7); Russians forced agreement on Ottoman Empire; Russia to oversee autonomy of Moldavia and Wallachia.

1828–29 Russo-Turkish War; begun in support of Greek independence; Russia penetrated deep into Balkans; Treaty of Adrianople greatly increased Russian influence in region.

1830–31 Polish uprising against Russian rule; revolt crushed and Poland lost measure of autonomy gained in 1815.

1853–56 Crimean War; with the Ottoman Empire on the verge of collapse at the hands of the Russians, other European powers joined Ottomans against Russia; Russia was defeated and in subsequent years the fate of the Ottoman Empire became a major concern of European powers.

1855–81 Alexander II reigned; instituted liberal reforms but failed to prevent rise of populist Narodniki movement; continued Russian expansion in central Asia and Far East; fostered industrialization.

1860 Treaty of Peking; China ceded Ussuri region (north of Amur River) to Russia; these Far Eastern territories included future site of Vladivostok.

1860 Vladivostok founded; became important Russian naval base in Far East.

1861 Edict of Emancipation freeing the serfs issued by Czar Alexander II; one of various reforms issued by czar.

1863 Polish rebellion suppressed with great brutality.

1864 Zemstvos, local councils, established.

1867 Russia sold Alaska to US.

1871–81 Russia occupied Chinese territory in Ili Crisis.

1872 Three Emperors' League formed with Prussia and Austria-Hungary.

1876 Narodniki, radical populist movement, formed secret Land and Liberty society.

1877–78 Russo-Turkish War; victorious Russians advanced to just outside Constantinople.

1878 Congress of Berlin; European powers forced Russia to accept greatly reduced concessions from Ottoman Empire following war of 1877–78.

1881 Alexander II assassinated by "People's Will," a wing of the Land and Liberty society.

1881–94 Alexander III reigned; instituted reactionary and repressive regime; adopted policies of russification of national minorities by force and persecution of Jews and other religious minority groups; fostered industrialization; miserable conditions of workers helped spread revolutionary movement.

1881 Wave of pogroms conducted against Jews following assassination of Alexander II; continued until Russian Revolution.

1893 Triple Entente formed with France and Britain.

1894–1917 Nicholas II reigned as last czar of Russia; an ineffective ruler, he was unable to stem the rising tide of revolution and was overthrown.

1897 N. Lenin arrested for his radical activities; exiled to Siberia (1897–1900); left Russia for Switzerland (1900).

1898 Russian Social Democratic Labor party, a Marxist group, founded by radicals at Minsk; group was soon after broken up by police and forced to meet in exile in Europe.

1901 Socialist Revolutionary party formed; a leading revolutionary group, it was an ideological outgrowth of the populist Narodniki movement; group conducted terrorist campaign.

1903 Russian Social Democratic Labor party split into two factions, Mensheviks and radical Bolsheviks; Lenin led the Bolsheviks.

1904–05 Russo-Japanese War; Russia suffered a humiliating defeat in the Far East at the hands of the Japanese; helped to further discredit government.

1904 Zemstvo congress (Nov.) convened at St. Petersburg; called for end to government repression and creation of a Duma (representative assembly).

1905 Trans-Siberian railroad completed; fostered colonization of Siberia.

1905 On Bloody Sunday, czar's troops fired (Jan. 22) on protesters in St. Petersburg; Russian Revolution of 1905 began.

1905 Concessions granted (Mar.) by czar, amid wave of strikes and unrest; included creation of advisory assembly and religious toleration; concessions failed to halt spreading unrest.

1905 Treaty of Portsmouth signed, ending Russo-Japanese War (Sept. 5).

1905 Nationwide strike (Oct. 20–30) in protest against czarist government; threat of political collapse forced czar to make concessions.

1905 First soviet (council) formed (Oct. 26) at St. Petersburg.

1905 Czar Nicholas issued October Manifesto (Oct. 30) to liberalize government; constitution granted, civil liberties guaranteed, and Duma (with legislative powers) to be created; Count Witte became first prime minister (dismissed May 1906).

1905 Cadet (Constitutional Democratic party) and Octobrist parties formed as liberal moderates split; Cadet party favored progressive government.

1905 Government arrested (Dec. 16) members of the St. Petersburg soviet.

1905 Uprising by Moscow workers (Dec.) suppressed after hard fighting in the streets.

1906–11 Black Hundreds active against revolutionists in the provinces; carried out pogroms against the Jews.

1906 Fundamental Laws issued (May 6) by czar; limited powers of the Duma and asserted supremacy of czar over Duma.

1906 Duma convened (May 10); dominated by Cadet party; openly critical of czarist government, it was dissolved (July 21).

1906 P. Stolypin named prime minister (June); sought to quench revolutionary ferment by instituting meaningful reforms; supported constitutional government.

1906 Stolypin land reforms instituted (Nov. 22) to distribute land to peasants; ended system of mirs (peasants' communal land-holding system).

1907 New Duma in session (Mar.–June); radical membership increased; dissolved (June 16).

1907–12 New Duma in session; election law favoring conservative elements gave majority of seats to conservatives; order restored in Russia as Prime Minister Stolypin and Duma pressed reform program and suppressed radical unrest.

1907 Anglo-Russian Convention settled disputes with Britain over Persia, Afghanistan, and Tibet; relations strengthened.

1911–12 Scandal over influence of Rasputin in royal court spread; rumors of Rasputin's corrupt and immoral behavior included purported intimate relationship with Czarina Alexandra.

1911 Prime Minister Stolypin assassinated (Sept. 14) by revolutionary.

1912–13 First and Second Balkan Wars; Ottomans driven out of Eastern Europe while tensions between Russia and Austria, over respective interests in region, increased.

1912–17 New Duma in session; conservatives again in the majority.

1914 Assassination of Austrian Archduke Francis Ferdinand by Serbian nationalist (June 28); tensions in Eastern Europe mounted as Germany backed Austria against Serbia; Russia backed its ally, Serbia, and was drawn into WW I.

1914–18 WW I; Russian losses in the war further weakened, then brought down, the czarist government.

1915 Progressive Bloc, alliance of liberals and conservatives in Duma formed (Aug.) to urge reforms; members appointed Provisional Government after fall of imperial government in 1917.

1915 Czar Nicholas took command (Sept.) of the Russian army following the disastrous defeat of Russian forces in the Galicia campaign (May); Czarina Alexandra (dominated by Rasputin) left in charge of government.

1916 Russian government near collapse; mismanagement of government by Alexandra and Rasputin combined with severe economic dislocations, including food shortages, caused by ongoing war.

1916 Rasputin assassinated (Dec. 30) by angry noblemen; Rasputin's death failed to halt collapse of government.

1917 Russian Revolution of 1917; wave of strikes and unrest (Mar.) resulted in creation of Provisional Government and abdication of Czar Nicholas (Mar. 15); Bolsheviks, led by Lenin, seized power (Nov.) and thus established the first Communist state.

1917 Bolshevik government formed (Nov. 7) under Lenin's leadership; L. Trotsky and J. Stalin held high posts; reorganization of Russia along Communist lines begun; banks nationalized and large estates broken up.

1917 Program of establishing worker control of factories begun (Nov. 28); government-controlled unions formed.

1917 Cheka organized to combat counterrevolutionaries (Dec.).

1917 Bolshevik government concluded armistice with Germany (Dec. 5); fighting resumed after Germans demanded Russia cede Poland and other territories in western Russia.

1917 Don Cossacks rebelled against Bolshevik government (Dec. 9); their uprising merged with the other counterrevolutionary warfare of the Russian Civil War.

1917 Church property seized (Dec. 17); suppression of the church begun.

1917 Japanese forces landed at Vladivostok (Dec. 30) and began operations in Far East.

1918–22 Russian Civil War; counterrevolutionary groups, the White Russian Army and foreign troops attempted to topple the Communists; Red Army, organized by L. Trotsky, was ultimately victorious and regained control over nearly all Russian territory.

1918 Constituent Assembly, elected after Bolshevik takeover, convened (Jan. 18); Social Revolutionary party members held clear majority over Bolsheviks; assembly forced to disband by Red Army troops.

1918 Moscow established as Bolshevik capital (Jan.).

1918 Land nationalized (Feb. 19).

1918 Ukraine declared independence from Russia (Jan. 28); one of several border regions to declare independence in the months after the Bolshevik takeover; included Moldavia, Lithuania, and Transcaucasia.

1918 Third International organized (Mar. 2); avowed aim was to spark Communist revolutions in countries throughout the world.

1918 Treaty of Brest-Litovsk concluded (Mar. 3); in the face of a continuing German advance the Bolsheviks agreed to give up Poland, Ukraine, and other territories on the western frontier.

1918 Communist party adopted as name of the Bolshevik party (Mar.).

1918–19 British, later joined by French and US troops, occupied Murmansk and Archangel in extreme northwest Russia; fighting with Bolsheviks began; WW I armistice largely ended US and British support and troops were withdrawn (Oct.).

1918 Constitution adopted (July 10); government run by Politburo and Central Committee of the Communist party (sole legal party); hierarchy of local, provincial, and national (All-Russian) soviets established.

1918 Nicholas and royal family executed by Communists (July 16).

1918 Red Terror instituted by Communists after unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Lenin (Aug. 30); widespread killings of all opponents began; murders of prisoners and enemy suspects by both Reds and Whites numbered perhaps 100,000; some two million of bourgeois class fled Russia.

1918 WW I ended by armistice between Germans and Allies (Nov. 11).

1919–20 White Russian offensives launched against Red Army in western Russia; from Siberia, by Adm. Alexander Kolchak; from the Don region in the south, led by Gen. Anton Denikin; from the Baltic region in the extreme west, led by Gen. Nikolay Yudenich; poor communications and other factors led to the failure of the drives against the Red Army in 1920.

1919 Karakhan Manifesto issued (July 15); offered to renounce Czarist interests in China; contributed to subsequent establishment of Chinese Communist party.

1920 Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithunania recognized as independent.

1920 Russo-Polish War fought (Apr.–Oct.); war sparked by Polish advances into the Ukraine.

1920 White Army offensive (June–Nov.) from the Crimea, led by Baron Ferdinand von Wrangel; Red Army drove Wrangel's army into Turkey.

1920 Independence of Finland recognized (Oct. 14).

1920 Food levy instituted (Dec. 14) to help supply the Red Army; peasants, required to give government all surplus food, resisted; peasant uprisings and strikes by workers broke out as Russian economy collapsed (1920–21).

1921 Kronstadt Rebellion was a Russian revolt of sailors at the Kronstadt Naval Base (Feb.–Mar.); capped period of growing unrest at collapse of Russian economy and shortages of food; forced Lenin to institute his New Economic Policy (NEP).

1921 Lenin introduced (Mar. 17) his New Economic Policy to revive the economy; faced with economic collapse and internal unrest, Communist party abandoned "war communism"; food levy abolished and replaced by "tax" which took only part of their surplus; limited capitalism reestablished, though state controlled all major industries; full economic recovery achieved by mid-1920s.

1922 Last elements of White Russian Army driven out of eastern Siberia (into Manchuria) following withdrawal of Japanese from Vladivostok (Oct. 25); Russian Civil War ended.

1922 Treaty of Rapallo signed (Apr. 16) with Germany; this pact for economic cooperation provided Communist Russia with first diplomatic recognition.

1922 Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) organized (Dec. 30), then including Russia, White Russia, the Ukraine, and Transcaucasia.

1924 Lenin died (Jan. 21).

1924–53 J. Stalin in power; after the first years of vying for power, Stalin gradually increased his power as dictator; established his "personality cult" in the 1930s, which gave him absolute power; promoted industrialization at the expense of Marxist ideals and developed Stalinist line of "socialism in one country."

1924–26 Stalin's struggle for power; opposed chiefly by Trotsky, who wanted to end the New Economic Policy and return to revolutionary economic policies; Trotsky and his allies expelled from party posts (1926), signaling Stalin's victory.

1927 15th All-Union Congress (Dec.); confirmed Stalin's supremacy by condemning opposition to the party line; Trotsky's faction was expelled from the party.

1928 Five-Year Plan instituted by Stalin (Oct. 1) to replace New Economic Policy; stimulated development of heavy industry and reinstituted collectivization of agriculture.

1929 Trotsky exiled from USSR (Jan.).

1930s Collectivization of nearly all farmland completed despite widespread opposition by farmers; some five million peasant farms were forcibly confiscated and owners sent to labor camps in Siberia.

1932–33 Widespread famine resulted partly from government's farm policy.

1933 Communist party purged of about a million members.

1934 USSR joined League of Nations; actively participated in disarmament conferences.

1934 Sergei Kirov, close associate of Stalin, assassinated (Dec. 1); touched off a new round of purges, which reached height in 1936–38.

1935 Alliances with France and Czechoslovakia exacerbated worsening relations with Nazi Germany.

1936–38 Purge Trials; rivals of Stalin eliminated in series of phony trials; led to Stalin's consolidation of power in Russia.

1936–39 Soviets supported loyalists against German-backed nationalists in the Spanish Civil War; relations with Germany worsened.

1936 Anti-Comintern Pact concluded (Nov. 25) between Nazi Germany and Japan; USSR, threatened now in the East, moved closer to alliance with antifascist democracies.

1936 New constitution adopted; supposedly democratic, it maintained the absolute rule of the Communist party; Presidium and two-chamber Supreme Soviet to run government.

1938 Fighting between Soviet and Japanese forces along the Siberian border; Soviets supported the Chinese in the Sino-Japanese War.

1938 German invasion of Czechoslovakia; Soviets unsuccessfully sought firm action from European allies against Germany.

1939 V. Molotov suddenly made commissar of foreign affairs (May); Soviets resisted firm alliance with European allies against Germany.

1939 Non-Aggression Pact signed (Aug. 23) with Nazi Germany, marking sudden reversal in Soviet policy.

1939–45 WW II: Soviets, initially allied with Nazis, joined the Allies when Germany invaded (1941); repulsed German invasion at great cost and participated in "liberation" of Europe; Soviets emerged from the war as a superpower and leading opponent of the US-dominated Western powers.

1939–40 Russo-Finnish War; Russians victorious after hard fighting.

1943 Russian Orthodox church formally restored by Stalin.

1945 Consolidation of Soviet position begun; by war's end Soviets had occupied Eastern Europe and much of Manchuria and Korea; relations with Allies quickly broke down, especially over joint occupation policies in Germany; Soviets moved to gain control over occupied territories; Allies meanwhile resisted expansion of Soviet influence and the Cold War began.

1945 USSR became a charter member of the UN.

1946 Five-year plan announced by Stalin; aimed at economic recovery from war and rebuilding of Soviet industry; industry was quickly restored but agricultural output remained low.

1946–47 Famine resulted from drought in grain-producing regions.

1947 Communists' unsuccessful attempt to seize power in Greece prompted formulation of Truman Doctrine by US; directed at halting Communist expansionism, the doctrine hardened postwar divisions between the East and West.

1947 USSR and satellites refused to take aid under Marshall Plan.

1947 Cominform organized to coordinate Communist parties in various nations.

1948 Break in relations with Yugoslavia; Yugoslav leader Tito established his independent Communist policies.

1948–49 Berlin Blockade and Airlift; friction with former Allies led Soviets to establish unsuccessful blockade of West Berlin.

1949 Soviets exploded their first atomic bomb.

1949 Soviets recognized newly established People's Republic of China.

1950–53 Korean War; relations with US worsened as result of the war.

1952 Stalin issued his "Last Testament," calling for completion of drive against economic problems (Oct.).

1953 Doctors' Plot revealed (Jan. 13) by Stalin.

1953 Soviets exploded their first hydrogen bomb.

1953 Stalin died (Mar. 5); policy of "collective leadership" to replace Stalin's rule was initially adopted by government, 1953 Georgi Malenkov succeeded as premier; N. Khrushchev, as first secretary of the Central Committee, became major rival for power; Malenkov sought increased consumer-goods production and more intensive use of existing agricultural lands; Khrushchev countered by calling for vast expansion of agricultural lands and further development of heavy industry.

1955 Malenkov fell from power (Feb.); replaced by Nikolai Bulganin as premier.

1955 Warsaw Pact formed with satellite nations; created to counter Western NATO alliance.

1955 Soviets adopted policy of giving aid to and forming alliances with non-Communist nations.

1956 Twentieth Party Congress; Khrushchev made his "Secret Speech" (Feb.) denouncing Stalin; destalinization, an easing of restrictions, gave rise to unrest in Poland and Hungary.

1956 Cominform dissolved.

1956 Hungarian Revolution (Oct.–Nov.); Soviet troops used to crush the liberal revolt.

1957 Sweeping reorganization to decentralize economic ministries of government; sparked coalition (Molotov, Malenkov, and Lazar Kaganovich) against Khrushchev; Khrushchev defeated the coalition in a brief power struggle and won their expulsion from party posts.

1957 Soviet satellite Sputnik launched (Oct. 4) as first man-made earth satellite; space race with US began.

1958–64 Khrushchev in office (Jan.) as premier, replacing Bulganin; pursued continuing policy of reform and ongoing Cold War with West; his attempts to stimulate agricultural production failed and the USSR was forced to import grain in 1963.

1959 Premier Khrushchev made historic visit to US (Sept.); marked height of "thaw" in Cold War.

1960 Sino-Soviet split began; Maoist China opposed Soviet "revisionism" of Marxist doctrine; broke with Soviets over implementation of revolutionary Communism; Soviet aid to China ended.

1960–75 Vietnam War; Soviets provided supplies to North Vietnam, but no troops; gained considerable political prestige for Communist movement by the victory over US forces in Vietnam.

1960 U-2 Incident; Soviets downed (May 1) US spy plane over Soviet territory; new round of Cold War tensions began.

1961 Soviets established relations with Cuba following F. Castro's break with US; provided important Communist outpost in Western hemisphere.

1961 Soviet cosmonaut Y. Gagarin became first man to travel in space (Apr. 12).

1961 Berlin Wall erected (Aug.) by East Germans to halt politically embarrassing flow of refugees to West Germany.

1962 Cuban Missile Crisis (Oct.); Soviets forced to withdraw missiles from Cuba after US president J. Kennedy threatened nuclear war.

1963 "Hot-line" telecommunications link between US and USSR installed.

1963 Nuclear Test Ban Treaty signed.

1964 Khrushchev ousted from power (Oct. 14–15); fall caused by failure of his agricultural programs (notably the "virgin lands" scheme), Soviet humiliation in the Cuban Missile Crisis, and the Sino-Soviet split.

1964–82 L. Brezhnev in office as first secretary of the Central Committee; Brezhnev clearly the most powerful member of new government, though "collective leadership" was stressed at first; more orderly course of reform adopted and overt anti-Stalin propaganda halted; by early 1970s, policy of détente with West brought what appeared to be a halt in the Cold War.

1964–80 A. Kosygin in office as premier, replacing Khrushchev in that post.

1965–77 Nikolai Podgorny in office as chairman of the Presidium (president).

1965 Government reestablished 28 economic ministries abolished in Khrushchev era; instituted system whereby individual firms made production decisions on basis of prices and profits; marked radical departure from former close government supervision, though government still controlled basic course of economy; industrial output greatly improved by 1970s.

1968 Five-day, 41-hour work week established for Soviet workers.

1968 Prague Spring; Soviets invaded Czechoslovakia to halt liberalization of government there.

1968 Brezhnev Doctrine issued defending invasion of Czechoslovakia.

1969 Border warfare with Chinese; heavy fighting over Damansky Island in Ussuri River.

1970 Official condemnation of agricultural program approved by Central Committee; increased grain and meat production called for.

1971 Soviets supported India against US-backed Pakistan in war over Bangladesh.

1972 US President R. Nixon visited China (Feb.); marked beginning of US alliance with China, which exploited embarrassing ideological rift in the Communist world.

1972 US President Nixon in USSR on first visit by US president (May 22–June 1); SALT I agreements signed.

1972 Relations with Egypt soured; Soviet personnel asked to leave country in major setback in Soviet Mideast policy.

1972 SALT II talks with US began.

1972 Soviets forced to buy grain from the West following bad harvests.

1973 Shake-up of the Central Committee; Brezhnev's allies, A. Gromyko, Andrei Grechko, and Yuri Andropov installed on the committee.

1973 USSR threatened to intervene in 1973 Arab-Israeli War on behalf of Egyptians; US responded by calling worldwide nuclear alert.

1973 Brezhnev visited US; held talks with US president Nixon.

1974 Trade agreement with US concluded; Soviet emigration policies eased as part of the deal.

1974 Nobel Prize-winning author, A. Solzhenitsyn, forced to leave USSR as a dissident.

1975 New Five-Year Plan announced; called for significant increase in agricultural investment.

1977 New constitution adopted (Oct. 4); Communist party specifically named as ruling party of the Soviet Union.

1977 L. Brezhnev replaced N. Podgorny as chairman of the Presidium (president); first Soviet leader to act as both first secretary of Central Committee and chairman of Presidium.

1979 USSR and US signed SALT II agreement on arms limitation (June); US Senate refused to ratify agreement.

1979 Invasion (Dec.) of Afghanistan by Soviet troops ordered to back puppet regime there; Soviets unable to put an end to guerrilla resistance by Afghans.

1980 US imposed embargo on grain shipments to USSR in response to invasion of Afghanistan (Jan. 4); marked continued deterioration of détente.

1980 US called boycott of Olympic Games to be held at Moscow; boycott only partly successful.

1980–81 Relations with US deteriorated over Solidarity crisis in Poland; USSR backed away from threats of invading Poland.

1980 A. Kosygin resigned (Oct. 23) as premier because of ill health; Nikolay A. Tikhonov succeeded him.

1980 Kosygin died (Dec. 18).

1981 US lifted embargo on Soviet grain purchases (Apr.).

1981 Agreement signed (Nov. 20) for construction of natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe, US attempted to block pipeline construction for Soviet handling of the Polish crisis.

1982 Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) began with US.

1982 Brezhnev died (Nov. 10); Yuri Andropov, former head of the KGB, succeeded Brezhnev as party leader.

unions See labor unions

Unitarianism Christian denomination. Unitarians deny the doctrine of the Trinity, maintaining that God is one divine, indivisible force. The Unitarian concept has existed under various names since the earliest days of Christianity, but organized Unitarianism had its roots in the Protestant Reformation. Unitarians suffered numerous persecutions, particularly in Poland. They were among America's earliest Colonial settlers and were especially populous in New England and Pennsylvania. The American Unitarian Association was formally established in 1825.

Unitarios One of the two political groups that sought control of Argentina in the early 19th cent. Favoring strong central government, they opposed the Federalists, who favored greater autonomy in the provinces. The Unitarios came to power during the presidency of B. Rivadavia (1826–27).

Unitas Fratrum See Moravian Church

United Arab Emirates Federation of Arab emirates located on the eastern Arabian Peninsula. The capital is Abu Dhabi. Its members include

Abu Dhabi, Ajman, Dubai, Fujairah, Ras al-Khaimah, Sharjah, and Umm al-Qaiwain. They were formerly called the Trucial States, Trucial Oman, or the Trucial Coast because of the truces signed by each emirate with Great Britain in 1820. In 1892, the states accepted a British protectorate. In the wake of the British withdrawal from the region, the emirates formed the federation in 1971. Ras al-Khaimah chose not to join the federation but reversed its decision in 1972. Oil production among the emirates has made the United Arab Emirates extremely wealthy on a per capita basis. In recent years it has become a major international banking center.

United Arab Republic Name designating the political union between Egypt and Syria (1958–61). Yemen also joined the union (1958). Intended to be the nucleus of the United Arab States, it broke up after a coup d'état in Syria and Syria's subsequent withdrawal (1961).

United Empire Loyalists Term applied to those Colonial settlers who supported the British during the American Revolution, especially those who migrated to Canada.

United Front Union formed twice between the Chinese Communist party and the Kuomintang (1924–26, 1936–45). The second alliance was established to achieve a common front against the Japanese invaders.

United Irishmen ⟨United Irish Society⟩ Irish political organization founded (1791) by Wolfe Tone and others to secure legislative reforms. Suppressed by the British, it became an underground movement and played a key role in the Irish rebellion of 1798.

United Irish Society See United Irishmen

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland Official name of Great Britain since 1921. The United Kingdom includes England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and several smaller islands. (See Great Britain)

United Malays National Organization Malayan political organization. Founded (1946) to oppose British plans for a Malayan union, it played a key role in establishing (Feb. 1, 1948) the Federation of Malaya and also in securing Malayan independence (Aug. 31, 1957).

United Methodist church ⟨United Methodists⟩ US Protestant denomination formed (1968) by the union of the Methodist and the Evangelical United Brethren churches.

United Nations ⟨UN⟩ International body formed during WW II by the nations allied against the Axis. The term was first used by Pres. F. Roosevelt, and the concept of a permanent body to deal with international problems posing a threat to world peace gained momentum with the Moscow Declaration (Oct. 30, 1943), the Dumbarton Oaks Conference (Aug.–Oct., 1944), and the Yalta Conference (Feb., 1945). A meeting of the Allied nations at the San Francisco Conference led to signing (June 26) and ratification (Oct. 24) of the United Nations Charter. The charter provided for several structures within the organization, the leading ones being the Secretariat, the Security Council, and the General Assembly.

All members of the UN are represented in the General Assembly, which makes decisions on political, budgetary, trusteeship, and administrative questions. The Security Council includes 15 members, 5 of which—the US, the People's Republic of China, Great Britain, France, and the USSR—are permanent members. The remaining 10 are elected to the council by the General Assembly. The Security Council deals with matters of international security, and in important decisions the affirmative votes of the permanent members are necessary. Hence, frequently UN action has been halted in crises by an effective veto by a member within the Security Council. The Secretariat deals largely with administrative matters involving the UN, but under Secretary General D. Hammarskjold, it gained in importance by adopting measures not specifically called for by the Security Council or General Assembly. From the 1950s, the membership of the UN has grown substantially to more than 150 members.

United Provinces Union of provinces in the Low Countries that had rebelled against Spanish rule (1579). It later became the modern state of The Netherlands (q.v.).

United Provinces of Central America See Central American Union

United States ⟨United States of America⟩ Country located in North America. Its capital is Washington, DC. Originally settled by British colonists (from early 17th cent.), the US achieved independence (18th cent.) by the American Revolution (q.v.) and subsequently established a highly successful democratic government under the Constitution. US history in the 19th cent. was marked by the American Civil War (q.v.), which threatened to destroy the Union; by westward expansion of US borders to the Pacific Coast; by rapid industrialization after the Civil War; and by the emergence of the US as a world power (late 19th cent.). The US joined the Allies toward the end of WW I and, though it refused to enter the League of Nations, subsequently played an increasingly important role in world affairs. Faced with the crippling Depression at home during the 1930s, the federal government enacted sweeping economic and social reforms that greatly increased its involvement in shaping American society (see New Deal). In WW II the US played a leading role in the defeat of the Axis Powers. The US emerged as the leading power in the West following WW II and from the late 1940s to about 1970 engaged in the Cold War (q.v.) with the USSR. During this period both the US and the USSR developed massive nuclear arsenals. US involvement in the Vietnam War during the 1960s and early 1970s seriously eroded US prestige and led to widespread internal unrest. The war, and costly social programs undertaken by the federal government during the 1960s, led to economic problems that lasted throughout the 1970s and into the 1980s. Key events in US history include:

c1000 Leif Ericson believed to have landed in North America.

1492 Columbus discovered America (Oct. 12); made first landing in the Bahamas.

1513 Spaniard Ponce de León arrived in Florida; searched for legendary fountain of youth.

1524 G. Verrazano explored east coast, discovered New York Bay for the French.

1529 Cabeza de Vaca explored American Southwest.

1540–42 F. Coronado explored Southwest; traveled north into what is now Kansas.

1542 J. Cabrillo discovered California coast.

1565 St. Augustine, Florida, first permanent settlement in America, established by Spanish.

1587 Lost Colony established on Roanoke Island, North Carolina; founded under charter granted to Sir Walter Raleigh; settlers mysteriously disappeared.

1607 Jamestown (Virginia) established (May 14) as first permanent English settlement in North America.

1607–08 Unsuccessful attempt to establish colony in Maine.

1609–10 H. Hudson explored the Hudson River and Hudson Bay for the Dutch East India Company.

1612 First tobacco cultivated in Virginia.

1614 Capt. J. Smith traveled north from Virginia and explored New England.

1614 Dutch built fort at what is now Albany, New York; explored southern New England coast.

1619 First Negro slaves arrived in Virginia.

1619 Virginia House of Burgesses established.

1620 Pilgrims landed in Massachusetts; established Plymouth Colony.

1622–69 Powhatan War in the South; Virginia and Maryland settlers defeated and killed off most of Powhatan tribe.

1624 Virginia made a royal colony.

1626 P. Minuit of the Dutch New Netherland Company bought Manhattan Island from Indians; established New Amsterdam (later New York City) and settlements in adjacent states.

1630 Massachusetts Bay Colony founded; theocratic government established by the Puritans; thousands of new settlers arrived from England in next decade.

1630s Colonization of Connecticut begun.

1634 Lord Baltimore (George Calvert) established Maryland Colony as haven for Catholics.

1636 Rhode Island settled by R. Williams.

1636–38 Pequot War in Connecticut; settlers decimated Pequot tribe.

1643 New England Confederation formed; federation of Massachusetts Bay, Plymouth, Connecticut, and New Haven colonies; first such federation in America.

1651–73 Navigation Acts passed by English Parliament; aimed at Dutch, they sought to control trade between England and the colonies.

1663 Royal grant for colonization of the Carolinas.

1664 New Netherland captured by the English, led by the Duke of York; New Amsterdam renamed New York.

1675–76 King Philip's War fought in New England between settlers and Indians.

1676 Bacon's Rebellion by settlers against colonial government.

1677–79 Culpepper's Rebellion; Carolina colonists rebelled against British taxes and regulations.

1682 R. La Salle claimed Mississippi Valley for France; named it Louisiana.

1682 W. Penn established the colony of Pennsylvania; Philadelphia founded.

1684 Massachusetts charter revoked; failure to respect authority of the crown among the charges made against colonists.

1686 Dominion of New England; New England colonies to be united under single colonial government; following Glorious Revolution in England (1688), colonies reverted to separate charter governments.

1689–97 King William's War fought; first of series of wars fought between English, French, and their respective Indian allies for control of colonies in North America.

1691 Plymouth Colony became part of Massachusetts Colony.

1692 Salem witch trials in Massachusetts.

1701 A. Cadillac founded Detroit.

1702–13 Queen Anne's War fought between English and French.

1729 Separate colonies of North and South Carolina established.

1733 Georgia established as the last of the original 13 colonies.

1733 Molasses Act, designed to force American colonists to import more expensive sugar and molasses produced by other British colonies.

1735 P. Zenger acquitted in libel suit; helped establish freedom of press in America.

1737 Walking Purchase, land swindle perpetrated by Pennsylvania officials against the Delaware Indians.

1743–48 King George's War; New England colonials successful in fighting against French in Canada.

1750 British passed Iron Act, which limited American iron industry.

1753 G. Washington sent into Ohio Valley to tell French to withdraw from region.

1754 Contingent of Virginia militia entered Ohio Valley; French forced G. Washington to surrender.

1754 Albany Convention (June 19); called by various colonies for defense against French; B. Franklin's plan for union of colonies rejected.

1754–63 French and Indian War; British gained control of French territory in North America.

1763–66 Pontiac's Rebellion in Great Lakes region; unsuccessful uprising of several Indian tribes led by Pontiac.

1764 Sugar Act passed by British Parliament to raise revenue.

1764–71 Regulator Movement by frontier settlers in western North Carolina; opposed corrupt colonial government.

1765 Stamp Act passed by British Parliament; led to establishment of Stamp Act Congress and Sons of Liberty.

1765 Quartering Act passed by British Parliament; caused great resentment in colonies; was allowed to lapse in 1770.

1765 Stamp Act Congress convened (Oct.) to protest British imposition of Stamp Act and other taxes; issued declaration of grievances.

1766 Stamp Act repealed; British Declaratory Act reasserted Parliament's legislative authority in colonies.

1767 Townshend Acts, four acts passed by the British Parliament to raise revenue and reassert its authority in the colonies; led to increased resistance.

1768 Liberty Affair (June 10); British used troops to quell rioting in Boston caused by Liberty Affair.

1770 Boston Massacre (Mar. 5); British troops, taunted by civilians, fired into a crowd, killing five.

1770 British repealed duties on a number of commodities; tax on tea remained.

1772 British revenue cutter Gaspee burned (June) by American colonials in Rhode Island.

1772–74 Committees of Correspondence set up for communications between colonies; figured in spread of independence sentiment for rebellion against British government.

1773 Tea Act passed by British Parliament (May 10).

1773 Boston Tea Party (Dec. 16); colonials dumped shipment of British tea into harbor.

1774 Intolerable Acts passed by Parliament to punish Boston for the Boston Tea Party; increased resentment among colonials and led to convening of First Continental Congress.

1774 Lord Dunmore's War between Virginia militia and Shawnees (Jan.–Oct.).

1774 Suffolk Resolves (Sept.), opposing the Intolerable Acts, passed in Massachusetts; subsequently endorsed by Continental Congress.

1774 First Continental Congress convened (Sept. 5) in Philadelphia.

1775 Virginia Convention (Mar.); P. Henry delivered "give me liberty" speech.

1775–83 American Revolution; colonials, at first fighting for recognition of grievances, soon adopted course for complete independence; under leadership of G. Washington secured defeat of British forces.

1776 Declaration of Independence (July 4) issued by colonials.

1777 Articles of Confederation adopted (Nov. 15); established loose federation of the 13 colonies; name United States of America adopted.

1781 Articles of Confederation in force, following their ratification (Mar. 1).

1783 Treaty of Paris, acknowledging US independence, signed with Britain (Sept. 3).

1786–87 Shays's Rebellion in Massachusetts.

1786 Annapolis Convention (Sept.); by this time weaknesses of government under Articles of Confederation had become apparent; discussion of problems at Annapolis led to convening of the Constitutional Convention.

1787 Northwest Ordinance passed (July) to provide for administration of US territories.

1787 Constitutional Convention (May–Sept.); drafted constitution creating strong federal government.

1787–88 Federalist Papers, series of essays written by A. Hamilton, J. Madison, and J. Hay supporting US Constitution.

1787 Constitution signed (Sept. 17); sent to states for ratification.

1788 Constitution of the United States went into effect (June 21) following ratification by ninth state (New Hampshire); established strong central government with a president and bicameral legislature.

1789 Congress convened for first time under US Constitution (Mar. 4).

1789–93 G. Washington elected first US president; inaugurated (Apr. 30), he guided the US through the crucial early years; attempted unsuccessfully to establish government free of partisan politics.

1789 Bill of Rights passed (Sept. 25) by Congress; guaranteed fundamental liberties.

1790 S. Slater built the first cotton textile factory in the US at Rhode Island.

1791 Bank of the United States created; part of A. Hamilton's aggressive fiscal program as secretary of the treasury.

1791 Vermont admitted as 14th state.

1791 Bill of Rights ratified (Dec. 15).

1792 Republican party, forerunner of the Democratic party, founded by T. Jefferson; opposed Federalist party, led by A. Hamilton and J. Adams.

1792 Kentucky admitted as 15th state.

1792 Tennessee admitted as 16th state.

1793 Washington reelected to second term.

1793 French diplomat E. Genêt asked to leave country after attempting to sway popular opinion in favor of revolutionary France against Britain; US passed Neutrality Act (1794).

1793 Cotton gin invented by E. Whitney.

1794 Whiskey Rebellion broke out; Pennsylvania settlers protest federal tax on whiskey.

1794 Jay's Treaty negotiated; forestalled war with Britain.

1795 Yazoo land claims, land-fraud scheme involving many members of Georgia legislature.

1796 Washington's Farewell Address (Sept. 18).

1797–1801 John Adams, Federalist leader, served as second US president; struggle with Jeffersonian Republicans.

1797 XYZ Affair, attempted bribing of American diplomats by French officials; led to undeclared naval war with France.

1798 Alien and Sedition Acts; notorious acts passed by Federalists and aimed at suppressing the Jeffersonian Republicans.

1798 Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions passed in opposition to Alien and Sedition Acts; hinged on doctrine of states' right to nullify federal law.

1799 Fries' Rebellion in Pennsylvania against federal tax.

1800 Treaty of 1800; ended US alliance with France.

1800 Washington, DC, became US capital, replacing Philadelphia.

1800 Election of 1800 ("Revolution of 1800"); Adams lost but tie between T. Jefferson and A. Burr threw the election into the House, which decided on Jefferson as president and Burr as vice-president.

1801–09 T. Jefferson served as 3d US president; sought economy in government and less interference in states.

1801–05 Tripolitan War against Barbary pirates.

1803 Ohio admitted as 17th state.

1803 Marbury vs Madison; Supreme Court established judicial review of Congressional legislation.

1803 Louisiana Purchase; US purchased territory from France and thereby doubled size of US.

1804 Vice-Pres. A. Burr killed political rival, A. Hamilton, (July) in duel.

1804–06 Lewis and Clark explored Louisiana territory.

1805 President Jefferson's attempt to have Supreme Court Justice S. Chase impeached failed; helped establish court's independence from political influence.

1807 R. Fulton launched (Aug.) first commercially successful steamboat, the Clermont.

1807 Former Vice-President A. Burr tried for treason; acquitted (Sept.).

1807 British ship Leopard stopped and searched American frigate Chesapeake, removing four crewmen; incident resulted from mutual attempts by Britain and Napoleon of France to blockade shipping; tensions between US and Britain increased.

1807 Embargo Act (Dec.); Jefferson attempted to retaliate against Britain and France for their restrictions, which were hurting US commerce.

1808 American Fur Company incorporated by J. J. Astor; influenced settlement of the Great Lakes region.

1809–17 Pres. James Madison in office.

1809 Embargo Act repealed after proving more harmful to US commerce than to France or Britain; replaced by Non-Intercourse Act.

1810 Macon's Bill No. 2; another attempt at countering French and British blockades.

1811 Battle of Tippecanoe (Nov. 7); W. Harrison victorious in fighting against the Indians in Indiana.

1812 Louisiana admitted as 18th state.

1812–14 War of 1812 fought with Britain.

1813–14 Creek War fought in Alabama and Georgia; Indians, allied with British during War of 1812, defeated by militiamen led by Gen. A. Jackson.

1816 Second Bank of the United States chartered.

1816 American Colonization Society formed to transport freed Negroes to colony in Liberia.

1816 Indiana admitted as 19th state.

1817–25 James Monroe in office as 5th president; his term referred to as "Era of Good Feeling" for relative lack of partisan political struggle.

1817 Rush-Bagot Convention signed with Britain; provided for disarmament of US-Canadian border.

1817–18 First Seminole War; Seminoles in Florida defeated and Spain forced to cede Florida.

1817 Mississippi admitted as 20th state.

1818 Convention of 1818 established western US-Canadian border at 49th parallel.

1818 Illinois admitted as 21st state.

1819 Transcontinental Treaty (Feb. 22) signed between Spain and US; Spain ceded Florida and the Oregon Country; US recognized Spanish sovereignty in Texas.

1819 In McCulloch vs Maryland, Supreme Court confirmed congressional powers.

1819 Alabama admitted as 22d state.

1820 Missouri Compromise; to maintain the balance between slaveholding and free states (11 each), Missouri to be admitted without restrictions as to slavery, remainder of Louisiana Purchase north of 30° 30′ to be free, and Maine to be admitted as free state; marked rise of North-South sectional conflict over slavery.

1820 Maine admitted as 23d state.

1821 Missouri admitted as 24th state.

1823 Monroe Doctrine articulated (Dec. 2) by Pres. Monroe to block attempts to restore colonial control in South America; warned against involvement by European powers in Americas.

1824 American System proposed by H. Clay for American self-sufficiency.

1824 Election of 1824; four-way race finally decided in House in favor of J.Q. Adams, though A. Jackson had won popular vote.

1825–29 J.Q. Adams served as 6th US president; embroiled in bitter feud with Jacksonian Democrats.

1826–34 Rise of the Anti-Masonic party.

1828 Tariff of Abominations, high tariff on imports, designed to protect developing US industries, raised protests, especially in the South; J. Calhoun advanced his theory of nullification.

1829–37 A. Jackson served as 7th US president; spoils system introduced during his administration; Jacksonian democracy ascendant; Jackson's Kitchen Cabinet derided by opposition.

1830 Mormon Church founded in New York.

1830 Indian Removal Act implemented by Pres. Jackson.

1830 Hayne-Webster debate; Sen. D. Webster refuted doctrine of nullification and defended nationalist view of the Union.

1831 Slave revolt, Southampton Insurrection, in Virginia; led by N. Turner.

1831 Eaton Affair; Washington, DC, society snubbed wife of Sec. of War J. Eaton; led to his resignation, despite Pres. Jackson's attempts to intervene.

1832 Tariff of 1832; improved on Tariff of Abominations but failed to quiet opposition in South.

1832–33 Nullification controversy; South Carolina attempted to nullify federal tariffs by state ordinance (1832); Pres. Jackson responded with a Force Bill (1833) to allow use of military to collect tariffs; Tariff of 1833, a compromise advanced by H. Clay, ended the controversy.

1833 Jackson, opposed to "monopolistic" practices of the Bank of United States, transferred federal funds to state banks ("pet banks").

1833 American Anti-Slavery Society founded by W. Garrison; marked rise of abolitionist movement in US.

1834 Whig party organized by H. Clay to oppose politics of A. Jackson.

1834 Indian Territory formally established; originally included lands west of the Mississippi, later reduced to part of present state of Oklahoma; Indians forcibly relocated (by Indian Removal Act of 1830) from east of Mississippi to Indian Territory.

1835 US public debt retired.

1835 Rise of Locofocos, short-lived faction of radical Jacksonian Democrats; advocated end to the national bank and other monopolies.

1835–42 Second Seminole War in Florida sparked by attempts to move Seminoles from their lands; Seminoles defeated and forced to move west.

1836 Texas war for independence; increased settlement of Texas by Americans led to movement to break away from Mexican rule; despite defeat at the famous Battle of the Alamo (Mar. 6), rebels gained independence and formed a republic (1836).

1836 Arkansas became the 25th state.

1836 Specie Circular issued (July) by Pres. Jackson; ordered payment in hard currency for all public lands; designed to halt speculative boom in western real estate; helped precipitate Panic of 1837.

1836–44 Gag rules adopted by US House of Representatives to block antislavery petitions submitted by abolitionists; repealed in 1844.

1837 Michigan became the 26th state.

1837–41 M. Van Buren in office as 8th president; a Democrat, he attempted to continue former Pres. Jackson's policies.

1837 Panic of 1837; financial collapse began in market for western lands and soon spread to commodities markets.

1837 S. Morse successfully demonstrated his telegraph.

1837 Caroline Affair, incident between US and Canada.

1838–39 Aroostook War, US-Canadian border incident.

c1838 Underground Railroad formed by abolitionists to help runaway slaves escape to Canada or free states.

1840 Independent Treasury System adopted; won support of Pres. Van Buren after Panic of 1837; had been opposed by Whigs seeking new Bank of the United States.

1840–48 Liberty party formed; first US political party created to promote abolition of slavery.

1841 W. Harrison served (Mar.–Apr.) as 9th US president; first president to die in office (Apr. 4).

1841–45 J. Tyler in office as 10th president, following Harrison's death; first vice-president to succeed to the presidency; opposed Whig effort to establish national bank; his cabinet (except D. Webster) resigned.

1841 Independent Treasury System repealed by Whigs.

1842 Webster-Ashburton Treaty settled Northeast Boundary Dispute.

1845 Florida became the 27th state.

1845–49 J. Polk in office as 11th president; worked vigorously for his programs and supported American expansionism.

1845–48 Mexican War; US, in conflict over territories of the Southwest, invaded and defeated Mexico; Mexico ceded Southwest and California to US by Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

1845–59 Rise of the Know-Nothing party.

1845 Texas became the 28th state.

1846 Oregon Treaty negotiated between US and England; settled US-Canadian boundary dispute.

1846 Wilmot Proviso (Aug.); measure (never passed) to prohibit slavery in territories acquired in the Mexican War; aroused bitter opposition in South and contributed to growing North-South sectionalism.

1846 Walker Tariff passed; reduced US tariffs.

1846 Independent Treasury System reestablished.

1846 Iowa admitted as 29th state.

1848 California gold rush began; brought great influx of settlers to California.

1848 Wisconsin admitted as 30th state.

1848 Convention at Seneca Falls, New York, marked beginning of modern US feminist movement.

1848 Proslavery Alabama Platform advanced in opposition to the Wilmot Proviso.

1848 Free-Soil party formed by antislavery Whigs and Liberty party members; their presidential candidate, M. Van Buren, split the New York vote (1848) and put Z. Taylor in office.

1849–50 Z. Taylor (Whig) served as 12th president; died in office (July 9).

1850–53 M. Fillmore (Whig) in office as 13th president, succeeding to the presidency after Taylor's death.

1850 Clayton-Bulwer Treaty; US and Britain agreed to refrain from attempts to dominate Central America; provided for joint control of any canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

1850 California admitted as the 31st state.

1850 Compromise of 1850 (Sept. 9–20); ended heated controversy over extension of slavery into new states, raised by impending admission of California as a free state; established doctrine of popular sovereignty, which led to further crises over slavery issue.

1850 Fugitive Slave Act passed; Pres. Fillmore aroused storm of protest from Northern abolitionists by trying to enforce the act, in keeping with the Compromise of 1850.

1853–57 F. Pierce (Democrat) in office as 14th president; pursued expansionist foreign policy; failed to head off growing crisis over slavery.

1853 Gadsden Purchase; US bought strip of territory from Mexico along US-Mexican border.

1854 Commodore M. Perry forced Japan to end isolation and sign Treaty of Kanagawa (Mar.).

1854 Kansas-Nebraska Act (May 30); organized separate territories of Kansas and Nebraska; repealed Missouri Compromise of 1820; substituted doctrine of popular sovereignty; pro- and antislavery elements began to settle region.

1854 Republican party formed (July) at Jackson, Michigan; party formed to oppose slavery.

1854–59 Bleeding Kansas; bitter struggle between pro- and antislavery settlers in Kansas which contributed to the growing national crisis over the slavery issue.

1854 Ostend Manifesto (Oct. 18); called for US to acquire Cuba by purchase or by force; aroused public outcry in North.

1855–58 Third Seminole War; removal of Seminole Indians to the West completed.

1856 Pottawatomie Massacre (May); five pro-slavery settlers murdered by J. Brown and followers in Bleeding Kansas.

1857–61 J. Buchanan (Democrat) in office as 15th president; though opposed to slavery, he sought compromise; his policies failed to prevent the secession of Southern states (1860–61), however.

1857 Dred Scott case; Supreme Court declared Missouri Compromise of 1820 unconstitutional.

1857 Panic of 1857; failure of railroad bonds among causes; many banks failed and widespread unemployment resulted.

1858 Minnesota admitted as the 32d state.

1858 Lincoln-Douglas debates (Aug.–Oct.); seven debates between A. Lincoln and S. Douglas during campaign for Senate; Lincoln won national reputation for opposing slavery as immoral; Douglas reelected to Senate.

1859 Oregon admitted as 33d state.

1859 Harper's Ferry Raid (Oct. 16–18), abortive insurrection led by J. Brown; contributed to outbreak of Civil War.

1859 First American oil well drilled at Titusville, Pennsylvania.

1860s Wars against Indians in the West; various tribes (Sioux, Cheyenne, Apache, Navaho) attempted to resist advance of white settlers and were gradually subdued in bloody wars; Indians resettled on reservations.

1860–61 Pony Express in operation.

1860 Election of 1860; Democrats split over slavery issue, Douglas ran as candidate of Northern Democrats, John Breckinridge as candidate of Southern Democrats; A. Lincoln, Republican candidate, ran as a moderate, opposed to extension of slavery; Lincoln's victory in the election sparked the secessionist movement in the South.

1860 Ordinance of Secession adopted by South Carolina (Dec. 20); other southern states soon followed (from Jan., 1861); President Buchanan refused to use force to prevent secession.

1861 Union supply ship fired on (Jan. 9) while attempting to relieve Ft. Sumter in Charleston, South Carolina, harbor.

1861 Kansas admitted as the 34th state.

1861 Confederate States of America created (Feb. 4) at meeting of seven (four seceded later) secessionist states; provisional government under J. Davis formed; ordered seizure of all federal property within seceded states.

1861 Washington Conference (Feb.); presided over by J. Tyler, it failed to resolve North-South differences and end secessionist movement.

1861 Crittenden Compromise; unsuccessful, last attempt at preventing civil war; defeated in Senate (Mar.).

1861–65 A. Lincoln served as 16th president; he was inaugurated (Mar. 4) and war broke out the following month; Lincoln succeeded ultimately in preserving the Union and in bringing an end to slavery in the US.

1861 Morrill Tariff enacted (Mar.); first of a series of Civil War–period bills that gradually increased tariffs; established high protective tariff structure.

1861 Pres. Lincoln announced (Apr. 6) he would supply Ft. Sumter in Charleston, South Carolina.

1861 Confederates fired (Apr. 12), on Ft. Sumter and thus began hostilities in the war.

1861–65 American Civil War; bloody conflict culminated long North-South sectional struggle over slavery; South, unable to match North's manpower and supplies, was devastated in fighting and finally defeated.

1862 Legal Tender Act passed; first of series passed to help finance war effort.

1862 Homestead Act passed; encouraged settlement of West.

1862 Morrill Act passed; set aside public lands to create land-grant colleges.

1863 Pres. Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation (Jan. 1), freeing slaves in states currently in revolt against union.

1863 West Virginia became 35th state.

1863 Pres. Lincoln delivered his famous Gettysburg Address (Nov. 19).

1864 Nevada admitted as 36th state.

1865 Gen. R. Lee surrendered at Appomattox Court House (Apr. 9), ending Civil War.

1865 Pres. Lincoln assassinated by J. Booth (Apr. 14); died (Apr. 15).

1865–69 A. Johnson in office as 17th president, succeeding on Lincoln's death; attempted to continue Lincoln's policy of reconciliation toward South; engaged in bitter struggle with Radical Republicans in Congress, in attempt to prevent harsh Reconstruction program.

1865 Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution ratified (Dec. 18); abolished slavery in the US.

1865–77 Reconstruction period; South, ravaged by war, gradually restored; Radical Republicans at first imposed policies designed to guarantee rights of Negroes; but white southerners gained control of state governments, passed laws establishing segregation; segregation was characteristic of southern society until the 1960s.

1867 Nebraska admitted as 37th state.

1867 Tenure of Office Act passed (Mar. 2) by Congress; charges of a violation of its provisions by Pres. A. Johnson were involved in his impeachment (1868).

1867 Alaska territory purchased from Russia.

1867 Grange organized by midwest farmers to counter unfair practices by grain-elevator owners and railroads.

1868 Impeachment proceedings against Pres. Johnson (Feb. 24–May 26), first ever instituted against US president; arose from Johnson's feud with Radical Republicans over Reconstruction policy; Johnson narrowly acquitted.

1868 Burlingame Treaty; treaty of friendship between US and China.

1869–77 U. Grant in office as 18th president; his term marked by continuing problems of Reconstruction, corruption, and various scandals; era known as the Gilded Age.

1869 Union Pacific railway, first transcontinental railway, completed (May 10).

1869 Black Friday financial panic (Sept. 24), caused by speculators' attempt to corner gold market.

1869 Knights of Labor, first major US labor organization, formed.

1870 Fifteenth Amendment ratified; guaranteed Negroes voting rights; along with earlier 14th Amendment and Civil Rights Acts, represented attempts by Republican Congress to guarantee Negroes equal place in post–Civil War society.

1871 Chicago fire (Oct. 8–9); one-third of city destroyed.

1872 Alabama Claims, dispute with Britain, settled by arbitration.

1872 San Juan Boundary Dispute with Great Britain settled; US awarded San Juan Islands southeast of Vancouver.

1873 Crédit Mobilier of America scandal; arose from corrupt practices in financing of Union Pacific Railroad.

1873 Panic of 1873; financial panic caused by speculative boom.

1875 Whiskey Ring scandal.

1876 A. Bell invented the telephone.

1876 Battle of Little Bighorn (June 25); Gen. Custer and his troops massacred in uprising by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians.

1876 Colorado admitted as the 38th state.

1876 Socialist Labor party founded in Philadelphia.

1876 Election of 1876, Hayes vs Tilden; Hayes needed disputed electoral votes from Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana, and Oregon to win; Hayes awarded the election by Congressional commission, after an end to military occupation and Reconstruction in the three Southern states was promised.

1877–81 R. Hayes (Republican) in office as 19th president; ended Reconstruction (1877) by withdrawing last of federal occupation forces in South (Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana); adopted policy of reconciliation toward South.

1878 Bland-Allison Act for free coinage of silver (free-silver movement) passed over President Hayes' veto.

1879 T. Edison invented a commercially practical light bulb.

1881 J. Garfield (Republican) served as 20th president; shot by disgruntled office-seeker (July 2) and died (Sept. 19).

1881 C. Barton founded American Red Cross.

1881–85 C. Arthur (Republican) in office as 21st president, succeeding Garfield on his death; backed civil service reform.

1882–94 Chinese Exclusion Acts passed to prohibit immigration of Chinese (particularly laborers) to US.

1883 Pendleton Civil Service Act passed (Jan. 16); established merit system for hiring government workers and ended long fight over civil service corruption.

1885–89 G. Cleveland (Democrat) in office as the 22d president; a reformer, he fought corruption and political bosses; attempted to lower tariffs and lost reelection.

1886 American Federation of Labor founded; soon eclipsed the Knights of Labor.

1886 Haymarket Square Riot, Chicago (May 4); anarchist bomb killed and injured many.

1886 Statue of Liberty unveiled (Oct. 28) in New York harbor.

1887 Interstate Commerce Commission created to regulate railroads and railroad rates.

1888 Election of 1888; Cleveland won popular vote but lost election to B. Harrison, who won by electoral votes.

1889–93 B. Harrison (Republican) served as 23d US president; administration marked by rising US involvement in international affairs; fiscal policies weakened economy.

1889 North Dakota admitted as 39th state.

1889 South Dakota admitted as 40th state.

1889 Montana admitted as 41st state.

1889 Washington admitted as 42d state.

1890 Sherman Anti-Trust Act passed (July 2); first US law prohibiting trusts.

1890 Idaho admitted as the 43d state.

1890 Wyoming admitted as 44th state.

1890 Sherman Silver Purchase Act passed (July 14); led to financial panic of 1893 and was repealed later that year.

1890 McKinley Tariff passed by Republicans; further increased tariffs.

1890 Sioux Indians massacred at Battle of Wounded Knee (Dec. 29).

1892 Populist party formed; supported free silver and other policies favoring farmers and labor.

1892 Homestead Strike began (June 30); violence between strikers and Pinkerton detectives hired by Carnegie Steel Company.

1893–97 G. Cleveland (Democrat) in office as 24th president (his second term); failed to prevent increase in tariffs and solve continuing economic problems.

1893 Panic of 1893; Pres. Cleveland blamed the Sherman Silver Purchase Act and won its repeal (Oct. 1893).

1894 Coxey's Army of unemployed marched on Washington.

1894 Pullman Strike broken with aid of federal troops.

1894 Wilson-Gorman Tariff passed; continued high protective tariff.

1895–99 Venezuela Boundary Dispute; US, by virtue of Monroe Doctrine, became involved in finding settlement.

1896 Utah admitted as 45th state.

1896 Gold discovered in Klondike, Alaska; gold rush began.

1896 Election of 1896; W. Bryan, Democrat and free-silver advocate, gave famous "Cross of Gold" speech (July 8) attacking Republicans' single gold-standard platform; Bryan won Democratic nomination but lost election to W. McKinley.

1896 Plessy vs Ferguson; Supreme Court decided in favor of doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities for whites and Negroes; doctrine maintained racial segregation until the 1950–60 period.

1897–1901 W. McKinley (Republican) in office as 25th president; administration marked by period of economic recovery and by expansionism.

1897 Dingley Tariff imposed high protective tariff.

1898 USS Maine blown up while in harbor at Havana, Cuba (Feb. 15).

1898 Spanish-American War (Apr.–Dec.); US gained Cuba, Philippines, Guam, and Puerto Rico from Spain.

1898 Hawaii annexed by US.

1899–1902 Philippine Insurrection; began long struggle by Filipino rebels to gain complete independence from US.

1899 US Open Door policy toward China articulated.

1901 Pres. McKinley shot (Sept. 6) by an anarchist; died (Sept. 14).

1901–09 T. Roosevelt (Republican) in office as 26th president, succeeding McKinley; noted for passage of reform legislation, "trust-busting" and other aggressive policies of his administration.

1901 Hay-Pauncefote Treaty with Britain; reversed early Clayton-Bulwer Treaty (1850) and allowed construction of a US-controlled Panama Canal.

1902 Pres. Roosevelt intervened in coal miners' strike.

1902–03 US involved in Venezuela Claims dispute.

1903 US won favorable settlement in the Alaskan Boundary Dispute with Canada.

1903 Elkins Act passed; ended railroad rebates.

1903 Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty (concluded with newly independent Panama), granting US rights to the Panama Canal Zone for construction of the Panama Canal; US backed Panamanian independence fighters after Colombia, then in control of Panama, rejected similar treaty for canal.

1903 First powered airplane flight made (Dec. 17) in Wright brothers' plane at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina.

1904 Construction of the Panama Canal begun.

1904 Roosevelt Corollary to the Monroe Doctrine articulated by President Roosevelt; used to justify subsequent intervention by US in affairs of Latin American nations.

1905 Portsmouth Conference; Roosevelt mediated settlement of Russo-Japanese War of 1905.

1906 San Francisco, California, destroyed by earthquake (Apr. 18–19).

1906 Hepburn Act passed; extended jurisdiction of Interstate Commerce Commission to other transport industries besides railroads.

1906 Pure Food and Drug Act passed.

1907 "Gentlemen's agreement" halted Japanese emigration to US.

1907 Oklahoma admitted as 46th state.

1909–13 W. Taft (Republican) in office as 27th president; continued Roosevelt's "trust-busting" policies but came to oppose progressive movement; replaced Roosevelt's aggressive Latin American policy with "Dollar Diplomacy."

1909 National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) formed.

1909 Payne-Aldrich Tariff adopted; supported by Taft, it maintained protective tariff.

1910 Mann-Elkins Act passed; further strengthened Interstate Commerce Commission and expanded its jurisdiction.

1912 New Mexico admitted as 47th state.

1912 Arizona admitted as the 48th state.

1912 Election of 1912; Taft, who had lost support of the progressives and was opposed by T. Roosevelt, nevertheless won Republican nomination; Roosevelt formed insurgent Progressive (Bull Moose) party; this split the vote and enabled W. Wilson to win.

1913 Sixteenth Amendment to Constitution ratified; established national income tax.

1913–21 W. Wilson (Democrat) in office as 28th president; administration noted for passage of progressive reform legislation; Wilson guided US through WW I years, vainly attempting to maintain neutrality.

1913 Seventeenth Amendment to Constitution ratified; provided for direct popular election of Senators.

1913 Underwood Tariff enacted, lowering tariffs.

1913 H. Ford developed moving assembly line for mass production of Model T Ford.

1913 Federal Reserve System replaced Independent Treasury System.

1914 US forces landed in Veracruz, Mexico, amid political crisis there.

1914 WW I began in Europe (Aug.); US initially remained neutral.

1914 Panama Canal opened (Aug. 15).

1914 Federal Trade Commission established.

1914 Clayton Antitrust Act passed.

1915 US protested sinking of passenger liner Lusitania (May 7) by German submarine.

1916 Punitive raid into Mexico following border raid in US by Mexican rebel P. Villa.

1916 US protested German submarine warfare following sinking of Sussex (Mar. 24); Germans halted unrestricted submarine warfare.

1916 Federal Farm Loan Act passed.

1917 US broke relations with Germany (Feb.) after it resumed unrestricted submarine warfare.

1917 Zimmerman Telegram released (Mar. 1).

1917 US declared war on Germany (Apr. 6); participated in war, 1917–18.

1918 W. Wilson announced (Jan. 8) his Fourteen Points, plan to secure lasting peace after WW I. They contained his proposal for League of Nations.

1918–19 President Wilson participated in Paris Peace Conference (Dec.–June); failed to prevent imposition of harsh terms in Versailles treaty, but won establishment of League of Nations.

1919 Eighteenth Amendment to Constitution ratified; instituted Prohibition.

1919–20 US Senate refused to ratify the Versailles treaty; Wilson, seeking popular support for the treaty and the League of Nations, went on nationwide campaign but collapsed (Sept., 1919); Senate formally rejected the treaty (Mar. 1920) and the US never joined the League.

1920 "Red Raids"; Justice Department under A. Mitchell Palmer conducted mass arrests of labor agitators and suspected Communists in wake of Russian Revolution; many deported.

1920 Nineteenth Amendment to Constitution ratified; gave women right to vote.

1920 American Civil Liberties Union founded.

1921–23 W. Harding (Republican) served as 29th US president; administration noted for the corruption of Harding's appointees; Harding died (Aug. 2) at outbreak of Teapot Dome scandal.

1921 Sacco-Vanzetti Case; two Italian immigrants convicted in celebrated case.

1922 Fordney-McCumber Tariff enacted by Republicans; raised tariffs again.

1923–29 C. Coolidge (Republican) in office as 30th president succeeding Harding; restored confidence in government following revelations in Teapot Dome scandal; instituted conservative, pro-business policies and encouraged rampant speculation that led to stock market crash of 1929.

1924 Progressive party formed by R. La Follette to oppose both Republican and Democratic parties in presidential elections.

1925 Scopes trial conducted in Tennessee; C. Darrow defended teacher charged with teaching theory of evolution.

1927 C. Lindbergh completed (May 21) first nonstop, solo transatlantic flight in Spirit of St. Louis; became national hero overnight.

1927 Sacco and Vanzetti executed (Aug. 22).

1928 Kellogg-Briand Pact concluded; international agremeent declared end to war as an instrument of national policy.

1929–33 H. Hoover (Republican) served as 31st president; continuation of Coolidge's policies brought on the Depression; Hoover, steadfastly opposed to federal action to restore failing economy, took belated steps toward the end of his administration.

1929 Stock market crash began (Oct. 24), beginning the Depression; stocks continued to fall, bringing on widespread unemployment and business failures.

1929–39 Depression; US phase of the worldwide Great Depression brought on by the collapse of the stock market; economic collapse was halted by the mid-1930s but real economic recovery did not come until the beginning of WW II.

1930 Smoot-Hawley Tariff enacted; imposed highest tariffs ever established.

1932 Reconstruction Finance Corporation established to extend federal credit to banks and other financial institutions (Feb. 2).

1932 Norris-LaGuardia Act passed; contracts forbidding workers to join unions ("yellow dog" contracts) made illegal.

1932 Relief and Construction Act, passed to help states finance relief efforts (July 21).

1932 Federal Home Loan Bank Act passed to halt wave of foreclosures (July 22).

1932 Bonus Army, thousands of war veterans, forcibly expelled from Washington, DC (July).

1933 Twentieth Amendment to Constitution ratified; eliminated lame-duck Congress.

1933–45 F. Roosevelt (Democrat) in office as 32d president; responding to the worsening Depression, he put the federal government squarely behind the effort for economic recovery and put through many relief and reform bills to institute his "New Deal"; the only president elected to four terms, he spent the last years of his administration guiding the US through WW II.

1933–34 First New Deal.

1933 Roosevelt inaugurated (Mar. 4) as wave of bank failures reached crisis point.

1933 President Roosevelt declared bank holiday (Mar. 5).

1933 Special session of Congress convened by Roosevelt (Mar. 9); passage of New Deal legislation begun soon after.

1933 Banking Relief Act passed to prevent collapse of US banking system (Mar. 9).

1933 Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) established (Mar. 31) to provide 250,000 jobs.

1933 Gold standard abandoned (Apr. 19).

1933 Federal Emergency Relief Act passed (May 12), providing funds for local relief efforts.

1933 Agricultural Adjustment Act (AAA) passed, providing farm subsidies (May 12).

1933 Tennessee Valley Authority created (May 18).

1933 Home Owners Loan Corporation (HOLC) created to help prevent foreclosures (June 13).

1933 Home Owners Refinancing Act passed (June 13).

1933 Glass-Steagall Act passed (June 16), creating the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

1933 National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA) passed (June 16).

1933 Civil Works Administation (CWA) established (Nov. 8); eventually provided jobs for millions of unemployed on government projects.

1933 Twenty-first Amendment to the Constitution ratified; repealed Prohibition (Dec. 5).

1934 Dust storms began in the lower Great Plains region of the Midwest; gave rise to the "Dust Bowl" and the westward migration of thousands of farmers.

1934 Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) created (June 6).

1934 Reciprocal Tariff Act passed (June 12), giving president power to lower tariffs; brought about end of high protective tariffs.

1934 Federal Communications Commission (FCC) created (June 19) to regulate communications industry.

1934 Federal Housing Authority (FHA) created (June 28).

1935 Committee for Industrial Organization (CIO) founded.

1935–39 Second New Deal.

1935 Works Progress Administration (WPA) created (Apr. 8).

1935 Soil Conservation Service established (Apr. 27).

1935 Supreme Court declared National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA) unconstitutional (May); struggle between court and Roosevelt reached a climax in 1937.

1935 Rural Electrification Administration (REA) created (May 11).

1935 National Labor Relations Act passed (July 5), granting workers right to organize and bargain collectively.

1935 Social Security Act passed (Aug. 14).

1935 Wheeler-Rayburn Act passed (Aug. 28), putting gas and electricity companies under government control.

1935 Wealth Tax Act passed (Aug. 30) to tax incomes over $50,000 at a higher rate.

1935 Neutrality Act passed (Aug 31); aimed at keeping US out of war.

1936 Supreme Court ruled Agricultural Adjustment Act (AAA) unconstitutional (Jan.).

1936–44 American Labor party active.

1936 Election of 1936; Republican opposition to Roosevelt's New Deal coalesced around charge that free enterprise had been replaced by regulated monopoly; Roosevelt defeated his Republican opponent, A. Landon.

1937 Widespread strikes and labor unrest.

1937 Supreme Court controversy (Feb.–July); Roosevelt, in struggle with court over New Deal legislation, suggested increasing number of justices; plan denounced as scheme to pack the court with supporters and was abandoned.

1937 Hindenburg, a German dirigible, exploded into flames while docking at Lakehurst, New Jersey (May 6); thirty-six persons died.

1937 Neutrality extended (May); arms sales to belligerents prohibited.

1937 Nationwide recession began (Oct.); stock prices declined.

1938 House Un-American Activities Committee formed (May) to investigate Nazis, Communists, and other subversives.

1938 Fair Labor Standards Act passed (June 25), guaranteeing 40-hour work week and minimum wage.

1939 US defense appropriations increased as threat of war in Europe mounted.

1939 WW II broke out in Europe; US proclaimed neutrality (Sept. 5).

1939 Arms embargo established by Neutrality Act repealed to allow France and Britain to purchase munitions.

1940 Smith Act passed; aliens required to register.

1940 Defense appropriation of $18 billion to construct two-ocean navy and raise million-man army (July).

1940 Peacetime draft instituted to raise million-man army (Sept. 14).

1940 Advisory Commission to the Council on National Defense set up to mobilize US industry for possible war effort.

1940 Election of 1940; Roosevelt broke tradition (established by G. Washington) of serving only two terms and ran for third term; overwhelmingly defeated Republican opponent, W. Willkie.

1941 Roosevelt articulates his policy of Four Freedoms.

1941 Lend-Lease program established to supply potential allies (Mar. 1).

1941 Atlantic Charter issued after meeting with British Prime Minister W. Churchill (Aug.).

1941 Pearl Harbor attacked (Dec. 7) by Japanese; US declared war (Dec. 8).

1941–45 US participated in WW II; vast resources of men and matériel available to US, as well as efficient organization of industry gave US the upper hand; with the Allies, fought war in Europe as well as in Pacific Theater against Japanese; the US emerged victorious from the war and with the Soviet Union dominated the postwar world.

1942 War Production Board and Office of Price Administration created to manage wartime economy; rationing system instituted.

1942–45 Manhattan Project, begun by US government to develop atomic bomb; scientists on project achieved first sustained nuclear chain reaction (Dec. 2, 1942) and exploded world's first atomic bomb in test near Los Alamos (July 16, 1945).

1945 Pres. Roosevelt died in office (Apr. 12).

1945–53 H. Truman (Democrat) in office as the 33d president, succeeding Roosevelt; continued many of Roosevelt's policies and brought WW II to a successful conclusion; promoted his Fair Deal domestic policy, instituted programs to rebuild war-torn Europe, and presided over the early phase of the Cold War.

1945 San Francisco Conference held (Apr.–June); UN Charter drafted.

1945 WW II ended with Japan's surrender (Sept. 2).

1945 US joined the newly created UN.

1946 ENIAC, first all-electronic computer, developed.

1946 W. Churchill, former British prime minister, gave famous speech at Fulton, Missouri (Mar. 15); warned of the threat of communism and coined the term "Iron Curtain."

1946 Atomic Energy Commission established.

1947 Taft-Hartley Labor Act passed by Congress.

1947 Truman Doctrine articulated (Mar. 12) by Pres. Truman; responded to Soviet postwar expansionism.

1947 Pres. Truman issued Loyalty Order (Mar. 22) as fears about Communist subversives in government began to spread ("Red Scare").

1947 National Security Act passed to create a Department of Defense and establish the National Security Council.

1948 Marshall Plan; provided massive economic aid for war-torn Europe; brought about rapid economic recovery in Western Europe.

1948–49 US played a leading role in the Berlin Airlift.

1948 Election of 1948; opposed by T. Dewey, Republican, and S. Thurmond, candidate of the Dixiecrats, Truman was expected to lose the election; nevertheless conducted vigorous whistle-stop campaign and won the presidency.

1949 H. Truman announced (Jan. 5) his Fair Deal program.

1949 North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) formed (Apr. 4) by nations of Europe and North America.

1949 A. Hiss, accused of being a Communist, convicted of perjury (Nov. 17, 1950); marked beginning of furor over subversives in government.

1949 Point Four Plan instituted to provide technical aid to underdeveloped nations.

1950–53 Korean War, pitting Communist East and non-Communist West against each other in armed conflict; US played leading role in what was called UN "police action."

1951 Twenty-second Amendment to the Constitution ratified; presidents limited to serving only two terms.

1951 Rosenbergs, accused of stealing atomic secrets, convicted; executed in 1953.

1952 US exploded first hydrogen bomb.

1952 Election of 1952; A. Stevenson ran as Democratic candidate, D. Eisenhower, Republican; vice-presidential candidate R. Nixon, under attack in campaign, gave famous "Checkers" speech (Sept. 23); Eisenhower won election in landslide and Republicans won control of both houses, ending long period of government by Democrats.

1953–61 D. Eisenhower (Republican) in office as 34th president; administration marked by period of general peace and prosperity, conservative domestic policy, and Cold War policies of "containment" of Communism and "massive retaliation" in the event of nuclear war.

1953 Department of Health, Education and Welfare established.

1953–54 McCarthy hearings; marked height of post–WW II "Red Scare"; ended with censure of Sen. J. McCarthy by Senate.

1954 Brown vs Board of Education of Topeka; Supreme Court reversed long-standing "separate but equal" doctrine and thus began the desegregation of schools.

1954 Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) organized.

1955 AFL-CIO, major US labor federation, formed by merger of American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

1955 Civil rights movement began; various civil rights groups sprang up after black woman refused to move to back of a bus (Dec. 5) in Montgomery, Alabama; Rev. M.L. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) among groups that began nonviolent campaign against racial discrimination.

1956 Federal Aid Highway Act passed; funded construction of interstate highway system.

1957 Eisenhower Doctrine enunciated to halt communism in Mideast.

1957 Civil Rights Act passed; established commission to investigate infringements of Negro voting rights.

1957 Federal troops sent (Sept.) by President Eisenhower to enforce federal court order to desegregate the Little Rock, Arkansas, high school.

1957 Soviets launched (Oct. 4) first earth satellite; US embarrassed by the Soviet "first"; space race began.

1958 Lebanese Crisis; US troops landed in Lebanon.

1959 Alaska became the 49th state.

1959 Hawaii admitted as the 50th state.

1959 Soviet leader N. Khrushchev visited US (Sept.), following visit by US vice-president R. Nixon to the Soviet Union; hopes raised for Cold War "thaw."

1960 US U-2 spy plane shot down (May 1) over Soviet Union.

1961 Diplomatic relations broken (Jan.) with Cuba; marked beginning of troubles between US and Cuba's revolutionary leader, F. Castro.

1961–63 J.F. Kennedy (Democrat) is in office as 35th president; promoted activist and idealistic climate with his New Frontiers program; gave firm federal support to emerging civil rights movement; began limited US involvement in Vietnam; clashed with Communists in continuing Cold War.

1961 Bay of Pigs Invasion (Apr.); unsuccessful, CIA-backed invasion of Cuba; US deeply embarrassed by incident.

1961 Alliance for Progress established to combat communism in South America. US aid reduced after 1971.

1962 J. Glenn became the first American to orbit the earth (Feb. 20).

1962 Federal troops sent by Pres. Kennedy to enforce integration of the University of Mississippi (Sept.–Oct.).

1962 Cuban Missile Crisis (Oct.); Pres. Kennedy forced Soviets to withdraw missiles from Cuba.

1963 US signed Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

1963 March on Washington, mass demonstration for black civil rights (Aug.).

1963 Pres. Kennedy assassinated (Nov. 22); Warren Commission later investigated shooting to put an end to persistent rumors about various conspiracies.

1963–69 L. Johnson (Democrat) in office as 36th president, succeeding Kennedy; instituted Great Society program and won enactment of legislation for sweeping social reform; made US active participant in Vietnam War; later years of administration marked by widespread antiwar protest and social unrest.

1964 Civil Rights Act of 1964 passed (July 2) to end all discrimination, including religious and sex discrimination.

1964 Gulf of Tonkin Incident; North Vietnam attacked US destroyers (Aug.); Gulf of Tonkin resolution passed by Congress used to justify later massive buildup of US forces in Vietnam.

1964 "War on Poverty" begun by Pres. Johnson with enactment of Economic Opportunity Act (Aug. 30).

1964 Election of 1964; Pres. Johnson ran for first full term against Republican B. Goldwater; Goldwater perceived as dangerously aggressive in foreign-policy thinking; Johnson won landslide victory.

1965–73 US actively involved in Vietnam War; US began bombing North Vietnam (Feb., 1965); sent hundreds of thousands of US troops into battle in unsuccessful effort to block Communist takeover in Vietnam.

1965 Antiwar teach-in held at University of Michigan (Mar.); teach-ins quickly spread to other campuses and thus began the student antiwar movement.

1965 Voting Rights Act of 1965 passed; legislation for Medicare for aged, federal aid to education, and other reform measures passed in this year.

1965 Watts riot (Aug.); first of race riots by blacks that spread to cities across the country; urban unrest among blacks reached a peak by 1968 and tapered off quickly in following years.

1966 Black Panthers, radical-terrorist group, formed; signaled rise of radical militants and end of nonviolent protest in black movement.

1967 Pentagon "siege" by antiwar protesters; marked ascendancy of antiwar protest in US; civil disobedience widespread.

1968 Social unrest reached fever pitch; blacks rioted in cities across the country; rioting by students on various campuses; counterculture, and drug cult within it, widespread among young people.

1968 Pueblo Incident (Jan. 23).

1968 Dr. M.L. King, leading figure of civil rights movement, assassinated (Apr. 4).

1968 R.F. Kennedy assassinated (June 5), while campaigning in Democratic primary.

1968 Election of 1968; widespread opposition to Vietnam War forced Johnson out of presidential race; Democratic National Convention (Chicago, Aug.) marred by rioting by antiwar radicals and subsequent "police riot"; H. Humphrey, Democrat, opposed R. Nixon, Republican, in presidential campaign; G. Wallace made unsuccessful third-party bid; Nixon, campaigning on conservative law-and-order and honorable peace in Vietnam, won election.

1969–74 R. Nixon in office as 37th president; instituted conservative policies, including emphasis on law enforcement and war on widespread drug use; gradually effected US withdrawal from Vietnam; began policy of détente to ease East-West tensions; administration brought down by Watergate scandal.

1969 SALT talks (arms limitation) begun with Soviets.

1969 US landed first man on the moon (July 20).

1969 March on Washington, massive antiwar protest (Nov. 15); demanded immediate, not gradual, withdrawal from Vietnam.

1970 Widespread protest followed US invasion of Cambodia; National guardsmen fired on protesters at Kent State (May 4); 100,000 demonstrated in Washington, DC (May 9).

1970 SST developmental funding bill defeated in Senate.

1971 Equal Rights Amendment passed by Congress; marked rise of women's rights movement that dominated the 1970s; amendment failed to win ratification after long fight (1982).

1971 US Table Tennis team visited China (Apr.); marked start of US efforts to normalize relations with China.

1971 Washington shutdown by antiwar protesters failed (May); 7,000 arrested.

1971 Pentagon Papers leaked to press (June); secret government study revealed US had gradually become entangled in Vietnam War.

1971 Voting age lowered to 18 following ratification of the 26th Amendment.

1971 Draft law expired.

1971 Nixon announced (Aug.) wage and price freeze to combat spiraling inflation; later devalued dollar (1971, 1973, 1974).

1972 Nixon visit to China (Feb. 21–27); process of normalization of relations with China continued.

1972 Pres. Nixon on historic first presidential visit to USSR (May 22–June 1); signed SALT I agreement, limiting antiballistic missile systems and missile launchers for offensive weapons.

1972–74 Watergate Scandal; arrest of Watergate burglars (June, 1972) began scandal, which culminated in Nixon's resignation (Aug. 9, 1974).

1972 SALT II talks began with USSR.

1972 Pres. Nixon signed revenue-sharing bill into law (Oct.).

1972 Election of 1972; Nixon opposed by Sen. G. McGovern; despite recession and continued inflation, Nixon won landslide victory.

1973 Peace agreement "ending" Vietnam War signed at Paris (Jan. 27).

1973 Senate began investigation of emerging Watergate Scandal (Feb.).

1973 Wage and price controls extended (Apr.) to Apr. 30, 1974.

1973 Existence of Nixon tapes revealed (July); long struggle for release of tapes begun by Watergate investigators.

1973 Vice-Pres. Agnew resigned (Oct. 10) under pressure from charges of past corruption; pleaded "no contest" to income tax evasion charge.

1973 Gerald Ford in office as vice-president (Dec. 6).

1974 Supreme Court ordered Pres. Nixon to release tapes sought by Watergate investigators (July 24).

1974 House voted articles of impeachment against President Nixon in Watergate scandal (July 27–30).

1974 Pres. Nixon resigned after admitting involvement in Watergate cover-up; became first president to resign under threat of impeachment (Aug. 9).

1974–76 G. Ford (Republican) in office as 38th president, succeeding Nixon; attempted to restore public confidence in government; recession, inflation, and growing unemployment plagued his administration.

1974 Ford granted Nixon pardon for crimes committed in office (Sept. 8).

1974 N. Rockefeller sworn in as vice-president (Dec. 19).

1975 Last Americans evacuated from South Vietnam (Apr. 29) as North Vietnamese completed successful invasion of South; Vietnam united under Communist rule soon after.

1975 Cambodians captured US cargo ship in Mayaguez Incident (May 12).

1976 Pres. Ford ordered sweeping reorganization of US intelligence agencies (Feb. 17).

1976 US Bicentennial celebration (July 4).

1976 Lockheed scandal; firm implicated in payment of bribes to foreign officials to secure contracts.

1976 Election of 1976; Pres. Ford defeated primary challenge by conservative Republican R. Reagan; J. Carter became dark-horse candidate of the Democrats; Carter projected a populist image and, taking advantage of distrust of government, promised sweeping reorganization of executive branch; Carter won election.

1977–81 J. Carter (Democrat) in office as 39th president; his administration marked by growing split with regular Democrats, the energy crisis, and by the success of Camp David negotiations between Egypt and Israel.

1977 House and Senate adopted strict codes of ethics (Mar.–Apr.).

1977 Legislation enacted permitting Pres. Carter to reorganize the executive branch.

1977 Alaska pipeline opened.

1977 US and Panama signed treaty giving Panama eventual control of the Panama Canal; Senate ratified treaty (Apr. 1978).

1978 Camp David accords signed (Sept. 17) by Israeli prime minister M. Begin and Egyptian president A. Sadat; provided a historic "framework for Mideast peace."

1979 Full diplomatic relations with China established (Jan. 1).

1979 Nuclear accident at Three Mile Island power plant in Pennsylvania (Mar. 28).

1979 Pres. Carter began implementation of oil price decontrol (June 1).

1979 US and USSR signed SALT II agreement on arms limitation (June); ratification held up by Senate opposition and Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

1979–81 Hostage Crisis in Iran; Muslim militants seized US Embassy (Nov. 4) and held 52 Americans hostage; Iranians used incident to humiliate US; finally released hostages (Jan. 20, 1981).

1980 Pres. Carter ordered (Jan. 4) embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

1980 Influx of Cuban boat people reached major proportions (May–June).

1980 Election of 1980; Pres. Carter won narrow victory in bitter primary race against rival Sen. E. Kennedy; Republican candidate R. Reagan took advantage of growing disaffection with Democrats' liberal policies; campaigned on conservative program of tax cuts, less federal spending and regulation, and strong military; Reagan won landslide victory which swept many Republicans into office.

1980 Prime interest rate rose to 21.5% as effort to stem high inflation rate continued (Dec. 19).

1981– R. Reagan (Republican) in office as 40th president; on taking office began aggressive policy of cutting federal spending (except defense), while cutting taxes; by 1982 Reagan policies had cut inflation and brought down high interest rates, but at the cost of high unemployment.

1981 Americans being held hostage in Iran released (Jan. 20) as Pres. R. Reagan was being sworn in.

1981 Pres. Reagan seriously wounded (Mar. 30) in attempted assassination by John W. Hinckley, Jr.

1981 US launched world's first reusable spacecraft, the space shuttle Columbia.

1981 Strike by federal air controllers (Aug.) broken by Pres. Reagan; striking controllers fired.

1981 Sandra D. O'Connor sworn in (Oct. 25) as first woman Supreme Court justice.

1981 Pres. Reagan ordered economic sanctions imposed against the Soviets for their part in the crackdown against Solidarity in Poland.

1982 Demonstration (June 12) in New York City, the largest to-date, in which an estimated 750,000 participated, protesting nuclear arms race.

1982 Provisions of the Civil Rights Act extended for 25 years (June 29).

1982 US successful (Aug.) in its efforts to negotiate withdrawal of PLO guerrillas from Beirut, following Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights Declaration adopted (Dec. 10, 1948) by the United Nations General Assembly. It proclaimed in general terms the basic social, political, and economic rights that should be accorded to people by governments.

Universalist Church of America American Protestant Christian denomination. Originating in the late 18th cent., it held that everyone will eventually achieve salvation. Holding similar views to those of the Unitarian church, it merged (May, 1961) with the Unitarians to form the Unitarian Universalist Association.

Untouchables See caste system

Upanishads Philosophical commentaries forming the last section of the Hindu Vedas. The Upanishads are the basis for the Vedanta system of philosophy.

Updike, John Hoyer 1932–. American writer whose novels and stories are noted for their examination and portrayal of modern American life. Among his books are Rabbit Run, The Centaur, and Rabbit Redux.

Upper Burma Region comprising central and northern Burma, annexed by the British (Jan., 1886) after the third Burmese War. It was occupied by the Japanese (1942–45) during WW II and became part of independent Burma (1948).

Upper Canada Named applied (1791 to 1841) to the Canadian region comprising present-day Ontario. Settled primarily by the British, it was joined with Lower Canada by the Act of Union (1841) and became known as Canada West. With the confederation of Canada (1867), it became the province of Ontario.

Upper Volta Republic located in West Africa. Its capital is Ouagadougou. Inhabited since Neolithic times, the region was invaded (*c*12th cent.) by the Mossi, who established several powerful and stable states. France established (1895–96) a protectorate over much of Upper Volta, and in 1919, it was made a separate French colony. In 1947, Upper Volta became a territory within the French Union and then became independent (Aug. 5, 1960). Its government was overthrown (1966) by a military coup. In 1970, a new constitution was adopted, and elections were held in 1978. A coup in 1980 brought another change in leadership.

Ur Ancient Sumerian city once located on the Euphrates River in what is now southern Iraq. One of the earliest cities to rise in Mesopotamia, it was first settled *c*4000 BC and flourished under the 1st (26th–24th cents. BC) and 3d (22d–21st cents. BC) dynasties. The traditional home of Abraham, it was conquered and destroyed several times. Ur was rebuilt (6th cent. BC) by Nebuchadnezzar II but declined and was abandoned (*c*4th cent. BC), perhaps because of a change in the Euphrates' course. Excavation of the site (begun 19th cent.) has yielded important discoveries.

Urania See Muses

Uranus In Greek mythology, the personification of the heavens, born of Gaea (the earth). With Gaea, he fathered the Titans, the Cyclopes, and the Hecatoncheires.

Urartu Ancient kingdom (13th–7th cents. BC) in what is now eastern Turkey (Armenia). Identified as the biblical Ararat, it reached its greatest extent (ruling northern Syria) in the 8th cent. BC. The kingdom was often attacked by the Assyrians and was finally destroyed by invading Scythians and Medes.

Urban II ⟨Eudes of Lagery⟩ ⟨Odo of Lagery⟩ *c*1042–99. Pope (1088–99), successor to Gregory VII. He continued Gregory's reform movement, strengthened the papacy, and, through his preachings, helped to inspire the First Crusade.

Urban IV ⟨Pantaléon, Jacques⟩ d. 1264. Pope (1261–64), successor to Alexander IV. He established the feast of Corpus Christi, opposed the Hohenstaufens, and offered the Sicilian throne to Charles of Anjou Urban V ⟨Grimoard, Guillaume de⟩ 1310–70. Pope (1632–70), successor to Innocent VI. Elected pope at Avignon, Urban moved the papacy to Rome (1367). Conflict in Rome and continued war between England and France led him to return to Avignon (1370).

Urban VI ⟨Prignano, Bartolomeo⟩ 1318?–89. Pope (1378–89), successor to Gregory XI. His election and subsequent actions alienated the French cardinals. They denied his election and elected Clement VII, thus beginning the Great Schism.

Urban VIII ⟨Barberini, Maffeo⟩ 1568–1644. Pope (1623–44), successor to Gregory XV. Fearing Hapsburg dominance over Rome, he supported the policies of Cardinal Richelieu and the French against Germany in the Thirty Years' War.

Urdu Indo-Iranian language, the official language of Pakistan. Urdu is spoken by more than 25,000,000 people and has a classical literature dating from the 14th cent.

Urey, Harold Clayton 1893–1981. American chemist. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1934 for his isolation of the heavy-hydrogen isotope deuterium, a major step in the development of nuclear fission.

Urquiza, Justo José de 1801–70. Argentinian soldier and politician. As governor of Entre Rios province he overthrew the Argentine dictator J. de Rosas (1852). He helped to establish and served as president (1854–60) of the Argentine Confederation.

Ursula, Saint fl. 4th cent.? AD. Legendary saint said to have been martyred along with 11,000 virgins at Cologne by the Huns. She is the patron saint of the order of the Ursulines.

Uruguay ⟨Oriental Republic of Uruguay⟩ Independent state located on the southeastern coast of South America. Its capital is Montevideo. Uruguay was for a time in the early 20th cent. one of South America's most progressive democracies. Key dates in the history of Uruguay include:

1516 Uruguay discovered by Spaniard Juan Díaz de Solis.

1624 Spain established settlement on Rio Negro.

1680 Portugal established colony at Colonia.

c1777 Spain took complete control of region.

1811–14 Uruguay revolted, gained independence from Spain.

1816–20 Portuguese from Brazil captured Uruguay.

1825 Thirty-Three Immortals, led by J. Lavalleja, declared independence from Brazil; Argentines sent aid.

1827 Rebel forces defeated Brazilian troops at the Battle of Ituzaingó (Feb. 20).

1830 Republic declared; revolts against government began soon after.

1836 Civil war between Blancos (conservatives) and Colorados (liberals) began fifty years of internal disorder.

1865–70 War of the Triple Alliance; Uruguay allied with Brazil and Argentina against Paraguay.

1911–15 J. Batlle y Ordóñez became president; instituted progressive, liberal rule.

1919 New constitution; Ordóñez' liberal principles were included.

1931 Gabriel Terra became president.

1933 Coup by Terra; constitution suspended; Terra ruled until 1938, continuing liberal policies.

1950 Andrés Martínez Trueba elected president.

1952 Presidency abolished by constitutional amendment; Trueba headed nine-member national council.

1958 Colorados, in power for nearly 100 years, overwhelmingly defeated by conservatives (Blancos) in elections.

1966 Alberto Heber became president; urged reforms; constitution revised.

1967 New constitution; executive commission abolished and strong presidential system established as economic problems fomented unrest.

1970 Marxist Tupámaro guerrillas kidnapped and killed US adviser Dan Mitrione.

1972 Tupámaro guerrilla activities provoked government to institute state of internal war.

1972 Tupámaros founder, Raul Sendic, captured.

1972–76 Juan María Bordaberry in office as president.

1973 Military revolted (Feb.) as economic problems worsened; Bordaberry remained in office though military held real power.

1973 Constitutional government dissolved by Bordaberry; political activity banned.

1976 Bordaberry removed by military; Aparicio Méndez installed as president.

1980 Constitution establishing permanent military rule rejected in plebiscite.

1981 Gen. Gregorio Alvarez became president.

Uruk See Erech

Usher, James See Ussher, James

Ussher, James ⟨Usher, ~⟩ 1581–1656. Irish scholar and archbishop. He is noted for his biblical chronology, which set the date of Creation at 4004 BC.

Ustinov, Peter Alexander 1921–. English actor, director, and author. He has attained international renown for his books and plays as well as his stage and screen performances.

Utah Western US state (pop. 1,461,000), the 45th state. The capital is Salt Lake City. First explored (1540) by the Spanish, the region was again visited by J. Bridger, who is credited with discovering the Great Salt Lake (1824). The Mormons under B.

Young were the first permanent settlers (1847). The US acquired Utah from Mexico by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848) at the end of the Mexican War, and Young became governor of Utah Territory (1850). Conflicts between the Mormons and the US government contributed to the Mountain Meadows Massacre (q.v.) and led to the Mormon War (q.v.) of 1857–58. The Mormon practice of polygamy was a major stumbling block to Utah statehood. Polygamy was abolished (1890), and Utah was admitted as a state in 1896.

Utah War See Mormon War

Uther Pendragon Legendary British king, thought to be the father of King Arthur.

Uthman ⟨Othman⟩ d. 656. Third Muslim caliph (644–56), successor to Omar and son-in-law of Muhammad. He continued Muslim conquest and expanded the power of the caliphate. His establishment of an official version of the Koran led to his assassination and a resulting struggle for leadership.

utilitarianism Ethical theory holding that the goodness of an act may be judged by its usefulness, or utility. The theory was elaborated by such philosophers as J. Bentham, J. Mill, and J.S. Mill. H. Spencer adapted utilitarianism to the scientific principles of evolution.

utopia Term applied to an imaginary ideal state. As such, the term was first used (1516) by T. More in his book Utopia. Later utopian societies were described in books by F. Bacon, E. Bellamy, and others.

Utraquists ⟨Calixtines⟩ Bohemian religious sect of the 15th cent. based on the teachings of J. Huss. Its members held that reception of both bread and wine was necessary for the sacrament of communion. They maintained ties with the Catholic church, opposed the more militant Taborites, and disappeared as a movement with the rise of the Reformation.

Utrecht, Peace of Two series of treaties (1713–15), one between France and other European countries and the other between Spain and other European countries, that ended the War of the Spanish Succession. In the first series France concluded treaties (Apr. 11, 1713) with England, The Netherlands, Savoy, Prussia, and Portugal. By these treaties France acknowledged the accession of Queen Anne to the English throne and ceded to England the Hudson Bay territory, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and St. Kitts. The treaties also included French cession of the Spanish Netherlands to Austria by treaty with The Netherlands. France recognized Victor Amadeus II as king of Savoy, recognized the king of Prussia, and signed a peace with Portugal. In the second series of treaties (July, 1713–Feb., 1715), Spain signed treaties with England, Savoy, The Netherlands, and Portugal. Spain ceded Gibraltar and Minorca to England and granted England the right to sell slaves in Spanish America. It ceded Sardinia to Savoy and received acknowledgment of Philip V's succession (the cause of the war); signed a peace with the Dutch; and in 1715 made peace with Portugal. The treaties of Rastatt and Baden (q.v.) in 1714, between France and the Holy Roman Empire, completed the settlements.

Utrecht, Union of Union of provinces in the Low Countries that became independent of Spanish rule (1579) and that later became the modern state of The Netherlands (q.v.).

Utrillo, Maurice 1883–1955. French painter. A prolific artist noted for his independent style, he was known best for his paintings of street scenes of Paris, especially Montmartre.

U-2 affair Conflict (1960) between US and Russia over the shooting down (May, 1960) of an American U-2 spy plane over the Soviet Union. The affair led to cancellation of a proposed Paris summit meeting between Russia and the Western powers. The U-2 pilot, Francis Gary Powers, was sentenced to prison but was later exchanged for a Russian spy (1962).

Uxmal ⟨Oxmal⟩ Ancient Mayan city in southeastern Mexico, near Merida. It flourished (600–900) during the Mayan late classic period and is known for its excellent examples of Mayan architecture.

Uzbegs See Uzbeks

Uzbeks ⟨Uzbegs⟩ Turkic people, once a part of the Golden Horde. They occupied parts of Turkistan in central Asia by the 13th cent. and, by the 14th, were ruled by khans of the Golden Horde.

Uzziah ⟨Azariah⟩ *d. c*735 BC. King of Judah (*c*780–740 BC). He defeated the Philistines, rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, and expanded the territory of the kingdom. He was stricken with leprosy toward the end of his reign, supposedly in punishment for his pride.

V

Vaishnavism Form of Hinduism. Its followers worship Vishnu, especially in his incarnation as Krishna or Rama.

Vaisya caste See caste system

Valdemar I See Waldemar I

Valdemar II See Waldemar II

Valdemar IV See Waldemar IV

Valdivia, Pedro de *c*1500–54. Spanish conquistador. He conquered Chile (1540s), founded the city of Santiago (1541) during the conquest, and served as governor of Chile.

Valens AD *c*328–378. Roman emperor of the East (AD 364–378), appointed by his brother Valentinian I. Valens defeated the Visigoths, then allowed them to settle in the empire. They rebelled and destroyed the Roman army at the Battle of Adrianople (q.v.). There Valens was killed and the eastern empire was rendered defenseless.

Valentine, Saint *d. c*270. Roman Christian priest who was martyred during the reign of Claudius II. His feast day, February 14, is now known as Valentine's Day. He is considered the patron saint of love.

Valentinian I AD 321–375. Roman emperor of the West (AD 364–375), successor to Jovian. He appointed his brother Valens emperor of the East and successfully defended the western frontiers of the empire.

Valentinian II AD 371–392. Roman emperor of the West (AD 375–392), successor to his father Valentinian I. He was deposed (AD 387) by Maximus but restored (AD 388) by Theodosius I. He was murdered, possibly by Arbogast.

Valentinian III AD 419–455. Roman emperor of the West (AD 425–455), appointed by his cousin Theodosius II. He allowed the empire to be ruled by others. During his reign Africa was conquered by the Vandals and Gaul and northern Italy were invaded by the Huns.

Valentinus See Gnosticism

Valerian d. after AD 260. Roman emperor (AD 253–260), successor to Aemilianus. He reimposed persecution of the Christians, appointed his son Gallienus to rule in the West, and was defeated and captured by Persian king Shapur I.

Valéry, Paul 1871–1945. French poet and writer, considered one of the leading French poets of the early 20th cent. His masterpiece is La Jeune Parque.

Valla, Lorenzo *c*1407–57. Italian humanist and scholar. He identified the Donation of Constantine as a fraud, and pointed out the failures of the Latin Vulgate to faithfully translate the Greek Bible.

Valley Forge Village in northeastern Pennsylvania, site of the winter encampment (1777–78) of the Continental Army under G. Washington. Here Baron von Steuben drilled the Continental Army into an efficient military unit.

Valmy, Battle of First important battle (Sept. 20, 1792) of the French Revolutionary Wars, at Valmy, France. Some 36,000 French defeated a force of Austrians and Prussians. Both sides suffered casualties of only a few hundred, but the battle showed that the revolutionary forces were capable of defending France.

Valois French royal house, a branch of the Capetians, who ruled France from 1328 to 1589, beginning with Philip VI. The first half of their reign was marked by the Hundred Years' War and by challenges from the nobility. However, the Valois rulers ably met both threats, consolidated their power, and established their sole right of taxation. The direct line ended with the death of Charles VIII (1498). It continued with the houses of Valois-Orléans and Valois-Angoulême until the advent of Henry IV and the Bourbons (1589). Valois kings of France included:

Philip VI	1328–50
John II	1350–64
Charles V	1364–80
Charles VI	1380–1422
Charles VII	1422–61
Louis XI	1461–83
Charles VIII	1483–98
Louis XII	1498–1515
Francis I	1515–47

Henry II	1547–59
Francis II	1559–60
Charles IX	1560–74
Henry III	1574–89

Valois, Catherine of See Catherine of Valois

Valois, Charles of See Charles of Valois

Valois, Elizabeth of See Elizabeth of Valois

Valois, Margaret of See Margaret of Valois

Valparaiso, Treaty of See Pacific, War of the Vanbrugh, Sir John 1664–1726. English dramatist and architect. He established himself as one of the leading Restoration dramatists, then turned to architecture. Among his works is Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire.

Van Buren, Martin 1782–1862. US president (1837–41), the 8th, successor to A. Jackson. A Democrat, he led the Albany Regency (q.v.) and served in the US Senate (1821–28), where he supported the policies of A. Jackson. Elected (1828) governor of New York, he soon resigned to become secretary of state (1829–31). In 1832, Van Buren was elected vice-president under Jackson, and in 1836 he won the presidency. His administration was marked by the financial Panic of 1837, passage of legislation establishing an independent treasury system, US neutrality during the Canadian rebellion of 1837, and the Aroostook War (q.v.), between settlers in Maine and Canada. Van Buren was defeated in the 1840 presidential campaign, and he was a leader of the Barnburners against the Hunkers (qq.v.). In 1848, as the Free-Soil party candidate, he split the Democratic vote and thus helped Z. Taylor win the election.

Vancouver, George 1757–98. English navigator and explorer. He sailed with Captain J. Cook and surveyed the west coast of North America. Vancouver Island and Vancouver, B.C., are named for him.

Vandals Germanic tribe, believed to have originated around Jutland. Fleeing the Huns (early 5th cent. AD), they embarked upon their own campaign of conquest, sweeping through Gaul and into Spain. Led by Gaiseric, they crossed into North Africa (429) and eventually captured Carthage (AD 439). Rome recognized Gaiseric's rule three years later and the Vandals began their pirate attacks upon Mediterranean shipping. From there they raided Sicily and southern Italy, and sacked Rome (AD 455). Arian Christians, they vigorously persecuted other Christian sects. The power of the Vandals declined after Gaiseric's death in the late 5th cent. and was finally broken by the Byzantine general Belisarius (AD 533).

Vandenberg, Arthur Hendrick 1884–1951. American politician. As US senator (1928–51) he moved from a policy of isolationism to support of the foreign policy of Pres. H. Truman and establishment of the United Nations.

Vanderbilt American family. Its wealth and position were secured by Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794–1877), who made an immense fortune in shipping and railroads. He gave $1 million to found Vanderbilt University. His son William Henry Vanderbilt (1821–85) succeeded his father in managing the family railroad interests. William's sons included Cornelius Vanderbilt (1843–99) and George Washington Vanderbilt (1862–1914).

Van Dorn, Earl 1820–63. Confederate general in the American Civil War. Van Dorn received the surrender of Union forces in Texas (1861) and fought at Pea Ridge (Mar., 1862) and Corinth (Oct., 1862). He was murdered in 1863.

Van Dyck, Sir Anthony 1599–1641. Flemish painter. One of the greatest portrait painters of the 17th cent. He developed a characteristic style that lent an air of dignity and elegance to his subjects and made him extremely popular among the European aristocracy. By 1632 he had become court painter to English King Charles I and spent much of the remainder of his life in England. He painted portraits of many of the leading figures of the English court and greatly influenced later English portrait painters. Van Dyck also painted religious subjects and did etchings and drawings.

Vane, Sir Henry 1589–1655. English courtier and Parliamentarian, father of H. Vane. He served in every Parliament from 1614 to 1640 and carried out important diplomatic missions for King Charles I. He lost favor with the king and joined the Parliamentary party.

Vane, Sir Henry 1613–62. English statesman. A Puritan, he served as governor of Massachusetts (1636–37), then returned to England. He attempted to be a moderating influence during and after the English Civil War but was executed for treason after the restoration of King Charles II.

Van Rensselaer, Stephen 1764–1839. American political leader. He took a prominent part in New York politics, serving as lieutenant governor (1795–1801), major general in the War of 1812, and US congressman (1822–29). He was instrumental in building the Erie Canal.

Vanzetti, Bartolomeo See Sacco-Vanzetti case

Varanglans Scandinavian conquerers of Russia in the 9th and 10th cents. Also called "Rus," they thus gave Russia its name. They were gradually absorbed by the Slavs. (See also Norsemen.)

Vardhamana See Mahavira

Vargas, Getulio Dornelles 1883–1954. Brazilian statesman, twice president of Brazil (1930–45, 1951–54). He came to power by revolution. Although he encouraged reform and development in industry and agriculture, his rule was dictatorial.

Varna, battles of 1. Ottoman Turkish victory (Nov. 10, 1444) over the Hungarians at Varna, now in Bulgaria. The Turkish forces defeated the Hungarians under J. Hunyadi and killed Ladislaus, king of Poland and Hungary. Eastern Europe remained in Ottoman control. 2. Russian victory (Oct. 12, 1828) over the Ottoman Turkish forces of Sultan Mahmud II during the Russo-Turkish War of 1828. After several months of campaigning, the Russians finally forced the Turks, besieged at Varna, to surrender. The Russians were unable to further prosecute the war, however, and soon took up winter quarters.

Varro, Marcus Terentius 116–27? BC. Roman scholar, one of the most versatile, prolific, and brilliant men produced by Rome. His writings filled some 600 books.

Varus, Publius Quintilius d. AD 9. Roman general and consul (13 BC). As commander in Germany (AD 6–9) he was totally defeated by Arminius and committed suicide.

Vasa Swedish family that ruled Sweden (1523–1654) and Poland (1587–1668). Established in Sweden by King Gustavus I, it gained the Polish throne through the marriage of Swedish king John III to the sister of Polish king Sigismund II. Their son, a Catholic, became (1587) Polish king Sigismund III. When he attempted to assume the Swedish throne, however, the Protestant Swedes ousted him and installed his uncle, Charles IX (1599). Thereafter, the two Vasa branches fought frequently for domination. The Protestant Swedish Vasas greatly increased Sweden's Baltic influence. The direct Vasa line in Sweden ended with the abdication of Queen Christina and the crowning of her cousin Charles X (1654). In Poland, the ruling line ended with the abdication (1668) of King John II Casimir.

Vasari, Giorgio 1511–74. Italian architect, painter, and art historian. He is noted for his history of Renaissance art and artists, Vite de' più eccellenti architetti, pittori e scultori italiani.

Vasily III 1479–1533. Grand duke of Moscow (1505–33), successor to his father, Ivan III. He continued his father's consolidation of territory by annexing Pskov (1510), Ryazan (1517), and Novgorod-Seversk (1523), and capturing Smolensk (1514).

vassal In feudal society, the holder of a fief, or landed estate granted by an overlord in return for feudal services.

Vassy, massacre of See Guise, François of Lorraine, 2d duke of Vatican City Independent city-state located mostly within the city of Rome. It is the official seat of the pope, head of the Roman Catholic church. Vatican City was established by the Lateran Treaty (Feb. 11, 1929) between Italy and Pope Pius XI. The unification of Italy (1870) had deprived the pope of the former Papal States, by which the popes had endeavored to maintain their independence from any secular ruler. The Lateran Treaty guaranteed papal independence.

Vatican Council 1. The First Vatican Council (1869–70), or 20th ecumenical council of the Catholic church, was convened (Dec. 8, 1869) at the Vatican by Pope Pius IX. It was interrupted by the capture of Rome (Oct. 1870) by Italian troops. The council upheld the pope as supreme leader of the Catholic church and promulgated the dogma of papal infallibility when speaking ex cathedra on matters of faith or morals. 2. The Second Vatican Council (1962–65), or 21st ecumenical council of the Catholic church, was convened (Oct. 11, 1962) at the Vatican by Pope John XXIII and continued by Pope Paul VI. The council issued 16 documents through which it sought to promote a spiritual renewal within the Catholic church. It invited representatives from both Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches to observe the proceedings. Its principal accomplishments included modification of the liturgy of the Mass, support for the spirit of ecumenism, and condemnation of anti-Semitism. Its wide-ranging reforms have had a major impact on the church.

Vauban, Sébastien Le Prestre, marquis de 1633–1707. French military engineer and marshal of France. He developed a series of parallel trenches at the siege of Maastricht (1673) which revolutionized siege warfare. He also invented the socket bayonet.

Vaucreuil-Cavagnal, Pierre François de Rigaud, marquis de 1698–1765. Last French governor of New France (1755–60). After the defeat of Gen. L. Montcalm, he surrendered New France to Britain (1760).

Veblen Thorstein 1857–1929. American economist and social scientist. He is known best for his book The Theory of the Leisure Class, which introduced such phrases as "conspicuous consumption."

Vecellio, Tiziano See Titian

Vedas Sacred Indian texts. Among the oldest examples of ancient Indian literature, the Veda include texts of hymns, poetry, and prose that state the essential beliefs, laws, mythology, prayers, and rituals of Hinduism. They originated with the Aryans, who entered India *c*1500 BC. The Veda are divided into four primary groupings: the Samhitas, containing hymns and liturgies; the Brahmanas, prose explanations of sacrificial ceremonies; Aranyakas, instructions for meditations; and the Upanishads, mystical writings.

Vedanta Term used to describe the philosophy on which modern Hinduism is based. Meaning literally "the end of the Veda," it is based on the knowledge of the final Vedic texts, the Upanishads. Vedanta was developed especially by the Hindu sages Sankara and Ramanuja.

Vega Carpio, Lope Félix de 1562–1635. Founder of the Spanish drama. He wrote some 1,800 plays and countless other works in prose and verse. His works included "cloak and sword dramas," "heroic comedies," and dramas of domestic life and were immensely popular.

Vehme See Vehmgericht

Vehmgericht ⟨Vehme⟩ ⟨vehmic court⟩ Extraordinary criminal tribunal in medieval Germany. These tribunals flourished in the 14th and 15th cents. but declined with the increased authority exerted by the princes.

vehmic court See Vehmgericht

Velasco, Luis de d. 1564. Spanish colonial administrator, second viceroy of New Spain (1550–64). He improved the condition of the Indians and outfitted the expedition that conquered the Philippines.

Velasco, Luis de 1539–1617? Spanish viceroy of Mexico (1590–95, 1607–11) and Peru (1596–1604), son of L. de Velasco.

Velázquez, Diego de 1465?–1522? Spanish soldier and administrator. He sailed with Columbus (1493), was first governor of Cuba (1511–22), and founded Santiago (1514) and Havana (1515).

Velázquez, Diego Rodríguez de Silva y 1599–1660. Spanish painter, one of the great masters of 17th-cent. art. His mature works, which utilized color, perspective, and light to capture a sense of realism, greatly influenced later painters. His works include portraits of Philip IV and Don Carlos, Surrender of Breda, and Borrachos.

Vellore Mutiny Sepoy uprising against the British (May 10, 1806) at Vellore, India. The Sepoys seized the fortress in which the family of Tipu Sahib lived and killed some 130 British soldiers. The mutiny was soon suppressed and the family of Tipu Sahib was removed to Calcutta.

Vendée, Wars of the French royalist insurrections. From 1793–1832, the French region of the Vendée frequently attempted counterrevolutions to defeat the French Republic and restore the monarchy. The peasants of the Vendée first rebelled against conscription by the French government (Mar., 1793). They were joined by displaced nobles, who spread the revolt throughout the summer and fall but were defeated at Le Mans (Dec. 12, 1793). The harsh treatment of defeated counterrevolutionaries by the Republicans led to a second Vendée insurrection (1794). Smaller royalist revolts in the Vendée took place in 1799, 1815, and 1832.

Vendôme, César, duc de 1594–1665. French general and politician, a son of French king Henry IV. He participated in conspiracies against King Louis XIII, Cardinal Richelieu, and Cardinal Mazarin.

Vendôme, Louis Joseph, duc de 1654–1712. French general. He fought with distinction in the War of the Grand Alliance and played a major role in the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14).

Venetia Region of northeastern Italy. Inhabited by the Venetii, it was conquered (2d cent. BC) and made a province by the Romans, ravaged by the Huns (5th cent. AD), and flourished (15th–16th cents.) under the rule of the republic of Venice. Contested by Austria and Italy, it passed to Italy at the close of the Austro-Prussian War (1866) between Austria and Prussia.

Venetian school School of Italian art that flourished in Venice from the 15th through 18th cents. Its artists' works were characterized by their use of color and celebration of light. Among its artists were G. Bellini, Giorgione, Titian, and Tintoretto.

Venezuela ⟨Republic of Venezuela⟩ Independent state located in northern South America on the Caribbean Sea. Its capital is Caracas. Venezuela is one of the world's major oil-producing nations. Key events in Venezuelan history include:

1498 Columbus discovered Venezuela.

1499 Alonas de Ojeda and Amerigo Vespucci explored coast.

1527 First permanent Spanish settlement at Coro.

1567 Caracas founded.

16–18TH CENT. British buccaneers active along coast.

1795 Unsuccessful revolt against Spain.

1810 Revolt against Spain resumed under Francisco Miranda.

1811 Independence declared (July 5).

1821 Independence from Spain established by S. Bolívar's victory at Battle of Carabobo (June 24); Venezuela joined Federation of Greater Colombia.

1830 José Antonio Páez separated Venezuela from federation.

1830–46 Páez in office as first president.

1839–40 British Guiana gained major share of long-disputed territory.

1846–58 José Tadeo Monagas in power.

1864 Short-lived United States of Venezuela formed under Juan Falcon.

1870–88 A. Guzmán Blanco ruled as dictator; overthrown.

1886 British occupied Orinoco River in continuing boundary dispute over British Guiana.

1892–99 Juan Crespo became dictator.

1895 US became involved in ongoing boundary dispute.

1899 Venezuela Boundary Dispute settled in arbitration; most disputed territory awarded to Britain.

1899–1908 Cipriano Castro became president.

1902 Castro's inability to repay long-standing European debts led to Venezuela Claims incident.

1908–35 Dictator J. Gómez in power after deposing Castro; ruled tyrannically; stimulated economic growth.

1935–41 Eleazar López Contrera became president.

1948–58 Military seized power (Nov. 1947) and thereafter installed a series of presidents; military rule ended by popular revolt (1958); democratic government restored.

1958–64 Romulo Betancourt in office as president.

1961 New constitution adopted.

1962 Communist-inspired revolts suppressed as political unrest mounted.

1964–68 Raúl Leoni in power as president.

1966 Leftist terrorists in Caracas suppressed.

1969–74 Rafael Caldera Rodriguez in office as president; legalized Communist Party; established relations with Soviets.

1974–79 Carlos Peréz in office as president.

1976 Nationalization (with compensation) of oil companies.

1978 Oil profits declined; austerity measures instituted.

1979– Luis Herrera Campíns in office as president; remained in office into the early 1980s.

Venezuela Boundary Dispute Prolonged territorial dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela over the boundary between Venezuela and British Guiana. The disagreement continued through much of the 19th cent. but took on added meaning when gold was discovered in the disputed area. In 1887, the nations broke off diplomatic ties. In 1895, US secretary of state R. Olney invoked the Monroe Doctrine and demanded arbitration. Britain at first refused but eventually yielded to avoid conflict with the US. In 1899, an arbitration panel awarded most of the disputed territory to Britain.

Venezuela Claims Financial claims pressed upon Venezuela in the early 20th cent. During the rule of Venezuelan president C. Castro, Venezuela fell into a complicated financial tangle. In Dec., 1902, France, Great Britain, Germany, and Italy demanded swift repayment of outstanding loans to Venezuela, pressing their claims by sending gunboats to blockade Venezuelan ports. After they bombarded several port cities, the US intervened as unofficial arbitrator. The matter was referred to the Hague Tribunal (1904), which ruled that Venezuela must repay the belligerent countries before settling its debts with neutral nations. Venezuela fulfilled its obligations in 1907.

Venice Italian seaport (pop. 377,600), capital of Venezia province. Venice was first settled (5th cent. AD) by people fleeing from invasions from the north. It elected its first doge in 697, and by the 10th cent., it began its expansion as a commercial and cultural center. It played a major role in the Fourth Crusade, from which it gained numerous colonial holdings in the eastern Mediterranean, among them Crete and the Ionian Islands. Venice became the leading Italian city after its defeat of its rival, Genoa (1381). An uprising in Venice (1310) led to the rule of the Council of Ten (q.v.), which governed Venice until 1797. The rich and powerful Venetian republic in the 15th cent. dominated trade with the East and thus maintained contact between Europe and Asia. With the discovery of the New World and the expansion of the Ottoman Empire (which warred against Venice), Venetian power gradually declined in the 16th and 17th cents. In 1797 the republic of Venice fell and the region passed to Austrian control. Venice became part of Napoleon's kingdom of Venice (1805–15), returned to Austrian control, and became part of Italy (1866) at the end of the Seven Weeks' War between Austria and Prussia.

Venizelos, Eleutherios 1864–1936. Greek statesman. He led the movement in Crete for union with Greece. As Greek prime minister (1910–15, 1917–20) he greatly expanded Greek territory during the Balkan Wars and WW I.

Venus Roman goddess, originally associated with gardens and vegetation. She was later identified with Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of love.

Veracruz Incident US occupation of Vera Cruz, Mexico (Apr.–Nov., 1914) during the Mexican Revolution. The action was prompted by Mexican seizure of a US ship in Tampico Harbor and led to the fall of V. Huerta.

Vercingetorix d. 46 BC. Chieftain of the Arverni tribe in Gaul. He led a great revolt against the Romans (52 BC), was defeated by J. Caesar, exhibited in Rome, and executed.

Verdi, Giuseppe 1813–1901. Italian composer, considered the greatest Italian composer of opera in the 19th cent. and perhaps of all time. Among his greatest operas are Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, and La Traviata.

Verdun, Battle of Battle (Feb.-Dec., 1916) fought by French and German forces during WW I for control of the strategic town of Verdun, in northeastern France. The battle began (Feb. 21) when German forces under Crown Prince Wilhelm opened a massive artillery bombardment of French positions around Verdun. The German offensive was calculated to defeat the French army through sheer attrition, as the French were sure to hold Verdun at all costs. After initial German advances, French general H. Pétain assumed command of the Verdun salient, and reinforcements were sent. Through bitter fighting, the Germans continued to advance in the sector but were unable to capture Verdun. Meanwhile the French and British opened the Battle of the Somme (July 1), thus relieving some of the pressure on Verdun. By July 11, the German offensive ground to a halt. The French launched a major counteroffensive (Oct. 24) and by Dec. had regained most of the territory they had lost. The Germans had been unable to crush the French or to break the stalemate on the Western Front. German losses were some 330,000 to French casualties of some 350,000.

Verdun, Treaty of Treaty (843) by which the Carolingian Empire was divided among the three sons and heirs of Emperor Louis I (the Pious). After the death of Louis I (840), the empire was rent by warfare among his sons Louis the German, Charles II (the Bald), and Lothair I. By the treaty, Lothair retained the title of emperor and received much of Italy, Alsace-Lorraine, Burgundy, and the Low Countries. This narrow, middle part of the empire, was called Lotharingia (or Francia Media). Louis the German received territory east of the Rhine, which formed the basis for modern Germany. Charles II received the western territory of the empire, which evolved into modern France.

Vereeniging, Peace of Treaty (May 31, 1902) between Great Britain and the Boers ending the Boer War. By its terms, the Transvaal and the Orange Free State accepted British sovereignty and became crown colonies. Britain paid an indemnity for property destroyed and agreed to establish responsible government as soon as possible.

Vergara, Convention of See Convention of Vergara

Vergennes, Charles Gravier, comte de 1717–87. French statesman. Appointed foreign minister (1774) by King Louis XVI, he formed the alliance between France and the American colonists during the American Revolution. He negotiated the Treaty of Paris (1783).

Vergil ⟨Virgil⟩ 70–19 BC. Greatest of Latin poets. Born near Mantua, he became a member of the literary circle at the court of Augustus. His works the Bucolics, or Eclogues, and Georgics established him as the foremost poet of his age. His major work, however, remains the Aeneid.

Verlaine, Paul 1844–96. French poet, one of the leading poets of the late 19th cent. His works anticipated the poetry of the symbolists.

Vermeer, Jan ⟨Vermeer, Johannes⟩ 1632–75. Dutch painter of the baroque period, noted for his landscapes and domestic interiors. He was a master of light and color and one of the giants of 17th-cent. Dutch painting, though he completed only about 35 paintings. They include Girl Asleep, Young Woman with a Water Jug, The Procuress, and Soldier and Laughing Girl.

Vermeer, Johannes See Vermeer, Jan

Vermont Northeastern US state (pop. 511,500), the 14th state. Its capital is Montpelier. The area was first explored by S. Champlain (1609), who sailed along the lake named after him. The French made several attempts at settlement (17th–18th cents.), but the first permanent settlement was the British Fort Dummer, near present-day Brattleboro, in 1724. The region was claimed by New Hampshire and New York. New Hampshire's issuance of the New Hampshire Grants (q.v.) led to conflicts between the two colonies, and E. Allen formed the Green Mountain Boys to resist New York authority. The Green Mountain Boys played a significant role during the American Revolution, notably at the battles of Ticonderoga and Bennington (qq.v.). Vermont declared itself an independent state (1777) but was not admitted into the Union until 1791. It took an active role in support of the Union during the American Civil War and was the scene of the St. Albans Raid (1864).

Verne, Jules 1828–1905. French novelist. His extrapolations of contemporary science in fiction had great influence in the development of modern science fiction. Among his works is the classic Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.

Verona Italian city (pop. 264,100), capital of Verona province in northeastern Italy. Ruled by Rome from 89 BC, it was overrun by the Goths (5th–6th cents. AD). Verona reached its zenith (1260–1387) under the rule of the della Scala family but soon declined. It eventually passed into the control of Venice, then (1797) passed to Austria. It became part of the kingdom of Italy (1866) after the Austro-Prussian War.

Verona, Congress of See Congress of Verona

Veronesa, Paolo 1528–88. Italian painter, considered one of the greatest decorative artists of the Venetian school. His works are noted for their brilliant use of color.

Verrazano, Giovanni da See New York

Versailles, Palace of French royal palace at Versailles, southeast of Paris. Begun (17th cent.) under French king Louis XIV, it was the residence of the French kings (1682–1790) and was the site of the early events of the French Revolution. Here Wilhelm I was proclaimed emperor of Germany (1871) and here were signed the treaties of Versailles (1871, 1919).

Versailles, Treaty of Preliminary treaty (1871) ending the Franco-Prussian War, signed at Versailles, France. Negotiators were O. von Bismarck and A. Thiers. France ceded Alsace-Lorraine and agreed to an indemnity of five billion francs.

Versailles, Treaty of Treaty (June 28, 1919) ending WW I. Its provisions, the result of the Paris Peace Conference, were primarily drawn up by US president W. Wilson, British prime minister D. Lloyd-George, French premier G. Clemenceau, and Italian prime minister V. Orlando. Germany was not consulted. The treaty also made provision for establishment of the League of Nations. Germany's colonies became mandates of the League of Nations, and Alsace-Lorraine was returned to France. In addition, Germany was forced to accept responsibility for the war, agreed to huge reparations payment and surrender of equipment, limited its army to 100,000 troops, relinquished vast land holdings to Poland (including the Polish Corridor, q.v.), and agreed to demilitarization of the Rhineland. The US did not ratify the treaty, but its provisions were implemented and helped to cause the early rise of A. Hitler and Nazism. Hitler subsequently broke the treaty's provisions.

Verucchio, Malatesta da See Malatesta

Verus, Lucius Aurelius ⟨Commodus, Lucius Ceionius⟩ AD 130–169. Roman emperor (AD 161–169), coruler with M. Aurelius. Sent to campaign in Parthia (AD 162–165), he spent most of his time in Antioch. He was the first person known to share equally the imperial power.

Vervins, Treaty of Treaty (May 2, 1598) between France and Spain. It helped end the French Wars of Religion by providing for the withdrawal of Spanish support to the Catholic League in France.

Verwoerd, Hendrik Frensch 1901–66. South African political leader. As prime minister of South Africa (1958–66) he led the establishment of apartheid, or separation of the races, in his country.

Vesalius, Andreas 1514–64. Belgian physician whose careful studies of anatomy, made from human cadavers, radically advanced the science of biology and practice of medicine.

Vespasian ⟨Titus Flavius Vespasianus⟩ AD 9–79. Roman emperor (AD 69–79), successor to Vitellius. He restored order to the empire, set an example of simple living, built the Colosseum, and founded the Flavian dynasty.

Vespucci, Amerigo 1454–1512. Italian navigator. He explored the east coast of South America, which he considered to be a new continent. The name "America" is derived from his name.

Vestal Ancient Roman priestess who tended the perpetual fires in the Temple of Vesta, goddess of the hearth. The vestal virgins were chosen from prominent Roman families and were bound by a vow of chastity. They enjoyed great privileges and influence in Roman life.

Veterans of Foreign Wars American veterans' association founded (1899) after the Spanish-American War and chartered by Congress (1936). It is one of the largest veterans' organizations in the US.

veto Power of the executive to invalidate acts by the legislature. Roman tribunes could veto acts of the Roman Senate. In the US, the president may veto acts of Congress, but Congress can override the veto by a two-thirds vote.

viceroy Governor of a province, territory, country by authority of a king or sovereign. Rulers of Spanish territories in the Americas were viceroys, and British viceroys governed Ireland and British India.

Vichy French government headed by Marshal H. Pétain, established during WW II after the French-German armistice (June, 1940). It controlled that part of France not occupied by Germany, and its policies were generally favorable to Germany. The Vichy government lost importance after German occupation (1942) of all France but continued to exist until 1944.

Vicksburg campaign Successful Union campaign (Nov., 1862–July, 1863) to capture Vicksburg, Mississippi, during the American Civil War. Union capture of the city, last Confederate stronghold on the Mississippi, would effectively have divided the Confederacy in two. Confederate forces under Gen. John C. Pemberton (1814–81) fortified the city and for months successfully repelled Union assaults. In Apr. and May, 1863, Union Gen. U. Grant executed a series of maneuvers by which his forces seized key positions south of the city, crossed the Mississippi, and moved east to halt the advance of Gen. J. Johnston, who had sought to link up with Pemberton's forces. Pemberton, who had moved out of Vicksburg to meet Johnston, was forced back to Vicksburg. Grant began a six-week siege that culminated (July 4, 1863) in Pemberton's surrender of Vicksburg. Union losses were about 10,000 to Confederate losses of some 9,000 casualties and 30,000 prisoners. The campaign was a major defeat for the Confederacy and marked Grant's ascendency as the Union's leading commander.

Vico, Giovanni Battista 1668–1744. Italian philosopher and historian. He advanced a theory of the cyclical and evolutionary nature of history and urged scientific methods in historical investigation.

Victor Emmanuel I 1759–1824. King of Sardinia (1802–21), successor to his brother Charles Emmanuel IV. He regained a number of Italian territories after the fall of Napoleon, but his autocratic rule led to an uprising and his abdication (1821).

Victor Emmanuel II 1820–78. King of Sardinia (1849–61) and first king of a united Italy (1861–78). As king of Sardinia he appointed Count C. Cavour prime minister and encouraged the efforts of G. Garibaldi. (See Italy [1849–78].)

Victor Emmanuel III 1869–1947. Italian king (1900–46), successor to his father, Humbert I. He brought Italy into WW I on the side of the Allies. He refused to oppose the rise of Fascism and supported the government of B. Mussolini.

Victoria See Nike

Victoria 1819–1901. Queen of Great Britain and Ireland (1837–1901) and empress of India (1876–1901). Daughter of Edward, duke of Kent, she succeeded her uncle William IV to the English throne, but she was prevented by the Salic law from succeeding to the Hanoverian throne, thus separating the two crowns. Victoria married (1840) her first cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, to whom she bore nine children, among them the future Edward VII. Her prime ministers included W. Melbourne, R. Peel, H. Palmerston, B. Disraeli, and W. Gladstone. During her reign, the British Empire reached its peak. Britain established its rule in India, struggled with the question of Home Rule in Ireland, remained neutral during the American Civil War, and fought the Crimean War. Victoria's strict personal moral values greatly enhanced the prestige of the monarchy and gained her enormous popularity. She put her stamp on an entire era of English history, which came to be known as the Victorian Age.

Victorian style Neo-Gothic style of architecture revived in Britain during the reign of Queen Victoria. It began with careful imitation of the Gothic style and gradually developed into a less restricted form. The outstanding buildings designed in the style include the Houses of Parliament and the Manchester Town Hall.

Vidocq, Eugène François 1775–1857. French detective who organized the Police de Sûreté, or security police, during the rule of Napoleon.

Vienna Capital city (pop. 1,592,800) of Austria. Founded by the Celts, it became a Roman military center (1st cent. BC). Vienna was conquered by various groups in subsequent centuries, among them the Franks and Magyars. It was fortified (13th cent.) by Ottocar II and became (1278) the official residence of the Hapsburg rulers. The Hapsburgs held Vienna until 1918, and during their rule the city became one of the leading places of cultural and commercial activity in Europe. The acknowledged music center of Europe, it was the birthplace of L. Beethoven and W. Mozart. After WW I, Vienna became capital of the republic of Austria. Austria was annexed by Germany in 1938, and Vienna remained in German control until after WW II. Vienna and Austria were divided by the Allies into zones of occupation after the war but were reunited in 1955.

Vienna, Congress of See Congress of Vienna

Vienna, Peace of Treaty (June 23, 1606) that ended the rebellion against the Hapsburgs led by the Hungarian leader S. Bocskay. It secured religious toleration for the Hungarian Protestants within the Austrian Empire.

Vienna, treaties of 1. Treaty (Nov. 18, 1738) ending the War of the Polish Succession (q.v.). 2. See Peace of Schönbrunn. 3. Treaty (Oct. 30, 1864) by which Denmark ceded Schleswig, Holstein, and Lauenburg to Austria and Prussia. 4. Treaty (Oct. 3, 1866) between Austria and Italy following the Seven Weeks' War (1866). By its terms Austria ceded Venetia to Italy.

Vienne, Council of Fifteenth ecumenical council of the Catholic church (1311–12), at Vienne, France. Convened by Pope Clement V, it dissolved the order of the Knights Templar and condemned the Beghards.

Vientiane Administrative capital (pop 176,600) and largest city of Laos. Capital of a Laotian kingdom from 1707, it passed under French rule (1893), becoming the capital of the French Laos protectorate (1899–1953).

Vieta, François See Viete, François

Vietcong ⟨Viet-Nam Cong-San⟩ Communist guerrilla forces that fought in South Vietnam (1954–75) to overthrow the government of South Vietnam and reunify Vietnam under Communist rule. The Vietcong, aided by men and matériel from the North, successfully fought a long and bloody guerrilla campaign against the army of the Republic of South Vietnam and later against the US armed forces sent to aid the South Vietnamese. They formed (1960) the National Liberation Front (q.v.), which in turn joined with other groups to form the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG). The PRG took part in the cease-fire negotiations in Paris (1973) but, after US withdrawal from Vietnam, the Vietcong and North Vietnamese regular forces completed the conquest of South Vietnam (1975).

Viète, François ⟨Vieta, ~⟩ 1540–1603. French mathematician noted for his contributions to the development of modern algebra.

Vietminh Popular name for Viet Nam Doc Lap Dong Minh, a coalition of Communist and nationalist groups that fought for Vietnamese independence from French rule. It was formed and led by Ho Chi Minh.

Vietnam Socialist republic located in Southeast Asia. Its capital is Hanoi. Vietnam's history prior to French occupation in the 19th cent. was that of its three kingdoms: Tonkin, in northern Vietnam; Annam, in central Vietnam; and Cochin China in southern Vietnam. The three kingdoms became part of French Indochina (1887). Occupied during WW II by the Japanese, Vietnam was established as an independent state in 1945. Subsequent attempts by the French to regain authority in the region led to the French Indochina War (1946–54) and division of the country into the Democratic Republic of Vietnam in the north and the Republic of Vietnam in the south. The country was reunited under Communist rule in 1976 after the long and bloody Vietnam War (q.v.). Key dates in the history of Vietnam include:

1535 Region first visited by Portuguese; Vietnam then divided into kingdoms of Tonkin, Annam and Cochin China.

1859 Saigon occupied by the French.

1867 France made Cochin China a colony.

1883–85 Sino-French War ended in French control of Vietnam and other Indochina domains.

1884 Annam and Tonkin became French protectorates.

1887 French holdings in Vietnam joined with Cambodia to form French Indochina.

1925–45 Bao Dai reigned as last emperor of Vietnam under French rule.

1940–45 Japanese seized power in Vietnam during WW II.

1945 Japanese made Emperor Bao Dai head of new state of Vietnam (Mar.); Vietnam included Tonkin (in the north), Annam (in central Vietnam), and Cochin China (in the south).

1945 Vietnam occupied by Allied forces at end of WW II; Nationalist Chinese held north and British occupied south.

1945 Ho Chi Minh proclaimed Democratic Republic of Vietnam on withdrawal of Japanese occupation army after WW II.

1946 France reached accord (Mar.) with Ho Chi Minh, recognizing Vietnamese independence within the French Union.

1946 France sought to establish separate state of Cochin China in the south; open warfare erupted in late 1946, marking the beginning of the French Indochina War.

1946–54 French Indochina War; French colonial forces ultimately defeated after protracted struggle with Vietnamese Communists and Nationalists.

1951 Lao-Dong founded by Ho Chi Minh; it replaced the Viet Minh as leading party of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

1954 Viet Minh victorious over French (May 5) at Dienbienphu; marked end of French military power in Vietnam.

1954 Geneva Conference divided Vietnam in two along 17th parallel; North Vietnam to be governed by Communists under Ho Chi Minh, south to be governed by Bao Dai regime; elections to be held (July, 1956) to reunify the country.

1955 Bao Dai government removed (Oct.) by referendum; Ngo Dinh Diem made president of new Republic of South Vietnam (proclaimed Oct. 26).

1955–63 Diem ruled as president; instituted increasingly repressive policies to restore order; promoted further unrest and significant gains in rural areas by Vietcong; overthrown and killed (Nov. 1, 1963).

1956 Diem government refused to take part in scheduled elections for reunification of Vietnam.

1960–75 Vietnam War; Vietnam ravaged and ultimately reunited under Communists.

1963 Diem overthrown in military coup; period of great political instability followed (1963–65).

1964 North Vietnamese army began infiltration of South Vietnam; Gulf of Tonkin incident (Aug.), alleged attack on US destroyers by North Vietnamese torpedo boats, led to stepped-up US military intervention in Vietnam War.

1965 Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu became head of South Vietnamese government; Nguyen Cao Ky made prime minister.

1967 New constitution promulgated in South Vietnam (Mar.); Thieu elected president and Ky vice-president in elections (Sept.).

1968 Communists staged massive assault in Tet Offensive, a turning point in the Vietnam War.

1969 Phased withdrawal of US forces began; massive bombing continued.

1969 Ho Chi Minh died (Sept. 3); Ton Duc Thang became president of North Vietnam.

1972 South Vietnamese president Thieu declared martial law (May 10) in the face of Communist advances.

1973 Peace settlement signed (Jan. 27); provided for cessation of all hostilities and withdrawal of all US forces.

1974 Fighting between the South Vietnamese and North Vietnamese intensified in the Central Highlands (Mar.).

1975 North Vietnamese staged massive attack into South Vietnam (Jan.), culminating in toppling of South Vietnamese government.

1975 Evacuation of Americans begun (Apr. 4).

1975 President Thieu resigned (Apr. 21) amid unrest caused by Communist advances in south.

1975 Last Americans evacuated from South Vietnam (Apr. 29); South Vietnam surrendered to Communists (Apr. 30).

1976 North and south formally reunified (July 2).

1977 Vietnam admitted to UN.

FROM 1978 Mass emigration of ethnic Chinese began as Vietnamese government adopted policy to drive them out; China, after accepting hundreds of thousands of refugees, refused to accept more; Vietnamese "boat people" then tried to escape by sea to other Southeast Asian countries.

1978 Treaty of friendship signed with the Soviets.

1978–80 Vietnam invaded Cambodia; overthrew harsh regime of Pol Pot.

1979 China invaded Vietnam's northern border region (Feb. 17–Mar. 15); claimed action was punishment for Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia; withdrew from region.

1981 Truong Chinh became president of Vietnam.

Viet-Nam Cong-San See Vietcong

Vietnamization US policy during the Vietnam War. Implemented by the Nixon administration (early 1970s), it called for a gradual increase in South Vietnamese participation in the war. US military involvement was to be reduced at the same time, until the South Vietnamese took over all fighting.

Vietnam War War fought (1960–75) by Communist and non-Communist forces for control of South Vietnam. It ended in a Communist victory (and in the reunification of North and South Vietnam), despite heavy involvement by US forces (1965–73). The Vietnam War was an outgrowth of the earlier Indochina War (q.v.). At the end of that war, Vietnam was divided into Communist North Vietnam and non-Communist South Vietnam by the Geneva accords of 1954. Elections on the question of reunification were to be held in 1956, but South Vietnamese dictator Diem refused to hold them. As a result, a Communist insurrection broke out in 1957. At the same time, non-Communist opposition to the Diem regime was mounting. Rampant corruption, government repression and persecutions, and favoritism shown Vietnamese Catholics over the majority Buddhists, all contributed to sentiment for rebellion against Diem. Meanwhile, US aid flowed into South Vietnam to support the Diem regime. US involvement between 1954 and 1960, however, was confined to financial aid, military equipment, and a few hundred military advisers. In 1960 guerrilla activity increased markedly and the Communist-dominated National Liberation Front (NLF) was formed by Communist and non-Communist groups in South Vietnam. Open warfare against the South Vietnamese government began. Heavy US involvement in the war started in 1965 and by 1968 over a half million American troops were in Vietnam. In the years of bloody fighting, US troops managed to forestall the collapse of the South Vietnamese government, but they were unable to break the strength of the Vietcong forces (aided by North Vietnam, which was in turn supplied by the USSR). The US government, which had lost considerable prestige both at home and abroad because of US involvement in Vietnam, began withdrawing troops in 1969–70, while at the same time attempting to negotiate a settlement. In 1973 a peace treaty was signed and the last US troops were withdrawn. By 1974, the fighting between Communists and South Vietnamese government forces had increased and in 1975 the Communists mounted their final offensive. South Vietnam surrendered (Apr. 30, 1975), ending the war and setting the stage for reunification of Vietnam. Key events in the history of the Vietnam War include:

1960 Guerrilla forces overran a number of outposts (Jan.) maintained by Vietnamese army regulars (ARVN); marked rise of heavy guerrilla activity in South Vietnam.

1960 National Liberation Front (NLF) formed (Dec. 19–20); composed of both Communists and non-Communists and controlled by Communists; called for overthrow of Diem and reunification with north; thereafter guerrilla activity increased significantly and open war against Diem regime began.

1961 Vietcong strength reached an estimated 15,000; rapid growth in numbers continued in following years.

1961 South Vietnam signed military and economic aid treaty with US.

1961 Diem proclaimed a state of emergency (Oct.) as his political support dwindled.

1961 US president J. F. Kennedy reasserted US commitment to Diem regime (Dec.); sent 1,500 more advisers; US helicopter units began direct involvement in fighting to support South Vietnamese.

1962 US Military Assistance Command formed; US forces in Vietnam reached 10,000 by year's end.

1962 Vietcong continued to make gains in South Vietnam despite increased US assistance; US strategy of "strategic hamlets" failed; Diem failed to enact promised reforms (especially badly needed land reforms) or to end corruption.

1963 Battle of Ap Bac (Jan. 2) in Mekong Delta; 200 Vietcong repulsed attack by 2,000 well-equipped ARVN soldiers.

1963 Buddhists, demonstrating in Hue against persecution by the Diem regime, fired on by police (May 8); seven Buddhists subsequently resorted to protest by self-immolation (from June 11); martial law proclaimed by Diem (Aug. 21).

1963 Diem overthrown and killed in military coup (Nov. 1); period of prolonged political crisis (1963–65) as nine coups were staged and Vietcong guerrillas rapidly expanded their control in South Vietnam.

1963 US troop levels reached 17,000; Vietcong strength put at about 30,000.

1964 US president Johnson reasserted US commitment to South Vietnam (Jan. 1).

1964–68 Gen. W. Westmoreland in command of US troops in Vietnam.

1964 Terrorist bombs exploded (Aug., Dec.) in Saigon hotels where US troops were quartered.

1964 Gulf of Tonkin Incident; US destroyers reported attacks (Aug. 2, 4) by North Vietnamese patrol boats in the Gulf of Tonkin; US bombed North Vietnamese bases.

1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution passed (Aug. 7) by US Congress; authorized Pres. Johnson to take all steps necessary to protect US forces and prevent further attacks; became important justification for US involvement in war.

1964 Bien Hoa, US air base outside Saigon, attacked by Vietcong (Nov. 1).

1965 US bombing of North Vietnam began (Feb.); attacks on US forces at Pleiku and Quinhon (Feb. 7, 10) first prompted retaliatory bombings of North; Pres. Johnson ordered regular bombing of North Vietnam (Feb. 28) to force negotiations.

1965 First US combat troops sent to Vietnam; 3,500 US Marines landed at Da Nang (Mar. 7–9); Vietcong close to taking complete control of the South as the political crisis continued.

1965 First North Vietnamese regulars (about 400–500 troops) infiltrated into South Vietnam (March–April); US bombing (from 1965) of Ho Chi-minh Trail, major Communist supply line to south, failed to halt flow of men and matériel into South.

1965 Nguyen Cao Ky, military strong man, took control of the government (June); his military dictatorship restored order through harsh repressive measures; broke power of Buddhist resistance (by 1966) and arrested political opponents.

1965 US troops in first major offensive against Vietcong (June 28); in subsequent months began taking over major share of the fighting from the ineffective ARVN regulars.

1965 US troop levels reached 175,000 (Dec.); Vietcong (plus North Vietnamese regulars) reached about 150,000.

1966 Heavy bombing raids conducted throughout North Vietnam; Hanoi and Haiphong bombed for first time (June).

1966 Meeting in Honolulu, Hawaii, between Pres. Johnson, Gen. Ky, and leaders of other countries that sent troops to South Vietnam (including Australia, New Zealand, and South Korea.

1967 New South Vietnamese constitution (Mar.).

1967 Invasion of southern parts of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) between North and South Vietnam by US and ARVN troops (May).

1967 Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu elected (Sept.) president, Ky elected vice-president; repressive measures continued.

1968 US troop strength reached about 510,000; Vietcong and North Vietnamese regulars numbered about 230,000.

1968 Siege at Khesanh (Jan.–Apr.); 6,000 US Marines came under heavy attack.

1968 Tet Offensive (Jan. 30–Feb. 25); Vietcong and North Vietnamese launched surprise attacks on more than 100 cities in South Vietnam, including Saigon; the Communists suffered heavy losses; a major propaganda victory for Communists, it forced US president Johnson to halt escalation in Vietnam and begin peace negotiations.

1968 My Lai Massacre (Mar. 16).

1968 Pres. Johnson announced (Mar.) he would not seek reelection as antiwar movement in US reached major proportions.

1968 Communists launched major offensive, hitting points throughout South Vietnam (May 5–13); Saigon under heavy attack.

1968 Paris Peace negotiations began between US and North Vietnam (May 13).

1968 Vietcong and South Vietnam joined Paris Peace talks after UN halted bombing of the north (Nov.).

1969 R. Nixon took office as US president; US began gradual withdrawal of troops from Vietnam; bombing of north continued as peace talks dragged on; US widened war (1970) to Cambodia and Laos.

1970 US carried out bombing raids inside Cambodia (Feb. 11).

1970 Six-month lull in fighting broken by Communist offensive in south (Apr. 1).

1970 US completed withdrawal of 115,000 troops (Apr.); announced plan to withdraw 150,000 more troops by 1971.

1970 South Vietnamese offensive in Cambodia begun with US support (Apr. 29).

1970 Communist offensive near DMZ successfully repulsed (May 8).

1970 Combined US-South Vietnamese naval force moved up Mekong into Cambodia (May).

1970 US bombers hit targets in North Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos (Nov.).

1970 US commando raid (Nov. 21) in North Vietnam unsuccessfully attempted to free US POWs.

1971 South Vietnamese troops, backed by US air support, invaded Laos (Jan. 30).

1971 Fire Base 6 in Central Highlands under siege by Communist forces (Apr.).

1971 DMZ defenses taken over by South Vietnamese (July).

1971 Australian and New Zealand forces withdrawn by year's end.

1971 North Vietnamese offensive along Cambodian border (Sept. 26).

1971 South Vietnamese offensive in eastern Cambodia (Nov.–Dec.).

1972 New US troop withdrawals announced (Jan. 13); US strength to be reduced to 69,000 by May 1.

1972 North Vietnamese offensive (Mar.) across DMZ began; South Vietnamese abandoned northern Quang Tri Province (Apr. 2).

1972 North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam cut highway from An Loc to Saigon (Apr. 5).

1972 Central Highlands capital of Hoai An overrun by Communist forces (Apr. 19).

1972 Mining of North Vietnamese ports ordered by US Pres. Nixon (May).

1972 Gen. Frederick C. Weyand replaced Gen. Creighton Abrams as commander of US forces in Vietnam (June).

1972 Heavy US bombing raids over the north marked withdrawal of last US combat troops from South Vietnam (Aug.).

1972 Que Son captured by Communists (Aug. 19).

1972 Quang Tri recaptured by South Vietnamese (Sept. 15).

1972 Heavy bombing of North Vietnam ordered by Pres. Nixon (Dec. 15–30); bombing halted as stalled peace talks resumed.

1973 Peace settlement signed (Jan. 27); provided for end to hostilities and withdrawal of all US forces.

1973 International observers stationed in South Vietnam to monitor truce (Feb. 5).

1974 Heavy fighting between South Vietnamese and Communist forces in the Central Highlands (Mar.).

1975 Final North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam began (Jan.).

1975 Evacuation of American personnel in South Vietnam began (Apr. 4).

1975 Pres. Thieu forced to resign (Apr. 21) as Communists advanced in South Vietnam.

1975 Last Americans evacuated from South Vietnam (Apr. 29).

1975 South Vietnam surrendered to Communist forces (Apr. 30), ending the war; formal reunification of North and South Vietnam effected (July 2, 1976).

Vietnam Workers' party See Lao-Dong

vigilantes American frontiersmen who were members of illegal or extralegal "vigilance committees" formed to establish law in areas where regular judicial systems were lacking or appeared to be inadequate.

Vigilius d. 555. Pope (537–555). He became embroiled in the political and religious struggles over Monophysitism. His policies threatened the canons of the Council of Chalcedon and were bitterly opposed in the West.

Vignoles, Etienne de See La Hire

Vigny, Alfred Victor, comte de 1797–1863. French poet, dramatist, and novelist, one of France's leading Romantic writers.

Vikings Norse raiders and adventurers who sailed from their homelands in Scandinavia to attack and pillage European coastal settlements (9th–11th cents.). (See Norsemen.)

Vikramaditya See Chandragupta II

Villa, Francisco ⟨Pancho Villa⟩ ⟨Arango, Doroteo⟩ 1877?–1923. Mexican bandit and revolutionary, a leading figure in the revolts against P. Díaz (1910–11) and V. Huerta (1913–14). Villa's raid on Columbus, New Mexico (Mar. 9, 1916) led to the US punitive expedition into Mexico by Gen. J. Pershing.

Villa, Pancho See Villa, Francisco

Villa-Lobos, Heitor 1887–1959. Brazilian composer considered the leading Latin composer of his day. His works are noted for their merging of classical influences with Brazilian folk music.

Villard, Henry ⟨Hilgard, Ferdinand Heinrich Gustav⟩ 1835–1900. American journalist and financier. A leading figure in rail transportation in the Pacific Northwest, he formed (1889) the Edison General Electric Company, serving as its president until 1893.

Villars, Claude Louis Hector, duc de 1653–1734. French soldier and marshal of France. He distinguished himself in the War of the Spanish Succession, negotiated the Treaty of Rastatt (1714), and was supreme commander in the War of the Polish Succession.

Villehardouin, Geoffroi de *c*1160–*c*1213. French historian and crusader who chronicled the Fourth Crusade in his Conquête de Constantinople. He is considered the first French historian.

Villehardouin, Geoffroi I d. 1218. French crusader and adventurer. Nephew of G. Villehardouin, he conquered part of the Peloponnesus, in Greece, and there established a kingdom that was ruled by his family from 1210 to 1278.

villeinage Aspect of the feudal system by which a villein, or serf, was bound to the land and obliged to perform services to the lord in return for protection and land tenure. The villein was distinguished from the freeholder.

Villèle, Jean Baptiste Séraphin Joseph, comte de 1773–1854. French politician, leader of the French Ultraroyalist faction. As premier (1822–28) he followed conservative policies and stabilized finances.

Villeneuve, Pierre Charles Jean Baptiste Silvestre de 1763–1806. French admiral. He commanded the French fleet and was defeated at the Battle of Trafalgar (1805).

Villeroi, François, duc de 1644–1730. French courtier and marshal of France. A favorite of Louis XIV, he held high military posts in Italy and Flanders but was defeated at the Battle of Ramillies (1706) during the War of the Spanish Succession.

Villiers, George See Tardieu, André

Villiers, George William Frederick, 4th earl of Clarendon 1800–70. British statesman, often called the "Great Lord Clarendon." He was three times foreign secretary (1853–58, 1865–66, 1868–70), the first time during the Crimean War (1853–56). During his third term, he helped pave the way for settlement of the Alabama claims.

Villon, François 1431–1463? One of the greatest French lyric poets. Continually involved in criminal activity, he spent much time in prison and was banished from Paris in 1463.

Vilna dispute See Vilnius dispute

Vilnius dispute ⟨Vilna dispute⟩ Conflict between Poland and Lithuania over possession of the city of Vilnius. After WW I, Vilnius was ceded to Lithuania, but during the Russian-Polish War of 1920, it was captured (Sept. 9) by Polish forces, and subsequently was annexed by Poland. Occupied by Russian troops (1939), the city was restored to the Lithuanian SSR in 1944.

Vincent de Paul, Saint 1581?–1660. French priest known for his charitable work. He founded the Congregation of the Mission (1625), known as Lazarists or Vincentians, as well as other charitable institutions.

Vincent of Beauvais *c*1190–*c*1264. French Dominican priest. He wrote the first three volumes of the Speculum majus, an encyclopedic summary of all knowledge that remained influential for centuries.

Vinci, Leonardo da See Leonardo da Vinci

Vinland ⟨Wineland⟩ Region of North America discovered and named by Leif Ericsson in the 11th cent. Its exact location is not known.

Vinson, Frederick Moore 1890–1953. American jurist, 13th chief justice of the Supreme Court (1946–53).

Viollet-le-Duc, Eugène Emmanuel 1814–79. French architect and writer, a leader in the Gothic revival movement in France. He restored many medieval structures, including Notre Dame de Paris. His writings stressed the value of function in design.

Virchow, Rudolf 1821–1902. German pathologist. He contributed to many fields of medical science but is known best as a founder of cellular pathology.

Virgil See Vergil

Virginia Eastern US state (pop. 5,346,300), the 10th state. Its capital is Richmond. The first settlement in Virginia (1587) was backed by Sir W. Raleigh and located on Roanoke Island. The first successful colony was established (1607) at Jamestown. Virginia colony established (1619) the first representative assembly (House of Burgesses) in the New World. The colony thrived as a center of the tobacco trade, but corruption and inability of the governor, W. Berkeley, to protect the colonists from Indian attack led to Bacon's Rebellion (q.v.) in 1676. Importation of slaves led to greater prosperity in the colony and the rise of a wealthy class.

Virginia was a leading force in resistance to British authority and played a major role in the American Revolution, which ended with the Yorktown campaign (q.v.). Virginia was admitted to the Union (1788) and seceded (1861) at the opening of the American Civil War. The northwestern portion of the state broke away (1863) to form West Virginia. Virginia was the scene of several major engagements, notably the first and second battles of Bull Run, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, and the Wilderness campaign. It was readmitted to the US in 1870.

Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions Resolutions passed (Nov., 1798) by the Kentucky legislature and (Dec., 1798) the Virginia legislature. Written by T. Jefferson and J. Madison respectively, they defended states' rights and were passed in protest against the Alien and Sedition Acts of the Adams administration. They contributed to the more radical theory of Nullification.

Virginia and New Jersey Plans In US history, proposed plans for the structure of government offered at the Constitutional Convention (q.v.) in 1787. The Virginia Plan, advanced by Edmund Randolph, would have created a strong federal government with a bicameral legislature. The lower house was to be elected by popular vote and would select members of the upper house. The two houses would elect the head of state. The New Jersey Plan, put forward by William Paterson, favored small states and rejected the provision for apportionment by population in both houses. The Connecticut Compromise (adopted July 16) resolved these differences by adopting proportional representation in the lower house and by giving each state an equal vote in the upper house.

Virginia Company 1. Virginia Company of London. Joint-stock company chartered (1606) by English king James I for the purpose of colonizing the New World. The company established the first permanent English settlement in Virginia at Jamestown (1607) and administered it until its charter was revoked in 1624. 2. Virginia Company of Plymouth. Joint-stock company established (1606) by English king James I. It was reorganized (1620) as the Council of New England and established Plymouth colony (1620).

Virginia Convention American Revolutionary body that met in Virginia (1775, 1776). At the first of these meetings Patrick Henry delivered his "give me liberty or give me death" speech, and at the second he was involved with George Mason in drafting the Virginia Declaration of Rights. This served as a model for the Bill of Rights in the US Constitution.

Virgin Islands Group of islands in the West Indies including the US Virgin Islands (pop. 95,000), officially the Territory of the Virgin Islands of the United States; and the British Virgin Islands (pop. 10,500). The islands were first discovered (1493) by C. Columbus and subsequently acquired and settled by the English and Danes. The US bought its holdings from Denmark (1917). US Virgin Islanders have held citizenship since 1927, and in 1972 the islands were granted one representative in the US House of Representatives.

Virginius affair Crisis (1873) arising from the Spanish capture of the US ship Virginius, which was caught smuggling guns to Cuba during the Ten Years' War. The executions of 53 people aboard nearly led to war between the US and Spain.

Viriathus See Viriatus

Viriatus ⟨Viriathus⟩ d. 139 BC. Herdsman of Lusitania who successfully led (*c*147–*c*139 BC) a rebellion against Rome. The rebellion ended shortly after his assassination.

Visconti Italian family that ruled Milan from the 13th cent. to 1447. The family derived its name from the title viscount. Its members included Giovanni Visconti (d. 1354), Gian Galeazzo Visconti (1351–1402), and Filippo Maria Visconti (1392–1447).

Vishnu One of the three principal gods of Hinduism. He is revered as the preserver of the world and restorer of the moral order.

Visigoths ⟨West Goths⟩ Germanic tribe, the western branch of the Goths. The Visigoths left the Black Sea region (*c*3d cent. AD) and harassed the Roman Empire's border region of Dacia. The Visigoths were allowed to settle in the empire to escape the Huns, but soon rebelled against its excessive taxation. They crushed Emperor Valens at Adrianople (AD 378) and, under Alaric I, sacked Rome (AD 410). They were allowed to rule large areas of Gaul and Spain, and in AD 475, their leader, Euric, declared independence. His son Alaric II was defeated and killed by Clovis (507). The Visigoths then settled around Toledo, and finally capitulated to the invading Muslims (711).

Vitellius, Aulus AD15–69. Roman emperor (AD 69). Proclaimed emperor at Cologne, he defeated his rival Otho in Italy and ruled briefly before being defeated by Vespasian.

Vitoria, Francisco de 1486–1546. Spanish theologian. He is known best for his ethical opposition to acts of warfare except as matters of defense. He championed the cause of the subjugated peoples of the New World.

Vitruvius ⟨Marcus Vitruvius Pollio⟩ fl. 1st cent. BC. Roman architect, engineer, and writer. He is known for his De architectura, a treatise on classical architecture that played a major role in the Classical revival.

Vivaldi, Antonio *c*1675–1741. Italian composer, one of the greatest composers of the Italian Baroque period. A gifted violinist, he is known especially for his instrumental pieces, notably The Four Seasons. He also composed operas, cantatas, and other works.

vizier In the Ottoman Empire, the most important minister under the sultan. The term was first adopted in the 14th cent. and was applied to provincial, administrative, and military figures.

Vladimir, Saint See Vladimir I

Vladimir I ⟨Saint Vladimir⟩ *c*956–1015. Grand duke of Kiev (*c*980–1015) and first Christian ruler of Russia. He consolidated Kiev and Novgorod into a single realm and ordered the conversion of his people to Greek Orthodox Christianity.

Volga Bulgars See Bulgars, Eastern

Volgograd See Stalingrad

Volksraad ⟨People's Council⟩ Advisory council established (1916) by the Dutch in Indonesia. It evolved into a genuine legislative body, including both European and Asian members, but was dissolved when the Japanese occupied Indonesia (1942).

Volscians Ancient Italic people known from their wars with the Romans. They participated in the Latin revolt against Rome (340–338 BC) but were conquered by the Romans (late 4th cent. BC).

Volstead Act ⟨National Prohibition Act⟩ Law passed (1919) by the US Congress to enforce the 18th Amendment during Prohibition. It was voided with repeal of the 18th Amendment (1933).

Volta, Alessandro, Conte 1745–1827. Italian physicist, inventor of the voltaic pile, the first electric battery. The volt, the unit of electromotive force, is named after him.

Voltaire, François Marie Arouet de 1694–1778. French author and historian, one of the foremost figures of the Enlightenment. Of middle-class origin, he was educated by the Jesuits and soon made his mark as a poet, playwright, and wit. Imprudent talk and witty lampoons against authority brought him first a stay in the Bastille and then exile in England, prompting his Letters Concerning the English, which popularized the ideas of I. Newton and J. Locke. An outstanding historian, he is known best today for such books as Candide and his Philosophical Dictionary, a forceful work supporting the ideas of the Englightenment.

Vo Nguyen Giap 1912–. Vietnamese general and government minister. A Communist, he became commander of the Vietminh (1946) and defeated the French at Dien Bien Phu (1954). He played a strategic role in the Tet Offensive (1968) during the Vietnam War.

voodooism Religious cult in Caribbean areas, particularly Haiti. Dahomeyan in origin (the word is derived from the West African god Vodun), the cult claims to put its adherents in touch with guardian spirits through ritual and magic.

Voroshilov, Kliment Efremovich 1881–1969. Russian military and political leader. As commissar of defense (1925–40) he helped to rebuild the Red Army on the eve of WW II. He also served as president of the Soviet Union (1953–60).

Vorster, Balthazar Johannes 1915–. Prime minister of the Union of South Africa (1966–78).

vorticism Pre-WW I art movement. It sought to simplify forms into an angular, mechanical regularity. Its principal exponents were H. Gaudier-Brzeska and W. Lewis.

Voting Rights Act of 1965 US act passed to ensure the voting rights of blacks previously denied the franchise by literacy and other such tests. The act suspended these tests and empowered federal examiners to certify eligible voters.

Vries, Hugo de 1848–1935. Dutch botanist. He rediscovered the principle of heredity earlier described by G. Mendel and introduced the concept of mutation in plant evolution.

Vuillard, Jean Édouard 1868–1940. French artist, a member of the artistic group known as the Nabis. He is known best for his paintings of domestic interiors.

Vulcan Ancient Roman god of fire, especially destructive fire, as in volcanoes. He later became identified with the Greek god Hephaestus.

Vulgate Latin version of the Bible, completed (AD *c*405) by Saint Jerome and adopted as the standard version by the Roman Catholic church.

W

Wade, Benjamin Franklin 1800–78. US Senator (1851–69). A leader of the Radical Republicans, he was cosponsor of the Wade-Davis Bill (q.v.) for Reconstruction, and opposed the policies of A. Lincoln.

Wade-Davis Bill US bill passed (July 2, 1864) before the end of the Civil War, attempting to regulate Reconstruction policies. It never took effect because Pres. A. Lincoln pocket-vetoed it, but it would have required an oath of allegiance to the Union from a majority of a state's citizens; and states would have been required to abolish slavery, repudiate secession, and disqualify from public office anyone who had served the Confederacy. Its principal sponsor was Ohio Senator B. Wade.

Wafd Egyptian nationalist political party founded in 1918. "Wafd" means "delegation," and the name was applied to the party because its founders, including Sa'd Zaghlul, demanded an Egyptian "delegation" (to work for Egyptian independence) in the post-WW I peace process. Although several times declared illegal, the party was Egypt's major organized political force from 1923, and it clashed frequently with King Fuad and his successor, Farouk. Opposed to Germany, it came to power with British support during WW II and returned to power again in 1950, this time agitating for further revisions of Anglo-Egyptian treaties. The Egyptian revolution (1952) and dissolution of the political parties brought an end to the Wafd.

Wages and Hours Act See Fair Labor Standards Act

Wagner, Richard 1813–83. Famous German composer, whose operas marked the culmination of the German Romantic tradition, and had a great influence on later composers. Among his many works are The Ring of the Nibelungs, Lohengrin, The Flying Dutchman, Tannhäuser, and Tristan und Isolde.

Wagram, Battle of ⟨Deutsch-Wagram, ~⟩ Battle fought on July 5–6, 1809, near the Austrian village of Wagram. Napoleon, with some 154,000 troops, defeated an army of some 158,000 troops under the Archduke Charles. The battle prevented the formation of a new coalition against Napoleon.

Wahabi Muslim reform movement founded by Muhammad ibn Abd al-wabia (18th cent.). It became the religion of the Saudi rulers and is thus an influential sect in modern Saudi Arabia. It is a puritanical movement which advocates living by the Koran and rejects the excesses of luxury and elaborate worship.

Wahunsonacock See Powhatan Confederacy

Waiblings See Welfs

Wainwright, Jonathan Mayhew 1883–1953. American general, who commanded US forces in the Philippines in WW II. Forced to surrender at Corregidor (1942), he and his troops were held as prisoners of war until 1945.

Wairau Affray ⟨Wairau Massacre⟩ Incident (June 17, 1843), in which 22 English settlers were killed by about 90 Maori natives on New Zealand's south island. The settlers had tried to arrest the Maori chiefs for resisting land surveys. The British governor took no action against the Maori but the incident contributed to the outbreak of the Maori Wars.

Wairau Massacre See Wairau Affray

Waitangi, Treaty of Agreement (Feb. 6, 1840) between the British government and some 500 Maori chiefs. It formed the basis of British annexation and rule of New Zealand. The Maori recognized British sovereignty in return for guarantees of their lands, possessions, and rights as British subjects.

Waite, Morrison Remick 1816–88. American jurist, seventh chief justice of the Supreme Court (1874–88), best known for his influential interpretations of the 14th and 15th Amendments.

Wakefield, Battle of See Roses, Wars of the Wake Island, Battle of Japanese attack (Dec. 9, 1941) on the American base situated on Wake Island. A force of 377 US Marines aided by some 1,000 civilian workers held out until Dec. 23 against a massive Japanese assault.

Walachia ⟨Wallachia⟩ Danubian principality. With neighboring Moldavia, it formed (1859) the modern Balkan state of Romania. Its inhabitants preserve the ancient Latin speech of Roman Dacia. Walachia was obliged to acknowledge Turkish suzerainty by 1417, became a virtual Russian protectorate in 1774, and became fully independent as Romania in 1878.

Waldemar I ⟨Valdemar I⟩ ⟨Waldemar the Great⟩ 1131–82. King of Denmark (1157–82). His succession to the Danish throne ended civil war in Denmark. He defeated the Wends, conquered Norwegian lands, and established political ties with Sweden, France, and the Holy Roman Empire.

Waldemar II ⟨Valdemar II⟩ ⟨Waldemar the Victorious⟩ 1170–1241. King of Denmark (1202–41), successor to his brother Canute VI. He conquered a great area in the Baltic but was forced to surrender much of it. He reformed and codified Danish law.

Waldemar IV ⟨Valdemar IV⟩ ⟨Waldemar Atterdag⟩ *c*1320–75. King of Denmark (1340–75). He regained his kingdom from foreign control and fought against the Hanseatic League. But he was forced to sign the Treaty of Stralsund, which gave the league great influence in Denmark.

Waldemar Atterdag See Waldemar IV

Waldemar the Great See Waldemar I

Waldemar the Victorious See Waldemar II

Waldenses ⟨Waldensians⟩ Religious group centered in Piedmont in Italy and Dauphiné in France from the 12th cent. Founded *c*1770 by a merchant of Lyons, P. Waldo, the Waldenses sought a life of poverty and gospel simplicity. They eventually drifted into what became heresy to the Roman Catholic church, denying purgatory, the papacy, prayers for the dead, and some of the sacraments. They emphasized a simple biblicism and criticized the ecclesiastical abuses of the day. Often persecuted, they nevertheless continued to survive. Most Waldensians accepted the Reformation and became in effect another Swiss Protestant church (1532). They did not receive full civil and religious rights until 1848.

Waldheim, Kurt 1918–. Fourth secretary general of the UN (1972–82), replacing U Thant of Burma. A career diplomat, he was Austria's UN representative (1965–68), foreign minister (1968–70), and even a presidential candidate (1971).

Waldseemüller, Martin See America

Waldstein, Albrecht von See Wallenstein, Albrecht von

Wales Historic region of Great Britain, located west of England. The home of Celtic tribes known collectively as the Cymry, Wales was invaded by the Romans and later resisted the Anglo-Saxon invasion of Britain (5th cent. AD). Conquered (1276–84) by English king Edward I, Wales was formally joined with England in 1536, after which its history merged with that of England. Key dates in the history of Wales include:

55 BC–1ST CENT. AD Romans advanced into British Isles; occupied areas of Wales, but Welsh tribes continuted to resist Roman rule.

5TH CENT. AD Celts fled westward in face of Anglo-Saxon invasion, settling in Wales; subsequent centuries saw the rise of several kingdoms in Wales.

MID-10TH CENT. Hywel Dda reigned in Wales; established unified Welsh legal code.

1062–64 English king Harold led army into Wales (1062–64); defeated Welsh King Gruffydd ap Llewelyn (d. 1063).

1136 Welsh forces victorious over English under Henry I.

1158–65 English king Henry II reestablished control in Wales.

1276–84 English king Edward I invaded Wales (1276), defeating Welsh prince Llwewlyn ap Gruffydd; Llewelyn staged unsuccessful revolt (1282) and English established control over all Wales; conquest formalized by Statute of Wales (1284).

1301 Edward I named his son (later Edward II) Prince of Wales; first English heir to be so designated; act helped to appease Welsh toward English rule.

1402–*c*1415 Owen Glendower staged unsuccessful uprising against English.

1536 Wales formally joined with England through the Act of Union.

18TH CENT. Welsh nationalism played key role in establishment of Calvinistic Methodist church in Wales.

19TH CENT. Extensive coal fields opened in the south; Wales became heavily industrialized, but depressed economic conditions in the countryside led to the Rebecca Riots (1843) and mass emigration.

1914 British Parliament ordered disestablishment of Calvinistic Methodist church.

1940s Welsh nationalism showed marked increase in years following WW II; Welsh language introduced (1944) as working language for primary and secondary schools in Wales.

1979 Welsh voters rejected referendum for home rule.

Wales, Prince of See Prince of Wales

Wales, Statute of See Statute of Wales

Walewska, Countess Marie 1789–1817. Polish noblewoman, mistress to Napoleon I, and mother of Count A. Walewski.

Walewski, Comte Alexandre Florian Joseph Colonna. 1810–68. French diplomat and a son of Napoleon I and Marie Walewska. He was foreign minister (1855–60) and minister of state (1860–63).

Walker, Robert John 1801–69. American politician. As US Senator (1836–45) he supported westward expansion. He was secretary of the treasury (1845–49) during the Mexican War.

Walker, William 1824–60. American adventurer who led a force to the Mexican state of Lower California (1853–54), briefly establishing a republic. He invaded Nicaragua (1855) and became its president (1856–57).

Walking Purchase Purchase of Delaware Indian lands (1737) in Pennsylvania, in which Pennsylvania Colonial officials cheated the Indians. The Indians determined the size of lands to be sold by the distance a man could walk in a day. Pennsylvania officials, however, cleared a path and secured runners, thereby doubling the size of the tract.

Wallace, Alfred Russel 1823–1913. British naturalist. His studies contributing to the theory of natural selection paralleled, but were independent of, those of C. Darwin.

Wallace, George Corley 1919–. American politician and governor of Alabama (1963–67, 1971–76), noted for resisting school integration in Alabama. A 1968 third-party presidential candidate, he was campaigning for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination when an assassin's bullet left him partly paralyzed (May 15, 1972).

Wallace, Henry Agard 1888–1965. American agriculturalist, statesman and US vice president (1941–45). A key figure in the New Deal, he was secretary of agriculture (1933–40) before being chosen for the vice-presidency. He was not renominated because of southern opposition.

Wallace, Lewis 1827–1905. American author and soldier, best known as author of the historical novel Ben Hur.

Wallace, Sir William *c*1272–1305. Scottish patriot, a leading figure in the Scottish struggle to win independence from England.

Wallachia See Walachia

Wallenstein, Albrecht von ⟨Waldstein, Albrecht von⟩ 1583–1634. Bohemian noble who served as the chief general to Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand II during the Thirty Years' War. One of the most famous military men of his time, he commanded imperial forces twice (1625–30, 1632–34), but lost the emperor's trust and was murdered.

Wallis, John 1616–1703. English mathematician noted for his contributions to the development of calculus. He wrote on many subjects, including conic sections, logic, grammar, and cryptography.

Wall of Antoninus Ancient Roman wall stretching 37 miles across southern Scotland. It was built AD *c*140 by Antoninus Pius as a defense against attacks from the north.

Walloons French-speaking Belgians. They inhabit mainly the southern provinces of Belgium in contrast to the Dutch-speaking Flemings, who live in the northern provinces.

Walpole, Horace, 4th earl of Orford 1717–97. English author, noted for his Gothic novel The Castle of Otranto (1765), and for his many letters, which are an invaluable source for details about life in Georgian England.

Walpole, Robert 1st earl of Orford 1676–1745. British statesman and Whig leader, generally regarded as the first British prime minister. Walpole entered Parliament in 1701 and held ministerial posts (1708–11) until being convicted (1712) on dubious charges of corruption by a Tory administration. He supported the succession of the Hanoverian king George I (1714), which restored the Whigs to power, and thereafter began his ascendancy. In 1720 he was called upon to salvage government finances after the disastrous South Sea Bubble (q.v.) incident and in 1721 was appointed first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer. Thereafter he remained in power until 1742, and by his astute handling of Parliament and skillful distribution of royal patronage helped lay the foundations for the office of prime minister. His purge of opposition elements in his ministry (1733) established his firm control over the Cabinet. Walpole is especially noted for his accomplishments in the area of finance. He also endeavored to promote trade and reduce tariffs, and sought to keep Britain out of war. Unable to escape involvement in the War of the Austrian Succession, Walpole was ousted from power (1742) after reverses in that war.

Walsh, Thomas James 1859–1933. American political leader. As US Senator from Montana (1913–33), he headed the Senate investigation (1922–23) that exposed the Teapot Dome (q.v.) oil-reserve scandal.

Walter, Hubert d. 1205. English archbishop and statesman. He accompanied Richard I on the Third Crusade. As archbishop of Canterbury he raised the ransom to free Richard, and in Richard's absence was the effective ruler of England (1194–98).

Walter, Thomas U. See Capitol

Walter the Penniless d. 1096. French knight, and a leader of a band of soldiers and adventurers known as the Peasants' Crusade. His army plundered eastern Europe in advance of the First Crusade, and was defeated in Asia Minor.

Walther von der Vogelweide *c*1170–*c*1230. German minnesinger, considered the greatest lyric poet of medieval Germany.

Walwyn, William See Levelers

Wanamaker, John 1838–1922. American merchant, who founded (1875) in Philadelphia one of the first department stores, John Wanamaker and Company.

Wandiwash, Battle of British victory over the French (Jan. 22, 1760), near Madras, India. A French force of about 2,000 under the Count de Lally was routed by a British force of about 1,700. The victory was the most significant in India during the Seven Years' War and led to the French withdrawal from India.

Wang An-shih 1021–1086. Chinese poet, Confucian scholar, and government administrator. As chief minister for the Emperor Shen Tsung, he carried out financial reforms, established an agricultural loan program, levied an income tax, and organized a militia.

Wang Ching-wei 1885–1944. Chinese political leader. He was a supporter of Sun Yat-sen and after Sun's death (1925) challenged Chiang Kai-shek for control of the Kuomintang. He served as premier of Japanese-controlled China (1938–44).

Wang Mang 45 BC–AD 23. Chinese Han dynasty official who seized the throne and ruled as emperor (AD 9–23). His many radical governmental and land reforms were opposed by the aristocracy, which rebelled against him and restored the Han dynasty.

Wang Wei 699–759. Chinese poet, painter, and physician of the T'ang dynasty. A leading figure in Chinese cultural history, he is noted for his delicate monochrome landscapes and for his poems depicting pastoral scenes.

Wang Yang-ming 1472–1528. Chinese neo-Confucianist philosopher. He developed a philosophical idealism that conflicted with the realistic Confucianism of the 12th-cent. philosopher Chu Hsi.

Warbeck, Perkin 1474?–99. Flemish impostor and pretender to the English throne. He posed as Richard, the younger brother of Edward V, and sought to usurp the throne of Henry VII. He was defeated, imprisoned, and later executed.

Ward, Artemas 1727–1800. American general, who commanded at the siege of Boston (1775) until G. Washington took over. He later served in the Continental Congress (1780–81) and US Congress (1791–95).

war debts See reparations

War Hawks Certain southern and western US Congressmen of the 12th Congress (1811–13) who vigorously promoted war with Britain and who were thus largely responsible for the War of 1812. H. Clay and J. Calhoun were among the War Hawks.

Warhol, Andy See Pop art

warlord Regional military commanders in China who, between 1916 and 1949, often functioned as independent rulers in the areas they controlled. Chinese President Yüan Shi-k'ai had relied on military force to rule and, after his death in 1916, many of his former generals took control of their military territories, especially in the north. In the south, Chiang Kai-shek consolidated Nationalist rule and by his Northern Expedition regained control over warlords. Many warlords retained local control, however, and were not finally eliminated until the Communist victory in 1949.

Warner, Seth 1743–84. American Revolutionary War officer, a leader of the Green Mountain Boys. He played a major role in the capture of Ticonderoga (1775) and Crown Point (1775).

War of See under names inverted, as in Pacific, War of the Warren, Earl 1891–1974. Chief justice of the US Supreme Court (1953–69) and three-time governor of California, (1943–53). He presided over many controversial court decisions, notably those outlawing school segregation, establishing the principle of "one man, one vote," and upholding an accused person's rights. He headed the Warren Commission (1963–64), the presidential commission that investigated the assassination of Pres. J. Kennedy.

Warren, Gouverneur Kemble 1830–82. American general in the Civil War. His defense of Little Round Top during the Battle of Gettysburg helped to secure a Union victory.

Warren, Robert Penn 1905–. American novelist, poet, and critic, identified with the group of southern writers known as the Fugitives, who celebrated the southern agrarian traditions. He wrote All the King's Men.

Warring States Period (481–221 BC) in Chinese history. This period brought an end to the long reign of the Chou dynasty (ruled 1122–221 BC) and was marked by the rise of a number of petty kingdoms. Corruption was widespread and wars between the states were frequent. Despite the chaotic nature of this period, some of the great thinkers in Chinese history flourished then (notably Mencius) and helped establish doctrines that would later dominate Chinese culture.

Warsaw Poland's capital (pop. 1,474,200), a railroad, industrial, and cultural center. Founded *c*1300, it became capital of the Polish kingdom in 1596. Warsaw was held by the Russians from 1813 until taken by Germany in 1915. In 1918, it became capital of the Polish Republic. During WW II, it was demolished by the Germans, and the Jewish population was decimated, despite a desperate uprising against the Nazis by Jews in the Warsaw ghetto (1943).

Warsaw Pact See Warsaw Treaty Organization

Warsaw Treaty Organization (Warsaw Pact) Defensive alliance between the USSR and its Eastern European satellites, created by a treaty signed in Warsaw (May 14, 1955) to counterbalance NATO. The Warsaw Pact countries consist of Albania (until 1968), Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania, and the USSR.

Warsaw uprising Rebellion in which the Polish underground army briefly recaptured and held Warsaw against the Germans (Aug.–Oct., 1944). The Poles were defeated by German reinforcements while the Soviet Army remained idle just across the Vistula. Thus any potential Polish military opposition to postwar Soviet domination of Poland was eliminated.

Warwick, Thomas de Beauchamp, earl of See Beauchamp, Thomas de, earl of Warwick

Washington State of the US Northwest (pop. 4,130,200), the 42nd state. The Spanish, English, and Russians explored the area, but it was American Robert Gray who claimed it for the US (1792). British and US counterclaims were settled in 1846, and Tumwater became the first permanent settlement in 1845. The Washington Territory was created in 1853, and the discovery of gold brought an increase in population. Washington became a state and adopted its constitution in 1889.

Washington, Booker Taliaferro 1856–1915. American black educator. Born a slave, he became the moving force in the establishment of Tuskegee (Alabama) Institute and a spokesman for educational and economic opportunity for blacks.

Washington, D.C. See District of Columbia

Washington, George 1732–99. First US president (1789–97), known as the Father of His Country. The son of a well-to-do Virginia planter, Washington began his career as a surveyor. He later fought in the French and Indian War (1754–63) and served as commander of the Virginia militia (1755–58). A member of the Virginia House of Burgesses (1759–74), he became a leader of the Colonial movement toward self-government. Washington became a delegate to the first Continental Congress (1774–75), and was named by the second Continental Congress as commander in chief of the Continental Army during the American Revolution (q.v.). Washington remained in command throughout the revolutionary war. He turned a disorganized militia into a well-trained army and, despite severe shortages and chaotic communication between the army and the government, led his forces to ultimate victory at the Battle of Yorktown (q.v.) in 1781.

Washington served as president of the Constitutional Convention (q.v.) in 1787, and his efforts to secure adoption of the Constitution led to his election as first president of the US. Washington took the oath of office in New York City (Apr. 30, 1789) and appointed such men as T. Jefferson and A. Hamilton to the government, regardless of their political leanings. Later, Washington sought to remain neutral in the growing political struggle between the Republicans and the Federalists. His term as president was marked by the Whiskey Rebellion (q.v.) and the conclusion in 1795 of Jay's Treaty (q.v.) with Great Britain. Washington was unanimously re-elected (1793), but the bitter political struggle that had developed in the country led him to support the Federalists. His second term was also marked by conflict in the West. Deciding not to accept a third term as president, Washington delivered his celebrated Farewell Address (Sept. 17, 1796), in which he warned against the establishment of permanent alliances. He retired to his estate, Mount Vernon, but returned as commander in chief of the army (1798) when war with France seemed inevitable. War was avoided and Washington died (Dec. 14, 1799) soon after.

Washington, March on See March on Washington

Washington Peace Conference See Tyler, John

Washington, Treaty of Agreement (May 8, 1871) between Britain and the US that settled the Alabama claims (q.v.) and regulated navigation in the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. It was the first treaty in which Canada was recognized as a distinct entity.

Watergate scandal Major US political scandal (1972–74) involving charges of abuse of power, bribery, official misconduct, and attempts to cover up illegal activities. The scandal forced the resignation of President R. Nixon (1974) and resulted in a period of public distrust of government. The scandal began to unfold (June 17, 1972) when five men were arrested for trying to place an illegal wiretap in the Democratic party headquarters at the Watergate apartment complex in Washington, DC. With the two others who were arrested in the case, G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt, Jr., the group was linked to the White House but nothing could be proved. In the meantime President Nixon was reelected to a second term and the seven involved in the Watergate incident were tried and convicted (Jan., 1973). A Senate committee was formed (Feb., 1973) to investigate.

The first break in the scandal came in Mar., 1973, when James McCord, one of the seven convicted, charged that the White House had attempted to cover up the incident. By Apr. 30, 1973, President Nixon was forced to dismiss White House advisers H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, and John Dean. Nixon, however, denied he had any involvement in the Watergate burglary or attempts to cover up the incident. Dean later testified that Nixon had approved the cover-up and implicated Haldeman, Ehrlichman, and former attorney general John Mitchell as well. The major break in the scandal came when it was revealed (July, 1973) that Nixon had taped all conversations in his White House office. The struggle for release of the tapes lasted a year and ended when the Supreme Court ruled against the president (July 24, 1974). The House adopted articles of impeachment against President Nixon (July 27–30) and, after publicly admitting he had been involved in the cover-up, Nixon resigned (Aug. 9). He was succeeded by President G. Ford, who later pardoned Nixon for his involvement in Watergate.

Waterloo, Battle of Final battle of the Napoleonic Wars, fought (June 18, 1815) at this Belgian village south of Brussels, and famous as Napoleon's military demise. After the Battle of Ligny, Napoleon sent a third of his 105,000-man army, under Marshal E. de Grouchy, in pursuit of the retreating 45,000-man Prussian army, under G. von Blucher. He then forced the Duke of Wellington's 68,000-man army to withdraw toward Brussels after a battle at Quatre Bras. With the two forces thus separated, Napoleon attacked Wellington at Waterloo at noon on June 18. However, Napoleon's main attack on Wellington's center was stalled by the British. Later that day Blucher arrived with his Prussian force, after having managed to elude Grouchy. These added reinforcements turned the battle into a rout and Napoleon was compelled to retreat with heavy losses (25,000 French casualties plus those taken prisoner; 23,000 allied casualties). Napoleon abdicated for his second and last time June 22.

Waters, Muddy ⟨Morganfield, McKinley⟩ 1915–83. American singer. He was a leading figure in the development of rhythm and blues.

Watling Street Ancient Roman road in England, running from London northwest through St. Albans and other points to Wroxeter. It was built as a military road, and parts of it are still in use.

Watson, James Dewey 1928–. American biologist. He and Sir Francis Harry Compton Crick discovered (1953) the molecular structure of DNA. Co-winner of the Nobel Prize in physiology and medicine in 1962.

Watson John Broadus 1878–1958. American psychologist, the leading figure in the establishment of behaviorism.

Watt, James 1736–1819. Scottish inventor. He devised numerous improvements in and additions to the steam engine of Thomas Newcomen. Watt's improved engine was a milestone in the Industrial Revolution.

Watteau, Jean Antoine 1684–1721. French painter, considered one of the masters of French painting. His works are noted for their use of color and rendering of natural scenes.

Wattignies, Battle of Battle (Oct. 15–16, 1793) during the French Revolutionary Wars in which inexperienced French levies defeated a professional Austrian army. The 50,000-man French force defeated some 30,000 Austrians in this battle in northern France and thus blocked their drive toward Paris.

Waugh, Evelyn Arthur St. John 1903–66. English author, considered the most gifted satirical novelist of his time.

Way of Five Pecks of Rice See Five Pecks of Rice

Weaver, James Baird 1833–1912. American politician. He supported the policies of the Greenback party, and was its unsuccessful presidential candidate in 1880. He helped to found the Populist party and was its unsuccessful presidential candidate in 1892.

Webb, Sidney James 1858–1947. British social and economic reformer. He and his wife, Beatrice Webb, née Potter (1858–1943), were leading figures in the Fabian Society, founded the New Statesman, and greatly influenced social reforms in Britain.

Weber, Max 1864–1920. Influential German sociologist and political economist, best known for The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism, which explored the role of religious and ethical values in the development of capitalism.

Webster, Daniel 1782–1852. Noted American lawyer and statesman, considered one of the outstanding orators of his day. He was a vigorous supporter of American nationalism but opposed the annexation of Texas and the Mexican War, and sought to preserve the Union even at the cost of continued slavery. He served as senator (1827–41, 1845–50) and twice as secretary of state (1840–43, 1850–52).

Webster, Noah 1758–1843. American lexicographer, best known for his "Blue-backed Speller" (1783) and for his major work, The American Dictionary of the English Language (1828).

Webster-Ashburton Treaty Treaty (Aug., 1842) between Great Britain and the US, settling the northeastern boundary between the US and Canada and providing for suppression of the African slave trade. D. Webster represented the US, and Alexander Baring, 1st Baron Ashburton, represented Britain.

Wedgwood, Josiah 1730–95. English pottery manufacturer, whose scientific and practical approach to the production of pottery was matched by his attention to art and beauty. He was a leading figure in the Industrial Revolution.

Wehlau, Treaty of Agreement (Sept. 19, 1657) by which Poland gave up suzerainty over the Duchy of Prussia. The electors of Brandenburg had inherited ducal Prussia from the Teutonic Knights as a Polish fief. Duke Frederick William, however, won full sovereignty by this treaty, in return for providing military aid for Poland's war against Sweden.

Weidman, Charles Edward, Jr. 1901–75. American dancer and choreographer. His dances are noted for their abstract motions and use of pantomime, and have greatly influenced modern dance.

Weil, Simone 1909–43. French philosopher and mystic, whose writings reflect her social activism and attraction to the Roman Catholic faith.

Weill, Kurt 1900–50. German composer, whose operas are noted for their use of social satire. Best known of these is The Threepenny Opera, done in collaboration with B. Brecht.

Weimar Republic German republic (1919–33) created after Germany's defeat in WW I. The new government was created (July 31, 1919) amid social unrest (notably uprisings by Communists) and severe economic problems. Subsequent years were characterized by chronic parliamentary instability, a period of inflation, and mass unemployment, all of which eventually led to A. Hitler's rise to power in 1933. (See also Germany, 1919–33.)

Weinstein, Nathan See West, Nathanael

Weismann, August Friedrich Leopold 1834–1914. German biologist. His germ-plasm theory of heredity was a major contribution to the development of modern genetics.

Weiss, Ehrich See Houdini, Harry

Weizmann, Chaim 1874–1952. Russian-born scientist, Zionist leader, and Israeli statesman. A leader in the Zionist movement, Weizmann helped to negotiate the Balfour declaration (q.v.) and was the first president of Israel (1948–52).

Welfs Ruling family in Bavaria and Saxony which clashed (12th cent.) with their kinsmen in the German royal Hohenstaufen fa.ly (called Waiblings). The conflict resulted in the exile of Henry the Lion of Bavaria (a Welf) for failing to help the emperor Frederick I Barbarossa in Italy (1176). Thereafter the Welfs managed to get Henry's son, Otto IV, elected as anti-king to Barbarossa's successor, but their line ended with him. The names for the 13th cent. Guelphs and Ghibellines (q.v.) in Italy were adopted from this earlier rivalry.

Weller, Thomas See Robbins, Frederick Chapman

Welles, Gideon 1802–78. American statesman. He served as secretary of the navy under A. Lincoln and A. Johnson. He sided with Johnson against the Radical Republicans in the battle over Reconstruction (q.v.) policy.

Welles, Orson 1915–. American actor, director, and producer. His use of innovative techniques in such films as Citizen Kane and The Magnificent Ambersons greatly influenced film production.

Wellesley, Richard Colley, Marquess 1760–1842. British colonial administrator, brother of Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of Wellington. As governor general of India (1797–1805) he greatly expanded British rule there.

Wellington Port city (pop. 139,200) and capital of New Zealand. Founded in 1840, it replaced Auckland as the capital in 1865. It is the country's main transportation and communications center, as well as the cultural and financial capital.

Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of 1769–1852. British soldier and statesman. He commanded British, Portuguese, and Spanish forces in the Peninsular War (q.v.), defeated Napoleon in the Battle of Waterloo (q.v.), and served as prime minister of Great Britain (1828–30). During his tenure, the Test Act (q.v.) was repealed and Catholic Emancipation (q.v.) was enacted.

Wells, Henry 1805–78. American expressman. He established (1848) his own express firm, which he later merged with other companies to form the American Express Company (1850). With W. Fargo he formed Wells, Fargo and Company (1852) to handle express service to California.

Wells, Herbert George 1866–1946. English author and historian. His novels, romances, and stories are marked by his interests in both scientific and social questions. His works include The War of the Worlds, The Time Machine, Kipps, Tono-Bungay, and Outline of History.

Wem, George Jeffreys, 1st Baron, Jeffreys of See Jeffreys of Wem, George Jeffreys, 1st Baron

Wenceslaus 1361–1419. King of the Germans (1378–1400), and Bohemia (1378–1419). He was successor to his father, Charles IV. He was an ineffective ruler and his reign was marked by religious and political conflicts and widespread rebellion. Amid a war between German nobles and imperial cities (1380s), he eventually sided with the nobles, only to be deposed as German king by them (in favor of Rupert) in 1400. He also tried and failed to resolve the Great Schism in the Roman Catholic church. After 1400, he retired to his kingdom of Bohemia and was there likewise embroiled in rebellions by nobles who twice imprisoned him (1394, 1402–03). Finally he supported the religious reformer J. Huss against the pope, but was unable to prevent Huss's execution. This led to the Hussite Wars (q.v.), which broke out after Huss's execution.

Wenceslaus I d. 1253. King of Bohemia (1230–53), successor to his father Ottocar I. He encouraged Germans to settle in Bohemia, brought Austria under Bohemian control, and was a patron of the arts.

Wenceslaus II 1271–1305. King of Bohemia (1278–1305), successor to his father Ottocar II. He extended Bohemian control into Poland and Hungary, and was made king of Poland (1300–05).

Wenceslaus III *c*1289–1306. King of Hungary (1301–04) and king of Bohemia (1305–06). Son and successor of Wenceslaus II in Bohemia, he renounced his claim to Hungary. He was assassinated after his short reign in Bohemia.

Wenceslaus, Saint d. 929. Duke and patron saint of Bohemia. He encouraged Christianity in Bohemia and submitted to the rule of Henry I of Germany. For this he was murdered by his brother, Boleslav I, who succeeded him.

Wends Slavic people inhabiting East Germany. Also called "Sorbs," they are the remnant of a much more extensive Slavic people, whose lands the Germans conquered (6th–12th cents.).

Wentworth, Benning 1696–1770. American Colonial governor of New Hampshire (1741–67), who made the unauthorized New Hampshire Grants (q.v.).

Wentworth, William Charles 1793–1872. Australian statesman. He founded a newspaper, the Australian (1824), to advance the cause of self-government and was a leader in the fight for the Australian constitution of 1855.

Wergeland, Henrick 1808–45. Norwegian writer and patriot. The greatest Norwegian writer of his day, Wergeland was a leading figure in the nationalist movement.

Wertheimer, Max 1880–1943. German psychologist whose studies of the perception of motion (1910–12) led to the development of Gestalt psychology.

Wesley, Charles See Methodism

Wesley, John 1703–91. English evangelist and founder of Methodism (q.v.). He was ordained as a priest of the Church of England (1728). At Oxford, he joined a group (1729) of students, called "methodists," that had been formed by his brother Charles (1707–88) and that included G. Whitefield. John later engaged in missionary work in colonial Georgia (1735–38); when he returned to London, he experienced a religious awakening during a meeting at Aldersgate St. (May 24, 1738). Thereafter he dedicated himself to evangelical work and conducted numerous missions in England, Ireland, and Scotland. He broke with the Calvinists in 1740, and in 1784 issued a declaration formally constituting the Methodist societies.

Wessex Saxon kingdom, once located in southern England, and a part of the Anglo-Saxon Heptarchy. Founded by Saxon invaders in the late 5th cent. AD, it rivaled the other Anglo-Saxon kingdoms for control of territories until the 9th-cent. Danish invasion. Under the leadership of Aethelred I and Alfred the Great, Wessex alone withstood the Danish armies. Then, by reconquering Danish holdings (by 927), the kings of Wessex made themselves masters of all England.

West In American history, the land lying west of the Mississippi River (earlier, west of the original 13 colonies). In the years of westward expansion, the West assumed mythical proportions as the land of unlimited opportunity. (See also Manifest Destiny.)

West, Benjamin 1738–1820. American painter of historical scenes. West moved to England in 1763, where George III was his patron. His innovative use of contemporary dress in such paintings as Death of General Wolfe influenced later painters.

West, Mae *c*1892–1980. American stage and film actress. Her wit and beauty made her one of the great sex stars of American cinema.

West, Nathanael ⟨Weinstein, Nathan⟩ 1903–40. American novelist. He had a pessimistic but strangely poetic view of American life, which he depicted in such novels as Miss Lonelyhearts and The Day of the Locust.

West Berlin See Berlin

Western Chin See Chin

Western Empire See Roman Empire; Rome

Western Reserve Tract of land in Ohio on the south shore of Lake Erie which was held by Connecticut, after it surrendered the rest of its western lands to Congress in 1786. Part of it was sold to immigrants whose property was destroyed during the Revolution. It passed to Ohio in 1800.

Western Roman Empire See Roman Empire; Rome

West Florida Controversy Territorial dispute between Spain and the US over western Florida lands on the Gulf of Mexico, roughly located between the Perdido and Mississippi rivers. America claimed the land as part of the Louisiana Purchase, while Spain claimed it under the 1783 Treaty of Paris. American settlers rebelled (1810) and, reinforced by troops sent by Pres. James Madison, ended effective Spanish control. Spain relinquished its claims to the area (1819) by the Transcontinental Treaty.

West Goths See Visigoths

West Indies Islands located between North and South America on the eastern edge of the Caribbean Sea. They include the Greater Antilles, the Lesser Antilles, and the Bahamas. First reached by C. Columbus in 1492, the islands were settled by English, French, Dutch, and their imported African slave labor.

Westinghouse, George 1846–1914. American inventor and manufacturer. He invented the railroad air brake, pioneered the development of alternating current electrical systems, and founded the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Westminster, Statute of English laws, the first three of which were enacted under Edward I. 1. Westminster I (1275) put long-unwritten laws into legal, written forms, most notably equal legal protection for the poor. 2. Westminster II (1285) concerned land tenure and entailments. 3. Westminster III (1290) ended the subinfeudation of land by making a new owner responsible to the prime overlord, not the subholder 4. Statute, passed by Parliament in 1931, recognizing the autonomy of member nations within the United Kingdom. It created the British Commonwealth of Nations (q.v.).

Westminster, Treaties of English treaties signed at Westminster. 1. Treaty (Apr. 5, 1654) ending the First Dutch War (1652–54), which had been fought primarily on the seas. The Dutch agreed to enter a defensive league with England, pay an indemnity, and exclude the House of Orange from the office of stadtholder. 2. Treaty (1662) between England's Charles II and Frederick William, elector of Brandenberg. They granted each other most-favored-nation status. 3. Treaty (Feb. 9, 1674) ending the Third Dutch War (1672–74). The Dutch once again paid an indemnity and returned to England such American Colonial territories as New York, Albany, Long Island, and New Jersey. 4. Covenant of Westminster (Jan. 1756), which established neutrality between Britain and Frederick the Great of Prussia.

Westminster Abbey Church in Westminster, one of the boroughs of Greater London. A leading example of Gothic architecture in England, the abbey is the burial place of numerous national figures, including many English monarchs, and has been the site of virtually every coronation since William I.

Westminster Assembly ⟨Divines at Westminster, Assembly of⟩ Convocation summoned by the Long Parliament to fix the doctrine and practice of the Church of England. It sat between July 1, 1643, and Feb. 22, 1649. Consisting of some 120 clergy and some 30 lay people, the assembly was entirely Calvinist. Its Catechisms and its Directory of Public Worship were accepted in Scotland but not in England.

Westminster Conference Meeting held in London (1866–67) to plan the union of Canadian provinces. Resolutions of the conference were incorporated into the British North America Act of 1867.

Westminster Palace ⟨House of Parliament⟩ Complex of buildings built between 1840 and 1860 to house the British Parliament. It was constructed on the site of the former royal palace built in the 11th cent. That building had been used to house Parliament from the 16th cent., but was destroyed by fire in 1834.

Westphalia Historic northwestern German province, most of which is today in the West German state of North Rhine-Westphalia. Once a part of the Duchy of Saxony, it was administered for centuries by the Archbishop of Cologne. Napoleon based a short-lived kingdom for his brother Jerome on part of its territory in 1807. In 1815, after the Congress of Vienna, it became a province of Prussia.

Westphalia, Peace of Treaty (Oct. 24, 1648) ending the Thirty Years' War. The treaty marked the end of the period of religious wars in Europe that arose from the Protestant Reformation. The major participants in the treaty were Sweden and France on the one side and the Holy Roman Empire and Spain on the other. The treaty seriously weakened the Holy Roman Empire by recognizing the sovereignty of the individual German states within its domains. This was an important victory for France, which had sought to break the power of the Hapsburg Holy Roman Emperors. The treaty also recognized the independence of The Netherlands and the Swiss Confederation. Among the various territorial adjustments stipulated in the treaty were those awarding Alsace to France and West Pomerania to Sweden. Other provisions of the treaty related to religious settlements. In general a policy of toleration was instituted in the German states and Calvinism was recognized.

West Virginia State in the east central US (pop. 1,949,600), the 35th state. Originally an uninhabited part of the state of Virginia, West Virginia was settled by European immigrants who came by way of Pennsylvania. Conflicting claims to the area led to the French and Indian War (1754–63). Sectional differences, including the dispute over slavery, led to conflicts between western Virginians and the rest of the state. Finally they rejected secession in the Civil War and voted instead to form a new state. West Virginia became a state in 1863 and adopted its constitution in 1872.

Weyden, Roger van der *c*1400–64. Flemish painter of religious themes, considered one of the most influential painters of his day.

Weygand, Maxime 1867–1965. French general, chief of staff to Marshal Foch (1914–23). As French commander in chief (May-June, 1940) during WW II, he was unable to halt the German advance. He later served with the Vichy government.

Weyler y Nicolau, Valeriano 1838–1930. Spanish general. He was captain-general of Spanish forces in Cuba (1896–97), and his harsh treatment of Cuban rebels caused a wave of protest from America just before the Spanish-American War.

Wharton, Edith Jones 1862–1937. American novelist, whose works are noted for their insights into the workings of upper class American society. Her works include Ethan Frome and The Age of Innocence.

Wheatstone, Sir Charles 1802–75. English physicist and inventor. He is credited with the invention of the concertina, the stereoscope, and a device to measure electrical resistance, now known as the Wheatstone bridge. He was co-inventor with W. Cooke of an early telegraph (patented 1837) and inventor of an automatic telegraph transmitter and related devices.

Wheeler, Joseph 1836–1906. Confederate general in the American Civil War, who opposed William T. Sherman in the Atlanta Campaign. He later served in Congress, and commanded cavalry at Santiago in the Spanish-American War.

Wheeler, William Almon 1819–87. American politician. He served as US vice-president (1877–81) under R. Hayes, after a contested election.

Wheeler-Howard Act See Indian Reorganization Act

Whichcote, Benjamin See Cambridge Platonists

Whig Name used to denote what was variously a political party and a faction in England (17th–early 19th cents.). The Whig faction emerged in 1679 as a group opposing the succession of the Catholic Stuart king James II. James was finally deposed by Whigs and his former Tory supporters in the Glorious Revolution (q.v.) of 1688. Thereafter Whigs became identified with the interests of the landowning aristocracy and the wealthy middle class. Whig leaders, notably Sir R. Walpole, dominated the government during the reigns of George I and George II (1714–60). During the period from 1760 to 1784, Whig and Tory factions ceased to be identifiable as distinct groups and appointments were made on the basis of personal and family influence. In 1784, however, the emergence of a new Tory party (under W. Pitt the Younger) helped coalesce opposition factions into a new Whig party. The Whigs (led by C. Fox) then advanced the interests of industrialists, religious dissenters, and others who favored reforms. The Whig party ceased to exist in the 19th cent. and many of its members joined the emerging Liberal party (q.v.), forming the party's conservative wing.

Whig party American political party, organized (1834) by H. Clay in reaction to President A. Jackson. They supported internal improvements, the development of western lands, a regulated currency, a system of weights and measures, a national bank, and high protective tariffs. They also supported compromise on the issue of slavery. Both their elected presidents (W. Harrison and Z. Taylor) died in office, however, and the party grew increasingly divided over slavery. After 1854, many Whigs joined the new Republican party.

Whipple, Abraham 1733–1819. American naval officer. During the American Revolution he captured 11 British merchant ships of the East Indies fleet (1779), one of the greatest captures of the war.

Whiskey Rebellion Name given to the outbreak of protest west of the Alleghenies against an excise tax imposed (1781) by the newly created US government. The western settlers especially resented the tax on whiskey, the distillation of which was an important economic activity. Pres. G. Washington sent troops, partly to demonstrate the power of the new federal government, and the rebellion was suppressed without bloodshed.

Whisky Ring Conspiracy by a number of US distillers to deprive the government of tax revenues by bribing officials. The ring was exposed in 1875 and 110 people were convicted. The scandal touched the administration of Pres. U. Grant when his secretary was indicted (though not convicted).

Whistler, James Abbott McNeill 1834–1903. American painter and etcher. Essentially a realist, he pioneered the use of light, form, and color in a way that prefigured abstract art. He is best known for his Portrait of My Mother.

Whitby, Synod of Council called by King Oswy of Northumbria (663–664) at Whitby, England, to determine whether the church of Northumbria would follow Celtic or Roman usages. The council's decision to follow Roman usages brought the church closer to European Christian tradition.

White, Edward Douglass 1845–1921. American jurist, associate justice of the Supreme Court (1894–1910) and chief justice (1910–21). He is best known for his "rule of reason" decisions in large antitrust cases, which influenced subsequent antitrust litigation.

White, Elwyn Brooks 1899–. American writer, humorist, and stylist. For many years as a staffer of The New Yorker magazine, he distinguished himself for his light, graceful, and witty style. His numerous works include essays, the children's classic Charlotte's Web, and his revision of Strunk's Elements of Style.

White, Stanford 1853–1906. American architect. His architectural firm designed the original Madison Square Garden in New York City. He was fatally shot (June 25, 1906) by Harry K. Thaw, the outraged husband of the showgirl Evelyn Nesbit, with whom White was having an affair. The murder was one of the most sensationalized cases of the early 1900s.

White, Walter Francis 1893–1955. American civil rights leader and author, who served (1931–55) as secretary of the NAACP.

Whiteboys Peasant associations formed in Ireland around 1760 to harass landlords, tax collectors, and Protestant clergy. They were so named because they wore white clothing during their nightly forays.

Whitefield, George 1714–70. English evangelist, who helped J. Wesley to establish Methodism. He later broke with Wesley and helped to form the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He also preached in America and figured there in the Great Awakening (q.v.).

Whitehead, Alfred North 1861–1947. English mathematician and philosopher who collaborated with B. Russell on Principia Mathematica, a major study in logic, and who developed a metaphysical theory of reality.

White Hill, Battle of Battle fought on a chalk hill near Prague (Nov. 8, 1620), the first battle of the Thirty Years' War. A German force of some 25,000 under the Count of Tilly defeated a combined Bohemian-Hungarian force of some 15,000 men.

White House Official residence of the president of the US. It is the oldest public building in Washington (the cornerstone was laid in 1792) and was burned by the British (1814). It was rebuilt by James Hoban in 1817 and was restored between 1949 and 1952.

White Lotus Rebellion Chinese rebellion. The White Lotus was a Buddhist cult that opposed domination by the Manchus of the Ch'ing dynasty. From 1796 to 1804, they conducted a guerrilla revolt in the mountains of central China in protest against their poverty and excessive taxation. The imperial forces were hindered for several years by corruption within the army, but they eventually put down the rebellion. However, the revolt revealed the declining power of the Manchus and paved the way for other revolts in the 19th cent. that ended in the overthrow of the Ch'ing dynasty.

White Plains, Battle of Indecisive battle fought (Oct. 28, 1776) near White Plains, New York, during the American Revolution. British Gen. W. Howe, marching with a force of 20,000 men, engaged a Continental brigade of 14,000, led by G. Washington. After the battle, Washington was forced to withdraw.

White Revolution Reform movement in Iran during the 1950s and 1960s, instituted by Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlevi and his advisers. It aimed especially at land reforms, and an Office of Land Reform was established on Aug. 20, 1960. Ultimately, however, the "revolution" failed to gain popular support and the shah was forced to abdicate by the Islamic revolution in 1979.

White Russia See Belorussia

White Volunteer Army Russian armies formed in the winter of 1917–18 in the peripheral areas of the former Russian Empire to combat the Bolshevik regime established under N. Lenin. Though aided by 14 allied nations, they lacked unified leadership and necessary supplies and were unable to prevail against the Red Army.

Whitgift, John See Marprelate Controversy

Whitman, Walter 1819–92. American poet, one of the great figures in American literature. His major work, Leaves of Grass, is noted for its innovative style.

Whitney, Eli 1765–1825. American inventor of the cotton gin (1793). He also pioneered in the use of interchangeable parts in the manufacture of firearms, a major step in the development of mass production.

Whittier, John Greenleaf 1807–92. American poet and abolitionist, best known for his celebration in verse of his native New England and for his antislavery activities in the years before the Civil War.

Whittington, Richard d. 1423. English merchant, lord mayor of London, and subject of a popular English legend. According to the story, he was a poor boy who gave his cat to a merchantman to offer in trade. Ultimately the cat was sold for a fortune to a Moroccan ruler plagued by rats.

Wickliffe, John See Wycliffe, John

Wiclif, John See Wycliffe, John

Widukind ⟨Wittekind⟩ *d. c*807. Leader of the Saxons against Charlemagne. He raided the Rhineland (778), but later submitted and converted to Christianity (785). He is said to have become duke of the Saxons.

Wiener, Norbert 1894–1964. American mathematician, founder of cybernetics, the science of control and communication in animals and machines.

Wiggin, Kate Douglas Smith 1856–1923. American author and educator, best known for her novel Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.

Wilberforce, William 1759–1833. English politician, humanitarian, and philanthropist, who led in the movement to abolish slavery and the slave trade within the British Empire.

Wilde, Oscar 1854–1900. Irish poet, dramatist, and wit, and a leader of the Aesthetic movement. His works include the novel The Picture of Dorian Gray and the play The Importance of Being Earnest.

Wilder, Thornton Niven 1897–1975. American author and playwright, whose plays and novels reflected his belief in the universality of human experience. Wilder received Pulitzer prizes for the novel The Bridge of San Luis Rey (1927) and the play Our Town (1938).

Wilderness, Battle of the American Civil War battle fought (May 5–6, 1864) in Virginia. Some 100,000 Union troops, commanded by Gen. U. Grant, attacked 60,000 Confederate troops, commanded by Gen. R. Lee, but fighting was indecisive in difficult terrain. Grant lost some 18,000 troops (to Lee's 11,000) before moving on to do battle at Spotsylvania. The battle was part of Grant's drive toward Richmond.

Wilderness Road Route followed by American settlers from Virginia into western Kentucky (1790 to 1840). First blazed as a trail by the frontiersman D. Boone *c*1775, it led from the Shenandoah Valley through the Cumberland Gap to western Kentucky and the Ohio River region.

Wilfrid, Saint ⟨Wilfrid of York⟩ 634–709? English churchman, Bishop of York (*c*665), and one of the leading saints of England. He encouraged the adoption of Roman usages at the Synod of Whitby (q.v.), bringing the English church closer to the Roman Catholic church.

Wilfrid of York See Wilfrid, Saint

Wilhelmina 1880–1962. Queen of The Netherlands (1890–1948), successor to her father William III. Forced into exile in Britain during WW II, she encouraged Dutch resistance to German occupation.

Wilkes, Charles 1798–1877. American naval officer and explorer. He explored the region of Antarctica now called Wilkes Land. In 1861 his actions in the Trent Affair (q.v.) nearly led to war with Britain.

Wilkes, John 1727–97. English journalist and politician, several times expelled from Parliament for his outspoken attacks in periodicals. He is noted as a champion of freedom of the press.

Wilkins, Roy 1901–81. American black civil rights leader. Long associated with the NAACP, he served as executive secretary (and later director) from 1955 to 1977. He was a principal organizer of the 1963 March on Washington (q.v.).

Wilkinson, James 1757–1825. American general. He served in the Revolutionary War, was a member of the Conway Cabal, and was governor of Louisiana Territory (1805–06). He was implicated in the conspiracy of A. Burr.

William I ⟨William the Conqueror⟩ 1027–87. English king (1066–87) and duke of Normandy (1035–87). The illegitimate son of Robert, duke of Normandy, he succeeded Robert as duke on the latter's death (1035). His early years were marked by continued strife in Normandy. With the help of French king Henry I, he established his rule in Normandy (1047), then later repulsed two French invasions of Normandy (1054, 1058). In 1051, on a visit to his cousin, English king Edward the Confessor, he is thought to have received a promise of the English throne. On Edward's death, however, the crown passed to Harold, earl of Wessex. William secured the pope's support for his claim and raised an army.

Invading England (1066) he defeated and killed Harold in the Battle of Hastings (q.v.), marched on London, and was crowned king on Christmas Day. The English resisted his rule and William spent several years crushing rebellions, seizing estates, and redistributing lands to his Norman supporters. He appointed Lanfranc (1005?–89) archbishop of Canterbury, brought the church under his control, and firmly established feudalism in England. In 1072 he forced Scottish king Malcolm to do him homage. William authorized (1085) the compilation of the Domesday Book (q.v.), a complete survey of England.

His later years were spent largely in Normandy, while Lanfranc conducted William's affairs in England. William suppressed several rebellions led by his son Robert II, and conducted war against French king Philip I. While campaigning he suffered internal injuries in a fall and died at Rouen. His son Robert succeeded him as duke of Normandy, and his son William as king of England. William the Conqueror was an able administrator, a ruthless and intelligent military commander, and one of the greatest leaders of his time. His conquest of England radically altered the history of England and of Western Europe.

William I ⟨~ the Silent, Prince of Orange⟩ 1533–84. Prince of Orange and Count of Nassau. In 1568 he led the rebellion of The Netherlands against the rule of Philip II of Spain.

William I 1772–1843. First king of The Netherlands (1815–40). Commerce and industry flourished under his rule, but his treatment of Belgium, then part of The Netherlands, led to its secession in 1830.

William I 1797–1888. King of Prussia (1861–88) and first German emperor (1871–88). He appointed O. von Bismarck prime minister of Prussia (1862), and thereafter followed a militaristic policy that finally established Prussian dominance over a unified Germany.

William II ⟨William Rufus⟩ d. 1100. King of England (1087–1100), successor to his father William I the Conqueror. His rule was ruthless and he made many enemies. William appointed Anselm archbishop of Canterbury, and later exiled him. He conducted wars in Scotland, Wales, and Normandy, and maintained Norman rule over England.

William II ⟨William the Good⟩ d. 1189. King of Sicily (1166–89). He allied himself with Frederick I Barbarossa and attempted (1185) unsuccessfully to conquer the Byzantine Empire.

William II 1792–1849. King of The Netherlands (1840–49), successor to his father William I. He restored financial stability to The Netherlands and granted constitutional reforms (1848).

William II 1859–1941. King of Prussia and German emperor (1888–1918). His support of Austria-Hungary against Serbia contributed to the outbreak of WW I and increased military control of the government. With Germany's defeat, he abdicated.

William III ⟨William of Orange⟩ 1650–1702. Stadtholder of the United Provinces of The Netherlands (1672–1702) who became king of England (1689–1702) by the Glorious Revolution (q.v.). He ruled jointly with his wife Queen Mary II, promoted Protestantism, fiscal and parliamentary reform, and led campaigns against Louis XIV in the war of the Grand Alliance. He defeated James II at the Battle of the Boyne in Ireland, thereby ending James' attempt to retake the English throne.

William III 1817–90. King of The Netherlands (1849–90), and grand duke of Luxembourg, successor to his father William II. During his reign, Luxembourg was granted a parliamentary constitution (1867).

William IV 1765–1837. British king (1830–37), successor to his brother, George IV. He opposed parliamentary reform, but reluctantly accepted passage of the Reform Bill of 1832.

William of Occam See Ockham, William of

William of Ockham See Ockham, William of

William of Orange See William I; William III

William of Tyre *c*1130–1185. Churchman and historian. He is noted for his Historia Rerum in Partibus Transmarinis Gestarum, a history of the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem from 1095–1184.

William Rufus See William II

Williams, Eric E See Trinidad and Tobago

Williams, Roger *c*1603–83. Colonial religious leader. Banished by the Massachusetts Bay Colony for his religious views, he founded the city of Providence (1636) and the colony of Rhode Island. He encouraged religious toleration.

Williams, Tennessee ⟨b. Thomas Lanier Williams⟩ 1914–83. American playwright, whose works are noted for their insight into the passions and motivations of human beings. Among his many famous plays are Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, A Streetcar Named Desire, and The Night of the Iguana.

Williams, Thomas Lanier See Williams, Tennessee

Williams, William Carlos 1883–1963. American poet and physician, whose verse is noted for its use of concise language and of everyday objects and experience. His works include Pictures from Brueghel, and Other Poems and In the American Grain.

William the Conqueror See William I

William the Good See William II

William the Lion 1143–1214. King of Scotland (1165–1214), successor to his brother Malcolm IV. He attempted unsuccessfully to recover Northumbria from England, and extended his control throughout the Scottish kingdom.

Willkie, Wendell Lewis 1892–1944. American industrialist and political leader. A leading critic of the New Deal, he ran unsuccessfully on the Republican presidential ticket in 1940.

Wilmot Proviso Controversial amendment attached to an 1846 bill presented in the US Congress. The bill sought funds to pay for a negotiated settlement of the US and Mexican boundary dispute that had erupted into the Mexican War. The amendment, authored by Pennsylvania Democrat

David Wilmot, contained a ban on extension of slavery into any territories acquired from Mexico. The bill did not pass, but the principle was later adopted by the new Republican party.

Wilson, Charles Thomson Rees 1869–1959. Scottish physicist, inventor of the Wilson cloud chamber. He was awarded, with Arthur C. Compton, the 1927 Nobel Prize for physics.

Wilson, Edmund 1895–1972. American critic and essayist, considered one of the leading American men of letters in the 20th cent. His many works include The Wound and the Bow and To the Finland Station.

Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act See Cleveland, Stephen Grover

Wilson, Henry ⟨Colbath, Jeremiah Jones⟩ 1812–75. American politician and abolitionist leader. As US senator (1855–72) he was a leader of the Radical Republicans. He served as vice-president (1873–75) under U. Grant.

Wilson, James 1742–98. American jurist. A signer of the Declaration of Independence, he championed the concept of popular sovereignty at the Constitutional Convention of 1787 and served as associate justice of the Supreme Court (1789–98).

Wilson, Sir James Harold 1916–. British statesman. A leader of the Labour party, he served twice as prime minister (1964–70, 1974–76). His government was marked by troubles with white-ruled Rhodesia, serious economic problems, and unrest in Ireland.

Wilson, Woodrow ⟨Thomas Woodrow ~⟩ 1856–1924. Twenty-eighth US president (1913–21), successor to W. Taft. A graduate of Princeton University (1879), Wilson joined the faculty of Princeton (1890) and served as its president (1902–10). He resigned and ran successfully for the governorship of New Jersey (1911–13), during which time he became known for his progressive policies. At the 1912 Democratic convention he was nominated for president on the 46th ballot. A split between the regular Republican party and T. Roosevelt's Progressive party helped Wilson win the election. Wilson's first term was marked by the passage of numerous progressive measures, notably the establishment of the Federal Trade Commission (1914) and passage of the Clayton Antitrust Act (1914) and the Federal Farm Loan Act (1916).

In foreign matters, Wilson opposed the rise of V. Huerta as president of Mexico (1913) and sent US forces to Veracruz (1914). He also authorized the punitive expedition into Mexico (1916) led by Gen. J. Pershing (following P. Villa's raid into the US). Wilson sought to keep the US out of war in Europe. The German sinking (1915) of the liner Lusitania aroused sentiment for war in the US. However, following the sinking of the Sussex, Wilson secured an agreement from Germany to end its policy of unrestricted submarine warfare. Campaigning on the motto "He kept us out of war," Wilson was reelected (1916). He broke diplomatic relations (Feb., 1917) with Germany after it resumed unrestricted submarine activity, and Congress declared war (Apr. 6).

In 1918, Wilson announced his famous Fourteen Points (q.v.), by which he believed the world could be made "safe for democracy" at war's end. In Dec., 1918, he left for France as head of the US delegation to the Paris Peace Conference. He fought unsuccessfully against the harsh terms of the Versailles Treaty but secured a covenant calling for the League of Nations. Returning to America, he found his proposals rejected by Congress. Wilson began a campaign tour across the US to gain popular support, especially for the League, but he suffered a physical collapse (Sept., 1919) and then a stroke (Oct., 1919), from which he never completely recovered. His administration was also marked by passage of the 17th, 18th, and 19th Amendments to the US Constitution. Wilson was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1919.

Wilson's Creek, Battle of Battle of US Civil War, a Confederate victory over Union forces near Springfield, Missouri, on Aug. 10, 1861. A Union force of some 5,400 intercepted an invading force of 11,000 Confederates from Arkansas and after a hard battle was forced to withdraw. The Confederates then took Springfield.

Winckelmann, Johann Joachim 1717–68. German archaeologist, whose History of the Art of Antiquity became the basis for modern archaeology.

Winckler, Hugo 1863–1913. German archaeologist and historian whose excavations at Bogazköy, Turkey (1906–12) uncovered the capital of the Hittites and yielded cuneiform tablets that became a main source of information about the Hittite Empire.

Windsor, House of From 1917 the official surname of the royal family of Britain. It replaced the family name of Wettin and dynastic name of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. This change was effected by George V during WW I.

Windsor, Wallis Warfield, duchess of 1896–. American-born wife of the duke of Windsor. Edward abdicated (1936) his throne (as Edward VIII) in order to marry her.

Windsor Castle Castle in New Windsor, Berkshire, England, which has served as the main residence for English monarchs since William I, the Conqueror. The castle stands on a site dating from Celtic times.

Wineland See Vinland

Wingate, Orde Charles 1903–44. British general. During WW II he organized and led the Chindits, or Wingate's Raiders, a guerrilla unit that fought against the Japanese in Burma.

Winkelried, Arnold von d. 1386. Swiss hero, whose legendary act of self-sacrifice in battle is said to have led to the Swiss victory over Austria in the Battle of Sempach.

Winnipeg City (pop. 560,800), capital of Canada's Manitoba province. The site of a fur-trading post from 1738, its first settlers were part of the Red River Settlement. Completion of the transcontinental railroad in 1885 enabled it to become one of the world's largest grain-handling centers.

Winslow, Edward 1595–1655. Pilgrim leader, one of the founders of the Plymouth Colony. He served as governor (1633–34, 1636–37, 1644–45).

Winslow, Josiah *c*1629–80. American governor of Plymouth Colony (1673–80), the first native-born Colonial governor in America. He led the colonials in King Philip's War (q.v.).

Winter War See Russo-Finnish War

Winthrop, John 1588–1649. English colonist, governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony 12 times between 1629 and 1648. He greatly influenced the development of this theocratic community and thus affected the subsequent history of Massachusetts.

Wisconsin North-central state of the US (pop. 4,705,300), the 30th state. Jean Nicolet of France first explored the area (1634), and it was a center of the fur trade in spite of war with the Indians. After 1763, the British took control, then ceded it to the US after the American Revolution (1783). The Black Hawk War (1832) was the last major Indian uprising, and Wisconsin became a territory in 1836. In 1848, it adopted its constitution and was admitted to the Union.

Wise, Isaac Mayer 1819–1900. American rabbi, founder of many of the Reform Jewish institutions in the US. He was the guiding force in founding Hebrew Union College, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, and the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

Wise Men of the East See Magi

Wishart, George 1513?–1546. Scottish religious reformer and Protestant martyr. His preaching influenced J. Knox. Wishart was convicted and executed for heresy.

Wissman, Hermann von 1853–1905. German explorer of the Congo region (now Zaire) and German East Africa (now Tanzania). He increased knowledge of the area, established outposts, and served as commissioner and governor of German East Africa.

Witan See Witenagemot

Witenagemot ⟨Witan⟩ King's council that existed in England in Anglo-Saxon times. It consisted mainly of the nobles and bishops, and advised the king on land grants, taxes, and other matters.

Witherspoon, John 1723–94. Scottish-born American clergyman, president of the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), and signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Witt, Jan de 1625–72. Dutch statesman and patriot. As grand pensionary, he led Holland in the Dutch Wars and was instrumental in forming the Triple Alliance of 1668 and negotiating the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle.

Witte, Count Sergei Yulyevich 1849–1915. Russian statesman. As minister of finance (1892–1903), he helped bring about completion of the Trans-Siberian Railway. He served (1905–06) as prime minister after helping to form the Duma.

Wittekind See Widukind

Wittelsbach Name of the family dynasty that ruled Bavaria from 1180–1918. In addition to providing Bavarian kings, the line also produced a king of the Germans (Rupert of the Palatinate, 1400–10) and two Holy Roman emperors (Louis IV of Bavaria, 1314–47; Charles VII, 1742–45).

Wittgenstein, Ludwig Josef Johann 1889–1951. Austrian philosopher, one of the major philosophers of the 20th cent. His works deal with the relation of thought and language to the real and metaphysical worlds.

Wittstock, Battle of Swedish victory in the Thirty Years' War. Fought (Oct. 4, 1636) near Berlin, the battle pitted some 22,000 Swedish troops against 30,000 allied troops of the Holy Roman Empire and resulted in imperial losses of 11,000 casualties and 8,000 captured. The Swedes lost about 5,000.

Wobblies See Industrial Workers of the World

Wodehouse, Pelham Grenville 1881–1975. English author and humorist, best known as creater of Bertie Wooster and his manservant Jeeves in such works as Much Obliged, Jeeves.

Wöhler, Friedrich 1800–82. German chemist. His synthesis of urea marked the first time (1828) an organic compound was made artificially from inorganic material.

Wojtyla, Karol See John Paul II

Wolfe, James 1727–59. British commander in the French and Indian Wars. He led British forces in the capture of Quebec (1759) from the French, thereby ensuring British dominance in Canada.

Wolfe, Thomas Clayton 1900–1938. American novelist, perhaps best known for his semi-autobiographical novel Look Homeward, Angel, about a young man's development in a small southern city.

Wolfram von Eschenbach *c*1170–*c*1220. German poet, whose epic poem Parzifal is one of the great medieval literary works. Wagner used it as the basis for his opera Parsifal.

Wolseley, Garnet Joseph, 1st Viscount 1833–1913. British field marshal. He worked tirelessly to modernize the British army and from 1895 to 1901 he was commander in chief of the British army. He served in many British campaigns, including the Burma War, the Crimean War, and Riel's Rebellion in Canada, and led the attempt to relieve Gordon at Khartoum.

Wolsey, Thomas *c*1475–1530. English statesman and Catholic cardinal. As lord chancellor of England (1515–29), he was the leading force in English politics during the early reign of King Henry VIII.

Woman's Christian Temperance Union Organization founded (1874) in Cleveland, Ohio, to work against the evils of alcoholic beverages. It was instrumental in the adoption of Prohibition (q.v.) in the US and now has branches in many countries.

woman suffrage The right of women to the vote. The movement for woman suffrage arose in many countries in the 19th and 20th cents. In the US, woman suffrage began with a declaration of women's rights issued (July 19, 1848) by L. Mott, E. Stanton, and other feminists. The movement gained momentum with the formation (1869) of the National Woman Suffrage Association, which sought woman suffrage through a constitutional amendment; and the American Woman Suffrage Association, which sought it through state legislation. Both factions merged (1890) to form the National American Woman Suffrage Association. A number of states eventually granted woman suffrage and national woman suffrage was established (1920), by the 19th Amendment to the US Constitution. In Great Britain, the movement for woman suffrage began as a part of the Chartist movement, under such leaders as J. Mill and E. Anderson. In the early 20th cent., the movement became more militant under the leadership of E. Pankhurst and others. Women received equal voting rights with men in Britain in 1928.

Wood, Annie See Besant, Annie

Wood, Leonard 1860–1927. American officer. He helped his friend T. Roosevelt form the Rough Riders (q.v.), served as military governor of Cuba (1899–1902), chief of staff of the US Army (1910–14), and governor general of the Philippines (1921–27).

Woodhull, Victoria Claflin 1838–1927. American journalist and reformer. She supported such controversial causes as woman suffrage, Socialism, and free love, and in 1872 became the first woman candidate for president.

Woodstock US rock music festival (Aug. 16, 1969) held near Bethel, New York. Attended by some 300,000 youths, it marked the high point of the counterculture movement in the US.

Woodville, Elizabeth 1437–92. Wife of King Edward IV of England. After Edward's death, Richard, duke of Gloucester, seized Elizabeth's son, Edward V, and took the throne. Elizabeth's daughter married Henry VII.

Woolf, Virginia 1882–1941. English novelist and critic, whose life and writings had a major impact on 20th-cent. writers. Her home was the center for gatherings of the Bloomsbury Group. Her works include Mrs. Dalloway and To the Lighthouse.

Woolley, Sir Charles Leonard 1880–1960. English archaeologist. He directed the excavations (1922–34) of the ancient city of Ur, which contributed greatly to knowledge of ancient Mesopotamia.

Worcester, Battle of Rout (Sept. 3, 1651) of the Royalist forces of Charles II by the Parliamentarian forces commanded by O. Cromwell. It was the final victory in the English Civil War (1642–51).

Wordsworth, William 1770–1850. English poet, one of the leading figures of English Romanticism. His works include Lyrical Ballads, The Prelude, and Poems in Two Volumes.

Works Progress Administration See Work Projects Administration

Work Projects Administration ⟨formerly Works Progress Administration⟩ ⟨WPA⟩ US government agency established in 1935, and originally called the Works Progress Administration (renamed 1939), to create jobs for millions of unemployed during the Great Depression. It operated until 1943.

World Court See International Court of Justice

World Federation of Trade Unions See labor unions

World War I Worldwide conflict (1914–18) fought between the Allies (France, Britain, Russia, Italy, US, and others) and the Central Powers (Germany, Austro-Hungarian Empire, Ottoman Empire, and others). The bloodiest, most widespread war the world had known up to that time, WW I resulted in over 30 million casualties, left much of Europe in ruin, and revolutionized modern warfare. Among the causes of WW I were the rise of nationalist movements in Europe (especially in Serbia); hardening of alliances between various European powers (Triple Alliance and Entente, q.v.); colonial rivalries in Africa and elsewhere; the continuing instability of the Balkan Peninsular region (Austrian annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, 1908; Balkan Wars, (1912–13); and the gradual collapse of the Ottoman Empire (Eastern Question, q.v.). The spark that touched off WW I was the assassination of Austrian Archduke Ferdinand by a Serbian nationalist in 1914. The war quickly spread to many different fronts and eventually involved all the major Western powers. WW I saw the rise of bloody trench warfare (especially on the Western Front), the mechanization of warfare (tanks, planes, and motorized vehicles used), and the advent of chemical warfare. WW I also brought drastic political changes. Russia's staggering losses on the Eastern Front helped bring down the czarist government (1917) and led to creation of the first Communist state. The Ottoman Empire, long in decline, finally collapsed under the strains of war and was dismembered. The war also broke up the Austro-Hungarian Empire, giving rise to the independent states of Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia (as it was later called). The German surrender finally ended the war in Nov., 1918. Initially, the tremendous destruction caused by the war gave wide support to the newly created League of Nations and international efforts to end wars. But the war had set in motion great social and economic changes. Coupled with German resentment at the harsh peace terms imposed by the Allies, these changes helped pave the way for the outbreak of WW II.

1914 Austrian Archduke Francis Ferdinand assassinated (June 28) by a Serbian nationalist in Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia; set in motion chain of events that resulted in outbreak of war.

1914 German Emperor William II promised Austria-Hungary its support in any actions taken against Serbia (July 5).

1914 Austria-Hungary sent Serbia an ultimatum (July 23) pressing demands for suppression of Serbian nationalist groups in Serbia (which threatened to incite rebellion in Austria-Hungary).

1914 Serbia acceded to some demands and rejected others (July 25); Austria-Hungary broke relations with Serbia (which had already begun mobilization of forces) and began its own mobilization (July 25).

1914 Russia, Serbia's ally, unsuccessfully attempted to persuade Austria-Hungary to modify terms of its ultimatum and thereby avoid war (July 25); Russia made initial preparations to mobilize in the event of war.

1914 Britain attempted (July 26) to set up negotiations for a settlement; plan rejected by Germany.

1914 Austria declared war on Serbia (July 28).

1914 Russia ordered partial mobilization against Austria-Hungary (July 29); Germany, promising modification of ultimatum to Serbia, warned Russia against continuing mobilization order; Russian Czar Nicholas II hesitated, then ordered full mobilization (July 31).

1914 British requested recognition of Belgian neutrality (July 30); Germany refused.

1914 Germany declared war on Russia (Aug. 1). Russia, meanwhile, had received French commitment of support; French mobilization begun.

1914 German troops marched into Luxembourg (Aug. 1) to begin implementation of Schlieffen Plan; plan called for quick elimination of France from war to allow concentration of forces on Eastern Front; France to be attacked from the north (through Low Countries) and by a second (left) flank farther south.

1914 Germans, commanded by Gen. H. von Moltke, invaded Belgium (Aug. 3) after Belgians refused them right of transit.

1914 Germany declared war on France (Aug. 3).

1914 British, protesting Germany's violation of Belgian neutrality, declared war on Germany (Aug. 4).

1914 Strong fortifications at Liège, Belgium, captured by Germans (Aug. 5–16).

1914 French offensive; French attacks, commanded by Gen. J. Joffre, launched into Alsace (Aug. 7–9), Lorraine (Aug. 14–24), and the Ardennes (Aug. 22–25); all failed.

1914 British Expeditionary Force, commanded by Sir. J. French, landed at Le Havre (from Aug. 7).

1914 Eastern Front, Russian forces launched invasions of East Prussia (Aug. 13) and the Austrian province of Galicia; Russians, defeated at the Battle of Stallupönen (Aug. 17) in East Prussia, repulsed a counterattack at Gumbinnen (Aug. 20); in Galicia, after two inconclusive battles, the Russians won an important victory at the Battle of Gilna Lipa (Aug. 26–Sept. 1) and threw the Austrians into retreat.

1914 Austrians invaded Serbia (Aug. 16); their first invasion was repulsed, as were the second (Sept.) and third (Nov.).

1914 Western Front, Germans continued their drive through Belgium, capturing Namur after five-day siege (Aug. 19–25); Belgian army withdrew to Antwerp and Germans pushed on to take Antwerp (Aug. 20).

1914 Battle of Charleroi (Aug. 22); Germans defeated French and Belgian forces; continued drive through Belgium.

1914 Battle of Mons (Aug. 23–24); Germans defeated the British Expeditionary force; Allied forces in Belgium fell into retreat; Germans meanwhile weakened their right flank by sending troops (Aug. 25) to fight Russians on the Eastern Front; strong right flank was crucial element of Schlieffen Plan.

1914 Japan, as a result of alliances with Britain, declared war on Germany (Aug. 23).

1914 British won Battle of Helgoland Bight (Aug. 27), first major naval engagement.

1914 Eastern Front, German general von Hindenburg took command in Prussia and, with reinforcements from the Western Front, routed and captured the Russian 2d Army at the Battle of Tannenberg (Aug. 26–29); Russian 1st Army, defeated at the Battle of Mazurian Lakes (Sept. 9–14), barely managed to escape German armies.

1914 First Battle of the Marne (Sept. 5–9); Allied forces had taken up defensive positions on the Marne River in France; German attack faltered and after some days of hard fighting the Germans withdrew (Sept. 10–14) northward to defensive positions on the Aisne River in France.

1914 Gen. E. von Falkenhayn replaced Von Moltke as German commander (Sept. 10); opted for victory on Western Front by maintaining defensive positions; opposed efforts for offensives on Eastern Front.

1914 First Battle of the Aisne (Spet. 14–18); Germans held their positions against the British Expeditionary force.

1914 On the Eastern Front in Galicia the Austrians fell into retreat (Sept. 11–28) following Russian victory at Rawa Ruska (Sept. 5–11); retreated some 100 miles before taking up defensive positions.

1914 German campaigns in Poland; first invasion (Sept. 28–Nov. 1) nearly reached Warsaw before the Germans were driven out; second invasion (Nov. 10) culminated in capture of Lodz (Dec. 6) and retreat of Russian forces to defensive positions.

1914 Germans shifted Western Front offensive operations to north with aim of capturing French Channel ports; captured Antwerp, Belgium (Oct. 9).

1914 Ghent and Bruges captured (Oct. 11, 14) by Germans.

1914 Battle of Yser River, Belgium (Oct. 20–27); Germans advanced against Belgian forces; Belgians halted advance by flooding region (Oct. 27).

1914 Battle of Ypres, Belgium (Oct. 30–Nov. 24); Germans attempted to advance farther south but were held up by the British Expeditionary Force.

1914 Turkish Front, Turkey joined Germans (Oct. 29) against Russia; sultan proclaimed a Muslim holy war (Nov. 14); Turks under Enver Pasha launched invasion of Russian Caucasus in which the Turkish 3d Army was decimated (Battle of Sarikamis, Dec.–Jan.); forces from British India meanwhile occupied points in the Persian Gulf region (Oct.–Dec.).

1914 German cruiser squadron, commanded by Admiral von Spee, defeated British naval force (Nov. 1) off Coronel, Chile; British won decisive victory over von Spee at Battle of Falkland Islands (Dec. 8).

1914 Allied offensive along almost entire Western Front (Dec.) failed; war on Western Front shifted to trench warfare and front lines, stretching from Belgian coast to Switzerland, remained largely unchanged until just before war's end.

1915 Abortive Turkish attack on Suez Canal in Egypt (Feb. 3) repulsed by British.

1915 Eastern Front, Second Battle of Mazurian Lakes (Feb. 7–21); Germans inflicted heavy losses on Russians but failed to knock Russia out of the war.

1915–16 Turkish Front, Gallipoli Campaign (Feb. 19–Jan.); Allies, attempting to open supply route to Russia, launched nearly successful naval bombardment on Turkish installations guarding the Dardanelles strait (Feb. 19–Mar. 18); landings at Helles and Ari Burnu (Apr. 25) ended in disaster, as did Suvla Bay landing.

1915 Western Front, Battle of Neuve Chapelle (Mar. 10–13); British offensive made only small gains.

1915 Second Battle of Ypres (Apr. 22–May 15); Germans released chlorine gas (Apr. 22) in first use of poison gas in war.

1915 Battle of Artois (May 9–June 18); combined British and French offensive; French gained some 2½ miles but were unable to break German lines.

1915 In the East, Austro-German offensive in Galicia (May 4–Oct. 1) sent Russians in Austria into desperate retreat; Russians retreated some 300 miles with heavy losses in man and matériel; Czar Nicholas II took command of Russian army (Sept. 8) and by month's end established defensive line between Riga and Carpathian Mts.; much of Poland had been lost.

1915 Passenger liner Lusitania sunk by German submarine (May 7), as Germans established (Feb. 17) submarine blockade of Britain; US protested sinking and Germans revised (Sept. 1) submarine policy.

1915 Italy declared war on Austria-Hungary (May 23); ineffective, poorly equipped Italian army, commanded by Count Luigi Cadorna, launched four unsuccessful offensives against the Austrians along the Isonzo River; though Italian front quickly stabilized, it nevertheless tied down Austrian troops.

1915–16 Turkish Front, Armenian massacres; Ottoman government charged ethnic Armenians with aiding Russian forces (June) and ordered them moved away from all strategic points; Armenians subsequently brutalized and marched into desert; some one million killed (1915–16).

1915 On the Western Front, the Battle of Champagne (Sept. 22–Nov. 8); French gained but a few thousand yards in the initial assault; thereafter Gen. Joffre poured more troops into futile effort.

1915 British offensive aimed at Lens (Sept. 25–Oct. 30); British used gas and made more gains but failed to take Lens; British loss heavy, bringing about replacement of Sir French by Sir D. Haig as commander.

1915 Battle of Vimy Ridge (Sept. 25–Oct. 30); French offensive failed to take ridge.

1915 Salonica (Greece) Campaign; French and British landed forces in Greece (Oct. 3–5) in attempt to aid Serbia against impending attack; forces unable to link up with Serbians and retired to positions in Salonica; Allies forced overthrow of pro-German Greek king but otherwise remained inactive until end of war.

1915–16 Serbia and Montenegro conquered (Oct. 6–Jan.); Austro-German forces began invasion of Serbia and were joined by Bulgarian forces (entered war Sept. 22) on Oct. 11; Serbs forced into retreat and were later evacuated to Salonika; Montenegro surrendered (Jan. 17).

1915–16 Turkish Front; Allied forces withdrawn from Gallipoli (Dec. 10–Jan. 9), marking end of disastrous campaign; W. Churchill forced to resign as Lord of the Admiralty because of the failed campaign.

1916 Turkish Front; Russians began slow advance (Jan. 17) in the Caucasus region; captured Turkish stronghold of Trebizond (Apr. 17), repulsed Turkish counterattacks, and continued slow advance to Oct.

1916 On the Western Front, Battle of Verdun (Feb. 21–Dec. 18); Germans, implementing Falkenhayn's planned war of attrition, attacked French fortifications at Verdun; fighting raged almost whole year, with French taking offensive from Aug.; Germans gained little ground and French retained Verdun; of some 750,000 casualties, 350,000 were French.

1916 Italian Front (Mar. 9–Nov. 14); Italians launched unsuccessful offensive (5th Battle of Isonzo, Mar. 9–17); Austrians attacked at Asiago (May 15–July 7) but were driven back in an Italian counterattack (from June 16); Italians made little gain in 6th–9th battles of Isonzo (Aug.–Nov.).

1916 Russian offensive in the east failed (Mar. 18–28); Russian attack at Lake Naroch had been intended to draw German forces from Verdun.

1916 Sussex Incident (Mar. 24); passenger ship Sussex sunk by German submarine; US ultimatum led Germans to halt unrestricted submarine warfare.

1916 Battle of Jutland (May 31); German High Seas Fleet and British Grand Fleet (under Admiral Jellicoe) engaged in decisive battle; British suffered greater losses but retained control of North Sea.

1916 Arab revolt in the Hejaz (June 5); revolt, encouraged by British, sought to end Ottoman Turk control over Arabia; Mecca captured (June 10) after Arab leader Hussain ibn Ali declared Hejaz independent.

1916 New Russian offensive in the east (June 4–Sept. 20); Russian Gen. Aleksei Brusilov began successful advance from southwest part of front; broke through Austrian lines and pushed whole front westward before drive ended; offensive cost Central Powers heavy losses; Russians lost about one million men, which left army demoralized.

1916 Battle of the Somme (July 1–Nov. 18) in the west; largely British offensive to help relieve pressure on Verdun; limited gains (125 sq. mi. of territory) of little strategic value and achieved at cost of about 600,000 Allied casualties; German losses totalled 450,000; British made first use of tanks (Sept. 15) in battle.

1916 Field Marshal von Hindenburg replaced Falkenhayn as German commander (Aug.).

1916 Romania conquered by Central Powers (Aug. 28–Jan. 7); Romania joined the Allies (Aug. 17) and attacked Austrian Transylvania (Aug. 28); Central Powers invaded Romania (Sept. 1) and by Nov. had turned the tide; Bucharest captured (Dec. 6) and by Jan. 7 Central Powers had all of Romania except northeast.

1916 Peace initiatives by US president W. Wilson; Germans agreed (Dec.) to begin negotiations but British refused because of military situation (Romania had just been lost).

1916 Gen. Robert Nivelle made French commander, replacing Joffre (Dec.).

1917 British campaign in Palestine (Jan.–Dec.); British advance from Egypt toward Ottoman-controlled Palestine began in 1916; British crossed Sinai and fought three battles at Gaza (Mar., Apr., Oct.–Nov.) before dislodging the Turks; crossing into Palestine, they won the Battle of Junction Station (Nov. 13–14) and occupied Jerusalem (Dec. 9).

1917 Germans resumed unrestricted submarine warfare (Feb. 1); expected to be able to win war before US, which sharply opposed unrestricted use of submarines, could enter fighting; US broke diplomatic relations (Feb. 3).

1917 Zimmerman Note released (Mar. 1); secret proposal of alliance between Mexico and Germany aroused US sentiment for entry into war.

1917 British occupied Baghdad (Mar. 11), a strategic city controlling the region of Mesopotamia; thereafter engaged in operations to clear Turkish forces from region; T. E. Lawrence, meanwhile, played an important role in the continuing Arab revolt against the Turks in Arabia.

1917 Russian Revolution of 1917; demoralized by losses in war and years of repressive czarist rule, the Russians rose in revolt; Provisional Government established (Mar.) after the overthrow of Czar Nicholas; Germans transported Bolshevik leader N. Lenin from Switzerland to Russia by famous "sealed train" (Apr.) in hope he would foment new unrest.

1917 US declared war on Germany (Apr. 6), following German submarine attacks on US merchant vessels.

1917 Germans withdrew (Feb.–Apr.) on Western Front to new, stronger defensive positions (the Hindenburg Line).

1917 Allied offensive (Apr.–May) on the Western Front; overall commander was French Gen. Nivelle; began with Battle of Arras (Apr. 9–May 3) in which Canadian forces captured Vimy Ridge (Apr. 12); main attack came in Second Battle of the Aisne (Apr. 16–May 9) in which Germans slaughtered French attackers; exhausted, French army mutinied (May) and many deserted; Gen. H. Pétain replaced Nivelle and restored order (July).

1917 Italian Front (May–Sept.); Italians suffered heavy losses in 10th and 11th battles of Isonzo.

1917 Second Allied Offensive on Western Front (June–Nov.); British captured Messines Ridge (June 7–8) in preliminary battle; British launched main assault in Flanders and Third Battle of Ypres (July 31–Nov. 15); this cost almost 300,000 Allied casualties without achieving breakthrough of German lines; French meanwhile made some gains in fighting at Verdun (Aug. 20–26).

1917 Greece joined Allies (July 2) after Allies forced pro-German King Constantine to abdicate (June 11) in favor of his son, Alexander.

1917 July Offensive on the Eastern Front (July 1–Aug.); provisional government mounted attack on Austrian province of Galicia, led by Gen. Brusilov; German counterattack (from July 19) turned back the Russians and large-scale desertions began; Gen. Kornilov became Russian commander (Aug. 1).

1917 Germans occupied Riga (Sept. 3) at north end of Eastern Front; Germans advanced eastward as Russians retreated, and took much of Latvia (by Oct.
20), as well as Russian islands in eastern Baltic.

1917 American Expeditionary Force, commanded by Gen. Pershing, entered combat on Western Front (Oct.); influx of American combat troops continued, reaching one million by Nov. 1918.

1917 Battle of Caporetto on the Italian Front (Oct. 24–Dec. 26); Austro-German offensive, designed to knock Italy out of the war, sent Italians into retreat from Isonzo River; Italians established new position along Piave River, 70 miles south; Gen. Armando Diaz replaced Gen. Cadorna as Italian commander and Allies sent troops from Western Front.

1917 November Revolution in Russia; Lenin's Bolsheviks seized power (Nov. 7); Lenin soon after sought armistice with Germans; made public secret agreements between Allies at start of war; Russia began negotiations with Central Powers (Dec. 5) for truce.

1917 Battle of Cambrai (Nov. 20–Dec. 3) in the West; British used first massed tank assault but, failing to capitalize on initial gains, were driven back by Germans.

1917 Romania signed truce with Central Powers (Dec. 6); loss of Russian support made further fighting by remnants of Romanian army futile.

1917 Russians concluded armistice (Dec. 15), ending fighting on Eastern Front.

1918 Pres. Wilson announced (Jan. 8) his Fourteen Points, plan to secure lasting peace after war's end.

1918 Treaty of Brest-Litovsk (Mar. 3); Russians, after first refusing harsh German terms, accepted when the German armies advanced into Russian domains in the Baltic and Crimean regions; treaty abrogated when Germany surrendered in Nov.

1918 German spring offensive on the Western Front; hoping to split Allied lines, Germans launched Somme Campaign (Mar. 21–Apr. 8) and gained about 40 miles; French Gen. F. Foch named Allied overall commander (Mar. 26) to at last provide coordination of Allied effort.

1918 Second German offensive at Lys (Apr. 9–29); German drive against British in Flanders advanced 15 miles before being stopped.

1918 Red Baron (M. Richthofen), German ace pilot, killed in action (Apr. 21).

1918 Third German offensive near the Aisne River (May 27–June 6); German surprise attack resulted in advance to the Marne River, near Paris; US troops reinforced French forces at Chateau-Thierry (June 1–4) and halted German advance at the Marne.

1918 Fourth German offensive on the Western Front (June 9–13); Battle of the Metz ended in failure.

1918 Fifth German offensive in the West (July 15–Aug. 6); Second Battle of the Marne began with initial advance by war-weary German troops, who crossed Marne; Gen. Foch turned tide of war with strong counterattack (July 18); Germans, weakened by loss of over three-quarters of a million men in the offensive, withdrew to defensive positions.

1918 Allied offensive in West began (Aug. 8); British broke German lines with surprise attack at Battle of Amiens (Aug. 8–11); Allies won battles of Somme and Arras (Aug. 21–Sept. 3) and Germans retreated behind Hindenburg Line; Americans victorious at the Battle of San Mihiel salient (Sept. 12–13).

1918 Allied offensive from Salonica (Sept. 15–Nov. 10); Bulgaria surrendered (Sept. 29), Serbia liberated (Nov. 1), Albania and Montenegro taken (by Nov. 9) and Romania captured (Nov. 10).

1918 Battle of Megiddo (Sept. 19) in Palestine; British victory marked beginning of northward drive by British and Arab forces; Damascus, Beirut, and Aleppo captured by Allied forces (Oct.); with Allies advancing from Syria and Mesopotamia, Ottoman Turks signed armistice (Oct. 30).

1918 Last Allied offensive in West (Sept.–Nov.); planned two-prong attack began with US Battle of the Argonne Forest (Sept. 26–Oct. 31); British launched attack in north (Sept. 27) and a broad offensive (with Belgians and French) in the north broke the Hindenburg Line in the following days.

1918 German general Ludendorff demanded government begin armistice talks (Sept. 29).

1918 American Army sergeant A. York became a hero after capturing a fortified German position (Oct. 18); took 132 prisoners.

1918 Germans made preliminary contacts with Pres. Wilson to discuss settlement on basis of Fourteen Points (Oct. 4).

1918 Italian Offensive (Oct. 24–Nov. 4); following failure of Austrian attack at Battle of Piave (June 15–24), the Italians mounted an attack (Oct. 24); with the Austro-Hungarian Empire collapsing, the Austrians began to withdraw and by Nov. 3 the Italians had begun attacks on Trieste.

1918 Austria sued for peace (Oct. 27) as the Austro-Hungarian Empire crumbled; Poland declared independence (Oct. 15), followed by Czechs, Yugoslavs, and Hungarians.

1918 Austro-Hungarian Empire signed armistice (Nov. 3); empire broken up into independent republics (Nov.).

1918 First meeting between Gen. Foch and German leaders to discuss terms of armistice (Nov. 8).

1918 Collapse of the German government (Nov. 9); began with mutiny by German sailors at Kiel (Nov. 3); revolt spreading through Germany forced Emperor William to abdicate (Nov. 9); republic was then proclaimed.

1918 Germany concluded armistice (Nov. 11); acceded to harsh terms, including loss of territory, surrender of most of its navy, and loss of military and transportation equipment.

1919 German warships, to be surrendered to Allies, scuttled at Scapa Flow by German crews (June 21).

1919 Treaty of Versailles signed (June 28); imposed harsh terms on Germany, including heavy reparations, strict limit on size of military, loss of all overseas territories, demilitarization of the Rhineland; Germany was stripped of Alsace-Lorraine and other territories, and had formally placed upon it sole responsibility for the war; treaty also set up League of Nations and made other territorial adjustments.

1919–20 Other separate treaties concluded; included Treaty of St. Germain (Sept. 10), signed by Austria; Treaty of Neuilly, signed (Nov. 27) by the Bulgarians; Treaty of Trianon, signed (June 4) by Hungary; and the Treaty of Sèvres, signed by the Ottomans (Aug. 10).

World War II Worldwide conflict (1939–45) involving all of the great powers and many of the lesser states as well. The combatants were divided into two opposing groups: the Allies (led by Britain, US, France, and [after 1941] the USSR), and the Axis powers (led by Germany, Russia [to 1941], Italy, and Japan). The war resulted in widespread destruction and suffering and cost many millions of lives. In addition, millions of others (notably Jews and Poles) died in Nazi death camps or were made slave laborers. The mechanization of warfare reached new levels in WW II and the airplane emerged as an important weapon in war on land and at sea. Finally, the use of atomic bombs by the US at the end of the war introduced the age of nuclear warfare. The causes of WW II are rooted in the economic, social, and political chaos of Europe following WW I. The economic collapse in Germany after the war and the harsh peace terms imposed by the Allies fostered German resentment and gave birth to A. Hitler's Nazi party. Fascism, under B. Mussolini, was also born of the postwar chaos in Italy. The rise of militaristic, totalitarian regimes was further aided by fear of the Communists and by a new economic collapse in the late 1920s and early 1930s (the Great Depression helped bring Hitler to power in Germany). It was Hitler who, after clearly adopting a militaristic aggressive policy, started WW II by invading Poland (Sept. 1939). Though Hitler quickly conquered Continental Europe, his decision to invade (1941) the USSR (until then an ally) proved to be his undoing. After the Japanese began the war in the Pacific Theater, the US entered the hostilities and Germany was confronted by the combined forces of the US, the USSR, and the British Commonwealth, as well as resistance fighters from conquered nations. From about 1942, the tide of the war turned against the Axis powers and the surrender of Nazi Germay (May, 1945) was closely followed by the Japanese surrender (Sept., 1945). Treaties were signed (1947) at Paris by the Allies and Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Finland. A peace treaty with Japan was signed (1951). Principal events were:

1938 Germany annexed Austria (Mar.).

1938 Munich Pact signed (Sept.); following policy of appeasement, European powers agreed to formula to allow Germany to take Sudetenland in Czechoslovakia.

1939 Germans occupied all of Czechoslovakia, ignoring terms of Munich Pact.

1939 Italy invaded Albania (Apr.).

1939 Allies abandoned appeasement policy in face of aggression by Germans and Italians; began to build up military forces; formed anti-agression pacts with Turkey, Greece, Romania, and Poland.

1939 Pact of Steel concluded (May 22); confirmed German-Italian alliance.

1939 Nonaggression Pact between Germany and USSR signed (Aug. 24); Germany, no longer threatened with possibility of war on two fronts.

1939 Germany invaded Poland (Sept. 1); WW II began.

1939 Britain and France declared war on Germany (Sept. 3).

1939 German conquest of Poland (Sept. 1–27); Germans demonstrated effectiveness of Blitzkrieg using Panzer tanks, highly mobile mechanized infantry units, and strong air cover; two-pronged German attack advanced eastward, while Soviets launched westward attack beginning Sept. 17; Germans captured Warsaw (Sept. 27) and Poland was partitioned between the victorious Germans and Soviets.

1939–40 Russo-Finnish War (Nov. 30–Mar. 12); Soviets invaded Finland and met unexpectedly stiff resistance at Finnish Mannerheim Line; after months of hard fighting, Finland surrendered.

1939 Admiral Graf Spee, German pocket battleship, scuttled (Dec. 17) in Montevideo harbor; had been badly damaged in battle with British warships off Uruguayan coast.

1940 Norway conquered by Germans (Apr. 9–June 10); surprise attack began simultaneously in Norway and Denmark; Denmark surrendered (Apr. 9); Norway largely in German hands by mid-May; final victory came with Allied evacuation at Narvik (June 10).

1940 Germans invaded The Netherlands, Luxembourg, and Belgium (May 10).

1940 W. Churchill replaced Chamberlain as British prime minister (May 10).

1940 The Netherlands conquered by Germans (May 10–14); Germans invaded from south and quickly put Dutch forces into retreat to Antwerp (May 13); German bombing attack on Rotterdam (May 14) brought Dutch surrender.

1940 Invasion of Belgium (May 10–28); two German forces advanced, one to the north took Liege (May 12); the other pushed through the Ardennes and broke Allied defenses at Sedan; this force raced to the English Channel (reached May 20); Germans defeated Allied attempt to break out to the south (May 21–23); Belgium surrendered (May 28).

1940 British evacuation at Dunkirk (June 4); encircled by German forces in Belgium, British and other Allied forces withdrew by makeshift flotilla to Britain; supplies and equipment lost.

1940 Battle of France (June 5–22); German offensive began in extreme north, between Abbeville and Sedan and thereby outflanked the French Maginot Line; Germans broke through French defenses at the Aisne and Somme rivers (June 8) and occupied Paris (June 14); defensive fortifications at Verdun captured (June 15) and French sued for peace (June 17); France signed peace terms (June 22); northern France occupied by Germans, southern France run by Vichy government.

1940 Free French army formed (June 23) by C. De Gaulle in London.

1940 French fleet at Oran sunk by British (July 3).

1940 Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania absorbed by USSR (Aug.).

1940 Italy declared war on Britain and France (June 10).

1940 Italians conquered British Somaliland (Aug. 6–19); marked beginning of war in Africa.

1940 Battle of Britain begun (Aug. 13); fought entirely in the air, the battle began as preparation for German invasion of Britain; German Luftwaffe failed to knock out British RAF and suffered heavy losses; began bombing London (Sept. 7) and abandoned planned invasion; heavy bombing raids on London continued into 1941.

1940 Japan concluded Tripartite Pact with Germany and Italy (Sept. 27).

1940 Italy invaded Egypt (Sept. 13–15) from Libya; British launched counteroffensive (Dec. 8) and drove into Libya; invasions of Italian East Africa begun (Jan. 15, 1941) and completed that year; British advance in Libya continued into Feb., 1941.

1940–41 Axis offensive in the Balkans (Oct.–May); Italian invasion of Greece (Oct. 28) was repulsed and Greeks invaded Albania (Dec. 3); German troops invaded Yugoslavia and Greece (Apr. 6); Yugoslavia surrendered (Apr. 17); captured Athens (Apr. 27), and drove British off Crete (May 31); Hungary, Bulgaria, and Romania meanwhile joined Axis powers.

1940 Submarine warfare in the Atlantic; Germans, unable to match Allied surface fleet; organized submarine wolf packs to sink supply convoys; despite implementation of convoy system, loss of Allied shipping increased steadily until Nov., 1942.

1941 US established Lend-Lease program (Mar. 11) to provide Allies with badly needed supplies; marked increased shift by US from policy of neutrality.

1941 German offensive in North Africa (Apr.–May); Gen. E. Rommel's Afrika Corps launched rapid advance (Apr. 3) against British in Libya; drove British back to Egyptian border by May 29.

1941 R. Hess, close adviser of A. Hitler, flew to Scotland, ostensibly to discuss his plan to end war with British (May 10).

1941 Bismarck, German battleship, sunk by British warships while she was on maiden voyage (May 27).

1941 Iraq came under British control (June 4) following brief fight against rebels who had overthrown government there; British and Russian troops later occupied Iran (July 25).

1941 British and Free French occupied Syria, taking control from Vichy French forces. (June 8–14).

1941 USSR invaded by Germans (Operation Barbarossa, June 22); three-pronged attack launched, north toward Leningrad, center toward Smolensk and Moscow, and south toward Kiev; rapid German advance caught hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops, but overall numbers of Soviet troops far greater than Hitler anticipated; Stalin proclaimed "scorched earth" policy as Soviets retreated eastward (July 3).

1941 US occupied Iceland (July 7).

1941 Vichy government of France forced to allow Japan to occupy French Indochina (July 21).

1941 Atlantic Charter signed (Aug. 12) by US and Britain; declaration of common goals for world peace.

1941 Russian Front; Germans, advancing rapidly, surrounded Leningrad (Sept. 8) in north and captured Kiev (Sept. 24) in south; German drive on Moscow began (Oct. 2) and Soviets removed to Kuibyshev (Oct. 19); heavy rains and mud slowed German advance, which reached outskirts of Moscow (Nov. 15); offensive halted (Dec.) by onset of Russian winter before Moscow could be captured.

1941 Soviets signed (Oct. 1) agreements with Britain and US; US to provide supplies under Lend-Lease arrangements; US supply convoys to north Russian ports regularly came under heavy German attacks during war.

1941–42 North Africa campaign; British launched new offensive into Libya (Nov. 18) and drove Germans back to El Agheila (Jan. 18).

1941–42 Russian winter offensive (Dec.–Feb.); Soviet armies attacked Germans around Moscow (Dec. 6); Hitler ordered troops to hold positions and took direct command of army (Dec. 19); Germans. ill-prepared for Russian winter, forced to withdraw (Jan. 15) to west.

1941 Pearl Harbor (Dec. 7); Japanese surprise attack wrecked US Pacific fleet and marked beginning of Japanese offensive in South Pacific.

1941 US declared war (Dec. 8).

1941–42 Japanese offensive in Pacific theater; Bangkok, Thailand occupied (Dec. 8); British battleships Prince of Wales and Repulse sunk (Dec. 10); Guam captured (Dec. 13); Wake Island captured (Dec. 23); Hong Kong surrendered (Dec. 25); in the Philippines, Manila fell (Jan. 2), Bataan (Apr. 9), and Corregidor (May 6); Singapore fell (Feb. 15); conquest of Dutch East Indies completed (Mar. 9), after victory in Battle of Java Sea (Mar. 1); Burma conquered (Dec.–May).

1941–42 Arcadia Conference (Dec. 22–Jan. 14); Roosevelt and Churchill conferred.

1942 Declaration of the United Nations signed (Jan. 1) by Allied leaders; promised to prosecute war until complete defeat of Axis powers.

1942 Gen. D. MacArthur named supreme commander of Allied forces in Southwest Pacific (Mar. 17), following his withdrawal from the Philippines.

1942 Russian Front; abortive Soviet spring offensive halted after a quarter million soldiers were captured in attack (May 12) on Kharkov, in the south.

1942 Anglo-Soviet Agreement (May 26) united Britain and Russia against Nazi Germany.

1942 British launched air attack on Cologne (May 30–31).

1942 Manhattan Project begun by US (June) to develop atomic bomb.

1942 Pacific theater; US naval and air forces turned back Japanese invasion force heading for New Guinea (Battle of the Coral Sea, May 7–8); Japanese invaded Aleutian Islands (June 3), eventually taking Attu; Battle of Midway (June 4–7), US naval air units heavily damaged Japanese fleet sent to take Midway Island.

1942 Czech village of Lidice destroyed by Germans (June 10) after Czech resistance fighters killed high German SS official, R. Heydrich.

1942 US general D. Eisenhower named commander of US forces in European theater (June 25).

1942 Russian Front; German offensive began (June 28), Stalingrad being among its targets; fighting around the city broke out by Aug. 9, as Germans met stiff Russian resistance; heavy fighting continued into fall, when Soviets launched counterattack.

1942 US offensive in the Pacific; troops landed on Guadalcanal (Aug. 7) beginning of fight in Solomon Islands; Japanese naval force heavily damaged in Battle of Eastern Solomons (Aug. 23–25); Guadalcanal secured by US forces (Feb. 1943).

1942 Dieppe Raid (Aug. 19) failed; Allied (experimental landing on French coast cost nearly two-thirds of troops.

1942 Allied offensive in New Guinea began (Sept. 25); Japanese had invaded New Guinea (Mar.) in preparation for attack on Australia; US and Australian forces secured Buna and Gona (Dec.); convoy with Japanese reinforcements sunk by Allied aircraft (Mar. 4, 1943).

1942 British counterattacked Japanese in Burma (Oct.); British gains lost in new Japanese attack (Mar.–May, 1943); Allies meanwhile began building (Dec. 1942) the Ledo Road from India, to provide overland supply route to China.

1942 North Africa campaign; following new German offensive by Rommel (Jan.), Germans had pushed British back into Egypt; British Gen. B. Montgomery led his forces in crucial Battle of El Alamein (Oct. 23–Nov. 4), in which Germans were driven back into Libya.

1942 US forces, led by Gen. D. Eisenhower, landed in Algeria (Nov. 8), beginning second front in North Africa; Vichy French forces ceased all resistance (Nov. 10); Allied forces began eastward advance into Tunisia.

1942 Germans extended their zone of occupation in France to include all of France (Nov. 11); French fleet at Toulon scuttled (Nov. 27) by French.

1942–43 Battle of Stalingrad on the Russian Front (Nov.–Feb.); Soviet offensive began (Nov. 19), and soon encircled 22 German divisions around Stalingrad; these forces reduced to about 90,000 men by the time their commander surrendered (Feb. 2); battle turned tide of war against Germans; meanwhile, long German siege of Leningrad was broken (Jan.).

1943 Casablanca Conference held (Jan. 14–24); Roosevelt and Churchill decided to press for complete German surrender; invasion of France put off; invasion of Sicily planned.

1943 Final Allied offensive in North Africa; US forces advancing east through Tunisia, British driving west from Egypt; British captured Tripoli (Jan. 23); Rommel stung US forces at Battle of Kasserine Pass (Feb. 20), but US soon recovered offensive; British broke through German defensive Mareth Line in Tunisia (Mar.) and Allied forces linked up (Apr. 7), securing the North Africa coast; final Allied offensive (May) resulted in capture of remaining Axis troops.

1943 In Russia, German counterattack won Kharkov and Belgorod (Mar. 11, 18) and halted Russian advance after Stalingrad.

1943 Katyn Massacre discovered (Apr. 13).

1943 Warsaw Ghetto uprising (May); some 60,000 Polish Jews rose in desperate and unsuccessful revolt against Nazis; revolt came after Nazis had taken 400,000 to concentration camps.

1943 Trident Conference held (May 12–25); Roosevelt and Churchill planned invasion of Italian peninsula; put off invasion of France to 1944.

1943 Soviets dissolved (May 22) the Comintern, organization for spread of communism; this marked Stalin's policy of appeasing the Allies.

1943 US forces recaptured Attu in the Aleutian Islands (June 3); ended Japanese threat to North American territories.

1943 Allied invasion of Sicily (July 10–Aug. 18); US, British, and Canadian forces, led by Gen. Eisenhower, landed on south coast; Palermo occupied (July 24); Messina captured (Aug. 18), ending the fight for Sicily.

1943 Sustained Russian offensive began (July 11); after a weak German attack, the Russians pushed westward in the region of Orel and Belgorod and by August advance on a broad front was under way; German retreat was confused (by Hitler's intervention) and costly; Soviets crossed Dnieper River in October and recaptured Kiev (Nov. 6); advance continued into 1943.

1943 Allied offensive in the Pacific began (July 1); US and Australian forces advanced in New Guinea, captured Japanese strongholds of Salamaua (July 3) and Lae (Sept. 7); captured New Georgia (Aug. 7), Bougainville (Oct. 31); Gilbert Islands were invaded (Nov. 22).

1943 Fire-bombing of Hamburg (July 24–Aug. 3).

1943 Italy's Fascist leader, B. Mussolini, resigned (July 25) as invasion of Sicily progressed; new government dissolved Fascist party and began peace talks.

1943 Quebec Conference held (Aug. 11–24); Roosevelt and Churchill considered problems related to invasion of France but reached no decisions.

1943 Campaign for Italian mainland; British landed in southern Italy (Sept. 3), US landed at Salerno (Sept. 9); Allies advanced north, taking Naples (Oct. 1); Allies halted by German Gustav Line, south of Cassino, until following spring.

1943 Italy surrendered unconditionally (Sept. 3).

1943 Germans set up Italian puppet state after rescuing the imprisoned Mussolini (Sept. 15); German troops in Italy subsequently put up stiff resistance to Allied forces attempting to take Italian mainland.

1943 Italy declared war on Germany (Oct. 13).

1943 Teheran Conference (Nov. 8–Dec. 1); Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin met; Allies to open up second front with invasion of France, in both north and south.

1944 Russian offensive continued; Novgorod captured (Jan. 20) and Soviets reached border of Poland (Feb.); in south, reached Romanian border (Mar. 26); Sevastopol and Crimean region secured (May).

1944 Allied landings at Anzio, Italy (Jan. 22); this attempt to outflank German defensive line failed.

1944 Pacific offensive; US forces invaded Marshall Islands (Feb.), Admiralty Islands (Mar.), and the Marianas (June); US won major victory in Battle of the Philippine Sea (June 1) during Marianas invasion and by it crippled the Japanese navy; Guam secured (Aug.).

1944 Massive bombing raids over Germany (Feb. 20) began.

1944 Allied offensive in Italy; major attack at Cassino (Mar. 15–May 18) finally broke German Gustav Line; Allies pushed north, occupying Rome (June 4) and Florence (Aug. 12); Germans, however, held onto northern Italy until last months of the war.

1944 Normandy invasion; allied landings in France began (June 6) under the command of Gen. Eisenhower; US troops landed at Omaha and Utah beaches, British and Canadian troops at Gold, Juno, and Sword beaches; British reached Caen (July 8) and US forces took St.-Lo (July 18); meanwhile troops and supplies poured in as largest amphibious operation in history progressed.

1944 Russian front; as Normandy invasion progressed, Soviets launched drives in the east; German armies in Poland collapsed (June–July) before Soviet advance; in south, Soviets entered Balkans, capturing Romania (Aug. 24), Bulgaria (Sept. 8), Yugoslavia (Oct. 20); met stiff German resistance in Hungary (Nov.); in the north, Finland surrendered (Sept. 19) and Riga, on the Baltic coast, was taken (Oct. 13).

1944 Hitler narrowly escaped assassination attempt (July 20); Hitler took brutal revenge on all he suspected of complicity.

1944 St.-Lo Breakout in France (July 25–27); US forces broke German lines at St.-Lo, drove southeast to secure Brittany (July–Aug.) and southwest to capture Le Mans (Aug. 8); eastward drive (north of Loire River) next liberated Paris (Aug. 25), which German officers had refused to destroy, and brought the Allies to the Seine River.

1944 Warsaw Uprising (Aug.–Oct.); Polish underground army resistance crushed by Germans; Soviets, meanwhile, halted their advance in Poland just outside Warsaw and refused to aid the pro-West underground army.

1944 Allied landings in southern France, between Marseilles and Nice (Aug. 15); Allied armies moved northward up the Rhone Valley; captured Lyon (Sept. 3) before Germans stalled the advance.

1944 Allied advance eastward; British forces liberated Brussels, Belgium (Sept. 2); Liège captured (Sept. 7), followed by liberation of Luxembourg (Sept. 10) and invasion of German frontier (Sept. 11); Gen. Patton's forces crossed the Moselle River to the south (Sept. 7); airborne assault at Arnheim (to outflank German "West Wall" defenses) failed (Sept. 17–26); Allied supply lines now overextended by rapid pace of advance.

1944 Allied invasion force from southern France linked up with northern invasion force at Dijon (Sept. 15).

1944 Hitler issued call-up of all able-bodied males (Sept. 25) for last-ditch defense of Germany.

1944 V-2 rocket attacks on Britain began (Oct. 7).

1944 British occupied Greece (Oct.), following withdrawal of German forces; revolt by Communists put down.

1944–45 Philippines campaign in the Pacific (Oct. 20–Feb. 23); recapture of the Philippines began with landings on Leyte and naval battle of Leyte Gulf; Leyte secured and Luzon invaded by US (Jan.); Manila taken (Feb. 23); resistance by remnants of Japanese forces continued for duration of the war.

1944 US bombers, flying from air bases on Saipan, began regular bombing raids against Japanese cities (Nov.).

1944 Battle of the Bulge in Western Europe (Dec. 16–Jan. 25); Germans mounted surprise attack aimed at breaking overextended Allied lines and capturing Antwerp, Belgium; was last major German offensive.

1945 Russian advance from the east; Warsaw taken by Soviets (Jan. 17), Krakow (Jan. 19); to south, German resistance in Hungary broken and Budapest finally captured (Feb. 13); Soviet units took Vienna, Austria (Apr. 13) and began fight to take Berlin (Apr. 20).

1945 Yalta Conference held (Feb. 4–11); Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin discussed plans for occupation of Germany after war.

1945 Fire-bombing of Dresden (Feb. 13–14).

1945 Battle of Iwo Jima (Feb. 19–Mar. 17) in Pacific; US forces suffered heavy casualties in battle for the strategic island.

1945 Allied offensive into the German Rhineland began (Feb. 23); US forces reached Rhine River (Mar. 2), captured Cologne (Mar. 7); crossed Rhine (Mar. 7) at Remagen; reached Elbe River (Apr. 12). Germans in Ruhr district enveloped (Apr. 1); US forces reached Elbe River (Apr. 12).

1945 Battle of Okinawa (Apr. 1–June 21) fought in Pacific; island provided still closer land base for bombers attacking Japan.

1945 Final Allied offensive in northern Italy (Apr. 9); German resistance broken; last German forces surrendered (May 1).

1945 US president Roosevelt died (Apr. 12).

1945 US and Soviet troops link up at Torgau, along the Elbe River (Apr. 25).

1945 San Fransisco Conference held (Apr.–June); wrote United Nations Charter.

1945 Mussolini captured and killed by anti-Fascists (Apr. 28).

1945 Hitler committed suicide (Apr. 30) as Soviet forces closed in on Berlin; K. Donitz named as his successor.

1945 Berlin capture completed (May 2).

1945 Germany surrendered (May 7); Allied Control Committee formed by Allied military leaders to govern Germany (June 5).

1945 Allies, led by Lord Mountbatten, gained control of Burma (May) after long campaign against Japanese.

1945 Potsdam Conference held (July 17–Aug. 2) by Allies; outlawed Nazism in Germany, established Soviet control of eastern Germany, and called on Japanese to surrender.

1945 Atomic bomb dropped by US on Hiroshima (Aug. 6); city devastated.

1945 Soviet invasion of Japanese-held Manchuria began (Aug. 8).

1945 US dropped second atomic bomb on Nagasaki (Aug. 9).

1945 Japan surrendered (Aug. 14); signed formal surrender (Sept. 2).

1945–46 Nuremberg Trials held to judge leaders of Nazi party for war crimes; twelve sentenced to death, others to prison.

Worms, Concordat of See Concordat of Worms

Worms, Diet of Imperial diet called (1521) during the Reformation by Holy Roman Emperor Charles V. It was convened at Worms, Germany, to consider action against Protestant reformer M. Luther. Luther had already been condemned by Pope Leo X and was given safe conduct to appear before the diet (Apr. 17, 1521). There Luther was asked to repudiate his teachings; on the following day he refused. The subsequent Edict of Worms (May 25) declared Luther a heretic and outlaw and forced him to go into hiding for some months.

Worms, Synod of 1. Synod of German Catholic bishops called (1076) at Worms, now in West Germany, by Holy Roman Emperor Henry IV. A high point in Henry's conflict with the pope over lay investiture, the synod declared Pope Gregory VII deposed, in response to Gregory's attempt to impose reforms. Gregory subsequently excommunicated and deposed Henry (1076). 2. Synod of German bishops called (1122) at Worms to settle the investiture controversy between Holy Roman Emperor Henry V and Pope Calixtus II. The synod formulated the Concordat of Worms (q.v.).

Wounded Knee Site on the South Dakota Pine Ridge Indian Reservation where US troops massacred some 200 Sioux Indians (Dec. 29, 1890). After the death of Sitting Bull, some of the Sioux were influenced by a seer and fled the reservation.

They were rounded up at Wounded Knee by US cavalrymen and while the Indians were being disarmed, a fight broke out. The troops opened fire indiscriminately, massacring men, women, and children.

WPA See Works Projects Administration

Wrangel, Karl Gustaf 1613–76. Swedish general and naval commander. He distinguished himself during the Thirty Years' War, and in 1646 succeeded L. Torstensson as commander in chief. Under Charles X, Wrangel commanded in wars against Poland, Denmark, and Brandenburg.

Wren, Sir Christopher 1632–1723. English architect, astronomer, and mathematician. The greatest architect of his day, he designed more than 50 London churches, including St. Paul's Cathedral.

Wright, Frank Lloyd 1869–1959. American architect whose innovative approach to the design and structure of modern buildings greatly influenced the development of modern architecture.

Wright, Horatio Gouverneur 1820–99. Union general in the American Civil War, who fought at the first Battle of Bull Run, and commanded in the Florida campaign (1862) and in the defense of Washington, D.C. (1864).

Wright, Orville and Wilbur 1871–1948; 1867–1912. American inventors. Originally bicycle mechanics, the Wright brothers built a biplane kite (1899). They went on to build the first successful heavier-than-air, powered airplane, which they flew for the first time at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina (Dec. 17, 1903). By 1909, they had won the first contract to construct a military plane for the US Army. Wilbur subsequently ran their airplane-manufacturing company until his death, while Orville devoted himself to research.

Wu Hou 625–705. T'ang empress of China (684–704). She was a concubine of Emperor Kao Tsung who first ruled by her influence and then as empress.

Wundt, Wilhelm 1832–1920. German physiologist and psychologist, considered the father of experimental psychology. He established, at Leipzig, the first laboratory for this discipline.

Wu P'ei-fu 1873–1939. Chinese warlord. He supported Yüan Shih-k'ai and the Chinese republic. From 1916 to 1926 he fought Chang Tso-lin for control of Northern China, but his attempt to unify China failed.

Wu Ti 156–87 BC. Emperor (140–87 BC) of the Chinese Han dynasty. He greatly expanded the empire (into Vietnam, Korea, and the northern and western border regions), instituted administrative reforms to further strengthen imperial authority, set up the Chinese Examination System (q.v.), and established Confucianism as the state religion.

Wyandotte Constitution Antislavery constitution prepared (July, 1859) at Wyandotte, Kansas. It marked the culmination of the struggle between slave and antislave forces known as Bleeding Kansas (q.v.). The constitution was approved in a popular referendum (Oct., 1859) and Kansas was finally admitted to the Union (Jan. 29, 1861) as a free state.

Wyatt's Rebellion Unsuccessful rebellion against Queen Mary of England by Sir Thomas Wyatt (d. 1554) and others in 1554. The uprising failed to gain popular support and Wyatt surrendered, was tried, and hanged.

Wycherley, William 1640?–1716? English dramatist, whose plays are noted for their satirical wit. Among his best are The Country Wife and The Plain Dealer.

Wyclif, John See Wycliffe, John

Wycliffe, John ⟨Wyclif, John⟩ ⟨Wickliffe, John⟩ ⟨Wiclif, John⟩ *c*1320–84. English reformer and theologian whose attacks on church doctrine anticipated the Protestant Reformation. He began the first English translation of the Bible.

Wyeth, Andrew 1917–. American painter. Noted for his precise technique and subtle use of light and color, he paints rural subjects. His best-known work is Christina's World.

Wyoming Western US state (pop. 470,816), the 44th state. The area was held by Spain, France, and England, but by 1846 the US had acquired all of it by purchase or treaty. The fur trade and natural wonders brought explorers, but Indian attacks hindered development until the discovery of gold and the coming of the railroad drew more settlers to the region. The Wyoming Territory was formed in 1868 and was the first to give women the vote. It became a state in 1890 and elected the first US woman governor, Nellie Taylor Ross (1924). Its constitution was adopted in 1890.

Wyoming Massacre Battle (July 3, 1778) between 1,000 British Loyalists (and Iroquois Indians) and some 300 American settlers in the Wyoming valley of Pennsylvania. Most of the settlement men were away with Washington's army. The 300 remaining men and boys ventured out of Forty Fort to meet the British and were massacred by the superior attacking force. The incident outraged American colonials and led to punitive expeditions against the Iroquois Indians.

Wythe, George 1726–1806. American jurist and statesman. A signer of the Declaration of Independence, he was professor of law at the College of William and Mary (1779–90). His teachings influenced T. Jefferson, J. Marshall, and others.

X

Xanthippe ⟨Xantippe⟩ fl. 5th cent. BC. Wife of Socrates, proverbial for her troublesome temper and carping disposition.

Xantippe See Xanthippe

Xavier, Saint Francis 1506–52. Catholic missionary priest, called "the Apostle of the Indies." One of the seven original Jesuits, he converted many thousands in India, Ceylon, the Malay Archipelago, and Japan.

Xenocrates 396–314 BC. Greek philosopher. A disciple of Plato, he succeeded Speusippus as head of the Greek Academy.

Xenophanes fl 6th cent. BC. Greek philosopher and poet, a member, and once thought to be the founder of the Eleatic school. He asserted the existence of one God closely identified with the material world.

Xenophon *c*434–*c*355 BC. Greek military leader and historian who commanded Greek forces in the service of Persian King Cyrus the Younger. His best-known work, the Anabasis, recounts the retreat of the Ten Thousand Immortals following Cyrus' death at Cunaxa (401 BC).

Xerxes I *c*519–465 BC. Persian king (486–465 BC), successor to his father, Darius I. He prepared a massive force for the conquest of Greece, but was defeated at Salamis (480 BC). His reign marked the beginning of Persia's decline.

XYZ Affair Diplomatic incident (1797) between French and US officials that nearly brought the two nations to war. In 1797, US president J. Adams sent C. Pinckney, J. Marshall, and E. Gerry to France to negotiate an end to French interference with US shipping. The commission was not allowed to meet immediately with French foreign minister C. de Talleyrand, but three agents representing France, called X, Y, and Z later by US officials, approached the three US ministers and suggested that the ministers give them a bribe and guarantee to France a large loan. When the affair was made public, American tempers flared and the US and France began an undeclared naval war. The conflict was ended by negotiation of the Convention of 1800 (Sept., 1800). It was during this affair that Pinckney was thought to have said (but probably did not say), "Millions for defense, sir, but not one cent for tribute."

Y

Yahweh Name of God as revealed to Moses. The name is an extension of the original four-letter name YHWH (the Tetragrammaton). From this also came the name Jehovah.

Yakima Indian Wars Series of wars (1855–59) fought by the Yakima Indians in Washington Territory against US encroachment. The Yakima signed (1855) a treaty and agreed to move to a reservation, but under the leadership of Kamiakin, resisted removal. They were eventually defeated and moved.

Yale, Elihu 1649–1721. American-born official of the British East India Company. Yale College (which later developed into Yale University) was named after him.

Yalta Conference Allied conference (Feb. 4–11, 1945) during WW II, at Yalta in the Crimea. Attended by US president F. Roosevelt, British prime minister W. Churchill, and Russian premier J. Stalin, it restated the Allied determination to receive only unconditional surrender in Germany. The conference planned for the postwar occupation of Germany by the four major Allied powers, discussed the postwar reorganization of Europe, and made plans for the San Francisco Conference (q.v.) to establish the United Nations.

Yamagata, Prince Aritomo 1838–1922. Japanese soldier and statesman. He played a major role in the modernization of the Japanese army and establishment of Japan as a world power.

Yamamoto, Isoroku 1884–1943. Japanese admiral. He led the attack on Pearl Harbor, thus precipitating US entry into WW II.

Yamasee War Uprising (1715) of the Yamasee Indians against English settlers in South Carolina. Defeated, the Yamasee fled (1716) to Florida and were assimilated into the Creek and Seminole tribes.

Yamashita, Tomoyuki 1885–1946. Japanese general. During WW II he commanded Japanese forces in the conquest of Singapore, Bataan, and Corregidor, and commanded in the Philippines (1942–45). He was hanged for war crimes committed by his troops.

Yancey, William Lowndes 1814–63. American lawyer and politician. A vigorous supporter of slavery, he sponsored the Alabama Platform (1848) and led in the movement for southern secession.

Yandabo, Treaty of See Burmese War (First)

Yang Chien See Sui

Yang Chu 440–360? BC. Chinese philosopher. He opposed the philosophy of Confucianism and was later accused of advocating hedonism.

Yang Kuang See Sui

Yankee Term applied by Americans to those who live in New England, by Americans from the South to Northerners, and by non-Americans to Americans. It was probably originally applied to Dutch settlers.

Yarmuk River, Battle of the Arab victory (Aug. 20, 636) over the Byzantine army, on a tributary of the Jordan River. An Arab force of some 25,000 decisively defeated 50,000 Byzantines, thereby breaking Byzantine dominance in the region and paving the way for the Arab conquest of Syria.

Yazid I See Caliphate, Empire of (680–683); Muslim Civil Wars

Yazoo land claims Land scheme in which the Georgia state legislature awarded (Jan. 7, 1795) some 35 million acres of land in present-day Mississippi to four land companies for $500,000. Most of the legislators held shares in the land companies. Congress eventually ordered the lands sold and settled all claims at the cost of some $4,000,000.

Yeardley, Sir George *c*1507–1627. British colonial administrator and three times governor of Virginia (1616–17, 1619–21, 1626–27). During his governorship, the first representative assembly in the English colonies was convened at Jamestown (1619).

Yeats, William Butler 1865–1939. Irish poet and playwright. One of the greatest poets of his day, he was a leading voice in the cause of Irish nationalism. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature (1923). Among his best collections of poems were The Tower and The Winding Stair; he also wrote plays and prose tales.

Yellow-dog contract Contract in which an employer extracts as a condition of employment a promise not to join a labor union. Yellow-dog contracts were declared unenforceable by the Norris-LaGuardia Act (1932).

Yellow Emperor See Huang Ti

yellow journalism Journalism emphasizing the sensational through the use of bold headlines, scandal stories, exposés, and the like. Its name arose from a comic strip, The Yellow Kid, in the New York World, and it figured in the circulation wars of the World and the New York Journal in the 1880s and 1890s. Yellow journalism contributed to the outbreak of the Spanish-American War.

Yellow Turbans Chinese secret society whose members rose against the emperor and his advisers (AD 184–204). Their rebellion contributed to the fall of the Han Dynasty (AD 220).

Yemen ⟨Yemen Arab Republic⟩ Independent state located at the southwestern tip of the Arabian Peninsula on the east coast of the Red Sea. Its capital is San'a. Dominated by Egypt and Turkey into the twentieth century, its recent history has been marked by political unrest and border wars with the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. Key dates include:

12TH–8TH CENT. BC Minean kingdom ruled Yemen.

8TH–2D CENT. BC Sabaean kingdom ruled.

1ST CENT. BC Roman invasion.

4TH CENT. AD Ethiopian invasions.

6TH–7TH CENT. Persia ruled.

628 Conquered by Muslims; converted to Islam.

10TH CENT. Rassite dynasty of Zaidi sect established in Yemen.

11TH–12TH CENT. Fatimids of Egypt ruled Yemen.

16TH–20TH CENT. Ottoman Empire exercised nominal control over region.

1818–40 Puritanical, nationalistic Wahabi sect briefly took control of Yemen.

1913 Yemen granted autonomy by Ottoman Turks after uprisings against their rule.

1918 Yemen gained independence on collapse of the Ottoman Empire.

1934–35 Boundary dispute with Saudi Arabia; Saudi troops invaded and forced settlement.

1948 Imam Yahaya and two sons assassinated by religious leader Sayyid Abdullah ibn-Ahmad el-Wazir; Emir Seif el-Islam Ahmed crowned as successor after revolt was quashed.

1949–50 50,000 Jews in Yemen evacuated to Israel.

1958–61 Joined with Egypt and Syria to form United Arab States.

1962–67 Junta deposed newly crowned Imam Mansur Billah Muhammad; republic proclaimed.

1962–69 Civil war between forces of new republic and royalist supporters of the imam; Saudi Arabia and Jordan supported royalists; Egypt and Soviets supported republicans.

1967–72 Border war with Southern Yemen (later People's Democratic Republic of Yemen).

1971 Constitution adopted.

1972 Agreement providing for unification with People's Democratic Republic of Yemen signed, but never carried through.

1974 Army took power in bloodless coup; political parties outlawed, constitution suspended.

1974–77 Col. Ibrahim al-Hamidi ruled as head of state; assassinated.

1978 Lt. Col. Ahmed Hussein al-Ghashmi head of Presidential Council; killed by bomb.

1978 Col. Ali Abdullah Saleh chosen president.

1979 Border clash with People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.

Yemen, Southern ⟨People's Democratic Republic of Yemen⟩ This republic is located on the southern Arabian Peninsula in the Middle East. Its capital is Aden. Its early history is closely tied with that of the Yemen Arab Republic (q.v.). Key dates in its later history include:

16TH CENT. Became part of the Ottoman Empire; region under control of imams of Yemen.

1839 British East India Company occupied Aden.

1854–1914 Company gradually expanded domains through outright purchase and treaties with local rulers.

1937 Designated Aden Protectorate by Britain.

1963–67 Aden Colony made part of Federation of South Arabia; terrorist campaign against Britain began.

1967 Economy damaged by closing of Suez Canal after the Arab-Israeli War.

1967 Republic established (Nov. 30) after federation collapsed and British withdrew.

1969 President Qahtan Muhammad al Shaabi resigned; replaced by five-man presidential council.

1969–78 Salim Robea Ali chaired presidential council; overthrown and executed; Premier Ali Nasser Muhammad replaced him.

1970 Constitution promulgated; country's name formally changed to People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.

1972 Agreement providing for unification of Yemen Arab Republic and People's Democratic Republic of Yemen signed, but unification was not completed.

1978 Abdul Fattah Ismail elected president; reversed policy of reconciliation with Yemen.

1979 Friendship treaty signed with the Soviets.

1979 Border clashes with Yemen.

1980 Ali Nasir Muhammad al-Hasani became president.

yeoman In English history, a member of a class between the gentry and simple laborers. The term was also applied to servants or retainers of middle rank and to such units as the Yeomen of the Guard, long the personal bodyguard of the king.

Yeomen of the Guard Personal bodyguard of the sovereign of England, established (1485) by Henry VII. They are often called beefeaters.

Yermak Timofeyevich ⟨Ermak Timofeev⟩ d. 1584. Cossack leader. He crossed the Urals, conquered the Tatar khanate of Sibir (1582), and brought Siberia under Russian control Yersin, Alexandre Émile Jean 1863–1943. Swiss-born French bacteriologist. He discovered, simultaneously with S. Kitasato, the bubonic plague bacillus. He also developed a serum against the disease.

Yggdrasill In Norse mythology, the World Tree that supports the universe. Its branches extend through all lands and into heaven and it roots into the underworld. A squirrel having the run of the branches was thought to breed discord everywhere.

Yiddish Language originally of Central and Eastern European Jews. Developed (12th cent.) from High German and incorporating elements of Hebrew and Slavic, it is celebrated for its rich literature.

Yi dynasty Dynasty of rulers of Korea (1392–1910). The dynasty was founded by Gen. Yi Songgye, who seized power (1392) with aid from China's Ming rulers. The capital was established at Seoul and Chinese cultural influence was strong (Confucianism was adopted by the state). In subsequent years the dynasty repulsed an invasion by the Japanese (1592) but was forced to recognize the Manchus as their overlords after an invasion in 1627. From the 17th to the 19th cent., the Yi rulers imposed a policy of isolationism and it was not until after the Japanese forced them to accept trade relations (1876) that commerce with Western powers began. Soon after, however, the rise of Japanese influence on the mainland resulted in the takeover of Korea. In 1910 Japan ended the Yi dynasty reign by annexing the kingdom.

yin-yang In Chinese philosophy, the two opposite but complementary groups of qualities that form the basis of the world. Yin is represented as earth, dark, female, odd, negative, and passive, and Yang is represented as Heaven, light, male, even, positive, and active.

Yoelson, Asa See Jolson, Al

Yoga System of spiritual control practiced in both Hinduism and Buddhism. By means of the discipline's techniques of breathing and other exercises—control of the senses, meditation, and withdrawal—the subject is led to the blissful union of self with the divine.

Yogacara School of Mahayana Buddhism. Founded in India (4th cent. AD), it flourished especially in the 5th cent. It held that only consciousness was real, not the objects of consciousness.

Yokohama Japan's third largest city (pop. 2,694,000) and leading seaport. Visited (1854) by Commodore M. Perry, it was opened to foreign trade (1859) and soon became a major port. It was severely damaged by earthquake (1923) and by US bombing during WW II.

Yorck von Wartenburg, Johann David Ludwig ⟨York von Wartenburg, ~⟩ 1759–1830. Prussian army officer. He led the Prussian forces in Napoleon's invasion of Russia (1812). Yorck signed the Convention of Tauroggen (Dec. 30, 1812) with Russia, neutralizing his forces and preparing the way for Prussia to join the allies against Napoleon.

Yoritomo 1147–99. Japanese warrior of the Minamoto clan. He became the first Kamakura shogun of Japan (1192).

York, Alvin Cullum 1887–1964. American army sergeant who became one of the most popular heroes of WW I. On Oct. 8, 1918, he advanced on a fortified hill, killing 20 Germans and capturing 132 others, along with 35 machine guns. For this action he won a Croix de Guerre and a Congressional Medal of Honor.

York, Frederick Augustus, duke of 1763–1827. British officer, second son of King George III. He commanded unsuccessful campaigns in The Netherlands during the French Revolutionary Wars. As commander in chief (1798–1809, 1811–27) he helped to modernize the army.

York, house of Royal house of England, a branch of the Plantagenet family. Its members included three kings, Edward IV, Edward V, and Richard III. Its claims to the English throne in opposition to those of the House of Lancaster resulted in the Wars of the Roses (q.v.).

York, Richard Plantagenet, 3d duke of 1411–60. English nobleman and claimant to the throne of England. He served as protector (1454–55 1455–56) during the mental lapses of King Henry IV. His attempts to secure the crown led to the Wars of the Roses (q.v.). He was recognized heir apparent (1460) but was defeated and killed by Margaret of Anjou at the Battle of Wakefield (1460).

Yorktown campaign Final major campaign (Sept. 28–Oct. 19, 1781) of the American Revolution, at Yorktown, Virginia. It resulted in the surrender of the British army under Gen. C. Cornwallis and secured American independence. After the failure of his Carolina campaign (q.v.), Cornwallis moved his army north to Yorktown and fortified it. An American force of some 8,000 under the Marquis de Lafayette then moved into position and bottled up the British. Cornwallis hoped for relief or reinforcement by sea but soon a French fleet under Count F. de Grasse blocked the harbor and began to bombard the British positions. Generals G. Washington and J. Rochambeau marched south and reinforced Lafayette. In New York a British relief expedition was outfitted by Sir H. Clinton but Cornwallis surrendered (Oct. 19) before it could arrive in Virginia.

York von Wartenburg, Johann David Ludwig See Yorck von Wartenburg, Johann David Ludwig

Yoshida, Shigeru 1878–1967. Japanese statesman. He served as prime minister of Japan five times between 1946 and 1954 and oversaw Japan's recovery from WW II.

Yoshihito See Taisho

Young, Brigham 1801–77. American Mormon leader. He succeeded J. Smith as president of the Mormon church and led the migration (1846–48) from Illinois to Salt Lake City, Utah.

Young, Thomas See Rosetta Stone

Young, Whitney Moore, Jr 1921–71. American black civil rights leader. As executive director of the Urban League (1961–71) he led the movement to involve private business and the government in programs to aid America's urban poor.

Younger, Cole 1844–1916. American outlaw. He fought with the Confederate guerrilla band of W. Quantrill during the Civil War and after the war joined the outlaw gang of J. James.

Young Germany ⟨Junges Deutschland⟩ German literary movement of the 1830s and 1840s. The movement was in part a reaction to the nationalism and romanticism as represented by the works of J. Goethe and was influenced by French literature. Among its members was H. Heine.

Younghusband, Sir Francis Edward 1863–1942. British explorer whose travels increased geographical knowledge of central Asia. He secured (1904) a treaty opening Tibet to Western trade.

Young Italy Italian movement that sought establishment of a republic of Italy. Founded (1831) by G. Mazzini, it was instrumental in the Italian Risorgimento, but declined in importance after 1848.

Young Plan Second plan adopted for payment of German reparations after WW I, succeeeding the Dawes Plan. Put into effect in 1930, it was repudiated by A. Hitler.

Young Turks Group of young Turkish revolutionaries who rebelled against Sultan Abdul Hamid II in 1908 and compelled him to restore constitutional government. The term has since been used to designate young factions within larger groups.

Ypres ⟨Ieper⟩ Belgian city located near the border with France. A center of the Flemish cloth industry, it was the scene of several major battles of WW I (see Ypres, battles of).

Ypres, battles of 1. The First Battle of Ypres (Oct.–Nov., 1914), between Allied and German forces at Ypres, Belgium during WW I, was largely indecisive. The German advance was halted but the Allies suffered more than 100,000 casualties. 2. The Second Battle of Ypres (Apr. 22–May 25, 1915) marked the first time the Germans used poison gas. The German assault failed to unseat the Allies and ground to a halt. 3. The Third Battle of Ypres (July 31–Nov. 10, 1917), also known as the Battle of Passchendaele, began with a massive British artillery bombardment. The Allied advance was crippled by rain and mud, and casualties numbered some 300,000. 4. The Fourth Battle of Ypres (Apr., 1918) was marked by significant German advances but the Germans were again unable to break the Allied hold on the Ypres salient.

Ypsilanti, Alexander 1792–1828. Greek freedom fighter who led an unsuccessful revolt in Moldavia against Turkish rule (1821).

Ypsilanti, Constantine 1760–1816. Greek hospodar (governor) of Moldavia (1799–1801) and Walachia (1802–07). He encouraged the Serbs to revolt against the Turks. He sought to free Greece but was exiled to Russia.

Ypsilanti, Demetrios 1793–1832. Greek patriot. Son of C. Ypsilanti, he fought in the war for Greek independence (1821) and was commander in chief of Greek forces (1828–30).

Yüan Chinese dynasty (1260–1368) established (1260) by Kublai Khan. The Yüan made their capital at Peking, built the Grand Canal, constructed a road and canal system linking the country, and developed a postal system. They also encouraged trade with the West. Marco Polo lived at their court and took tales of their culture back to Europe. However, the Yüan never established rapport with the Chinese natives and were soon overthrown by the Ming (1368).

Yüan Shih-kai 1859–1916. Chinese imperial official and first president of the Republic of China (1912–16). He ruled harshly and dissolved Parliament in 1914, thus provoking popular revolts. His attempt to establish a new dynasty and restore the empire (1916) led to his downfall.

Yucatan Central American peninsula comprising the southeastern states of Mexico as well as Belize and part of Guatemala. It was the center of Mayan and Toltec civilizations.

Yueh-chih Ancient central Asian people. They ruled a kingdom in Bactria (northern Afghanistan) and northern India (2d cent. BC–5th cent. AD).

Yugoslavia ⟨Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia⟩ Republic located in southeastern Europe. Its capital is Belgrade. Established (1918) at the close of WW I as the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, the new nation became known as Yugoslavia in 1929. Yugoslavia was invaded (1941) by German forces during WW II and was partitioned among Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Italy. Yugoslavians conducted a successful guerrilla war under Axis occupation. In 1945 the Communist leader Tito became premier of a new Yugoslav government, and the same year the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia was proclaimed. Until his death in 1980 Tito followed an independent program of communism and made Yugoslavia a leading force of the nonaligned nations. Key dates in the history of Yugoslavia include:

1915 Serbia and Montenegro occupied by Central Powers during WW I; Serbian government-in-exile established on Allied-controlled island of Corfu; joined by representatives of other South Slavic territories.

1917 South Slavic Committee for National Unity issued (July 20) the Corfu Declaration, calling for establishment of a pan-Slavic state under a constitutional monarchy.

1918 Representatives of Montenegro voted (Nov. 26) to join Serbia in movement for unification.

1918 Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes proclaimed (Dec. 4); Serbian Prince Alexander became regent for his father, King Peter I; new kingdom included Serbia and Montenegro as well as the former Austro-Hungarian territories of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, and Slovenia.

1919–20 New kingdom's borders largely settled by post-WW I Paris Peace Conference; contested area of Fiume seized by Italian forces during conference (Sept., 1919).

1920 Treaty of Rapallo signed (Nov. 12) with Italy; Italy received Istria and other territories in return for abandonment of its demand for cession of Dalmatia.

1920–21 Kingdom joined with Czechoslovakia and Romania in defensive pact known as the Little Entente to counter territorial demands by Bulgaria and Hungary.

1921 Peter I died (Aug. 16); Alexander succeeded him as Alexander I.

1928 Stephen Radic, leader of Croatian nationalist movement in the 1920s, assassinated (June 20) by a Serbian representative in the national assembly; Croatian representatives subsequently walked out and established new Croatian parliament in Zagreb.

1929 Alexander I assumed dictatorial powers (Jan. 6); dissolved parliament and proclaimed the Kingdom of Yugoslavia.

1931 Alexander I declared end to his dictatorial rule (Sept. 3); new constitution reestablished parliament but left the king with great power.

1934 Alexander assassinated (Oct. 9) in Marseilles, France; succeeded by his son Prince Peter under regency led by Alexander's cousin, Prince Paul.

1930s Prince Paul forced to establish ever stronger ties with Germany and Italy during the rising political crisis in Europe.

1937 Josip Broz, later known as Tito, became leader of the Yugoslav Communist party.

1939 Yugoslavian government issued (Aug. 26) new program for national government; Croatia received greater autonomy within Yugoslav federation.

1941 Yugoslav government forced (Mar. 22) to join Axis Tripartite Pact; government overthrown (Mar. 24) and Prince Peter acceded to the throne as Peter II; new government proclaimed neutrality.

1941 German forces invaded Yugoslavia (Apr. 6) in cooperation with Bulgarian, Hungarian, and Italian forces; country soon overrun; Yugoslav government evacuated Belgrade (Apr. 12); Yugoslav army disbanded into guerrilla units; Serbia and Croatia were organized as puppet states, with the rest of Yugoslavia divided among Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Italy.

1941–44 Draja Mikhailovich led Chetniks, guerrilla group loyal to government-in-exile; Josip Broz (Tito) led Communist guerrilla forces against both Chetniks and Germans.

1942 Tito established provisional government known as Council for National Liberation.

1944 Yugoslav government-in-exile merged (Nov. 24) with Council for National Liberation.

1945 New government installed (Mar. 7) with Tito as premier and Communists in key positions.

1945–80 Tito in power as head of government.

1945 National elections held (Nov. 11); new assembly proclaimed the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia.

1946 New constitution adopted (Jan. 31).

1946 Chetnik leader Mikhailovich captured (Mar. 13); found guilty of treason and collaboration, he was executed (July 17) with several other Chetnik leaders.

1947 Allied-Italian treaty (Feb. 10) restored much of Istria to Yugoslavia; port city of Trieste became international territory under UN administration.

1947–48 Tito conducted extensive purge of opposition and followed program of socialization of economy; programs led to increasing criticism by Soviet Communist party.

1948 Relations between Tito and Soviets reached breaking point; Yugoslav Communist party ousted from Cominform; marked beginning of Tito's independent form of communism.

1953 New constitutional changes introduced (Jan.); office of president established; Tito elected (Jan. 14) first president of Yugoslavia.

1954 Yugoslavia entered defensive alliance with Greece and Turkey.

1954 Trieste partitioned between Italy and Yugoslavia.

1974 Tito elected president for life (May).

1980 President Tito died (May 4); rotating presidency established to prevent unrest among Yugoslavia's various ethnic groups.

1981 Ethnic Albanians in Yugoslavia's Kosovo province rioted (Mar.–Apr.); demanded independence as separate republic.

Yukawa, Hideki 1907–. Japanese physicist. He predicted the existence of the meson (1935) and developed a "nonlocal field" theory for elementary particles. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics (1949).

Yukon ⟨Yukon Territory⟩ Canadian territory on the Arctic Ocean noted for its mineral resources. The area was first explored in the 1840s. The region became part of the Northwest Territories (1870) and the Yukon Territory (1898) and was the scene of a major gold rush (1890s).

Yukon Territory See Yukon

Yü the Great ⟨Ta Yü⟩ d. 2197 BC. Semi-legendary Chinese hero, credited with founding the Hsia dynasty, China's first dynasty.

Yung-Lo 1360–1424. Chinese emperor (1403–24), third of the Ming dynasty emperors. He led expeditions against the Mongols, annexed Annam, sent ships as far as East Africa, moved the capital from Nanking to Peking (1421), and brought the Ming Empire to the point of its greatest power and influence.

Z

Zabern Affair Incident (1913) involving the conduct of German army officers in Zabern, now Saverne, in Alsace-Lorraine. The imprudent conduct of a German officer led to riots and arrests and caused a controversy in Germany over German military rule in Alsace-Lorraine.

Zacharias ⟨Zachary⟩ 1. fl. 6th cent. BC. Prophet of the Old Testament. 2. Book of the Old Testament, also known as Zechariah. 3. Pope (741–52), known as Saint Zacharias (or Zachary).

Zachary See Zacharias

Zaghlul Pasha, Saad *c*1860–1927. Egyptian nationalist leader and statesman. As head of the Wafd party he helped lead the movement for Egyptian independence after WW I.

Zaharoff, Sir Basil 1850–1936. International arms dealer and financier. Born in Turkey of Greek parents, he made a fortune selling arms before and during WW I and was suspected of secret political intrigues.

Zahir ud-Din Muhammad See Baber

zaibatsu Family-owned Japanese financial and economic combines or cartels. They have played an enormous role in Japan's economic development since the Meiji restoration (1868) and control important segments of Japanese commerce, finance, and industry.

Zaimis, Alexander 1855–1936. Greek statesman, seven times premier between 1897 and 1928 and president of Greece from 1929 to 1935. His presidency was marked by clashes between royalists and republicans. He went into exile in Austria after restoration (1935) of the monarchy.

Zaire ⟨Republic of Zaire; formerly Belgian Congo⟩ Independent state located in west-central Africa. Its capital is Kinshasa. Since its independence in 1960, Zaire has been shaken by civil war and by Angolan invasions. Key dates in its history include:

1482 Portuguese visited Zaire; established ties with Kongo tribe.

1860s–90s Muhammad bin Hammad, a Swahili, ruled large areas of eastern Zaire.

1878–84 American reporter Henry Stanley explored the Congo region and established control for King Leopold II of Belgium.

1885 King Leopold II obtained personal title to the area at the Berlin Conference; Leopold created independent Congo under his rule.

1890s Control over countryside established; concessions granted to private companies to exploit the colony.

1908 Belgium formally annexed Congo after reports of brutality against blacks by private companies; named region Belgian Congo; exploitation continued, though treatment of native blacks improved.

1960 Congo granted independence (June 30) after rioting by nationalists; called Republic of the Congo.

1960 Joseph Kasavubu became head of state; Patrice Lumumba became prime minister.

1960 Civil war (July); Katanga province seceded (led by Moise Tshombe); South Kasai also seceded.

1960 UN and Belgium sent peace-keeping forces.

1960 Pres. Kasavubu staged army coup (Feb.); former Prime Minister Lumumba killed under suspicious circumstances after his arrest.

1961 UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold died (Sept. 17) in plane crash en route to conference with Tshombe.

1962 Tshombe rejected peace plan of new UN Secretary General U Thant.

1962 UN forces in active fighting against Tshombe's rebel troops in Katanga.

1963 Tshombe surrendered (Jan. 14), ending Katanga secession and civil war.

1963 Coalition government formed; Kasavubu made Tshombe premier.

1965 Kasavubu accused Tshombe of treason, dismissed him; was ousted in turn by Gen. Joseph Mobutu.

1965 Mobutu in power; soon after beginning his long rule, he abolished office of prime minister; restored order and initiated his program of "African Authenticity" by replacing European names of places with African names.

1966 Mobutu nationalized copper mines.

1967 Constitution adopted.

1971 Government changed name from Democratic Republic of the Congo to Zaire.

1974 Constitution amended.

1975 Mobutu nationalized economy; barred religious education in schools; decreed use of African names; changed own name to Mobutu Sese Seko.

1977–78 Two invasions from Angola repulsed with aid from France, Belgium, and US.

Zama, Battle of Decisive Roman victory over Carthage (202 BC) during the Second Punic War, at Zama, southwest of Carthage. There the Romans under Scipio Africanus defeated the Carthaginians led by Hannibal.

Zambia ⟨formerly Northern Rhodesia⟩ Landlocked republic located in south-central Africa. Its capital is Lukasa. Independence was achieved only in 1964. Key dates in its history include:

c1200 Bantu-speaking tribes settled in area.

1851–73 D. Livingstone in Zambia as explorer and missionary.

1855 Livingstone discovered Victoria Falls.

1889–1924 British South Africa Company ruled area; mining operations and European settlement began.

1924 Became a British protectorate; British government thereafter administered region.

1920s Rich copper deposits discovered.

1953–64 Northern Rhodesia made part of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland.

1959 Kenneth Kaunda, black nationalist, formed United National Independence party.

1962 Widespread protest campaign against white rule.

1964 Northern Rhodesia declared independence (Oct. 24); became Republic of Zambia under black African rule.

1964– K. Kaunda in office as president; Zambia remained in British Commonwealth.

FROM 1965 Zambia's support of UN sanctions against white-ruled (Southern) Rhodesia disrupted Zambia's trade through and with Rhodesia; next years spent developing transport and trade links through other neighboring countries.

1969 Kaunda nationalized (with compensation) foreign copper-mining industry, oil industry.

1972 Kaunda's United National Independence party became only legal party.

1973 New constitution promulgated.

1981 Government forced to impose program of economic austerity as world copper prices fell.

1981 Kaunda reshuffled government in wake of copper miners' strike.

Zamenhof, Ludwig See Esperanto

Zamojski, Jan ⟨Zamoyski, ~⟩ 1541–1605. Polish general and statesman. He helped secure the elections of Henry of Anjou, S. Bathory, and Sigismund III as kings of Poland and served as chancellor under each of them. He led Polish forces against the Russians, Turks, and Swedes.

Zamora, Niceto Alcalá See Second Republic (Spanish)

Zamora, Treaty of Agreement (1143) between Castile and Portugal by which Portugal became independent of Spain and Alfonso Henriques, count of Portugal, was recognized as King Alfonso I.

Zamoyski, Jan See Zamojski, Jan

Zangi 1084–1146. Seljuk ruler. He fought successfully against the crusaders, established the Zangid dynasty (1127–1250), and extended his rule over much of Syria, Palestine, and Iraq.

Zanzibar Island region of Tanzania (q.v.). First explored by the Arabs, it came under Portuguese control (*c*1505–1698) and then was taken by Arabs from Oman. Under Sayyid Said (1804–56), Zanzibar was a major source for slaves. It became a British protectorate (1890) and joined with Tanganika (1964) to form the United Republic of Tanzania.

Zapata, Emiliano *c*1879–1919. Mexican revolutionary. An advocate of agrarian reform, he at first supported F. Madero but later opposed Madero and his successors. Zapata's army occupied Mexico City three times in 1914–15.

Zaporozhe Cossacks Ukrainian Cossacks who between the 16th and 18th cents. ruled over a large portion of the Ukraine, defending it against the incursions of Tatars and others. They resisted Polish domination and, in 1654, allied themselves with the Russian czars. After their alliance with the Swedes against the Russians, Peter the Great virtually ended their independence (1709). Their last fortress was destroyed in 1775.

Zapotec Indian people of Mexico inhabiting the eastern and southern regions of Oaxaca. Once an independent nation centered at Monte Albán, they enjoyed an advanced civilization reflecting Mayan and later Toltec influences. Subsequently allied with the Aztecs, they continued to flourish until the Spanish Conquest.

Zara, Siege of Attack (Nov., 1202) by the armies of the Fourth Crusade on Zara, now in Yugoslavia. Zara had placed itself under the protection of Hungary, and the Venetians, anxious to recover it, persuaded the crusaders to attack.

Zarathustra See Zoroaster

Zealots Jewish sect noted for its extreme opposition to Roman rule in Judea. The Zealots played a leading role in the unsuccessful revolt against Rome (AD 66–70).

Zebulun In the Bible, the son of Jacob and Leah. His name was given to one of the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

Zedekiah ⟨Mattaniah⟩ fl. 6th cent. BC. Last king of Judah (597–586 BC). He allied Judah with Egypt and opposed Babylonian rule. Nebuchadnezzar invaded and destroyed the kingdom (586) and initiated the Babylonian Captivity.

Zeeland, Paul van 1893–. Belgian economist and prime minister (1935–37). As prime minister he reaffirmed Belgian neutrality in exchange for German promises of inviolability.

Zelaya, José Santos 1853–1919. President and virtual dictator of Nicaragua (1894–1909). He attempted unsuccessfully to establish by force and revolution the Central American Federation.

Zelle, Margaretha Geertruida See Mata Hari

zemstvo A local and provincial assembly in czarist Russia. Established (1864) as one of the major reforms of Alexander II, the zemstvos produced numerous reforms and improvements before being superseded (1917) by the Soviets after the Bolshevik revolution.

Zen Buddhism Buddhist sect. It was founded (5th cent. AD) by Bodhidharma, who brought it from India to China. From there it spread to Japan. Zen stresses the awakening (satori) of the wisdom (prajna) that lies dormant within each soul. This wisdom is awakened by meditation and by personal instruction of a master to a pupil. Zen came to be a significant influence in many aspects of Chinese and Japanese life.

Zenger, John Peter 1697–1746. American printer and journalist, publisher of the New York Weekly Journal. His trial and acquittal (1735) for libel was a landmark in establishing freedom of the press in America.

Zeno d. AD 491. Roman emperor of the East (AD 474–491), successor to his son Leo II. His rule was marked by internal struggle, and his attempt to reconcile orthodox Christians and Monophysites with his Henotikon caused further dissension.

Zenobia d. after AD 272. Queen of Palmyra. She greatly expanded her realm through conquest in Asia Minor and Egypt before her defeat and capture by the Roman emperor Aurelian (AD 272).

Zeno of Citium *c*336–*c*264 BC. Greek philosopher. Zeno studied under the Cynics before establishing his own school at the Stoa Poikile in Athens, from which evolved the name of his philosophy, Stoicism. Although his writings have not survived, Zeno's teachings were preserved by the philosophical historian Diogenes Laërtius (fl. 3d cent. AD).

Zeno of Elea fl. 5th cent. BC. Greek philosopher of the Eleatic school. A disciple of Parmenides, he is considered the first to use the dialectical method of reasoning.

Zenta, Battle of Austrian victory (Sept. 11, 1697) over the Ottoman Turks at Zenta, now in Yugoslavia. The Ottoman forces were utterly routed by the Austrians under Prince Eugene of Savoy.

zephyr In Greek mythology, the west wind.

zeppelin Name applied to dirigible balloons, especially German military dirigibles. They were so named after Ferdinand Graf von Zeppelin (1838–1917), the airship's inventor and builder. The German dirigible Graf Zeppelin completed an around-the-world flight in 1929.

Zerubbabel fl. 520 BC. Governor of Jerusalem at the time of the building of the second Jewish Temple.

Zetkin, Clara 1857–1933. German feminist and Communist leader, one of the founders of the German Communist party.

Zeus Chief ancient Greek god, identified with the Roman god Jupiter. He was the son of Cronus and Rhea and brother and husband of Hera.

Zeuxis fl. 5th cent. BC. Ancient Greek painter. His works were noted for their use of shading to produce a sense of realism.

Zhdanov, Andrei Aleksandrovich 1896–1948. Russian Communist leader and general. Made a member of the Politburo (1939), he fought in the Russo-Finnish War and in WW II. A hard-line supporter of J. Stalin, he organized (1947) the Cominform, the Communist Information Bureau.

Zhukov, Georgi Konstantinovich 1896–1974. Russian general and marshal of the Soviet Union. He played a major role in the Russian defeat of the German offensive in WW II.

Ziegfeld, Florenz 1869–1932. American theatrical producer. With the Ziegfeld Follies (1907) he introduced the extravagantly staged revue to the American stage.

Zimbabwe ⟨formerly Rhodesia; Southern Rhodesia⟩ Independent, landlocked state located in southern Africa. Its capital is Salisbury. In the 1960s and 1970s the white minority government of Rhodesia resisted a UN-backed campaign aimed at ending apartheid policies and bringing black Africans into the government. The struggle lasted until 1980, when black Africans formally took control of the government. Key dates in Zimbabwe's history include:

5TH CENT. AD Bantu peoples arrived.

16TH CENT. Portuguese traders arrived.
1889 Colonized by Cecil Rhodes' British South Africa Company.
1890 Salisbury founded.
1893 Rhodes' company defeated Ndebele tribe.
1896–97 Uprisings by the Ndebele and Shona.
1923 Became self-governing colony of Rhodesia under British crown; white rule established.
1953 Southern part of Rhodesia joined Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland.
1963 Federation broke up; Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland voted for independence; Southern Rhodesia chose to remain a colony.
1964 In Southern Rhodesia conservative Ian Smith became prime minister; restrictions against blacks tightened.
1965 Rhodesia's white minority government declared independence from Britain (Nov. 11); Britain objected.
1967 Became first nation to have mandatory UN sanctions imposed against it.
1970 Rhodesia became republic (Mar. 2); complete segregation of races instituted.
1972 Terrorist activities by black nationalists.
1976 White minority government weakened by economic problems, continuing guerrilla war waged by black nationalists, and end to aid from South Africa; negotiations begun.
1978 Smith agreed to plan for eventual black majority rule.
1978 Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Ndabingi Sithole and Jeremiah Chirau signed agreement to transfer power to black majority; became executive council.
1979 New constitution enfranchised all blacks; changed name of country to Zimbabwe.
1979 Black majority assumed control (May 31); Muzorewa in office as prime minister; fighting between black nationalist groups.
1979 Britain arranged final agreement between warring factions of black nationalists (Dec.); truce effected pending elections for new black majority government.
1979 Britain's Lord Christopher Soames headed provisional government pending new elections.
1980 Zimbabwe gained formal independence (Apr. 18); Rev. Canaan Banana installed as president, Mugabe as prime minister.
1980 Zimbabwe admitted to UN.

Zimmermann Telegram ⟨Zimmermann Note⟩ Telegram sent (Jan. 16, 1917) by German foreign secretary Arthur Zimmermann to the German ambassador to the US suggesting an alliance with Mexico in the event of US entry into WW I against Germany. The telegram, intercepted and made public, helped arouse American sentiment against Germany.

Zimmerwald Conference Socialist conference (Sept. 4–8, 1915) at Zimmerwald, Switzerland, at which the European Socialist parties attempted to forge a common position on WW I. The conference denounced the war as imperialistic, but a faction led by N. Lenin denounced its resolutions as feeble and tepid.

Zinjanthropus See Leakey, Louis Seymour Bazett

Zinoviev, Grigori Evseyevich 1883–1936. Russian Communist leader who played a leading role in the Soviet government from 1917 to 1926. With J. Stalin and L. Kamenev he formed the triumvirate that ruled after the death of N. Lenin. He also headed the Comintern (1919–26). He was executed during the Stalinist purges.

Zinoviev letter Letter, probably a forgery, supposedly written (1924) by G. Zinoviev, then head of the Comintern. The letter called on British Communists to begin a revolution. The publication of the letter helped to bring down Britain's first Labour government.

Zinzendorf, Nikolaus Ludwig, Graf von 1700–60. German religious leader who refounded the Moravian church. His religious views greatly influenced 19th-cent. Protestantism.

Zion ⟨Sion⟩ ⟨Mount Sion⟩ Name originally given to a hill in Jerusalem on which stood the Jebusite city conquered by David. Now the word is symbolic of the Promised Land or of heaven.

Zionism Jewish movement for the establishment and preservation of a Jewish national state in Palestine. The first Zionist council was held (1897) in Basel, Switzerland under the leadership of T. Herzl. With the advent of WW I, Great Britain lent its support to the movement through the Balfour Declaration (1917). WW II reemphasized the need for a Jewish homeland. The United Nations plan for the partition of Palestine resulted in the establishment of a Jewish state (May, 1948).

Ziska, John See Zizka, John

Zita 1892–. Last empress of Austria and queen of Hungary (1916–18), wife of Austrian emperor Charles I (m. 1911).

Zizka, John ⟨Ziska, ~⟩ d. 1424. Bohemian military leader. He successfully led the Hussites against Holy Roman Emperor Sigismund in the Hussite Wars and introduced modern tactics of warfare.

Zoar Village in eastern Ohio. Founded (1817) by a group of German Protestant Separatists, it was the site until 1898 of a Separatist experimental communal society.

Zoë *c*978–1050. Byzantine empress (1028–50), daughter of and successor to Constantine VIII. She married Romanus III, but she had him murdered (1034) and made her lover emperor as Michael IV. Michael V, adopted by Zoë, was deposed after a brief reign (1041–42). Zoë next married Constantine IX.

Zog I ⟨Ahmed Bey Zogu⟩ 1895–1961. King of Albania (1928–39). He led Albania into military and financial dependence on Mussolini's Italy and was overthrown after the Italian invasion of Albania.

Zola, Émile 1840–1902. French novelist, a leader of the naturalist movement in France and one of the greatest French writers of the 19th cent. He played a leading role in the Dreyfus Affair.

Zollverein German customs union. Begun (early 19th cent.) by Prussia, it grew through the 19th cent. to include all the German states. Its policies were incorporated (1871) into the German Empire.

Zorndorf, Battle of ⟨Battle of Sarbinowo⟩ Prussian victory (Aug. 25, 1758) over the Russians at Zorndorf (Sarbinowo), Poland. The Russians lost some 24,000 men to the Austrian casualties of 11,000.

Zoroaster ⟨Zarathustra⟩ *c*628–*c*551 BC. Persian religious leader and reformer, founder of Zoroastrianism.

Zoroastrianism Ancient Persian religion founded (6th cent. BC) by Zoroaster. Its teachings center on Ahura Mazda, a god of righteousness, who would battle the evil spirits led by Ahriman until the ultimate victory over evil is achieved. Zoroastrianism was made the state religion of Persia by the Sassanidae (3d cent. AD) and is believed to have influenced both Judaism and Christianity. Its few remaining adherents are known as Parsees.

Zululand Historic region, since 1897 a part of the South African province of Natal. Occupied by the Zulus in the 17th cent., the region was the scene of conflicts, notably the Battle of Blood River (q.v.), between Zulus and the Boers (then on the Great Trek). By 1840, the Boers were in control of Zululand. Thereafter the British, succeeding the Boers, warred against the Zulus, annexed Zululand in 1887, and made it part of Natal (1897).

Zurich Largest Swiss city (pop. 422,640) and one of the world's principal financial centers. Conquered by the Romans (58 BC), the city became a free imperial city (1219) and joined the Swiss Confederation (1351). It was a center of the Swiss Reformation and the home of H. Zwingli.

Zwingli, Huldreich or Ulrich 1484–1531. Swiss reformer, the leading figure in the Swiss Protestant Reformation. His opposition to M. Luther's views on the nature of the Eucharist led to great dissension within the Protestant church.